NUMBER 21

Guernsey Breed-ers Organize

CHARTER MEMBERS NUMBER 21 BREEDERS.

At a recent meeting held in Boyne City on the 14th day of May, the newest organization in the County, known as the Charlevoix Guernsey Breeders Association became a reality.

A very enthusiastic gathering of some thirty interested dairymen were in attendance and after discussing the future of the Guernsey Breed decided that an association would help materially toward advancing the interests of Guernseys and their development.

The first project to be carried out will be a big summer show and picnic to be held in East Jordan the 13th of July, at which the best representatives of the breed in the County will be selected from the membership and pitted against each other in the showing. Mr. W. D. Buntington, Guernsey fieldman in Michigan, will judge the exhibit and give a talk on Guernseys. Plans are being also made to purchase higher quality bulls, and to improve the many herds in the county.

At the election of officers, the following were selected to direct the destinies and activities:

President—Charles Murphy, East Jordan.
Vice-Pres.—Carl Stevens, Walloon Lake.
Sec'y-Treas.—Clyde Clute, Boyne City.
Director—Oakley Saunders, Iron-ton.
Director—Archie Murphy, East Jordan.
Director—Orvie Gunsolus, East Jordan.
Director—Carl Grutsch, East Jordan.
Director—Ray Loomis, East Jordan.

Each member of the Ass'n receives the publication "Guernsey Breeders Journal" published every two weeks, which gives all the latest information and activities pertaining to Guernsey development, which is included in the membership fee of two dollars yearly.

New members are solicited. Let's have 10 more members and then watch the results.

"LINDBERGH IS A GREAT AVIATOR"

Among the papers turned in by students in the County examination for eighth grade, was the following cheerful information by one of the pupils:

Write a paragraph on the work of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Ans.—Charles A. Lindbergh is a great aviator. He has been carrying the mail across the ocean for some time. He has made many trans-Atlantic flights. He will now be "suplid" with a new "plain." He is now back on his mail run from his vacation.

State-Wide Safety Campaign

PROCLAMATION BY GOV. FRED W. GREEN.

"Public safety is a foremost American problem. Saving of human life is Government's chief business. The forces of progress and of humanity in the State are seeking to check the prevailing waste of life and resources due to traffic accidents on streets and highways. There is great need of more uniform public understanding and official administration of the traffic laws. Inter-city motor vehicle transportation tends to increase hazards in any locality unless all localities experience generally similar and equally regular safety education and statutory administration. To help effect this, a State-wide traffic safety movement will be conducted during the month of May and June of this year. I sincerely believe that the people in all Michigan will give their earnest and active support.

"The question of safety in the public thoroughfares of the State is not debatable. Assurance of reasonable security to all is a public and private obligation. The State can do no less than give of its strength to such an enterprise. It is our duty to re-assert the supreme character of the law.

"Government is not the responsibility of the few, but of the many—and in issuing this I am endeavoring to call into action, for public safety, the man-power and woman-power of the entire commonwealth.

"Given under my hand and the seal of the State, at the Capitol, in Lansing, this 17th day of May, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-eight, and of the Commonwealth of Michigan the Ninety-second."

FRED W. GREEN,
Governor.

BOYS AND GIRLS FINISH CLUB PROJECTS

The members enrolled in the Clothing and Handicraft Clubs during the past winter closed a very successful and profitable program with Achievement Days held the first week in May.

Mr. A. G. Kettunen, State Club Leader, and Miss Gertrude Gage, Ass't Leader, visited each of the rural schools and inspected the articles made by the enthusiastic club members and selected the local champions of each club.

The boys in the first year made a bench hook and five other articles of practical use in the home and on the farm, while the boys in the second year project made at least four articles of somewhat more difficult construction.

The girls in the various projects likewise have made many articles of clothing and household necessities, such as dish towels, drafting kimona patterns, making one-piece dresses, caps, aprons, darning and patching, etc.

In the County there were nine handicraft clubs that finished, two hot-lunch clubs, and four clothing clubs, with a total membership of 104 members of which 91 finished, thus giving us 87.5 % finished of those starting.

The County Championships have been awarded as follows:

GAVE INTERESTING TALK ON MEXICO

At the regular meeting of the East Jordan Business Men's Club held Wednesday evening, Howard P. Porter, Superintendent of the E. J. & S. R. R., gave an interesting talk on Mexico. Mr. Porter returned home Tuesday from a Convention outing of the American Short Line Railways Ass'n, which consisted of a trip through Mexico, visiting most of the principal cities. He gave a valuable word picture of Mexico, industrially and politically, with side-lights on their amusements of bull fighting, etc.

He also treated the men to samples of Mexican cigarettes, which was appreciated, although it was noticeable that after testing out one or two, the men returned to their favorite U. S. brand of smokes.

The secret of popularity is always to remember what to forget.

There will be different buttons for resident and non-resident deer and resident and non-resident rod for the following spring. The buttons are about the size of a silver dollar. They bear the picture of a wolverine and tell the nature of the license. They are to be worn in a conspicuous place so that wardens may see that the hunters or fishermen are properly licensed, thus saving the individual the inconvenience of digging down into his pocket to get the license.

