Meetings For Chick Growers

Organization Meeting will be Held in Boyne City, January 18.

The poultry raisers will be interested to learn that a "Better Chicks Campaign" will be started in Charlevoix County this month. It will be carried on by a group of leaders who will attend four meetings, where instructions will be given by a poultry specialist on all phases of chick rearing, and who will then carry the information back to their respective community and give the work to at least five other persons.

It is expected that at least seventy-five people should be reached in this manner and receive more benefit and value from the meetings than if they were public, in addition there will be approximately fifteen leaders scattered in all sections of the county who would have all the information available and could assist their neighbors with their poultry problems.

The organization meeting will be held in the Boyne City Library on Wednesday afternoon January 18th, at 2:00 fast time. A cordial invitation is extended to all poultry raisers in the county to attend this meeting and assist in organizing the campaign. Be sure to have a representative from your community present. January 18th date, Boyne City the place.

Lansing—Assurance that bovine tuberculosis eradication work in Michigan will be continued after January 1, through an emergency appropriation fund has been secured from Governor Fred W. Green, by the Michigan State Milk Producers' association. Some anxiety had been felt in agricultural circles because of a communication from Chicago's commissioner of health, saying that shipments of milk or cream to Chicago after January 1, would be excluded unless re-tests of producing herds were continued.

Lansing—Forest fires in 1927 swept over 94,291 acres and did damage amounting to $65,034, according to a report completed by the State Conservation Department. There were 2,280 fires, large and small, 499 of which were started by smokers, 101 by brush burning, 132 by camp fires, 386 by railroads and 70 were incendiary. The remainder were of undetermined origin.

New Year Aftermath

If We Divide East Jordan's Wealth

If all the wealth in East Jordan was hoarded in a barrel, with the understanding that would be distributed among the citizens of East Jordan it would be to the profit of every citizen, rich and poor to make the barrel as rich as possible.

Knowing that the contents would be distributed among the citizens here, and that they alone would share in the prize, each man, woman and child would strive to pack the barrel as tight as possible. There would be no careless dispatch of money to other cities, where other people would be happy in the distribution of the wealth, foolishly contributed by the people of East Jordan.

The wealth of East Jordan is expressed in money and every citizen has some of it. The barrel into which it can be placed is the commerce of East Jordan. Every time a citizen buys from a East Jordan merchant he puts some of his wealth (money) into the business barrel of East Jordan. This business barrel is in turn distributed to our citizens in wages, rents, and other transactions. The larger the barrel and the tighter it is packed the larger will be the share of every citizen.

The distribution of the wealth of East Jordan, however, does not happen all at once. It is in process throughout the year. Every day as citizens trade in East Jordan they add to the sum in the business barrel, and other citizens, taking it out, pass it around. The only hitch in this endless chain comes when some thoughtless man or woman, after receiving some of East Jordan's wealth sends it through the mails to another city, where it gets into another barrel and is distributed among other people.

Resolutions are made, not kept.

Rural Carrier Re- ceives Fine Present

Ira S. (Pat) Foote, Rural Mail Carrier on Route 2, East Jordan, was the recipient of a fine Camels skin robe the past week, the donor being George R. Hemingway of Oak Park, Ill., prop'r of the Charlevoix Nuiseries and a summer resident on Mr. Foote's route.

This Camels hide was sent Mr. Hemingway by a brother who has been in China over twenty years and who purchased the hide in Mongolia. The latter had it made up into a fur robe. Thinking of Pat and his long cold, daily trips, Mr. Hemingway decided to make him a present of this valuable fur robe.

In a closing sentence of the letter accompanying the robe Mr. Hemingway says:—"Will be glad to see you in the summer time. You always bring us a lot of good cheer with our mail, and we appreciate it more than we can tell you."

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Forks Comparatively New

Forks were not even known to the English people until the Seventeenth century when they were brought there from Italy. It is believed our own ancestor who came over in the Mayflower never saw a small fork such as we use at the table. Even to this day the Egyptians and Persians eat with their fingers.

It may seem funny but the better the fire the less smoke.

