Cherry Meeting Next Tuesday At East Jordan

D. H. Hootman, M. S. C. Horticulture Specialist, Will Be Present.

Plans have been completed to hold a big cherry meeting at the K. P. Hall in East Jordan on Tuesday, March 22nd, in the afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. The entire public is cordially invited and urged to attend. At the present time it is estimated that fully 20,000 young cherry trees will be set out on Charlevoix County farms this year, and in most cases the new fruit growers are inexperienced in this new field of work. If you belong to this latter class, by all means plan to attend and learn about the details connected with successful and profitable cherry production.

Mr. D. H. Hootman, Spec. in Horticulture of M. S. C. will be present and will discuss the subject of cherries in all of its phases. For several years Mr. Hootman has been studying cherries and will be in a position to give us valuable information and suggestions in the setting out of trees, pruning, spraying and harvesting.

In cherries, the same as anything else, much of your future success depends on the kind of start you make. So, if in doubt on any question, you cannot afford to miss the opportunity of hearing Mr. Hootman and getting properly started in this new field.

Don't forget the date, March 22nd, place, the K. P. Hall, East Jordan, Time, 1:30 p. m. standard.

B. C. MELLENCAMP, Co. Agr'l Agent.

Linden—An unusual sight was witnessed by three workmen excavating a cellar for a dwelling in the town of Linden. While hacking away at a stump in the moist soil below the frost line the trio uncovered the hibernating nest of a family of streaked snakes. A few strokes of the ax against one of the fecked rats brought the entire family to life. After recovering their equilibrium, the men took a census of their find and counted 76 individuals ranging in length from six inches to one foot.

Calumet—Tales of the wanderings and eccentricities of "Old Maggie" Harrington were being recounted here after her body had been found frozen in her dilapidated cabin eight miles from here. For 50 years "Old Maggie" roamed woods bordering the city unmolested and apparently bothering no one. Often motorists and farmers would catch sight of her, but she spoke to no one. Her cabin, which was avoided by children as a haven of "haunts," was a rudely constructed board shack.

Solitude in the Crowd

Little do men perceive what solitude is, and how far it extendeth. For a crowd is not company and faces are but a gallery of pictures and talk but a tinkling of cymbals, where there is no love. The Latin adage meeteth with it a little: A great town is a great solitude.—Bacon.

Second Number Extension Course

Dr. F. A. Poole at Auditorium, Commencing at 7:30 Standard.

Dr. F. A. Poole appears as the second number of the University Extension course, Friday evening, at 7:30.

He talks to the general public on the subject—"Keeping Physically Fit," and according to the Extension Department, Dr. Poole gives one of the feature lectures of the whole extension course, and without a doubt the most valuable. Reports from Central Lake and other places where Dr. Poole appeared early in the fall give him an exceptional send off, and only Wednesday morning Supt. Tyndall of Central Lake said it was one of the finest and most valuable lectures ever given in Central Lake, and only hoped that he would come that way again.

As stated in a former article in the Herald, these lectures are entirely free to the public and our future ability to secure speakers of the class of Mr. Brumm and Dr. Poole will depend upon the crowd in attendance. If Dr. Poole measures up to the standard set by Mr. Brumm, and all indications are that he will even surpass him, East Jordan people hardly realize what they are missing if they do not attend the lecture Friday evening.

The RANDALL ENSEMBLE PLAYERS HERE MONDAY NIGHT.

The Randall Ensemble Players offer a feast of good things in dramatic, vocal and instrumental music, impersonations and comedy. Eleanor Randall, distinguished dramatic artist, heads the Company.

Puccini's immortal opera, "Madam Butterfly" is presented in dramatized form with a musical setting, and with handsome lighting and scenic effects. The miscellaneous half of the program is in lighter vein. There cuttings of modern plays, exclusive are comedy sketches by the Company; readings and child impersonations by Miss Randall; readings with piano and violin accompaniments; violin, piano and soprano solos; comedy, fun and beautiful costumes in generous measure.

Eleanor Randall is head of the Department of Expression in the Chicago College of Music, and for fourteen months played with the late Frank Bacon in his famous play "Lightnin'" in the outstanding comedy role of "Mrs. Davis," when the play first opened in New York a few years ago. Miss Randall has a marvelous repertoire. It consists of sixteen programs. She is equally successful in humorous and children's readings as in the sadly sweet emotions of Madam Butterfly. Boys and girls fairly go wild with joy when she gives Booth Tarkington's "Penrod," "The Man With One Hair," and the story of the small boy in his "Supervised Bath."

Ruth Cowl, who comes with Miss Randall, is a dramatic soprano and concert pianist with a great deal of concert experience.

LeRoy Vernae is a concert violinist with an important part in the Madam Butterfly presentation and the miscellaneous musical program.

This is perhaps the best number of the whole course, and if it is as pleasing as the last number, you cannot afford to miss such an evening's entertainment.

It is funny how much an estate shrinks when the lawyers get hold of it.

The Passing Seasons

Imlay City—Maple syrup making has a fair start in Lapeer county with the majority of syrup makers either well started on the 1927 "run" or prepared for tree tapping the first warm day.

Detroit—Swallowing a small quantity of kerosene proved fatal to Joseph Rapelo, 2 1/2 years old. The boy found a can of kerosene on the kitchen floor while his mother was busy. He tipped the can up and drank the fluid. He died a few hours later.

Lansing—Two Cheboygan County townships are facing bankruptcy because the University of Michigan bought large tracts of waterfront land for biological and other research work. Fred R. Ming charged here recently. University of Michigan lands are tax exempt. Since the university owns large areas of the land in the townships, there is not enough left for tax purposes to meet township expenses.

Whitehall—A new business sprung up on White Lake, where hundreds of ice fishermen appear every year. The new business was renting fishing shanties. One man had 100 shanties on the lake which he rented at $1.50 a day. Heat was furnished and the shanties were taken to the place where the fisherman desired to fish. Women were among his customers. Minnows and food also were sold fishermen.

