Great Program For Chautauqua

At East Jordan July 11th to 15th Inclusive.

The officers and committee chairman of the East Jordan Chautauqua Association are confident that the 1926 program will surpass in every respect any program of recent years. It seems almost impossible that such splendid talent and attractions of such variety can be provided during five days at so low a cost as the price of the Chautauqua season ticket. The usual quality and type of the attractions this year will cause a great many who have not held season tickets for the Chautauqua in the past, to buy them this year. There are a number of programs which in themselves are worth as much as the entire season ticket costs.

It is believed that not only will a larger number of people buy season tickets, but that more of our citizens will be actively interested in increasing the attendance by active cooperation and boosting.

LECTURES

HARRY G. HILL—"An Undiscovered World." Dr. Harry G. Hill, former President, former Secretary of the International Association of Optimists Clubs, editor, author and psychologist, is an orator of force and power—a man of splendid personality, who is in great demand for National Conventions and other like gatherings. He has a message that has a direct bearing upon the life of every individual.

ETHEL L. IRWIN—"Mexico." This is a lecture that is quite different from the ordinary run. It is as much an entertainment as a lecture, five changes of costume, showing the dress worn by the different classes, being used. The lecture gives a very thorough insight into the habits and customs, as well as the political and social institutions of the country.

WARD B. FLAXINGTON—"The Patriotism of Peace." A young man, thinker, dramatic and forceful orator, who demonstrated his patriotism during the war by fighting in the trenches over seas. He is now rendering equally valuable services by fighting the entrenched forces of greed and selfishness as opposed to patriotic service. A young man's lecture for young men.

MUSIC

GREEN AND HIS BAND—In 1923 Green and His Band established a high mark of musical excellence on this Circuit. Since that time we have had numerous requests to return the Band over the Circuit. We are therefore very happy to present Green and His Band under the personal direction of Charles E. Green, presenting specially arranged programs of the type that have made this Band famous. This insures on Band Day two of the most delightful sessions. Practically all of the music will be specially arranged for this Band. Many novelties will be introduced and like the Band programs of 1923, the programs of this year will be replete with surprises.

FRYE & CO.—Leah Miles, saxophonist, soprano and pianist, and James Quelltell, baritone and pianist, members of Frye & Co., will present at an afternoon session, a thirty minute musical program, and in the evening will offer musical selections as special settings for a number of the illusions by Frye.

THE HARMONY MAIDS—The Chautauqua Management is convinced that this company will prove one of the most popular that has ever appeared on the Circuit. Three young ladies of splendid personality and genuine musical ability will present programs unique and distinctly pleasing. Harriet Krauth dramatic soprano; Lillian May Heuslein, contralto, and Opal DeLong, accompanist and piano-accompanist. The program will consist of vocal solos, duets, character songs, costumed novelties and musical sketches.

THE PARKINSON ENSEMBLE—An artistic instrumental trio, presenting the best in stringed music. Frances Parkinson, violinist and cellist; Ruth Lash, pianist; Florence Hood, violinist. In addition to the instrumental ensemble and solos, this company presents a very clever Dutch or wooden shoe costume sketch.

DRAMATIC PRODUCTIONS

"THE BUBBLE"—This delightful dialect comedy drama in three acts will be presented on the first night of the Chautauqua. This play proved a tremendous success during its original run in New York, as well as during its more recent engagement in other dramatic centers. The play is filled

Widening Of Main-st. Pavement Under Way

Work on widening the pavement in the two blocks on Main Street—from State to Williams Street—is now in full swing and part of the street is closed to vehicle traffic. This project has long been contemplated, and, when completed, will make the auto traffic in this part of the city much easier.

When the original pavement was laid years ago our city officials had the forethought to provide for this in case it was ever found necessary, so the cost of this improvement is at a minimum.

With the widened Main Street, its boulevard lighting system, and the recently erected band stand (which is artistic) our citizens may well feel proud of our Main thoroughfare.

Merchants in this part of the city are commencing to install electric signs, and the few we have had for several years will be augmented from week to week, which will add to the streets appearance at night.

with humor, pathos, laughter and tears in fact it is a play that runs the whole gamut of human emotion, but through it all runs a clean philosophy which remains long after the lines, the humor of the pathos forgotten. It is a play which the whole family can witness and enjoy. Two hours of the most delightful entertainment is therefore assured.

"A MESSAGE FROM MARS"—Another dramatic production will be one of the most pretentious ever attempted on the Chautauqua platform.

This is possible because of the fact that the lighting paraphernalia used on the stages in our tents is as complete and elaborate as that of many city theaters. This lighting equipment will permit the production of Richard Ganthony's remarkable play, "A Message From Mars." The scientific effects will be unusual and spectacular. The play itself is a tremendous sermon on unselfishness, relieved at frequent intervals by a droll humor and subtle wit that is delightful. It will unquestionably be the unanimous opinion of the public that this play is one of the best things ever done in Chautauqua. A special effort should be made to interest the entire community in it.

JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA—This year we shall continue the policy established heretofore of giving the children of the community several extra days of Junior Chautauqua. The Junior Worker will be sent in three or four days before the Chautauqua opens and will conduct each morning, story and game hours free for all of the children of the community. After the tent arrives and the Chautauqua proper opens Junior Chautauqua sessions will be held in the tent. The Junior Town and Junior Community Club features will be continued, with regular hours for stories, games and other children's activities. The children will also be trained for Musical Dramatization to be presented on the fourth afternoon of the Chautauqua.

Kentucky Girl Victor in Big Spelling Bee
Washington.—Miss Pauline Bell, thirteen years old, won first prize of $1,000 and two gold medals in the national spelling bee, sponsored by a number of newspapers throughout the country. Second prize of $500 was won by Miss Betty Robinson of South Bend, Ind.; Miss Dorothy Casey of St. Louis won third prize of $200.

