EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, JULY 6, 1928.

NUMBER 27

Homecoming Went Big

SOME THREE HUNDRED FORMER RESIDENTS HERE TO CELEBRATE.

With plenty of attractions and ideal weather East Jordan's two days Homecoming and Fourth of July celebration was the best attended and most thoroughly enjoyed event since the armistice celebration. Some three hundred former residents returned to East Jordan to help make the Homecoming the success that it was. In another column will be found the names of those who registered. The list is somewhat incomplete, as many failed to enter their names.

BAND MUSIC A FEATURE

Our City's two Bands—the East Jordan City Band of 28 pieces, and our celebrated School Band of 42 pieces, under Director John Ter Wee, were among the main features of the celebration. Programs of excellent band music were furnished both days and was thoroughly enjoyed by the thousands of listeners.

SPORTS AND CONTESTS GOOD

In the tug-of-war and indoor-base ball contests between the Detroit-Flint vs. Muskegon, Grand Rapids, Lansing Homecomers, the former aggregation had the edge on their rivals, winning both events.

The Street and Water Sports brought out some well-contested events that proved of interest to the crowds. Unfortunately The Herald is unable to publish a list of the winners.

The Bozoyne City-East Jordan base ball game resulted in a 6 to 5 victory for Bozoyne.

SPEED BOAT RACES

Over a dozen out-board motor boats were entered for these contests, but owing to choppy water only a few of these participated. Commodore Kinyon and two other gentlemen of the Traverse Bay Boat Club acted as judges.

The Class B race was won with a boat owned by Roy Brady of Charlevoix.

Free-for-all was won by a boat owned by H. D. Smith of Fisherman's Paradise, Bellaire.

PARADE WAS EXCELLENT

The big parade showed that much effort had been made by our citizens to provide worth-while floats. Probably the outstanding feature was that of the army tank, put on by Rebec-Sweet Post of the American Legion. The floats of our Knights of Pythias, C. W. Hipp and Standard Oil Co., were commendable.

The Calithumpians proved a great source of amusement, the E. J. Fire Dept., with the old hose wagon, vying with the "Spirit of East Jordan" by the Northern Auto Co.

Following was the line-up of the parade:—
The Colors, under guard.
"Uncle Sam" by Carlton Bowen.
East Jordan School Band.
East Jordan Fire Truck.
C. W. Hipp, bathing beauties.
Knights of Pythias, degree team.
R. G. Watson.
Standard Oil Company.
George Carr.
J. D. Frost.
American Legion, tank.
E. J. Co-op. Ass'n.
E. J. Lumber Company Store.
Temple Theatre.

Autos by Lakeside Garage, Clarence Healey, Leslie Miles, and others.
Calithumpians—East Jordan Fire Dept., and Northern Auto Co.
FIREWORKS CLOSE DOINGS
A magnificent display of fireworks, witnessed by several thousand spectators, closed one of the best Fourth of July celebrations ever held in Charlevoix County.

Septic Tank Demonstrations

THREE TANKS TO BE CONSTRUCTED IN COUNTY.

The second opportunity for Charlevoix County farmers to actually see these tanks erected will be possible on July 9, 10 and 11th, when three actual demonstrations will be conducted by specialists from Michigan State College co-operating with B. C. Mellescamp, County Agent.

The first demonstration will be at the farm of W. K. Straw, one mile south of new Belvedere Golf Links near Charlevoix on Monday afternoon July 9th at 1:30 fast time.

The second at the farm of Benj Smatts, five miles north and west of East Jordan on the west side of South Arm on Tuesday afternoon, July 10, at 1:30 fast time, and the third demonstration at the farm of David Smith 1 1/2 miles west of Hortons Bay on main road on Wednesday afternoon, July 11th, at 1:30 o'clock fast time. During the forenoon of each day the forms for the tank will be constructed and the other materials assembled and everything in readiness for the demonstration in the afternoon, when the tank will be erected.

First Annual Guernsey Field Day

AT EAST JORDAN NEXT FRIDAY JULY 13TH.

Plans are all set for the First Annual Guernsey Show and Picnic to be held in the City of East Jordan next Friday, July 13th. This red letter event for Guernsey breeders is sponsored by the newly organized Charlevoix County Guernsey Breeders Association, with the splendid assistance of the Business Men's Club of East Jordan, who have donated freely to make the show possible.

The big feature of the day will be the exhibit of some 20 head of the highest type and quality Guernseys owned by the 23 charter members of the new organization. There will be calves, yearlings, 2 year olds, 3 year olds, 4 year olds, mature cows, and purebred Sires of various ages shown.

W. D. Buntington, Guernsey Fieldman for Michigan will judge the exhibit and give the points that we look for in the best type Guernseys. Suitable ribbons will be awarded the winners of the various classes, donated by East Jordan.

A very interesting and instructive program has been arranged, featured by the appearance of W. D. Buntington, who will give you an inspiring discussion of Guernsey progress in Michigan, as follows on fast time:—
Noon—Picnic dinner at the City Park. Coffee will be furnished.
1:30—Business session of Ass'n.
2:00—Address of Welcome, Mayor H. W. Dieken.
2:10—Response by President of the Association, Charles P. Murphy.
2:20—Remarks, Dr. P. C. Pillsbury.
2:30—Speech, W. D. Buntington.
3:00—Judging of Exhibit, W. D. Buntington.
4:00—Amen! Homeward Bound.

