Profitable Canning Crops

Much Interest Shown in Canning Factory Meeting Last Friday.

The meeting held at East Jordan last Friday night for the benefit of growers, who are raising crops for the Canning Factory, was attended by fifty-five interested farmers.

Prof. G. E. Starr, the main speaker, gave a talk that was wonderfully instructive and helpful. Anticipating the additional facilities for canning small fruits and vegetables, each of the crops were discussed in detail. Prof. Starr spoke very optimistically of the prospects of Raspberries, String Beans, Beets, and Sweet Corn, as profitable crops to raise for the factory.

The speaker spoke for some length on the subject of quality, which is the deciding factor between success and failure and mentioned that the canned goods market has never been glutted with good quality goods, but rather with poorly packed cans. Many new varieties have been developed in the past two or three years, as well as new strains of the same variety and it is up to the factory, officials to demand of their grower the right varieties.

The success made by the factory at East Jordan the first year should lead many farmers to begin thinking about the future that this new industry means to the community and with additional equipment another year, they will be able to serve a larger field of activity. But don't forget the access is equally divided between the grower and the management of the factory and that means study, thought and effort.

Lyceum Course Presented By H. S. Senior Class

By purchasing a season ticket you do yourself an extra good turn, besides giving encouragement to those public spirited students who are working hard to try to make this community a better place to live in. Because people like music and peppy entertainments, we have endeavored to give you what you like. As to quantity and quality the entertainment was carefully selected. Do not feel that you are giving your money away, for this is not a begging proposition. The sales are well on their way—further purchases will go directly into the spirit of your school. We urge you, for the benefits derived, to take in every number possible.

Agricultural Honors

The Agricultural Department of East Jordan High School was represented at the Northwestern Michigan Fair by five boys. In the Poultry judging contest there were forty-four contestants in which James Gleason placed second, Harold Clark ninth and Clayton Monday eleventh. In the fruit judging Harold Clark took high honors with first place. In the grain judging results East Jordan was also represented by Harold Clark who tied for fourth place. Cash prizes were won by James Gleason in poultry and Harold Clark in fruit. The other boys that made the trip were Arnold Smith and Eddie Omland.

Charlevoix—Word has been received by the Charlevoix Association of Commerce and Charles Emrey, county clerk, that the name of Pine Lake, which adjoins this city, has been changed to Lake Charlevoix. The action now is official, as the change has been approved by the United States geographic board. The change was made at the request of the Charlevoix board of supervisors, who pointed out that there are so many lakes in this state named Pine lake that confusion results.

Detroit—There are 1,866,770 automobile tires and 3,485,310 inner tubes in various tire shops of the country waiting to be placed on automobiles, a survey of the tire industry and merchandising completed by the department of commerce shows. Returns were obtained from 37,439 tire dealers, of whom 1,450 are in Michigan. Michigan has on hand 77,381 tires, an average of 53.4 for each dealer; and 146,618 inner tubes, an average of 102.4 for each dealer. Of the tires on hand, 24,446 are balloons.

Sault Ste. Marie—The steel lighter Michigan Central, valued at $250,000 sank mysteriously in deep water off Murbit Head Point, Drummond Island near here recently with a load of 1,800 tons of stone. The 10 members of the crew escaped and were rescued by the tug General which answered signals from the swamping vessel. The Michigan Central was one of the finest stone barges on the lakes, having been remodeled from a railroad car ferry four years ago at a cost of 200,000 and containing $80,000 in machinery.

Ann Arbor—Prof. William J. Hussey, noted astronomer and director of the observatory at the University of Michigan, died in London recently, while en route to Bloemfontein, South Africa, to establish a university observatory station there. Prof. Hussey was one of the most widely known scientific men in the United States, being listed among the 1,000 greatest American scientists. He was noted for his research expeditions and spent years preparing to set up the 27-inch Lamont telescope which had been shipped in advance to South Africa.

IN MEMORIAM

To the loving memory of our fellow student and friend, Allan Green, we—the students and teachers of East Jordan High School—dedicate this column.

We, the students of East Jordan High School, wish in this way to commemorate the memory of our loved and respected schoolmate, Allan Green. His school life will ever stand before us an incentive for honesty and uprightness. He was a willing worker in our school, an active member of the Sophomore Class, and a valued musician in the band, in which he played the Sousaphone. His life showed willingness and earnestness accompanied by a joy in living.

We wish to extend our sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Green and family. May they find some measure of comfort in the fact that Allan was one of God's noblemen.

THE STUDENTS.

When the tender arms of God reached forth and gathered to his breast the form of Allan Green, a vacant chair was left that no one else can ever fill. It stands there in its emptiness, ever reminding us of the boy he was.

A story is told of an angel who came down to the earth to visit the birds and flowers. It was requested by the master that the angel bring back to him the loveliest flower he met. The angel visited all of the beautiful woods and ardens, meeting in his journeys, the rose, the lilac, the primrose—all the lovely flowers that grew. Finally he came upon a bed of violets, nestling in the blanket of moss over the grave of a little child. When questioned by the angel as to their occupation, the violets replied that they were singing all their sweetest songs to the babe, lest it grow lonely. The angel completed his visit on earth, and when he returned to his heavenly home, he carried next to his heart, as the precious gift to his master, a little violet.

Allan Green's life on earth was not unlike that of the flower. His simplicity, his faithfulness, the love he put into his work and the joy he received from it, are the things we remember as outstanding about him. His face always wore a smile; his work was his source of joy. He did the best that he knew how, without once seeking praise or personal glory. He represented ideal youth, rich in promise.

Though he has gone, we have not forgotten; in memories we shall meet again, he crowned with the glory that is his, the violet of his land.

THE FACULTY.