Looking Forward To The New

BACKWARD ON THE OLD YEAR

January was named for the Roman god Janus, who had two faces and looked two ways—forward and backward. So January 1 is the day for looking two ways—backward into the year which has just ended and forward into the year which lies before us.

It is well for us, as citizens of this community, to look back, to review the events of the past year. We may take pride in such achievements, as we have helped accomplish. It is well, for us to consider our mistakes, our shortcomings, our failures to do the things we should have done; but it is not well for us to brood over those failures, nor to dwell too long in regarding with pride our achievements.

Better it is for us to look forward into the new year, to the new opportunities which lie before us and which we, profiting by the mistakes of the past, may do our share in seizing and turning to the advantage of our community.

For if there is one New Year's resolution which we should make, it is the resolution that we will cooperate during the coming year in making our community better. Modern conditions have substituted cooperative effort for individualism as the best answer to economic questions and to the philosophical problem of obtaining the greatest good for the greatest number. But co-operative effort is composed of individual efforts, and if the greatest good for the greatest number in our community is to be attained, it can only be done by the individual assuming his share of the co-operative effort.

This community can be made a better community and a stronger community if we resolve to co-operate with each other in making it so. Co-operating means more than just resolving. It means DOING; and if we are to do things upon which we can look back with pride next New Year's Day, this New Year's Day is the best day in all the year to begin doing them.

See European Corn Borer

Moving Pictures, Charts, and Other Material To Be Shown in The County.

The European Corn Borer, a pest that has done more damage to agriculture than any other recent insect is steadily gaining in Michigan and many other states. It is now in some twenty-eight counties in Michigan and is approaching Charlevoix from two directions. We may expect its appearance no doubt in two or three years. We should not be unduly alarmed at present, for the pest has not reached this county, but we should know all about this corn borer, its life, history, what damage it does, how to combat it, and what preventive measures can be used.

In order to answer these questions and to give a thoroughly up-to-date discussion on the borer and what to do about it, a series of four meetings will be held in Charlevoix County on Friday and Saturday January 20 and 21. Following are the meetings:

First Meeting—Court House in Charlevoix on Friday afternoon January 20th, at 2:30 fast time.

Second Meeting—Boyne Falls Townhall on Friday evening January 20th, at 8:30 fast time.

Third Meeting—Boyne City Library on Saturday afternoon, January 21, at 2:30 fast time.

Fourth Meeting—East Jordan High School Auditorium on Saturday evening, January 21, at 8:30 fast time.

Mr. T. S. Tolles, Extension Specialist, Corn Borer Work will be the speaker. He is equipped with a motion picture machine with reels on measures. He also has charts, Riker corn borer life, history, and control mounts, and other material, and will be prepared to give the best information on this dreaded pest.

In the future Charlevoix County will be more interested in the corn borer than at present and the meetings are for the purpose of giving information that will permit every farmer to see for himself the necessity of knowing all the facts pertaining to the corn borer. This is your opportunity. Make your plans now for attending.

Spruce Enters Ranks State Farm Crops

East Lansing, Jan. 10th—A look into the future and a desire to avoid losses occasioned by lack of raw materials for use in their mills has led one of Michigan's manufacturers of paper pulp to cooperate with Michigan State College forestry department in a project to make white spruce a new crop for state farmers.

Buyers of pulpwood find that the supply of spruce is decreasing at a rate that threatens a shortage of the wood in the future. Six companies in Michigan have an investment of millions of dollars in mills that are equipped to handle spruce for manufacture into pulp.

These mills will have to be remodeled at a great financial loss to equip them to handle any wood that requires a different manufacturing process than is used for spruce.

The Port Huron Sulphite Paper Company, Port Huron, two years ago agreed to purchase white spruce seed which would be planted and grown in the forestry nursery at State College, and the young trees sold to farmers at cost. The first lot of 200,000 trees will be distributed this spring. The trees should be planted on moist, fairly fertile soil. The trees grow to marketable age in thirty years. Plantings should be made on ground that is not producing returns from ordinary crops.