The above program, if weather permits, will be given at the new City Park. The exhibit will be housed in the sheds across from the Northern Auto Co. If interested in buying or selling Guernseys, this is your opportunity of making contacts. Learn what is the correct type and quality in Guernseys. See the best representatives in our County. Come early, bring a well-filled lunch basket, hear the program, see the exhibits, and stay late.

B. C. MELLESCAMP,
County Agr'l Agent.

In order to receive the maximum benefit everyone interested in the demonstration should be present by 1:30 fast time and watch the various operations necessary for the complete installation.

The septic tank and tile system is to the farm home what the sewer system is to the city. It provides a satisfactory means of disposing of the wastes from the kitchen, laundry and bath room.

It's cost is not prohibitive and it's construction is little more difficult than the building of a concrete water tank.

Don't fail to mark your calendar right now for these demonstrations and attend your nearest one.
B. C. MELLESCAMP,
County Agent.

First Use of Parachute

The invention of the parachute is accredited to Sebastian Lenormand and the device was used by him in 1784 in making a descent from an upper window from a house in Lyon. The first descent from a balloon was made by Garnerin in Paris in 1797.

Aeroplane In Crash

EAST JORDAN HAS FIRST AIRWAYS ACCIDENT.

East Jordan had its first airways accident Tuesday evening about 7:00 o'clock. A Michigan Airways plane, piloted by Elmer Van Sickle, and with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nowland of East Jordan as passengers, attempted a take-off from the field next to the Fair Grounds.

Owing evidently to light wind, the plane failed to raise properly and Pilot Van Sickle saw that the plane was about to crash into a high tension electric light wire. In attempting to turn, one of the wings caught the ground and the plane's motor dug into the ground, leaving the plane upright with motor in the earth.

The impact threw the occupants about and they sustained minor injuries. Mrs. Nowland fainted and it was several hours before she recovered. The Pilot received a broken tooth and other minor face injuries. It is estimated that it will cost about $1,000 to make repairs on the plane. At present it is stored in one of the fair ground buildings.

Pilot Van Sickle, and mechanic, have returned to their Lansing headquarters.

Based on Actual Event

K. W. Gordon of Cambridge, Mass., one of the best authorities on "old songs that men have sung," says that it "seems pretty clear that the song 'Old Ninety-Seven' was composed on an actual event and that it is the work of a single author, though touched up a bit by other hands."

Oil Under Ocean?

Geologists say that the source bed of most oilfields are marine in origin deposited millions of years ago. Through the ages oil of these sea deposits was concentrated into pools that are now being drained. Therefore there seems no reason why the bed of the ocean should not be a source of future oil supply.

Musician Honored

Henry Bishop, an original member of the Philharmonic Society of London and for many years the leader at Covent Garden, was the first to be knighted on account of his musical contributions. He wrote no less than 180 operas, farces, ballets and adaptations. "My Pretty Jane" and "Lo! Hear the Gentle Lark," are still popular.

Electrical Executions

The reason that electrocutions take place in the late afternoon or evening is that during the day the convicts are working and are out in their cells. A pending execution in a penitentiary exerts a depressing influence over the convicts, and to avoid any outbreak or manifestation on their part the hour is deferred until the prisoners are in their individual cells.

Halliday has reconstructed the story, in view of his own experience. "The fellow was waiting," he said. "I hailed her, as he hailed me. He knew nobody would pass a man caught out in a storm like that. He got in, and closed the storm curtains, and of course she hadn't a chance in the world."

Possibly five hundred men and boys have been searching steadily since yesterday morning; the back country where it happened, is fairly open; the sea, with its salt marshes, both of which would give unlimited opportunity for concealment, is fully six miles by road from where the truck was found.

Much talk is going around as to a story from the lighthouse on the extreme tip of Robinson's point today. As is to be expected, the superstitious are making considerable capital of it. And I myself am not disposed to dismiss it without considerable thought.

The story is as follows: On the night of the tragedy, a flying night bird of some sort broke one of those windows of the lighthouse which protect the light itself. The keeper and the second keeper repaired it as best they could, but the terrific gusts of the wind made them uneasy, and they remained on watch.

They sat, high in the air, in the room just beneath the light, now and then glancing up to see that all was well. The storm increased in violence and as the sea came up the surf beat on the rocks below with a crashing only equaled by the thunder itself. As is usual in the high tide of the full moon, the low portion of the point to landward, and the keeper's houses, the engine shed, boathouse and oil storage tank were soon cut off from the main land by a strip of angry ocean.

Nevertheless, they were comfortable enough, and the under-keeper had actually fallen asleep, at eleven o'clock, when there came a sudden gust in the storm. It was that time which I well remember, when there came one of those ominous and quivering pauses in the attack which seem, not a promise of peace, but a gathering together of all the powers of wind, sea and sky for one final and tremendous effort.

And in that pause Ward, the light-keeper, heard something below in the tower. He touched his assistant on the shoulder and he sat up. Both of them then distinctly heard footsteps on the lowest flight of stairs, five floors below.

They were alone in the tower; cut off from the mainland by a rushing strip of tide, and no boat could have landed through the surf. And outside was that unearthly quiet which was more sinister than the storm itself. Neither one of them moved or spoke, but the keeper remembers that, as the steps came on inexorably, a cold air began to eddy around the small circular room, and that he looked up at the red light apprehensively.