Lansing—The annual report of the State Bureau of Dairying showed there were 407 milk distributing plants in the State at the close of the fiscal year. Milk condensers totaled 32. Their output showed a slight decrease. The production of condensed products was: Sweetened condensed milk, 43,592,143 pounds; powdered milk and cream, 8,995,000 pounds; bulk condensed milk, 24,648,000 pounds; evaporated milk, 22,337,000 pounds.

Greenville—Farm mortgages moldy with age are being burned, old debts on the verge of being outlawed are being paid, new automobiles are being purchased and business in general is good in potato land, according to reports reaching Greenville—the potato capital of Michigan. While the acreage was not large, the yield on each acre has been good and prices have been better than most farmers expected. Many fields have yielded 300 bushels an acre and some more than 500 bushels.

Club Leader Visits County

Nine Rural Schools Interested in State Club Work.

A. G. Kettunen, State Boys' and Girls' Club Leader and Miss Ruth Featherly, of the State College, spent Nov. 4th and 5th in Charlevoix County, visiting several schools, that were interested in carrying on Club Work this winter.

For the girls, Sewing Clubs were discussed and outlined and for the boys, Handicraft Clubs. In all cases the boys and girls were very interested and desirous of organizing immediately to begin work.

The members of the Sewing Clubs will make several articles this winter such as sewing bags, kimonos, aprons, dresses, etc., while the boys will make many useful articles, such as bench hooks, the racks, milk stools, book racks, nail boxes, bird houses and numerous other articles.

Then early in the Spring each school will hold a local Achievement Day at which time all the articles will be exhibited and judged and the local champion selected. Later a County Achievement Day will be held and the County Champion chosen, who will represent the Co. at the Gaylord Club Camp.

In the City Schools sewing and manual training are usually included in the curriculum, but rural boys and girls do not have this privilege, hence we believe in club work, which tends to overcome this handicap.

The following schools were visited and it is hoped that 75 boys and girls will make up the membership.

Miss Lottie Webster, Hilton School, Charlevoix.
Mr. Duffey, Phelps School, Phelps.

Miss Irene Bruce, Burgess school, Charlevoix.

Miss Helen Carmond, Bay Shore school, Bay Shore.

Mr. W. C. Palmer, Clarion school, Clarion.

Miss Vera Belding, Peninsula, East Jordan.

Mrs. Cora Willis, Chandler, Boyne Falls.

Miss Frances Gould, Star school, East Jordan.

Miss Marguerite Scheffers, Wildwood school, Boyne City.

Pays It's Own Way

How Our High School Athletic Program is Financed.

Recently one of our business men was inquiring how our high school athletic program was financed. The school is proud of the fact that it pays its own way. The three costs in connection with an athletic program in high school are: first, equipment; second, officials, and third, transportation.

For any team to compete successfully suitable equipment is essential. Properly togged for a game a football player takes little risk of being hurt or injured and because he is prepared he can play a much better game while if he is not properly equipped there is a risk of injury which might be many times more expensive than the equipment saved.

Next is the cost of officials. This is also a necessary expense. Clean athletics, fair play, a square deal and honorable competition between towns and schools depends in a large measure upon the official engaged. Coaches may encourage and demand fair play from their own teams, but the only assurance they have of fair competition from the other team after the game starts must come through the official. If the spirit of fair play is not shown by both teams one has an unfair advantage, hatred creeps in between towns and schools, the "honor of the playing field" is violated and all the worthy aims of high school athletics and character building are sacrificed.

The State Athletic Association recommends officials of repute and standing in educational circles and lends every encouragement to help schools secure them at as low a price as possible.

The last cost in a successful athletic program is transportation. This is governed by the number of games played, distance away, number of men carried and method of transportation. To make a high school athletic program pay its own way very careful management and the most exacting economy is required.

Mancelona Defeated 38-0

Last Game of Season Proves to be Best Played Game by Locals.

The East Jordan Football team took the field at the Fair Grounds last Saturday for their last game of the season, winning from Mancelona 38-0. The game being the last for some of the players seemed to bear significance of such as it was a well played game and better teamwork and generalship were well above standard.

The game started off with a flash after a few punts by each side. Barnett, finding himself for the first time this season, was the outstanding ground gainer. He received a pass soon after the opening of the game and ran forty yards to a touchdown. He also made consistent gains off tackle and by one of them scored another touchdown after dodging and running sixty yards.

The play of the team as a whole was good. Danforth especially opened large holes at tackle, making it possible for long runs. On defense the line was impregnable, Mancelona only making small gains from off-tackle plays. In the backfield the variety of attacks used by Taylor in calling plays is shown by the fact that each man scored a touchdown.

This game marked the ending of the high school careers of Captain Danforth, Jim Gleason, Ed. Carr, Whiteford, and Amberg, a group of players whose loss will be keenly felt next year.

Our school has tried to furnish satisfactory equipment and reliable officials. In order to finance its program it has often been necessary to ask pupils on the team and citizens to furnish cars and our townspeople have responded in a fine way. This is an economy we have been required to practice every time possible.

The only means of financing our teams is through receipts from games and what money the school can earn through such means as benefit shows, such as Mr. Thomas, Manager of the Temple Theatre, was kind enough to sponsor earlier in the season. Our admission charge this year was very low, a season ticket of four games for fifty cents to students, and one dollar to outsiders. In larger cities a much larger admission fee is charged, which with their large attendance makes the financial problem in larger schools very simple, and in the smaller town schools very difficult.

We have an excellent coach in Mr. Harry Lee. Our teams are well equipped when they go on the field and reliable officials are engaged, so our team will represent our town and our school in a creditable manner.

We do appreciate your past attendance at our games and hope that you will continue to make our athletic program pay its own way, command and inspire the respect of our neighboring towns, and build character in the boys who participate.

Autoists would like to know who put the "to" in detour.