HECTOR MC KINNON DIES FROM INJURIES AT TOLEDO, OHIO

Hector McKinnon Sr., who was seriously injured in an accident at Toledo, Ohio, May 10th, passed away at St. Vincent's Hospital in that city, Sunday, May 20th.

He was working for the Acklin Stamping Co., and was unloading steel sheets when a pile of the steel fell onto him, crushing his legs and inflicting internal injuries.

Hector McKinnon was born March 10th, 1866, at Killross, Bruce Co., Ontario, Canada, his parents being Hector McKinnon and Mary McKiegon. He came to the United States in 1888, and has spent practically all his life in Michigan, coming to East Jordan in 1906, where he made his home up until some four years ago when he went to Detroit and Toledo.

On July 3rd, 1889 he was united in marriage to Dora Gierke at Ossineke, Mich. Mrs. McKinnon passed away Feb'y 14th, 1917.

Deceased is survived by three sons, viz.—Charles Hector and John William, of East Jordan, and Albert of Toledo, Ohio. Also by the following brothers and sisters:—John McKinnon of Spruce, Mich.; Angus McKinnon of Lockwood, Sask.; Anne Knox of Toronto, Ont.; Sarah Leakey of Detroit, and Margaret Clark of Lincoln, Mich. Also nine grandchildren and a host of friends.

Mr. McKinnon was a shopman by trade, a member of the Latter Day Saints Church, and the Odd Fellow Lodge.

Make Good at Mt. Pleasant

E. J. H. S.—CLASS C—TAKE SECOND IN VOCATIONAL.

Twelve local High School students in charge of C. F. Snelberger, Principal, entered the annual Academic Contest at Mt. Pleasant last week.

On account of the lack of funds about a third of the departments in the high school were represented at Mt. Pleasant. Considering the number of students from East Jordan we made a rather remarkable showing. Of the twelve students entered, eight won places of honor. There were 1400 students representing ninety-one schools in the contest. More than a third of these were in Class C with East Jordan. Many of the schools had from forty to fifty students at the contest.

Following were the students entered and the winnings made:—

Francis Votruba—Second place in Manual Training.

Carl Weaver—Entered in Latin 10 and Eng. 10 (did not score).

Thelma Sommerville—First place in 10th grade clothing.

Marie De Maio—Second place in 11th grade clothing.

Marjorie Sommerville—Entered in General Home Economics (did not score.)

Muriel Sonnabend—Third place in 11th grade clothing.

Florence Gleason—Third place in 9th grade General Home Economics.

Ruth Clark—First in Eng. 12, and third in Physics.

Margaret Staley—First in Advanced Type, and Second in Advanced Shorthand.

Isabel Kitsman—Second in first year Shorthand.

Helen Severance—Entered Latin 9 (did not score.)

Minnie Webster—Entered Type II and Shorthand I (did not score.)

Margaret Staley made a rather phenomenal record in typewriting. She made a net of eighty-one words per minute. The girl taking second place had fifty-six words per minute. As far as known now, this breaks the high school record in Class C—even for all classes. The twelve East Jordan students placed the school second against all Class C schools of the State. Judging by the record made by the twelve students representing East Jordan, it would be difficult to see how any other high school in class C could have beaten them out, had they been fully represented.

EXPECT NO DAMAGE FROM BEAN BEETLE

That no commercial damage will be done to beans in Michigan by the Mexican bean beetle within the next two years is the opinion of the department of entomology at Michigan State College.

Last year a few of the beetles were collected from southeastern Michigan counties. An ordinary observer would have failed to notice that the beans in the fields where the beetles were found had been damaged at all.

Michigan bean growers are advised by the department of entomology to disregard the presence of the beetle in making planting plans. Control methods for this pest are known. These methods have made the growing of beans possible in sections where the beetle is present in serious numbers.

This insect is a member of the common ladybug family, and resembles the well known members in shape and size. It is yellowish brown in color, and the outer wing covers are ornamented with 16 or more black dots.

A complete description of the insect, its life history, and effective control measures are given in Circular Bulletin No. 107, published at the Michigan State College. Illustrations in the bulletin show both the adult and larvae stage of the Mexican bean beetle.

Smoking Baby Upsets Theories

Four-year-old Freddie Riggs of Seattle, Wash., being examined by Dr. Ira C. Brown, head of the Seattle school health department. Although Fred die has used tobacco in some form ever since he was ten months old, Doctor Brown says of him: "He is decidedly above the average. He is a year and a half physically above the average four-year-old. His heart, pulse and lungs are normal. He is one year mentally above the average four-year-old. I feel that the medical men can learn a worth-while lesson from this child. Tobacco increases the flow of saliva. In this case the tobacco did exactly that thing, thus aiding in the digestion of the child's food in the second place tobacco has many chemicals in it, and one creosote. The creosote in this case was especially beneficial and relieved the fermentation of food. I have heard of adults benefiting from tobacco, but this is the first time I've heard of a baby thriving on it."

Community Building

House Color Scheme of High Importance

There is, perhaps, no greater influence for good in a community—in a nation, even—than the solid, substantial, beautiful home, preaching its silent but eloquent gospel of culture and good taste. Nothing can probably more simply or more effectively modernize the older house than can a change of color scheme. The application of three good coats of white lead paint in well-selected hues will work a wonderful transformation.