At the top of the second flight the steps paused, and both keepers drew a breath. Then they heard a small dry cough, and the steps recommenced on the third level.

Up and up. The stairs curved round the inside wall of the tower.

and they knew they would not see what was climbing until it was fairly on them. They sat there, their eyes glued to the door, and heard the steps coming up the last round. Whatever it was, it was on them. It reached the top, and the next step would bring it into view.

Then the storm burst again, in an explosion that fairly set the tower rocking, and simultaneously the electric lights in the room went out.

It was then that the assistant keeper swears that something touched him; something cold; but there seems to be no doubt, whether that is true or not, that the whole room was filled with the cold eddying wind referred to before.

I prefer to trust the head-keeper's statement. Ward is an unemotional type, and this is what he says: "I was scared enough, but when the lights went out I looked up at the lamp. It's an oil-burner, and it was all right. Old Faithful, we call it. Well, you have to understand that we weren't entirely in the dark, even then; some of the red light from above came down, and I could see where Jim was standing. I couldn't see him, understand, but I could see where he was. And there was a third party in the room, over near the stair-door. That is, he was there one minute; the next he was gone."

Keeping close together the two men went down through the successive floors of the tower. They found nothing, and the outer door was still closed and bolted.

In view of so detailed and corroborative a statement, the final support of my early skepticism has had a severe blow.

What would be the change, should we enter another world, with the same faculties we have now, but no limitations in their use? To sorrow—to love—perhaps to hate. And who shall laugh at the poor ghost who, knowing and suffering all things, makes its desperate attempt to avert a wickedness? To convey, through the flick mantle of the flesh, a knowledge that is not conveyance. To stand by, wringing its pale, amorphous hands, while crimes go on and unnecessary wretchedness inhabits the earth?

Nothing bodily accounts for personality. Back of everything physical, and greater than anything physical, is the mind. And mind is not an attribute of matter.

July 22. The body has not been found, and the sheriff has raised the reward to five thousand dollars. This with Livingston's original five hundred for the sheep-killer, which is to go to the hand of the murderer as being in all probability the same individual, raises the reward to fifty-five hundred dollars.

Today, however, certain information acquired by Halliday has shifted the scene of the search to the salt marshes and the bay, and tonight, as I glance from my window I can see lanterns moving in the marsh beyond the main house, and up and down the shore. Jane has made coffee, and those of the searchers who come up this way from the beach have been stopping in.

Halliday's discovery, made today, is as follows: He calculated just how far the truck would have to go after it was hauled, before it stopped, and went back to that point, which was not far from the entrance to the Livingston drive. Already the crowd of searchers and sensation hunters had pretty well destroyed any clew that might have been left, but about twenty yards from the gates he found marks in the mud indicating that, not only had the truck been backed to that point, but it had been turned there and headed back toward Oakville and the bay.

Just where it left the road again, if at all, is a question. I believe Halliday has taken a scraping from the wheels and proposes to have it analyzed. He finds something suspicious in it. I cannot say what.

I have spent today reorganizing my household. None of the women, including Clara, are to leave it after tonight unaccompanied, and although no entrance into any house has yet been attempted, Halliday and I have spent the late afternoon tightening window locks and adding new bolts where they are necessary.

Jane has entirely recovered, and has today resumed work on her tapestry, with us a barometer of normality. She has even agreed to dine at the Livingstones tonight, not particularly to my delight.

"Come over and dine," Mrs. Livingston telephoned, "and let's have a little bridge. I've had the horrors for three days."

"You don't object to my wearing my revolver, as a part of my evening outfit?"

"Everybody's doing it," she said. "This house has been turned into an arsenal."

before his death, on euthanasia. I believed in putting the unfit out of the world; he didn't. But of course the god of it settles that."

"He laughed again, bit the end of a thumb, hesitated, and then got his hat. "Danger!" he said. "And the police! No, that wasn't for me."

"And you still believe he died of heart disease?"

"It was his heart, all right," he said, and going out, climbed heavily into his car. He seemed abstracted, and made no reply to my good-night.

I can read into this what I like. His manner was not that of a gully man; on the other hand, it was not entirely natural, either. He was both watchful and self-conscious. And I do not believe he read the letter twice.

One of the evening newspapers to-night prints a photostatic copy of the cipher found in our garage, and offers a prize for its solution.

Edith's memory is shown to have been faulty in only one particular. The cipher, as published reads: GeLTr. K. 24.

July 23. Mrs. Livingstone has given me something to think about.

The dinner went off very well. But the bridge was irritating. It is always a mistake to seat four people at a table, and place cards before them, when their minds are full of another and totally different matter.

Nevertheless, the evening was not without a peculiar interest of its own. While Mr. Livingston took Jane to see his hothouses I had a few moments alone with his wife, and I received what is to me a new angle on the whole mysterious business.

We were in the library, and I was wandering around looking at Livingston's books. In one corner was a large and well-worn collection of books on psychic subjects, and as I glanced up from them Mrs. Livingston was watching me, gravely.

"If you do not know what you believe on these matters," I said, "you must certainly know the opinions of others."

"And you?" she said. "Are you still a cynic?"

I turned and faced her. "I don't know what I am."

"Ah! You have heard the lighthouse story?"

"Yes."

for instance, will it have on my own serio-comic position? Could Greenough arrest me on suspicion? Although Halliday laughs at that, he is, I think, a trifle uncertain. He feels as I do, that before long Greenough will have to satisfy the public by an arrest of some sort, and that I am the only person against whom he has the shadow of a case.