State News in Brief

Clare—Glenn Blystone, 35 years old, Arthur Township farmer, and Herbert Himes, of Roscommon, pleaded guilty in Circuit Court here to a charge of arson in connection with the burning of an unoccupied house owned by Blystone and insured for $3,000. Blystone admitted hiring Himes to set the fire and said the arranged price was $200.

Alpena—Edward Snyder, 23 years old, an Alpena boy, has come in for a bit of honor in connection with the Lindbergh Mexican flights. Snyder is chief pilot for the Compania Mexicana de Aviacion S. A., and he led the escort for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh when he flew to the Mexican capital. Then when Lindbergh went to meet his mother, Snyder again was selected as escort.

East Lansing—Growth of oak on Jack pine plains of Michigan is being studied in an experiment conducted jointly by Michigan State college and the Federal Lake States Forest experiment station, according to Professor A. K. Chittenden, head of the forestry department. Field work has been completed. The study indicates possibilities of growing oak on the pine plains for commercial purposes.

Lansing—The supreme court has granted the House of David complete immunity from state interference until the outcome of its appeal from Judge Louis H. Fead's decree appointing a receiver. Without a word of comment, the court decided in favor of the colony by denying the state's motion for an inventory of the cult's assets and an increase of the colony's bond from $25,000 to a sum equal to the findings of the inventory.

Grand Rapids—Stewart Edward White, noted author, who returned from a big game hunting expedition in Africa two years ago and plans another journey there in the near future, declared that hunting the big game with the bow and arrow is not nearly so productive of thrills as it is supposed to be. He is visiting his brother here. He said he is writing a new series of short stories to be published next summer.

East Lansing—That Michigan farmers as a whole are not only making a very meager financial profit from their farms but are in some cases losing money, is indicated by a year's survey of 25 farms in Ingham county conducted by E. B. Hill, assistant dean of agriculture at Michigan State college. The 25 farms represent a higher average than the average for the state as a whole. Even so, the eight least profitable of the lot show a loss of $326, for the year 1927.

Imlay City—Residents of fractional school district No. 1, Mayfield, Deerfield, North Branch and Arcadia townships, are protesting against a recent order by the state superintendent of public instruction that a new school house, to cost $12,000, be built on the site of the one destroyed by fire in November. The order states further that equipment valued at $4,000 must be purchased. The taxpayers say that a school house and equipment costing $16,000 is far in excess of their needs and much more than they can pay.

Memphis—Henry Raymond, 87 years old, village blacksmith of Riley Center, may be classed as a "vanishing American," for with the passing of his generation there will be no blacksmiths left. He does all the horse-shoeing, tire setting, and general repair work for the surrounding country. The trend of modern times has lightened his work, and low finds time to spend at his favorite hobby, fishing. Raymond is believed to be the oldest person actively engaged in the work in this part of the state.

Port Huron—Bright industrial prospects feature the new year for Port Huron. During 1927 four manufacturing concerns and the Grand Trunk Railway expended $2,708,000 in improving facilities. The Dunn Sulphite Paper Co. and the Port Huron Sulphite & Paper Co. have planned extensions to their plants. The Detroit Edison Co has erected a large plant in Marysville, in which several millions of dollars is invested, and 1928 calls for additions to this plant and an increased demand for workers.

Detroit—A perfect bridge hand, which statisticians say is dealt about once in 2,000,000 hands, was held here by Miss Virginia Hilton while playing at the home of Julius Fischer, a member of the party reported. Several tables were engaged in playing bridge at the time, but after 18 hands were dealt to Miss Hilton the guests were too excited to resume their games for half an hour or more. According to available statistics, it is the fourth time in the United States since early last summer that a perfect bridge hand has been held.

