NUMBER 44

Board Closes Busy Session

WIND UP COUNTY BUSINESS IN RECORD TIME OF 6 DAYS.

The Charlevoix County Board of Supervisors went into session Monday, Oct. 11th and adjourned Friday evening, winding up their annual October session in the record time of six days. In previous years the session lasted from one to two weeks.

The board recommended that the Judge of Probate give consideration to applications for widow's pension presented before him, where the applicant is in possession of farm property or other property and without sufficient revenue to provide for her children.

The report of the Fair committee showed that the total receipts of the Fair last fall were $4,371.17, and that total disbursements were $4,363.27. The board voted an appropriation of $2,000.00 to carry on the work of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Society for next year.

The report of the county poor commission showed that the infirmary had taken care of 35 inmates during the year, with a total attendance of 8080 days at a cost of $7,728.67, or $7882 per day.

Burton Melencamp, county agricultural agent, appeared before the board and made a complete report of the activities and accomplishments of his department for the past year, which included a report on the T. B. cow testing work in the county. The board voted to appropriate the sum of $1,200.00 for continuance of this work. It was also voted to appropriate the sum of $1,500.00 to cover the expenses of the county agricultural extension work for Charlevoix County for the year 1927.

The report of the county road commissioners showed that total receipts from all sources were $104,790.70 expended as follows: construction $24,529.62; maintenance, $29,736.47 equipment and repairs, $16,186.03; material, $5,420.12; general expenses, $5,087.35. The report showed that 30,744 feet of new gravel road had been built and maintenance work on 23 county roads and some state trunk lines taken care of. It was voted to raise a 3 1/2 mill county road tax for 1927, which will be expended as follows: maintenance, $15,000.00; equipment, $2,370.79; 1 mile on Marion Center road, $6,000; 1 1/2 miles on Horton Bay north road, $6,000.00; 1 mile on Ironton south road, $6,000.00; 1 mile on Boyne Falls east road, $4,000.00; for part of 1926 work on King's Highway, $500.00.

H. A. Craig will head a committee composed of H. C. Stephens, C. Schaub, Charles Murphy and Wm. J. Pearson to meet at some future date with other northern Michigan Supervisors who will act on the advisability of building a northern Michigan T. B. Sanitarium in one of the northern counties.

The matter of toll on the Ironton ferry was definitely settled when the ferry committee recommended that no toll be charged.

The sum of $91,138.25 or equal to 8 mills on each dollar will be raised as county tax for 1927. This amount is the same as last year.

Other important appropriations included $1,000.00 for the Charlevoix hospital; $1,000.00 for the Michigan Tourist & Resort Association and $1,000.00 for the Whiting County Park fund.

It was voted to build a 2-car garage behind the county jail to replace the present one, which will be sold and the proceeds turned in on the new garage. The cost is not to exceed $350.00.

Pontiac—Construction of a four mile belt line from the D. G. H. & M line west of the city to the intersection of Columbia road and the P. O. & N. tracks north of the city was announced by the Grand Trunk railway. Besides the new line, another yard will be built to accommodate 650 cars. With the cost of the yards and construction of the new belt line an expenditure of more than $2,000,000 will have been made in Pontiac by the railways. Construction work will be started about January 1.

Olivet—The 11-year-old daughter of a farmer near here was burned seriously about the face, neck and arm from flames of gasoline, the result of a 15-year-old brother using the inflammable fluid to revive a smoldering fire in the kitchen range. At the resulting explosion the boy flung the gasoline can out the kitchen door. The girl to escape the fire inside the room rushed out through the door where she stumbled and fell in the flaming pool. An elder brother smothered the flames with a blanket.

Fall Radio School Opens at M. S. C.

Twenty departments at M. S. C. have joined this year in presenting programs for the fall term radio school from Station W K A R, which opened Monday, Oct. 25. The educational programs are given each evening except Saturday and Sunday from 7:15 to 8:00 o'clock and the school is scheduled to continue for eight weeks ending Dec. 17th.

A wide variety of subject matter is offered in the educational programs containing material of interest for everyone, and plans have been made to make the winter term school still more complete. This is the third year of educational work conducted by the college station.

In addition to the radio school, there will be special educational programs furnished by the various departments of State on Friday evenings from 8 to 9 o'clock, student musical programs on Wednesday evenings from 8 to 9 o'clock, and special features from time to time as the occasion arises.

The fall term schedule for the radio school is as follows:—Mondays, Home Economics, English, Agricultural Engineering and Horticulture; Tuesdays—Engineering, Zoology, Forestry, and Farm Crops; Wednesdays—Economics, Botany, Soils, and Dairy; Thursdays—Education, Sociology, Animal Husbandry, and Farm Crops; Fridays—History and Political Science, Poultry and Dairy.

WASHINGTON BRIEFS

President Coolidge has accepted an invitation to dedicate the Kansas City World war memorial on Armistice day.

President Coolidge has approved expenses necessary to arm the postal service, and orders were issued by Major General Lejeune, commandant of the marine corps, making 2,000 mines available for guarding the mails.

Chicago's opposition to the proposed increases in freight rates on iron and steel between points in the Chicago switching district, received favorable action from the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Postal officials and postage rate experts are concentrating their efforts toward the fixing of a universal flat rate of postage for the transportation of air mail to replace the cumbersome, involved and conflicting air mail rate structures now in use. It was announced by Postmaster General New.

Harvester Firm Reported in $6,000,000 Hemp Deal

Yucatan.—A representative of a prominent harvester firm with headquarters in Chicago, has arrived here and it is reliably reported that he has completed arrangements with the Co-operative Society of Yucatan Hemp Growers for the purchase of 170,000 bales of hemp valued at about $6,000,000. The deal has been under discussion for some time. There now is ready for shipment out of here something like $10,000,000 worth of hemp. The contract with the harvester company is said to provide that 150,000 bales shall be shipped to the United States and that the remainder of the purchase shall be sent to Europe. It is reported also that the harvester company is ready to pay down $3,000,000 when the final contracts have been signed and the balance against shipping documents.

NOTICE!

TO EAST JORDANITES IN DETROIT AND NEARBY COMMUNITIES.

Your presence is requested at the annual East Jordan dance to be held at Northwestern Community Hall, corner of Grand River and Wreford Avenues, near McGraw, Detroit, Saturday, Nov. 13, 1926. Dancing old and new will be on the docket. A good time for all is assured. If you see this notice pass the good news on to all East Jordanites. Committee—V. R. Richards, A. Blake, C. Kimes.

Nemecek---Cipra

St. John's Church, near East Jordan was the scene of a beautiful wedding, Tuesday, October 19th, when Miss Marie Nemecek, daughter of Mrs. Nettie Nemecek was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Mathew Cipra, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The bride was beautiful in white satin and lace, the filmy veil held in place by a crown of pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of tea roses and sweet peas, and was attended by Miss Agnes Kalina of Cleveland and Miss Jennie Trojanek of East Jordan, little Miss Helen Nemecek as flower girl. The groom was attended by his brother, Edward Cipra and Francis Nemecek, the brother who gave the bride away.

The services in the church were very impressive. Rev. Fr. Drinan of East Jordan, Rev. Fr. Kroboth of Suttons Bay and Rev. Fr. Gringizer of Kingsley officiating at the solemn High Mass. Music and singing in church was nicely done by the bride's schoolmates, Miss Irene Bashaw, Miss Agnes Kenny, Norbert Hart and Miss Eliene Farmer. Rev. Kroboth performing the marriage ceremony.

After which relatives and intimate friends of the happy couple went to the home of the bride's mother where place cards were laid for all to a sumptuous luncheon. The afternoon was spent with music and singing. After partaking of a dinner served at the close of the day, all proceeded to the Workman's Hall where music was furnished for dancing by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence LaLonde and Clement Kenny.

Relatives of the groom who motored the entire distance from their city here to attend the nuptials were: Mrs. Anna Cipra, mother of the groom, Edward Cipra, Rosa Cipra, Miss Agnes Kalina, Otto Ceniba, Mrs. Stella Ceniba, Joseph Berka, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Clement with daughters, Gladys and Violet, and son, Robert, also Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brandt, all of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mrs. Cipra is one of the popular young teachers of this vicinity, Mr. Cipra is a business man of Cleveland, Ohio, where they expect to make their home in the near future. Our best wishes for a long life time of happiness will accompany the happy couple to their new home.

