See The Soil Truck

SIX STOPS IN CHARLEVOIX CO., MAY 23, 24 AND 25TH.

The maintenance of organic matter in the soil is essential to economical crop production from experiments conducted by the Soils Department of the Michigan State College. Results of these experiments will be displayed and discussed at the soil fertility truck meetings to be held in Charlevoix County on May 23, 24 and 25.

The cost of missing a leguminous crop in the rotation is clearly illustrated at these truck meetings by actual results. When to turn under sweet clover for green manuring has been definitely decided.

The effect of inoculating legumes, the best crops to use for green manuring, the beneficial results of adding organic matter to the soil are among other points to be discussed.

Attend one of the following stops in the County, all starting on eastern standard time:

First Meeting—Wednesday a. m., at 10:00 o'clock, at Albert Bathke, north of Horton Bay.

Second Meeting—Wednesday p. m., at 2:00 o'clock, at H. E. Gornell, north of Barnard.

Third Meeting—Thursday a. m., at 10:00 o'clock, at Fred Wurn, three miles west of Advance.

Fourth Meeting—Thursday p. m., at 2:00 o'clock, Ed. Erving, east of Boyne Falls.

Fifth Meeting—Friday a. m., at 10:00 o'clock, Bert Lumley, Deer Lake Road.

Sixth Meeting—Friday p. m., at 2:00 o'clock, Dan Swanson, near Rock Elm Grange.

"The Best Thing In Town!"

THE FUNCTION AND INFLUENCE OF THE SCHOOL BAND.

By E. V. BUTTELMAN

[Mr. Buttelman is Managing Editor of Jacobs' Band Monthly. For many years he has been vitally interested in the development of music in the Public Schools, and therefore is qualified to speak as an authority. He is emphatically of the opinion that the average school band justifies its existence as a musical organization, per se; but its significance extends beyond the realm of music and far outside the bounds of school walls and school days. In his enthusiasm he unqualifiedly considers it "The Best Thing in Town" for the development of character among American boys and girls.]

As I was walking down the principal street of a small town in which I chanced to be spending an evening I heard the lilting rhythm of a march played by a band. Because I am no different from the average individual I instinctively followed the martial strains to their source, and soon found myself seated amongst a crowd of citizens of all ages in what appeared to be the Town Hall. Pleasant folks they were—just an average small town audience of men, women and children. But I confess I didn't give a great deal of attention to my fellow auditors. It was the band seated on the stage that drew and held my attention. Please notice I say it was the band that held my attention, for while it was the music that drew me into the hall, the lure of the music was but spice to the fascinating appeal of the players themselves, for they were all children. I can feel the thrills they sent galloping along my spine even as I write these lines! And this was no new experience for me, nor an uncommon one to the average reader of this magazine. Yet do we always marvel anew when we hear a band of school children play music such as was totally beyond our skill or comprehension when we were school children, and which, indeed, few of us grown-ups would be able to play as well or at all today.

Seated there on the stage I saw some fifty youngsters—boys and girls. Their natty uniforms, their shining instruments, which seemed but to reflect the glow of their happy faces, filled my veins with the elixir of youth. When, in response to the young conductor's baton, the players burst into the opening chord of a fine old masterpiece my emotions well-nigh burst all bounds. True enough, I had heard older amateur and professional bands play that same number better—yet not so much better. True enough, the intonation was not always absolutely perfect, and what was lacking in interpretation and finesse might be gained as the young conductor broadened his vision, imagination and experience. Once a clarinet went out of control and gave a very modern effect to a delicate passage. A schooled bandmaster might have criticized the instrumentation and decried the want of balance because of preponderance of melody instruments and lack of basses.

But I did not think of these things, for it was not alone the merit of the music which held me—and had I felt the disposition to be analytical, my every criticism would have been submerged in the thrill of the fact that such music as I heard was produced by boys and girls scarce in their teens!

Presently the number reached its climax and I joined so heartily in the thunderous applause which followed that the nerves in my palms would have protested were it not that all physical sensation was overshadowed by ecstasy of mind and soul. Rarely have I been stirred so profoundly. The conductor bowed smilingly and as the applause continued, the entire band arose. No professional band could have acknowledged the ovation more gracefully and no professional band ever received greater or more sincere applause.

The man at my right turned to me with glistening eyes. "The cornet player in the second chair is my boy," said he. Silently I gripped his hand. I knew then the full significance of my emotions, for they answered not only the call of the music and the spirit of youth and enthusiasm, but also were swept on the vibrant waves of pride and happiness radiating from the hearts of the fathers and mothers, and brothers and sisters seated all about me in the audience.