November brings us Armistice Day, Thanksgiving and the Red Cross Roll Call. There are some people who see little significance in any of them.

Our extra slice of pie for this week is awarded to the young lady who married the young man to reform him, and then let him reform her.

Whenever a man happens to be behind in his work, which is the major portion of the time, somebody is certain to drop in for a chat, that lasts an hour.

Monroe—John Michael Gottfried 98 years old, pioneer railroad section foreman, who has been a resident of this city since he was 19 years old, voted during the recent election through an absent voter's ballot. He is a Democrat. Mr. Gottfried cast his first vote in 1852.

Bay City—The shipments of sugar beets being imported by the local sugar factories from Canada are becoming larger with each succeeding day of the campaign. At the present rate the beet importations for this year will far exceed the quantity imported from Canada during any previous year.

Ann Arbor—Prof. Richard A. Rositter of the astronomy department will take the place of Prof. William J. Hussey in establishing a university telescope in South Africa, was announced recently by Dr. Clarence C. Little, president. Professor Hussey died in London recently while on his way to South Africa.

Kalamazoo—Kalamazoo's youngest burglar-suspect, 8 years old, placed under arrest here recently, presented a problem to the authorities in regard to the disposition of his case. He was apprehended after he left a store in which he had taken several watches and a small amount of change. He was armed with a butcher knife.

East Lansing—The new $600,000 chemistry building of the Michigan State College has been dedicated recently. The building will be called the Kedzie Building in honor of Dr. R. C. Kedzie, late head of the department. Impressive ceremonies marked the laying of the cornerstone, which contained a number of experiments worked out by the chemistry department sealed in the stone.

Marquette—Lila Mary Tolman, 3 years old, and Orval Tolman, 1 year old, children of Mr. and Mrs. Orval Tolman, residents of Sands Township, were burned to death recently when fire of undetermined origin destroyed their home near the Sands sawmill. The fire broke out when the mother went to a neighbor's home to borrow a wash tub. On her return she saw her home in flames and was unable to save the infants.

Saginaw—Ace Park, home of the Michigan State League, may be lost as a base ball park. Arthur Clements, president of the club, has leased the park to the Fordney Petroleum Company for oil well drilling, with the stipulation that the drilling must start at once and the drillers must be out of the park by March 1 if no oil is found. But the chances of finding oil are considered good, since property adjoining it to the north has developed oil and has been successfully drilled.

Port Huron—A United States Lake Survey boat, 150 feet long, sank at the dock of the Port Crescent Sand & Gravel Co., just north of Pointe Aux Barques, during the storm that swept the lakes recently. The officers and crew of eight men saved themselves by jumping to the dock. The accident occurred when a large wave lifted the boat and hurled it against the dock, crushing the craft and damaging the dock. The damaged boat sank soon after, those on board scrambled ashore.

Hart—While digging potatoes a farmer of Perry Township, unearthed what are believed to be fragments of the jaws of a prehistoric reptile of the dinosaur type. Of the 14 pieces found, one appeared to be the complete side of a jaw, with all the teeth in good condition. The jaw bone is about 10 inches long, 3 inches wide and 2 inches thick, the teeth being attached to a shell-like bone and apparently in five sets of two teeth each side by side. The piece weighed three and three-fourths pounds.

Benton Harbor—Mrs. Fern Whitt-right, 21 years old, mother of two children, residing on a farm near the edge of the city, east of here, was burned to death recently when she was enveloped in flames after an explosion wrecked the kitchen. She had poured kerosene on a stove fire.

GREAT YEARS IN THE NATION'S HISTORY.

Interesting things have happened in 1926. Commander Byrd in a Fokker airplane, circled the North Pole. Photographs taken in Europe were transmitted on radio waves to America, and published in newspapers a few hours later. Gertrude Ederle, daughter of a New York butcher, swam the English Channel one hour faster than any of the five men who had swum it before her.

Is anything interesting going to happen in 1927?
For one thing, the Youth's Companion on April 16, will celebrate its HUNDRETH BIRTHDAY. During 1927, the Companion will contain more interesting reading than ever before during its century of successful life. Consider what you will get for $2.00—52 issues, containing 9 book length serials, 260 short stories by the most popular authors, more than 100 special articles, a weekly section for ingenious boys, called the "Y. C. Lab," a thorough girls' department, and 52 pages for children. Also in each issue, an extensive survey of current events, making it easy for you to follow the affairs of this busy world.

Don't miss the greatest year of a great magazine. Subscribe now, and receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—52 issues in 1927, and
2. The remaining issues of 1926. All for only $2.
3. Or include McCall's Magazine, the monthly authority on fashions. Both publications, only $2.50.

OPPOSE LIMITATION OF ARMY RESERVES

United States' Hopes Wrecked by Latest League Powers' Joint Action.

Geneva.—Commercial fleets, trained reserves of armies, navies and air services, and war materials in reserve belong to "war potentials" and therefore are incapable of limitation or disarmament, according to an official declaration by nine delegations of the seventeen nations represented on the disarmament preparatory commission of the League of Nations, concluding their deliberations on naval questions.

The pronouncement places Italy, France, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Belgium, Japan, Yugoslavia and Argentina on record as opposing limitation of these obvious war factors.

The American delegation spokesmen do not conceal their pessimism over the final developments of the subcommittee's labors, and in the opinion of the Americans and other delegations, this last decision makes the incentive for calling a plenary disarmament conference, virtually nil, since it represents the official view of a majority of the governments.

By unanimous approval the preparatory commission, after long discussions last summer, decided that war potentials were not limitable, because they included economic resources, man power and other factors impossible to limit. But the decision of the nine delegations that trained reserves and war supplies belong in the same category leaves only actual soldiers, armaments and equipment being regularly used as disarmament and limitable.