Bath—Roscoe G. Harte, of Bath, whose wife, Blanche Harte, was one of the victims of the explosion that wrecked the Bath Consolidated School last May with the loss of 44 lives, is creating a trust fund to help a

Co-operate to Make Mail Boxes Attractive

"Things useful need not be ugly," mused Edward N. Hines of the board of county road commissioners, in pointing to a letter he had received from Postmaster Charles L. Kellogg. In it the postmaster complimented the board on the attractive arrangement of mail boxes along the paved roads of Wayne county. "We were the pioneers in the movement to get rid of unsightly billboards, dilapidated shacks and unattractive mail boxes on public highways," Mr. Hines said. "Wayne county is one of the outstanding counties in the whole country for its good roads, and our board will not suffer that the beauty of the countryside be marred by such unsightly things. As soon as a road is completed, we approach the property owners along it to co-operate with us in grouping the mail boxes attractively and to do all in their power to enhance the beauty of the territory through which the road is passing."

Postmaster Kellogg's letter was in pursuance of a country-wide campaign recently inaugurated by the United States Post Office department at Washington by which postmasters and carriers were requested to "make earnest effort, without incurring expense to the department to secure the co-operation of patrons of rural routes with a view to effecting the grouping of boxes wherever possible. The improvement which may thus be made will result in the equipment being a credit to the service and to the communities as well."—Detroit News.

Beginning to Realize True Value of Parks

People have come to realize the value of parks. They are no longer considered merely a pleasurable adjunct to a community, but the public has awakened to the realization that parks have a vital influence on personal and civic growth. They are shock absorbers that help to keep us normal and happy. They are good for our souls, our minds, and our bodies. We find that we need these stretches of natural beauty to counteract the confining life of a city which narrows our horizon to limited bits of green and occasional patches of sky. This is proved by the fact that not only is there a growing tendency to spend more leisure time in these outdoor breathing spots, but that homes are built overlooking parks. In an effort to make their beauty a permanent part of everyday life, parks are as necessary as our public libraries, our art institute, or our symphony orchestra. They are one of our most valuable civic institutions.—Exchange.

Fosters Nature Study

The move made by Rev. Joseph Murgas, pastor of a Slovak congregation in North Wilkesbarre, Pa., to bring the children of the parish, and all others who care to avail themselves of the opportunity into closer touch with nature, is worthy of special commendation. The pastor, says Nature Magazine, has secured a tract of 30 acres where bird and plant life are to be propagated and encouraged, and all phases of nature fostered for their educational inspirational value.

Benefit in Consolidation

Throughout the country there seems to be a tendency to consolidate small towns and communities into cities. Better streets, fire and police protection, water supply, sewage disposal, park facilities and zoning law administration are only a few of the advantages that follow such moves. Furthermore, consolidation makes for harmonious thought and action in areas the needs of which are similar. —Chicago Post.

Utilize All Ground

Real estate is sold by the foot, and should be utilized by the foot. On the small lot there is especial need to conserve space. In any case, use what is needed to accommodate proper planting. Trees and shrubs not only increase in intrinsic value as they grow, but every year of growth adds to the charm, and therefore to the salability of the property.

Beauty Brings Joy

The power of beauty to transform the lives of men has been demonstrated in the mining town of Cheltenham, Ill., where an annual garden contest has raised the standards of living of the families of the miners.—Exchange.

Smaller Places Not Losing Their Ground

In view of the general impression that all the young folks are leaving the rural districts to go to the city, it is interesting to notice that the village still maintains its existence and shows no signs of disintegration. Through the country are scattered countless thousands of small towns, frequently located well in the interior and at a great distance from any sizable city at all. These were settled, or at least founded, a long time ago. It might be thought that since cities are constantly growing and devouring more and more territory these towns would be drained of population.

But instead of disappearing the average small town has calmly maintained its existence, not always growing rapidly, perhaps, but not losing ground, either. Now and then a new house goes up, or a new business opens its doors to local employees, or a new store brightens the main street with its attractive display. Some of the residents take up lives in the faraway city, but others move into the town. These may be either city people who are satisfying a lifelong wish to live in the country, or they may be farmers who have sold their acres and retired to spend their late years in the sociable atmosphere of the village.

So the life of the place is renewed, refreshed and invigorated.—Exchange.

Trees Require Care for Good Condition

There are so many decrepid, unkempt, battered and broken trees in all localities that people often wonder if it is really possible to keep trees in a thriving, vigorous condition.

The old unsightly wrecks of trees are frequently a menace and an eyesore to the community. A tree that is not a thing of magnificent beauty is not worth having. And ordinarily there is little reason why trees should not be kept in good condition.

