Petoskey Opens Football Season

EAST JORDAN DEFEATED 25 to 0 AFTER PUTTING UP A HARD SCRAP.

(From Petoskey News)
Petoskey High School opened her football season with a 25 to 0 victory over the light East Jordan team at the Fair Grounds field Saturday afternoon. The day was ideal from the players' viewpoint, cold, crisp and with some wind, but almost too cold for the fans. The game disclosed that team fight had not yet been developed to its full degree by the locals, while on the other hand it was East Jordan's splendid fighting spirit and team fight which prevented the score being doubled. Petoskey fans liked the way the visitors handled themselves and commented on their clean, hard playing.

East Jordan, like Petoskey, had but three regulars back from last year, Danforth, at left tackle; Gleason, at left half, and Bartlett, at right half. These men were on top of every play and were hard to stop. Danforth made a lot of holes through which his backs plowed for gains. Taylor, who went in for Pray at quarter shortly after play started, also was fast and sure in his work. East Jordan used these men: Shepherd, Lapeer, Amberg, Weaver, Omland, Carr and St. Charles. Carr, at right end, was one of the best men on the visiting squad. He did particularly well stopping Menzel on end runs and off tackle plays, but seldom until after the blue and white battler had made considerable gain. Omland, at right tackle, also was a bearcat.

Senior Party

The first Senior party of the year was held last Thursday evening from five to nine o'clock standard time. The original plan was a weener roast at Lone Tree Point, but because of the weather it took place at the school house. Weeners, buns and coffee were served, after which there was dancing and games. Most of the class and the high school teachers were present to enjoy the evening.

Freshman Class Meet

A meeting of the Freshman Class was called Friday night immediately after school. Bruce Lintner was elected to the office of President and Carl Weaver to that of Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. Lee is class adviser this year.

Ann Arbor—The female of the species may or may not be more deadly than the male, but if the scholarship chart of the University of Michigan, compiled for last semester and made public by Joseph A. Bursely, dean of students, is to be taken as evidence, she is more studious. At any rate members of the senior sorority for women piled up a scholarship average of 88.81 as compared with 77.87 for Michiganans; the leading men's society, and with 74.88 for the entire university.

East Lansing—Seven "dirt farmers" of Michigan were installed as charter members of the Michigan Master Farmers' Club at Michigan State College, as the result of a contest to determine the most efficient in Michigan. Those who received the honor were Ralph Arbogast, of Union City; Floyd M. Barden, of South Haven; Paul C. Clement, of Britton; Albert Baldwin Cook, of Owosso; Garfield and Minard E. Farley, of Alton; Frank Kitch, of Grindstone City; C. S. Langdon, of Hubbardston; C. R. Oviatt, of Bay City; M. E. Parmelee, of Hilliards, and H. F. Probert, of Jackson.

Owosso—Formal opening of Owosso's municipal airport will take place this fall, if present plans carry. It is planned by a chamber of commerce to dedicate the port with flares from Selfridge Field and Detroit, and to offer prizes for the best speed records made by pilots in reaching here. The airport was assured when Dr. J. O. Parker, Owosso physician, assumed financial responsibility for improving Hammond Field, north of Owosso, on M-47, which will be turned over to the city as a municipal airport.

Don't bet on anything, even a sure thing. Much money is lost every year on "sure" things.

A scientist asserts that the alloy is at hand. Isn't it time for them to quit mixing new drinks?

Mrs. M. F. Seiler Former Missionary Passes Away.

Mrs. Galen Seiler passed away at her home in this city, Monday, Sept. 27th, following an illness of some duration.

Mary Ferris Seiler was born at Hillsdale, Mich., Sept. 24th, 1857. She was united in marriage to Galen Seiler Sept. 7th, 1881, and came to Charlevoix County in 1912.

Mrs. Seiler went with her husband to India as a Missionary in October 1881, and for twenty years lived a life of unusual sacrifice in pioneer missionary work in West India.

She was a member of the Presbyterian Church, and this organization she served with love and fidelity.

Deceased is survived by the following sons and daughters: John and Elizabeth of East Jordan; Jas. of Cheyenne, Wyoming; Mrs. Julia Shaw of Oberlin, Ohio; and Clara Louise, who is a Missionary in India.

Funeral services were held from her late home Tuesday morning, conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, who spoke from the text: "A Mother In Israel." The remains were taken to Hillsdale to be laid beside those of her husband, who died six years ago.

Don't Forget The National Dairy Show

TO BE HELD AT DETROIT, OCT. 6th To 13th, 1926.

A breeder of dairy cattle once offered his herd for sale and in the advertisement he stated he had 13 reasons for selling. He admitted his first reason was the need for some cash. He also admitted the other reasons were not worth a darn.

Now, why not consider your attendance at the National Dairy Exposition in the same way. The one reason you cannot go should be you are not physically able, the other excuses are not worth a darn.

Here are some of the reasons why you should attend.

1. It is the first, last and only time the show will ever be held in the State.

2. You will see between 1200 and 1500 of the best dairy animals in the world.

3. You will see these breeds judged by authorities on the various breeds.

4. Every phase of the dairy industry will be represented.

5. The health food show, staged by Dr. McCollum, is alone worth the trip.

6. Your presence on the various days will reflect the popularity of your favored breed of cows.

7. It affords you an opportunity to obtain a picture of the dairy industry that can be procured in no other way.

8. It will show you the types that you should have in mind when improving your herd.

Following is the program of Judging and Contests:

Oct. 6th.—College Students Cattle Judging Contest.

Oct. 6th.—Jersey Judging.

Oct. 9th.—Boys and Girls Club Cattle Judging Contest—Vocational School Judging Contest.

Oct. 11th.—Ayrshire Judging—Brown Swiss Judging.

Oct. 12th.—Guernsey Judging.

Everybody who can should arrange to attend this great educational event.

Remember County Agent Mellencamp at Boyne City has tickets for sale, 3 for $1.00, which entitles you to free automobile admission and parking.

Get your friends to go and arrange for your transportation, either by auto or train. Please let County Agent Mellencamp know about your plans, as we want to know who is going from Charlevoix County and what day.

The Center of Interest

Lansing—Charles J. DeLand, secretary of state, declared he will not permit his name to be placed before the Republican convention for re-nomination.

Detroit—Wayne county board of supervisors have decided to place before the voters at the general election November 4 the question of pensioning county employees.

Stadish—Cecil Vandersluis, who was sentenced in circuit court to 5 to 10 years at the Ionia hospital for criminally insane, broke jail by working the lock open with a piece of iron which he took from the door.