The landscape colors—brown green, creamy yellow or white—are therefore the best colors to use in painting the body of the house, if it is of wood. Equally harmonious is the brown and green color scheme, with the body of the house painted a dull, wood brown, and the roof and trimmings a quiet shade of green. Or one may prefer a house painted a light buff color, with white trimmings and a brown roof, or a brown house, with cream trimmings and the roof stained terre cotta or Pompeian red.

For, while red is not a dominant note among landscape colors, it does occur in occasional splashes in nature. Nor is the dull red of the brick house discordant if relieved with a white trim.

The house of colonial yellow, with trim of white or light ivory and roof of golden brown, offers another effective combination. A charming color scheme for the small house is light brown, with white trimmings and green roof.

The house painted or trimmed with blue is a bit too startling. But a cheerful sky-blue makes an ideal ceiling for the porch, giving an effect of height in its stimulation of the heavens.

Pipes and Gutters of Copper Always Best

The most vulnerable points in every roof and consequently the places where trouble most frequently appears are the rain pipes and gutters. They bear the brunt of every storm and if made of cheap metal rust will destroy them.

The one unfailing protection against the ravages of rust and decay is the use of pure copper at these points, where corrodible metals ordinarily cause trouble within a few years of their installation.

For most homes, rain pipes and gutters of noncorrodible copper can be installed for from $50 to $100 more than the cost of installing inferior materials of questionable endurance.

Many years from the time of installation, copper as the material in these usually troublesome locations will be rendering the same effective service in protecting the home.

American Parks

America has a long way to go before it obtains all it should have in the way of public parks and recreation grounds, but it has done rather well as far as it has gone. A survey by the Playground and Recreation Association of America shows that the parks in the United States represent an outlay of one billion dollars and cover an area of 250,000 acres in 1,681 municipalities. In mere space, New York claims to lead the country, but Philadelphia still holds its supreme position in possessing the largest per capita park area. Fairmount was originally bought and laid out as a means of protecting the city's water supply, but its great expansion and the addition of park areas in many other parts of the city have been in direct obedience to the universal recognition of a public need.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Consider the Driveway

Although walks and driveways may be made decorative, the builder should not lose sight of the fact that both should be strong, sound and provide a level, clean surface.

This thickness is the same that is used for driveways, of which several types have been developed. Where the driveway is to be subjected to hard service, or is to be used by several cars, a pavement covering the entire width of the drive area will give best satisfaction. Where the driveway is to be used only occasionally, narrow, parallel strip of concrete will provide a satisfactory approach. These strips should be grooved to keep the wheels of the car from running off and digging into the adjoining lawn.

Paint Wooden Shutters

Painted or stained wooden shutters offer one of the most convenient means of effectively balancing or enhancing the effect of the exterior decorative scheme. Their original purpose of protection against marauders and against excessive heat and cold has been somewhat submerged of late years in their almost entire utilization for decorative purposes, but it is now again being recognized that shutters can serve a practical as well as an ornamental function.

Spread of City Zoning

Thirty million people or more, than 55 per cent of the urban population of the United States now live in zoned cities. The thirty million people live in 553 cities, towns or villages scattered throughout the country.

Careful Planting Aids Vegetables

Four Important Points to Keep in Mind in Moving Young Seedlings.

Checking the growth of vegetables by careless methods of transplanting means a poor growth and yield.

Glenn O. Randall, extension horticulturist for the North Carolina State College of Agriculture, gives four important points to keep in mind when moving the young vegetable seedlings from the plant bed to the open garden or field. He states, first, that the gardener must not disturb the roots any more than is possible; second, the seedbed should be soaked shortly before the plants are moved; third, the soil should be thoroughly prepared to receive the little plants, and, fourth, delicate plants should be hardened off before planted in the open field.

Don't Disturb Roots.

"In order not to disturb the roots, the gardener should take up a good ball of earth with each plant as this will prevent breaking of the rootlets," says Mr. Randall. "Wetting the seedbed before removing the plants will allow them to withstand the loss of moisture in the field. If roots are prevented by a lumpy or poorly prepared soil from taking hold and adjusting themselves as rapidly as they should, the plants will grow off slowly. It is often impossible to firm the soil around the plants because of poor soil preparation."

Hardening Plants.

"Hardening the plants to be transferred from a hot bed or cold frame is the process of gradually exposing the young plants to the weather. This is done by first ventilating the bed for a few hours during the warmer part of the day and then gradually removing the cover entirely. This helps the plants to withstand the cool weather and also helps them to withstand the hot weather when finally transplanted."

Mr. Randall states that the observance of these simple precautions will aid the gardener to be more successful with his work and will result in his securing better and more vigorous growth as well as better yields.

Poultry Shipping Rules

Effective Jan. 1, 1929

Revision of express regulations relative to shipping coops for poultry will be made effective on January 1, 1929. These new regulations provide that shipping coops must be large enough to prevent overcrowding and top of each coop must be covered by slats not more than one inch apart, or by wire screen containing meshes not to exceed one inch in size. Charges will be based upon the gross weight of coop and contents at the time of shipment. Any coop which, with its contents, exceeds 150 pounds in weight, will not be accepted.