Detroit—Prediction of an early opening of commerce on the Great Lakes was made, based on the first government report for 1927 on the Great Lakes showing that ice in many of the harbors either had disappeared or was noticeably thinner than at this time last year. The only port where conditions approximate the severity of last year is Duluth-Superior, generally one of the coldest regions in the country. The ice is 27 1/2 inches thick here.

Owosso—Owosso township faces the possibility of complete quarantine as the result of the development of rabies among sheep, according to Sheriff George P. Lawcock. The malady developed after the sheep were attacked by a dog, it is claimed. A state veterinarian has pronounced the affliction to be rabies.

The affected dog has not been caught and children of the township are being kept close to their houses. Most of the affected sheep have been killed.

Lansing—in a report by George Lord, state tax commissioner. Mr. Lord declared the people are spending money faster than the value of taxable property is increasing. He says the value of taxable property from 1916 to 1926 increased 108 per cent while the total amount of taxes increased 256 per cent. The average increase in local taxes throughout the state was 270 per cent, as compared with a state tax increase of 146 per cent.

Saginaw—The mystery of the woman's apron and hosiery found on the ice near the Bristol street bridge, indicating a tragedy or the possibility of foul play, has been solved. Religious devotion on the part of a young woman, an employe of a local hotel, was at the bottom of the whole case. When the ownership of the apron was traced to her, the girl admitted that she had been in the practice of going to the river to pray. She said that when she fell into the river, she dropped the apron and hosiery.

Lansing—State institutions will use 33,000 tons of Michigan coal this year as a first step toward taking over nearly all of the output of local mines, Governor Fred W. Green said following a conference with representatives of the coal industry and the Saginaw and Bay counties delegations in the legislature. Heretofore only one institution has used local coal. The annual output in this state is less than the 1,000,000 tons the state has been asked to use.

Monroe—With a view of preserving the parasite until the spring campaign against the corn borer commences, contracts were awarded by the Federal Government for the erection of three cages, 89 feet square and 10 feet high, in which will be placed stalks of corn obtained from land infested by the European corn borer. One cage will be erected at Richmond, 40 miles north of Detroit, one just south of Monroe, and another south of Erie, Monroe County.

East Jordan Gets Big Game

Best Indoor Battle Ever Staged in North Sen Last Thursday Evening

(Potoskey News, Friday, March 11.)
 In one of the best played indoor baseball games ever recorded in Northern Michigan sport history East Jordan won from Potoskey on East Jordan's own court last night 8 to 2. The game was filled with fielding thrills, wonderful pitching, and close decisions which turned the tide of battle. Each team secured four hits. Sweet, Potoskey pitcher, fanned twenty men, getting them three to an inning for the first five innings. McKinnon, East Jordan's speed artist, had wonderful control and struck out eighteen men.

Both teams worked to perfection throughout and at the conclusion congratulations were extended by fans to the twenty players. This is the second closely fought battle of the season between the two teams on the East Jordan floor, the first one ending in a one-run lead for the Pine Lake boys. The locale were without the services of Gaffney, Schromberg and Treloar, who were on the program at the Elks' entertainment last evening.

Potoskey used: Potts and Corey at shorts; Wolff, first base; Sik, second base; Floyd Rose, third base; Sweet, pitcher; Fred Rose, catcher; Engle, Craw, Sheckler and Wenz, fielders. For East Jordan these men played: Watson and Frieberg, shorts; McKinnon, pitcher; Ellis, catcher; Bechtold, first base; Shepard second base; Vogel, third base; Seiler, C. H. McKinnon and Sherman. There was a good sized crowd on hand.

State News in Brief

East Tawas—The Bayport Fish Company of Bayport has purchased the East Tawas Fish Company, it was announced here. The former concern is one of the largest dealers in fresh water fish on Lake Huron.

Grand Rapids—Mrs. Anna Swartout, 76 years old, was killed by a Detroit-bound Grand Trunk train at the Clancy avenue crossing while on her way to visit her husband, Deleskia P. Swartout, a patient at a local hospital. Mr. Swartout, a grocer, was to have left the hospital that very same afternoon.

Saginaw—Phineas Williams, 55 years old, killed himself with a shotgun after an unsuccessful attempt to kill his wife. He fired two shots at Mrs. Williams, wounding her in the side and arm, but not seriously. The shooting resulted from a domestic quarrel of long standing, according to the police.

Kalamazoo—To keep the doctor away, read the humor features in your daily newspaper. That is the rule given by Dr. Orus Ray Yoder, of the Kalamazoo State Hospital medical staff. "The lighter things of life are great deterrents to insanity," Dr. Yoder declared. "Abraham Lincoln kept a joke book in his desk and during his darkest hours read it frequently."

Lansing—An appropriation of $100,000 for establishment of a state-controlled air port on Grosse Ile will be asked of the legislature in a bill introduced in the House. The proposed airport would be called the United States Naval Reserve airport. The $100,000 appropriation would be used for the erection of hangars, barracks and other buildings and for the purpose of building retaining walls and dredging.

Pontiac—A detour by way of the Elizabeth lake, White lake and Scott lake roads, by which traffic on the Dixie highway north of Pontiac was routed last fall, has been impressed into use again, because of a sinkhole in the highway a few miles north of the city. Traffic will be routed over the detour for at least three months, it is believed. The sinkhole, said to be the worst encountered in the paving of Michigan highways, is about 100 feet long.

Ypsilanti—Local police are seeking the person who has been scattering poisoned doughnuts on the streets here. Ypsilanti is in the midst of a mad dog scare, and it is believed the person responsible for spreading the poison intended it to kill dogs, but officials are warning parents of small children to be on the alert for any symptoms of poisoning of the children, for it is feared some of them may eat the poisoned food. Several infested dogs have been killed here.