Embargo on Mexican Cattle Is Proposed
Mexico City.—A cattle embargo to prevent the spread of the hoof and mouth disease from Mexico into the United States, is proposed by the American Department of Agriculture. A note suggesting a conference between Mexican and American authorities was delivered by the embassy.

British Note Causes Resentment in Russia
Moscow.—Workers' demonstrations in protest against the British strike funds note continued, causing a considerable stir throughout the city, strongly reminiscent of the reactions to the famous Curzon note. Similar demonstrations were held in a number of other cities.

Gould Estate Shrinks
New York.—A shrinkage of nearly $8,000,000 in the estate of the late George J. Gould is shown in an accounting on file in the Ocean county Orphan's court at Toms River, N. J., according to the New York World.

CHICAGO WELCOMES CATHOLIC PRELATES

Immense Demonstration in Coliseum—Coolidge Sends Message.

Chicago.—Chicago extended her civic welcome to the twenty-eighth International Eucharistic congress with an immense demonstration in the Coliseum.

Welcomed by nation, state and city. John Cardinal Bonzano stood silently before 12,000 persons, while for fully two minutes the great throng paid him tribute with cheers and applause.

The papal legate, personal representative of the pope at the twenty-eighth Eucharistic congress, heard cordial welcomes extended to him by Catholic and Protestant leaders.

Mayor Dever, speaking for the city; Governor Small, representing the commonwealth; Secretary of Labor Davis, with the message from President Coolidge and his own addenda; Robert M. Switzer, for the Catholic charities; Samuel Insull for Catholic laity and the commercial and financial interests of the municipality; the telegram from Senator Charles S. Deneen, and, finally, Cardinal Bonzano, accepting the welcome, piled up the program into a great dramatic unity.

In his message to Cardinal Mundelein, read by Secretary Davis, President Coolidge regretted that he was unable to accept the invitation to attend the meeting in person and then dwelt briefly on the need for and value of religion in the life of a nation.

"Material prosperity cannot be secured unless it rests on spiritual realities," he said.

Replying specifically to President Coolidge's declaration for religious freedom, Cardinal Bonzano said: "It is plain from the words of your distinguished President that he believes religion and morality, as well as knowledge, to be essential to good government."

Official announcement has been made that the 1928 meeting of the congress will be held in Sydney, Australia.

Auto Breaks Records, New York to Frisco

San Francisco.—All trans-continental vehicular speed records were shattered when a Studebaker automobile, which left New York at 2:07 a. m. one day arrived here at 12:27 three and a half days later.

Ad Jenkins and Ray Peck, Salt Lake City business men, made the trip. They smashed the fastest passenger train time between the two cities by 12 hours and 5 minutes and knocked off 16 hours and 25 minutes from the previous automobile speed record. The 3,471 miles were made at an average of 40 1/5 miles an hour.

To Show Opposition to Debt Settlement

Paris.—Crippled war veterans hobbling on crutches, blind veterans led by dogs and mutilated heroes in wheel chairs will lead a parade of 50,000 French war legionnaires up the Champs Elysees and around the Arch of Triumph on July 4 as a protest against the debt agreement, according to plans of the veterans' executive council.

To show that the demonstration is not one against America, the Stars and Stripes will be carried in the procession, among the 2,500 flags representing the veteran posts.

We have no objections to peddlers but we notice that few of them subscribe to this rag of freedom.

Poet Elected Mayor

St. Paul, Minn., again has a poet-mayor. Laurence C. Hodgson, known as a writer of verse and prose under the name of "Larry Ho," has been elected the city's chief executive, defeating Rev. Howard Y. Williams, who was endorsed by labor. Arthur E. Nelson, whose mayoralship expired, did not seek re-election. Mr. Hodgson formerly had served two years as mayor, and for the last two years had been city commissioner of finance.

Australia Has Plans to Force Arbitration

Melbourne.—The commonwealth house of representatives passed a conciliation and arbitration bill which reconstitutes the commonwealth arbitration court and grants the judges wider powers. The bill appoints conciliation commissioners and permits the government to intervene in the interests of the public when standard working hours or basic wages are disputed. The Laborites support the measure.

Farm Loan Interest Rate Officially Cut

Washington.—The farm loan board announced a reduction of from 5 to 4 1/2 per cent in the interest rate on direct loans to co-operative marketing organizations by intermediate credit banks. A cut in the rediscount rate of banks from 5 to 4 1/2 per cent, effective July 1, was also announced.

Congress Likely to Quit Duties June 30

Washington.—The Republican steering committee of the house of representatives decided upon June 30 as a suitable day for the adjournment of congress, continuing the session four days beyond Saturday, June 26, which was the original date chosen.

Pope Issues a Denial

Rome.—Pope Pius issued a denial of rumors that the Catholic church was acting politically with respect to Asia. The denial was forwarded in an apostolic letter to vicars and prelates in Asia.

Spain's Attitude Unchanged

Madrid.—Spain will remain firm in her attitude for a seat in the league of nations, Foreign Minister Yanguas said at a banquet in his honor here in a speech.

The world will have peace when the men in it become spiritual brothers. The trouble is that many of us would rather have a little warfare.

Our idea of a good joke is the missionary work being done by the wets of certain big states in behalf of states' rights.

Mrs. A. E. Cross Passes Away at Spokane, Wash.

Mrs. A. E. Cross passed away at the Sacred Heart hospital, Spokane, Wash., last Monday, June 21st. She had been in fairly good health, and a few weeks ago decided to undergo an operation which was not considered serious.

Mrs. Cross was with her family, residents of East Jordan for many years and was esteemed by all who knew her. They left several years ago for Fairfield, Wash., where Mr. Cross holds a position with a seed-growing firm.