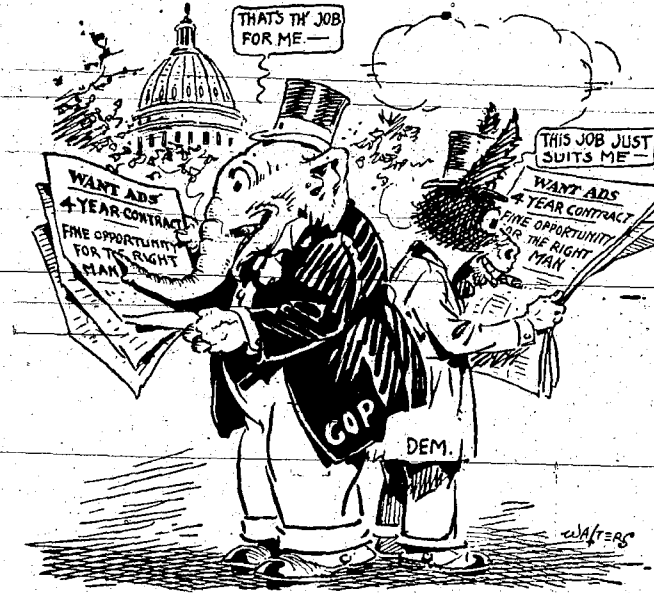

I know now why I always respond thus to a children's band wherever and whenever I see or hear it—why there is a strained feeling about my Adam's apple, and why it is necessary to bring my handkerchief to the aid of a cold that does not exist. Those boys and girls with their horns and clarinets are the sons and daughters of the kind of folks who sat about me in the Town Hall. They are the kind of boys and girls with whom I grew up. You and your brother and sister and my sister and I were just that kind of boys and girls,—but few of us had the opportunity to give expression to the music that was potentially just as much ours as is the music played by the boys and girls we hear today. Through the marching and playing of these boys and girls we are receiving that experience which we were denied in our youth.

What the School Band Means

Is the school band an essential in modern education? It hardly seems necessary to answer the question but perhaps for the benefit of those who have not taken time to analyze all of the benefits which the well organized school band offers it may be worth while to outline briefly some of the points which have been observed by those of us who have had contact with this development of present-day school life.

First of all, it must be emphasized that the benefits are by no means confined to the individual participants. One has only to be put in such a place as I have just described, among the "home folks" in the Town Hall, to comprehend, in part, what I mean. However, to completely establish the value of the school band in all of its ramifications, it is necessary to begin with the individual who is a part of the band.

It is generally accepted by modern educators that the purpose of the schools is to fit our children for the business of living—to develop and equip them so that they may go forth into the world prepared to make the best possible use of their inherent talents, thereby to benefit to the utmost by giving and receiving to their fullest capacity of all that is good and beautiful, as well as to be prepared for the practical things of life. In the latter respect, the ability to utilize to the best advantage whatever special endowment the individual may have as a means of livelihood is quite essential, but we all recognize that emphasis on this material issue of education alone makes a very one-sided and unsatisfactory life and the result is apt to be an incomplete and often inferior contribution to the community, State and country. Mr. E. G. Allen, Assistant Principal of Cass Technical High School, Detroit, has said that "the time is near at hand when in every community the school curriculum will represent a cross-section of the community life." No reader of this magazine will take exception to this prediction or to the statement that music is one of the prize essentials of life, I am sure we agree that music should have an important place in the school curriculum, just as should art, drawing, mechanical sciences, economics, and literature.

From a Vocational Standpoint
In accordance with the modern tendency to include preparation for a vocation in the school program of every child it naturally follows that there should be offered the means of practical training in music. The vocational aspect of music study in the educational school program, however, is only one phase, and while important must take a secondary place because of the relatively small number of individuals who are by nature equipped to follow music as a profession. We have long since outgrown the once popular fallacy that music is taught and studied only for the purpose of creating professional musicians. The old-school music teacher, who worked with his student on the basis that no one studies music seriously unless he intends to become an artist, and as such a professional musician, has given place to the modern teacher who realizes that every individual has a right to develop to the fullest extent of his capacity his innate love for music, to which end he must be able to produce as well as "appreciate" the best in music.

Fathers and mothers no longer shy from the mention of music study on the ground that they do not want their children to earn their living with music. On the contrary, they do want their children to make their lives and living as happy and as complete as possible with the aid of music which they listen across the barrier of footlights, but their own music which they make themselves within their own homes.

"By-Products" of the School Band
But there is still more to consider in reviewing the benefits to be derived by the individual from participation in the school musical activities.

MRS. A. M. BURDICK PASSES AWAY AT ALAMO, CALIF.

Gertrude Jane Burdick died at her home in Alamo, Calif., on April 23, 1928, at 1:00 p. m. She was born in Indiana, on February 1, 1866.

Mrs. Burdick was the wife of A. M. Burdick of Alamo, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Bradley, of Harbor Springs, Mich., and sister of Elmer Bradley of Harbor Springs; Mrs. J. W. Bunn, Springfield, Mo., Emerson Bradley, Los Angeles, and Mrs. G. E. Griffith, Corcoran, and niece of Mrs. E. L. Burdick, Walnut Creek; Mrs. C. W. Johnson, Berkeley, and Mrs. M. W. Lapeer, of Battle Creek, Mich.

Mrs. Burdick was a charter member of the Congregational Church in Ironton, Michigan. She came to California with her husband and settled at Alamo 14 years ago. She became identified with the Presbyterian Church of Danville, and her funeral services were conducted in that edifice by Rev. John Steutchell, pastor, assisted by Charles Woodard of Alamo, friend of the family. Interment took place in Alamo cemetery and a wealth of beautiful floral offerings testified to the love and esteem of a multitude of friends. The Harlan chapel of Walnut Creek was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Mrs. Burdick was a member of Alamo Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, of Walnut Creek, and Danville Rebekah Lodge. She was active in the W. C. T. U., and in the Danville Grange.