ASSEMBLY MARCH 16

The debate on capital punishment at assembly this week proved to be a very spirited one which commanded the interest and attention of the audience throughout. The enthusiasm for debate manifested on the platform Wednesday has been aroused in Miss Kelly's English 10 class as a result of recent study in argumentation. It is a credit to the class and the instructor to have aroused the debate spirit manifested by the students who took part in this combat of words. The affirmative was upheld by Chris Taylor, Francis Kleinhans, and Irene Parks; the negative by Howard Baker, Ethel Pinney and Mary Hufton. The decision went to the affirmative.

In addition to the debate a piano duet was played by Viola Snyder and Dorothy Joynt, and a song was rendered by a group of Sophomore girls. The program was arranged by Miss Kelly.

An advertisement of forty inches is twice as important to the publisher as an advertisement of twenty inches; but, the reason large advertisements pay is that they are twice as important in the estimation of the readers.

Our extra slice of pie for this week is awarded the boob who stood in our open doorway last week and talked to us during a cold snap, while we sneezed loud and often.

Going to church next Sunday is a good way to break the winter spell.

A. Reich of Lone Ash farm, who is employed in East Jordan, and came out to vote at the Primary Election, Monday, returned to his work Wednesday afternoon.

Dan Goodman and another man of East Jordan were on the Peninsula Friday, soliciting orders for farm machinery. They had the good luck to get stuck in the snow in the road along Knoll Crest and had to shovel out, then in an effort to get through the field, got stuck in the mud and had to get Geo. Jarman with his team to pull them out, they became discouraged and wended their way to the David Gaunt home on "shanks horses," a distance of better than a mile, where they had dinner.

A Mr. Dorsey, who resides on the Warner place near Afton was on the Peninsula, Thursday, looking at the L. E. Phillips farm for rent or purchase. He also looked over some other farms.

The Mountain school observed Patron's Day, March 11. While the road conditions kept a good many from attending, those who did go had a very good time.

The Star school will observe Patron's Day March 18th with a pot luck dinner at the schoolhouse. All are invited.

For the first time in a good many years, the ice in the mill dam at Advance stuck on the Dam completely shutting off the flow of water which backed up, completely flooding the little Brook, Monday, March 14th, by heroic efforts the ice was started and very soon let the water off with no more damage than flooded cellars.

CHESTONIA

(Edited by Jesse Morse)

Art Touchstone was in town on business last week.

Snow has left us for the present. Edd. Hosler will stay here to load logs at Chestonia bank and at East Jordan.

There were 28 people at Sunday School last Sunday.

Rev. Dudley of East Jordan gave us a short talk after Sunday School last Sunday.

A number of the school children are ill with colds. There were but 19 present one day last week.

The East Jordan Lumber Company finished logging here last week Tuesday. Seems rather lonesome without "Peggy" Schultz and "Billy Jim."

Big loads of logs have been drawn by Mr. Schultz and Mr. Ashby, but Louis Bolser "cap the sheaf" with a 5300 feet of elms. Roads were pretty poor too.

A picture was taken of the Camp by a Boyne City Photographer. The picture was 44 inches in length. There are 2,600,000 feet of logs banked here.

Following are the Township Officers nominated last Saturday for Jordan Township offices:—Supervisor, Wm. Severance and Frank Lilak; Clerk, Edd. Nemecek and Claude Sweet; Treasurer, Earl Gould and James Zitka; Highway Com'r, Albert Chanda; Justice of Peace, Em. Kratochvil.

Remember the Community Meeting next week Saturday evening. We here there is to be another trial, and the President wishes us to announce that the helpers on the program will be chosen from those not on before.

Several fine recitations and dialogues were given at the other meeting. The Misses Mayhew, Piggott and Sonnabend did themselves proud in their "Hod-de-do" song. The teachers sure did "ketch it," much worse than "ketch the grip." We can't praise Mrs. Henry Sutton's orchestra too highly. Nearly every band instrument was present, but a hoe, and they played nearly every old thing but a tune. They say offers are now open for engagement with any Chautauque troupe. Ter Wee's orchestra is good, but see Sutton's first. The Jordan River Gossip made its bow to the public and was all and more than could be expected. The paper bristled with more good points than a barbed wire fence. Everything was more than worth a year's subscription, from the Editorials to Phunny Bone Column. It is expected that Rookery, Mt. Bliss and Chestonia schools will join in next week's program, and every patron from those places should come out. Exercises will begin at seven o'clock standard, and close at ten so everyone can get home before Sunday.

Earl Blair and family spent Sunday, March 6 with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carson.

Signing the Constitution
Bancroft, the historian, says that "Eleven of the thirteen state delegations signed the proposed Constitution. Since the two other delegations had previously left the convention, the signing was unanimous. All perhaps had grave doubts about one feature or provision or another, but they had builded better than they knew, and they all had the courage to sign the concrete result of their arduous work."

Great Demand For Hudson--Essex

Hudson-Essex has just completed the greatest February in its history, and with March is stepping into the greatest six cylinder production the automobile industry ever has known, officials of the company report.

Since Jan. 1, production of both Hudson and Essex cars has been largely increased, and on March 1, the fifth increase of the year brought the daily total close to the 1500 mark a day, it was declared.

February shipments were 27,000 cars, while March is scheduled for the production and sale of 37,000 Hudson and Essex automobiles. Even with this great volume, company officials declare that deliveries are far behind demand. The new Super-Six models on both Hudson and Essex, brought out the first of the year, have far exceeded in popularity anything the company has known in its whole history.

In going close to the 40,000 mark for March, Hudson-Essex is reaching into a volume field which hitherto has been entered only by four cylinder cars. It is around 25 per cent larger than any previous Hudson-Essex schedule.

While the Factory is thus engaged in record-breaking, the J. H. Elzinga & Bros., Ellsworth, Hudson-Essex dealers have been setting new high marks of business. Never before, it is claimed, has there been so urgent and insistent demand for Hudson and Essex. On both the large and small car, business has been consistent and growing.