Detroit—The Council is preparing to oppose vigorously the proposed annexation of Lincoln Park and Melvindale to Detroit, which will be submitted to the voters of the city and the two villages at the general election Nov. 2.

Saginaw—The oil yield of the Saginaw oil field has increased 450 barrels daily, with 30 wells operating and producing an average of 15 barrels per day. The Saginaw prospecting company, with 18 wells operating, leads the field.

Flint—H. H. Bassett, president of the Buick Motor Car Company, has announced that construction will be immediately started upon a new grey iron foundry to cost approximately $5,000,000 and to employ about 1,700 men. The plant will have a capacity of 500 tons of metal a day.

Owosso—Any settlement of the war debts owed the United States must be based on the principle that the debtor nation must live. James Couzens, of Detroit, United States senator, declared in an address before the chamber of commerce and luncheon clubs here recently.

Pontiac—Foodstuffs, mistaken for mushrooms, are believed to have caused the death of Mrs. Mary Lando, 64 years old, Pontiac woman. Mrs. Lando had gathered the fungus near Holly. Soon after eating of the dish she was taken ill and a physician pronounced it poisoning from foodstuffs.

Monroe—The board of supervisors authorized Sheriff Joseph Kinsey to have two deputies patrol the Dixie Highway and other heavily traveled roads on Saturday, Sunday and holiday nights to apprehend speeders. There have been a large number of fatal accidents near here recently, traceable to reckless driving.

Ypsilanti—Twenty-two backfield men and 30 linemen reported to Coach Z. J. Rynearson for the initial week of football practice at the Michigan State Normal College. Although Rynearson has but four regulars back from last year he has plenty of reserve material and much new material on hand to mold a winning team with.

Ann Arbor—Dr. Francis W. Kelly, director of Near East Research for the University of Michigan, who is now on leave of absence in Italy, making preparations for excavation at Karanis, Egypt, is expected to return here about Oct. 1. The work at Karanis will not be started until this winter. E. H. Peterson will be in charge of the excavation work.

Grand Rapids—The county board of election canvassers denied the application of Supervisor Archer H. Shank for a recount of votes cast for the third Republican nominee for representative from the First Kent District. The board's compilation showed that Shank was defeated by Supervisor Warren J. Cook by two votes. Shank must now resort to mandamus proceedings if he is to gain a recount.

Ionia—Miss Peggy Green, 19 years old, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Fred W. Green, who was injured at Saginaw when thrown from a horse she was riding in a parade, is making a splendid recovery. Her injuries were not as serious as first reported. Ligaments of her left leg were sprained and her body somewhat bruised. She suffered mostly from shock. Mr. Green, who was also thrown from his horse in an attempt to save his daughter, was unhurt.

Kalamazoo—Hazing has been abolished at Kalamazoo College by action of the student body. The faculty proposed voluntary surrender by the upper classmen of their time-honored practice of manshandling the freshmen, and the vote to follow the suggestion virtually was unanimous. In place of the hazing outbreaks that have resulted in serious clashes nearly every year, the students held a field day on the campus. The proceedings ended with a class rush.

Ignorance is not as bad as knowing everything.

Insect Pests Make Appearance In Michigan

Two insect pests, both capable of creating more or less damage, have put in an appearance in Michigan in recent days, according to Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at the Michigan State College.

A caterpillar, known as the red-humped oak caterpillar, is reported in the northern part of the State, and it is seriously trimming up the oak leaves in certain sections. It can best be controlled by a spray or dust of an arsenical, wherever this is practical.

"The other insect," according to Prof. Pettit, is one which comes up from the South at this season of the year. It is a beautiful moth about an inch long, of clay color decorated with an opalescent surface. The moth collects around electric lights freely.

"This is the only moth known which has mouth parts capable of tearing fruit skin. Its habit is to settle down on any ripening fruit, such as grapes, peaches, apples, tomatoes or pears, and suck the juice, tearing a hole through the skin in order to do so. This starts the fruit to rotting.

"It is recommended that the fruit be covered as soon as it is picked, using cloth, old sacking or anything else tucked in carefully around the fruit to protect it from these moths. The moths work up from the south, not coming every year, but they seem to be getting altogether too common now."

Couple Charged With Mutilation of Records

Charlevoix, Sept. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Sears of Boyne City, charged with violating the statute which makes it an offense to carry away or mutilate public records, are to be tried at the October term of Circuit Court, the first case of this character in the history of the County.

It is alleged that Aug. 31, Mr. and Mrs. Sears entered the office of the register of deeds, obtained from Mrs. Frank Bird, deputy register, a deed which had not yet been recorded and took it from the office. It is charged they tore the deed and threw the pieces into catchbasins. Deputy Sheriff Charles Marshall, who had been sent after them by Mrs. Bird, recovered the pieces of paper and Mrs. Bird put them together and recorded the document.—Exchange.

GREAT JOY POSSIBLE WITH GOOD HEALTH

Many women live in a continually "too tired" state, which absolutely spoils their enjoyment of life and its pleasant activities. This weariness, lack of energy, and nervousness sometimes results when disordered, weak, inactive kidneys affect the normal condition and regularity of flow, so necessary to sound health. Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, are a reliable, valuable medicine, constantly in use for over 25 years. Cost little. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sold everywhere. Ask for Foley Pills, diuretic. Hite's Drug Store.

Incurable Optimism

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

SOME one has naively said that a pessimist is a man who is obliged to live with an optimist. Whether or not the definition is a good one, the man who was forced to live for any length of time with Olmstead would have been driven into the lowest depths of gloom and despair. Olmstead was an incurable optimist.

He was always sure that his salary next month would pay twice as many bills as he found it possible to liquidate this month.

"Can you lend me twenty dollars?" he would inquire about the fifteenth of the month. "I'm awfully short just now, and I'm sure things will loosen up with me next month."

If I lent it to him it was not with the thought that I should get it back soon, for experience had taught me that Olmstead, with all his optimism, would be harder up next month than he had been this.

He would buy on the installment plan any literary or domestic gold brick that was offered to him. The book agent who disposed of his wares with so much down and interminable monthly payments of a dollar a month was always Olmstead's Waterloo. The payments seemed so insignificant as hardly to be worth consideration, but when he contracted in this way for a piano, an automobile, a set of the Encyclopedia Britannica, and various other household incumbrances, he discovered when the first of the month came around that the sum total of these deferred payments almost ate up his entire salary. But he never seemed to learn. I wager that if I could run on him today and probe into his financial affairs I should find that he is now paying on the installment plan for a radio and an oil heater. He'd buy anything, hopefully thinking that he could easily pay for it, if only he could bargain for it on deferred payments.

