Commencement Exercises

Thursday, June 10th. Prof. W. D. Henderson, U. of M. To Speak.

The annual High School Commencement is an event looked forward to with keen anticipation by many a fond parent, boy, and girl, as well as the community in general. No where in the world is so much made of a school event as in America and rightly it should be so for it means a great deal to the interested parties. It's an event that recognizes a certain degree of success on the part of all members of each succeeding class. There is greater reason to look forward to the East Jordan High School Commencement this year than perhaps at any time in the history of the public schools, largely for the reason that the class is the largest that ever graduated from the East Jordan High School, thirty-six in all. The second largest class was last year with thirty-two members, so that the great and glorious class of 1926 sets a record that may stand for some time by their sheer numbers.

Without a doubt, a report will be given in next week's Herald in more detail of the accomplishments of this class. The presence of Professor W. D. Henderson of the University of Michigan gives an added incentive for us to look forward to the coming Commencement of next Thursday. Prof. Henderson, without a doubt, ranks among the first half dozen Commencement speakers in Michigan, and is an orator of wide experience who gives a convincing address, usually full of advice, from a man who really knows life. It's an unusual event to have a speaker come to East Jordan of the calibre of Professor Henderson. We do not believe an East Jordan citizen can afford to miss the address.

At the Commencement exercises, the honors won by the class, including medals, etc., will be presented by Principal R. L. Waggoner.

A feature unique in High School Commencements in northern Michigan, as far as the writer has knowledge, is the Senior Promenade, the same as you see at the College and University Commencements. It is perhaps already quite well known that the Class of '26 will wear their caps and gowns. The Senior Promenade will take place at 7:00 o'clock standard time on the school grounds the night of Commencement. The Band has been practicing a march befitting the occasion, and will lead the seniors, faculty, school board members, parents, and friends in the promenade. The above is something that should add greatly to the occasion and make it an event to be long remembered by those who participate, both class and parents.

Although Commencement has already been announced, the first event of the week takes place at West Side School Tuesday evening, at 6:30 standard time, when one hundred boys and girls present a "Flower Pageant," an event very much enjoyed by parents and citizens the past few years, and which should be even more of an attraction to them this year.

Wednesday evening the annual Class Day program will be presented by the class in the most original way possible. Added features to the program will take place. Some of the parts have a real touch of originality and are always interesting, as usual the entire program will be given by members of the class.

The regular Baccalaureate services will take place at the High School auditorium at 7:30 Sunday evening. Rev. C. W. Sidebotham will give the sermon on the subject "The Greatest Thing in the World." All programs have been carefully prepared and the public have a very hearty invitation from the public to attend the above exercises.

The members of the Class of '26 who bow themselves from the school days to the more active duties of life are as follows:

Lucille Bartlett	Herman Leu
Doris Bennett	Marjorie Mackey
Delvin Best	Eva McBride
Thomas Brennan	Allice Moore
Ruth Chadsey	Anna Murphy

E. J. Chautauqua Officers Organized

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Chautauqua Boosters held at the High School, Tuesday evening, June 1st, the following officers were elected:—
President—H. P. Porter
Vice President—C. H. Whittington
Sec'y—Fr. D. M. Drinan
Treas.—John J. Mikula
Chairman of the Ticket Committee—Mrs. M. B. Palmiter
Ass't. Chairman of Ticket Committee—Mrs. Roy Sherman
Chairman of Ground Committee—L. G. Balch
Chairman of Advertising Committee—C. H. McKinnon
Chairman of Advertising Committee—Eleanor McBride

Mrs. Palmiter gave a brief synopsis of the Chautauqua Program which was nicely diversified, consisting of Lectures, Readings, Musicals, both vocal and instrumental. The popular 'Green' Band being among them.

The Contest At Mt. Pleasant

Unprecedented in the annals of scholastic endeavor was the contest at Mt. Pleasant May 21, in which more than seven hundred students of Michigan participated. It was unique in that it was not an athletic contest in which physical skill was paramount, but it was a mental contest demanding intelligence, judgment and understanding. In academic circles it is 'coucaded' that contests of this nature should be encouraged and fostered just as much as athletic contests.

The students from the East Jordan High School who attended the contest were Thelma MacDonald and Evelyn Webster—Geometry, Ethel Pinney and Henrietta Severance—Latin, Lucille Bartlett and Ralph Clark—Physics, Ruth Chadsey—Clothing, Marguerite Rogers and Erma Bennett—Foods. Ralph Clark received first place in Class C in the physics contest while Marguerite Rogers and Erma Bennett won first and second place respectively in the Foods contest. The students who took part in this contest are to be commended for their efforts, especially those who brought home the prizes. Mr. Jacklin of the Physics department and Miss Bardwell of the Domestic Science department should share the praise for it was largely due to their untiring efforts that their students did so well in the contest. Mr. Snellenberger who had charge of the arrangements for the students at Mt. Pleasant, and the trip, is to be commended for the efficient way in which he administered East Jordan's interests there.

Altho this was a new and untried venture it proved itself to be a real success and next year East Jordan plans to be even more widely represented.

Not At All Necessary

There is no necessity for having a great deal of lawlessness about. We do not have to put up with it, if we do not wish to.

Down in Iowa the people used to be bothered with bank robbers. Finally the citizens took a hand to help out the police. The bankers put in their institutions a couple thousand revolvers, 1,200 rifles, 240 riot guns and plenty of ammunition.

In four years the number of bank robberies dropped from 56 to 6, the loss in robberies fell from $250,000 to $2,500, and 80 out of 89 Bandits either went to jail or where killed.

We do not need to keep even the bootleggers around if we do not wish to.

Scout Orders

Scout Troop and Cubs will meet at 6:30 sharp at the Gym. This is very important as many matter of vital interest to the Troop will be discussed.

Gives Golden Rules For Potato Culture

A set of "golden rules" for the potato producer has been issued by H. C. Moore, extension specialist in crops at the Michigan State College. In discussing the high price of seed potatoes this spring, Mr. Moore recently warned state farmers to follow the very best culture methods, and not to expend their acreage in a gamble that the high 1925 potato prices would be repeated this year.

The factors essential in profitable potato production, according to Moore, are as follows:

1. Plant only the best seed available. Poor seed will prove a liability. Plant Michigan certified seed.
2. Treat the seed with corrosive sublimate for the control of scab and black scurf.
3. Cut the seed so that the pieces average one and one-half to two ounces. Space the hills close in the row to overcome the production of oversized, rough, hollow potatoes. Members of the Michigan 300 Bushel Potato Club plant an average of approximately 19 bushels of seed per acre. They space the rows 34 to 36 inches apart; the distance between hills is from 12 to 18 inches.
4. Plant potatoes on fertile, light loamy soils that are well drained and well supplied with humus. If possible, plant on an alfalfa, sweet clover, or clover sod. Avoid planting on heavy, poorly drained soils and old grass lands that may be infested with wire worms and grubs.
5. Plow early and keep the soil cultivated until planting time to conserve moisture and control weeds.
6. Give thorough, shallow cultivation after plants are up.

7. Spray the vines with Bordeaux mixture and arsenicals to control foliage diseases and insects. Use a high pressure sprayer.

8. Harvest and store the potatoes carefully to prevent bruising and other injuries.

9. Use extra care in grading the potatoes for market.

Write the Farm Crops Department of the Michigan State College, East Lansing, for detailed information on better production methods.