"In fact, says J. H. Elzinga of the Ellsworth Garage, Ellsworth, Mich., the public has shown its desire for these cars so strongly that we have been embarrassed, because of the fact that we have been unable to deliver the cars as fast as buyers have asked for them. We have been unceasing in urging the Hudson plant for more cars, but naturally we have had to take our just allotment, along with other distributors and dealers, and thus have been handicapped by the national Hudson-Essex shortage. We are very regretful of this situation, and are bending every effort to deliver to our customers in accordance with their wishes. But it surely looks as if Hudson-Essex would be in extra demand for the whole spring season. The wise buyer will get in his order now."—Advertisement.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Plant Poisoning
The qualities of a plant which are poisonous to us, and which are the source of various sorts of human ills, are very often the sole means of the plant's ability to endure in its struggle for existence. These poisons are either waste products given off or are nature's means of protecting the plant from harmful attacks by insects.

SHORT TALKS BY THOUGHTFUL MOTHERS

A California (Long Beach) mother speaks: "Only a mother who has passed through anxious nights of fear of croup, hearing that hoarse, croupy cough constantly, can appreciate our feeling of gratitude toward Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. It stopped Junior's dreadful cough the first night he took it and it was a great relief to see him drop into a quiet sleep." Good also for whooping cough, measles cough and heavy wheezy breathing. Sold and recommended everywhere.—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

Tobacco Money

Durable paper currency can be made from the waste cuttings and stems of tobacco. It is reported from Europe. The waste from tobacco factories is first treated by a chemical process to render it tough and pliable. It is then run through special machinery to cut it fine and is used as a substitute for the more costly waste linen rags.

The War of Choe Range Described in a Remarkable Series by an Officer of the Marines

Capt. JOHN W. THOMASON, Jr.

The scout officer, leading, had out his canteen and wet his dry mouth. He was acutely conscious of his empty stomach. His mind dwelt yearningly on the mess-kit, freighted nobly with monkey-meat and tomatoes, awaiting him in the dependable Tommy's musette.

A hundred meters forward the last shells burst, and he saw new dirt. Ahead, a spot darker than the dark; he went up to it. Away on the right a flare soared, and something gleamed dull in the black hole at his feet—a round, deep helmet with the pale blur of a face under it; a click, and the shadow of a movement there, and a little flicker; a matter of split seconds; the scout officer had a bayonet in his stomach, almost—Feldritter Kurt Iden, Company Six of the Margrave of Brandenburg regiment (this established later, by brigade intelligence, on examination of the pay-book of the deceased), being on front post with his squad, heard a noise hard on the cessation of the shelling, and put out his neck. Dear God shoot! Shoot! Shoot!

The scout officer was conscious of a monstrous surge of temper. He gathered his feet under him, and his hands crooked like claws, and he hurled himself. In the same breath there was a long, bright flash right under his arm, and the mad crack of a Springfield. The disillusioned sergeant had estimated the situation, loosed off from the hip at perhaps seven feet, and shot the German through the throat.

Too late to stop himself, the scout officer went head first into the crater, his hands locking on something wet and hairy, just the size to fill them; and presently he was at the bottom of the crater, dirt in his mouth and a buzzing in his head, strangling something that flopped and gurgled and made remarkable noises under his hands. There were explosions and people stepped hard on his back and legs. He became sane again and realized that whatever it was it was dead. He groped in his puttees for his knife, and cut off its shoulder-straps and a button or two, and looted its bosom of such papers as there were—those being details the complete scout officer must attend to. More explosions, and voices bleating "Kamaramendon"—fervidly anxious voices—in his ear.

The disillusioned sergeant, a practical man, had ducked into the crater right behind the scout officer. The raiding party in his rear had immediately fired their weapons in all directions. A great many rifles on forward stabbed the dark with sharp flame, and some of these were very near. The sergeant tossed a grenade at the nearest; he had noted that Frog citron grenade around for quite a while, somewhat against his judgment; he now reflected that it was good business—grenades—I hope to split in ye' mess-kit they are—ask the man that used one. It was good business, for it fell fair in the other crater, thirty feet away, where the

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowley Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

rest of that front-post squad were beginning to react like the brave German men they were. Two of these survived, much shaken, and scuttled into the clever little tunnel that connected them with the Feldritter's crater, emerging with pacific cries at the sergeant's very feet. Being a man not given to excitement, he accepted them alive, the while he dragged the scout officer standing. "We got our prisoners, sir. Let's beat it," he suggested. "Their lips is wakin' up, sir. It's gonna be bad here—"

The colonel, as gallant a man as ever lived, but not fast, barked into them. "Prisoners? Hey? How many? Two? Excellent, by God! Give 'em here, young man!" and he seized the unhappy Boches by their collars and shook them violently. "Thought you'd start something, hey? Thought you'd start something, hey?"

The scout officer now blew his whistle, the sergeant shouted in a voice of brass, and the colonel made the kind of remarks a colonel makes. It is related by truthful marines there present that every German in Von Boehn's army fired on them as they went back but no two agreed as to the manner of their return. It is, however, established that the colonel, bringing up the rear, halted about half-way over, drew his hitherto virgin pistol, and wheeled around for a parting shot—something in the nature of an beau geste. Seeing this, the tall French captain, to his rear and left, drew his pistol and wheeled also, imagining pursuit. The colonel—and to this attest the scout officer and his sergeant—then shot the Frenchman through the—as sea-going marines say—stern-sheets.

The scout officer and the sergeant got him back some way, both filled with admiration at his language. By the time they stumbled through the nervous outposts to their own piece, the French captain had lapsed into English. "As a wound, you perceive, it is good for a permission. But it is not a wound. It is an indignity! And, besides, my new breeches! Ah, Dieu de Dieu! Ce sale colonel-ci! What will my wife say! That one, she chose the cloth herself! Tonnerre de canon!"—and he sank into stricken silence.

The raiding party shook down in their several holes, praising God, and went to sleep. The colonel, with his prisoners, received the compliments of the battalion headquarters and departed for Brigade. The scout officer observed to his amazement that they had been out of their lines less than twenty minutes. "Where's the Forty-ninth?" he wanted to know first. "Hell, Jim, they went up to the Bois right after the major sent for you. An' the Spentenths. We're moving battalion headquarters up there now. Get your people and come along. Attack or something."