At no time when I knew him did Olmstead get on well, but always he was expecting to do so. He started in as a traveling salesman when he got out of college bubbling over with enthusiasm. He expected, because of his success, to be president of the company within five years. He could see a great future in the business with which he was connected.

He apparently was not suited to salesmanship, but that fact did not discourage him. He moved from one state to another, he tried first one business, and, not liking it, he took up another. He invested in mining stock and oil wells and Canada farms with a never waning faith that ultimately things would come out all right and he would make a fortune.

When I saw him last he had gone into the real estate business.

"How are you getting on, Olmstead?" I asked.

Long experience as a newspaper reporter and editor in New York city gave Elizabeth Jordan a strong sense of romantic and dramatic values. When she began writing novels she had many ready-made plots stored up in her experiences and observations of actual life. Confronted as she was accustomed to be with mysteries and thrilling events in the daily news, it was natural that she should turn to the class of fiction strong in mystery, love and adventure elements.

CHAPTER I

Barbara's Wedding

The little city of Devondale, Ohio, had shaken off for one night at least the air of aristocratic calm that normally distinguished it from the busy mill towns on its right and left. Elm avenue, its leading residence street, usually presented at this hour only an effect of watchful trees, dark shrubbery, shaded lamps, and remote domestic peace. Now, however, it had blossomed into a brilliant thoroughfare, full of light, color and movement, on all of which the December stars winked down as if in intimate understanding.

nothing but the Devons and Barbara Devon's approaching wedding. In the pew just in front of Jimmy, Mrs. Arthur Lytton, a lady he recognized as a ubiquitous member of the Country club, was giving a few intimate details of Miss Devon's life to her companion, who evidently was a newcomer to the city.

"You see," Mrs. Lytton was murmuring, "this is really the most important wedding we've ever had here. Barbara Devon owns most of Devondale, and her home, Devon house, is one of the show places of the state. She hasn't a living relative except her brother, Laurie, and I fancy she has been lonely, notwithstanding her hosts of friends. We all love her, so we're glad to know she has found the right man to marry, especially as we are not to lose her ourselves. She intends to live in Devon house every summer."

"The newcomer—a Mrs. Renway who had social aspirations—was politely attentive. "I met Laurence Devon at the Country club yesterday," she said. "He's the handsomest creature I've seen. I think. He's really too good-looking; and they say there's some romantic story about him. Do you know what it is?"

Her friend nodded. "Merely, yes! Every one does." Observing the other's growing attention, she went on expansively: "You see, Laurie was the black sheep of the family; so the Devons left all their great fortune to Barbara and put Laurie in her care. That infuriated him, of course, for he is a high-spirited youngster. He promptly took on an extra shade of blackness. He was expelled from college, and sowed whole crops of wild oats. He gambled, was always in debt, and Barbara had to pay. For a long time she wasn't able to handle the situation. They're both young, you know. She's about twenty-four, and Laurie is a year younger. But last year she suddenly put her mind on it and pulled him up in a rather spectacular way."

Mrs. Renway's eyes glistened with interest. "Tell me how!" she begged. The raconteur settled back into her pew, with the complacent expression of one who is sure of her hearer's complete absorption in her words. "Why," she said, "she made Laurie a sporting proposition, and he accepted it. He and she were to go to New York and earn their living for one year, under assumed names and without revealing their identity to anybody. They were to start with fifty dollars each, and to be wholly dependent upon themselves after that was gone. Laurie was to give up all his bad habits and buckle down to the job of self-support. For every dollar he earned more than Barbara earned, she promised him five dollars at the end of the year. And if he kept his pledges he was to have ten thousand dollars when the experiment was over, whether he succeeded or failed. He and Barbara were to live in different parts of the city, to be ignorant of each other's addresses, and to see each other only twice."

She stopped for breath. Her friend drove an urgent elbow into her side. "Go on!" she pleaded. "What happened?"

"Something very unexpected," chuckled Mrs. Lytton. (For some reason, Barbara's friends always chuckled at this point in the story.) "Barbara, who is so clever," she went on, "almost starved to death. And Laurie, the black sheep, after various struggles and failures fell in with some theatrical people and finally collaborated with a successful playwright in writing a play. Perhaps it was partly luck. But the play made a tremendous hit. Laurie kept his pledges, and Barbara has had to pay him a small fortune to meet her bargain."

The hearer smiled sympathetically. "That's splendid," she said, "for Laurie! But is the cure permanent, do you think? The boy's so young, and so awfully good-looking."

pearance. The echoes of it accompanied her progress into the church. "The mill people adore Barbara," whispered Mrs. Lytton. "She built a big clubhouse for them two years ago, and she's the president of most of their clubs."

In his seat behind her, Jimmy Harrigan, who had given his attention to the conversation, sniffed contemptuously. If the dame in front was going to talk about Miss Devon, why didn't she tell something worth while? Why didn't she tell, for instance, that Miss Devon played the best golf of any woman in the club, and had beaten Mrs. Lytton on a frazzle in a match last month? Ah! why didn't she say something about how generous Miss Devon was to caddies in the matter of skates and boxing gloves and clothes? And why didn't she say what a prince Laurie Devon was, instead of all that stilted stuff what everybody knew?

The excitement in the street had communicated itself to the dignified assemblage in the church. The occupants of the pews were turning in their seats. The first notes of the great pipe-organ rolled forth. Friends who had known and loved Barbara Devon since she was a little girl, and many who had known her father and mother before her, looked now at the radiant figure she presented as she walked slowly up the aisle on her brother's arm, and saw that figure through an unexpected mist.

"What a pair!" whispered Mrs. Renway, who had a pagan love of beauty. "They ought to be put in one of those parks and kept there as a permanent exhibit for the delight of the public. It's almost criminal negligence to leave that young man at large," she darkly predicted. "Something will happen if they do!"

Mrs. Lytton absently agreed. "The bridegroom is very handsome, too," she murmured. "That stunning, insolent creature who is acting as matron of honor, and looking bored to death by it, is his sister, Mrs. Ordway of New York. The first bridesmaid is another New York friend, a Russian girl named Sonya Orieff, that Barbara met in some lodging house. And will you look at the infant Samuel!"

An expression of acute strain settled over the features of Mrs. Renway. She hurriedly adjusted her eyeglasses. "The what?" she whispered, excitedly. "Where? I don't see any infant!" Mrs. Lytton laughed.

"Of course you don't! It's too small and too near the floor. It's a thirty-month-old youngster Barbara picked up in a New York tenement. She calls him the infant Samuel, and she has brought him here with his mother, to live on her estate. They say she intends to educate him. He's carrying her train and he's dressed as a page, in tiny white satin breeches and lace ruffles. Oh, don't miss him!"