Saving Seconds

Expert railroad men tell us that it takes a fast railroad train an average of seven seconds to pass a crossing. Yet, according to reliable statistics, more than 7,000 automobilists were killed at grade crossings last year. They could not wait seven seconds.

They will wait where they are till Gabriel blows his trumpet, for there is no way of beating that.

It is difficult for the driver of a fast-moving automobile to gauge the relative speeds of his car and a swift train converging on the same point from different directions. Therefore there is only one safe rule to follow: Let the train go by.

What are seven seconds in the life of a motorist?

To lose them may be to save 50 years!

Cheese Factory Robber Is Apprehended

East Jordan's Cheese Factory was broken into a couple of times last winter and some 250 pounds of cheese and other articles stolen.

Chief of Police Henry Cook has been working on the case since then and, as a result, Grant Moore was taken into custody at Boyne City last Sunday, and was taken to Charlevoix where a justice hearing was held Tuesday. It is reported that he admitted his guilt and was bound over to circuit court.

At the time of the two robberies, Moore was residing on the Peninsula and drove to East Jordan with sleighs.

Say Seed Beans Need Testing This Spring

Warning that Michigan seed beans are of such poor quality this spring that testing for germination is advisable before any seed stock is planted is being sent out here by Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the crops department at the Michigan State College.

The wet fall of the past year, followed by severe freezes, injured germination seriously, it is said. F. B. Dreese, secretary of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' Association, found in recent tests that cars of seed beans rated as "choice hand-picked" showed some germination below 50 per cent, with one car actually running only four per cent.

That there will apparently be no large holdover of white pea beans this year is said to be indicated by reported strong movements of Michigan beans. This should mean better price conditions for white beans and prevailed during the past season, if a crop of good quality is raised this year, according to Professor Cox.

Suggestion that it is wise for Michigan farmers to "ease up" on plantings of red kidney beans this year is also made by Cox. Officers of the Bean Jobbers' Association are said to predict that the state acreage of red kidneys will be doubled this year, as a result of the fact that these beans have brought a higher price for several years than the white navy pea bean.

Danger of over-production of red kidney beans if this tendency keeps up is indicated. Many are also said to be planting kidney bean seed of very poor quality, carrying the "pale sport, or fading bean."

In view of the relatively poor condition of seed stocks, Professor Cox is advising heavier seedings this year—from five to seven pecks of red kidneys and from three pecks to a bushel of white pea beans per acre.

Flint—Henry B. Marks, 53, of Chicago, manager of the "Home Complete Exposition," now being staged in this city, and an electrician, Eddie Cantrell, 31, of San Jose, Calif., were accidentally electrocuted May 25. Marks had attempted to draw Cantrell away from a live wire of high voltage. Both men died instantly.

Bay City—A radio ordinance, tabled by the city commission several weeks ago, probably will be taken up again by that body. A number of radio dealers and "fans" are urging adoption of the regulations provided in the ordinance, which would improve reception conditions. Circuit Judge Samuel G. Houghton leads the committee of radio enthusiasts.

Adrian—The state public utilities commission has authorized the capitalization of the Citizens' Gas Fuel company, of Adrian. The action completes the reorganization of the old Lenawee control and operation of the Doherty interests of New York City. The company plans to spend about $100,000 in the reconstruction and modernizing of the system.

Monroe—Bids will be opened here June 7 by the state highway department for paving West Elm avenue. The section to be paved is a half mile long and 30 feet wide. The state will pay for paving 20 feet of this and the city the other 10. It is expected the cost will be $50,000. The new paving will give Monroe another outlet to M-10 to the west.

Grand Rapids—James Higgins, 32 years old, former city fireman, pleaded guilty to a liquor possession charge and was sentenced to serve 60 days, although two gallons of "evidence" in the case has disappeared at police headquarters. The court asked Higgins whether he could solve the mystery. Higgins denied any knowledge of what became of the confiscated liquor.

The spring gardens are beginning to look like they might bear vegetables.

Domestic Science Dep't Puts On Style Show

Friday the twenty-eighth, the Domestic Science Department, under Miss Bardwell put on one of the most worth while assemblies of the year. The annual style show. The stage was very artistically decorated to represent a garden, with rustic seats, a trellis work and arch way in the rear. On the seats were girls from the Domestic Science Dept., who later took their parts in the pageant. Two pages, Louise Bretz and Virginia Hite in charming black and white costumes, came thru the arch way each time to introduce the characters. First appeared an Egyptian maiden, Ruth Chadsey, followed by a Grecian maiden, Marjorie Mackey; a 13th century dress, Emma Beyer; Tudor costume, Margaret Gunderson; Elizabethan Court lady, Glyde VanDeventer; Court dress, Ardith Richardson; Empire 1814, Fern Hutton; Victorian, Mary Chew; Bustle Back 1873, Lillian Gorman.

An old time dance, costumes 1800. Cathola Lorraine, Bea Boswell, Ivis Pickel, Helen Severance.

Besides the costumes there were four made over dresses and sixty-one new gowns on display.

The girls all moved to music, displaying their costumes most gracefully.

When we consider the fact that each girl made her costume true to the period she represented, or her dress, according to a pattern most suitable to her form, size and coloring. It became something more than a mere assembly, it became an achievement—a fitting climax to the two years of most successful work of Miss Bardwell. Miss Bardwell has brought her department to a higher degree of proficiency than it has ever reached before. She, with her girls have furnished the dining room and the rest room with curtains, furniture and table linen. The girls have served lunches, banquets, and breakfasts. As formal tea to the faculty and a banquet to the Board. They have been taught how to clean—both floors and clothes—to make over dresses for themselves and younger sisters. Also they have studied textiles until they know the principal kinds of cloth and the Art class have made a special study of colored prints and the lives of the Artists. Others have studied pottery with equal pleasure.

Thru the year The Household Economics Club has held meetings. Always the pupils doing the work and always Miss Bardwell in the background ever ready to guide, suggest and help.

It is with deep regret that we learn she will not be with us another year as she returns to College for her degree. She has not only taught her pupils to be efficient house and home keepers, but also the nobility of service.

Ypsilanti—Darwin Bailey, 18 years old, of Cass City, a student at the normal college here, lost his right hand and received other serious injuries as a result, it is believed, of "hooking" a ride on a D. U. R. freight train from Ann Arbor to Ypsilanti, May 24. He is now in the Beyer Memorial hospital here where physicians say he has a chance for recovery. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Bailey of Cass City.

Owosso—Police here are holding W. I. Gillman, 88 years old, no home, who insists he is a human radio receiving set. He said in the morning he gets stations in Europe and in the afternoon he gets them all over the world. He will be "hooked up," he told officers, June 3. He also claimed to be a mind reader, but fell down when asked to read the mind of Judge R. S. Day. No charge has been made against him.

Port Huron—The state highway department has promised W. W. Cox, St. Clair county highway engineer and Frank Beard, county road commissioner that it will construct 9.7 miles of concrete highway on state trunk line M-27, the river road leading from Port Huron to Detroit. This will mean that, with the exception of a short stretch near St. Clair, a complete concrete highway will extend from Port Huron to Detroit along the St. Clair river.