After a very full night, the scout officer crawled and scuttled along the last tip of the Bois de Belleau, looking for a hole that a battalion runner told him about. "Seen the lieutenant diggin' in just past that last Maxim gun, sir. Right at the nose of the woods where the big rocks is. There's about a dozen dead Helms layin' by a big tree, all together. Can't miss it, sir." The scout officer had no desire to be moving in the cool of the morning, when all well-regulated people are asleep if possible, and if you moved here the old Boche had a way of sniping at you with 88s—that wicked, flat-trajectory Austrian gun—but he followed an urge that only Tommie could supply.

So he came at last to a miserable shelter scooped in the lee of a rock. Here two long legs protruded from under a brown German blanket, and here he prodded and shook until the deplorable countenance of his brother officer emerged yawning.

"Say," demanded the scout officer, "you save my stum? Gimme my stum." "Why, hello, Jim! Why didn't you come back, like you said you was? Where you been? You said you was comin' right back."

"Didn't you save me my monkey-meat? We went on a raid, damn it!"

"Raid? Raid? What raid?" "Oh, we went over to Torcy. Gimme my monkey-meat."

"Well, you see, Jim—the fact is—well, we got moved up here right after you left, and they attacked from in here, an' we came on in after them. Just got to sleep—"

"I haven't had any sleep or any chow or anything—two sardines, by the bright face of God—"

The scout officer pounced upon a frowny musette bag which the other had used for a pillow and jerked out a fire-blackened mess-kit. He wrenched the lid off and snarled horribly. "Empty, by God!"

His hands fell lax across his knees. He looked sadly over the blasted fields of Torcy, and he said, with the cold bitterness of a man who has tried it all and come to a final conclusion: "War—sure—is—hell."

There were places like this down in the Touraine country, around the town Americans called St. Onlon. Canals with poplars mirrored in them, where it was pleasant to loaf at the end of the day. The women were kindly and disposed to make friends; it is a pity that there were not enough to go around. They had, also, an eye for corporals and sergeants; the bored privates on the bank, sentimental souls, are singing "Sweet Ad-e-lina," or it may be something very different. The sergeant, a sensitive spirit, will presently see that they get some extra police duty.

CHAPTER X

The Rhine.

The bugles went while it was still as dark as the inside of a dog. There was swearing and sickly yellow candle-light in the billets, mean houses in a mean little Rhine-Provence town, and the chow lines formed on the company galleys in an icy December rain. The rain pattered on helmets and mess-kits, and fell in slanting lines through the smoky circles of light where the cooking-fires burned feebly.

The faces of the marines, as they filed out of the dark for food, were gray and frowny. The cooks issued corn-bill hash, and dared any man to growl on the coffee. How the hell could it be filled enough, with wet wood and very little of that—been up all night, as it is—you sports just pull in your necks!

The companies gulped their ration in sullen silence, rolled damp blankets into the prescribed pack, and when the bugles squawked assembly, they fell in without confusion or enthusiasm. Platoon sergeants, with flash lights or lanterns, called the rolls; somewhere out in front, first sergeants received the reports; officers clumped along the lines to their units, grumbling. "All here, first sergeant?" "Beg the capt'n's pardon—couldn't see you in the dark, sir—all present-counted-for, sir!" "Nice day for a hike. Major says, goin' to the Rhine today. Eighteen or twenty kilometers—don't know exactly. Dam' such a war! I'd like the old kid, where you want into winter quarters—Brrr—" The captain pulled his collar around his ears.

Presently a bad-tempered drawing voice bayed "Squads right—march!" There was a shuffle of hobnails in the mud, and the rattle of rifle-slings. The First battalion of the Fifth marines took the road.

These German roads were all honesty metalled, but the inch or so of mud on the surface was like soup underfoot, and the overcoats soaked up the rain-like blotting-paper. It was the kind of a morning with no line between night and daylight. The blackness turned to gray, and, after a while, the major, on his horse, could look back and see the end of his column. The battalion, he reflected, was up to strength again. It hadn't been this large since it went to Blanc Mont, the end of September.

He shut his eyes on that thought—a hundred and thirty men that came out, where a thousand went in—then replacements, and after the amputees, more replacements. Perhaps the quality was running down a little.

Men Walked Silent, Remembering the Old Dead.

The new chaps didn't seem as tall and broad as the old men, the tall, sunburnt Leathernecks that went out the road from Meaux, toward Chateau-Thierry, in the spring.

Odd, just six months since the spring. . . . But a few veterans and hard drilling between fights would keep the temper in an outfit!

One remembered a phrase in an order of the division commander—"The Second division has never failed to impose its will upon the enemy!" And today it crossed the German Rhine. He swung out of his saddle and stood by the road to watch them pass; 1,200 men, helmets and rifles gleaming a little in the wet gray light.

The road led eastward through a country of low hills, sodden in the rain. Untidy clouds sprawled on the greets and spilled wet blankets into the valleys. The land was all in cultivation, laid off in precise squares and oblongs; some newly plowed, some sparsely green with turnips and rye. It looked ugly and ordered and sullenly prosperous. There was slow conversation in the column.

"Anybody know where we goin' today?" "Damin'—naw—I did hear the skipper's orderly say we'd make the Rhine, some time—" "How far—" "Some guy was lookin' at a map at battalion. Said it was about thirty kilometers." "It's always 'bout thirty kilometers in 'this dam' country—" "Yeh! But I remember one time it was twelve kilometers. The night we hiked up to Verdun, back last March. Had a Frawg guide—little shrimp wit' a forked beard. Ask him how far, all he'd say was: 'Dooz kilometers—dooz kilometers—"

"Hiked all night in the rain, like this, an' at daylight we came to a sign, wit' the name of the place we're goin' to, an' it said 'Dooz kilometers'—that guide, he let on that he was right surprised—" But there were very few men in the column who remembered the hike to Verdun, in the early spring of 1918; in one company eight, in another eleven; in the whole battalion the barest handful. It had been a long road. The first way-station was the Bois de Belleau; a lot of people stopped there, and were there yet. And there were more, comfortably rotting in the Forêt de Retz, south of Soissons. And more yet, well dead around Blanc Mont. And a vast drift of them back in hospitals. Men walked silent, remembering the old dead. Twelve hundred men hiking to the Rhine, and how many ghosts. The mist rolled around the column.