It was proposed that these regulations would be made effective at once, but through the efforts of Harrison F. Jones, secretary, National Poultry, Butter and Egg association, the express company was urged to withhold the new classification in order that shippers might have time to become conversant with the rules before they were made effective.

Considerable loss has been experienced in the past through the crushing of heads of birds. This will be prevented in the new coops with the slats of the tops closer together.

Alfalfa May Be Sown in Early Spring in Wheat

Alfalfa may be sown in the early spring in wheat or oats, just as red clover is sown, or it may be sown alone in early August on ground specially prepared after removal of a June or early July harvested crop. For summer seeding the ground should be prepared and harrowed at intervals of several days to kill the weeds that start, before sowing the alfalfa. From 12 to 15 pounds of seed should be sown per acre, preferably using a drill, either a special seed drill or the wheat drill set to run shallow.

Whether or not liming is necessary will depend upon the soil; if it is sour, lime should be applied. Inoculation is very important, especially if alfalfa or sweet clover has not previously been grown on the land. Stable manure is valuable in starting an alfalfa field. If the land is rather run down, not only apply manure but use from 400 to 500 pounds of fertilizer containing 12 per cent of phosphoric acid and 6 per cent of potash.

Agricultural Hints

The main object of cultivation is to control weeds.

The rapid rise in the popularity of sweet clover has been nothing short of phenomenal.

Cement-asbestos shingles can be nailed directly over the existing wooden ones on a roof.

Planting seed corn only an inch below the surface in heavy soil has produced double corn yields in northern Wisconsin.

Sweet clover seeded in small grain and plowed under the following spring for corn will increase corn yields from 10 to 30 bushels.

a Successful Six now winning Even Greater Success

200,000 Buyers Can't Be Wrong

When the Pontiac Six was first introduced less than two and a half years ago, immediate buying enthusiasm was aroused. The public accepted the statement of General Motors and Oakland that here was a new car offering six-cylinder value never before enjoyed at such low price. 75,000 Pontiac Sixes sold in 1926 established a world's record for a new make of car. Sales for 1927 carried the total of satisfied Pontiac owners beyond the 200,000 mark.

And now, even if its unrivaled value could not be proved by comparison with other cars in its field—even if its superiority could not be demonstrated by scores of advanced features combined in no other low-priced six—even if all its claims to leadership were based on generalities—you could still buy the Pontiac Six with confidence... for 200,000 buyers can't be wrong! If you want to know the truth about the Pontiac Six, go to any owner in town. And if you hear praise almost too enthusiastic to believe, remember that 200,000 owners will tell you substantially the same story!

June 20.

Jane knows that I have seen the picture, and that I know it lies behind her refusal to go to Twin Hollows for the summer. When I came back from Larkin's office today, the final papers having been signed, I could see her almost physically bracing herself.

"So it's all set, my dear," I said. "And if we can get Annie Cochran to clean the place a bit—"

"Would you mind so very much," she asked, almost wistfully, "if we don't go there?"

"But it's all settled. Edith is coming back on purpose."

(Note: The "Edith" of the Journal is my niece, who makes her home with us. At this time she was absent on a round of house-parties. A very lovely and popular girl, of whom more hereafter.)

"It's too large for us," said Jane. "I need a rest in the summer, not a big house to care for."

And there was a certain definiteness in her statement which ended the conversation. As a result, and following our usual course when there is a difference between us, we have taken refuge in a polite silence all day, the familiar argued neutrality of marriage.

Lear has told Cameron about the picture. I met Cameron while taking Jock for his evening walk tonight, and he reintroduced himself to me. After today's repression I fear I was a bit talkative, but he was a good listener. Evidently he has a certain understanding of Jane's refusal to go to Twin Hollows, although he said very little.

"Houses are curious, sometimes," was his comment.

But on the matter of the picture he was frankly interested.

"There is," he said, "a certain weight in the evidence for psychic photography. Mr. Porter. Of course it is absurd to claim that all the curious photographs—and thousands of them come to me—are produced by disincarnate intelligences. But there is something; I don't know just what."

Jane has gone to bed, still politely silent, and I am left alone to wrestle with my two problems; where to spend the summer, and why Jane finds the house at Twin Hollows what Cameron describes as curious.

A mild term, that, for Jane's feeling about the house. Actually, she hates it. Has always hated it. She has had no pride in our acquisition of it; she has even steadfastly refused to bring away from it any of that early American furniture with which old Horace had filled it.

Yet she collects early American furniture. I write tonight at an utterly inadequate early American desk, because of this taste of hers. And yet she will have none of Uncle Horace's really fine collection.

Nor is she of the type to listen to Annie Cochran's story that the old portion of the house is haunted by the man killed there.

(Note: An old story and not authenticated, of the shooting of a man many years ago as he hid to escape the excise. As a matter of fact, none of our later experiences in the house bore out this particular tradition at all.)