Ann Arbor—More than 30 students of the University of Michigan will spend the summer making a survey of the industrial situation of Detroit through actual contacts with the workers and employers. Those selected for the survey will be given positions in Detroit factories where they will have opportunities to gather first-hand information. The survey group of the university is one of the several from other colleges throughout the United States who will study the Detroit situation this summer.

WETS IN HOUSE USE NEW YORK AS MODEL

Will Base Fight for Modification of Dry Law on Gotham Plan.

Washington.—A proposal similar to that on which New York is to vote in November will form the backbone of the campaign to be conducted during the remainder of this session by the unofficial house committee for modification of the Volstead act.

Taking concerted action in the midst of the revived prohibition controversy, the 60 representatives making up the group have agreed to devote their efforts to amendment of the dry law to permit "manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states."

A committee of four, comprising members of the house judiciary committee, which last year pigeonholed all of the 2.75 per cent beer bills sponsored by the modificationists, was named to draft a bill carrying the liberalization proposal and the entire group is to join in the drive for action on it.

While the house modificationists are sharpening their new legislative spear the senate judiciary committee will get to work under the King resolution to determine whether it agrees with Attorney General Sargent and a number of dry members of congress that President Coolidge's order authorizing appointment of state, county and city peace officers as federal enforcement agents is valid under the Constitution.

Chairman Cummins, in announcing that the judiciary committee had begun its deliberations informally, expressed the opinion that "the order is without warrant at law," and that "the President had no more right to issue that order than I did." Regarding the matter as being solely a question of law, he was not in favor of conducting a hearing on the subject.

Remodeled Haugen Bill Has Been Introduced

Washington.—Vice President Dawes' study of the farm relief problem has converted him to the equalization fee principle, which was one of the most important features of the Haugen price stabilization bill recently voted down by the house after administration leaders in that chamber had vigorously opposed it.

A modified form of the Haugen bill, retaining the equalization fee principle and reducing the appropriation to $100,000,000, but putting price stabilization up to the proposed federal farm board rather than basing it on world prices plus import duties, has been introduced in the house by Representative Anthony (Rep., Kan.).

Just when the house will get into action again on farm relief, however, has not been determined. Tariff protection as it works out for manufacturers was held in the Dawes memorandum read by Senator Watson, to be the "device" proposed by agricultural economists to "enable agriculture, at its own expense, to sell its surplus abroad at a lower world price in order that, as with the manufacturing industry, the law of supply and demand will operate in its larger home market behind the tariff wall which congress has already enacted for its theoretical benefit."

IN ANY SEASON

By DOUGLAS WALLOCH

MY MOTHER'S mother had a way Of saying things that others say, But saying them a whole lot better. I never saw her write a letter, I never heard her make a speech, I never heard her really preach, And yet she said, well I remember: "The flowers are never out of reach, I've found them even in December."

She looked for flowers all the year, And always found the flowers here, When others thought the summer over.

It's easy in the time of clever To find the blossoms by the wall; But, when the leaves begin to fall, Perhaps with drifting snow around them,

She looked for flowers, after all, And mother's mother always found them.

She found them even in her grief, Yes, she would lift some fallen leaf, And find some bud forever starting; Some comfort in the hour of parting. In every trouble she would find Some reason for content of mind; Yes, even in the darkness groping, When hearts were sore, and eyes were blind,

She always found some cause for hoping.

Her back was bent, her hair was gray, Yet mother's mother had a way Of always looking for the roses; And there are more than man supposes.

It all has helped me quite a lot, Not only June, but June or not—I've always tried to find a reason, However cold the weather got, For being glad in any season. (© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

ABBREVIATED STORY

THE SPORT

MR. TWILLER SCRATCH

"MR. TWILLER SCRATCH" asked Verna Binnon. "The same," said Twiller Scratch. "Oh, I'm so glad to find you in! Us girls are getting up a fund to teach foreign children in America their native language, so they can talk to their fathers and mothers in case the parents can't speak English, and if you would care to—"

"Delighted!" said Twiller Scratch heartily. And he made out a check for $50.

"The boss cert'n'y is a sport," the stenographer murmured admiringly to the bookkeeper.

During the next two hours Twiller Scratch bought a set of books entitled, "Eighty Thousand Selected Chinese, Siamese and Portuguese Proverbs," for $9 from a book peddler because the poor devil looked so hard up, subscribed $20 to a fund for sending over-boards to the Dgoos savages in Africa, and gave the office boy $10 for his birthday.

Then he went to lunch with Fred Osprey and insisted on paying the whole check, which came to $8.

"Twiller, you're a sport and everybody knows it," said Osprey as he patted him on the back.

"Not a-tall, not a-tall," said Scratch modestly, as he dropped a dollar bill into a burly beggar's overflowing tin cup.

And in the course of the afternoon he loaned Artie Slatcher $30 and gave a messenger boy a $2 tip.

That evening after dinner his wife said timidly, "Twiller, everything for the table's so high, and I've run a little short of money."

"Money! Money! Money!" snapped Scratch. "Didn't I just hand you a whole five-dollar bill the day before yesterday?"

And he dodged behind the evening paper and didn't come out again till his wife had gone to bed. (© by George Matthew Adams.)

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Lansing—Three members of the Michigan township school board have been ordered removed from office by Thomas E. Johnson, superintendent of public instruction, it has been announced. They were charged with misappropriating schools funds.

Harrison—City officials here have been notified that President Coolidge has signed the bill which relinquishes the right, title and interest in a small island in Budd lake owned by the United States to the city for park purposes. The island will cost the city less than $1.25, as it is smaller than an acre.

Pontiac—Condemnation proceedings have been authorized by the city commission with a view to obtaining sufficient land on South Saginaw street to permit widening that thoroughfare from Jackson street to South boulevard to 120 feet, to conform with the Wider Woodward pavement. The street is 86 feet wide.

Flint—Flint taxpayers have approved a proposal to bond the city for $522,000 for the construction of the first unit of a sewage disposal plant, the final steps in a construction program covering 10 years to free the Flint river of pollution. The city has been ordered by the Circuit court to complete the work by the first of next year.

Kalamazoo—Judge Edward J. Moinet has signed a formal decree ordering repayment to 28 plaintiffs in the Michigan-Colorado Copper Mining company case of approximately $50,000, which it is declared they invested in stock of the now defunct company. The signing of the decree followed a settlement of its terms in accordance with an opinion recently filed by Judge Moinet, by attorneys on both sides and by the court.

Ann Arbor—Several hundred manufacturers of the state gathered here May 27 for a meeting with members of the engineering department of the University of Michigan to hold a practical discussion on the relation of scientific research to industry. Industrial committees were appointed through which it is hoped more complete co-operation between industry and the research department of the university will be attained.

Escanaba—Representatives of 11 of the county boards of supervisors of the Upper Peninsula met recently in Escanaba to discuss plans for financing an intensive nation-wide advertising campaign promoting the peninsula as a summer playground. It is proposed that the maximum amounts which legally can be raised by tax levies for advertising purposes and sums collected from private interests and municipalities be placed in a single central fund.

Owosso—The Michigan Electric Railway company has notified the city commission here and the Corunna city council that it will abandon service in and between the two towns and tear up its rails. The company said the line has been a losing venture and that it could no longer comply with the requirements of its franchise. Bus service will be substituted for the street cars. The buses will be operated by the Owosso-Flint Bus Line, Inc., an Owosso company.