The principle of taking care of trees is the same as the principle involved in taking care of any other living thing. If attention is not given to defects, and diseases in youth, then it is certain that disintegration and early death will follow. Pretty much the same thing holds true with people.

The expense of removing decayed areas from trees and installing necessary sectional concrete fillings in the cavities, and the cost of other measures that may be required to restore a tree to health and beauty, is necessarily greater if trees are left to decay almost to the point of death before help is given to them.—Post.

The Sandman Story

by Martha Martin

IN THE BARNYARD

IN THE barnyard quite often there was story telling. One of the hens would tell the little chicks stories of other chicks and of adventures they had had and of good and bad deeds they had performed.

Mother Turkey would tell her children how they should act and would explain to them how miserable, for example, little turkeys had been who had disobeyed their mothers and had let their feet get wet during the first weeks of their lives.

Red Top the Rooster would tell of the days when he had been a young rooster and tell of how every one had paid attention to him and had listened, amazed and wonder-struck, at his crowing.

"All He Did Was to Call for His Doctor Friends."

The pigs would grunt and squeal and tell of famous pigs in the family—pigs who had been splendidly greedy and wonderful eaters!

There were stories to tell which would make the animals laugh and grin and at times the barnyard was filled with the laughter of the barnyard animals—such funny laughter as it is, too.

Maybe you have heard it at times? Of course, too, at times the animals did all sorts of things which would never be forgotten and later on these actions would be described to even younger chicks and turkeys and pigs and ducks.

Mrs. White Hen told of the days when she was a bride and how every one admired her wedding feathers and said that they were just suitable, for every one really should have white for a wedding.

The parrot in the enormous cage on the back porch squeaked and screamed and yelled at times with merriment for he had lots to say for himself and lots to remember.

The parrot had, at one time, helped to collect money for a hospital. The money had been needed badly and the parrot had sat up on a balcony and had shrieked:

"We need money. The doctors need money for the hospital. Help the doctors. Help the doctors and the hospital with your money."

Every one had looked up and had seen that the parrot was making all these cries and it was the parrot who was so successful in raising the funds that were needed. That was a favorite story in the barnyard, and the parrot was very proud of that, too.

Then the parrot had at one time escaped from the hospital—he had thought it would be rather fun to go off adventuring. And one day he got away and flew up to the branch of a near-by tree, but all he did when there was to call for his doctor friends and they opened his cage door so that he was able to go back to safety and his own real home.

And later on he had been given to the farmer who owned this barnyard. Yes, the parrot was a splendid parrot to have around, so many adventures had he had!

So story telling and wonderful deeds had their part in the life of the barnyard.

And this life in the barnyard went along so that every day it seemed that the animals were even happier than the day before.

Dash, the dog, was like a private watchman for them, and altogether the barnyard was as jolly and pleasant a place as ever a group of barnyard animals could have.

And when the barnyard animals heard that not only had they their stories to tell and to act, but that stories about them were being told all about, the pigs grunted, the rooster crowed, the hens cackled, the ducks quacked, and all the others chattered in their own peculiar way and said:

"Well, we're glad people know of us! After all we're a pretty fine set of animals!"

Pleas for Tolerance in Small Community

"The hope of the small community lies in its escape from the ancient, respectable lies about life, and in facing intelligently its own moral and intellectual problems, even as it has faced its own practical problems. When human beings think as clearly about their social organization as they do about their farm machinery, the day of drift to the thoughtless cities will be over."

So said Joseph K. Hart, University of Wisconsin, addressing the rural department of the Wisconsin Teachers' association. He discussed the future of America's small communities.

"If our small communities could become centers of actual interest, people would not care to live elsewhere," he said.

"Community interest comes of actual conditions. There must be interesting people in the community and they must be doing interesting things. They must admit that other people, especially young people, have the right to interesting social life and recreation, for interesting civic activities and responsibilities, for interesting mental activities, for interesting physical pleasures and for interesting moral and spiritual adventures.