A little ripple stirred the assemblage. Three figures in the long-advancing line of the bridal party held the attention of observers. Two were the bride and her brother. The third, stalking behind her, with her train grasped in his tiny fists; his round brown eyes staring straight ahead, and his fluffy brown hair flying out as it swept backward by an eternal breeze, was obviously the infant Samuel Mrs. Lytton had mentioned.

The Third, Stalking Behind Her With Her Train Grasped in His Tiny Fists, Was the Infant Samuel Mrs. Lytton Had Mentioned.

From a rear pew the infant's mother watched her offspring with pride and abiding affection. It was quite on the cards that he might suddenly decide to leave the procession and undertake a brief side excursion into the pews. But Samuel had been assured that he was "taking a walk," and as taking a walk happened to be his favorite pastime he kept manfully to his new form of diversion, even though it had features that did not strongly appeal to him. His short legs wobbled, and his tiny arms waded under the light weight of the bridal train, but something would happen if he let that train drop. He did not know quite what this something would be, but he abysmally inferred that it would be extremely unpleasant. He held grimly to his burden.

have been worse, for he knew that somewhere in advance of him, lost in a mass of white stuff, was the "Babe," he adored.

When the train stopped, he stopped. In response to an urgent suggestion from some one behind him, he dropped it. In obedience to an equally urgent inner prompting, he sat down on it and gazed around. The walk had been rather a long one. Now the big house he was in was very still, save for one voice, saying something to Babe. It was all strange and unfamiliar, and Babe seemed far away. Nothing and nobody looked natural. Samuel became increasingly doubtful about the pleasure of this walk. The corners of his mouth went down.

A flower fell into his lap, and looking up he saw Sonya Orieff smiling at him. Even Sonya was a new Sonya, emerging from what Samuel dimly felt to be pink clouds. But the eyes were here, and the smile was here, and it was plain that she expected him to play with the pink flower. He pulled it to pieces, slowly and absently. The task took some time. From it he passed to a close contemplation of a pink-slippered foot which also proved to be Sonya's, and then to a careful study of a black pump and black silk sock that proved to be Lawrence's. Lawrence was smiling down at Samuel, too; and Robert was standing beside Babe, saying something in a voice that wobbled.

Samuel sighed again. Perhaps by and by Lawrence would take him out for a real walk in the snow. All this pink-and-white display around him might be pretty, but there was nothing in it for a small boy. He gazed appealingly at Sonya, who promptly hoisted him to his fat legs. The man at the railing had stopped talking to Babe, and the walk was resumed, this time toward the door. Again that especially precious part of the white stuff was in Samuel's keeping.

The sounds that now filled the air were more wonderful than ever. They excited Samuel. His fat arms waved, and the light train waded with them. A compelling hand, Sonya's, quieted them and it. There was absolutely nothing a little boy could do in this queer walk. Gloomily but sedately the infant Samuel continued his promenade.

"Here he is," murmured Mrs. Lytton to her friend. "You can see him now, can't you?" "Rodney Bangs, the playwright who collaborated with Laurie, is sitting in the front pew," continued her informant, "and the fat little bald man next to him is Jacob Epstein, the New York manager who put on their play."

At the same moment, Epstein was whispering to his companion, as the two watched Barbara and her husband start down the aisle in the first little journey of their married life. "Ray, Bangs, if you could put this wedding into a play, just like they done it here, we could make up Broadway a little—ain't it?"

Bangs nodded, vaguely. His brown eyes were alternately on the bride and on his chum and partner, her brother. He was conscious of an odd depression, of an emotion, new and poignant, that made him understand the tears of Barbara's women friends. Under the influence of this, he spoke erratically: "Weddings are beastly depressing things. What the public wants to see is something cheerful!"

Epstein nodded in his turn. His thoughts, too, were busy. Like many of those around him, he was mentally reducing the spectacle he was watching to terms that he could understand. A wedding conducted on this scale, he estimated, probably represented a total cost of about ten thousand dollars. But what was that to a bride of thirty or forty millions? It was strange her family had left them all to her and none to the boy, even if the boy had been a little wild. But the boy was all right now. He'd make his own fortune if life and woman and the devil would let him alone. He had made a good start already. A few more successes like "The Man Above" would make Epstein forget several failures he had already and unwisely produced this season. If he could get Bangs and Devon to start work at once, on another good play—

A little later, in the automobile that whirled him and Epstein out to the wedding reception at Devon house, Rodney Bangs briefly developed the wedding theme. "I suppose the reason why women cry at weddings and men feel glum is that they know what the bride's in for," he remarked gloomily.

Epstein granted. "You an' me is bachelors," he reminded the momentarily cynical youth. "We should've got 'er off in an alcove to get a few minutes' rest."

He led them to this haven, of which only fifty or sixty other guests seemed aware, for the room was but comfortably filled. They found Barbara sitting in a high-backed Spanish chair, against which, in her bridal array and her extraordinary beauty, she made a picture that unaccountably deepened the new depression in Rodney's soul. On her train by the side of the chair, the infant Samuel slumbered in peace, like an exhausted puppy.

Warren, hovering near his wife, shook hands with the newcomers and responded to their congratulations. Then, slipping his arm through Laurie's, he drew him across the room to where his sister, Mrs. Ordway, was languidly talking to several of the bride's old friends. He knew that Barbara wanted a final and serious word with her brother's partner. Laurie knew it, too, and winked at the pair like an implish child as he permitted himself to be led away.

Young Mrs. Warren, whose title was still so new that she looked startled when they addressed her by it, greeted them warmly and indicated the sleeping Samuel with an apologetic smile. "His mother is lost somewhere in the crowd," she explained. "He has had two glasses of milk, four fat cakes and three plates of ice cream; and he's either asleep or unconscious, I'm not sure which." Her manner sobered. "I'm so glad to have a moment with you two," she said gently. "You know what I want to talk about."

"We can guess it," Bangs smiled at her with the odd wistfulness his amite always took on when he spoke to Barbara. To Bangs, Barbara had become a temple at whose portal he removed his earth-stained shoes. "You want us to look after Laurie," he added quickly. "Well, you bet we're going to do it."

"Well, we keep an eye on him, don't we?" he predicted. Bangs frowned. "I'll have to do it mighty careful ly," he muttered. "If Devon catches us at it, he won't leave us an eye to keep on anything!"