East Tawas—An entire block in the heart of the business section here was wiped out by a fire which did damage estimated at more than $100,000. Ten business firms losing virtually all of their stocks. Because of the high rates in this section, little insurance was carried.

Grosse Pointe Farms—Murray W. Sales has donated $100,000 toward the building of a hospital in Grosse Pointe Farms as a memorial to his three children who died during the last six years. The gift completes the $250,000 needed for the hospital, which will be erected on the site of the present Cottage hospital.

See Great Damage By Borer in Corn

The destruction caused by the European corn borer was seen by 500 people at a demonstration held in the vicinity of Monroe, Oct. 21. A five acre field owned by Joe Benore showed a total crop loss. Every stalk in this field contained from one to forty specimens of the borer.

Prof. J. F. Cox was in charge of the day's program and introduced Dean R. S. Shaw, Prof. R. H. Pettit, Prof. H. H. Musselman, George Gettman, specialist in agricultural engineering, all from Michigan State College; J. A. Harmon, entomologist from the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, and A. C. Carlton from the State Department of Agriculture. These men all gave their views of the seriousness of the situation that faces Michigan and the United States. They agreed that only the maximum use of all available means of control could prevent the rapid spread of the European corn borer.

An exhibition was given of the machines which are of greatest use in control work. A low cutting attachment for corn binders and a stubble pulverizer were the only specially designed machines shown. The ensilage cutter and the corn husker and shredder destroy nearly all the borers in material run thru these machines. The fermentation in silage destroys all borers in silage. Plowing down does not kill borers in corn stubble.

State laws give the State Department of Agriculture the power to enforce quarantine laws and to compel the cleaning up of fields which are infested with corn borer. This clean up work must be done before May 25. The State of Michigan needs the active aid of every available agency to prevent very serious damage to a crop which was worth 50,000,000 dollars last year.

RELIEF FOR COTTON GROWERS IN SIGHT

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine Sees Bright Future.

Washington.—In an interview here Secretary of Agriculture Jardine expressed himself as decidedly optimistic over the future outlook for the cotton crop and the cotton growers. He said in his opinion a satisfactory solution of the cotton problem would almost certainly be reached and he added that, in the meantime, America must not lose its confidence in cotton. "Cotton is one of the most important—if not the greatest crop in the country," the secretary said. "It is now selling too low, but it will strengthen."

"What is needed," he continued, "is orderly marketing of the crop. Cotton should be put on the market only as fast as consumption demands it. The product is still in the hands of the farmers and we want to arrange the handling, movement and storage for growers so they will suffer no great loss from low price."

Mr. Jardine said it is imperative the cotton problem be solved promptly, as it might influence the prosperity of the country. "Cotton at its present price has already reduced the buying power of the South by millions of dollars. This factor reflects on the entire country," he said.

Mr. Jardine is not impressed by the proposal put forward that the wearing of cotton garments by the public will aid the situation materially. He pointed out that the material now on sale was manufactured from previous crops. He expressed himself as satisfied that better-balanced planting in the future would prevent a recurrence of the present trouble.

Ex-Archbishop Sued for $5,535,564

Washington.—Charging conspiracy to defraud the government, the Department of Justice has filed in the Boston Federal court a suit for $5,535,564.07 damages against A. Mitchell Palmer, former attorney general, and 21 other defendants.

The sum claimed is the difference between the "grossly inadequate prices" at which the stock and property of the Bosch Magneto company were sold, and what the government contends was their real value. The sale followed the seizure of the stock in May, 1918, by Palmer, then alien property custodian.

Both the seizure and the sale, it was charged, were agreed upon beforehand by Palmer and others "for their own enrichment. Palmer, Arthur T. Murray of Springfield, Mass., former general manager of the company, and Martin E. Kern, Altoona, Pa., banker, were named as the parties to this agreement.

E. J. Swamps Kalkaska 67-0

Saturday, Oct. 30th, the Locals Play Harbor Springs Here.

The East Jordan High School football team romped over Kalkaska to a decisive victory 67-0 at the Fair Grounds last Saturday. The game was slow and uninteresting and had but little resemblance to the previous games played by the locals.

From the blowing of the whistle at the start of the game there was no question as to the outcome. Every play gave the locals their necessary yardage for downs which soon after resulted in a touch down.

This Saturday, October 30th, the locals play Harbor Springs, one of the strongest teams in Northern Michigan. It should prove to be the best home game on the schedule.

(News furnished by English 12 Class)

FRESHMAN PARTY

The Freshman Class, chaperoned by four members of the High School faculty, hiked to the other side of Brown's Creek Tuesday night after school. Wieners were roasted and served with buns, doughnuts, pickles and coffee. Later the crowd gathered around the fire and played games and sang. At six-thirty they returned to town, all having had a fine time.

MISS FREEGARD SPEAKS

In assembly Wednesday, October twentieth, Miss Freegard, State Supervisor of the Home Economics Department, spoke on "The Value of Home Economics." In her talk Miss Freegard explained that home economics included more than is usually understood to be taught in the course. In addition to cooking and sewing it treats of child welfare, home nursing, house furnishing, and the values of different kinds of clothing all of which are useful to boys as well as to girls. Some schools offer courses in simple cookery to boys. This is useful to Boy Scouts in camp life and to athletes in training for physical fitness. Miss Freegard also mentioned ways in which the students could make the family meals more attractive and interesting.

TYPEWRITING CONTEST

The first, second, and third year typewriting students have organized teams for typewriting contests. Isabel Kitsman is captain of the first team and Dorothy Clark captain of the second team in first year typewriting. In the contest last week the first team was victorious. Isabel Kitsman made the best speed record of fifteen words a minute and Lucy Mayhew the best accuracy record by typing fifteen minutes with only one error. Isabel Lintner is captain of the first team and Anna Leu captain of the second team in second year typewriting. The second team won. Isabel Lintner made the best speed record of fifty words a minute and Margaret Gunderson the best accuracy record—typing fifteen minutes with six errors. The captain of the first team in third year typewriting is Margaret Staley and captain of the second team is Viola Snyder. The second team was victorious. Margaret Staley made the best speed record and the best accuracy record of seventy three words a minute with nine errors.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Manistique—Charles McGregor, 46 years old, and the father of 15 children, was shot and killed by a neighbor, Bud Vanetta, when they were hunting here.

Kalamazoo—A committee of the county board of supervisors has been considering the purchase or lease of an airplane for the use of the authorities in the pursuit of bank bandits.

Ann Arbor—A road development program that will involve the expenditure of $241,444.90 during 1927, in Washtenaw county, was adopted by the board of supervisors at a recent meeting here.

Grand Rapids—The property of the Grand Rapids, Holland & Chicago Railway Co. was sold at a U. S. District Court foreclosure sale to the Hyman-Michael Co., a Chicago wrecking concern, for $227,000.

Detroit—Detroit is the richest city in the United States, with a total income tax of $207,131,889, a per capita of $208.59. This per capita figure is compared with $66.59 in New York, $73.41 in Chicago, and $90.34 in Philadelphia.

Grand Rapids—A Michigan flier, Lieut. George T. Cuddy, of Grand Rapids, will be one of the Navy team of three members which will defend the Schneider cup in the international seaplane races to be held November 11 at Hampton Roads, Va.

Pontiac—Funeral services were held here recently for Mrs. Swan Tyack, who only a few weeks ago passed her one hundredth birth anniversary. Burial was in the Rochester cemetery beside her husband Thomas Tyack, who died two years ago at the age of 101 years.

Rochester—Fire destroyed eight tractors, several new cars and the Phillips & Jerome garage here. An explosion caused by a faulty blow torch started the fire. Damage is estimated at $65,000. Failure of the village fire alarm system to function gave the blaze a great headway.

Jackson—Two Jackson county high schools are setting football records worthy of recognition: Vandercook Lake High, with only 11 boys, is making rapid strides in the race for the county high school title, while Michigan Center, with only 14 boys, has one of the fastest teams in the race.

Lansing—Contracts amounting to $2,500,000 for new roads and bridges has been approved by the state administrative board. The contracts already had been let informally. An additional 80 miles of road was included in the state trunk line system.

The snow removal program was extended to 1,600 more miles of state highways, so 5,650 miles of road will be kept open.

Detroit—Purchase has been made by the Detroit Young Men's Christian association of the northeast corner of Gayland and Jefferson avenues for the purpose of erecting one of six half-million dollar "Y" buildings that are to be located in various sections of the city. Two other sites already have been purchased, one on the west side of Clark Park and one at the corner of Woodward and Winona avenues.