Wayne—Following the recent visit of J. B. Pengelly, chairman of the city planning board of Flint, to Wayne concerted action by civic officials, clubs and organizations and the Wayne district association has been taken toward adoption of a definite plan of city planning for the community. Tentative proposals are being drafted and will be submitted to the village commission within a few weeks as the foundation of a general movement to mold the growth of the village, it is said.

River Rouge—River Rouge cannot pay its bill for water amounting to $24,991, rendered by the Detroit water board, due to the fact that no funds remain in the treasury for this purpose and taxes will not come in before July 15. As a result, George H. Fea-

Kell, superintendent of the Detroit water plant, will make some suggestions for improving the financing of the sale of water in River Rouge. That city now pays more money for water than it is charging the residents to whom it is resold, Fenkell said.

Lansing—Petitions prepared at the suggestion of Frank F. Rogers, State Highway Commissioner, has been filed with the Michigan Public Utilities Commission charging that freight rates on gravel, crushed rock and sand hauled in the state are excessive. It is felt that the lowering of freight rates would aid in lessening the cost of materials used on Michigan roads. The gravel men have complained of high freight rates and charged these rates, if lowered, would enable them to sell their product more cheaply.

Holland—The "Pageant of 1926" by the senior class of Hope college May 31 and June 2 and 5, will be the biggest production ever staged in western Michigan. There will be 400 characters. The production will cost more than $3,000 and it is to be staged on the campus, which will be fenced off. Elaborate fire works have been received and large loud speakers are to be installed. The pageant is to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the signing of the declaration of independence, the founding of Holland in 1846 and Hope college in 1868.

Simple Styles Liked for Summer Blouses

Blouses are getting a little less attention than usual this summer, not that we love blouses less, but that we love the jumper dress and other varieties of the two-piece mode, more. But the blouse is always with us, a necessity in the wardrobe. It is an important part of current fashions in tailored, sports and dressier types that have definite style touches stressed this season.

Tailored styles are featured, made of wash fabric in silk or cotton, and simple designs are in demand. An example appears here of white tub silk with black crossbar, finished with bands of plain white. Plain and printed crepes are popular and little trimming issued, but handkerchief drapes, jabots and frilled effects take its place. High collars and scarf treatments of the neckline are new style points that belong to this season.

The Hotel Stenographer

"KELLY," said the Hotel Stenographer, "there is a place in the Great Perhaps that was named Dante. 'Some real estate game?' asked the House Detective.

"Well, I would hardly call it that," answered the girl. "All people call it differently, depending on their religion, but its real name is what you say when you drive out in the rough. It is the ultimate abiding place of the people who preface the dirt they are going to scatter with five words.

"Those five words are, 'A certain party told me.'"

"Kelly, I have not been alive long enough to duck telling my age, but I have worn roll tops and hidden my ears long enough to find out that 'a certain party' is always and forever a liar.

"Any time a guy comes to me with that 'certain party' I know he is ascribing a dirty book to an anonymous author because he is ashamed to acknowledge 'a certain party' is a snake in the grass, ready to stick poisoned fangs of scandal into some innocent person and then slide away without getting caught.

"Nobody has any business to spread gossip for which they are not willing to give the authority. Nobody has any business telling a thing they are not willing to back up with their flats, teeth and finger nails.

"A certain party' is on a par with an anonymous letter, a message over the phone from a talker who will not give his name or a rock thrown through a window in the dark. If they can't tell me who told 'em I will not let 'em tell me who was told. There is enough well-authenticated scandal in the world without listening to home-manufactured pictures of sin with no name painted on the corner of the canvas." How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"If the Mountain Will Not Come to Mohammed—"

A SAYING that is frequently used in common speech is "If the mountain will not come to Mohammed Mohammed must go to the mountain!" One friend calling on another whom he has not seen in some time will remark, "It was your turn to come to me, but if the mountain will not come to Mohammed—" The saying is familiar, too, with reference to a hope or an achievement which does not come of itself, but requires effort and exertion to bring it about, the implication being that if the object is worth it, we must make the effort.

The origin of the saying is found in one of the many legends that have come down through the ages with regard to Mohammed, the prophet of Islam. It has been given credence because it is known that with all his sincerity and faith in his divine inspiration, the prophet was forced, on occasions, to use all his cleverness and astute wits to "put over" his messages and gain from the ignorant and doubting populace followers to his faith.

The story is told that a group that he was attempting to convert demanded in proof of his authority that he bring about a miracle. Eager to convince them in the only coin that they would honor, he raised his eyes aloft and commanded a nearby mountain to come to him. When the mountain did not stir, the ingenious prophet, undismayed, declared that Allah was merciful, for had he permitted the mountain to obey his disciple it would have fallen on them and destroyed them all! Therefore, he concluded, he would go to the mountain, instead, and give thanks for their deliverance!

CHAPTER XVII

Flint's Way

Bones swaggered into the cabin whilst we were at breakfast, and his leathery face crinkled in what he intended for an amorous grimace as his eyes fell upon Moira.

"This is what I call proper home like," he declared. "You come and sit on Billy's knee, my pretty, and cut up this here goat for me."

I started to rise, but Darby was ahead of me.

"Do ye so much as put a finger on her, and I'll send a bullet into the black heart o' ye," he challenged in his shrill boy's voice.

"Oh, ye will? Ye red-headed—"

"Me head's the ship's luck," boasted Darby. "The less ye say on that score the better for ye."

"We'll see to that!" snarled Bones. "Ye're the cabin boy, my lad, and no more; and I—"

He tugged at the cutlass-hilt, and Darby, in no wise daunted, hauled forth a pistol as long as his arm. But before one could assail the other Flint shoved in from the companionway and caught Bones by the shoulder.

"What now, Bill?" he demanded. "Ain't we got enough to face w/out you fightin' in the cabin?"

"And would ye ha' me take impledence and worse from this red-headed land-rat as Long John picked up in New York?" shouted Bones.

"I'd not," returned Flint. "Darby, you may be my good luck and a lad o' promise, but I'll lay the cat to your shoulders if you go for to make trouble."

"'Twas him was after makin' the trouble," answered Darby sturdily. "Wasn't he botherin' Mistress O'Donnell? Sure, I'm Irish, the same as her, and I'll kill the rogue that does be givin' her cause for to weep a tear—that I will. And I care not who he may be!"

"Easy, all," admonished Flint. "What's this, Bill?"

"Blow me for a dock-swab if I can see as how she'd oughter be set apart," blustered Bones. "I'm mate, I am, and if I—"

Flint's bloodshot eyes focused upon him with something of the silent force that I had seen Murray employ against his wild crew.

"You know better nor that, Bill," he said quietly. "Here Long John's just been to tell me the crew ha' demanded a fo'c'sle council, and God knows what Allardyce and his gang will be up to. And you want to bust into the middle of Rule Four. Gut me! There's many things I held against Andrew Murray, but one thing he did as was the wisest any gentleman adventurer ever done—and it's to his credit no less because Bart Roberts done it before him—and that was Rule Four."

"A woman's a prize, same as treasure," grumbled Bones.

"Oh, no, she ain't! A woman's trouble—she's no prize. You know what happens when there is women aboard a buccaneer. 'I'd throw the wench overboard if it weren't that she's my best chance to find the stuff Murray hid."