Epstein granted again. "Ve keep him busy," he suggested, eagerly. "Start him right away on another play. Eh? That's the idea!" Bangs shook his head. "That's it," he conceded. "But Laurie has decided that he won't work again, just yet. He says he's tired and wants a few months' rest. Besides, he thinks America will declare war before the winter's over. He's going to volunteer as soon as it does, and he doesn't want any loose ends dragging here, any half-finished plays, for example."

Epstein looked worried. This was serious news. Without allowing him time to recover from it, Bangs administered a second jolt. "And, of course, in that case," he added simply, "I'd volunteer, too."

Under the double blow Epstein's head and shoulders went down. He knew in that moment what even he himself had sometimes doubted, that his boasted love for the boys was deep and sincere. "Oh, well," he said vaguely, "I guess we meet all that if it comes, eh? We needn't go to it today."

At Devon house they found the congestion characteristic of wedding receptions. A certain line had been drawn at the church. Seemingly no line at all had been drawn in the matter of guests at the reception. All Barbara Devon's proteges were there, and they were many; all the young folks in her clubs; all the old and new friends of her crowded life. Each of the great and beautiful rooms on the main floor of Devon house held a human frieze as a background for the throng of newcomers that grew rather than lessened as the hours passed.

As Bangs and Epstein entered the main hall Laurie Devon saw them over the heads of the crowd and hurried to meet them, throwing an arm across the shoulder of each. He was in a mood both men-loved and feared, a mood of high and reckless exhilaration. He liked and approved of his new brother-in-law. The memory of his own New York triumph was still fresh enough to give him a thrill. He was devoted to his partners, and proud of his association with them and their work. But most of all, and this he himself would loyally have denied, deep in his heart he was exulting fiercely over his coming freedom.

Laurie loved his sister, but he was weary of the leading strings. Henceforth he could live his own life. It should be a life worth while, on that he had decided, and it should continue free from the vices of gambling and drinking, of which he was sure he had cured himself in the past year. He had come into a full realization of the folly of these and of the glory of the work one loves. He hadn't the least notion what he was going to do with his independence, but a boundless delight filled him in the prospect of it. Whatever life held he was convinced would be good. Looking down from his slender height on the plump Epstein and the stocky Bangs, he smiled into the sober face of each, and under the influence of that smile their momentary solemnity fell from them like dropped valis.

"Come and see Barbara," Laurie buoyantly suggested. "She wants to say good-by to you, and to tell you how to tuck me into my crib every night. She's going to slip away pretty soon you know. Bob and I have got her off in an alcove to get a few minutes' rest."

He led them to this haven, of which only fifty or sixty other guests seemed aware, for the room was but comfortably filled. They found Barbara sitting in a high-backed Spanish chair, against which, in her bridal array and her extraordinary beauty, she made a picture that unaccountably deepened the new depression in Rodney's soul. Then, slipping his arm through Laurie's, he drew him across the room to where his sister, Mrs. Ordway, was languidly talking to several of the bride's old friends. He knew that Barbara wanted a final and serious word with her brother's partner. Laurie knew it, too, and winked at the pair like an implish child as he permitted himself to be led away.

She smiled again, this time the rare smile that warmed her face like a light from within. "Then I shall go away happy," she told them. "And there's nothing more to be said for me. I understand that you'll be looking after Laurie, don't you?"

Epstein granted again. He was fond of saying that he loved Bangs and Laurie as if they were the sons he had never had; but he was not even to analyze himself or others, he had little patience with it. His showed a tolerance unusual in derful all this year. It's only—she hesitated—"I suppose it's a life I'm afraid of," she confessed. "I never used to be. But—well, I learned in New York how helpless we are, sometimes."

Rodney's nod was understanding. "I know," he robustly agreed. "But it's going to be absolutely all right. Be sure of that." Epstein added his well-meant but none too happily chosen bit. "Laurie can't get into no scrape we can't get him out of," he earnestly assured Laurie's sister.

Barbara laughed. A circle of newcomers was forming around them. "Well, let it go at that," she said, and extended a hand to each man.

Laurie Can't Get Into No Scrape We Can't Get Him Out Of, He Earnestly Assured Laurie's Sister.

"Good-by. I won't try to thank you. But—God bless you both!" Under the influence of this final benediction, Epstein waddled over to the corner where Warren, very pale, and Louise Ordway, very touch-bored, stood surrounded by a group that included Sonya Orieff. Firmly detaching the bridegroom from this congenial assemblage, Epstein led him to one side.

"Warren," he said solemnly, "I got to congratulate you all over again. You got your woman in a million! No, you got your woman in eighty million!" Warren laughed, rather shakily. Over the heads of the crowd his eyes caught his wife's and held them for an instant.

"Make it a million million," he suggested joyously, and led Epstein to the supper room. Laurie was there with Bangs and a group of friends, who, having patronized young Devon a year ago, were endeavoring to wipe out the memory of this indiscretion by an excess of friendly attention.

"No," Warren and Epstein heard him say to Mrs. Lytton and Mrs. Renway, "there's nothing I'd like better than to come, thank you. But I'm going back to New York tomorrow. You see," he added, "this business of marrying off a sister, and attending to all the details and seeing that she conducts herself properly as long as she's in my care, is a bit of a strain. I've got to get back to town and recuperate."

"I suppose you will rest your mind by writing another play?" gushed Mrs. Renway. Laurie shook his black head. "Not a bit of it!" he asserted. "Don't even suggest such a thing before Epstein, there. It sounds abhorrently like work."

Mrs. Renway's curiosity had a brief and losing struggle with her good breeding. "Then what are you going to do?" she demanded coquettishly. The young man pondered, as if considering the question for the first time. "Well," he said at last, "between you and me, I'm going in for adventure. I intend to devote the next four months to discovering how much excitement a worthy youth can crowd into his life if he makes a business of going after the gay bird of adventure, and finding it, and putting salt on its tail!"

The puzzled countenance of Mrs. Renway cleared. "Oh, I see," she said brightly, "you're joking." Laurie smiled and turned to greet a late guest who had come up behind him. In the little group that had overheard him three pairs of eyes met in startled glances.

"Bumph!" said Warren. "Hear that?" "Nice prospect for us!" muttered Rodney Bangs. Jacob Epstein looked harassed. A little later he joined the throng in the main hall, and watched the showers of rose fall harmlessly from the polished sides of Barbara's limousine as the bride and groom were whisked away from the brilliant entrance of Devon house.

"She's gone," he said to Bangs as the two men turned and re-entered the still crowded yet suddenly empty house. And he added solemnly, "Believe me, Bangs, on that job she's left us you an' me got our hands full!"