"There are those who say that economic injustice is destroying our small communities and there is some truth in the statement. But economic injustice will never be eliminated from a community whose inhabitants are lacking in human interest and interests."

Matters to Consider in Establishing Home

The mental state of a family struggling to pay for a home amid a constant flood of repair bills, replacement costs, not to mention decorating bills, fuel bills, and general upkeep bills, is not a happy one.

In building or buying a house be sure that it is a good substantial house.

Better a five-room home with some built-in furniture to double the service of each room and have it a well built home than an eight-room house which is continually calling for repairs.

Better a home that is well within your income, even if it doesn't put up such a pretentious appearance, than one which keeps all the family members scrimping and going without.

It is fun economizing to own your home. To a certain point you are imbued with a sense of thrift and But don't pass the "com

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

SPINNING A KNIFE

IT IS to be hoped that no one who reads these articles will be guilty of such a breach of table etiquette as to spin a knife around at table. Yet if anyone should so far forget himself as to do such a thing let him be sure and spin the knife back again in a reverse direction or he will have bad luck. This superstition is one of which the essential and explanatory part has dropped out in the

DISTANCE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I KNOW a house where two reside,
Two hearts a thousand miles divide.

And then I think of you today,
Perhaps a thousand miles away,
But when I think of you, my dear,
It seems that you are almost here.

This brings us near or takes us far:
Not where we are but how we are.
How long the miles would lengthen out

If I had any cause to doubt,
How many miles the miles would be
To you, if you had doubt of me.

Ah, there are other women, too,
Who stay at home, as I must do.
I pity them, but more

The weary woman waiting for
Not someone's step but someone's sign.

Some word to make her day divine.

And I would rather have you there,
A thousand miles, and have you care,

Than have you here, your vows forgot,

Not caring whether here or not.
Distance is not some mile that parts;
It is the space between two hearts.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

BELIEVE IN YOURSELF

ARE you a believer? That is a question about yourself, not about your creeds or dog-trines.

Do you believe in yourself and is that belief sufficiently well founded to be a reliable mainstay in your endeavors?

One of the most interesting miracles that the Messiah performed was that in which He accomplished the healing of the boy who was an epileptic.

It is especially interesting because the first appeal was to the disciples who wholly failed in their efforts. The father of the child was a little weakened in his faith by this failure and when he applied to Jesus for help he did so with some evidence of doubt as to the results.

The reply of the Messiah was "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." And when His followers asked Him why they had failed to heal the child, He said

More Study Given by Architects to Color

Increasingly beautiful American cities are foreseen by Harry Boehm, a well-known New York architect, as a result of the greater attention given by architects to the effects of local atmospheric conditions on sunlight and color.

A material which may look well enough in one city may be a drab failure in another, Boehm points out, solely because of the almost imperceptible difference in the quality of the sunlight. This, he explains, is not necessarily caused by such obvious factors as smoke, or dust. It may result from the far more subtle conditions of atmospheric moisture, or density, changing the spectral composition of the light.

"These conditions, however, need no longer hamper the property owner or architect," Mr. Boehm asserts. "Building materials today offer a color range amply wide, and with sufficiently delicate distinctions of shade, to satisfy any needs. It is simply up to the designer to choose wisely, and as a general rule, he is doing so, today.

"He must know that color, as we see it, is reflected light. Certain pigments absorb certain portions of the light which falls upon them, and reflect other portions. No material can appear to have a color which is not a part of the light in which it is viewed. As the light changes in quality, the color of the material seems to change.

Small Town Hotels

Meet New Conditions

Improved highways and motor-car tourists have brought a new day to the hotels in smaller cities and towns and developed opportunities for business not known before. And the hotels have moved promptly to meet the new condition. Changes and improvements have been made quickly. One may stop with entire confidence in most places today when touring, find a tidy room, a good bed, a bath and appetizing food, in any small town hotel near any of the principal highways.

One finds these improvements well developed along the older tourist highways and finds progress completed or in evidence along the newer highways. These small hotel people have been wise. They have not built too largely, but they have built well. They understand how certainly the tourist longs for a bath after a day of travel, how a neat exterior makes