While the French bloc, reinforced by Argentina and Japan, submitted the above declaration, the other delegations—Great Britain, the United States, Spain, Chile, Germany, Finland, Sweden and Holland—put forward the opposite viewpoint.

Both views will be included in the recommendations to the plenary preparatory committee, which is expected to meet in February or March.

The Americans regard the declaration of the French bloc as equivalent to limiting the scope of the future international conference so as to establish only the status quo of existing war forces.

The recommendations of the mixed committee, just concluding its Paris session, also seem unfavorable to the United States. The mixed commission's findings urge limitation on the basis of the war and navy budgets, which the American delegates say would work proportional injustice, since the American soldiers and sailors are highly paid. The French get five centimes a day, or less than one cent.

France Must Pay U. S. $435,000,000 by 1930

Paris.—Before the end of 1929, France must pay the United States $435,000,000 on obligations other than war debts. This was revealed in a report issued by the Poincare financial commission, in which all payments to be made by the republic within the period indicated, are itemized.

Other creditors in addition to the United States include Great Britain, Switzerland and Uruguay. This year the latter country will receive 1,000,000 gold pesos and 300,000 in 1927 and 1928 each.

The French ambassador to Washington, M. Berenger, announced after the termination of a conference with Foreign Minister Briand and members of the cabinet that he would return to the United States shortly.

Wide Power Is Given President in Ruling

Washington.—The President of the U. S. may discharge executive appointees of all kinds, including postmasters, from office without the consent of the senate. This was the ruling of the United States Supreme court in writing this to the famous case in which President Wilson removed Postmaster Myers of Portland, Ore. Federal statutes which have previously been regarded as withholding such power from the President are void, according to the court's majority opinion, signed by Chief Justice Taft.

In the host's, however, things assumed a different aspect. Still firmly holding Hullen R. J. by the leg, and keeping a steadfast eye on the surgeon, Samuel took in his immediate surroundings with a dawning suspicion in his soul. Having two men throw light on his face and look down his throat had lost its novelty, though Sonya had assured him that wonderful views were to be seen there which he alone could reveal. Also, the men seemed hurried, and didn't want to look at Hullen R. J.'s throat, though Samuel warmly recommended this variety in the entertainment.

In short, the situation had become sinister. The smiles around him were dreadful-looking things, all except Laurie's. With an appalling howl Samuel detached himself from the surgeon's grasp and fled to Laurie, who picked him up and held him firmly and comfortably in his lap until a lady in white came with something nice for Samuel to smell.

The next thing Samuel knew was that he was in bed in a strange room. He gulped and discovered that his throat was sore. He sat up, distended his mouth for a yell, and then very slowly closed it.

From every corner of the room familiar figures were hastening to his side. The lady in white, Sonya, and his mother all reached him at the same moment. On the pillow beside him Hullen R. J. awaited the honor of his attention like a perfect lady. No howls from her, as Sonya immediately pointed out. As she thus soothed, Sonya was kissing him. The lady in white was offering him something pleasant to drink. His mother was patting his back.

For a long instant Samuel took in the gratifying fact of these activities. Then he asserted his features, grabbed Hullen R. J. exchanged his yell for a large smile, and permitted himself to be waited on. Deep in his masculine consciousness he had realized that his world was normal again.

Bangs and Laurie walked up Fifth avenue together, stopping at a florist's to purchase the man's entire supply of roses for Mrs. Ordway. Bangs also discovered some masses of poinsettia and chrysanthemums that, as he said, "looked like her." Laden with these spoils, they took a taxicab to the Ordway house, where they found Jepson exuding an atmosphere of reassurance.

Yes, Mrs. Ordway seemed better. She had a more restful night, than Susanne said was quite bright this morning. Her course she'd see Mr. Devon, hand probably Mr. Bangs, halo. Jepson would hark at once.

Jepson moved ponderously away to do so, while Rodney, opening his big box in the hall, drew out the poinsettia and chrysanthemums and proceeded to arrange them in a gorgeous, splendid Bangs had unexpected taste in color and arrangement, as Epstein's stage-directors had discovered in the past. Laurie watched him with polite interest.

"Making a picture of yourself, aren't you?" he asked. "Going into the sick-room with your little hands full of flowers?" But even as he scoffed he was unwrapping his own flowers. Bangs was right. The act of handing a pasteboard box to a sick friend lacked esthetic value.

Jepson returned with a cordial message from the doctor.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowley Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

to see both young men, but she received only one visitor at a time. Would Mr. Bangs come up now? And perhaps Mr. Devon would drop in again during the afternoon or evening.

Rodney grasped his floral offerings and mounted the stairs two steps at a time. He was excited and his brown eyes showed it. It was most awfully good of Mrs. Ordway to let him come up in this informal way. Standing by the chaise longue where she lay, he told her so, his arbutum head shining among the flowers he carried, like a particularly large chrysanthemum. Then, selecting some empty vases, he sat down on the floor beside her and began to arrange his flowers, while she watched him; at first with surprise, then with growing admiration.

Rodney had no social airs and graces, no prior tricks. If he had been formally sitting on a chair, holding his hat, he would have been a self-conscious and unhappy young man. As it was, with hands and eyes busy, and wholly at his ease, he talked his exuberant best.

"How about Laurie's romance?" Louise asked at once.

Bangs told her about the vision in the mirror. As he did so, luncheon was served, and he was casually invited to share it. Susanne, moving shuttle-like between the table in the sick-room and the dumb-waiter in the upper hall, presently confided to a young footman a surprising piece of news, which he in turn confided to the incredulous Jepson. Young Mr. Bangs, who was lunching with Mrs. Ordway, must be as amusing as young Mr. Devon himself. He had actually made the mistress laugh both times he came, she was laughing now, as Susanne had not heard her laugh for weeks. To be sure, this was one of her good days. But it wasn't easy to amuse Mrs. Ordway at any time.