Detroit—The steamer Lake Gaither, which left Detroit for South America with a million dollar cargo of automobiles will be the first vessel this season to take a direct water route from this port to South America. The steamer was loaded with 639 boxed automobiles. It will require 33 days to make the trip of 7,000 miles. The Lake Gaither will return with coals and other South American products.

Detroit—The Peninsular Stove Co. has acquired 18 1/2 acres at the northeast corner of Burt road and the Pere Marquette Railroad, Brightmoor, on which it will erect the most modern and completely equipped stove works in the world, according to an announcement by the secretary of the company. On the new site will be erected two buildings of brick, steel and fenestra sash. The floor area of the two buildings will be 750,000 square feet. Construction will be started at once.

Detroit—School census figures made public in the eighty-third annual report of the board of education give an indication of the growth of Detroit in the past year. The figures reveal that Detroit's school population increased 8.4 per cent in 1926 over 1925. The school report notes the interesting fact that there are 42 nationalities represented in Detroit's metropolitan population and that there are 311 buildings operated by the board of education representing an investment of $75,810,472.00.

Owosso—The new defunct Fallon Coal company, of Fallon, Ill., in which hundreds of Michigan people lost their investments, paid $125,000 cash to brokers who sold $500,000 worth of stock for them two years ago, according to a Detroit broker, who also testified that 20,000 shares of the stock was given to brokers as a bonus. The stockholders claim that money raised in the sale of stock and the floating of the bonds was not used to improve the mine, but that the directors conspired to and did defraud the stockholders.

Becomes a Citizen

Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, internationally known feminist, first woman diplomat in the world and famous author, will become a full-fledged American citizen in December of this year. Madame Schwimmer was born in Hungary and at one time was minister to Switzerland from Hungary. She declares she prefers this country to any in the world. She is now making her home in Chicago.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Sleep With Eyes Open

It would be possible to sleep with the eyes open in the dark provided some one held the lids apart. Light excites the brain and prevents sleep. The human eye would become very dry and uncomfortable if the lids were not allowed to close over it at intervals. Most fish sleep with open eyes due to the fact that they have no eyelids.—(© 1926 Western Newspaper Union.)

ARMY AND NAVY TO PROTECT U. S. MAILS
Postmaster General New Ash
Mail Robbery Be Made Capital Offense.

New York.—The whole force of the United States will be used, if necessary, to protect the United States mails from robbery. The first move will be to round up and punish the gang which perpetrated the recent robbery at Elizabeth, N. J., in which $150,000 was stolen, one man killed, and four others wounded.

It was reported from Washington that President Coolidge and his cabinet had decided that special armed guards must be provided for mail trucks in the future. Postmaster General New said:

"If it takes the army and navy to do it, the United States mails must be protected. The lives of postal employees must be safeguarded."

With a view of removing some of the tempting baits which have been the incentive for the recent marked increase in mail robberies the postmaster general appealed through the United States Chamber of Commerce to large industries throughout the country to refrain from sending huge shipments of currency through the mails for pay roll purposes and, instead to meet such pay rolls by checks.

Additional armored cars and armed men, adequately equipped, will be immediately procured by the Post-Office department and assigned to strategic points, it was announced.

Use of the marines, a step taken once before following an unusual number of successful mail robberies at Chicago, is being considered by the President.

"I think," the postmaster general said, "that it should be made a hanging offense to attack the United States mails with arms, and I propose to recommend such legislation to congress."

"Any man who robs the mails with a gun has murderous intent in his heart, and the world is a great deal better off without him. There is not another country on the globe—despite the charges of lawlessness, thievery, and banditry directed at certain other countries—where such things are more prevalent than in our own."

"If it cannot be suppressed by one means it should be by another. Wholesale hangings might go further than anything else."

Slush Fund Quiz Is Reopened in Chicago

Chicago.—Senator James A. Reed's senate investigating committee has resumed hearings in Chicago, with prospects that it may conduct an inquiry into the Indiana political scandal, which revolves around D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan, now in the penitentiary at Michigan City.

The first intent of the committee, it was announced, is to clean up the tag ends of the inquiry into campaign slush funds in the Illinois primary.

Senator Reed was informed by telegrams that Senator McNary of Oregon cannot attend the early sessions of the committee, but will be present at later meetings, while Senator Goff of West Virginia is in Europe and Senator La Follette is ill. At Salt Lake City Senator William King of Utah announced that he also will be unable to attend. That will not prevent the meeting, however.

Senator Reed said the committee will consider any suggestions regarding conditions in other states and will take such action as facts seem to warrant.

Raid Michigan Bank

Hillsdale, Mich.—The Hillsdale Savings bank here was robbed of $20,000 by three masked men.

Civil Service Pay Raised

Vienna.—By granting a 10 per cent general pay increase in the salaries of civil servants, the government has avoided a strike of 2,000,000 state workers.

Mrs. Coolidge Aids Dedication

Mercersburg, Pa.—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, wife of the President, took an important part in the dedication of the new $600,000 chapel at Mercersburg academy.

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF

Saginaw.—The sixtieth annual session of the Michigan Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, attracted about 2,000 delegates from all sections of Michigan at its convention held here recently.

Battle Creek.—Battle Creek's new south side junior high school is to be built immediately, construction work having started. The structure is to cost $588,000, and follow the latest in school architecture.

Grand Rapids.—Vic Shipalla, 17-year-old Highland's Country Club golfer, leading the field in a tournament held here recently. Shipalla is a one-armed champ, with his left arm out off at the shoulder.

Ionia.—Leo Rogers, 38 years old, of Lake Odessa, inmate of the Michigan reformatory, was accidentally electrocuted at the furniture factory while repairing a bell on an elevator. The inquest placed no criminal negligence, the verdict being accidental death.

Ann Arbor.—Queen Marie of Rumania, will visit the University of Michigan in her tour of the United States, according to a telegram received by Dr. Clarence C. Little, president of the university, from D. J. Juvara, charge d'affaires of Rumania, in Washington.

Saginaw.—Fire Chief Kruezeberger has requested an appropriation for the purchase of fire fighting equipment to combat fires in the Saginaw oil fields. A recent fire in one of the oil wells led the fire chief to make this request. The blaze was put out before it did much damage, but only after considerable difficulty.

Bay City.—The 9-year-old son of Mrs. Stella Gushaw, who lives about one-half mile west of Fisherville, had the first phalanx of his thumb, middle and index fingers on the right hand blown off and suffered an injury to his left eye which may cause him to lose the sight of it, when he exploded a dynamite cap by striking it with a rock.

Ironwood.—A committee of seven of the miners who were entombed in Pabst mine for five days appeared before a notary public at Ashland, Wis., and swore to a statement that the shaft in their opinion, had been in a dangerous condition. They further asked that they be given an opportunity to testify before the investigating body.

Owasco.—The Ann Arbor railroad has let the contract for the construction of another ferry, to be operated across Lake Michigan. The ship is to be built by the Toledo Shipbuilding company and will cost approximately $860,000. The newest ferry will have a capacity of 30 cars and will surpass all other of the company's fleet in accommodations, it is said.

Detroit.—Stanley M. Ross, president of the National Ice Cream Manufacturers' association in its recent convention here stated that "Over 2,000 ice cream companies in the U. S. manufacture 325,000,000 gallons of ice cream every year. Germany, on the other hand, has only 12 ice cream companies in the whole nation and England has a baby association of some 30 members."

Detroit.—A victim of auto-suggestion, Mrs. Victoria Jrsyebisk, 30 years old, carried out the prediction of a fortune teller that she would commit suicide. After sending her 6-year-old daughter to the home of a neighbor, she swallowed the contents of a poison bottle in her home. The fortune teller, a woman, was sought at the request of the coroner who expressed the opinion she was morally, if not criminally, responsible for Mrs. Jrsyebisk's death.

Ionia.—Ionia County won the second district championship in the Good Citizenship Contest conducted by the American Citizenship Committee in connection with the September primary vote. The grand prize of $1,008 will be divided among the schools of the county which participated. Second place goes to Tuscola County, carrying a prize of $500, third to Sanilac County, with $250, and fourth to Huron County, with $250. Roscommon County wins $1,000 as the state champion.