What developed last night is as follows: Halliday got out of the car at the spot where the truck was found, and had Edith go back and approach slowly, along the road from town. Approximately, the conditions were the same as those of the night of the disappearance, save that no rain was falling.

Halliday, it appears, was searching for that spot, back among the trees, where the unknown had waited, secure from observation but still able to see the truck's lights far enough away to be able to run out and halt it before it had passed.

After two or three experiments he found the proper location, and there commenced a sort of intensive search with the pocket flash, with Edith in the car, to warn him of any approach, and the lights out.

Not under the tree he had selected, but perhaps a dozen feet away from it, he found, well trampled into the ground, a small screw cap, made of tin; exactly similar, he tells me, to those used on the cans of certain makes of ether, and underneath which there is a cork.

"In my case, he was unlucky," he explains. "He went through the same procedure, and took the cap off before he hailed me, but the cork came out. He had better luck this last time."

As to his discovery of the murderer's infernal symbol, he is more reticent. He had some sort of a "hunch" to examine the trees themselves, he says simply.

"You thought there might be something on a tree?"

"I don't know that I thought about it at all. Skipper, I just turned the flash up and there it was."

Perhaps I am wrong, but his explanation does not quite satisfy me, nor, I think, does it satisfy himself. With all his keen intelligence he is strictly conventional; I think he believes it would somehow invalidate his manhood to confess that his "hunch" might have been a guidance by some unseen source.

But the triangle enclosed in a circle was there, on a tree only thirty feet back from the road.

July 26. Annie Cochran says absolutely that there is neither a red lamp nor a red lantern in this house.

I stopped her this morning and asked her.

The day has brought no developments in the Morrison case, which has settled down more or less into a routine. The searchers are fewer each day; the fishermen have gone back to their nets and trawls, and today will probably see the last of the attempts to drug likely spots on the bay.

There are many now who believe that this time the anchor rope is shorter, and that the body, securely anchored to the ooze at the bottom of the bay, will not be uncovered by the lowest tide.

But if the day has brought no developments outside, it has brought one or two to us here.

easy. Halliday, I knew, was out on the bay, and in such times as these any small deviation from the normal is upsetting. I started after her, therefore, and was started not to find her in the living quarters or on the veranda. But when I called she answered from below, and going down I found her among the boats.

"Well!" I said. "And are you going fishing?"

"I was just wandering about," she said. "There's another boat, isn't there?"

"Halliday's out in it. Why?"

But she pretended not to hear me, and went up the steps again. Even then she made various excuses, not to leave at once. She went inside, and I could hear her straightening the small living room. When there was nothing more to do she came out again.

"I don't think he has cooked a thing since it happened," she said. "Suppose we wait for him, and take him back to luncheon?"

She is no actress, is Jane, and it began to dawn on me that she was determined to wait for Halliday's return, and that she had one of her hidden reasons for it. It was there, sitting on the boathouse veranda, that she flung out her story, which is detailed in the extreme.

"You remember," she said, "the night of Maggie's disappearance, that a storm was threatening, and that I was nervous. I felt queer—I can't describe it, William. I had a sort of premonition, I think, anyhow, I didn't want to go to bed. Once in awhile something terrifies me, and I am afraid even to wink for fear something happens while my eyes are closed. It was like that."

Edith was writing something of other, shut in her room, and after you had gone the storm began to come up, and I felt queer and jumpy. I went around the windows downstairs, and then went into the living room and sat down to wait for you."

"Let's see. What time was that?"

"It must have been ten o'clock; maybe a little later. Then—I hate to tell you this, William. It sounds so silly."

"I've been thinking some pretty foolish things myself, lately, my dear," I said, gravely. "Go ahead."

"Jock was very strange, from the moment we went in there. He sat and stared at that old parlor organ. I—"

"At the parlor organ," she said positively. "Or rather, above and behind it, where it sits across the corner. And after a while, I thought I saw something there."

"What sort of 'something'?"

"I can't tell you," she said, and shivered. "That is, it wasn't really anything. It was like a mist I could just tell there was something there, and then Jock lifted up his head and howled at it, and—I don't even remember getting upstairs, William."

Jane to go back to town, but without result.

"Not unless you go," Jane said firmly, and Edith and I exchanged glances.

As a matter of fact, last night's events have left me in a more precarious position than before, and I feel that any more on my part would only precipitate matters. Greenough has given out a statement to the reporters that an early arrest may be expected, and I do not for the life of me understand why he has not pounced already.

I imagine the only thing that has saved me, so far, has been the single fact that Peter Geiss knows I was on the sloop the night and hour when Halliday was attacked. That puzzles him.

To record last night's strange affair in sequence:

I could not sleep, a condition which is growing chronic with me lately, and at or about midnight I went, downstairs and outside. The night was extremely dark; I paced back and forth along the drive, keeping at first close to the Lodge, but gradually extending my steps as I grew accustomed to the darkness.

After twenty minutes or so of this, and at the extreme of my swing toward the other house, I heard some sort of movement in that direction, and stopped to listen. It was a cautious disturbance of the shrubbery, and I swung in among the trees and stood listening. It was not repeated, however, and I turned to go back.

Printed Frock

The printed frock this season is not merely a question of "Shall I get one?" but "I simply MUST have one!" No wardrobe this summer will be at all complete without at least one printed frock similar to the one shown above, worn by Renee Adoree.