"If harm comes to her you'll get no such knowledge from any of us," I interposed.

"Oh, belay that!" he rasped. "You're lucky to be alive, and the one reason for it is that ye know what ye know."

He turned to Bones again.

"Now, mark me, Bill, lay off her. When we get this treasure cleaned up ye can take all the time ye fancy for wench or aught else."

"Aye, when we do!"

"And that'll be sooner than ye think," retorted Flint.

"'Tis the crew all shoutin' for disbandment? Allardyce talkin' of goin' home tomorrow? I ha' seen ye handle some bad times, John Flint, but ye're no Andrew Murray!"

The sibe antooped Flint. His face turned blue, as it did when his temper was fanned or he was in liquor.

"Watch me," he snapped. "I'll learn 'em a few things yet. No Andrew Murray! Maybe not. But I ha' my own way, Bill. Aye, Flint's way! And it ain't so bad."

He suddenly remembered us.

"Keep your mouths shut, d'ye hear? No sneakin' up to John Silver or anyone else. And as for you, my wench—" he frowned at Moira—"keep under cover, for your own sake as well as mine. This is a rough ship, a pirate ship, and—"

"Don't ye worry about Mistress O'Donnell," said Darby loyally. "I'll see to her."

"Oh, ye will!"

"Flint laughed.

"You're beginning young, Darby. Gut me, what a lad! Well, you keep her out o' harm's way, and when we divide the treasure maybe there'll be an extra allowance for ye. How'd ye like to have her, eh?"

"She'll be better worth the havin' than all the treasure there is," flashed Darby. "And do ye be mindin' what I'm after tellin' ye, Cap'n Flint. If harm comes to her, or sorrow into the heart of her, 'twill be the end o' your luck—aye, lucky ye'll be do ye come off w/ a neck ye can breathe through."

Flint went pale.

"Now, now, Darby," he wheedled. "Don't ye talk that reckless way. 'Tain't good for our luck. And I ha' been main kind to ye, and—"

"'Tis you would be the ruin of our luck," said Darby. "All I'm for tellin' ye is to be gentle in handlin' an elegant young maid as ye ought to be on your two knees before this moment for the trouble and sore dismay ye ha' wrought w/ her."

"She's safe enough, Darby," Flint answered. "I'd never harm her. We'll keep her until we ha' lifted what's buried on the Dead Man's Chest, and then she and her two buccos can take a small boat and fare how they please, and—"

"And I'll be with 'em," added Darby. "Oh, no, not you, Darby! Think o' all the red gold ye'll have aboard the Walrus. And there's your luck we'll still need."

"Me luck!" fumed Darby. "May the— curse me luck! 'Tis more of a nuisance than a help."

Flint was nigh frantic.

"Lad, would ye lose all your red head has brought us? And look ye too, if the maid's to be safe, 'tis I alone can keep her so, for w/out me there'll be— to pay, and none to stall the reckoning."

"And that before this glass is out," affirmed Bones with saturnine emphasis.

The mate knocked the neck off a flask of rum with his cutlass-hilt and poured the equivalent of a water-buff down his throat, gurgling it lustily that he might secure the full savor of the fiery liquor.

"I'll take the rest o' that!" exclaimed Flint eagerly. "Aaa-ah! There's naught like good rum to pull heart in a man, Bill. Here, Darby, you finish it. That's the lad! And don't talk no more about losin' your luck. We're goin' to need that luck mighty bad these next few days. Aye, this very day, as Bill says. For here's Tom Allardyce and a batch o' chicken-hearted — a-cryin' we should be satisfied w/ what we got, disband and save our necks. And I don't know what more bilge-slush."

"'Tain't Allardyce I'm 'feared of," said Bones wisely, "but Silver. He's got a head on his shoulders, Long John has, and all the men'll listen to him after the way he carried the stockade."

Flint nodded.

"True for you; but what you're amles on is that John feels same as I do about disbandin'. After the treasure's all lifted, look out for squalls. But right now, Bill, Silver's as strong for pullin' together as you and me."

"Maybe," said Bones with more of doubt than conviction.

"Maybe? Gut me for a lubber if I'm not right."

Flint rose from the seat he had assumed.

"You come along on deck, and I'll show ye. You, too, Darby. No, no, lad—when Darby would have hung back—"I want ye by me. I tell ye that red head o' yours is the best beacon I ever steered by."

At the exit to the companionway he halted and spoke to us over his shoulder:

"You mind what I said about the girl. Keep her under cover."

"Must we all remain below decks?" I demanded with some heat.

"That's as ye may happen to feel," he replied carelessly. "So long as ye don't try to suck up to any o' my men and make trouble you can go and come around the ship; but let me find ye up to mischief, and treasure or no treasure, I'll keelhaul ye."

His green eyes twinkled evilly.

"Maybe Murray told ye what that might mean."

He gave Darby a push before him.

"Run out and call the men aft," he commanded. "That's the boy! Bill, ye for a low-hearted—" plaster a grin on that mug o' yours and pipe us a song. We mustn't let them swabs for'ard figure us to be worried none, eh?"

And his voice boomed hollow betwixt the confined walls of the companionway:

"Oh, a fine, tall ship was the Elephant As ever sailed the seas; She came down-Channel apast Ushant Bound for the East Indies."

"And Dicky Lamb, he says to the crew— He was the bosun's mate— Pickle my guts: Will ye do what I do? Be game, says I: tempt fate?"

Bones joined valiantly in the sweep of the tune.

They were out on deck now, and Flint stayed the song long enough to roar:

"Lay aft, ye swabs! Ye asked for a fo'c'sle council, and ye shall have it— me, Bill, can't ye sing louder?"

There was no answer to this, only the slipping of bare feet on the deck and the rustle of men crowded close together.

"Well, speak up, fo'c'stle," he went on with a note of satire. "What d'ye seek? I've heard tell as how there was talk of givin' me the Black Spot— whatever that may be—and sailin' home by your lones and dead rock-ol-in'. What's the argyment, I say?"

The scene was almost identical with that which I had witnessed a few nights previously when I spied upon Flint's preparations to surprise Murray. Flint sat, as he had then, upon an upturned barrel, with Bones, Silver, Pew and two or three more. The remainder of the crew were squatted on the deck, a semicircular pattern of coppery faces and tattooed chests. The weather had turned warm after the storm, and practically all of them wore Darby's costume, a pair of trousers or breeches, usually slashed off above the knees.

Foremost in the ring of seamen was a tall, lanky fellow with rather long, yellow hair and a belligerent expression. 'Twas he who sustained the burden of the debate with Flint, supported to some extent by a group of a score or so, who sat behind him.

"Aye, aye, Tom Allardyce," Flint was saying as we reached our aerial. "You was the man all against attackin' Murray."

"Wasn't I right?" retorted Allardyce. "Didn't all happen as I said it would? Butchered, we was."

"Everything don't go right from the beginnin'," answered Flint. "But just look where we be now, mates."

"It ain't your doin'," asserted Allardyce. "'Twas only blind luck as the storm wrecked Murray and we rode it out."

"Aye, and s'pose a frigate jumps us?" called one of the men sitting with Allardyce.

"Depends on the frigate, man," answered Flint equably. "A Spanisher I'd fight. A king's ship I'd run from. A Frenchy—I don't know."