Most people lose no sleep over what to buy. A radio philosopher says that long ago the little children used to learn their prayers at mother's knees, but nowadays all that they learn is a little about anatomy.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorser who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Franco-Italian Relations Strained by Attempt to Kill Mussolini.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

THOUGH friendly relations between Italy and France are strained as a result of the latest attempt to assassinate Premier Mussolini, it is not likely there will be an actual diplomatic rupture. The Italian anarchist who threw a bomb at the dictator's automobile insists that he had no accomplices, but the Italian authorities are convinced that his crime was plotted in France and they accuse that country of deliberately sheltering conspirators against the Fascist regime. Immediately after the bomb throwing Mussolini, without naming France, uttered a warning to other nations that Italy proposed to "put a stop to certain culpable, tiresome conditions." The Italian press was more outspoken and berated France soundly, to which the French replied, officially and unofficially, with disclaimers of responsibility and advice to Italy to watch its own borders and keep out the plotters who might form their plans in other countries. There were demonstrations against the French consulates in several Italian cities, and the French charge d'affaires in Rome filed three protests. Premier Poincare called in the Italian ambassador to Paris and made it clear that France would regard further officially inspired criticism of its hospitality for foreign political refugees as an act of extreme unfriendliness. Notwithstanding this, the directory of the Fascist party issued orders which said in part:

"The land of France, for whose safety some of our 500,000 war dead fell, has been for years the most hospitable land for all those hatching in their perfidious hearts hatred against Italy."

It is there, the orders continue, that "spirits are excited, bombs are built, and those people are instructed who later will enter Italy to attempt the life of the head of the Italian regime. All this cannot longer be tolerated."

The orders declare that, if France desires to continue friendship with Italy, as the latter desires, it must change its line of conduct.

The Italian government published a list of political refugees, most of whom are living in France, and announced action that will deprive them of their citizenship.

COLORADO Republicans seem to have wrested the control of the party's affairs in that state from the hands of the Ku Klux Klan and similar secret organizations. United States Senator Rice W. Means, directing head of the Klan in Colorado, was defeated for renomination by Charles W. Waterman, counsel of the President's oil conservation board, who was supported by the anti-Klan element. In addition, all the candidates for office who were sponsored by Senator L. C. Phillips were beaten by those supported by Clarence C. Hamlin and ex-Governor Shoup, leaders of the anti-Klan faction in the party. The Democrats nominated former Gov. W. B. Sweet for senator.

In Maryland Senator Weller, Republican, defeated Congressman John Philip Hill for the senatorial nomination to oppose M. E. Tydings, Democrat. Governor Ritchie was renominated. Senators E. D. Smith of South Carolina and Wesley Jones of Washington won renomination.

Michigan Republicans had an exciting gubernatorial fight and Gov. Alex Groesbeck was badly beaten by Fred W. Green of Ionia, mainly because Groesbeck has been exceedingly liberal in the granting of prison paroles and pardons. The Groesbeck-Green contest was so bitter that the Democrats think it will result in a split in the Republican party and the election of William J. Comstock, their unopposed gubernatorial candidate.

Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Gov. Alvin T. Fuller were renominated without opposition, and the Democrats of the state put up former Senator David L. Walsh and William Gaston to oppose them. The Democrats of Louisiana renominated Senator Edwin S. Broussard, though former Gov. Jared Y. Sanders gave him a close race. Senator Dale of Vermont was unopposed for renomination.

Republican national leaders have brought out the old saying, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," following the election last week in that state. It was won by the Republicans with ease and their majority of about 20,000 was considered quite satisfactory for an off-year. Gov. Ralph O. Brewster and all four congressmen were returned to office. The Democratic congressional committee admittedly could find little encouragement in the Maine results.

CANADA'S elections last week were watched by the United States with unusual interest, and the victory of the Liberals, it was predicted, would result in reciprocity with this country. Leaders there said the defeat of the Meighen Conservative government meant the Canadian people refused to be hived behind high tariff barriers. W. L. MacKenzie King, leader of the Liberals, had urged the wisdom of freer trade facilities, and some of his Progressive allies in western Canada are out-and-out free traders. The Liberals won 119 parliamentary seats, and of their natural allies the Progressives won 8, the United Farmers of Alberta 11, the Laborites 8 and the Independents 2. It was certain Mr. King could muster a majority of about 50 votes for his policies. It was expected Premier Meighen and his cabinet would resign promptly and that Mr. King would be called to form a new government.

SEVERAL thousand delegates of the Ku Klux Klan met in Washington for the annual convention, paraded down Pennsylvania avenue in robes, but without masks, declared themselves against the World court and also against Gov. Al Smith as a Presidential candidate, and re-elected Hiram W. Evans as Imperial wizard. Evans also said the Klan would wage war against alienism, bolshevism, Catholicism, modification of the Eighteenth amendment and European intervention in Mexican internal affairs. Resolutions were adopted demanding strict adherence to a "hands-off" policy toward Mexico's church squabble and expressing the order's sympathy with the Calles government in its efforts to free the people from stultifying foreign influences and to popularize the education of the masses.

Every delegate to the convention took a solemn oath to attend some Protestant church every Sunday in the year, unless prevented by illness or some other emergency; and a similar oath is to be administered by the delegates to every member of the Klan.

TORRENTIAL rains, the heaviest recorded for September, swelled the rivers and streams of the Middle West into roaring floods and immense damage to crops and real property resulted. Western Illinois was hardest hit by the rains, which descended on sections of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The losses ranged from $5,000,000 in Illinois to half a million in Iowa. About a score of persons lost their lives. Most of the damage falls on the corn crop.

ELECTION of non-permanent members of the League of Nations council by the assembly resulted in the choice of Poland, Chile, and Rumania for three-year tenure; Columbia, Holland and China for two years, and Belgium, Czechoslovakia and San Salvador for one year. By a special vote, Poland was declared eligible for election at the expiration of her three-year term, thereby becoming a semi-permanent council member. There are 18 candidates for the nine seats, including the Irish Free State and Uruguay whose representatives were bitterly disappointed by the result of the balloting.

August Zaleski, foreign minister of Poland, on behalf of the delegation from Poland, Sweden and Finland, presented a petition asking that the league enter the battle against alcoholism. He declared the evil of alcoholism was made worse by the lack of co-ordinated international action.

After the nations signatory to the Locarno treaties had deposited with the league secretariat signed copies of the pact, Doctor Stresemann of Germany demanded that the Rhine land be evacuated by the allies. In an interview he said: "If Locarno has any meaning at all, it should mean the existing frontiers of western Europe are guaranteed against forceful revision, and consequently no other guarantees, such as occupied zones, are longer necessary."