Pall bearers were Charles Love, Elmer Baldwin, Frank Mariana and Will Stewart of Danville; W. A. Cross and J. A. Bennett of Alamo. Mrs. Burdick had been ill quite some time before her death and was a patient sufferer. Her passing is mourned by a wide circle of friends to whom she was endeared by her beautiful Christian character. A kindly and sympathetic disposition, a general nature, a charitable understanding for the ills of others, and an active interest in the affairs of the community in which she resided made her widely beloved.—Martinez (Cal.) Daily Standard.

Continued For Three Years

E. J. H. S. CONTINUES ON U. OF M. ACCREDITED LIST.

In voting to continue the East Jordan Public Schools on their accredited list for a three year period, the University of Michigan officials gave our local school system as fine an endorsement as could be desired.

Following is a copy of the letter received:—

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN,
Ann Arbor, May 5, 1928.

Mr. A. J. Duncanson,
Superintendent of Schools,
East Jordan, Michigan.

My dear Sir:—

At a meeting of the University Committee on Accredited Schools on April 30, 1928, I was directed to inform you that the Committee had voted to continue your school on the list of accredited high schools for the three year period, ending June 30, 1931. I take pleasure in conveying this message to you.

It has occurred to me that you might be interested in the following comments in the report by Professor Ryan:—

"The teaching in this school seems to me uniformly good throughout. There is excellent attention to business on the part of the pupils.

"I felt that it would be helpful all around to introduce the pupils more and more into a share in the management of the school. Such would make for greater spontaneity on the part of the pupils and would provide a laboratory for citizenship training. The behaviour of the pupils in the school was quite good. No change of plan is called for because of disciplinary questions; I have in mind more the question of opportunity for self-reliant, constructive development in citizenship."

In all probability you discussed with Mr. Ryan his impressions as expressed in the foregoing quotations from his report. If not, I hope you may have an opportunity to do so. I am glad to assure you that Mr. Ryan formed a very favorable opinion of the progressiveness of your teaching staff and an equally favorable opinion of the effectiveness of the administration and supervision of your school.

Very truly yours,
J. B. EDMONSON,
Secretary.

"The Best Thing In Town!"

such as are afforded by the school band. Let us go back to the Town Hall and view again the well-disciplined band as we see it seated there on the stage. These are some of the things that we notice—what we might call the important by-products of training in the school band:

First of all, there is the all-important item of team-work and co-operation that is nowhere so well exemplified as in the school band. Call it "mass enthusiasm" or "gang spirit," there is no greater power at the disposal of the educator than the incentive to co-operative effort and growth which the school band gives every participant. Every member of the band realizes before he has proceeded very far that the welfare of the entire band as well as his own progress depends in large degree on ability of the members to work together.

Then we observe poise and manliness—or womanliness, as the case may be. Observe the ease and grace with which that boy or girl stands up to play a solo. Notice the child sitting there in the front row, no trace of self-consciousness; none of the embarrassment that some of us older folks, before an audience, might display in our endeavor to incontinentiously dispose of our several feet, arms and knees. Talk to one of those boys and you will find that he looks you in the eye and is not lacking for words to answer your questions completely and respectfully.

Then we also observe the effects of rhythm in the development of bodily grace. Seldom do we find an awkward boy or girl in a school band.

Self-reliance and personal pride. Those boys and girls have learned how to look out for themselves. Did you ever hear of any boy or girl who came to grief when away from home with the school band? Did you ever see a member of a school band who was lacking in pride in himself and his appearance? Every member of the band bears the burden of the entire organization on his shoulders. He knows that what he does and the way he appears, and the way he performs his part have vital effect on the entire organization. He doesn't want to be the one who will bring disfavor on the group. Furthermore, his comrades will not let him.

Discipline—respect for authority. In the average school band there are no rules or regulations except those that are for the good of the band. The boys and girls learn to do the right thing, not because of fear of punishment but because they want to do what is right. There is a combination of restraint and freedom which makes for the larger idea of self-discipline.

Concentration and application. We are amazed at the remarkable musical progress made by boys and girls in our school bands and orchestras. We should be amazed that we have not long since discovered the simple process of combining effort and achievement so that they go hand in hand. No member of the band practices his music less perfunctorily because he has been told he must go through those exercises so many times or practice so many minutes or hours. On the contrary, he practices to accomplish a certain result, and he knows the sooner he achieves the result the sooner his band will make the next step ahead. What some of us older folks took days, weeks or even months to accomplish in music, these boys and girls attain perhaps in a day, because they put their time to effective use in the rehearsal room and in their private practice.

Thoroughness. This goes hand in hand with application and concentration. You can't play your part in the band half way right; you are either entirely right or entirely wrong, and if you are wrong the whole band is wrong.

Punctuality. Boys and girls in the band soon learn the advantage of punctuality. Let one tardy member hold up the entire band on any occasion and the lesson, under the guidance of a tactful conductor, is thoroughly absorbed. Let one boy lose out on some desirable occasion because of being a few minutes late in arriving and he will have the lesson from another standpoint. Punctuality is not only a habit, and the boys and girls learn that it is an easy habit to form, while tardiness cannot be tolerated.