You replacements never knew Corporal Snair, that got bumped-off at Soissons, dallyin' with a Maxim gun. He was a musical cuss, an' he used sing a song to the tune of the 'Old Gray Mare—She Ain't What She Uster Be'—somethin' like

"The U. S. flag will fly over Germany less than a year from now—"

—and now it is, an' it's a pity he ain't here to see it—" "Well, but he's restin' easy where he is—me, I'm cold as hell an' 'this dam' drizzle is drainin' down my neck—"

There was nothing but the mist and the rain, and a mean, cold little wind with a bite in it. North and south, from the edge of Holland to the Metz gateway, all the armies were marching. Ahead, just out of contact, went the German armies. The battalion passed a dense little wood of fir—Christmas-tree woods, the battalion called them.

"FIX BAYONETS"

This clump showed unmistakably that it had been a camp; but there was no litter; the Boche who bivouacked there had left it neat and clean. Along the road in orderly piles were some hundreds of the round German helmets, and parked precisely in a cleared place, where horse-lines had been, was a battery of 105 field howitzers. The old Boche was jettisoning what he didn't need. The battalion observed and was thoughtful.

"What about the old Boche?—You think he was licked enough?" "No, I don't. That stuff back there, they laid it down under orders, like they do everything. It's stacked—it ain't just thrown away. An' look how they police up behind themselves." "Yeh! Remember the other day, when we was advance-guard, we could see their rear-guard, sometimes—perfect order, an' all that—not like a defeated outfit, at all!" "Sure! I hope to split in yo' mess-kit it ain't! An' those little towns back yonder, with the arches an' the flags and the welcome returnin' heroes stuff—none of that was for us." "They ain't licked enough. Look at this country—winter plowin' done—everything ship-shape—no shell-holes—no barb' wire—who in hell won this war, anyway?"

"You said it. We oughter got up in here an' showed the old Boche what it was like, to have a war in his own yard." "Well, I've been in all of it, an' personally I was glad when the shootin' stopped. I got me some sleep an' a full belly, an' a pair of new shoes—an' some fireman's underwear, too. An' I was right proud not to be killed. I ain't prepared to die." "We know you ain't, sergeant—we know." "Aw, belay that—I mean, I was glad, myself, but we oughter gone on—oughter finished it while we was at it. He wasn't licked enough, an' now he's goin' home like a peacock wit' seven tails!"

This was the consensus of opinion, delivered with consideration in the rain. The replacements, especially those who had joined up after the armistice in Belgium, were savagely regretful. The chaps who had come in after Champagne, and been among those present at one fight, were bloodthirsty, but to a lesser degree. Only the veterans were entirely calm. The rain fell, the road grew heavier. The battalion, soaked and miserable, plodded on. They passed through many villages, all alike; all ugly and without character. The houses were closed and shuttered. You saw few people, but you always had the feeling of eyes behind the shutters. One thick-bodied Boche, in uniform—an artilleryman, by his leather breeches—stood in the doorway of a house, smoking a porcelain pipe that hung to his knee. His face was set in a cast of hate. He stood and stared, and the battalion, passing, looked him over with respect.

"Understand a bird like that." "Yeh—he's honest. Those dam' Heines in the billet last night, they made me sick. That fellow that talked English. Says he was glad his American fren's, present by agreement in the Rhetinian, to welcome—says that to me, an' would the Herr Soldier like a good cup of coffee?" "Dam' his remarks—how 'bout the coffee? "Well, it tasted funny, but it was hot." "Old guy at our billet gave us some cognac. Hot stuff! He didn't let on, though. You know those trick certificates a soldier's family gets in Germany?—Colored picture like a Drol' Guerre certificate, shows a fat, beer-drinkin' Heine angel standin' over a dead Boche—signed Wilhelm R.—you know.

"Well, this bird had six of them in his front room, all framed on the wall. I gathered they was his sons. Four jumped off at Verdun in 1916. One very recent—Solissons, July. Wonder if we met that fella? He stood there an' looked at me while I was readin' 'em, an' he looked like a wolf. I don't blame him. But how come he gave us the cognac?" Later the battalion learned that the Boche had orders to be hospitable. Toward noon the clouds lifted, and the rain slowed to a thin drizzle, although it did not stop. The battalion filed between hills toward a great valley, dimly seen. The hills towered over them, dark, menacing. "No wonder the old Boche has such a mean disposition. Ityin' in a country like this—" The battalion came into a town with paved streets and trolley-cars and tall factory chimneys that did not smoke. Platoon commanders said it was Remagen; those towers to the right would be the bridge. There was a bridge, a great steel structure of high black arches. The battalion filed upon it. Under it black water flowed swiftly, with surges and eddies dimpled by the rain. High rocky hills came down out of the mist on the farther side.

"So this is the Rhine," remarked the battalion. "Hell!" A few files were interested. A tank Texan said: "I don't see much to make a fuss about. You boys ever see the Trinity in overflow time? Ten miles from bank to bank, in the McKenzie Bend country—why, we'd call this a creek down where I come from—" "Naw, it ain't much river—an' no more is your dam' Trinity! I was raised in Sent Louis—Ole Missip' now—" "Well, rivers in this country are mainly over-touted. That Marne, it wouldn't be much more'n a branch, down South. I never saw that there Vesle river, but a guy in the Thirty-second division, that was with me in Neuilly, he says you could mighty near jump across it." "Heard anything about chow?—Galley went on ahead awhile ago—when do we eat—"

For four years no hostile troops with arms in their hands had seen this river; only sad files of prisoners had crossed it, under German guard. The battalion turned right on the eastern bank and went up the river, on a broad road between a cliff and the swift black water. There were many houses, a continuous town. It was past noon of a Friday, the 13th December, and the Boche school-children were out. They gathered to look at the passing column. The marines eyed them keenly.