Detroit.—Michigan cattle took highest honors at the National Dairy Exposition for the first time since it opened, when Strathglass Roamer and Panshurst Jesabel, owned by James E. Davidson, the Bay City ship builder and Republican national committeeman, were named grand champion bull and cow, respectively. In the Ayrshire division, in addition to the two grand championships Mr. Davidson won two first places, one second, one fourth, two fifths, two sevenths, one eighth and two tenths.

Ann Arbor.—A novel method of helping make both ends meet was discovered here in Washtenaw county in the payment of rat bounties. The township clerk of Freedom required the heads of rats to be brought to him before he signed bounty orders, and the clerk of the adjoining township, Lodi, made all his customers bring the tails of the rats as evidence of their having caught them. A hustling resident of Freedom, caught rats, cut them in two and took the heads to the Freedom clerk and the tails to the Lodi clerk.

Monroe.—Articles of association of the Southworth Memorial hospital have been filed with the county clerk.

Detroit.—A tentative valuation of $118,860,747 has been placed on the property owned and used by the Wash Railroad by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Detroit.—The highest ball ever demanded in Recorder's Court was fixed by Judge McKay Skidman when he held two negroes in $1,000,000 each on assault charges. The defendants are alleged to have attacked a 18-year-old white girl.

Manistee.—The West Michigan Tourist and Resort association, which recently held its annual meeting here will sponsor an automobile tour around Lake Michigan next spring to boost the advantages of Western Michigan as a year-round resort.

Jackson.—Thirty four years a fireman and the loss of but one day because of illness is the remarkable record of John B. Brewer, 71 years old, of this city, who January 1, next, will retire from active service on pension. Brewer joined the Jackson department June 1, 1892.

Jackson.—A campaign to obtain a favorable vote at the November election on a proposed bond issue for a new court house in Jackson and to secure general support of an effort to have a new Michigan Central depot erected has been launched by the Jackson Chamber of Commerce.

Lansing.—Automobile license tax revenues were $1,771,554 in the three month period ending Sept. 30, according to a report completed by Charles J. Deland, secretary of state. This brings the total collection from the weight tax thus far this year to $15,411,716, the bulk of which was received in the first few months when the license plate rush was in full swing.

Holly.—An effort to land a 14-pound great northern pike on a 12-pound test line isn't always crowned with success. Still this feat was performed by a fisherman while fishing in Crochet Lake near Holly, in Oakland County. The pike was lured to the kill by the use of a live minnow and a casting rod. This fish sets the season's record for large pike from Crochet Lake.

Clyde.—A wildcat is reported with in 50 miles of Detroit. It lives in an 100-acre stand of virgin timber fronting Fish Lake, near Clyde, according to a caretaker at the Y. M. C. A. camp upon the lake and a farmer who lives nearby. Adjoining the stand of timber is a tamarack swamp, containing a large supply of cottontail rabbits, upon which they believe the wildcat depends largely for food.

Ann Arbor.—Regent L. L. Hubbard of the University of Michigan, has given 650 volumes of "Gulliver's Travels" to the general library here. Regent Hubbard recently gave the library 3,000 volumes of "Petitions, travels and voyages." Of these, 1,200 are editions of "Robinson Crusoe." Original copies of the first five editions of "Gulliver's Travels," dating from 1726, are on display at the library.

Lansing.—Collections of fees and taxes by the secretary of state's office during the first nine months of this year amounted to $30,818,480. This total does not include the general property tax or any of the fees and taxes collected by a score of other state agencies. The receipts for nine months of motor vehicle taxes, including the gasoline tax have been $24,183,443. The estimate for 1926 had been placed at $24,000,000.

Ypsilanti.—One of Ypsilanti's white blackbirds is dead, the victim of a marauding cat which had already a record of the destruction of a score of song birds and at least one full-grown pet rabbit. Two white blackbirds, said by ornithologists to be one of the rarest of Nature's freaks, were hatched in a brood of four young birds here early in the summer. The young birds were true albinos, having pink eyes and absolutely white plumage.

Royal Oak.—Leonard Swain, 26-year-old radio installer of Royal Oak, received an electrical charge of 46,000 volts through his body and lives to tell about it, although his hands were badly burned. Swain was stringing an aerial when the wire fell across a Detroit Edison power line. The shock hurled him from the limb of a tree into a nearby crotch from which he was rescued by police. His narrow escape from death is unique, physicians say.

East Lansing.—Already having set a new record for production, the 1,000 prize hens in the fourth annual international egg-laying contest at Michigan State college are still "going strong." The production at latest records was 183,662, or an average of about 183.7 eggs per hen. The prize ladders finished with 178 average last year, and 163 the year before. Last year's champion was one "Sunnie," a White Leghorn, with 208 eggs to her credit.

Lansing.—Motorists paid $24,989, 873 in gasoline taxes during the first six months of 1926, the United States Bureau of Public Roads has announced. A total of 8,590,897,584 gallons of gasoline was taxed and it was estimated an additional 856,450,000 gallons were consumed in states without a gas tax. California led with a gas tax of $7,413,824. Florida was second with $6,197,421; Ohio third with $5,968,232; Pennsylvania fourth with $5,252,410; Indiana, fifth with $4,022, 264, and Michigan sixth with $4,378, 568.

PERSISTENCE
By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

A LITTLE drop of water struck me as I was walking under the ledge of rock at Turkey Run. I looked up to see where it came from. It was a full minute before another drop fell, and then I saw at my feet a hole worn in the rock upon which I was standing—a hole which was several inches deep made by the action of this drop of water and its fellows. How many centuries these drops had been falling no one could say, but here was the result of persistent effort.

The Grand canyon of the Colorado is to me the most impressive and stupendous natural phenomenon that I have ever seen. Looking down into its awful depths I shudder. The woman standing beside me and seeing the gorge for the first time burst into tears. Many high-strung people faint when they gaze into its bottomless depths. And yet the Grand canyon a mile deep and miles and miles across was formed, geologists tell us, by the constant and persistent action of running water. How many millions of years it required to erode those solid rocks we can only guess, but there it is, the result of persistent and constant effort.

A friend of mine has recently attained success and international fame through a scientific discovery which he has made. The discovery was not the result of a single effort, but of years of persistent effort. He started with a theory which he was convinced was the correct one. For years he followed out this theory. Night and day he worked to isolate the element whose discovery he was attempting only to find himself defeated in each instance. Thousands of times he performed the experiments which he was convinced would bring him success only to fail. His scientific friends, knowing what he was attempting, joked with him, laughed at him, raised their eyebrows as it were, when he passed and inquired more or less derisively as to his success. He felt sure, however, that he was on the right track, and ultimately he succeeded.

He has been written up in all the scientific journals of the world; he has been in demand all over the country to tell how he did a thing that men for centuries have tried unsuccessfully to do. One of the great qualities which led him to success was his persistence.

Myers was married before he awakened to the fact that if he were to get on in the world he must have a better education than he had as yet secured. He was teaching in a little village where a college degree was not considered an essential. He could not afford to stop work long enough to go to college, for he had his family to support. He had his vacations, however, and these he could utilize to advantage. Last June he took his degree—proud, happy, and fitted to do the work for which he had been preparing. It has taken him fifteen years to do it, but he has kept at it.

Almost anyone can accomplish the impossible if he doesn't grow discouraged.

The Girl in the Mirror

Laurie shook his head. He did not understand at all; but vague and unpleasant stories about espionage and foreign spies suddenly filtered through his mind.

"It sounds as if you mean," he said frankly. "If it's got anything to do with German propaganda—"

She interrupted with a gesture of impatience.

"No, no!" she cried. "I am not a German or a propagandist, or a pacifist or a spy. That much, at least, I can tell you."

"Then that's all right!" Laurie glanced at his watch again. "If you had been a German spy," he added, "with a little round knob of hair on the back of your head and bombs in every pocket, I couldn't have had much to do with you, I really couldn't. But as you and your companions are not involved in that kind of thing, I am forced to remind you that you'll be headed toward the station in just one minute."

"I hate you!" she said between her teeth.

He shook his head at her. "Oh, no, you don't!" he said kindly. "But I see plainly that you're a self-willed young person. Association with me, and the study of my poise, will do a lot for you. By the way, you have only thirty seconds left."

"Do you want to be killed?" She blushed the words at him.

"Good gracious, no!" Laurie spoke absently, his eyes on the watch.

"Twenty seconds," he ended.

"Do you want to be maimed or crippled, or—"

"No—no!" she said in surprise.

"I don't know why you imagine I have such lurid taste," he said, discontentedly. "Of course I don't want any of those things. My nature is a quiet one, and already I'm dreading the excitement of taking you to the station. But now I must ask you to put on your gloves and button up your coat for our little journey."