"The ship's foul. We couldn't run," said Allardyce. "No, mates, I say ye ha' eight hundred thousand pounds, and we'd better be satisfied w/ that. 'Tis a couple o' thousand pounds apiece."

"Aye, aye," came from a number of men. "Disband while the luck's w/ us."

"Disband w/ eight hundred thousand pounds more as good as in our pockets!" exclaimed Flint. "I never heard crazier talk."

"Better live w/ eight hundred thousand pounds than lose a third o' us to win twice that," insisted Allardyce doggedly.

There were expressions of opinion both ways upon this; the company was fairly well divided. And Allardyce proceeded to press his advantage.

"If ye talk about losin' riches, cap'n, 'tis you are willing to risk losin' the eight hundred thousand pounds we have in hand. Ye'd go for the other treasure and most likely lose what we already have."

Flint squinted reflectively at the yellow-haired man.

"Now that might be a good argyment, Allardyce, if 'twas true," he remarked. "But it ain't. The truth is, I am all for makin' the treasure we have safe before we go cruisin' to the Dead Man's chest. Treasure is a poison on shipboard if ye ain't got a sure use for it. That's why I had ye leave ashore the lot Murray moved to the blockhouse. It's out o' the ship."

Allardyce lost his temper.

"Aye, ye want it where ye can get your hand on it, and give us the slip!"

"How'd I do that, Allardyce?" inquired Flint softly.

"If I knowed how you were plannin' to do it I'd stop ye."

"Ah, stop me, would ye?"

"I would! There's other men ha' marooned or murdered the half o' a om no slack. And leave the wench alone. 'Twould only make endless trouble w/ the crew."

"How'd I Do That, Allardyce?" inquired Flint softly.

Bones replied with a blistering string of curses.

"And ye were a fool," he wound up, "to let Long John make odds o' six to one. It's plum duff to Silver if aught happens to ye," remonstrated the mate.

"Don't ye worry, Bill. There'll be no man in this crew willing to lift a finger after I come aboard again. Where's my Flemish pistols?"

When they were finally gone I looked an unspoken question at Peter.

"Ja," he said.

"But six to one! Why?"

"He wants der treasure where only he can reach it. Ja, dot's it."

The morning of the sixth day I was awakened by a considerable clamor on the deck, and Darby McGraw danced into my stateroom, so excited that his brogue was nigh incomprehensible.

"Haste ye! Haste ye, Master Bob!" he cried. "'Tis Flint comin' off, and him by his lone."

I roused Peter, and we threw on our clothes and ran out upon the main deck, which was crammed with pirates, starting in rapt suspense across the sta'b'd-bulwarks. The sun was just rising, and the island shelved upward, darkly portentous, from the creamy lather of the surf. The Walrus was standing south, with the White rock on her sta'b'd quarter and the entrance to Captain Kidd's anchorage ahead. Outside the entrance, and pulling up to meet us, was the gig we had left behind for the convenience of Flint and his companions. A single figure with a light-blue scarf wrapped around his head, rowed at the oars.

"But how be certain 'tis Flint!" I exclaimed. "His back is toward us, and at this distance—"

"Beggin' your pardon, Master Ormerod," said Silver at my elbow, "we ha' made him out w/ glasses. Bill— he waved his free hand toward the poop, where Bones strode up and down by the helmsman—"is sure o' him."

The one-legged man sniggered and lowered his voice.

"Ye ain't surprised, are ye?" he asked.

"Six to one!" was all I could think to say.

"Ja," agreed Peter, chuckling. Silver sniggered again.

"Aye, six to one. A strong, desperate feller is Flint. Now what ye reckon he'll do w/ the map?"

"What map?"

"When ye bury treasure ye draws a map," Silver explained oracularly. "If so be as one man knows where 'twas buried and he has the map that treasure is safe till doomsday—nless someone else gets the map."

"Well, he won't give me the map," I returned shortly.

"No-oo, it ain't likely. But if he ever stows it where ye can lay your hands on it or ye see him give it to anybody else you just remember as Long John stands your friend, gentlemen. Friend is the word, remember. And the old saw says a friend in need is a friend indeed."

Presently we rounded into the wind and came to, and Flint pulled under our lee, rowing slowly, with long, leisurely strokes like a man who is weary but intent upon finishing a difficult undertaking. Now that he was so close we could see that the scarf around his head was crusted with blood. His coat and shirt were torn to shreds, and his shoes and stockings gummed with mud.

A man heaved him a couple of lines, and he knotted them carefully to bow and stern before he began to climb the cleats of the side ladder, moving stiffly but with unerring precision. As his face lifted above the bulwarks the men nearest to him gasped and trod back upon the toes of those behind them. Such a face I had never seen. 'Twas not alone the terrible blue color and the congested veins that bulged redly under the skin, but a suggestion of experiences beyond the pale of ordinary human understanding. His eyes glared savagely. His mouth was fixed in a grimace of hatred. In his tanned cheeks were riven lines of fear, of anger, of revenge, of cupidity, of insensate ambition—aye, and of remorse.

He dropped to the deck and peered watchfully around him.

"Well, here I be," he croaked. "Ho you Darby, fetch me a bottle o' rum. Yarely, lad!"

Darby skipped away on his errand, white-checked and shaking.

Nobody spoke, and Flint laughed—oh, dreadfully!

"Ye ain't glad to welcome your skipper back, eh? How'd ye make out, Bill?"

Bones had shouldered a path through the clustering ranks, but even he was speechless before Flint's ghastly figure.

"We—we—we're all right," he stammered finally.

Silver, only, seemed unimpressed.

"Ye were seven as went ashore, cap'n," he said dogmatically, "and one to return aboard."

Flint laughed that dreadful laugh a second time.

"Aye, there's six stayed ashore, Silver; six tall fellows. Six, says you, and seven's lucky. Aye, lucky! Main lucky! And Allardyce says he's safe w/ six! Ho, ho, ho!"

"Where—where—are they?" questioned Bones.

"Ashore, I told ye, Bill. All safe ashore."

"Dead?" pressed Bones.

"Aye, dead as Harry Morgan—o' Avery."

Darby dived through the jam with an open bottle of rum, and Flint stretched out both arms and teased men right and left to make way for the lad.

"Rum!" he exclaimed. "That's what I need. Rum—and plenty of it!"

He bent back his head, put the bottle to his lips and drank—and drank. You could hear the gurgle of it as it trickled down his gullet.

"Aaaa-ah!" he breathed. "That was rare stuff. Get me another, Darby."

He tossed the bottle overboard, and started to sing a stave of that savage sea-song which was the chief delight of the crew:

"Tom Avery died of a cutias slash— Yo-ho-ho and a bottle o' rum! Mounser 'essin felt the galley's lash— Yo-ho-ho, and a bottle o' rum!"

"But the treasure," spoke up Silver. "What'd ye do w/ it, cap'n?"

Flint eyes him for as long as 'twould take to count twenty. And I am bound to say Silver met his eye unflinchingly.

"Why 'tis safe, John," answered Flint in the horribly soft tones he had employed with Allardyce. "All tucked where it'll stay safe."

"Aye, but where?" persisted Silver. Flint's blue, mottled visage became convulsed with a passion words cannot describe.

