JORDAN WILL HAVE EAST STRONG TEACHING CORPS.

A number of changes in the corps Teachers for the East Jordan Pub-lic Schools have been made and our students will face several new instructors in September. Supt. A. J. Duncanson enters upon his eighth year as head of our Public School system. He has accomplished much during the past years in building up our schools and is an invaluable asset to School Dist. No. 4. Principal C. F. Snelenberger will also be with us another year. The Herald understands that he has had better offers elsewhere from a financial standpoint, but preferred to stick top "The Old Home Town."

top "The Old Home Town." Miss Bertha Clark, who has been in charge of the Kindergarten for many years, will have charge of the grade the coming year.

Following are those who will in-truct the young minds how to shoot A. J., Duncanson, Superintendent East Jordan.

CORN BEATS BARLEY IN FEEDING TRIALS

East Lansing, June 19th,- Although barley has proved to be a good sub-stitute for corn as an efficient grain for a fattening ration, a field of corn will fatten many more head of livestock than the same field planted to barley.

This is the result of one of the most significant of the experiments conducted by the M. S. C. animal hus-

This year it is East Jordan's turn to make the Eagle Scream. And the citizens of East Jordan are planning to make said Eagle make a noise in Charlevoix County that has heretofore been unheard. Rebec-Sweet Post of the American Legion have combined their efforts with the East Jordan Business Men's Club to stage a Home-coming and Fourth of July on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 3rd and 4th that is bound to be one of the greatest events in Charlevoix Co., since the World War was written "finis."

Various Committees have been hard at work on their assignments to further this year's celebration. Already many former East Jordan citizens have written that they plan to "Come Home" on July 3-4. Many more Chest Clinic will follow.

The program of events is still somewhat incomplete. There will be many more features still unrecorded,

Hay-Making Demonstration

BIG EVENT FOR FARMERS TO BE HELD JULY 6TH.

Many tons of choice alfalfa hay are being cut annually by Charlevoix County farmers, who are using the Dain System of curing Hay. This is the system of hay making to be demonstrated soon in this county.

In order to get the good price which alfalfa should demand it must have quality. It is the experience of many farmers that this new system of hay making is a labor saver and delivers the best quality of hay.

Farmers like the simplicity and efficiency of this system of hay making. For instance, they start the side-de-livery rake soon after the mower.

This prevents letting the leaves get too dry, which will mean a loss of color and shattering. In a short time the windrows are turned by the use of the side-delivery and after a few hours it will be probably be turned By turning the hay two or again.

three times, it hastens the drying and preserves the color, as the same part f the windrow is left exposed to the sun only a short time. By the use of this system it is the experience of some twelve farmers in Charlevoix County that hay can be handled, and put in the mow with a-bout one half the time and labor necessary under the old system, besides saving more green leaves, color and making better quality hay.

There will be a demonstration of the system of hay curing, which has been so effective and which is now widely used by farmers all over the state at the Coulter Farm, just south of the Charlevoix Co-op Co. on Friday afternoon July 6th

July 9. I made an excuse this morning to Annie Cochran, and she slipped me up the kitchen staircase of the other house and so to the attic. The lamp was as 1 had left it and the closer locked, and today I am asking myself whether, with that curious lack of perspective one finds at night, I did not see instead of the lamp far away. the lighted end of a cigar close at hand.

Annie's report on my tenants is satisfactory on the whole. She doesn't much care for the secretary, but the old man's "hark is worse than his bite." He comes down in the morning, or is helped down, to his breakfast, and she cuts his food for himhe seems to dislike the boy's doing it -reads the paper and then goes to work.

"To work?" 1 asked. "What sort of work?"

"He's writing a book." But it appears that he is writing it only in the nonliteral sense. He is dictating a book. And it also appears he has chosen this place because of its isolation, and Annie's orders are that he receives no visitors.

But, it also appears that young Gordon is perhaps not as courageous as he made out to me when he came to look over the house, and that he has been "hearing things." "What sort of things?"

"He didn't say.' But he asked me this morning if I'd been in the house last night. 'If you find me here at night, it'll be because I'm paralyzed and can't move,' I said, 'and if you take my advice, you'll not go round hunting if you hear anything."

"That must have cheered him con "The sail there, what's ite name?" I say, pointing. "Name?" siderably." "I don't know about that. He just (Note: I fell asleep here, and the entry is incomplete.) July 12.