Jepson summed up the situation in an oracular utterance:

"Henny one that's a friend of Mr. Devon's his hall right."

When Rodney was leaving Jepson's mistress expressed the same thought to her guest in a different way.

"Come often," she said. "You have given me a new interest. I don't think you can quite realize what that means to me."

When Sonya arrived at five that afternoon, she found Jepson still exuding reassurance. With two doctors within call, a nurse in the house, and Mr. Devon and Miss Orioleff to telephone to at a moment's notice, "nothing much could happen." So reasoned Jepson. He beamed approvingly on Sonya, informed her that Mr. Devon was in the sick-room now, and waved her through the hall with an effect of benediction.

She found Laurie just leaving, and they had a moment's chat on the upper landing. Mrs. Ordway, he told her, was rather restless this afternoon, but she seemed better than she had been yesterday. However, he didn't like her looks at all, and he fancied the nurse was disturbed. Suppose Sonya sounded Louise about cabling for Warren? Surely Warren would want to know, Laurie thought.

For the moment Laurie's striking good looks were slightly dimmed. He was hollow-eyed, almost haggard. Things were coming just a bit too fast for him. The habit of carrying the burden of others had been taken on too suddenly. Under the strain of it, his untrained mental muscles ached.

It was the irony of fate that Sonya, looking at him with the clear brown eyes that were so much softer than Bangs', and so much less beautiful than Doris', should misinterpret his appearance, his emotion, and his reaction from the high spirits of the morning. He was again going the pace, she decided, and mingled with her pity for him, rose the scorn of a strong soul that was the absolute master of the body in which it dwelt.

His newly aroused perception carried some hint of this scorn to the boy, covered though it was by the friendliness of Sonya's manner. The knowledge added to his wretchedness. He had a childish desire to explain, but he conquered it and hurried away. Some day, if not now, Sonya would understand.

What he himself did not understand was the long slide he had taken in the moment when he felt and resented her unspoken criticism. Heretofore his attitude had been one of expressed and sincere indifference to the opinions others held of him. He wanted them to like him, but he didn't care a hang whether or not they approved of him. Now, suddenly, he wanted Sonya's respect as well as her liking. The discovery added to his mental confusion.

If Sonya, when she entered the sick-room, was shocked by the change in the appearance of her new friend, she showed no sign of it. Sitting down beside the chaise longue, she entered briskly upon a description of the recent experiences of Samuel.

When she left the hospital the house surgeon was obediently endeavoring to look down the throat of Hullen R. J., and every nurse on Samuel's floor was scuttering in and out of his room. Nevertheless the infant, though graciously accepting these attentions, had demanded and received Sonya's personal assurance that the particular game of the morning was not to be repeated. There was an unpleasant element in that game which grown-ups might not notice but which he, Samuel, had caught on to.

Louise laughed and expressed a hope that Samuel would now be able to breathe without disturbing his neighbors. Sonya came to the real purpose of her visit.

"He and his mother are going back to Devon house Saturday," she said, "but I've got to stay in New York for a few months, on account of my literary galimipings. I wondered if you— if it would be convenient for you—to put me up. I hate hotels and—"

Louise lay silent for a moment. Then she reached out and took Sonya's hand.

"Yes, you unskillful prevaricator," she said. "You may come—and see me through."

Sonya held the hand tightly in her own.

"There's one thing more," she went on, hesitatingly. "Laurie and Mr. Bangs and I wondered if perhaps you wouldn't feel more comfortable if Mr. Warren came home. You know he himself would want to."

Louise closed her eyes.

"Yes," she said, "Bob would want to, if he knew."

She was silent for so long that Sonya began to think she was not to have the answer to her question. Perhaps Mrs. Ordway was leaving the decision to her.

But to leave to others decisions that concerned herself was not Louise Ordway's habit. Instead, she was fighting a battle in which the lifelong devotion of a supremely self-centered nature was struggling with a newborn unselfishness. Though newborn it was strong, as the invalid's next words showed.

"If I were calling him back from anything but his honeymoon," she said at last. "I'd do it. But he's utterly happy. His letters show that, in every line. I want him to stay so, as long as he can. I want his honeymoon to be long drawn out and perfect." Her manner changed.

"I have an idea that perhaps, after all, I'll be here when he gets back," she added more lightly. "Life still has its interests. But, if I happen not to be here, tell him why I didn't cable."

"I will tell him," Sonya promised.

Neither of them referred to the subject again.

CHAPTER IX

An Invitation

That evening Laurie walked across the square to Doris' studio with a decision in his stride which definitely expressed his mental attitude. He had come to the conclusion that something must be done. What this something would be was still hazy in his mind, but the first step at least seemed clear. Doris must move.

He was so convinced of the urgency of this step that he brought up the subject almost before the greetings of guest and hostess were over. Tossing his hat and coat on a convenient chair, he stood facing Doris, his hands in his pockets, his black eyes somber.

"We've got to get out of this, you know," he abruptly announced.

Her eyes, which had brightened at his entrance, grew as somber as his own. Without replying, she turned, walked across the room to the window, and stood looking down into the street.

"Is he there?" she asked at last, and without moving her head.

"Shaw? Great Scott, no! At least I didn't see him. I suppose he takes a few hours off now and then, during the twenty-four; doesn't he?"

"Oh, yes, he comes and goes, sometimes secretly, sometimes openly. I did not see him at all today until late this afternoon. Then he took up his post across the street just opposite this window, and stood there for almost an hour."

Laurie ground his teeth.

"What does he expect to gain by that performance?"

"Several things, I suppose. For one, he wants to get on my nerves; and he does," she added somberly, and still without vailing.

"If I Moved, How Long Do You Think It Would Take Him to Find Me?"