"The journey you take with me," she said, with deep meaning, "may be a long and hard one."

He stood up.

"I wouldn't miss it for the world," he told her. "But we'll have to postpone it. Our journey to the station comes first."

She sat still, looking at him.

"I know your type now," she said suddenly. "You live in your little groove, and you think that nothing happens in the world except what you see under your nose."

"Something awfully unpleasant is going to happen under my nose right now," announced her companion, consolatorily. "Come along, please. It's time to start."

She stood up, fastened her coat for a second, and then dropped back into her chair with a gesture of finality. Her expression had changed back to the lethargy of her first moments in the restaurant.

"Very well," she said. "Have it your way." She added significantly, "This may be the last time you have your way about anything!"

"You have a depressing outlook," grumbled Laurie, contentedly sitting down again. "It isn't playing the game to spoil my triumph with such predictions as that, especially as I'm going to have my way about a lot of things right now. I have your word," he added.

"Yes."

"Good! Now I'll give you my program. First, of all, I'm going to be a brother to you; and I don't think," he ended thoughtfully, "that I've ever offered to be a brother to any girl before."

"You're a nice boy," she said abruptly.

He smiled at her.

"A nice boy, though a fool. I hoped you would notice that. You'll be dazzled by my virtues before you're through with me." He went on conversationally. "The reason I've never offered to be a brother to any girl before is that I've got a perfectly good sister of my own. Her one fault is that she's always bossed me. I warn you from the start of our relations that I'm going to be the boss. It will be the first time I've ever bossed anyone, and I'm looking forward to it a lot."

The faintest suggestion of a smile touched her short upper lip. Above it, her red-brown eyes had softened again. She drew a deep breath.

"It's strange," she said. "You've let me in for all sorts of things you don't realize. And yet, somehow, I feel, for the time at least, as if I had been lying under the weight of the world and some one had lifted the wretched thing off me."

"Can't you, by a supreme effort of the imagination, fancy that I lifted it off?" suggested Laurie, mildly.

This time she really smiled.

"I can," she conceded. "And without any effort at all," she added solemnly. "I can fancy us both under it again."

He shook his head.

"That won't do!" he declared. "The lid is off. You've just admitted it. You feel better for having it off. So do I. As your big brother, and self-appointed counselor, I choose this opportunity to tell you what you're going to do."

She pursed her lips at him. It was the gesture of a rebellious child. Her entire manner had changed so suddenly that Laurie felt a bewilderment almost equal to his satisfaction in it. For the first time throughout the interview he experienced the thrill she had given him in the mirror.

"Yes!" she prompted.

"In the first place—" He hesitated. The ground that stretched between them now was firmer, but still uncertain. One false step might lose him much of what he had gained. "There's the question of your future," he went on, in a brisk, matter-of-fact tone. "I spent two months last year looking for a job in New York. I was about down to my last cent before I found it. It occurred to me that, perhaps, you—" He was beginning to founder.

"That I am out of work?" she finished, calmly. "You are right."

Laurie beamed at her. Surely his way was clear now!

"I had a streak of luck last year," he resumed. "I collaborated on a play that people were foolish enough to like. Ever since that, money has poured in on me in the most vulgar way. I click when I walk. Dollars ooze from my pockets when I make a gesture. Last week, at the bank, the cashier begged me to take some of my money away and do something with it. He said it was burdening the institution. So, as your adopted brother, I'm going to start a bank account for you," he ended simply.

"Indeed you are not!"

"Indeed I am!"

"I agreed to live. I did not agree to what is it you Americans say—to sponge!"

He ignored all but the phrase of the reply.

"What do you mean by that?" he demanded with quickened interest.

"Aren't you an American?"

She bit her lip.

"No—not wholly."

"What, then?"

She hesitated.

"Can't you tell me that just yet," she said at last.

"Oh-h!" Laurie pursed his lips in a noiseless whistle. The girl's voice was musically English, and though her accent was that of London, up till now she had spoken as colloquially as any American. Indeed, her speech was much like his sister's. He was puzzled.

"Why didn't you tell me this before?"

"That I am not wholly American?" She was smiling at him ironically, but he remained serious.

"Yes. And—oh, a lot of things! Of course you know I am all at sea about you."

The familiar shadow fell over her face.

"When one is within an hour or two of the next world," she asked indifferently, "why should one tell anybody anything?"

"How long have you been in America?"

"All my life, off and on."

This at least was reassuring. He imagined he saw a gleam of light. The girl had declared that she was not a spy, nor involved in war propaganda; but it was quite possible, he reasoned, that she was enmeshed in some little web of politics, of vast importance to her and her group, of very little importance to any one else.

"I suppose," he suggested cheerfully, "that not you've said so much about a political net?"

They had been speaking throughout in low tones, inaudible at any other table. Their nearest fellow diners were two middle-aged women at least thirty feet away. But she started violently under his words. She made a quick gesture of caution, and turning half-around, swept the room with a frightened glance. Laurie, his cigarette forgotten in his fingers, watched her curiously, taking in her evident tension, her slowly returning poise, and at last the little breath of relief with which she turned back to him.

"I wish I could tell you all you want to know," she said, "but I can't. That's all there is to it. So please let us change the subject."

His assurance returned.

"You're not a crown head or an escaped princess or anything of that kind, are you?" he asked politely.

"This time she really laughed, a soft, low gurgle of laughter, joyous and contagious.

"No."

"Then let's get back to our bank account. We have plenty of time to run over to the Fifth avenue branch of the Corn Exchange bank before the closing hour. What color of check book do you prefer?"

"I told you," she declared with sudden seriousness, "that my bargain did not include sponging."

For the first time in the somewhat taxing interview her companion's good humor deserted him.

"My dear girl," he said, almost impatiently, "don't beat the devil around the bush! You've got to live till we can find the right work for you, and that may take some time. You have intelligence enough to see that I'm neither a gay Lothario nor a Don Juan. In your present state of mind you're not fit to decide anything. Make up your mind, once for all, that I'm going to decide for you. It will save us both some trouble."

He stopped. He had discovered that she was not listening to him. She was sitting absolutely still, her head a little turned. Her lips were slightly parted, and her eyes, wide and staring, were fixed on some one across the room.

Laurie's eyes followed hers. They focused on a man sitting alone at a little table. It was clear that he had just entered, for a waiter stood by his side, and the newcomer was giving judicious attention to the bill of fare.

He was a harmless-looking person, of medium height and rather more than medium stoutness, carelessly dressed in a blue-velvet suit. His indifference to dress was further betrayed by the fact that his ready-made four-in-hand tie had slipped the morning of a white-boote stud, leaving that useful adjunct of the toilet open to the eyes of the world. His face was round, smooth-shaven, and rather pale. He had dark, slightly veiled gray eyes, which blinked near-sightedly at the menu. Altogether he was a seemingly worthy person, to whom the casual observer would hardly have given a second glance.

While the two pairs of eyes across the room stared at him, he confided his order to the waiter. It seemed a brief order, for the brow of the latter clouded as he wrote it down and detachedly strolled off. The newcomer leaned back in his chair, and as he did, so glanced around the room. His projecting eyes, moving indifferently from table to table, suddenly rested, fixed, on the girl. They showed interest but no surprise. He bowed with a half-smile—an odd smile, bland, tolerant, and understanding. Then, disregarding her lack of response, he fixed his eyes on the wall facing him and waited patiently for his luncheon to be served.

Laurie's attention returned to the girl. She was facing him again, but her eyes looked past him as if he were not there.

"He has found me, even here," she muttered. "Of course he would. He always does."

Laurie looked at her.

"Do you mean," he asked crisply, "that that chap across the room is following you around?"

She looked at him, as if abruptly recalled to the fact of his presence. Her eyes dropped.

"Yes," she muttered, dully. "I may escape him for a time, but he always learns where I am. He will catch me when he chooses, and roll me about under his paws for a while, and then—perhaps—let me go again."

"That sounds like a certain phase of domestic life," commented Laurie.

"Is he by any chance your husband?" Her eyes held a rising anger.

"He is not," she said. "I am not married."

Laurie dropped his dead cigarette into the ash tray, and rose with a sigh.

"It's all very confusing," he admitted, "and a digression from the main issue. But I'm afraid I shall have to go to the exertion of reasoning with him."

She started up, but before she could protest or restrain him, he had left her and crossed the room to the stranger's table.