Paul Boncour, French delegate, urged that a general conference on disarmament should be convoked at the earliest possible date. The league's disarmament commission adopted a modified resolution emphasizing the necessity of concluding as soon as possible a convention of the private manufacturer of arms.

MEXICO has more trouble on its hands. The Yaqui Indians of the state of Sonora, who never have been really conquered, are in revolt and the government has sent large bodies of troops to the scene. One detachment of artillery is reported to have been destroyed by the Indians. The Yaquis stopped a train on which General Obregon was traveling and seized the former president, but he was soon released, presumably after paying ransom. It is believed in Mexico City that the Indians have been stirred up by revolutionary agents sent into the country by Adolfo de la Huerta, head of the revolt against the Obregon government in December, 1923.

Jacob Rosenthal, a wealthy New Yorker, was kidnapped by bandits while motoring from Cuernavaca to Mexico City and held for ransom. Federal troops were put on the trail of the bandits, who sent warning that if they were pursued they would kill their captive. This being ignored they murdered Rosenthal.

HENRY STEVENS, firearms expert, joined his brother Willie and Cousin Henry de la B. Carpenter in the county jail at Somerville, N. J., on charges of murdering Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, whose bodies were found under a crab-apple tree four years ago. The slain rector's three relatives by marriage and his widow, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, were indicted for the murder by the grand jury. The indictment of Henry Stevens was something of a surprise, although he recently figured prominently in the revived investigation and it was officially announced that his alibi, considered ironclad four years ago, had been broken down.

PRESIDENT and MRS. COOLIDGE and their summer household departed on Saturday from White Pine camp in the Adirondacks, their vacation having come to an end. The President has spent grandly physically by the outdoor life in the mountains and returned to Washington full of energy and brown as a berry. He found the White House all cleaned and repaired, and also found his secretary, Mr. Sanders, in good health again after a sea voyage.

CAPT. BENE FONCK and his crew selected for the transatlantic non-stop flight all went to the flying field at Westbury, N. Y., early Thursday morning prepared to jump off for Paris in the huge Sikorsky plane, which had been tested and approved by Lieutenant Curtin, navigator and alternate pilot. But when nearly everything was ready for the start a bad leak in the gasoline tank was discovered. So the plane was put back in the hangar for repairs and the start was postponed. Perhaps before this is read the flight will have been made or have failed. On the other hand, weather conditions may have caused indefinite delay.

SENATOR CARAWAY of Arkansas has broken out in a new spot. He says the graves of America's war dead in France have been desecrated with abusive and vulgar writings on the crosses, and urges that the bodies of all soldiers buried there be brought home. The War department says nothing of this character has been reported to it, and General Pershing, chairman of the American battle monuments commission, declared that during his recent stay in Europe he had heard nothing of such desecration.

It was a costly "spree" which Frank Hammond, who resides near Ironton, had the first part of the week. He was arrested and arraigned before Justice Hammond's Court on a charge of driving while intoxicated. The verdict, guilty. The penalty, fifty dollars fine, ten dollars costs and his license revoked for three months. This it seems proved to be rather a costly "spree" to say nothing of the danger to himself and others while driving in such condition.—Boyne Citizen.

BLANKETS! Blankets!

Mrs. Brown—Good morning Mrs. Smith, did you get fitted up with quilt materials last week?

Mrs. Smith—Yes, I surely did. Now all that I need is a Blanket or two. I plan to buy one or perhaps two blankets every Fall, and we have plenty even if we have to make an extra bed sometimes.

Mrs. Brown—That's a good plan, and the Company Store is a good place to buy the blankets, also they have blankets for the baby's bed, for a three-quarter bed and for the full size. And the blankets are full size too, 70x80. No one likes a small-blanket. Then they have all wool blankets of course besides the couch covers. In fact, I think they have everything in blankets and the prices are right also.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Southern Florida Ravaged by Hurricane—Life and Property Losses.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PROBABLY five hundred men, women and children dead. More than six thousand injured, many of whom may not recover. Property losses approximating $200,000,000. Between 60,000 and 75,000 persons homeless and great numbers of them rendered destitute.

That in a few words summarize the situation in southern Florida after the terrific West Indian hurricane that swept across the state from the region of Miami, moving northwest and across the gulf to Pensacola and Mobile, where the property loss was heavy though no fatalities there were reported.

Miami, the "wonder city," and its beautiful suburbs were the worst sufferers, though Fort Lauderdale, Hollywood, Moore Haven and other towns were virtually ruined and scores of other places were devastated. With the wind blowing 150 miles an hour, the waters of the Atlantic ocean were driven clear over lovely Miami Beach and far inland at Miami and all along that part of the coast. Vessels of all sorts and sizes were piled upon the beaches totally wrecked, thousands of houses and other buildings of wooden construction were leveled and nearly all the towering palms, Australian pines and other trees were torn up by the roots. Automobiles by the thousand were swept off the Miami causeways into Biscayne bay or piled up in heaps of junk in the streets. The buildings of steel construction in Miami resisted the hurricane in most cases, and the handsome homes of many millionaires, though damaged by the invading waters, were not ruined. But the palatial hotels of Miami Beach were badly shattered. Of the Miami suburbs, Coral Gables, where there are few wooden structures, came off best.

The Miami storm-relief executive issued this appeal:

"To the American People:

"The city of Miami is compelled to issue an appeal to the people of the United States for the relief of Miami and Dade county. Six days ago this city of 200,000 was one of the most prosperous, beautiful and delightful communities in this country. Today, as a result of a disastrous tropical hurricane which devastated our coast last Saturday, it lies prostrate.

"We have 100 dead and nearly 1,000 patients in hospitals, hundreds of whom are grievously injured. While conditions are being rapidly restored by means of most wonderful and efficient co-operation of its citizens along all important lines, the problems confronting them are almost insurmountable. Food and other necessary supplies are coming in in great quantities and we have been blessed by the arrival of a sufficient number of physicians and nurses and ample medical supplies for the immediate present.

"But more than 5,000 homes have been either entirely destroyed or made unfit for human habitation. Twenty-five thousand people have been made homeless. These are being cared for in thousands of instances by neighbors who themselves are suffering. Miami needs money quickly and in large amounts.

"It needs it to take care of the poor, sick and injured. It needs it to rehabilitate the homes of thousands who have lost everything in the world and who will die of exposure if assistance does not come promptly and amply."