If she has a distaste for it, it may possibly relate to the occupancy of the house by the Riggs woman before Uncle Horace bought it. But even here I am doubtful, for Mrs. Riggs was caught in most unblushing fraud and entirely discredited as a medium.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

The Dog an Old Animal

The dog was a friend to man long before historical records were made. He serves the Eskimo, the cannibal, the Soudan and the white man the world over. He is descended from wolves and jackals, and it is believed that were he left entirely to himself, he would in time revert to the wild habits of his ancestors.

Crocodile Tears

Madagascar's surplus crocodiles are to be skinned for bookbinding and shoe leather. Their fat is to be used in the treatment of rheumatism and other diseases.

morning, kissed Jock, Jane and myself, Jock first, demanded an enormous breakfast and all the hot water in the house, and descended gaily a half hour later to the table.

"Well," she said, attacking her melon, "and when do we go to the haunted house?"

"Ask your aunt." She glanced at me and then shrewdly at Jane.

"Good heavens!" she said. "Don't tell me there's any question about it?"

"It isn't decided yet," Jane said meekly. "It's a big house, Edith and—"

"All the more reason for taking it," said Edith, and having finished her melon flung out her pretty arms. "Grass," she said, "and flowers, and the sea. I shall swim," she went on. "And old Father William shall fish, and Jane shall sew a fine seam. And at night the ghosts shall walk. And everything will be lovely."

She turned to me.

"You do believe in ghosts, don't you, Father William?"

And somehow even Jane caught some of the infection of her gaiety. "Ask him about the triangle in a circle," she said.

"What's that?" Edith inquired. "The triangle in a circle, drawn around you, will keep off demons," I explained gravely. "Surely you know that?"

"How—convenient!"

"And that the skins of four frogs, killed on a moonless night, will make one invisible if worn as a cap? And that the spirits obey Solomon's seal—not the plant, of course! And that if you eat a stew of the eyes of a vulture, and the ear-tufts of an owl, you will be wise beyond all dreams of wisdom?"

Jane got up, and I saw that my nonsense had had its effect. She was smiling, for the first time in days.

"If you care to go out and look at the house tomorrow, William," she said, "I will go."

And perhaps Edith had sensed a situation she did not understand, for she kissed her, and as I left the room I heard her requesting Jane to bring back with her marketing some frog skins and the ear-tufts of an owl.

So this afternoon things are looking brighter. And thus does man deceive himself!

The town is very quiet tonight. The annual student exodus is almost over, although still an occasional truck goes by, piled high with trunks. The Leans intend to stay. Sulzer and Macintyre are off for the Scottish lakes, and Cameron, I hear, is going soon to the Adirondacks, where he spends his summer in a boat, and minus ghosts, I dare say.

I have mailed him the picture today, and can only hope Jane does not miss it.

One wonders about men like Cameron. Slight, almost negligible, as is my acquaintance with him—I would not know him in a crowd, even now—there is something of Scottish dourness in him. He neither smokes nor drinks; he lives austere and alone. He has a reputation as a relentless investigator; it was he who exposed the hauntings at the house on Sabbathday lake, in Massachusetts.

But he is a believer. That is, he believes in conscious survival after death, and I suspect that he has his own small group here. Among them little Pettengill. It would be a humiliating thought, for me, to feel that after I passed over, as they say, little Pettengill might hale me to him, in the light or a red lamp, and request me to lift a table!

Warren Halliday is on the veranda with Edith. I can hear her bubbling laughter, and his quiet, deep voice. After all, I dare say we must make up our minds to lose her some time, but it hurts.

And it will not be soon. He has not a penny to bless himself with, nor has she. I think, if I were very rich, I would provide an endowment fund for lovers.

But something is wrong with our university system. It takes too long to put a man on a wife-supporting basis. Halliday is twenty-six; he lost two years in the war, and he has another year of law. Truly, Edith will need the eyes of a vulture and the ear-tufts of an owl.

June 22.

All houses in which men have lived and suffered and died are "haunted houses." But then, all houses are haunted. Why, then, did Jock refuse to enter the house at Twin Hollows today, but crawled under the automobile and remained there, a picture of craven terror, until our departure?

Old Thomas, the gardener, met us in Oakville with the keys, and we drove out to the house. I sensed in Jane a reluctance to enter, but she fought it back bravely, and we examined it with a view to our own occupancy. It is in excellent condition and repair, although the white covers over the library furniture and in the den behind gave those rooms a rather ghostly appearance. Jane, I saw, gave only a cursory glance into those rooms, and soon after, pleading the chill inside, moved out into the sunlight.

Edith, however, was enchanted with it all, and said so. She danced through the house, shamelessly courting old Thomas, selecting bedrooms for us all, and peering into closets, and I caught up with her at last on the second door, looking at the boat-house on the beach beyond the marsh.

"What's above it?" she asked. "Rooms?"

"When the old sloop was in commission, the captain slept there," I told her.

"How many rooms?"

"Two, I think, and a sort of kitchenette."

"Are they furnished?"

Old Thomas, being appealed to, said they were, and Edith's face assumed that air of mysterious calculation which I have learned to associate with what she calls "an idea." Whatever it was, however, she kept it to herself, and I left her selecting a bedroom for herself, and putting into it sufficient thought to have served a better purpose.