CHAPTER V

Mr. Herbert Ransome Shaw

The man in the shabby blue-velvet suit detached his absent gaze from the opposite wall, and looked up quickly when Laurie stopped at his side. He was clearly surprised, but courteous. He half rose from his chair, but the

"I Came Over Here," He Said Casually, "to Mention to You That You Are Annoying the Lady I Am With."

newcomer waved him back and dropped easily into the vacant seat opposite him. He was smiling. The man in blue velvet was not. He looked puzzled, though vaguely responsive. A third person, watching the two, might almost have thought the episode the casual reunion of men who frequently lunched together.

Laurie leaned forward in his chair, rested one elbow on the table, and, opening his cigarette case, extended it to the stranger. The latter rejected it with a slight bow.

"Thank you, but not before lunch," he said, quietly. His voice and manner were those of an educated man.

The quality of his tone was slightly harsh.

Laurie lit a cigarette, blew out the match and looked straight into the stranger's projecting gray eyes. He had acted impulsively. Now that he was here, he was anxious to put the job over concisely, firmly, but, above all, neatly. There must be nothing done that would attract the attention of the few persons in the big room.

"I came over here," he said casually, "to mention to you that you are annoying the lady I am with. I want to mention also that the annoyance must stop."

The glance of the stranger held. Laurie observed with interest that the veiled look of the projecting eyes had changed a little. The change did not add to the stranger's charm.

"Before I answer you, tell me one thing," he said, formally. "By what right do you act as the lady's protector?"

Laurie hesitated an instant. The question was embarrassing.

"Has she authorized you to act?"

"In a way, but—"

"How long have you known her? How well do you know her?"

Command of the interview was slipping from the younger man. He resolutely resumed it.

"Look here," he said, firmly, "I came to this table to tell you something, but I will decide what that is to be. I am not here to answer questions. It is enough for you to know that circumstances have given me the right to protect the lady from annoyance. I want to make it clear to you that I shall exercise that right. Hereafter you are to let her alone. Do you understand? Absolutely alone. You are not to follow her, not to enter places where she can see you," he recklessly ended.

The stranger looked at him through the light veil which seemed again to have fallen over the projecting eyes.

"I should really like to know," he said, "when and where you met her. I saw you starting off together in the taxicab, but I am not quite sure whether your first encounter occurred this morning."

"And you won't be," Laurie stood up. "I've warned you," he said curtly. "I don't know how well you understand our laws in this country, but I fancy you know enough of them to realize that you cannot shadow a lady without getting into trouble."

"She admitted that?" The stranger appeared to experience a tepid glow of emotion. "She must know you better than I thought," he added reflectively. "Doris is not the type to pour her confidence into every new ear," he mused, seeming to forget the other's presence in his interest in this revelation.

"Have I made myself quite clear?" Laurie was staring at him with a mingling of resentment and interest. The other nodded.

"You have, my young friend," he said, with sudden seriousness, "and now I, too, will be clear. In return for one warning, I will give you another. Keep out of matters that do not concern you."

Laurie grinned at him.

"You forget that I have made this matter my concern," he said, lightly. "Try to remember that."

The other man rose. His manner had changed to a sort of impatient weariness.

"Get her out of here," he said abruptly. "You are beginning to irritate me, you two. Take her home, and then keep away from her, unless you are looking for trouble."

He delivered the last words so clearly and menacingly that the waiter who had appeared with his luncheon heard them and fell back a step. Looking into the veiled eyes, Laurie also felt a sense of recoil. The fellow was positively venomous. There was something serpentine in the dull but fixed look of those goggling eyes, in the forward thrust of the smooth brown head.

"I've said my say," he retorted. "If I ever catch you around that studio, or in any way annoying the lady, I'll thrash you within an inch of your life; and then I'll turn what's left of you over to the authorities. Understand?"

He nodded and strolled back to Miss Mayo's table. For an instant the other man stood looking after him, as if tempted to follow. Then, with a shrug, he dropped into his chair and began the luncheon the waiter had placed before him.

Laurie found the girl standing by the table, ready for the street, her coat fastened, her gloves buttoned.

"Oh, how could you!" she gasped.

"What did he say?"

Laurie summoned the waiter with a gesture and asked for his account.

"Sit down a minute," he suggested, "and tell me who he is."

"Not here," she urged. "I couldn't breathe here. Hurry, please. Let us get away!"

She was so obviously in earnest that he yielded. He paid the bill, which the waiter had ready, accepted that appreciative servitor's help with his overcoat, and escorted his guest from the room.

"But, for heaven's sake, don't run!" he laughed. "Do you want the creature to think we're flying before him?"

She flushed and moderated her pace. Side by side, and quite deliberately, they left the restaurant, while the stranger watched them with his dull, fixed gaze. He seemed to have recovered his temper, but it was also plain that the little encounter had given him something to think about. When he resumed his luncheon he ate slowly and with an air of deep abstraction.

"Working out some grave problem," Laurie mused.

"What name?" asked Laurie.

"Mr. Herbert Ransome Shaw," he said, "into a wait-

She looked startled. Indeed, his most casual questions seemed to startle her and put her, in a way, on her guard.

"Shaw," she answered, unwillingly. "Is it spelled P-s-h-a-w?"

Laurie asked the question with polite interest. Then, realizing that in her preoccupation she did not follow this flight of his mercurial spirits, he sobered. "It's a perfectly good name," he conceded, "but there must be more of it. What's the rest?"

"He calls himself Herbert Ransome Shaw."

Laurie made a mental note of the name.

"I shall call him Bertie," he firmly announced, "to show you how unimportant he really is. By the way—a sudden memory struck him—he told me your name—Doris."

He added the name so simply that he seemed to be calling her by it. A faint shadow of her elusive smile touched her lips.

"I like it—Doris," Laurie repeated, dreamily.

"I am so glad," she murmured.

He ignored the irony in her tone.

"I suppose you have several more, like our friend Bertie, but you needn't tell them to me. If I had to use them every time I spoke to you, it might check my inspiration. Doris will do very nicely. Doris, Doris!"

"Are you making a song of it?"

"Yes, a hymn."

She looked at him curiously.

"You're a queer boy. I can't quite make you out. One minute you're serious, and the next—"

"If you're puzzled over me, picture my mental turmoil over you."

"Oh—me?" With a gesture she consigned herself to the uttermost ends of the universe.

The taxicab had stopped. They had reached the studio building without observing the fact. The expression on the features of the chauffeur suggested that if they wanted to sit all day they could do it, but that it would not be his personal choice. Doris held out her hand.

"Good-by," she said gently. "And thank you. I'm really more appreciative than I seem."

Laurie's look expressed more surprise than he had ever really experienced over anything.

"But we haven't settled matters!" he cried. "We're going to the bank—"

"We are not."

She spoke with sharp decision. Then, relenting at the expression of his face, she touched the heavy gold-and-amber chain around her neck.

"I can pawn this," she said briefly. "It didn't seem worth while before, but as I've got to go on, I promise you I will do it. I will do it today," she added hurriedly, "this afternoon, if you wish. It is valuable. I can get enough on it to keep me for a month."

"Till we find that job for you," he suggested, brightening.

She agreed, with a momentary flash of her wonderful smile.

"And you will let me drop in this evening and take you to dinner?"

"No, thank you. But—" again she relented—"you may come in for an hour at eight."

"I believe you are a crowned head," murmured Laurie, discontentedly. "That's just the way they do in books. When I come I suppose I must speak only when I'm spoken to. And when you suddenly stand up at nine, I'll know the audience is over."

She laughed softly, her red-brown eyes, shining at him. Her laughter was different from any other laughter he had ever heard.

"Good-by," she repeated.

He helped her out of the cab and escorted her into the studio building, where he rang the elevator bell and waited, hat in hand, until the car came down. When it arrived Sam was in it. Before it stopped he had recognized the waiting pair through the open ironwork of the door. To Laurie, the elevator and Sam's jaw seemed to drop in unison.

The next instant the black boy had resumed his habitual expression of indifference to all human interests. Dead-eyed, he stared past the two young things. Dead-eyed, he ignored their moving lips. But there was fellowship in the jocund youth of all three. In an instant when Laurie stepped back into the hall as the car shot upward, the eyes of the negro and white man flashed a question and an answer:

In Sam's: "You done took her out an' fed her?"

In Laurie's: "You bet your boots I did!"