The deceased lady was daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Mudge of Central Lake. It is not known yet whether the remains will be brought to Michigan for burial or not.

Her daughter, Mrs. Howard Porter, received word of her mother's serious illness and left East Jordan, Sunday, for Spokane. A telegram from her on way west indicated she would arrive at her destination either Thursday or Friday.

E. J. Trims Cheboygan

Northerns Go Down To a Nine To One Defeat.

East Jordan's fast aggregation of base ball tossers proved too much for the Cheboygan nine in the game last Sunday at the local fair grounds. Johnson kept the hits scattered, and with good backing, Cheboygan was only able to put across one tally out of seven hits. East Jordan bunched their batting and secured nine runs from an equal number of hits.

WHEELER TELLS OF LEAGUE ACTIVITIES

Gives Names of Statesmen Prominent in Prohibition Work.

Washington.—Having laid the groundwork for a broad inquiry into the activities of the Anti-Saloon league, Chairman Reed of the senate campaign investigating committee recalled Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the organization, for further testimony.

Mr. Wheeler gave the names of eight members of congress as among those who have received "expenses and sometimes an honorarium" for speaking in behalf of prohibition.

Representative Upshaw (Dem., Ga.) headed the list with "possibly" 50 speeches in eastern states. Representative Barkley (Dem., Ky.) was next with "20 or 30." The others named were Representative Cooper (Rep., Ohio), Senator Jones (Rep., Wash.), Representative Lowrey (Dem., Miss.), Senators Willis and Fess (Rep., Ohio), and Senator Robinson (Rep., Ind.), about whom he was not so certain. Wheeler said he thought Robinson had made several prohibition speeches in response to requests from his own state.

Under questioning, Mr. Wheeler maintained that the league had played only a legitimate role in politics, in legislation and in litigation arising under the dry laws.

The league's entire financial chest for 1925, the witness estimated, would not run above $150,000 to $200,000. He said he received a salary of $696 a month from the organization and had no other source of income.

Several of the senators and congressmen named by Wheeler as making prohibition speeches for the league for pay made statements defending their conduct. They took the position that what they had received was little more than expenses and was earned in a good cause, passing rapidly over the question of the propriety of legislators accepting pay from any organization interested in legislation.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

Chief Justice Taft, who is recuperating from illness, has left for his summer home in Canada.

T. V. O'Connor, Buffalo, N. Y., and Jefferson Myers, Portland, Ore., were confirmed by the senate as members of the shipping board.

The senate dismissed the petition of Magnus Johnson, Farmer-Laborite, seeking to unseat Senator Schall, Republican, of Minnesota.

President Louis Borno of Haiti was a luncheon guest at the White House, where he was entertained by the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Secretary Wilbur selected Rear Admiral John D. Buret to succeed himself on July 1 as chief of the bureau of construction and repair.

Adding half a billion to its nearly $9,000,000,000 foreign trade, the United States will wind up this fiscal year, June 30, with a favorable trade balance of about $900,000,000.

The senate refused by a margin of one vote to reconsider passage of the Pittman bill directing the treasury to purchase 14,500,000 ounces of silver at $1 an ounce for coining.

Struck out—By Johnson, 8; by Geyer 2. Base on balls—off Geyer 4, off Buck 1; off Johnson 4. Hit by pitched ball E. Segman by Johnson. Umpires Gothro and Bennett. Attendance 152.

In the two games on the local field this year the attendance has been anything but good. East Jordan has the reputation of being a good base ball town and we want to continue in this position. A good ball team is among the assets of any community. East Jordan has this year a well-balanced team of fast players, and they should be given the support of our citizens. At last Sunday's game there was only an attendance of 152, and the greater part of these were from outside our city. It is hoped that the game here with Grayling next Sunday will bring out a better attendance. The men comprising the East Jordan team are devoting a lot of valuable time in practice work, as well as the time and strenuous work of playing the actual game. In addition, there is considerable expense in purchasing balls, bats, and other necessary equipment. They should be rewarded by some remuneration for their efforts. BOOST BASE BALL.

DARUS SHAW AND ELLEN NOWLAND UNITED IN MARRIAGE

Henry Hiles officiating. They were attended by the groom's brother and sister, Merrit and Miss Alta Shaw. They left Thursday on a wedding trip to Muskegon and other points.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw have the sincere congratulations of their many friends in this vicinity.

Grand Rapids—Bean growers of Michigan are discouraged over the behavior of the market since last fall. It is reported here. ## ONE HUNDRED LAUGHS !!

SCENE FROM "THE BUBBLE"
 Children blow soap bubbles and as they float away their eyes are so entranced by the colorful lights in the bubble that they start with disappointment when the bubble bursts. Men are not much different. The gorgeous rainbow promises of wealth in a financial bubble will some times cause the most conservative to lose his sense of values, until the bubble bursts and then comes disillusionment. Just often enough to keep the mind in doubt, the vision in 'The Bubbles' becomes a reality.
 The question in the three-act comedy presented on the first night of the Chautauqua is, Does the old German delicatessen keeper, Gustav Mueller, see a bubble, or is he keen enough to see reality where persons of less experience see the bubble? The eccentricities of Gustav and his wife Amelia, the romance of their daughter Rosie, and her young lover Dick, will interest and entertain you from the rise of the curtain on the first act to the finale in the third act. It is a play that is full of action. So rapidly does one funny situation follow another that at the end of two hours, when the curtain falls, you can hardly believe that it has been more than a few minutes. Only when you come to the realization that your sides are sore from laughter are you convinced that you must have been laughing for the full two hours.

Achievement Day
Big Success

100 Garments Exhibited at Boyne City, June 16th.

The First County Achievement Day for Club Members and Ladies' Clothing Extension Workers, held at Boyne City June 16th, was a great success in every way.