Just what did Peter Geles see last night?

If I were asked to name, in order of their psychic quality, the three persons on this boat, I would put Jane first and Peter last.

He is a materialist. Not for him the interesting abstractions, the con troversial problems of the universe. The life of the mind, the questions of the soul, are hidden from him. His food, his tobacco, the direction of the wind, the state of the tide, these coverthe field of his speculations and anxie ties. And yet—Peter saw something last night.

It was about one o'clock in the morning, and he had wakened and crawled out of his pup tent, with, according to him, "the feeling that we were in for a blow. There was a cold wind across my feet."

So he rose, and he saw that our red lantern was burning low, and gingerly stepping across me, reached into a locker for the oil can. When he straightened up he saw a shadowy figure standing in the bow of the boa directly under the lantern.

He thought at first that it was 1, but the next moment he had stumbled across me as I lay supine, and the oil can fell and went a-rolling. The noise did not disturb the figure, and Peter gave a long look at it before he howled like a hyena and brought me up all standing.

It was only then that it disappeared. "Just blew to windward," according to Peter. I never saw it at all.

Peter did not go to bed again all night, but sat huddled by the wheel.

ness to believe every man guilty until he has proved himself innocent. And am I not now in the act of proving my innocence?

But my problem remains. And trying to solve it is like playing solitaire with a card missing. I have, we will say, lost the knave of clubs out of my pack, and without it the game cannot go on Halliday, I know, believes that there is a possible connection between the killer and Uncle Horace's letter. He believes, in other words, that some curious and perhaps monstrous idea ice behind the sheen-killing, and that it may be the same idea to which the letter refers.

"There is something behind it," he asserts. "Something so vital to the man who believes it that he is ready to kill-has killed certainly once and possibly twice-to protect it.' But the nature of the idea, or conviction, he nobly evades.

"And this monstrous idea was to kill sheep, and build a stone altar?"

"How do we know that isn't merely a propitiatory sacrifice, Skipper? sort of preliminary to the real thing?" "And what is to be the real thing?" "What is the wickedest crime you can name, against society?" "The taking of human life."

"Exactiy."

But this, as he says, is as far as he goes. He is, however, careful to say that his theory has got him some where; that is, that there is a definite idea behind what has been happening.

"An insane one, then." "Not necessarily," he objects. "Your Uncle Horace didn't write that letter to a man he considered insane." Peter Geiss has his own theory about poor Carroway's death. Carroway, he says, probably located the boat; he could do that by cutting of his engine and listening for the oars. Then, in black darkness, he steered toward it, probably with the idea of driving the fellow back. But Peter does not think that Carroway would have closed in on the murderer, unarmed as he was.

For Peter says that it was that of a man in a dressing gown, and that 'it looked like the old gentleman." By which he means my Uncle Horace.

We have had bad news, and are preparing to land and take a motor back. Edith wires that Halliday has been burt. She gives no details.

July 14 Hailiday's condition is not critical. thank God.

We found him (Note: in my bed room here at the Lodge) with Edith and Helena fussing over him, and with his collar bone broken, the result not of the attack but of his ditching the car.

For he is the indirect victim of an attack.

On the evening of the 12th he was on his way to the station at Oakville to meet Helena Lear and Edith, who

Doctor Hayward was making his afternoon call on Halliday when the detective came, and as I feel confi dent that the doctor is in Greenough's confidence I was glad to spring my little hombshell on them both like Bun yan's Man in an Iron Cage. "I am now a man of despair, and am shut up in ft."

Edith was on the veranda when the detective came, and young Gordon was with her. During our absence he has struck up with her an acquaint ance of sorts, but she dislikes him ex-tremely. She has, Jane tells me. nick named him Shifty.

As Hayward was still upstairs, I sparred politely with Greenough for a few minutes. We had had good weather for the trip; fishing was only It was too bad to be brought tair. back as we were. Yes, but if things like that were going on, it was better to be on the ground. "What sort of things?" he asked.

"We have had two murderous attacks, haven't we? One successful and one sot.' "So you class this little affair of young Halliday's with the other?"

"Don't you?" "Not until I've got something that ties them together, Mr. Porter." Hayward had come in and stood in side the doorway, gnawing at his fin gers and listening. "But if you found something did tie them together?" "For instance?" "I'm going to ask you something. Was there or was there not something