CHAPTER VI

Laurie Solves a Problem

Laurie walked across the square to his own rooms. A sudden gloom had fallen upon him. He saw himself sitting in his study, gazing remotely at his shoes, until it was time to dress for the evening and his formal call on Doris.

The prospect was not attractive. He hoped Bangs would be at home. If so, perhaps he could goad him into one of the rages in which Bangs was so picturesque; but he was not sure of even this mild diversion. Rodney had been wonderfully sweet-tempered the past three days, though preoccupied, as if in the early stages of creative art. Laurie half suspected that he had begun work on his play. The suspicion aroused conflicting emotions of relief and half-jealous regret. Why couldn't the fellow wait till they could go at it together? He ignored the fact that already the fellow had waited six weeks.

Bangs was not at home. The square, set-topped mahogany desk at which the two young men worked together blinked up at Laurie with the undimmed luster of a fine piece of furniture on which the polisher alone had labored that morning. Without taking the trouble to remove his hat and coat, Laurie dropped into a chair and tried to think things out. But the process of thinking—eluded him, or, rather, his mind slid at it as a skittish horse might shy if confronted on a dark road with shapes vaguely familiar yet mysterious.

Frankly, he couldn't make head or tail of this mess Doris seemed to be in. His memory reminded him that such "messes" existed. He had heard and read of all sorts of plots and counter-plots, in which all types of humans figured. His imagination underscored the memory. But, somehow, Doris—he loved to repeat the name even to himself—somehow Doris was not the type that figured in such plots.

Also, there were other things hard to understand. She had let herself starve for four days, though she wore around her neck a chain that she admitted represented a month's support. And this fellow, Herbert Ransome Shaw—where the devil did he come in? A fellow with a name like that and with snaky eyes like his was capable of anything. And yet—

Young Devon had the intolerance of American youth for the things outside his personal experience. The sort of thing Doris was hinting at didn't happen here; that was all there was to it. What was happening seemed pretty clear. The girl was, or fancied herself, in the power of an unscrupulous scamp who was using that power for some purpose of his own. If that was it—and this thing, Laurie handsomely admitted, really did happen sometimes—it ought to be fairly easy for an athletic chap of twenty-four to put an end to it. He recalled the look in Shaw's projecting eyes, the snakelike forward thrust of his sleek head; and an intense desire seized him to get his hands on the fellow's throat and choke him till his eyes stuck out twice as far as they did now. If that were duty, then duty would be a delight.

Having reached this edifying point in his reflections, he rose. Why delay? Perhaps he could find the chap somewhere. Perhaps the waiter at the restaurant where they had lunched knew where he lived. But, no; of course not. It was not the kind of restaurant his sort patronized. Shaw had simply followed him and Doris there; that was all there was to it. He, Laurie, would have to wait for another encounter. Meantime, he might run around to the club and box for an hour. He had been getting a bit out of condition this month. A bout with McDonald, the club trainer, would do him good. Or, by Jove, he'd go and see Louise Ordway!

Save a Tenth

The suggestion to save a tenth of one's income for future use may seem hard to follow, but unless a careful budget of the income has been made, it is most probable that at least this much is spent unnecessarily. Those who spend according to a budget find that their money goes further, waste is reduced to a minimum, and systematic saving becomes a pleasant, easy game. It is certainly worth a trial.

USE SULPHUR TO HEAL YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

HURRICANE IN CUBA CAUSES 650 DEATHS

Thousands Injured and Homeless; Isle of Pines Towns Are Destroyed.

Havana, Cuba.—The four principal towns on the Isle of Pines, south of Cuba, were wiped out by the recent hurricane, according to H. P. McCarthy, A. B. Klam and E. Anderson, who reached Havana. The reports brought to Havana by Eladio N. Villa de Nueva Gerona are that 17 Americans were killed. Total dead was placed at 82, while 100 names were on the list of injured. The steamer Cuba arrived at Batabano with 22 injured. From all the sections of Cuba affected by the storm reports came in which added to the steadily mounting list of dead and injured. It is now estimated that more than 600 persons were killed, about 1,000 injured, and more than 6,500 families were made homeless. It has been estimated that the losses in money total nearly $100,000,000. Many towns, from which meager news came, appear to have been completely wrecked.

Havana, Cuba.—Advises reaching Havana indicated that more than 650 persons perished at various places in the provinces of Havana, Matanzas, Santa Clara and Pinar del Rio in a hurricane which struck the island of Cuba.

Ten municipalities were wiped out and 6,500 persons were rendered homeless. It is thought the material damage will reach nearly $100,000,000. The total number hurt on the island will reach into the thousands.

In Havana alone it is estimated that 200 persons were killed and 1,000 injured and that houses of 3,200 families were destroyed.

The two villages comprising the municipality of Batabano, on the south coast of the island, reported more than 300 dead and both towns destroyed. They were the first upon which the hurricane fell when it came out of the Caribbean sea, and crossed the Isle of Pines.

Bejuco, lying midway between Havana and Batabano, had 30 fatalities. At Gabriel there were 11, Central Campajaro, 8; Guira del Melana, 9; Camp Columbia, 8; Guanabacoa, 8; Matanzas City, 6; and Guines, 8.

Relief committees were immediately formed and more than $100,000 already has been subscribed. Government and private trucks and automobiles were put into service in efforts to reach interior villages. In Havana all the homeless have been given food and shelter.

Fifteen bodies have been taken out of Havana harbor, bringing the total number of known drowned here to 19. Officials believe that 50 or more persons possibly met death in the harbor when the heavy seas and the wind destroyed numerous craft.

Buildings partly razed in Guines included the jail. All the prisoners fled, but shortly afterward 20 returned and surrendered, saying they preferred the jail to the terror of the storm.

E. A. Bonet, Cuban consul general to the Dominican republic, who was a passenger on one of the incoming trains, said that every village along the railway line from Manaca in Santa Clara province westward was seriously damaged. The entire countryside as far as he was able to see on both sides of the track was a wreck.

Havana has a plentiful supply of food and medicine and thus far has been able without difficulty to take care of refugees.

Three large sugar factories in the outlying districts were hard hit by the storm. Central Occidente, a one hundred and fifty-year-old cane grinding plant, was wrecked. Central Esjaro was destroyed with a loss of eight lives and central Toledo was badly damaged.

Among the big industries here which suffered from the storm was the Paragas cigar factory, which was destroyed. It employed 600 cigarmakers. The Aguilaro cigar factory also was destroyed.

The National Manufacturing company was damaged to the extent of $75,000, a paper factory, $80,000, and the Tropical brewery, $40,000.

Harbor Gives Up Bodies; Ex-Convict Is Murderer

Marquette, Mich.—Marquette harbor on Lake Superior, off here, yielded up the bodies of Arvid Erickson and Emil Skoglund, state game wardens, whom Roy Nunn, ex-convict and suspected poacher, confessed slaying when the men attempted to arrest him on September 22.

Nunn was taken to the harbor on the fringe of the Michigan woods and pointed out the spot where he confessed throwing the bodies, after placing them in sacks, which were weighted down with stones.

RIGID U. S. POLICY ON TARIFF PROGRAM

Administration Says American Trade Levies Will Not Be Lowered.

Washington.—Standing squarely back of the doctrine of protection for the United States, the administration in a public statement soon will define its attitude toward the bankers' manifesto against world trade barriers. This statement will be issued by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, and will take the position that this government views the manifesto as applying to Europe and not to this country. President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon conferred recently over the matter. Both are in accord on the idea that the American tariff is not to be lowered. Secretary Mellon told the President he regarded the manifestos sound so far as it applies to trade barriers and restrictions of Europe.

Moreover, Secretary Mellon flatly and with considerable feeling denied reports, which he said emanated from Berlin, that he had been consulted about it abroad, and implying that he was in sympathy with it.

While the administration was taking steps to make it entirely plain where it stands, Julius H. Barnes, American vice president of the chamber of commerce, and chairman of the committee on trade barriers of the American section of the International Chamber, gave out a statement explaining that the manifesto was not aimed at the American tariff.

It was disclosed that the American section, through a report of the committee on trade barriers, had formulated a report saying American business and labor had reached the studied decision that American living standards must be protected and any action to lower them would have an "unfortunate effect."

But although the government will take the position the manifesto applies to Europe and not the United States, the fact remains that a large section of congress favorable to protection is convinced the manifesto and the Lamont declaration for debt cancellation are linked up, and that the international bankers are seeking to force a lowering of American tariff rates. Unquestionably, the manifesto will come under hot fire when congress meets regardless of protestations that it was not intended to affect the American tariff.