Large prints and small prints, divided hues and conservatively subdued colors are offered by Fashion. This wide variety permits individuality in the printed frocks one chooses today.

The frock worn by Miss Adoree has red as its basic color with a small white flower figure. The neckerchief and ties at the wrist, throat and belt are novel touches.

An all white or an all red felt sports hat makes a fitting complement to be worn with this frock.

For Little Girls

A very smart little frock of rose georgette crepe trimmed with blue appliques on which rose and blue flowerlets are embroidered. There are plaits at the shoulders.

Never Abandon Hope

To doubt is worse than to have lost; and to despair is but to antedate those miseries that must fall on us.—Massinger.

State News in Brief

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids' first fireworks accident of the year was reported when Glenn Thayer, Jr., 13 years old, was burned near the eyes as gunpowder exploded in a toy cannon.

Mt. Clemens—All of the thirteen high schools in Macomb county have been accredited by the University of Michigan for next year, it was announced here by Will Lee, county school superintendent.

Vicksburg—Larry Grigsby, garage employe, suffered serious burns in a fire which destroyed three warehouses and five automobiles, entailing a property loss estimated at $10,000. The cause of the fire has not been determined. Grigsby was burned when he grasped a pall of burning gasoline and carried it outside.

Lakeview—Representatives of nearly every community between Saginaw and Muskegon gathered here recently to boost a proposed cross-state highway between those cities. During the meeting, the Rainbow Trail Association, with C. L. Meacha, of Lakeview, as president, was organized. The route will be 140 miles long.

Bay City—Notice has been received by Sheriff Ezra Marvin that a quarantine of dogs has been declared in Bay county. The quarantine will be in full force June 18 to September 15, and results from discovery of rabies in Bay City by Dr. W. E. Coomer, veterinarian. Numerous cases of the malady have come to the attention of the health and police officials.

Lansing—Signing of property owners for a third main highway through Lansing are under way. The project is one of the largest traffic developments in years in the capital. It means a third route for Detroit-Grand Rapids traffic through the city. The plan includes widening and straightening of Kalamazoo street from the eastern city limits through the city to the western limits.

Detroit—Michigan's merchandise exports increased in a larger amount than those of any other state in the union during 1927. Only two states top the Michigan total export value of $326,879,584, those being New York with $769,766,896 and Texas with $647,026,141. Michigan's increase over 1926 was $64,285,266, according to figures made public by the Department of Commerce at Washington.

Lansing—Establishment of a fish hatchery on Wolf Lake, Van Buren County, has been authorized by the State Administrative Board. The plant was requested by Izaak Walton chapters of the vicinity and they will donate $5,000 toward the cost. The purchase of an 80-acre addition to the Higgins Lake Forest and 280 acres for the Fife Lake Forest was approved. The State will pay between $1 and $2 an acre.

Traverse City—One hundred men recently were fighting a fire which has raged over more than 3,000 acres of cut-over land in Antrim County, east of Mancelona, and which was characterized by Harold Titus, chairman of the forest fire committee of the State Conservation Commission, as the most serious fire in the Lower Peninsula for years. The district has had no rain of consequence this year and the hardwood slashings are unusually dry.

Ludington—Within sight of a dozen boys of his age, Vincent O'Connor, 13 years old, drowned in Lake Michigan recently. The boy had been swimming and attempted to swim to shore from the breakwater, 100 feet from the beach. Kaiman Schoenberger, 13 years old, heard his cries for help but believed he was shouting in fun and Bud Walker saw him sink but believed he was trying to swim under water. Coast guards worked over the body two hours without success.

Pentwater—Mrs. Ruby Oesterle, of Royal Oak, who has been spending a month as the guest of Probate Judge and Mrs. B. S. Shaw, of Pentwater, is dead as the result of self-inflicted burns. Mrs. Oesterle, in a fit of dementia, rushed out into a clump of bushes back of the Shaw residence, soaked her clothing with kerosene, and set fire to herself. The Shaws found her there and helped to extinguish the blaze. She was rushed to the hospital at Hart where she died.

Manistee—Manistee residents were startled when a 300-pound black bear wandered through the residential section of the city, tore down a couple of fences and appeared in the path of workmen on their way to factories. Chased by state and city police the bear swam Manistee harbor to East Lake, a distance of one-half mile, and disappeared into the wild country in back of the village. The animal is thought to have wandered into the city during a heavy fog one night recently.

Flint—John Goodall, 19 years old, star half-back on the Flint Central High School football team last year, was killed instantly here while diving in the municipal swimming pool at Thread Lake Park. Goodall dived from the shallow side of the pool, evidently endeavoring to land in deep water on the opposite side, but he struck a rope stretched across the pool, used as a safety line between the deep and shallow parts. The rope threw him onto the concrete floor of the pool, breaking his neck.

Grand Rapids—Arthur J. Bruett, Jr., 11 years old, hit by a batted ball directly over his left ear, while watching a game on a city playground, suffered a fracture of the skull. He will recover.

Hillsdale—The annual reunion of the 4th Michigan Infantry which served in the Civil War, was held at Hillsdale recently, with three Veterans present out of the 12 still living. This was the last reunion of the regiment.

Manistee—Chris Peterson, 76 years old, only surviving member of Manistee lodge 250 of Elks, looked forward for weeks to the state convention of Michigan Elks in Manistee. But he died on the eve of the convention, even as delegates were gathering.