To begin with the weather was fine, the program of exceptional merit, and the attendance all that could be hoped for.

A busier place could not be found than in the community building during the forenoon where some odd 100 garments were brought in and placed on exhibit on all sides of the big room. By 11:30 everything was in readiness and the visitors departed for the City Park, where tables and benches had been arranged for the best of all—good old fashioned picnic dinner. Within a very short time the food in sight had been defeated, lemonade routed, and plates wrecked and all had returned to the Community Building anticipating the start of the program.

The first portion of the program was devoted to the Club Members in the Handicraft and Clothing Clubs, who have recently finished their winter program. Miss Sylvia Wixson, Ass't State Club Leader, gave a very inspiring discussion of the wonderful work being done by Club Members in Canning Clubs and Clothing Clubs, followed by a talk by our State Club Leader, Mr. A. G. Kettunen, on the aims and results of this phase of Extension Work throughout the State. Probably the most pleasing part of the program was the splendid and capable in which Miss Katherine Wangeman, who as chairman conducted the program. She is one of the most enthusiastic Club Members of County and was County Canning Champion last year and has developed much executive ability. Several mothers stated that if club work was instrumental in doing that for young young people they wanted to get their children enrolled. Willard Mizier, Champion of the Maple Grove Handicraft Club gave a very pleasing little talk about about his club and in addition played two selections on a mouth organ. The exhibit from the Clarion Handicraft Club was of exceptional merit and received much favorable comment.

Miss Margaret Harris, Extension Specialist of M. S. C., gave a very interesting talk concerning the results of this years work in the Clothing Project, as well as a short-outline of the important lessons given during the course: The workmanship contained in many new garments of various kinds made by the members of the project, offered proof of the benefits received by taking this advantage of the opportunity to learn more about sewing. The value of the work was better understood when, after compiling records, it was noticed that 41 meetings were held by the 25 leaders with attendance of 363 ladies. 141 New Garments were made, using the suggestions from the instructions and the total of 149 people were reached other than those enrolled.

The next speaker on the program was Miss Julia Brekke, Ass't State Demonstration Agent Leader, who explained what was being offered by the College to the women of the State. The home is the backbone of the nation and the College is endeavoring by this means to make farm life more attractive and a better place to live in.

Several musical selections were given during the program, including violin duets by William Moorehouse and Alfred Sarasin and dance by Miss Shaffer and Miss Hartnell accompanied by Mrs. Bissell, which completed the program that was an inspiration to the 150 people in attendance and that will not be forgotten.

Lester Strickland of Clarion was awarded the honor of being the County Champion in Handicraft Work and Miss Germain Yell of Boyne Falls, the Champion of Clothing Club Work. Congratulations and lets keep up the good work.

Proper Handling Of Alfalfa To Be Demonstrated

The first "Hay Day" to be given in Charlevoix County by experts from M. S. C. will take place at the farm of Mr. J. H. Noble, one mile south and west of Advance on East Jordan road on July 6th, at 1:00 p. m. slow time.

Hay Days were just put on last year and the interest was so great that 19 counties are planning similar occasions this year.

The value of alfalfa is becoming more and more evident to stockmen and the saving in food value by proper handling means more money.

Hay Crops Entitled To Better Handling

Michigan's 540,000 acres of alfalfa again present many problems of handling, for hay, such an important crop. The ever increasing acreage of alfalfa in this State finds many growers who have 25-50 or 100 acres of this legume on their farms. To care for such a crop twice a year is a job which means considerable thought as to economical methods in curing that hay so that losses in its quality are kept as low as possible.

Feeding Value Influenced

Alfalfa is a member of the legume family, that comprises the group of food bearing plants characterized by their high content of crude protein. This protein content varies with the time of cutting or maturity of the plant and its total content in any hay can be easily changed. The age of maturity of the plants at time of cutting has a direct bearing on the grade or quality of the hay. As plants approach maturity and the process of seed formation, an appreciable percentage of the starch, sugar and protein in the sap of the leaves and stems is carried gradually to the seed head and to the roots, where these nutrients are not available for feeding.

Time of Cutting

Alfalfa should be cut for hay when it is in bloom. At this time, numerous shoots will be found starting at the crown of the plant. By harvesting the crop at this stage of maturity, a large yield of high quality hay is secured, which is leafy and palatable and with no undue amount of fiber. Cutting late reduces the next crop and results in hay of lower feeding quality, while cutting early may weaken the stand.

Get Hay out of Swath Quickly

In order that the digestible nutrients in alfalfa may be retained in proper condition, and that the hay be palatable it is important that the crop be dried quickly and uniformly. The moisture contained within the plant is normally lost by evaporation through the leaves. Exposing these delicate leaves to the direct rays of the sunlight, as in the case when lying in the swath left by the cutter bar, will dry these leaves and shut off the moisture passages thru which the stem moisture should move. As a result, the leaves become brittle and shatter badly when handled.

It is important, therefore, to get the hay into a windrow within a short time after cutting, especially if it is real good hay weather. Any system which turns the leaves to the center of a rather loose windrow and leaves the majority of the stems to the outside will give most satisfactory results in hay curing. All these factors are important ones in curing alfalfa so that one may have a high grade of hay. Hay making demonstrations take these phases of curing step by step from cutting to drawing the cured hay to the barn. Anyone attending much "Hay Days" can see these various operations for himself and judge their relative value over systems in common usage.

of Plebiscite.

Washington.—An acute situation exists between the United States and Chile as a result of the collapse of the Tacna-Arica plebiscite negotiations.

Flames of resentment were sweeping Chile as a result of General Lassiter's action in ending the plebiscite, according to reports received here. Recurrence of attacks upon Peruvians in the strife-torn zone were feared, although the department was without advices of new outbreaks or demonstrations.