These kids were different. They did not point or talk or cry out, after the manner of children. They stood in stolid groups, wooden-faced, with unwinking pale-blue eyes. The boys were nearly all in field-gray uniform cloth—cut down, perhaps, from the cast-off clothes of an elder. Some of them wore hoods and round soldier-caps. They carried books and lunch-boxes, knapsack fashion, on their shoulders. "Look, will you—that kid there ain't more'n a yearlin', and they've got him in heavy marchin' order already!" "Yeh,—they start 'em early—that's howcome they're the way they are—these Boche."

There were round-faced little girls with straw-colored braids, in cloaks. They did not look poorly fed, like the waxen-faced children the battalion remembered in France. And at every corner there were more of them. The battalion was impressed. "Say—you see all those kids—all those little square-heads! Hundreds of 'em. I'll swear! Something's got to be done about these people. I tell you, these Boche are dangerous! They have too many children."

One more song—"Long Boy."

One of the very few soldier songs that survived the Atlantic voyage—although it suffered some sea change—was "Long Boy." It ran (with variations): "Good-bye, Maw! Good-bye, Paw. Good-bye, maw, with your old sea-haw."

I'll bring you a Turk an' a Kaiser too, And that's about all one fellow can do. This file pictured above is cheering his soul in the angle of the bridge at Sully-le-Long, just outside of Cognac Pete's buvette. In a little while an M. P. with no ear for music will run him in. [THE END.]

Community Building

Color Has Big Part in Home Construction

Color is one of the most important features about the home. It governs to a surprisingly large degree not only appearances but temperament. It makes not only for beauty but for good or ill nature as well. Certain colors are just as depressing as others are inspiring. Women are just as particular, ordinarily, about the coloring of the paper on the walls of their homes as they are about the color of their clothing. Men are less responsive, perhaps, and pay less attention to their environment, yet unconsciously for all that they are affected more or less.

The same thing applies to the materials of which your home is constructed. Instinctively you turn away from the house that has a drab and dreary appearance. Just as quickly you admire the one with a rich, warm coloring in the walls. Brick houses particularly have this quality made permanent in the burning of the bricks. In most other wall materials it must be artificially produced and frequently renewed.

Points to Remember When Purchasing Home

One thing that a man should never forget when he is buying a home is that the home will be the center of his family life, probably for many years. His children will be brought up in it and amidst its surroundings. In it his wife must do most of her work, and in it both he and his wife will spend most of their leisure time. He should, therefore, look at the different properties available and see how they measure up by these common-sense, practical standards. It is well for the family to picture itself going through its daily routine in the new house, cooking, cleaning, going to work, school, play, etc., at all seasons.

The mere fact that a showy mantle-piece is displayed, that a four-inch steel I-beam supports the floor, that a radio set has been installed or that several French plate glass mirrors are built in doors should not determine his choice or induce him to pay an additional $500 for the property.

Surroundings Count

Merely to be assured of the character of surrounding development is not enough for the property owner, according to William I. Whitney, district sales manager of a leading Detroit company.

"The appreciation of a diamond's value," Mr. Whitney said, "will not be as great if it is set in cheap silver or brass. It may be the finest blue-white stone, but its setting detracts from an appreciation of its value. It has always been the same with property. A house might be splendidly constructed, have architectural beauties of the highest order, but if the character of the surroundings do not fit it, its desirability will be less and the investment in it will suffer. For that reason people have come to see the importance of choosing property which is located in surroundings whose development is controlled. The chance for increasing property value is influenced tremendously by what goes on around it."

Establishing an Industry

Economy, service and prestige are the factors which usually determine for the manufacturer or distributor where he shall establish his plant, executive office or branch.

Under economy he considers fee and rent values, taxes, availability of raw materials he uses in his business, market for finished products and labor supply.

Under prestige comes the reputation of the locality as a business center of wide advertising value, a place which is not unknown to his trade or to kindred trades.

Choosing Building Site

Every individual business site has larger possibilities for certain kinds of business enterprises than it has for others. The property manager who can arrive at just which kind of business would be most successful in the exact location of a particular building in his charge and who can make the reasons clear to his prospective tenant, is a property manager who has gone far to minimize the vacancy factor in the earning capacity of that building.

Home Ownership

The soundest thing in America today is absolute ownership. It is the keynote to the real prosperity of the individual. People should own a home before they own an automobile or a radio.

A man who owns a home is a better citizen and better influence for the community in which he lives.—Mr. Chas.

To Teach Home Building

Two leading educational institutions, the State University at Columbus and the municipal university of Cincinnati, will begin this fall to give instructions on the organization of building and loan associations. More than 50,000 homes in Ohio were directly financed by building and loan associations last year.

HELPS PAINFUL ACHING BACK

Lumbago and a stiff, aching back suggest at once the need of a good diuretic to stimulate kidney secretions and rid the system of troublesome poisons that cause the distressing aches. Apprenticeship System

The custom of requiring a beginning worker to serve a period of preliminary training and learning before being permitted to follow his trade or craft reaches back at least as far as the sixteenth century. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth it was enacted that no person should work at any trade without serving an apprenticeship of seven years.

THE OTHER MAN'S JOB

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois

JIMMY has just come back from a conference of students held at one of the great universities of the Middle West, and he is not a little stirred up over the situation as he sees it in his own institution. Jimmie is nineteen and has, of course, developed the judgment which comes with years; he has a bright mind, and has done excellently in learning things and passing the simple examinations which college teachers are accustomed to give. He belongs to a number of organizations and has done what he could not shift to some one else in keeping these going.