It is a curious thing, to go into a house left, as Twin Hollows has been, without change since old Horace died, and not to find him there; his big armchair near the fireplace in the library, his very pens still on the flat-topped desk which is the only modern piece in the room, the books he was reading still in the desk rack. I had a curious feeling today that if I raised my voice, I would hear the little cough which was so often his preliminary to speech, from the den beyond.

I threw back the covering which protected the desk top, and sat down at it. Just there, in all probability, he had been sitting when the fatal attack took place. He may have felt it coming on, but there was no one to call, poor old chap. We had not been overly close, but the thought of him, writing perhaps, or reading, the sudden consciousness that all was not well, an instant of comprehension, and then the end—got me, rather.

I think he had been reading. Among the other books on the desk was the one with a scrap of paper thrust in it to mark the place, and a pencil line drawn on the margin of the page to mark a paragraph. But it gives me rather a new line on him. I had always thought that his purchase of a house locally reputed to be haunted, a reputation considerably enhanced by the Riggs woman's tenancy, was a rather magnificent gesture of pure Calvinism.

But tonight I am wondering. The marked paragraph is in a book entitled "Eugenia Riggs and the Oakville Phenomena," and I have brought it home with me. It is a creepy sort of thing, and I find myself looking back over my shoulder as I copy it into this record.

"It is to be borne in mind that the room was always subjected to the most careful preliminary examination. Its walls were plastered, and no doors or windows (see photograph) were near the cabinet. As an additional precaution strings of small bells were placed across all possible entrances and exits, which were also closed and locked."

"It is also to be remembered that the medium herself was always willing to be searched, and this was frequently done by Madame B—. This had been done on the night when the hand was distinctly seen by all present, reaching out and touching those nearest on the shoulder, and later making the impression in the pap of soft putty left in the cabinet."

"It is to be borne in mind, too, that, except when the controls rapped for no light, there was always sufficient illumination for use to see the medium clearly. A small red lamp was found to offer least disturbance and was customarily used."

"There was occasional fraud, but there were also genuine phenomena."

The last few words are italicized. So tonight I am wondering. Does one find, as life goes on, that the lonely human spirit revolts at the thought of eternal peace, and craves a relief in action in the life beyond? Would

June 23.

There is a division in my family. Edith has come out with her plan, which is to "spread out," as she puts it, in the main house at Twin Hollows, and to let Warren Halliday spend his vacation at the boat-house!

"Renting it to him, I suppose?" I inquired over my breakfast bacon.

"Renting it?" she said indignantly. "You wouldn't have the nerve to ask money for that tumble-down place, would you? And anyhow, you can't get blood out of a stone."

There is a terrible frankness about Edith at times.

But Jane is as equally determined not to occupy the house at any cost. It was written all over her yesterday and there is still an ominous net look about her mouth.

If Jane would be more open it would be easier; if she would only come to me and say that she is afraid of the house I think I could reassure her. It may be that that silly photograph is still in her mind. But why would she not even stay in the house yesterday? She went out into the garden and picked some of its neglected flowers instead.

"It's a pity not to use them," she said, and then looked at me with such a white and pitiful face that I put my arm around her.

"I must have been a very bad husband," I said, "if you think I am going to force you to live here. Who am I?" I added, "against you and Jock?"

But she did not smile.

"If you want to come here," she said, making what I felt was a painful concession, "why couldn't we live at the Lodge? It is really quite sweet. And we could rent this."

"Would that be quite moral, under the circumstances? I'm not asking the circumstances," I added hastily. "I'm simply putting the question."

"We could ask a lower rent."

There is, I sometimes think, a fundamental difference in the ethical views of men and women. To Jane it is quite proper to let a house with what she believes is a most undesirable quality, if she lowers the price. She does not suggest advertising: "One house furnished, reputed to be haunted." On the contrary, she proposes to entice tenants with a lower rent, and once having got them there, to be able to say, in effect: "What would you? The house is cheap. True, it has certain disadvantages; I am sorry you have been bothered. But you have saved money."

Aside from this viewpoint, however, the idea is sound enough. We can be comfortable at the Lodge. And—let me always be frank in this Journal—I may have my occasional yearnings for adventure, but they have their limitations, and the talk Edith has reported as taking place between old Thomas and herself yesterday after I left them has revealed them to myself.

Edith, on the contrary, finds the situation "really thrilling."

"It's a good house, yes'm," said Thomas. "For them as likes it. I wouldn't be caught dead in it at night myself."

"I hope you never will be," said Edith.

"It ain't nothing you can put your finger on," said Thomas. "It's just knocks and raps, and doors opening and closing. But I say that's enough."

"It sounds like plenty," said Edith. "Of course it may be rats."

"It's a right husky rat that'll open a closed door, and I ain't yet seen a rat that could move a chair. Besides, I ain't ever heard that rats are partial to a red light."

"Now, see here, Thomas," Edith reports herself as saying, "either you've said too much or you've said too little. What about a red light?"

Stripped of further trimming, it appears that some two years ago a small red lamp was installed in the den at Twin Hollows, and is now still there. Thomas having declined to destroy it for fear of some dire and mysterious vengeance.

"Not for light, as far as I could see, miss," he said. "I never seen him read by it. But put in it was, and the night it first came Annie Cochran said something came into her room and pulled the covers off her bed."