Bath—The Couzens Agricultural School will be the name of the new consolidated school here if Senator James Couzens will give his permission. The school district has voted the name. Senator Couzens provided funds for the construction of the new building.

Saranac—Returning from a school picnic, Kenneth Eastlick, 12 years old, alighted from an automobile and ran headlong into the side of a car driven by Sheldon Meyers, of Saranac. He was killed instantly, when he was hurled to the pavement and his skull fractured.

Mt. Clemens—All traffic in front of the police station and sheriff's office here was halted one morning when a two ton load of hay slid off the wagon on which it was being hauled through the street. Deputies and patrolmen with pitchforks helped reload the farmer's wagon.

Mt. Clemens—Arthur Greener, 5 years old, of Halfway, died in a local hospital here after a tonsil operation despite the transfusion of a quart of blood from his sister, Margaret, 10 years old. Their mother is dead and the father, Arthur Greener, is serving a 40 year term at Marquette.

Lansing—Michigan has $16,904,453.96 highway contracts outstanding as of June 1, according to the State Highway Department. This is an increase of $7,246,028.08 over last year. Lansing—Kate Kitter's husband, George, hid his money in bee hives to keep it from his wife, she charged in a divorce suit before Judge Charles B. Collingwood here. She estimated the amount to be about $3,500. Mr. and Mrs. Kitter formerly lived on a farm in Alpena county. She was granted an injunction restraining her husband from removing any of the farm property.

Big Rapids—Fire destroyed the two-story frame building occupied by the Ferris Institute music hall and gymnasium. All the fire fighting equipment of the city was called out to protect the main building of the institute, about 30 feet to the east of the music hall. Many pianos and much other musical equipment was lost, and all the athletic equipment in the gymnasium below was destroyed.

Holland—Michigan's largest poultry show, sponsored by the Greater Ottawa County Poultry and Pet Stock Association, will be held at the Holland fair grounds during the first or second week of October, it was decided here at the first meeting of the board of directors. The show will be held primarily to advertise Ottawa County as a poultry center, but any poultryman in Michigan will be eligible to enter birds in the exposition.

Harmon attempted to save the boy and lost his own life. Harmon leaves a wife and four daughters. Tucker leaves his parents.

While the twin cities of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph sent a second bid, pointing out the advantages of the Lake Michigan cities for a middle-western campaign.

Lansing—Harry Phillips, 45 years old, and his wife, 60 years old, were killed instantly near Webberville when the small automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Pere Marquette passenger train. The first information of the crash came when the train pulled into Webberville and parts of the automobile were found on the pilot of the engine. Search of the right of way revealed the bodies and the rest of the wrecked machine. The couple moved to a farm near Webberville a few weeks ago from New Hudson.

Lansing—Dedication of the Fred W. Green airport which had been set for June 23-24 has been postponed until July 14 to coincide with the visit here of Captain George H. Wilkins, Arctic explorer. Municipal officials are co-operating with members of the airport committee of the Lansing chamber of commerce in the arrangement of the program for the July 14 date. It is expected that the air meet of some nature will be held in connection with dedication exercises now being prepared.

Grand Rapids—E. B. West, state inspector, announced here that recent rains caused greater damage to newly planted potatoes than at first estimated. Growers have reported losses of 5 to 50 per cent in seed sown during the last few weeks.

Detroit—The cities of Pontiac, Bay City and Flint have been notified by the Postoffice Department at Washington, that they are to be excluded from the air mail route which is to cover the state, beginning about the middle of July, because of a lack of suitable landing fields.

Detroit—Automobile accidents during the four weeks ending June 16, were responsible for 498 deaths in 77 large cities of the United States. Detroit stands third to New York and Chicago in these fatalities. New York had 79 deaths due to accidents, Chicago had 51, Detroit 28.

Mt. Clemens—Because his foot was crushed while he was razing a barn on the John Irwin estate near here, Homer Reynolds, of Mt. Clemens, was awarded $2,500 damages against the Security Trust company, of Detroit, administrator of the estate, by a jury in circuit court here.

Pontiac—Donald West, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank West, died at the County Contagious Disease Hospital from lockjaw, resulting from stepping on a rusty nail. The boy hurt his foot but little attention was paid to it, until his condition grew serious. His parents and eight brothers and sisters survive.

Jonesville—Jonesville recently celebrated its hundredth anniversary, with scores of former residents participating in the observance. One of the features of the celebration was the unveiling of a memorial tablet in honor of Benajah Jones, the founder. A parade featured Indians, prairie schooners and every type of old and new vehicle.

Lansing—A third automobile ferry has been placed in service on the Straits of Mackinaw, it was announced here by Frank F. Rogers, State highway commissioner. Ferries now leave St. Ignace at 6 a. m. and hourly thereafter until 9 p. m., while service from Mackinaw City to St. Ignace commences at 6:30 a. m. and continues at hourly intervals until 9:30 p. m.

Muskegon—Benny Oosterbaan, University of Michigan nine letter sport star, has received an offer from C. C. Pyle, promoter, to play with the New York Yankees professional football team next fall. Oosterbaan said he has no intention of playing professional football. He is spending the summer at Burt Lake, where he is a member of the staff at a boys' camp.

Jackson—The 2-year-old son of Mrs. Frank Emerson suffered a fractured skull when it was knocked from its mother's arms by a truck in the business district. Mrs. Emerson apparently became confused after alighting from a street car and stepped into the path of the truck, according to witnesses. The mother was thrown to the pavement but was not injured seriously.