Democracy. They say that all folks are the same under the skin. Certainly all the boys and girls are the same in their uniforms so far as the outward eye is concerned, and the leveling effect of participation in the band has been noted so often that it is not necessary to dwell upon it here. The best player in the band and the most popular member may be the poorest in the world's goods, while the scion of the wealthy family toots an humble alto or twangs the cymbals—and each one is essential in the band whether or not he goes to school in a limousine or walks. There are many other by-products of the band readily discernible.—Music and Youth Magazine.

The Red Lamp

Most writers who attempt to deal with psychic phenomena for fictional purposes, try to make a case for the genuineness of the phenomena. They seem to think that the story will not stand up under any other method of treatment. Not so with Mrs. Rinehart, who, on various occasions, has shown originality and methods of her own which have gained her a high place among American readers.

Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Without the psychic elements this would be just another mystery tale, made interesting by the skill of its writer, but not especially remarkable in any other respect; but under the able treatment which she gives the psychic characteristics, it becomes something to think about. She does not find it necessary to inculcate or defend a belief in spiritualism, neither does she try to show that all manifestations in that line are the result of carefully devised trickery. One gathers that her personal attitude is that of the open mind. She is not one to be deceived by charlatanry nor, on the other hand, one to assert that the depths of the human soul have been plumbed or all the hidden resources of the human mind developed. She is willing to be enlightened and seems inclined to the belief that eventually science will provide the enlightenment. That is the spirit in which she weaves psychic phenomena into a story of human mystery.

The lamp which figures in the story is a fascinating instrument. Some of its manifestations are so weird as to be positively creepy; but the same people who witness its baleful influences never lose sight of the fact that its apparently phenomenal properties may have a natural explanation, or are just likely to result from clever manipulation as from anything emanating from discarnate sources. Without the spooky attributes the story would not be nearly so good as it is; and these attributes are relieved by Mrs. Rinehart's gift for charming romance and diverting humor.

THE DIARY

Introduction to the Journal of William A. Porter, A. B. M. A., Ph. D., Litt. D., etc.

June 30, 1924.

A few weeks ago, at a dinner, a discussion arose as to the unfinished dramas recorded in the daily press. The argument was, if I remember correctly, that they give us the beginning of many stories, and the endings of as many more. But that what followed those beginnings, or preceded those endings, was seldom or never told.

It was Pettingill, of all persons, who turned the attention of the table to me.

"Take that curious case of yours, Porter," he said. "Not yours, of course, but near your summer place two years ago. What ever happened there? Grace and I used to sit up all night to see who would get the morning paper first; then—it quit on us. That's all, quit on us." He surveyed the table with an aggrieved air.

Helena Lear glanced across at me maliciously.

"Do tell us, Willie," she said. She is the only person in the world who calls me Willie. "And give us all the horrible details. You know, I have always had a sneaking belief that you did the things yourself!"

Under cover of the laugh that went up, I glanced at my wife. She was sitting erect and unsmiling; her face drained of all its color, staring across the flowers and candles into the semi-darkness above the buffet. As though she saw something.

It occurred to me then that many people throughout the country had been intensely interested in our Oakville drama, and had been left with the same irritating sense of non-completion. But not only that. At least three of the women had heard me make that absurd statement of mine relative to the circle enclosing a triangle. There were more than Helena Lear, undoubtedly, who had remembered it when, early in July, the newspapers had announced the finding of that diabolical symbol along with the bodies of the slain sheep.

It seemed to me that it might be my duty to myself as well as to the University, to clarify the matter. In effect to say to them and to the world at large:

"This is what happened. As you see, the problem is solved, and here is your answer. But do not blame me if here and there is found an unknown factor in the equation; an X we do not know what to do with, but without which there would have been no solution. I can show you the X. I have used it. But I cannot explain it."

As will be seen, I have taken that portion of my Journal extending from June 16, 1922, to September 10 of the same year. Before that period, and after it, it is merely the day-by-day record of an uneventful life. Rather fully detailed, since like Petya I have used it as a reservoir into which to pour much of that residue which remains in a man's mind over and above the little he gives out each day. Rather more fully detailed, too, since I keep it in shorthand, an accomplishment acquired in my student days, and used not to insure the privacy of the diary itself, although I think my dear wife so believes, but to enable me, frankly, to exercise that taste for writing which exists in all of us whose business is English literature.

And so—this Journal. Much the same as when, under stress of violent excitement or in the peaceful interludes, I went to it as one goes to a friend, secure against betrayal. In the main it remains as it was, the daily history of that strange series of events which culminated so dramatically on the night of September 10 in the paneled room of the main house at Twin Hollows.

Of this house itself, since it figures so largely in the narrative, a few words should be said. The main portion of it, the hall which extended from the terrace toward the sea through the rear and the drive, the paneled den and the large library in front of it are very old. To this portion, in the seventies, had been added across the hall by some long-forgotten builder a dining room opposite the library and facing the sea, pantries, kitchen, laundry, and beyond the laundry a nondescript room originally built as a gun room and still containing the gun cases on the walls.

In the rebuilding considerable judgment had been shown, and the broad white structure, with its colonial columns to the roof, makes a handsome appearance from the bay. A place restful and beautiful to the eye; a gentleman's home, with its larkspurs and zinnias, its roses and its sun dial, its broad terrace, its great sheltered porch and its old panelling. But it stands idle. It will, so long as I live, always stand idle.