The serious fact that this conference has brought to his attention is that the university authorities are not getting, as they should, the benefit of his experience and judgment and of the experience and judgment of his fellow students in the administration of university affairs.

"Why, we don't know anything about what is going on," he said excitedly. "Now up in Wisconsin—'and then he explains how things are being done by our neighbors.

"Now they took away the old barns on the south campus not long ago and cut down two trees. No one ever consulted us about it; we haven't the least idea what it was done for. Now isn't this our university, and shouldn't we have something to say before they go ahead like that?"

I explained that such matters were in the hands of trustees elected by the people of the state and were being done by other officials especially delegated to manage details of that sort, but my explanation did not satisfy Jimmie.

"A girl was dismissed last week for forgery and two men for stealing. We didn't have anything to say about it and there wasn't a single undergraduate there to defend them."

I tried to show him that whatever young people might have to say in defense of theft and forgery the general public were still opposed to employing these methods in getting on in the world, but he was determined to get at the administration and to do what he could to help in running things. He wanted to do something big.

Like a great many older people, Jimmie was running about trying to settle other people's affairs and to do other people's business when his own was not being managed as well as it might have been. There was not the unity in his fraternity that could have been brought about had he given a little more time to it. The scholarship of the Tri Zetas could have been pulled up if he had put his shoulder to the wheel a little more strongly. There was a good deal of dishonesty and unconventionality about him, but that was too personal and individual for him to concern himself greatly about it. The work of the Christian association was needing to be done and Jimmie was a member. He did not see, as many older and wiser people do not, that he had a whole world of his own to help manage and direct and organize, and that he one could do this so well as himself. What he wanted was to help run things about which he knew least.

South Haven—Bees are expected to play an important role in the production of fruit in Michigan this year through co-operative arrangements between beekeepers and fruit growers. Some fruit varieties must be cross-pollinated with others for which they have special affinities or else they do not bear. "Sheep Acres" Is of Much Interest Extra Feeding of Ewes at Breeding Time Helps.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Comprising a tract of approximately 100 acres of tillable land in the animal husbandry experiment farm at Beltsville, Md., "Sheep Acres" is yielding many results of interest to flock owners of the United States. The name is gradually coming to mean the proving ground for problems of sheep production under intensive conditions typical of farm sheep raising. A practical system of forage-crop pastures, experiments already have shown, enables sheep to be pastured longer and moved from field to field, thereby controlling parasites more fully than when maintained under the usual permanent-pasture method. This practice makes it possible also to keep a farm flock on less cured feed, thereby saving expense and labor.

Another important result of experimental work at "Sheep Acres" concerns the effect of extra feeding of ewes at breeding time on the percentage of twins in the lamb crop. An advantage of 18 lambs per 100 ewes has resulted from keeping ewes in a highly nourished condition during that season.

Other experiments deal with growth of lambs, both in weight and size, fixing of type in purebred sheep by selective breeding, and rate of wool growth. The flock at "Sheep Acres" consists of approximately 200 sheep, including rams, ewes and lambs, representing the Southdown, Shropshire, Hampshire and Corriedale breeds.

D. A. Spencer is in charge of the investigations conducted at "Sheep Acres," and B. F. Brandon is superintendent of the farm of which "Sheep Acres" is a part.

Farm Machine Hospital Saves Time and Money

During cold winter and early spring days the farm shop is a very busy place for the successful farmer. He may profitably utilize his spare time there and make repairs of all sorts, according to John W. Sjogren, associate professor of agronomy, Colorado Agricultural college.

"Among the more important farm repairs to be made are: Replacing broken hammer and fork handles, overhauling farm machinery and equipment, and the repairing and oiling of work harness. On many farms the tractor and automobile are also part of the farm equipment. Where a farm machinery hospital is available, these machines are readily repaired and adjusted during the winter months.

"The farm shop need not be an expensive building or contain a large assortment of expensive tools. The tools that are very desirable to have in any repair shop, are: Work bench, vise, hammer, hand saws, hack saw, wrenches, cold chisels, punches, planes, drills, square, level, hatchet, screw-driver, drawing knife, yoke shave, forge, anvil, blacksmith hammer, tongs, grindstone, emery wheel, drill, and harness repair tools.

Garden Is Best Paying Patch on Average Farm

Garden time comes when the farmer is so busy with other necessary work that he thinks he cannot spare the time to put in the garden. Many say they can't fiddle around with a little old garden. The result is that the wife assumes the responsibility as well as all the work for the farm garden.

No matter how low the prices of farm crops fall, the farmer can always be sure of a good garden and enough to eat. If the wife has to look after the garden in addition to her household duties, the garden will necessarily be small. If the farmer himself spends more time in his garden, he will find that the garden pays better than any field crop he can grow for the amount of land it occupies and the amount of labor required.—Thomas H. Summers, Extension Service, Colorado Agricultural College.

FARM FACTS

Gullies steal soil fertility. A brush dam will stop them.

Good preparation of the seedbed usually means that less cultivation will be needed later.

Only the farmer who feels a real dignity in his calling has the right attitude towards farming.

Money for legume seed and labor used in soil improvement is a profitable investment, not an expense.

To grow carefree in watching out for the various pests may mean a serious crop loss. The spray should not be idle long.

Clover following wheat is especially favored by phosphatic fertilization. The effect of this fertilization can frequently be observed for several years.

With the high price of potatoes, one wants to get new potatoes real quick. Place them in trays in a warm room in the sunlight, while the ground is being prepared. The sprouting will advance their growth by weeks.

Robert Ames in Love and Money Tangle

In the illustration Mr. Ames and his new wife are shown, and, inset, is Miss Lambert. The actor says suits for money do not worry him for he has none.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Head Bumps

Usually a knock on the head results in a bump, rather than a dent. This is part of nature's repair scheme. The blood vessels at that point enlarge, carrying excess blood there. Healing elements in the blood thus pass to the wound and bring new materials to replace any that were damaged as a result of the knock. (© 1927 Western Newspaper Union.)