Grand Rapids—After reductions of $773,200 from real estate assessments reported by 19 of the 24 townships in Kent county, the board of supervisors has adopted its equalization report. Townships exempt from reductions were those which adjoin the city of Grand Rapids. Midland—The Tittabawassee River, which reached flood stage again here recently, has receded. The river was 14 feet above normal and roads were blocked for two days while hundreds of acres were flooded. More than 20 homes were surrounded by water and several families fearing flood damage, had moved to higher land until the river subsided. The crop damage will be high, according to reports.

Mt. Clemens—An increase of 50 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation in the Mt. Clemens tax rate was announced here following a meeting of the city commission in which the city's budget was fixed at $183,277. The new water system which the city is installing with intake from Lake St. Clair cost $640,000.

The Inspiration of the Audience

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I WAS to make a speech somewhere in Indiana not long ago, and a week or two before the event I had a note from the man in charge of the dinner or meeting of the association or whatever it was which required that some one say something, asking for a synopsis or a resume of what I proposed saying. I had to reply that I seldom write out my speeches. I am very informal and what I say and the way I say it depends to a large extent upon the response I get from individual members of the audience.

If I see my hearers growing restless or dropping off comfortably to sleep I change my tactics. I say something I had perhaps not intended at all to say, and I am very likely to cut my speech short. There is nothing I so much dislike as to tire or to bore people. I shall never make a good broadcaster over the radio. To do my best I must see the effect of what I am doing upon those who are listening. I spoke once years ago at an audience sitting almost in total darkness. It was a curious experience. I knew only vaguely whether they were awake or asleep. Sometimes a little ripple of appreciation went over the group, but for the most part I might as well have been talking to a blank wall. What I needed to make me do my best, as I believe almost every speaker needs, was the inspiration of a wide awake audience.

There is nothing which takes the life out of a speaker more than to see scattered about the audience room a few of those present sound asleep. True, it is hard to keep some people awake no matter what one is saying or how he is saying it. I have in mind now a middle-aged acquaintance of mine whom I do not now recall ever being seen awake during an address to which he was being exposed. Some day I hope to have a chance to try him out, for I believe the test of a speech is the percentage of listeners who can be kept at alert and interested attention and the originality of the speaker and the spontaneity of his speech is largely influenced by the inspiration which comes from sympathetic and responsive attention.

No one whom I have ever heard, I think, felt the influence of this inspirational response from his audience more than Mr. Dwight L. Moody, the great evangelist. I heard him say once that he could scarcely go on with an address when he could see some inattentive person among his auditors. His main interest and effort in such a case was not the message which he was trying to deliver but the gaining of the attention of the uninterested auditor. He did this even if he had to use spectacular means. Otherwise, he said, his speech was a failure.

Striking Beach Suit

Myrna Loy, playing the leading role in "State Street Saddle," carries her taste for oriental things even to the beach. When she is through with her swim she puts on a coolie coat of white chaille with trousers to match, both decorated with hand painted Chinese designs in a deep blue. To complete the outfit she wears Chinese sandals. When she removes the tight rubber bathing cap, Miss Loy wears this brilliantly colored handkerchief that blends with the colors in the coat and trousers.

Iron and Steel

Steel is not a separate element, but is made from iron with carbon and other ingredients added. The thing making steel good or bad is largely in the way it is treated as it cools and crystallizes. Steel is a great improvement over iron and enables us to do many things we could not have done with iron.

FORCED SALES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I THINK of all the salesmen who come upon one unexpectedly and try to persuade one to buy, the book agent through all time has been the most unpopular. I suppose the reason is that few people have any innate longing for books and especially for such books as the salesman going from door to door is trying to dispose of. If he is to be successful he must first create an interest and a desire and then attempt to satisfy it. This requires tact, a knowledge of human nature and how it is influenced, and, of course, persistence, and this last quality is ordinarily all that the wandering salesman of books has developed. If he succeeds in making a sale it is usually a forced sale.

Webster was telling me not long ago something of his experience while in college. He went out during his summer vacation to sell books. He had never had any experience before and he knew nothing of salesmanship excepting to hang on when he got hold of a prospective customer. The territory to which he was assigned was a pretty barren rural community in which the drought of summer bade fair to wipe out the corn crop.

The book he was trying to sell had no particular merit. The people to whom he was attempting to sell it did not want it, if they were persuaded to buy it in order to get rid of Webster it would most probably lie with the family Bible on the center table in the sitting room unread and useless. Anyway they could not afford to buy it, and Webster knew this as he looked about him better possibly than anyone else. When he succeeded in making a forced sale he felt as if he had robbed an orphan asylum or sandbagged a blind man. Webster got away with the job, however. He hung on and haggled and argued the question until in sheer desperation his victims signed on the dotted line. He was broadcast as a salesman de luxe and his picture was displayed in the advertising of the company for whom he was working, and yet it was really poor salesmanship which he exhibited. A conservative Englishman, the head of a large retail establishment, is said to have announced that he would dismiss any of his salesmen who sold a customer anything which he did not want. There were to be no forced sales in his establishment. No customer who came into his store need fear being teadpiped and sold a gold brick before he got out.