Of my Uncle Horace, who also figures largely in the Journal, a few words are necessary. He was born in 1848, and graduated from this University with the class of '70. He had died suddenly in June of the year before the Journal takes up the narrative, presumably of cardiac asthma, from which he had long suffered. A gentleman and a scholar, an essential solitariness, there had been no real intimacy between us. Once in awhile I passed a week-end in the country with him, and until the summer of the narrative, my chief memory of him had been of a rather small and truculent elderly gentleman, with the dry sharp cough of the heart sufferer, pacing the terrace beneath my window at night in the endless search of the asthmatic for air, and smoking for relief some particularly noxious brand of herbal cigarette.

Until the summer of the narrative—

"All houses in which men have lived and suffered and died are haunted houses," I have written somewhere in the Journal. And if thoughts are outlives, which may impress themselves on their surroundings, perhaps this is true.

But dare I go further? Restate my conviction at the time that the solution of our crimes had been facilitated by assistance from some unseen source? And that, having believed its purpose, this force forthwith departed from us? I do not know.

The X remains unsolved.

But I admit that more than once during the recent editing of this Journal for publication I have wakened at night covered with a cold sweat from a dream in which I saw once more standing in the den of the house at Twin Hollows, the red lamp lighted behind me, and am looking out into the hall at a dim figure standing at the foot of the staircase.

A figure which could not possibly be there. But was there.

Commencement week is over at last, thank heaven. Usual reunions of old boys, with porters staggering under the suitcases, which seem to grow heavier each year.

Nevertheless, the very old 'uns always give me a lump in the throat, and I fancy there was a considerable amount of globus hystericus as the class of '70 marched onto the Field on Class day. Only eight of them this year, Uncle Horace being missing. Poor old boy!

Which reminds me that Jane thought she saw him with the others as they marched in. Wonderful woman, Jane! No imagination ordinarily, meticulous mind and only a faint sense of humor. Yet she drags poor old Horace out of his year-old grave and marches him onto the Field, and then becomes slightly sulky with me when I laugh!

A curious woman, Jane. . . . So another year is over, and what have I to show for it? A small addition to my account in the savings bank, a volume or two of this uneventful diary, some hundreds of men who perhaps know the Cavalier Poets and perhaps not, and some few who have now an inkling that English literature did not begin with Shakespeare.

What have I to look forward to? Three months of uneventful summering, perhaps at Twin Hollows—if Larkin ever gets the estate settled—and then the old round again.

Yet I am not so much discontented as afraid of sinking into a lethargy of smug iconoclasm. It is bad for the soul to cease to expect grapes of a thistle, for the next stage is to be "old and a cynic; a carrion crow," like the old man in "Prince Otto," with rotten eggs the burthen of my song.

June 17.

After all, security has its points. I am the object of a certain amount of suspicion today on the part of my household! There is no place in the world, I imagine, for a philosopher with a sense of humor, a new leisure, and an inquiring turn of mind! These are times of action. Men think and then act; sometimes, indeed, they simply act.

But a philosopher, of course, should only think. . . .

During some nine months of the year I bring home to Jane from the lecture room the mere husk of a man; exhausted with the endeavor to impart one single thought into a brain where it will germinate, I sink into my easy chair and accept the life of my household. Tea. Dinner. A book. Bed. And this is my life. My existence, rather.

It dawns on a man now and then that he knows very little about his wife. He knows, of course, the surface attributes of her mind, her sense of order—Jane is orderly—her thrift, and Jane is thrifty. She has had to be! But it came to me suddenly that I knew very little of Jane, after all.

I am sometimes aware that she possesses certain qualities I do not possess. For example, it would be impossible for me to imagine, as Jane did on Class day, that I saw Uncle Horace. But it is equally impossible for me to deny that she did see Uncle Horace, and there has been a certain subtle change in her since which convinces me of her sincerity.

What then, I considered, is the difference between Jane's mind and my own? She has some curious ability, which she hides like one of the seven deadly sins, and which makes her at times a difficult person with whom to live.

Take that incident when she wakened me at seven o'clock and said she had seen Uncle Horace lying dead on the floor of the library at Twin Hollows.

"Dreams," I said drowsily, "are simply wish fulfillments. Go on back to bed, my dear. The old boy's all right."

"I wasn't asleep," she said quietly. "And you will have a telephone message soon telling you I was not."

And so true was this that she had hardly ceased speaking before Annie Cochran called up to tell us she had found him, at seven o'clock, dead on the library floor.

(Note: In preparing these notes for publication one thing occurs to me very strongly, and that is: it is curious that my wife's vision, or whatever it may be called, did not occur until some hours after the death. If there came some mental call to her, why not when he was in extremis? Not only would it have helped us greatly in the mystery which was so soon to develop, but it would have been more true to the usual type of such phenomena.

In this case, if we are to admit anything but coincidence, it is easier to accept the fact that we are dealing with mental telepathy. In other words, that the servant Annie Cochran, who actually found the body at seven in the morning, at once thought of Jane and so flashed the scene to her.

But I admit that this is merely explaining one mystery with another.)

What portion of Jane went to Twin Hollows and found Uncle Horace on the floor?

It was an interesting thought, and I played with it out of sheer joy in idleness. The Jane then, whom I could reach out and touch at night, might only be the shell of Jane, while the real Jane might be off on some spirit adventure of her own! I considered this. It has, one must admit, its possibilities.