Laurie made a vague tour around the room and brought up by her side. "You know," he confessed, "I haven't really taken this thing in yet. Even now, this minute, it doesn't seem possible to me that Shaw could do you any real harm."

She nodded. "I know. Why should I? Even to me it is like a nightmare. You part is to be feminine and rush briskly back and forth, offering me things I don't want. And at the last moment," he added gloomily, "you may tell me that there isn't a lemon in the place." He looked about with the hopelessness of a great artist facing the failure of his chef d'oeuvre. "I forgot the lemons."

She took this as naturally as she had taken his first remark.

"It's going to be very hard for you. I was wrong to draw you into it. I am realizing that more and more, every minute."

"You couldn't help yourself," he cheerfully reminded her. "Now that I am in it, as I've warned you before, I intend to run things. It seems to me that the obvious course for you is to move. After you're safely hidden somewhere, I think I can teach Herbert Ransome Shaw a lesson that won't react on you."

She shook her head.

"If I moved, how long do you think it would take him to find me?"

"Weeks, perhaps months."

Again she shook her head.

"I moved here a few days ago. He appeared exactly forty-eight hours later. If I moved from here it would only mean going through the game of hare and hounds again."

"But—" he began. She interrupted him.

"I've reached the point where I can't endure that any more." For the first time her voice broke. "Can't you imagine what that sort of thing would be? To get up in the morning and wonder if this is the day I'll see him under my window? To go to bed at night and ask myself if he is lurking in the shadows below, or across the street, or perhaps outside my very door? To know that sooner or later he will be there that his coming is as inevitable as death itself?" She broke off.

"I sometimes think I'd rather see a box-constrictor crawling into my room than see Shaw down on the sidewalk," she ended. "And yet—I know you can understand this—there's a queer kind of relief in the knowledge that at last, and finally, he has got me."

She whirled to face Laurie and threw out her hands. There was nothing theatrical in the gesture, merely an effort of entire finality.

"We have come to the end of things," she finished. "Since you would not have them end my way, they must end his way. Whatever happens, I shall not run and hide any more."

For a moment silence hung like a substance between them. Then the visitor resolutely shook off the effect of her words.

"I promise you I will get to the bottom of this," he quietly told her. "In the meantime, will you try to forget it, for a little while? You know you said you could do that, occasionally."

He was clearing the table as he spoke. Now he proceeded to unpack a basket he had sent over an hour before by Griggs, and which, he observed, had not been opened. Dropping back into her big chair, she watched him with an odd look. If he had seen this look it would have sorely puzzled him, for it held not only interest but an element of apprehension, even of fear.

"In the past two days," she said, after an interval, "you have sent me five baskets of food, four baskets of fruit, six boxes of candy, and three boxes of flowers. What do you suppose becomes of them all?"

"I know what becomes of the flowers. He cast an appreciative glance around the transformed room. "And I hope," he mildly added, "that you eat the food."

She broke into her rare laugh, soft, deep-throated, and contagious. Under it his spirits rose dizzily.

"You are feeding half the people in this building," she said, "not to mention Sam and his home circle. Sam has absorbed roast chicken, cold partridge, quail, and sweetbreads till he is getting critical. He asked me this morning if I shouldn't like ham and eggs for a change!"

Laurie felt slightly aggrieved.

"Do you mean to say that you're not eating any of the stuff yourself?" he demanded.

"Oh, I eat three meals a day. But I don't keep boarders, you know; so I give the rest to Sam to distribute. He feeds several dozen art students, I infer, and staggers home every night under the burden of what's left."

"There won't be anything left this night."

She had risen now and was helping to set the little table. Laurie looked at her with shining eyes. One of her rapid changes of mood had taken place, and she was entering into the spirit of the impromptu supper as cheerfully as if it were a new game and she a child. She had become a wholly different personality from the tragic-eyed girl who less than ten minutes ago had somberly announced that she was making her last stand in life. Again, as often before, Laurie felt overwhelmed by the rush of conflicting emotions she aroused.

"Shall we have this big bowl of roses in the center, or the four little bowls at the corners?" she asked absently.

As she spoke, she studied the flowers with her head on one side. For the moment, it was clear, the question she had asked was the most vital in the world.

"The little ones," decided the guest. "The big one might shut off some of you from my devouring eyes. He was mixing ingredients in a chafin-dish as he spoke, and he wore the trying air of smug complacency that invariably accompanies that simple process.

"No," he objected, as she tried to help him, "I will do the brain-work. Your part is to be feminine and rush briskly back and forth, offering me things I don't want. And at the last moment," he added gloomily, "you may tell me that there isn't a lemon in the place." He looked about with the hopelessness of a great artist facing the failure of his chef d'oeuvre. "I forgot the lemons."

She went across the room to a small closet. Even in the strain of the movement he observed the extraordinary grace and swiftness of her movements. She was very slender, very lithe, and she moved like a flash of light.

"Fancy my being caught without a lemon!" she scoffed, as she returned with the fruit. "Your brain-work stops abruptly sometimes, doesn't it?"

She handed him the lemons with a little gesture expressing amusement, triumph and a dash of coquetry. Laurie's eyes glowed as he looked at her. For the second time, in her actual presence, a sharp thrill shot through him. Oh, if she were always like this—gay, happy; without that incredible, unbelievable background of tragedy and mystery! He turned his mind resolutely from the intruding thought. This hour at least was hers and his. It should be prolonged to the last moment.

What he longed for was to hear her talk, but that way, he knew, lay disaster to the little supper in swift-retarding memory. If she began to talk, the forbidden topic, now dormant, would uncoil its hideous length and hiss. He must hold her attention to other things.