"How—shameless!" said Edith. Like the lady of color who said to the judge that she had "just sort of lost her taste" for her husband, I begin to lose my taste for this lamp. But one wonders whether its evil reputation is not a survival from the days of Mrs. Riggs, when "a small red lamp was found to offer least disturbance, and was customarily used."

June 24.

Edith has lost and Jane has won. We shall spend the summer at the Lodge.

But I feel that Jane's victory brings her no particular pleasure, that even to go to the Lodge is a concession she is making against some hidden apprehension.

Edith, however, has won in one way. Warren Halliday is to have the boat-house.

We motored out together today, I to look over the Lodge more carefully and Halliday to inspect his prospective quarters. He is thoroughly likeable, a nice clean-cut young fellow, not too handsome but manly and with a good war record, and badly cut up at his failure to find a job for the summer.

"I'd do anything," he said. "Sell neckties if necessary! But I can't even land that. Although—" he forced a grin—"I have a nice taste in neckties!"

On the way out I told him something of the history of the house, and a little—very little—of Jane's nervousness concerning it.

In view of our conversation, it was interesting later that day, at the Lodge, to have old Thomas intimate that Uncle Horace had not died a natural death, but had "seen something" which had caused it.

As a matter of fact, he brought out certain rather curious facts, which appear to have been somehow overlooked, or at least considered unimportant, at the inquest.

For instance, he had been writing at his desk when the attack came on. His pen was found on the floor. But there was no sign of what he had been writing, save for a mark on the fresh blotter, as if he had blotted something there. The most curious thing, however, according to old Thomas, was the matter of lights.

When Annie Cochran found him the following morning, on the floor beside his desk, all the lights were out, including his desk lamp.

"But the red lamp was going in the den," said old Thomas. "It didn't make much light, so nobody noticed it until the doctor came. He saw it right off. I leave it to you, what shut off that desk lamp?"

I rather gather from Thomas that the ill-repute of the red lamp has spread over the countryside. The house had a bad reputation to start with, and now comes Annie Cochran and her red lamp, and a fairly poor outlook so far as renting the property is concerned.

The Lodge proves to be weather-proof and in good condition, and the boat-house quite livable, with the addition of a few things from the main house.

(Note: It is necessary, for the sake of the narrative, to describe the boat-house. It is built up on piles which raise it above tide level, and the dory and canoe belonging to the house are stored in the lower portion of it in winter. The old sloop, however, not in commission for several years, was at this time anchored to a buoy about a hundred yards out in the bay, and showed the buffeting of wind and tide.

Across the salt marsh, from the foot of the lawn, extended a raised wooden runway which led to the boat-house and the beach. This walk also prolongs itself into a sort of ramshackle pier, from which a runway extends to a wooden float. At the time of our visit examination showed the float badly in need of repair, a number of the barrels which supported it having more or less gone to pieces.

It was, as will be seen, during Halliday's repair of this float that he made that discovery which was later to see the commencement of my troubles.)

All in all, Jane's scheme is practical, although Edith is frankly disappointed.

"I would have looked so sweet on that terrace!" she says, and makes a dreadful face at me.

But she is secretly pleased. She sees herself in the cottage, in a bungalow apron, presenting a picture of lovely but humble domesticity to young Halliday, and thus forcing his hand. For if I know anything of Edith, she is going to marry him. And if I know anything of Halliday, he is going to marry nobody he can not support.

It may be an interesting summer. Curious about that lamp on the desk, the night the poor old chap passed out. Of course, he might have turned it out and risen to go upstairs when he felt the attack coming on. But wouldn't he have laid the pen down first? One would do that automatically.

It's a pity the blotting pad has been destroyed.

State News in Brief

Munising—Damage estimated at $50,000 was caused by fire that started in the telephone exchange here. The exchange was destroyed and several nearby buildings were damaged.

Kalamazoo—Grief over the death of his wife about a year ago, caused Irving Wood, 60 years old, to hang himself in a shed back of his home. His body was found by neighbors, who became alarmed by his failure to appear about the house.

Bay City—Mrs. Mathilda Lardeque, 93 years old, who is dead here of old age, leaves 110 direct descendants, two sons, Gilbert and Thomas, both of this city; three daughters, Mrs. Herbert Beattie, Mrs. William Geno, and Mrs. Carl Groff, of Bay City; 41 grandchildren, and 64 great-grandchildren.

Port Huron—Dr. William Henry Walsh, hospital consultant of Chicago and New York, was in Port Huron to outline plans for a new hospital. The estimated cost is $600,000. He suggested that the present Port Huron City Hospital be used for a combined nurses' home and training school and that the present emergency hospital, owned and operated by the city, be used for contagious cases only.

Detroit—Several times during the past year ill health prompted Mrs. Rebecca Ambender, 36 years old, the mother of four children, to tell her husband, Abraham, that life to her was not worth living. One afternoon recently, while downtown, Mrs. Ambender plunged from a fire escape on the sixteenth floor of the David Whitney building and crashed through the roof of a truck in the alley below, dying instantly.

Coldwater—George W. Jeffers, of this city, one of four surviving members of Loomis battery, famous Civil War contingent, was the only member who was able to attend the annual reunion of the association here. Owing to the illness and absence of the other three, no banquet and program was provided this year, as has been the custom in former years. All members are now past 90 years of age and it is not likely that another reunion will be held.