Had she true clairvoyance, whatever that may mean? Or was telepathy the answer? She is Scotch, and the Scots sometimes claim what is called "second sight." I know that in her heart she believes she has this curious gift. She was, they say, a queer child, seeing and hearing things unseen and unheard by others. And I know she fears and hates it; it is somehow irreligious to her.

But—has she? No immediate answer being forthcoming, I consulted the dictionary on clairvoyance, and found that it was the faculty of being able to perceive objects without the customary use of the senses.

It was "vision without eyes." But if Jane can see without her eyes, if she can perceive objects not visible to those of us who depend on the usual senses, then is one to admit that she saw Uncle Horace, as she said she did, marching at the head of his class procession last Tuesday?

June 18.

I feel tonight rather like the man who had caught a bull by the tail and doesn't let go. And yet I am certain there is a perfectly natural explanation.

The difficulty is that I cannot very well go to Jane about it. If it is what it appears to be, and not a double exposure, it will frighten her. If it is a double exposure, she will wonder at my inquiry, and think I am watching her.

But certain things are very curious; she thought she saw Uncle Horace marching onto the Field with his class. So much did this upset her that when she stood up to take her picture, the camera shook in her hands. Then she takes the picture, and instead of the eight old men of the class of '70 there are nine.

And she knows it. Why else would she hide the print, and pretend that she had mistaid it? It was that fact which made me suspicious.

"I'll look them up for you later, William," she said. "You aren't in a hurry, are you?"

"In the bright lexicon of vacation there is no such word as hurry," I observed, brightly. And she who usually smiles at my feeblest effort turned abruptly away.

So Jane had lost her picture. Jane, whose closets are marvels of mathematical exactness, who keeps my clothing so exactly that I can find it in the dark, save for that one incident, duly noted in this Journal, when I unfolded a washcloth at the president's dinner, having taken it from my handkerchief box.

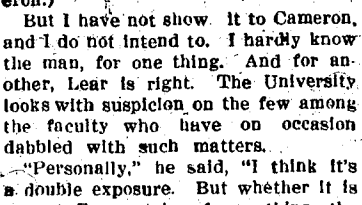

And shortly after Jane went out for a walk, Jane who never exercises save about her household. Poor Jane, I feel tonight, face to face with the inexplicable and hiding it like one of the seven deadly sins.

There are nine men in the picture; there is no getting away from it. And there is no denying, either, a faint difference in the ninth figure, a sort of slowness, a lack of definition. Under Jane's reading glass it gains nothing. The features, owing to the distance, are indistinct, but if one could imagine the ghost of old Horace, in his brocaded dressing gown and slightly stooped to cough, in that blur of noise, shouting and sunshine, it is there.

Later: I have shown the picture to Lear, and he says it is undoubtedly a case of double exposure.

"I don't think she ever took a picture of him in her life,"

"Well, somebody has," he said, and handed the print back to me. "If you tea this afternoon after Jane's bridge party, to find Jane looking uncomfortable and an animated conversation on spiritualism going on, with Helena Lear leading it.

"I'm Certain of One Thing. The Less Said About It the Better."

"Ah!" she said when she saw me. "Here comes our cynic. I suppose you don't believe in automatic writing either?"

"I should," I replied gravely. "I have seen as many as fifty men taking notes while in a trance in my lecture room."

"Nor in spirits?"

"Certainly I do. And in the Smoke of Prophecy, and the Powder of Death."

She looked rather blank, and Jane flushed a trifle.

"What is more," I said, a trifle carried away by the tenseness of the room, perhaps, "I know that if I take a piece of chalk—have you any chalk, Jane—and draw on the floor here the magic circle, and a triangle within it, no evil spirits can approach me. Get the chalk, dear; I promise I shall not be disturbed by so much as one demon."

In the laughter which followed the subject was dropped. But Helena Lear, when she gave me my tea, eyed me with amusement.

"You and your circle!" she said. "Don't you know that half these women more than half believe you?"

"And don't you?"

"You don't believe yourself?"

"Still," I said, remembering von Humboldt, "I am not an out-and-out skeptic. I admit that Jock there, who is acting as a vacuum cleaner under the table, can hear and see and smell things that I cannot. But I do not therefore believe he communicates with the spirit world."

"But he sees things you don't see. You admit that?"

"Certainly. He may see further into the spectrum than I do."

"Then what does he see?" she said triumphantly.

A fortunate digression enabled me to escape with a whole skin, but I think there was something rather quizzical in her smiling farewell. After all, if Jock does see things I do not, what does he see? I'm blessed if I know.

ADD LIFE TO YOUR YEARS, AND YEARS TOO YOUR LIFE

A healthy person never feels constantly tired. Being continually "too tired" is a sign of something wrong. Kidney and bladder ailments, allowing the poisonous wastes of the body to enter the blood stream, are a frequent cause of ill-health, run down condition, and nervous depression. Foley Pills (diuretic) stimulant and restorative, are a reliable, valuable medicine constantly in use over 25 years. Satisfaction guaranteed. Sold by Hite's Drug Store. adv.

YOUTH, not in body alone, but in mind as well.

No known force can withstand to onslaught of Youth, symbolized by the earnest desire which we and every citizen of this community can exert toward making this town an even better town in which to live and bring up our families.