While no criticism was attached to General Lassiter's action, it was made known at the State department that he had acted upon his own initiative and without instructions as head of the plebiscitary commission.

Chile intends to reoccupy disputed territory in the provinces of Tacna and Arica as a result of the breakdown of plans for a plebiscite, her spokesmen assert.

been done or comprehend the ulterior purpose of Silver's strategy. To do him justice, I do not believe that he feared me or doubted his ability to kill me in a knife-fight, for I had never had occasion to exhibit my skill with the knife before the pirates. He simply knew that he had been lured into a position where he must fight personally to maintain his authority over the crew, and the initial flare of his hatred was naturally directed against me. But he did not forget Silver.

"I'll mind this," he flung at the one-legged man as he crouched forward to meet me, knife poised across his chest and left arm extended to clutch at my knife-wrist or parry a stab from the side.

"Tain't my doin's, Bill, if ye will ha' the girl," remonstrated Silver. "I warned ye o' Rule Four. And the cap'n's all the same as any other in a question o' honor."

"That's right," shouted a score of throats. "Cap'n's got to meet anybody."

"I'll meet some others a'ber I finish this swab," gritted Bones.

I circled away from the gagging effect of the swaying athorn-light upon the deck shadows and the feel of the pitchy planks underfoot.

"Stand to it, — ye," he snarled. "Don't let him break from the ring, mates. I want his heart for that wench to chew on—and mind the fat Dutchman doesn't jump on my back. He's a bad 'un' he is."

Silver was prompt to summon half a dozen men to block off Peter, who, having seen me use the scalping-knife of the frontier since childhood, was not in any way concerned as to what I should be able to do against a half-drunken sailor whose one idea of knife-fighting was to grab his opponent's wrist at the same time the opponent grabbed his, and then strain and heave until one of the pair tore loose and struck.

"Don't ye worry, Bill," consoled the one-legged man soothingly. "We won't let the Dutchman nor nobody else harm ye. Just you hop in and gut the Buckskin—if ye can."

"If I can!" hissed Bones. "Watch me!"

He dropped to all fours and bounded into the air in a clumsy fashion—not at all as an Iroquois warrior would have done it, hurdling like a projectile, with his whole body behind the knife. I stepped to the left and stabbed down, aiming to drive inside the collarbone. But the light or something fooled me, and my blade slashed his cheek from eye to mouth, a great searing cut that laid open the whole side of his face.

He bellowed with surprise, and I was put out myself, for I had thought to finish him. Not a man moved for two or three breaths in the circle around us, for none had expected to see the fight terminated so quickly. Moira told me afterward that it was comical to see how Silver's jaw gaped.

Bones staggered back, the spurting blood blinding him so that he had to feel his way. I followed him slowly, half prepared for a ruse, and he must have heard me, for he called out:

"Don't let him slay me, mates! I can't see, and he's a-comin' a'ter die!"

At this a dozen pirates jolted in between us, cursing and threatening me, and I gave ground toward where my friends were standing with Silver. The one-legged man hopped out to meet me. But I had scant satisfaction from him. He snatched the knife from my hand and, bending low, spat at me with a scorn words cannot possibly convey:

"Ye bungler! As good as blind, and ye didn't do for him!"

And he swung by me on his crutch, hallooing to his friends:

"They're after Black Dog yon! Lay into the dirty swabs, mates!"

Knives were out all over the deck, and men were slashing and stabbing at one another. Bones was swallowed up in the mass of frantic humanity that milled around the restricted space between the butt of the mizzen and the rise of the poop.

A man plucked at my sleeve, and I spun about defensively to confront Peter.

"Where's Moira?" I panted.

"Darby took her. He has a plan for us to get free. Hurry, Bob! We got a good chance, ja. This is what Silver worked for, to have you kill Bones or set der crew against him."

I noticed that Peter steered me forward where the deck was deserted; but I asked no questions, for Silver's voice spurred me on.

"Lay aft, lads," he was shouting. "We'll show 'em what! We won't let no perishin' fool like Bill Bones go for to hold out that treasure-map on us. Couldn't even handle the Buckskin, he couldn't!"

Moira hailed us from the shelter of the captain.

"Will it be you, Bob? Oh, thank God, thank God!"

"And your hand?" I stammered. She pressed it to my lips.

"There!" said she. "If you will be so chary of other places."

sliding one by one into the jolly-boat which Darby held steady beneath the heft of the bowsprit. The Walrus had swung with the tide until her stern was toward the town, and Darby and I took the oars and rowed quietly along the mass of the pirate's hull in the direction of the scattered lights that represented Savannah. How beautiful they seemed to us, those tiny glimmers of rush-lights and lanterns in a clearing in the wilderness! They spelled safety, perhaps home.

But we were none too sure of ourselves yet. The big vessel loomed over us, her gunports like a row of gouging tusks, her spars and rigging a monstrous net poised for casting. Her decks seethed with lawless men, fighting and running, with harsh outcries and the clashing of steel and an occasional pistol shot.

We passed the cluster of boats moored by the side ladder, unwilling to risk the time it would take to cut them adrift. We passed the poop, where a particularly savage fray was going on. Men were battering at the door to the cabin companionway and one called to "roll up a chase-gun, and give the ——— a round-shot in his belly."

We rowed on under the Walrus' stern, and there we came upon an amazing spectacle.

A longboat was always towed astern for the greater convenience in case there was a sudden necessity for its use at sea. This boat had been drawn beneath the stern windows, from which a man was lowering a heavy box or chest, which a second man was receiving into its bow. The man in the longboat heard the rattle of our oars and gave us one lightning glance before he slashed at the mooring-rope and leaped to his own oars. The tide carried him immediately behind us, and I had a vision of a bloody face wrapped in an old shirt. If he knew who we were he gave no sign. He huddled onto a thwart and pulled downstream with the tide.