Instantly upon receipt of the first news of the disaster relief measures were organized by the American Red Cross and by communities all over the country, and along every railway to the southeast the trains streamed carrying physicians, nurses, medical supplies and food. The trained workers of the Red Cross were speedily on the field, as they always are. Sanitary measures and steps to prevent disease that follow so often in the wake of storm disaster marked the first steps taken after the work had been organized. Workers and persons remaining in many areas were required to submit to typhoid vaccination, and residents of Dade and Moore Haven were ordered to evacuate those towns because the water supply was polluted and an epidemic threatened. Vessels of the United States navy were put at the disposition of the Red Cross, and the destroyer Downe was rushed from Charleston to Miami with serum and the destroyer Cassin carried a load of general supplies. Under the direction of Henry M. Baker, national disaster director for the Red Cross, great numbers of refugees from the shattered towns were removed to near-by cities in trucks, special trains and automobiles.

Moore Haven, which was overwhelmed by the waters of Lake Okechobee with a loss of more than 100 lives, may never be rebuilt. But steps already have been taken for the reconstruction of Miami Beach, Hollywood and other places, while of course Miami itself promises soon to regain its former splendor.

Damage done at Pensacola was estimated at $3,000,000, and it was heavy at Mobile and other towns in the gulf. St. Petersburg and other towns in that vicinity reported no loss of life but considerable to property. The hurricane, before reaching Florida, had killed a score or more in the Bahama islands and done tremendous property damage, and Bimini Island was ravaged.

From Buenos Aires comes the report of another hurricane that struck the town of Encarnacion, Paraguay, on the Parana river, killing about 400 persons and leveling thirty of the city's blocks.

CAPT. RENE FONCK, the French aviator, undertook to hop off for his non-stop flight from New York to Paris in the giant Sikorsky plane built for the project. Overloaded at the last moment, the machine rushed down the prepared runway at Roosevelt field on Long Island, staggered along for a short distance with two wheels collapsing, nose-dived into the earth and burst into flames. Fonck and Lieut. L. W. Curtin, the alternate pilot, crawled from the wreckage unhurt, but Charles Clavier, the French radio operator, and Jacob Isamot, the Russian mechanic, were trapped in the fuselage and were burned to death. Griet, stricken but undefeated, Igor Sikorsky, the Russian designer and president of the Sikorsky Manufacturing corporation, briefly announced his plans.

"Officers of the corporation," he said, "are shocked at the tragedy, but we believe the best tribute we can pay to their memory is to begin immediately the building of another plane to carry out the project for which these men gave their lives."

THE states members of the World court agreed to accept the United States' reservations for adherence to the court with the single condition that by a two-thirds majority the court powers could repudiate their acceptance of the reservations regarding advisory opinions and the right to amend statutes without the consent of the United States.

The forty states participating approved the drafting committee's protocol covering their terms on America's entry, and the joint note which will be circulated to the various signatories as the basis for framing their individual replies to the United States. The United States will be invited to take part in a conference with the court states to frame a special protocol to translate the five American reservations into the language of the court.

BRIAND and Stresemann, motoring from Geneva to a French town near the border, laid plans for a rapprochement between France and Germany that promises great things for both countries and for Europe generally. Briand reported to the French cabinet and was given a free hand to proceed with the agreement, while Doctor Stresemann, returning to Berlin, prepared to fight the Nationalists and Communists who alone oppose the negotiations. It is understood the projected accord includes a plan for the immediate flotation of reich railway debentures, as provided in the Dawes plan, and that France's share of these amounts would be 780,000,000 gold marks, which would help to stabilize the franc. Germany demands reduction of allied forces of occupation and complete evacuation of the Rhineland earlier than had been intended. The first fruits of the negotiations were the departure of detachments of French troops from the occupied area, with the prospect that by the end of September about 6,000 of them would be withdrawn. This was immensely pleasing to the Germans.

GEN. GEORGE KONDYLIIS, premier-dictator of Greece, has dissolved his own party and will retire from politics because political leaders have been complaining that he was working for his own interests. He advises his friends to join other parties and announces that his government will continue to function for the time being and that parliamentary elections will be held under the proportional representation system. Dispatches from Athens say it is believed the former king of Greece is in Bucharest awaiting a possible recall to the throne.

SO SUCCESSFUL is the Red army of Canton in its operations against the troops of the north that the British cabinet has been seriously considering abandoning its policy of the last two years and recognizing all de facto provincial governments in China, especially the Canton regime. This would mean the abandonment of the fiction of a central government in Peking. Meantime the third British destroyer-fleet has left Malta for Chinese waters to protect British interests. The Cantonese are pushing back Marshal Wu in Honan province and are attempting to make a junction with the army of Marshal Feng Yushiang, now their ally. Wuchang, several times reported taken by the Cantonese, is still holding out though the garrison is facing starvation. All the women and children and 21 Americans were permitted to leave the city.

QUEEN MARIE of Rumania insists that she is going to leave Bucharest for a visit to the United States about October 2, and she has had her hair bobbed in preparation for the trip. The Rumanian foreign office some time ago denied the queen was going to make the journey, but it now declares it has approved of her plan. King Ferdinand, who is ill, says nothing about it for publication. Court circles are criticizing her majesty, who is past fifty, for cutting off her golden hair.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE has given his approval to the selection of Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall as the next chief of staff of the army, to succeed Maj. Gen. John L. Hines in December. General Summerall entered the war as a colonel and made a brilliant record in France, where he commanded the artillery brigades and afterward the First division. He is considered a stern but just disciplinarian, highly respected by his subordinates for his forcefulness and his ability to get things done.

NEARLY eight thousand veterans of the Civil war gathered in Des Moines for the sixtieth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, and the members of the auxiliary organizations and members of the delegates' families swelled the number of visitors in the Iowa city to about 50,000. Much of the time was given up to entertainment and to reunions of various units.

MAJ. GEN. ROBERT LEE HOWZE, commanding officer of the Fifth corps area, United States army, died in Columbus, Ohio, following an operation. He gained fame in the Indian warfare in the Northwest, for which he was given the congressional medal of honor; in the Philippine revolt, the Mexican border troubles and the World war.

GENE TUNNEY, ex-marine, is the new heavyweight champion of the world, having taken away Jack Dempsey's crown in ten rounds of rather mild fighting in the stadium at Philadelphia. The spectators numbered 182,000, and the gate receipts were about $2,000,000. Dempsey's power and judgment of distance were gone, and Tunney won easily on points. The victory was popular with all except those who had bet on Dempsey.

The way some crowds go to hear trials you would think that they do not know the difference between a court house and a circus tent.

Correspondents who send in news items, and then fail to see them printed, must remember that nothing is printed in our columns unless the name of the party is signed. This is not for publication, but for identification.

POLITE? I DON'T HAVE TO BE POLITE TO THAT KID! I CAN LICK HIM!