To Represent Australia

The photograph shows Edna Davey who will represent Australia in the women's 440 meters race at Amsterdam this summer. Her best time for 440 yards is 6 minutes 3 4-5 seconds. And her beauty will certainly help the judges in picking winners.

In contemplating what he has done for others the average man is apt to overlook what others have done for him.

State News in Brief

Kalamazoo—Mrs. Edna LaCrosse, wife of Dewey LaCrosse, a farmer of this vicinity, was killed instantly by a bolt of lightning. The woman was working in a strawberry patch, and the bolt from the sky burned both shoes from her feet.

Escanaba—D. L. White, 69 years old, an Osier farmer, lies in a local hospital seriously injured from a premature dynamite explosion. White was at work blasting stumps when the accident occurred. He apparently was holding the charge in his hands.

Detroit—Caught under a garage when the jacks gave way while it was being raised, 6-year-old Riffin Von Wayencyryne was crushed to death. The father, Joseph Von Wayencyryne, was preparing to remodel it. The child was extricated and rushed to a hospital, but died on the way.

Owosso—One man was killed and another was injured seriously when an automobile crashed into a freight train at the Corunna avenue crossing here. Robert Kelly, 35 years old, married, and engaged in the plumbing business, died instantly. Edgar Gibson, 30, an accountant, suffered a fractured skull.

Lansing—The city of Detroit has been awarded the contract for dredging the Naval Reserve Seaplane Harbor at Grosse Ile. The harbor is being made serviceable by the federal and state government. Private contractors bid 79 cents a cubic yard for the dredging operations. The city of Detroit offered to do the work at cost.

Lansing—The fact that she is a ward of the state and an inmate of the school at Coldwater does not deprive a girl of the right to marry when and whom she pleases as soon as she is 18. Wilber M. Brucker, attorney-general, advised the State Welfare Commission. The attorney general suggested that where the husband is a suitable person he be made guardian of the ward in place of the state.

Adrian—The first enforced cleanup of corn stubble in connection with the 1928 European corn borer control campaign was made on the farm of Walter Mouch, in Palmyria Township. Henry Phillips, corn borer control supervisor for the county, announced that 15 men were used to pick up stubble on one of Mr. Mouch's fields which did not pass the cleanup regulations. Two tractors, he added, were also put at work on a Deerfield Township farm.

Howell—Fire of undetermined origin did damage estimated at between $8,000 and $10,000 to the new Municipal Hospital here. Starting in a room on the first floor where a quantity of paints were stored, the fire burned up through the roof before firemen were able to bring it under control. No one was in the building when the fire broke out. The hospital was in process of construction and within a month would have been ready for beds and other equipment.

Lansing—Appointment of Ray E. Cotton of Ypsilanti as secretary of the Department of Conservation was announced here by George R. Hogarth, acting director. He succeeds J. Russel Jontz of Grand Rapids, who resigned recently. Cotton is a veteran of the World War. He served with the 32nd Division and advanced from the rank of sergeant to that of captain. He was employed for seven years by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti and was later assistant cashier of the Peoples State Bank of Ypsilanti.

Halfway—A definite step toward making the village of Halfway a city was taken when the Taxpayers' Association, composed of virtually every business man here, filed a petition with the county clerk asking that a census be taken to determine if the population is sufficient to permit such a move of all county villages and cities. According to village officials a population of 3,000 is necessary for the formation of a fourth class city. It is estimated that there are approximately 3,000 residents in the village now.

Port Huron—Michigan Democrats in convention here recently unanimously endorsed the candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, as the Democratic nominee for President, and the delegates to the national convention are instructed to vote as a unit for his nomination as long as his name appears before the convention. The delegates to the national convention were instructed further to re-elect William A. Comstock, of Detroit, as national committeeman. Mr. Comstock was again chosen as the party's choice to run for Governor of Michigan.

Manistee—Edward C. Burton, president of the Manistee Izaak Walton league, sent a letter of protest to the state conservation commission concerning the closing of harbor lakes along Lake Michigan to perch fishermen during the spring months. He bases his protest on the fact that the harbors connect directly with Lake Michigan and that it is as fair for hook and line anglers to take the perch which have free access from Lake Michigan as it is for commercial fishermen to catch them in Lake Michigan.

Rochester—The opening of the new paved road between this city and Pontiac will be observed by a county-wide celebration to be held on or about July 1.

Mr. Clemens—Alfred A. Addis, 63 years old, who had been ill for some time, hung himself with a bed sheet in the basement of the office of Dr. Victor H. Wolfson, while waiting for the doctor.

Reed City—Billy Thornell, 6 years old, son of Mrs. George Thornell, was killed here when a truck box, leaning against a building, overturned and crushed him. The boy had climbed to the top of the box.

Owosso—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the elevator of the Vernon Milling Co. at Vernon causing a loss estimated at $25,000, half of which is covered by insurance. The Durand fire department aided the Vernon firemen in protecting nearby buildings. The owners, George and Charles Parris, said they probably would rebuild.

Port Huron—Enumerators are taking the annual school census, to determine the number of children in the city from 5 to 20 years of age. Upon the census depends the amount of primary school money the city shall receive. For the information of school officials only, the number of pupils between four and five years of age will also be counted.