But the man in the stern windows was not so reticent. He leaned far out, wringing his hands and clamoring to be saved:

"Oh, Master Bones, ye wouldn't go for to leave poor Ben Gunn as stood by ye stanch to the end, and held the cabin door the while ye shot the bolt. Ah, and them ——— villains are a-hammerin' it this moment. Don't 'e go, and leave me like this! They'll keelhaul me, they will. They'll trice me to the cat."

"Back oars, Darby," I said. "We can't leave the poor fellow."

"And him with Bones!" protested Darby.

"'Twas not his fault."

We rowed under the stern, and I called up to the steward—

"Jump into the water and we'll pick you up, Ben."

"Who're you?" he answered shakily.

"'Tis Master Ormerod."

I could hear the blows on the door at the end of the companionway.

"Hasten, man! We can't wait forever."

He jumped, and we hauled him, dripping, into our midst.

CHAPTER XX

Home

A chorus of yelping certified to the invasion of the main cabin, but its note of triumph was changed to consternation as Silver's bloodhounds discovered that their bird had flown.

"Gone!"

"The ——— knave's scooped us!"

"Boats, lads; boats!"

And presently the click-clock of oars behind us caused Darby and me to redouble our labors. We drove ashore several rods downstream from the town on the shallow bluff, and we dared not wait to seek shelter within its log walls. Truth to tell, we doubted now that the town itself spelled safety to us. The Walrus' cannonades would make short work of such defenses as Savannah had to boast.

So we poited up the bluff by a sandy path that debouched upon the cleared fields outside the stockade, urged on by that persistent oar-rattle and the shouts the pirates exchanged betwixt their several boats. Whether they were following us we could not discover, for the night was black as a cellar-vault; but we left nothing to chance, and ran hot-foot through the plantations of the citizens, overhearing, as we passed, the excited comments of the men on the firing-platforms of the stockade, who evidently anticipated an attack from their ugly visitor in the river. We never tarried for breath until we had gained the verge of the forest.

Peter was now in his element. He could find his way about a strange countryside by day or night as easily as a sailor could navigate the trackless wastes of the sea, and he led us in a beeline north and east in the general direction of the outlying settlements which intervened betwixt Savannah and the Carolinas. An hour or so after dawn we emerged upon a village in a clearing, whose inhabitants eyed us dubiously until Darby produced one of the golden doubloons from the store he had acquired during his reign as Flint's favorite.

These people had never before seen gold, and for a doubloon and an onza they sold us an old but serviceable musket with bullet-pouch, powder-horn and store of ammunition, and deerkin garments. They also sold us a small quantity of salt and flour, and put us on the trail to Charleston in the Carolinas.

Of our journey thither I can say only that it was such an odyssey as the frontier-dwellers of our provinces have long been accustomed to. To Peter and me its perils of forest and stream, red savages, and wild beasts, were far less formidable than those of the sea, and Moira and Darby thrived upon the experience—so much so that when at last, brier-torn and footsore, we entered Charleston's sedate streets and found awaiting us an ample choice of packet ships to the north we four were unanimous for continuing our journey by land.

"Neen," said Peter. "I don't ever go to der sea again, Bob."

"Ah, who would be fool enough in his ignorance to be wanderin' wet and bedraggled on the salt waves of the sea when he might venture the forests and be shootin' at the red deer and the bears and the catamounts and it may be an Injun, if he was in the full tide o' his luck?" snorted Darby.

"I seem to remember one who was all for the sea, and would wave the skull and crossbones in anybody's face," I jeered.

"Troth, and I knew less then than I do now," he replied unblushingly. "Them pirates was enough to break the heart of Pontius Pilate. Barrin' Flint, there wasn't a one of them would be able to hold his own against such as us."

"Silver might—"

"He was a clever one, Long John; but he'll be in trouble, you see if he's not," insisted Darby. "Too graspin' he is by half."

Moira, sitting beside me on the settle of the tavern-porch, twined her arm in mine with a slight shudder.

But Peter shook his head solemnly.

"Neen," he said. "Der sea did not take them all. They died from der greed dot cankered in their hearts. I do not like der sea, but der sea is der same as der land. It works Gott's will."

We were silent for a space, looking out upon the busy life about us, the negroes in their bright bandanna headresses, the planters passing on half-thoroughbreds, the decent townsfolk in hoddin'-gray.

"And you, Ben Gunn?" I said to the steward who sat across the porch from us. "Will you come north with us?" My father—

He jumped up, writhing and twisting in an excess of embarrassment, aye, and with something of fear in his face.

"'Twas yourself was promisin' me I'd pot ha' to wear a livery-shut," he protested. "And before that ye said as how ye'd find me a berth as a real, tarry sailor-man, a-pullin' on ropes and standin' tricks at the wheel. Yes, ye did, Master Ormerod; and I believed ye, I did—though there's a many think naught o' foolin' poor Ben Gunn."

"I'll not fool you, Ben," I answered. "If you would go to sea, to sea shall you go."

And on the morrow I found him a berth upon a Barbados packet, cautioning him to employ discretion in discussing his past life, lest he be handed over to the admiralty officials as a former pirate. He was our last link with the infamous company that had owned the joint rule of my great-uncle and John Flint, and what became of him or of the remnants of Flint's crew aboard the Walrus I do not know to this day. But from the fact that the Walrus was never reported again I have suspected that she must either have been wrecked or voluntarily abandoned by her people. She left Savannah with-in twenty-four hours of our landing there—so much I discovered by correspondence with a merchant of that town.

Did she put back to the Rendezvous and ransack the island's surface for the treasure Flint had buried? Or did she try for the gold we concealed on the Dead Man's Chest? Hopeless ventures, either of the two! As well search for a certain grain of corn in a heaping bin.