"Where?" he mouthed. "Aye, where? Ask on, man! Or seek it, if ye wish. Aye, go ashore. Lay off those ropes," he shouted to the men at the falls to which his gig was hitched. "There's a boat," he went on. "There's tools on the island. Ye can have food and rum. Go ashore if ye like, and stay—any o' ye! Search for the treasure till— opens wide for ye. But as for the ship, she'll beat up for more, by thunder!"

He waited a moment, but no man accepted his challenge. Silver, indeed, stumped deliberately out of the crowd, with a faraway look in his eyes that were as bright and hard as a pair of polished buttons.

"That's well," said Flint. "The course is so west by south, Bill. We're for the Dead Man's Chest. All sail, and a lookout in every top!"

Prosperity may be general but the average man isn't interested in what the other fellow is getting.

BEING MISSED

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

ONE of the most pleasant things in life is to be missed.

Walter was having difficulty with the young woman to whom he was paying pretty assiduous attention, and, as he confided to me, without making any apparent headway.

"I don't believe she cares for me at all," he said to me quite mournfully. "I do everything for her, and she takes it quite for granted. I sometimes think I even bore her."

"Quite possibly," I admitted. "You ought to give her a chance to miss you."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Just what I said. You're there every day, sometimes almost every hour of the day. If she ever thinks of you, which she possibly seldom does, all she has to do is to look up and there you are. If she wants anything, you get it for her almost before she has expressed a desire. Try letting her miss you a while, and look for results."

Walter had sense; he took another girl to the next dance; he evaded his Dulciana for a week or more until she began to grow restless and uneasy, and to realize how much she had been depending upon him. When he called rather casually at the end of this period she was interested, eager, almost tender. She had really missed him.

When Grabill left the town in which he had been living and doing business for the last ten years, he thought himself one of the prominent citizens, and he felt that his going would leave a considerable hole in the social and business fabric of the community. He was gone for two years, came back to make a short visit, and was waiting at the station for the train to carry him back to his present living place.

Brown, president of the local Commercial club, in passing by recognized Grabill and spoke to him.

"Where are you going?" he inquired.

"I'm going back home," Grabill answered.

"Home?" Brown said, somewhat surprised. "I thought you lived down on Sangamon avenue."

"I've been gone for two years," Grabill confessed. It was humiliating to realize that he had not been of enough importance to be missed.

There are a lot of people like Grabill, who, if chance should take them away, would not be missed from the church or the club or the organization or the community to which they belong. They come occasionally, possibly; they pay their dues; they keep their names upon the organization rolls, but they could be absent permanently and no one would miss them.

I wonder sometimes if it might not help a man who wanted an honest estimate of his own influence and worth in a community or an organization, or the job by which he was earning a living, to ask himself frankly what the reaction would be if he should leave the organization or give up the job. Would he be missed? Or would he, like Grabill, pass out of his environment without attracting either notice or regret?

It is worth a good deal to be missed.

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Hon. J. M. Harris Orator at the East Jordan Exercises

(From Bayne Citizen)

Monday's Memorial day exercises were carefully planned and splendidly executed which reflects much credit upon those taking even the minor parts. A large crowd took part in the parade which consisted of veterans of the Civil Spanish and World's wars. Ladies relief corps and crowds of school children accompanied by every school teacher in the city save one who was too ill to be permitted to take her place. After a march through the city they returned to the auditorium where they awaited the orator of the day Hon. J. M. Harris. The speaker's address was well received by the large audience. He stressed the importance of good citizenship, not once in a while, but every day in the week, not alone by the average citizen but the leaders in the city, county and state, not alone by men of small means but by those who operate the giant industries. The speaker thought it unpardonable for a community to elect a citizen to any office and after the oath of office has been accepted by him then to have the same community fail to assist the officer to carry out the law he has sworn to uphold—all of which would make for a better standing throughout the nation and in time would develop a peace that the world has never known.

Lions in Captivity

The National Zoological park says it is generally regarded that lions live longer in captivity than in their natural wild state. The young, however, are somewhat hindered by caging, while the older animals profit by it. As these animals grow older they are often attacked by stronger beasts of the wild and killed.

WEALTH OF U. S. 353 BILLIONS IN 1922

Ten-Year Increase Affected by the Dwindling Dollar.

Washington.—National wealth of the United States amounted to $353,000,000,000 in 1922, an apparent increase in the ten-year period of 72 per cent, but only 16 per cent when allowance is made for changes in the purchasing power of the dollar. A 15 per cent increase in population took place during this period.

National income of the United States is estimated at $70,000,000,000 for the year 1923, which is somewhat less than the total in 1922, when it was $76,000,000,000, but more than in 1921, when, during that year of depression, it dropped to $58,000,000,000.

These estimates are contained in a report on national wealth and income issued by the federal trade commission based on an inquiry conducted under authority of a senate resolution. The report estimates that the national wealth in 1922 consisted of $122,000,000,000 of land values, exclusive of improvements, or 35 per cent of the total; $108,000,000,000 is the estimate for improvements on the land and $123,000,000,000 for movable goods of all kinds. Of the total real estate value of $230,000,000,000 about $48,000,000,000 is tax exempt and belongs chiefly to the government—federal, state and local.

The report estimates the amount of wealth according to various uses. Wealth in agriculture, for example, comprised about 18 per cent of the total; in manufacturing and mining about 14 per cent, and in railroads and other public utilities about 12 per cent. The largest share is said to be in dwellings and other goods used for personal necessities and enjoyment, reckoned at over one-fourth of the total.

Urges Observance of Magna Charta Day

St. Paul, Minn.—An American has furnished most of the stimulus for observance of the anniversary of Magna Charta day this year in several English speaking lands.

He is J. W. Hamilton of St. Paul, now in England directly concerned with arousing interest in the International Magna Charta Day association, of which he is founder and secretary.

It was principally through Mr. Hamilton's efforts that the first observance of the day was held at the site of the signing of the Magna Charta at Runnimead, England, which was granted June 15, 1215.

The association was organized 15 years ago "as an instrument of world peace and to promote the unity of all English speaking nations." President Coolidge is honorary president for the United States.

"Magna Charta is the background of all that we have," President Coolidge said in giving his endorsement to the movement.

The main purpose of the association, Mr. Hamilton said, "is to bring about an annual commemoration by the English speaking nations of the common origin of their liberties in the observance of June 15 as Magna Charta day."

The English speaking nations—the "Seven Nations"—are the United States, Canada, Newfoundland, Great Britain and Ireland, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

The TALE of KIDDIE KATYDID

By Arthur Scott Bailey

KIDDIE KEEPS PROMISE

OLD MR. CROW flew into a terrible rage when he found, the next morning, that his committee had not called on Kiddie Katydid during the night. And when Chirpy Cricket told him that the weather was too cold for anybody to stay out late, Mr. Crow said, "Nonsense! What about Mr. Frog?"

That was a hard question to answer. And Chirpy Cricket was so afraid of angry Mr. Crow that he promptly hid himself among the roots of a clump of grass.

Now, the fact that Mr. Frog had been away from his shop the night before set Mr. Crow to worrying.

"That slippery tailor has been up to some mischief," Mr. Crow declared.

one that I'd like to sing for you. It's about one of the Katydid family; and I'm sure you'll enjoy hearing it."

But Mr. Crow wouldn't stay there any longer. With a loud squawk of rage he scurried away. He was sure, then, that Mr. Frog had tricked him.