St. Louis—In the belief that he was doing a good turn, 11-year-old Claude Hunt stopped playing to help a man enter the home of Lester Ziern. The man said that he had lost his key and Claude, with a boost, climbed to the kitchen window, entered and unlocked the door. Accepting the thanks of the stranger, he went back to his play. Later, attracted by the excitement when Ziern came home, he found that he had been a good scout for a burglar.

Pontiac—A battle 2,000 feet in the air between an airplane pilot and his passenger over this city resulted in the crashing of the plane in a field near the Pontiac State Hospital and the serious injury of the pilot, Harry Anderson, of Roseville. The passenger was Clarence Frechette, of Pontiac. Anderson said Frechette struck him in the back of the head with a hammer and that the plane got out of control while he was struggling to wrest the weapon from the passenger.

Sault Ste. Marie—William Stewart, convicted burglar, was given a life term at hard labor in the Michigan State Prison at Jackson by Judge Herbert H. Runnels, the sentence being mandatory under the fourth felony clause of the new criminal code. Stewart, who has figured in several affairs with officers, involving gun play, escaped jail by cutting through two feet of stone wall last winter, but was recaptured in a lumber camp shack near Eckerman. Stewart is 27 years old.

Lansing—An issue of $79,000 worth of common stock in the Flint super-speedway airport was authorized recently by the Michigan Securities Commission. The company proposes to acquire 400 acres of land and erect grandstands with a capacity of 25,000 persons. Automobile races will be held on a two-mile banked speedway, and a double runway, 3,600 feet long, is to be provided for airplanes. Airplane races and exhibitions also will be held, according to the plans of the promoters.

Owosso—Despondent because of the death of her husband three months ago, Mrs. Nellie McBride, 70-year-old justice of the peace at Corunna, ended her life by hanging in a small room off her court room here. Her body was found by an attorney who went to the court to make arrangements for a trial. She is believed to have hanged herself during the night. Mrs. McBride left several letters explaining that she was "too lonesome to live," following the death of her husband.

Mason—The large residence on the State game farm three miles east of here has been destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at between $18,000 and $20,000. The fire started in the roof, either from sparks or defective wiring. The Mason fire department was called to the scene but in the haste to get at the fire some volunteers who attempted to assist in the work dropped the suction hose in the mud of the pond from which firemen were to take water and the pumper was unable to give service.

Cheboygan—Otto Olsen, Michigan public service line foreman, miraculously escaped electrocution here when accidental contact with a 33,000-volt line wire inflicted only two burned limbs.

Lansing—Compilation of Michigan laws, authorized by the 1927 legislature, will not be completed until January, 1930, the official state committee and committee of the State Bar Association announced here. It was decided to include the session laws of 1929. This will delay the publication only a short time.

Pontiac—When Mrs. Susan Tatu, 42 years old, wife of Joseph Tatu, fell unconscious in her home, an emergency call was given the fire department and firemen worked over her for an hour with a pulmotor in an attempt to revive her. Thirty-seven "old fiddlers" were in the contest.

Lansing—The marriage rate continued to decrease and the divorce rate to increase in Michigan during 1927, according to the census bureau's annual nationwide survey of marriage and divorce statistics just made public at Washington. Tecumseh—A macadamized road from Tecumseh to Palmyra is asked in petitions being circulated among owners of property fronting on the proposed improvement. The proposed highway would afford a short-cut between the Monroe turnpike, M-50, and the Adrian-Toledo road, U. S. 172. The paving of M-52 between Tecumseh and Clinton, now projected, would extend the cut-off to the Chicago turnpike, U. S. 112.

Martin—Inhabitants of this village are congratulating themselves on the escape of 50 children from the First Methodist Church. It was destroyed by flames recently while an Epworth League party was being held in the basement. Six houses in the neighborhood of the church were on fire at one time, and it was feared for a time the entire village would be destroyed. The children were led to safety by Sunday school teachers without disorder.

Grand Rapids—With an estimated loss of $100,000, the plant of the Grand Rapids Sash & Door company here was destroyed by fire. The building was stocked with finished product of window sashes and doors. The fire is believed to have started in a sawdust pile. It ate rapidly through the dried lumber and on the arrival of firemen was beyond control. The plant here is a branch of a Detroit concern and huge quantities of the finished product were stored here for delivery.

The saddle horses were apparently infected by other animals on the Oakland county farm to which they had been sent last fall.

Composition of Wood

Wood is composed of millions of tiny cells, some filled with water, some with air, and some with oil. When wood is burning, the heat makes the contents of the cells expand until the cells burst, causing miniature explosions, familiar to us as "crackles."

Today the Accepted Time

"We are dead to yesterday and not yet born to tomorrow." Today is given to our hand to shape into something enjoyable and useful, into benefit for ourselves and good for our neighbors, and it is all that we have. —Exchange.

"Deadly," but Anyway—

We note with a sensation which we infer to be a typographical error in an eastern weekly. Mr. Kipling is thus quoted in the publication: "The female of the species is more dangerous than the male."—Portland Oregonian.