He plunged at random into chatter. For the first time he told her about Bangs, his chum, and about Epstein, their manager; about their plays and their experiences in rehearsals and on the road. Being very young and slightly spoiled, he experienced some chagrin in the discovery that she seemed alike ignorant of the men and the plays. Worse yet, she seemed not even aware that she should have known who Bangs and Epstein were. She did not recall having heard the title of "The Black Pearl." She was not only unaware that "The Man Above" had broken all box-office records; she seemed unconscious that it had ever been written. Observing his artless surprise, she gravely explained, "I have been interested in other things," she reminded him.

The forbidden topic was stirring, stretching. To quiet it, Laurie leaped into the comedy scenes of "The Man Above." They delighted her. Her soft, delicious laughter moved him to give her bits from "The Black Pearl," and following these, the big scenes from the latter play. This last effort followed the supper; and Laurie, now in his highest spirits, added to his effects by the use of a brilliant afghan, and by much raising and lowering of the light of the reading lamp.

He was a fine mimic. He became by turns the star, the leading lady, the comedian and the "heavy" of the big play. It was only when he had stopped for a moment's rest, and Doris demanded a description of the leading lady's gowns, now represented by the afghan, that his ingenuity failed.

"They're so beautiful that most people think I made them," he said, serenely. "But I didn't, really, so I can't give you any details, except that they're very close-fitting around the feet."

He was folding up the afghan as he spoke, and he stopped in the act, leaving one end dangling on the floor. From the street below the sound of a whistle came up to him, sharp and penetrating, repeating over and over the same musical phrase, the opening notes of the Fifth Symphony. At first he thought the notes were whistled by some casual passer by. Then, glancing at the girl's face, he knew better. The sharp, recurrent phrase was a signal.

He finished folding the afghan, and carefully replaced it on the divan from which he had borrowed it. As he did so, he prattled on. He had suddenly decided not to hear that signal. Doris, sitting transfixed and staring at him, slowly became convinced that he had not heard it.

He glanced at his watch.

"A shocking hour!" he ejaculated. "Ten o'clock. If I go now, may I come back for breakfast?"

"You may not." She made an effort to speak lightly.

"To take you to luncheon, then, at one?"

"No, please."

He shook his head at her.

"This is not the atmosphere of hospitality I am used to, but I shall come anyway. I'll be here at one. In the meantime, I suddenly realize that we are not using all our opportunities. We must change that."

He looked around as he spoke, and, finding what he sought, picked it up. It was a small scarf, a narrow bit of Roman silk carrying a vivid stripe. He held this before her.

Watch Elimination!

Good Health Depends Upon Good Elimination.

RETENTION of bodily waste in the blood is called a "toxic condition." This often gives rise to a dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. Thousands have learned to assist their kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water and the occasional use of a stimulant diuretic. 50,000 users give Doan's signed endorsement. Ask your neighbor!

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Result of the National Elections—G. O. P. Nearly Loses Senate Control.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
ELECTION day was far from satisfactory to the Republican party, for it almost if not quite lost control of the senate and its majority in the lower house will be considerably reduced. Seven Republican senators were defeated by Democrats, these being Wadsworth of New York, Butler of Massachusetts, Weller of Maryland, Ernst of Kentucky, Williams of Missouri, Harrell of Oklahoma and Cameron of Arizona. Their successful opponents were Wagner, Walsh, Tamm, Barkley, Hawes, Thomas and Hayden. In the new senate there will be 48 Republicans, 47 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite. To control its organization the Republicans will need one more vote and the Democrats two. This figuring presupposes that Brookhart of Iowa and Frazier of North Dakota, who were read out of the party, stand by it in organizing the body. Smith was victorious in Illinois and Vane in Pennsylvania, despite the campaign scandals, and the senate will have to decide whether or not to exclude them. The question will not come up until the new senate meets in December, 1927, unless the Democrats, by holding up some important appropriation bill, compel the President to convene the new congress in the spring. The new house of representatives will have 238 Republicans, 194 Democrats, 2 Farmer-Laborites and 1 Socialist. The Democrats gained 11 seats.

Of the individual results of the election the most notable was the defeat of Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, close personal friend of the President and the only candidate for whose support Mr. Coolidge made an open appeal. Butler was the victim of the defection of wet Republicans, who deserted his dry standard and flocked to the wine and beer platform of Walsh, and of the discontent in the textile mill and shoe factory towns in which there is widespread unemployment.

Frank Smith in Illinois had some 70,000 plurality, Brennan cutting down the normal Republican majority tremendously. This was due in part to the independent candidacy of Magill but much more to the prohibition issue. In Indiana Watson and Robinson, Republicans, embarrassed by the Klan control revelations, barely scraped through. The Democrats announced that recounts would be demanded in three counties. Brookhart of Iowa returns to the senate from which he was ousted with about 70,000 plurality over Claude R. Porter, this result being interpreted by the Iowa press as a reiteration of the Middle West's demand for farm relief legislation.

Al Smith, invincible in his race for reelection as governor of New York, carried Justice Wagner into the senate on his great wave of votes. Senator Wadsworth ran well outside of the metropolitan area, despite the bolt of the dry Republicans. Smith found Congressman Ogden Mills easier to defeat than was Theodore Roosevelt in 1924. His position as a potential Presidential nominee is greatly enhanced by this latest victory. Albert Ritchie, re-elected governor of Maryland, retains his chances for the same honor.

Incomplete returns from Wyoming indicate that Nellie Tayloe Ross, the last remaining woman governor in the country, was defeated by Frank C. Emerson. Of governors elected Tuesday 14 are Republicans and 12 are Democrats.

Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, admitted the dries had had setbacks all over the country and declared these only "challenged" the dries to get buster than ever.

One Washington correspondent says: "An examination of the returns all over the country will show that Republicans who ran wet in 'dry' territory were either defeated or had hard contests. The tendency shown by this election will go far toward making more Republicans nervous if the prohibition issue is to be fought out on its merits in 1928. What the fanatical dries will do in that kind of a contest will have considerable bearing both in framing the issue and in the outcome."