That night Mr. Crow's committee called on Kiddie Katydid. It was a fine, warm, moonlight night. And as they drew near Farmer Green's place they could hear Kiddie's shrill music, even while they were still a quarter of a mile away.

"He plays better than ever," said Freddie Firefly. "I wish Mr. Crow could hear him." And they hurried on, believing that everything was going to turn out all right, in the end.

"Mr. Crow will be sorry, tomorrow, that he scolded us," said Chirpy Cricket.

Kiddie Told Him He Couldn't Join the Orchestra.

"And if he has played a trick on me I'll never hear the last of it."

The old gentleman was so disturbed that he quite lost his appetite during the rest of the day. And he moped and groaned about, hoping for the best, but fearing the worst. One thing that made him especially uneasy was the fact that when he called on Mr. Frog he found the tailor in a gay mood than he had ever known him to be in.

Mr. Frog bounded about his shop like a rubber ball. And the worst of it was, he would sing, although Mr. Crow begged him, with tears in his eyes, to stop.

"What's the matter?" Mr. Frog asked him. "Don't you like my voice? Or is it the songs I sing? I've a new

But the committee met with a sad disappointment. When they invited Kiddie Katydid to join the Pleasant Valley orchestra he told them that he couldn't.

"Why not?" Freddie Firefly asked. "I've promised somebody that I wouldn't," Kiddie said.

And though they pressed him for an explanation, he wouldn't give them any. He wouldn't say another word. It was a downcast company that left Farmer Green's front yard. And they quarreled among themselves, too, before they parted. For there wasn't one of them that was willing to tell Mr. Crow that Kiddie had declined his invitation.

But they finally hit upon a plan that suited everybody. They agreed to get Mr. Crow's cousin, Jasper Joy, to break the news gently to the old gentleman.

It turned out that Jasper was delighted to undertake the task. He hoped that Mr. Crow would fly into a passion when he heard the sad tale. And Jasper was not disappointed. For old Mr. Crow was furious.

"It's the work of that sly rascal, Mr. Frog!" he squalled. "He must have called on Kiddie Katydid and hoodwinked him somehow. . . . I'd like to know what he said."

But Mr. Crow never found that out. So Kiddie Katydid had another secret, which was known only to himself and Mr. Frog.

And Mr. Frog wouldn't tell anybody, because he preferred to tease Mr. Crow.

And Kiddie Katydid wouldn't tell anybody, because he liked secrets. So when people tried to pry into the affair, he just folded his wings tightly over himself—and said nothing.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

WHAT THE WORLD NEEDS

WITHIN the hearts of all humans are found anger, antipathy, envy, desire of power and a love of dominion over others.

These are the feelings which are ever waiting to destroy us.

They assert themselves with more or less strength in early childhood, and if not overcome they grow to monster enemies too formidable to be faced with complacency.

A child resists force employed to make him do things.

He resents injuries done him by striking back.

He dislikes to see others enjoying toys and playthings which he covets, and in this mood he becomes a rival.

Rivalry implies antagonism, often leading to anger or malevolence. It is this which gives the zest of excitement to all contest and competition, and finally its crowning pleasure in victory, not simply the delight of superiority, but the discomfiting and humiliating of another.

As we drift down the tide of years we discover with a great reluctance these animal traits within ourselves.

In our conceited superiority to our dust-made brothers and sisters, we try to hide these ugly things, but in spite of our subtle effort they suddenly flare up like a hastily struck match and burst into flame, scorching our souls and making us miserable, sometimes to the end of our lives.

That we should waste time in trying to conceal our common feelings from others is regrettable, of no avail to the world or to our proud selves.

We ought, in the beginning of our intimacy with these faults proceed to overcome them.

If we do not we can never hope for friendship, or a seat in the high places.

"Life," says the poet, "is real," but the manner of living is unquestionably artificial.

In our reflective moments we become ashamed of our animal and absurd behavior, and in the same sense and in a like degree we realize our guilt and lack of strength to shake it off.

The thing to do is to seek moral support from the source divine—to raise our supplication in faith and resolve through faith to overcome.

And this is what the world needs today more than anything else under the waiting heavens.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

HENRY III OF FRANCE

Born September 19, 1551.

HENRY III was one of the strangest kings who ever governed—or attempted to govern, the beautiful country of France. He used to dress himself in women's clothes, and he hid in the cellars of the palace when he thundered. His voice and his manner were so effeminate that even the people of those days, taught to reverence kings, quite despised him. His pets were only little dogs.

He was son of Henry II, and succeeded to the throne when he was about twenty-three. His mother had succeeded in making him king of Poland, a place he hated, and he was glad enough to get back to France and to that throne, and also to a princess he was in love with. France was in a wretched state from civil wars, and Henry really tried his best to make a good king of himself. But, though fairly intelligent and cultivated, he was lazy and too ready to neglect his work for pleasure.

To get rid of Henry of Guise, whom the people loved, he ordered his death by assassination. As usual, his methods were all wrong; the people clamored for revenge, and a Dominican friar was introduced to Henry's presence to accomplish this vengeance. The friar stabbed the king with a knife, and Henry died in a few hours.

"THE BANK WITH THE CHIME CLOCK"

ANTI-WORLD COURT PLANK IS ADOPTED

Indiana G. O. P. Unanimously Registers Against Participation by U. S.

Indianapolis.—Dominated by Senator James E. Watson, the Indiana Republican party, in one of the most harmonious state conventions in its history, flatly opposed participation by the United States in the "so-called League of Nations or its world court." The plank was nailed into the platform by unanimous approval and brought uproarious cheers.

Others planks call for outright repeal of the Indiana absent voter law, commend the Indiana delegation in congress "for their efforts to enact farm relief legislation," pledges "continued efforts for passage of such measures as will effectively handle the surplus of farm products," and recognizes "the need of this legislation to place agriculture on a basis of trading equally with industry and labor."

The platform voices warm approval of the Watson-Parker bill, recently passed by the congress, to abolish the railroad labor board.

It approved the administration's efforts to procure an international arrangement for reduction of armaments and its activities as a friendly mediator in the differences between Latin-American countries.

It approved reform of diplomatic service along democratic lines with recognition of the merit system.

The President's rigid adherence to the budget system was applauded, as well as the reduction in federal taxation and indebtedness.

Two planks in the platform were direct thrusts at the views of Gov. Edward Jackson. These were the stands against the world court and a plank favoring legislation to amend the primary law so as to "restore representative government by political parties." The governor, soon after the two Indiana senators voted against the world court plan, spoke favorably of the world court in an address.

The state ticket adopted is: United States senator, long term, James E. Watson; short term, Arthur Robinson; primary victors, secretary of state, Frederick E. Schortemeler; auditor, Lewis Bowman; treasurer, Mrs. Grace Banta Urbhans, all incumbents.

Muskegon.—The Government of Michigan can well afford to put a "reasonable amount of money" into the advertising of the state's recreational advantages to the rest of the nation, declared Gov. Alex. Grosbeck in addressing the Lake Frontage Development and Tourist Conference here. He expressed the view that a short-sighted policy of economy has been followed in the past.

Birmingham—Plans which include paving 10 streets and laying a trunk line sewer and three smaller sewers have been announced Wednesday by the village commission of Birmingham. More equipment will be added to the village park and two cooking stoves will be placed there for the convenience of picnicers.