In his conference with President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon told the President he had not seen the manifesto before publication and that he had not been consulted about it by any of the signers, European or American. He felt certain, however, it was intended to apply to Europe.

French Riviera Scene of Record Land Boom

Nice.—Frenzied speculation, never surpassed even in the hectic days of the Florida land boom, has struck the French Riviera. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being lost and made in a wild scramble for land from Toulon to Mentone.

The English are in the majority among speculators, but Frenchmen, Germans, Americans and Spaniards are taking advantage of the unprecedented rise in land values.

Every kilometer on the Corniche road between Cannes and Monte Carlo is littered with huge posters advertising lots for sale.

At Venice, Grasse and Saint Raphael, the same speculation is in progress.

Quakes Rock San Francisco

San Francisco, Calif.—San Francisco residents were awakened by earthquake shocks that startled the guests of the downtown hotels. Not a building in the city, even of the oldest and finest construction, was damaged except for a few broken windows and cracked plaster.

Chicago's $22,000,000 Drive

Chicago.—Wacker drive, the city's new $22,000,000 thoroughfare, said by Chicago plan experts to be the first link in a system of boulevards flanking the river for miles, is now open to the public.

Ship Beard Wants $18,900,000

Washington.—The shipping board and fleet corporation will ask the director of the budget for $18,900,000 to maintain the government fleet for the next fiscal year.

Beaded-Tiered Skirt Features Evening Gown

Cloths of silver and gold and metallic brocades are the mediums through which exquisite evening gowns are being fashioned this winter. Combined with velvet of contrasting colored material, this combination forms one of the outstanding modes of the season. At the Paris openings recently many of the new models introduced combined bodices of metallic cloth with skirts of velvet.

This gown, worn by Kathleen Key in "The Temptress," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, is a straight-line model with a top of silver cloth cut to form a deep V down to the waist in front. The skirt is of black and silver beading in tiered effect. A silver slip forms the deep vest in front and is permitted to gleam through the parted skirt.

HOLDING A JOB

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

A VERY wealthy friend of mine once made the statement to me that nothing in the world is so easy of accomplishment as the making of money.

"Any one can make money," he asserted, "who makes up his mind to do so."

My own opinion is that there is nothing so easy as holding a job. The average employer is looked upon as hard-boiled, hard-hearted, standing as it were with the official ax in his hand ready to sever the connection between himself and his employee.

Quite the contrary is usually true. Nothing takes more nerve than is required to fire a man, unless something comes up that is unusual or unbearable or that brings about a crisis. We have all kept on incompetent men whose work was unsatisfactory simply because we could not muster nerve to tell them the truth.

I could name a man now who has held the same job for 25 years. He has scarcely had a raise in salary during that time, while men who are holding similar positions with the same firm, men who entered the employ of the firm, too, long since he did, are getting twice his salary. The head of the house has been hoping for 20 years that the man would go into some other business or that he would find employment with another firm. He would like to dismiss him but he hasn't the courage to do it, so he keeps on praying that the man will resign. His hope is unfounded, however, for if he did give up his present job he would find great difficulty in getting another as good.

There are too many men holding jobs who are not good enough to promote and who are just too good to fire. They hold on to the same job year after year with no progress and no chance of any.

An ambitious man is not going to be satisfied merely to hold a job. He should try to be so capable, so efficient that the job he is holding will enlarge itself or else not be able to hold him. He should make his job something different, something better, something more important than it was when he took it. Every job should be an opportunity.

Years ago a young fellow came to the little town near which I was living to take a rather humble job with the railroad company. It wasn't a hard job nor a difficult one to fill. He had no difficulty in holding it, but he had a vision, he saw an opportunity and very shortly the job could not hold him. He was too big for it, and the company realized this fact, and gave him another one to hold. During all these years he has not concerned himself greatly with holding a job—and he has had first one and then another—as in making himself too important for it. He is one of the outstanding men of the company at this time and pretty largely because he has been too ambitious to let a job hold him.

What a Man Reads

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK, Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

MRS. BELTON, our neighbor for a time, used to make the statement that she could correctly judge a woman's taste and education by examining the rugs on her floors. I should not want to be so sure of this myself, but you can tell a good deal about a man if you know what he is in the habit of reading.

I hadn't seen Scoville for a good many years until last spring. I had known him pretty well in college. He had taken certain prizes in public speaking; his grades in literature were high, and he made Phi Beta Kappa, in his senior year. There wasn't any doubt about his having a good brain, and so far as financial accomplishment is concerned, he had succeeded admirably.

When I had talked to him a while at our last meeting he gave me the impression that he was rather shallow. He could talk about his business, but he was not interested in current events. He knew nothing about politics or foreign affairs or the labor situation, and when it came to an opinion on relief for the farmers he was a minus quantity.

"What do you think of the Forsyte Saga?" I asked him. I had been carried away with it myself and wondered what a business man would think of it.

"I don't know," he said, "What is it?"

He didn't know whether it was prose or poetry, a treatise on Norse mythology or a remedy for galtonias. I soon discovered that Scoville only scanned the newspapers to see what the current prices were on the articles with which his business was concerned. He read neither history nor biography; he was acquainted with neither poetry nor fiction, and politics and science were to him foreign tongues. Occasionally he read a light magazine, and that was all.

Every intelligent person should form the habit of reading and should have books and magazines enough around to tempt him to do so. He should be familiar with what is being discussed in the newspapers in order to know how the world is going. He should read the literature of his own profession or business so as not to be too far behind the times.

More than this, however, every man should know something of literature and poetry and biography and history, and he should know these things not only for the pleasure they will give him, but for the sake of what they will mean to his friends. General intelligence requires it.

What a man reads is a measure of his education, of his taste and of his breadth of view. The man who does not read, grows narrow and ignorant.

Scoville had a good start when he was young, but when he stopped reading, he began to stagnate and to become commonplace.

Ludington—More than 2,000 young small-mouth bass were taken from the Bason County nursery and planted in lakes. The local Walton chapter planted 80,000 bass in the nursery last June and they have grown considerably since, but officials expressed the belief that many of the bass had been killed by the adult fish.

Detroit—Detroit has become one of the great money centers of the world, judging by the report of bank deposits as of June 30, last. The figures reveal that the total bank deposits of the city at that date amounted to $800,974,702.05. Of this amount $585,872,530.47 was in state banks, and $215,602,171.58 in national banks.

Lansing—With the new contracts just let the Michigan Highway System now represents an expenditure of $200,000,000. Michigan has 7,000 miles of state trunk line, 30,290 miles of county roads and 57,290 miles of township roads of which 21,000 miles are improved roads, 2,200 miles being paved and 16,000 miles of gravel road.

East Lansing—Michigan State College forestry department recently has completed a shipment of 20,000 white pines to the Dunbar Forestry reserve in the upper peninsula for field-planting on cut over land. This will represent the contribution which Michigan State college will make this fall toward the reforestation of devastated areas.

Kalamazoo—Debate Coach Carroll P. Lahman, of Western State Normal school, has chosen the squad from which will be picked the team to meet the Sidney, Australia, team in the international debate here November 18. This Australian team meets only two other schools in Michigan, Albion college and the University of Michigan.

Ann Arbor—Regent L. L. Hubbard of the University of Michigan, has given 650 volumes of "Gulliver's Travels" to the general library here. Regent Hubbard recently gave the library 3,000 volumes of fictitious travels and voyager. Of these, 1,200 are editions of "Robinson Crusoe." Original copies of the first five editions of "Gulliver's Travels," dating from 1726, are on display at the library.

Grand Rapids—Superintendent of State Parks, P. J. Hoffmaster has notified Secretary H. J. Gray of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, that all state park records of Michigan were shattered during the 1926 season when 3,500,000 tourists made use of these preserves. This was the largest number in the history of the state. Of the 48 states, 48 have state parks and Michigan, with 57, is in second place to New York, which has 64 state parks.

Houghton—Capturing timber wolves rodeo fashion is the boast of Edward Gilstrom, Ontonagon County state trooper, whose feats are attested by the occasional display of a wolf captured alive. The spectacle of a 60-pound wolf reposing in the arms of its captor was paraded to the gaze of Houghton people recently by Gilstrom, who stroked the head of the animal as if it were a kitten. The docility, however, was due to the fact that Gilstrom had its mouth and feet securely bound with haywire.