IMMEDIATELY after it became known that Senator Butler was defeated the air was full of reports that he would at once resign as chairman of the Republican national committee. It is understood in Washington that he will not quit this post without the President's consent and that in any case his resignation will be postponed for some time. If he should step out now, it would be assumed that this meant Mr. Coolidge would not be a candidate for renomination, and on this question the President has been silent.

CONGRESSMAN MARTIN MADDEN of Chicago, the able chairman of the appropriations committee of the house, makes the welcome announcement that taxes on next year's incomes will be cut between $300,000,000 and $400,000,000.

"I am certain that another reduction can be made and I will recommend it, as I did the last one," the congressman said. "There will be a surplus in the treasury at the end of this year. It will amount to about $250,000,000. Next year we will undoubtedly be able to arrange a new tax cut, to become effective in 1928 on 1927 income."

"NOTHING can happen to me until I have finished my work," declared Premier Mussolini after the sixth attempt to assassinate him had failed, and it would seem that his fatalistic attitude is justified. This time it was in Bologna, where the duke was attending the congress for the advancement of science. An eighteen-year-old youth pushed through the crowds and fired a pistol point blank at the premier, the bullet ripping through his coat. Before he could shoot again the lad was pounded to death by the infuriated mob. As always before, the attack on their leader's life enraged the Fascists tremendously and there were anti-French demonstrations accompanied by bloodshed in various places. The police asserted they had uncovered a great plot, the assassin being a mere tool, and hundreds of arrests were made. The Italian government apologized for attacks on French consulates and France accepted the explanations, but the feeling between the two peoples is becoming extremely bitter. The Italians are convinced that the anti-Fascist plots are hatched in France, and the French believe Italy is scheming to get possession of Nice and the Riviera and part of France's north African colonies.

French police, after a year of watching, descended on a nest of Catalonian plotters against Spain in Perpignan and arrested 98 conspirators on the eve of their proposed uprising for the independence of Catalonia. The revolutionists had hoped their revolt would spread throughout Spain and result in the downfall of Dictator De Rivera if not of the monarchy.

PRELIMINARY hearing of the Alimec McPherson case in Los Angeles resulted in the holding for trial of the evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman Gleason, their chief accuser. They were bound over to the Superior court on augmented counts of criminal conspiracy. If convicted, they face possible penitentiary sentence of one to ten years on the first count of the indictments; that of obstructing justice; one to five years on the second count, that of preparing false evidence; and one to fourteen on the third, conspiring to suborn perjury.

Kenneth Ormiston, former radio operator at Angelus Temple and the man with whom the state charges Mrs. McPherson occupied a cottage at Carmel by the Sea during the time she was supposed to have been the captive of kidnapers in Mexico, was bound over to Superior court on the assumption that he will be arrested in time for trial. If he is not arrested by that time, the charges will be kept alive against him.

SEPEMING, MICH., was the scene of a distressing mine disaster when a great section of swamp land broke into the Barnes-Hecker iron mine and filled up the underground passages. Fifty-two men were trapped by the cave-in and all of them perished. Water rushed into the mine after the mud and filled it almost completely. Rescue crews were on hand promptly but could not do nothing to save the miners.

MEXICO'S campaign against the Yaquis of Sonora is proceeding according to plans laid by General Obregon. First a number of airplanes flew over the mountains and totally destroyed the Indians' towns with explosive and incendiary bombs, and many of the inhabitants were killed. Hundreds of others were then taken prisoner and these are being scattered in other localities, the able-bodied men being enlisted in the army.

FIGHTING between the Liberals and the government forces in Nicaragua has been resumed, despite the resignation of General Chamorro, president de facto. Large quantities of arms and munitions are being received by the Liberals from Mexico and in one battle last week they carried a Mexican flag—but were badly defeated. Salvador and Costa Rica are reported to be supporting the Conservatives, while Mexico, Guatemala and perhaps Honduras are helping the rebellious faction. The entire east coast of the country is patrolled by United States naval units and Washington insists the quarrel must cease and Adolfo Diaz be chosen president.

RULING on a case from Louisiana, the Supreme court of the United States decided that both the federal government and a state may lawfully prosecute a person in their respective courts for violations of their prohibition laws growing out of the same act. Disturbing the contention of double jeopardy, "the court, in an opinion by Justice Van Devanter, to which no dissent was announced, held that the eighteenth amendment contemplated that the manufacture of intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes may be denounced as a criminal offense both by the federal law and by the state law; and that these laws may not only co-exist, but be given full operation each independently of the other. Only offenses against the laws of the United States are cognizable under its authority. Those against state laws are cognizable only under the authority of the state. And this is true where the same act is an offense against both a law of the United States and a law of a state."

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE BELL, JR., commander of the Thirty-third division in France and one of the outstanding generals of the World war, died in Chicago, and his funeral was the occasion of a great gathering of Illinois officers and doughboys who had served under him, loved him and admired his bravery and intelligence.

Another notable taken by death was Harry Houdini, magician extraordinary and exposé of spiritualism frauds. He passed away in Detroit, the cause of death being peritonitis resulting from a ruptured appendix.

IN HER progress through the Northwest, Queen Marie of Rumania stopped at the town of Maryhill, Wash., and assisted in the formal dedication of the "Museum of Fine Arts" which Samuel Hill is erecting there. She took occasion to avow her sincere friendship for Mr. Hill and for Lole Fuller, the dancer, and certainly added to her popularity by her outspoken language.

CROWN PRINCE LEOPOLD of Belgium and Princess Astrid, niece of King Gustav of Sweden, were married in Stockholm with all due ceremony and display. The royal families of Belgium, Sweden, Norway and Denmark all were there in full force and the people of Stockholm made the event a real festival.