And what happened to Bill Bones? Did he elude the pursuit of his deserted comrades and seek an opportunity to lift Flint's treasure for himself? I'll swear that was his intent from the first—precisely as I'll take oath that had Silver been first to get his hands upon Flint's map he would have plotted so that only he and a small circle of his immediate familiars should have shared in the prize. Ruthless scoundrels, one and all! But perhaps Bones never won clear. Perhaps Silver fastened upon his trail and pursued him with that fantastic vengeance they called the Black Spot. I have often wondered what it might be.

As to the treasure, they are welcome to it or any part of it if they can find it. Moira and I talked over the desirability of notifying her Jacobite friends of the hoard that was buried on the Dead Man's Chest, and for a time she leaned toward this course; but after she had dwelt a while in the Hanoverian prosperity of New York she revolted against the idea of taking any step which would embroil the peace of the realm, and any lingering doubts in her mind were dissipated by the titanic conflict of the Seven Years' war, with its world-wide convulsion of nations that set armies marching to battle all the way from the parched plains of India to the forests of our wilderness country.

But I am galloping ahead of my story. Drop back across the years—'tis no more of an effort than it was for us to slide down the cable over the bow of the Walrus that night off Savannah—to the settle on the porch of the tavern in Charleston. Ben Gunn was disposed of; our plans were made for the northward journey along the seaboard. All that remained to be done was to come by a priest to wed Moira and me; and that it seemed, was impossible short of Baltimore, in Maryland. Yet at the last our luck held, for the day we were to start turned stormy and we delayed our departure; and that afternoon a French West-Indiaman put into the harbor under stress of the weather. Among her company was a kindly Franciscan, and he readily agreed to perform the ceremony.

For the rest, we rode into New York about four of the clock on the afternoon of April the 24th, in the year 1755. My father was in the counting-room of our house in Pearl street, and he came to the door at the sound of the horses' hoofs on the cobbles. The sun was sloping out of the west full into his eyes; and for the time that it took me to dismount and swing Moira down from her saddle he stood dazed, fearful lest the dazzling light was playing tricks with him.

"Is it truly you, Robert?" he cried. "But it must be, for there are Peter and Darby."

"Yes, father," I answered. "And I have brought home another."

He opened his arms with an eager smile.

"There's room here for two of you, boy. Certes, you have but followed in my footsteps and fetched home a wife from your adventures."

"She is the little Irish maid I—"

"Whoever she is, she's more than welcome. But come in, come in, the pair of you. Safe and well—and with a wife! Robert, I can scarce credit it. After a whole year! Peter, God bless you! I knew with you he'd come to no harm. Ah, Darby, you have more sense in that red noddle of yours than when you left here; and if you stuck by Master Robert y'are forgiven. What a tale you'll all have to tell!"

That night as I lay in the upper room I had occupied since childhood I was aroused by a distant clatter and jangling which became louder and louder. At the corner it broke off with a heavy clang, and a pompous voice proclaimed:

"Past twelve o'clock of a fine, bright night, and Master Robert Ormerod is home from his captivity amongst the West India pirates. God save the king and the worshipful magistrates of New York!"

'Twas Diggory the watchman; and, listening to him, I recalled how Silver had cozened him the night I was kidnapped, and thereat I fell a-chuckling until Moira stirred sleepily and complained—

"'Tis an ill thing if ye'll not sleep the first night we will be in your own home, Bob."

"No, no, sweetheart," I said. "I was but thinking what an odd bundle of accident is this life we live. For if that fellow braying upon the corner had not been a stupid fool I should never have seen you after I took you to the Whale's Head."

"Do you think so?" she retorted. "Then 'tis you will be the fool, for if Captain Murray had not carried you after me I should have contrived to return to New York, though it kept me treading the highways and byways of the world some fifty years. Now get you to sleep! I am none of your wives to encourage a husband in loose fancies and romantical longings. Your wandering days are by and done with, and the sooner you square your back on them the better will I be pleased. I'll not let you forth again, and of that you may be prime confident!"

So I turned over and went to sleep. [THE END]

BANK resources are more than a "sum of money," more than a symbol of strength. Every dollar—no matter what its source—is an expression of someone's faith and confidence. The real significance, therefore, of the growth of The Peoples State Savings Bank to its present position, lies not in the dollars and cents total of its resources, but in the respect and trust that first placed these funds on deposit, and the loyalty and satisfaction that keep them there.

The same advantages which have made Long Distance so essential in business are enjoyed in calling your family at the cottage. It is speedy; it brings an immediate answer; it avoids misunderstanding. The sound of the voices of the members of your family over the Long Distance Circuits is comforting.

Long Distance rates are remarkably low. And on "Anyone" calls, after 8:30 at night they are approximately half the day rate.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

CAN'T BEAT "TIZ" WHEN FEET HURT

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "Tiz" bath. Your toes will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "Tiz" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "Tiz." It's grand—it's glorious. Your feet will dance with joy; also you will find all pain gone from corns, callouses and bunions.

There's nothing like "Tiz." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause foot torture. A few cents buy a box of "Tiz" at any drug or department store—don't wait. Ah! how glad your feet get; how comfortable your shoes feel.

You Never Know Your Luck

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

DOWN in a little southern town named Enterprise, John Drinkwater tells us, they have erected a monument in honor of the boll weevil. Now the boll weevil has done more than any other agency to make cotton growing in the South a failure, and cotton growing was for many generations the chief, if not the only, industry in many parts of the southern states.

"For many years," Mr. Drinkwater says, "the inhabitants of Enterprise had made a scanty living out of cotton. Then the weevil took charge, and within a season or two the community was bankrupt. In desperation they cast about for some other means of livelihood. It was casually suggested by the village idiot that they raise peanuts. For something better to do they tried this, and the peanut immediately began to flourish, and everybody grew rich. And so they erected a monument to the boll weevil that has brought about a rise in their fortunes."