Monroe—The one-hundredth anniversary of the founding of the brick school house at Grape, nine miles west of here, will be observed, Saturday, June 23, according to announcement made here. A monument will be erected on the grounds following the anniversary exercises, at which well-known speakers will participate. A picnic is to follow the exercises.

Lansing—A contract for the construction of a new tuberculosis sanatorium at Howell will be awarded soon by the State Administrative Board. At a session of the board recently bids on the proposed structure were received. They are being tabulated. The new sanatorium is to cost approximately $325,000. Fourteen contractors received copies of the plans.

Kalamazoo—Damage estimated at $3,000 was done to the drug store of Thomas Cooper here when a truck crashed through the wall into the store. The driver of the truck said his brakes failed to hold. Rather than smash into a line of automobiles halted behind a standing street car, he tried to make the turn into a side street but failed. Three men in the store escaped injury.

Battle Creek—Mrs. Lulu M. Sharp, 47 years old, is dead as the result of injuries suffered when she was thrown beneath the spiked wheels of a heavy farm implement as she attempted to prevent horses, hitched to the machine, from running away. Her husband, C. W. Sharp, was preparing to work with the machine and had gone into the house for some tools, leaving his wife to watch the horses.

Holland—Fully 1,500 ring necked pheasant eggs will be hatched in and near Holland, according to Jacob Liveness, secretary of the Holland Game and Fish Association. Last year the number was 200. The conservation department is planning on producing 40,000 eggs this year, according to word from Lansing received by the local club, 10,000 of which will be used to restock the game farm at Lansing.

Lansing—Capt. B. E. Stufflebean, who for the last 11 years was master of the steamship Alabama, plying between Muskegon and Chicago, will become master of the three state ferries across the Straits of Mackinac, Frank F. Rogers, highway commissioner, announced here. He will succeed Capt. A. T. May, who has resigned because of serious illness. Capt. Stufflebean will assume personal command of the City of Mackinaw, which will be ready for service early in June.

Lansing—Mike Stanek, of Pittsburgh, Pa., visited three local banks and asked to have his account transferred from his home town to Lansing, where he planned to make his home. He left a savings book showing deposits of $6,000 in a Pittsburgh bank and drew a total of $1,400 from the three local banks to move his family here. Officers are now searching for Mike, as correspondence with Mike's Pittsburgh bank revealed he has $1.18 in his account in the Pennsylvania city.

Detroit—A member of the Michigan state legislature, Robert J. Teagan, was the victim of one of Detroit's bomb outrages. His home at 3100 Dexter boulevard was bombed one night recently. The explosion caused damage estimated at $5,000, threw the district for half a mile, on each side into a near panic and blew out windows in nearby houses. Remarkably, none of the Teagan family, who had all retired for the night, were hurt. Teagan was unable to give any reason for the bombing.

Lansing—A hearing will be held in federal court in Detroit on May 26, on the application of the Michigan Railroad company for permission to discontinue interurban service between Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids, Allegan and Battle Creek via Monteth Junction and Battle Creek and Camp Custer, according to a notice received here by the public utilities commission. The commission and other interested parties were notified to appear if they wish to oppose the discontinuance.

Pretty Dinner Frock

Myrna Loy proves her talent for designing by this simple yet beautiful dinner frock of black pussy-willow taffeta with overdress of black dotted lace, showing the uneven hemline. Two large bows at the hips of taffeta and lace add a touch of smartness to the gown, and a colored flower at the shoulder completes the effect. A large black satin and tulle hat is most appropriate with this dress.

"General" R. E. Lee IV

"Maj. Gen." Robert E. Lee IV, whose ancestor led the Confederate armies, snapping a salute to the Just Kids Safety club in New York. The little general was outfitted in a suit which is an exact duplicate of the uniform worn by the great general. It was purchased by Mayor Walker, and the young military man has been made a member of the mayor's staff.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Millions of Insects

There are between five and ten million species of insects in the world. Many of these are very necessary to us. Some help in destroying the harmful insects, others give us valuable medicine, and others still more useful carry the pollen from plant to plant, enabling them to bear their fruit and flowers.

Greenleaf Regains Title

The photograph shows Ralph Greenleaf, who, falling to crack under the strain of a hard tournament at Chicago, regained his national pocket billiard championship.

In addition to giving him the title the major share of $5,000 prize money, and a large percentage of the gate receipts. Greenleaf won the $250 monthly pay which goes with the title.

Jess Sweetser Coming Back

Apparently recovered from the illness that struck him after he had won the British Amateur championship in 1926, Jess Sweetser plans a comeback campaign this year that he hopes will lead him to another national amateur golf title. He has mapped out a program that will bring him into three tournaments this summer with the national amateur as his chief objective.

5 years of service is only a starting point for Buick

—Skilled engineering and rugged construction make it the most durable of motor cars!

Keep in mind, when buying your new car, that more than three-quarters of all Buicks produced in the last twenty-five years are still serving their owners.

Buick endures—Buick stays young—Buick stands up and gives its best over a longer period than any other car—because it is endowed with an extra-rugged double-drop frame—Buick's world-famous Sealed Chassis and Triple-Sealed Engine—and the most nearly perfect oiling system ever developed.

You'll prefer Buick because it leads in beauty and luxury; and you'll prefer it, too, because it is the most durable of cars—and therefore the most paying investment.