It is St. Paul who has something to say about afflictions ultimately bringing about a weight of glory. Sometimes for each of us it is the apparent calamity which proves our best good fortune in disguise.

I was forced to quit school before I was fifteen, and during the succeeding eight or nine years I knew little but hard labor with responsibilities that seemed to me at times almost cruelly heavy. I went from childhood by one long step to manhood without youth intervening. I worked with men ten years or more older than myself. I worked long hours with little incentive to read or study or to broaden my mind.

I used to look back upon those years as almost wasted years. It seemed to me that for a time during that period I had stagnated, that I had learned nothing, that I had made no progress; but it was not so. I can see now that I did not know my luck. I was learning self-reliance and independence, which I could have learned in no other way so well. I learned to fight discouragement; I learned optimism and no one has ever had more need of it than I. I came to know and to understand human nature in a way that would have been impossible through another experience. Every day of my life I am reaping the benefit of the years that I spent in hard manual work. If I were erecting a monument it would be in memory of those years of apparent mental stagnation which brought me the most helpful experience which I have ever had.

When Slocum lost his job he felt that calamity had come upon him, and for a few days he was down in the dumps. Then he decided that maybe it was not ill luck but opportunity knocking at his door. He had never had much of a chance with the firm for which he had been working. He determined to set out for himself and to establish his own business. He was just telling me yesterday that the day he got fired was the luckiest day of his life.

New Style Details in Midsummer Gowns

The latest midsummer gowns reveal new style details that carry them farther and farther away from the simple, straight line silhouette and point in the direction of greater elaboration. Varied tunic dresses, bloused treatment of the waistline, snug belts and embroideries in designs that are novel, are making these dresses interesting. An afternoon gown that illustrates all these points—and others—is shown here. It is a long tunic model, with plain underskirt, showing four inches below the tunic, which is split into four panels. The fullness is brought to the sides, leaving the front of the gown plain. The shirt-front decoration on the blouse, the high collar and ties and the graceful sleeves all add zest to this model. It is made of crepe, in coral sand color, with embroidery in coral and sand shades.

WITH THE MAGICIAN

JAMES QUELLETT—LEAH MILES

As a prelude to the magical program on the second day of the Chautauqua, and as assistants presenting musical accompaniments to some of the illusions of the magician, Leah Miles, soprano, pianist and saxophonist, and James Quellet, baritone and accompanist, show unusual versatility. Miss Miles is a thorough-going musician and has had many years' experience in large orchestras, as well as in smaller musical organizations where her work has been featured. Mr. Quellet is a young pianist of ability, who provides a splendid accompaniment for the solo work of Miss Miles and whose voice blends perfectly with hers in pleasing vocal duets. In the magician's program in the evening, Miss Miles plays the part of the Chinese Princess who goes to her death in the mysterious Chinese Torture Cabinet with a song on her lips.

A four-day tardiness in arriving in England and the general strike which awaited them, forced the debaters to abandon several scheduled engagements.

WHY MEN FAIL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE are a good many reasons why men fail—young men as well as old—laziness, lack of ability, lack of faith in themselves. When a man admits to himself or to any one else that he cannot do a thing he has usually failed already.

Gilbert had to pass an examination. He had been held back for two years or more in his course in college simply on account of this subject which he had not mastered. He knew that it had to be done, and yet he could not quite drive himself to it.

"I can't do it," he said. "I'm quite sure I can't."

Finally he was barred from further procedure because of his failure to get the work in the particular course. "Why don't you try it?" I asked. "Frazier got a textbook, settled down to work and passed the stuff in two weeks."

"I don't believe I could," was his only comment. Finally in desperation as the only way out he applied himself to the hated task and finished it successfully in an amazingly short time.

"It wasn't so very difficult after all," he confessed rather shamefacedly. And so it is with many things from which we shrink. When we really come up against the seeming activities of life the path is not so steep as in the distance it seemed.

When Admiral Dupont was making excuses to Farragut, his biographer says, for his failure to take the city of Charleston, excuses which were numerous as are those of most people who fail, the old fighter said:

"You forgot one thing. You didn't think you could do it." Believing in one's own ability to do a thing helps a good deal, and in many cases the difference between failure and success. Sometimes men are too self-confident and blow their own horns a little too loudly to please the ears of sensitive listeners.

The story is told of the electrician Rollins that once he was on the witness stand and was being questioned by a distinguished attorney as to the reasons which had induced him to make a charge of $25,000 for services to a certain company engaged in litigation.

"On what ground do you base this exorbitant charge?" the attorney asked.

"On the fact that I am the greatest electrician in the world," Mr. Rollins replied.

A friend who was present at the trial said to Rollins later:

"How could you have the temerity when on the witness stand to claim that you were the greatest electrician in the world? It sounded unbelievably conceited in you."

"I know it," Rollins replied, "and I did feel rather embarrassed, but you see I was on my oath, and I had to tell the truth."

Webster was trying to sell books last summer. He didn't believe in himself and he didn't believe in the book. He went at his job without confidence, without enthusiasm, without faith in what he was doing. wonder he failed.

Chic Tailored Suit in Colored Flannels

Tailored types in clothes are very generally becoming—nearly all women wear them well and some women look better in them than in anything else. This will welcome the reappearance of those pretty suits, made of white or light-colored flannels, that have come in with midsummer. These are simply designed and very plain and they are developed in all the fashionable pastel shades of blue, green, pink, yellow and lavender. Worn with hats to match in color, and blouses of white crepe de chine, they achieve much delicate distinction. White slippers and stockings are usually chosen for footwear, and a white hat may be substituted for a colored one. All-white suits like that pictured, may be relieved by flesh-colored, or other light-colored blouses or by a color in the hat. Gay little boutonnières look their best on these light suits.