I have been called on once a year for more than a score of years by the most perfect salesman I have ever known. I heard a few weeks ago that he was dead and I am truly sorry. He never urged me to buy; he never even brought up the subject of my buying. He made an appointment with me in advance for a definite time, and as reliable as clockwork he appeared then. He simply spread his wares before me, pointing out the particular merits of this or that, and he did it all quickly, courteously, and with a subtle appeal which I was never able to resist, but it wasn't a forced sale. When he went away I felt that he had done me a service.

The Rosetta Stone

To the Rosetta stone, found in Rosetta, Egypt, by officers of the French army under Napoleon we owe much of our knowledge of Egyptian history. Here the same story was told in three kinds of writing, one of which was the unknown Egyptian, and through their knowledge of one of these men learned to read the others.

Preaching and Practice

"Oh, the sin of lying, of exaggeration!" cried the speaker as he warmed up. "Would that I could tell you the number of times I have shed barrels and barrels of tears over it."

Members of the Mountain Sunday School in Eveline are wrothy and with due cause. Through courtesy of Wm. Taylor of Chicago, who has a summer home at Sequenota, two fine flower boxes were recently installed at the entrance of the school building. Sometime early last Sunday morning some miscreant robbed the two boxes of their choicest plants. Our citizens, as a whole, are law-abiding, but what can our summer visitors think of such despoliation.

Lansing—Beaver skins valued at $2,320 have been seized by the Conservation Department from 14 Upper Peninsula dealers in the state-wide drive against illegal taking and selling of fur-bearing animals, George R. Hogarth, director of conservation, announced here. Lansing—Mildred Huelmsman, 7-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo H. Huelmsman, living south of the city, is recovering from burns received when she fell across the third rail on the interurban tracks south of the city. She was burned on the chest, face, legs and hands.

Kalamazoo—Shot accidentally in target practice at Gobles, Edward Krueger, 17-year-old Chicago boy, is in a hospital here. Believing he had fired the last cartridge in the magazine, Krueger dropped the butt end of his rifle to the ground. He had miscounted the number of cartridges, however. The shock caused by the butt striking the hard ground touched off the gun, and the bullet crashed through the flesh of the young man's neck and lodged against the base of his skull.

Battle Creek—The Battle Creek Airport, representing an investment of nearly $60,000, has been purchased for the city by W. K. Kellogg, manufacturer, it was announced here. Ann Arbor—Construction of a $7,000 hangar, 50 by 60 by 14 feet, at the Municipal Airport has been decided upon by the directors of the Ann Arbor Flying Club, providing the club can get the city council to contribute $3,000 toward the expense. Directors of the club have agreed that a building of this size is necessary to meet immediate requirements, inasmuch as Ann Arbor is scheduled to become a link in the new three route Michigan air mail line to be inaugurated next month.

Alfalfa Cultivation

I had, however, lost my way and for some brief time I floundered about. At last I found the sun-dial, by striking against it, and thus orienting myself, turned about and struck back toward the Lodge.

I had not gone ten feet before I heard the bell ringing.

(Note: A large bell on the kitchen porch of the main house and used in times before the telephone was installed, to summon the gardener. It is rung by pulling a rope attached to it.)

It rang sharply twice and then abruptly stopped, and the sudden silence seemed somehow ominous. Like the stillness after a shriek.

There were no lights in the main house, and no further sounds came from it. I daresay at such times one does not think; one acts automatically. I do not recall thinking at all, but I do recall trying to feel my way through the trees, and that I ran into one and was partially stunned for an instant.

The house was still completely dark and silent. I felt my way with more caution, skirted the shrubbery, and at last found the railing leading up the steps to the kitchen. Here I was on safer ground, and I crossed the small porch to the door with increased confidence, only to stumble over something and almost fall. I knew at once what it was, and I felt suddenly ill, although my brain was as active as ever in my life. But I found some matches in my dressing-gown pocket, and striking one bent over a figure lying prone at my feet. It was young Gordon, unconscious and bleeding from a blow on the head, and securely tied with a rope. I was still stooping over him, fumbling for another match, when a flashlight shone in my face, furiously blinding me. It played on me for a moment, and then on the boy stretched on the floor and now slightly moving.

"What's happened?" said a voice from behind it, and with relief I recognized it as the doctor's. "He's hurt," I said, rising dizzily. "Struck on the head, I think." "Open the door there and turn on the lights. I'll carry him in."

I did as he told me, being still somewhat unsteady, and as he laid the boy on the floor and straightened I was aware that his eyes, as they rested on me, were hostile and suspicious.

Immediately, however, he went to work on the boy, examining him first and then removing the rope.

"He's only stunned," he said, and examined the wound in the scalp carefully. After that he dressed it, the boy by that time moving about and groaning, but still only partially conscious. When the dressing was done the doctor disappeared and returned with a cushion. Keeping the boy supine, he slipped it under his head. Then he straightened.

"You'd better notify the old man," he said. "I'll stay here, if you don't mind."

And from the look he gave me, I gathered that he had no intention of leaving me with the boy.

I made my way upstairs to the room over the den, and knocked for some time before I was heard. Then Mr. Bethel called out, startled, and I asked if I could come in. I heard him making heavy work of getting out of bed, and finally he shot the bolt and opening the door an inch or two glared out at me.

"What the devil's the matter?" "Nothing serious," I said. "There's been a little trouble downstairs, and we thought you'd better be told."

"A fire!" "Not a fire," I reassured him, and gave him a brief account of what had occurred.

He was not particularly gracious; demanded to know what the boy was doing outside at that hour, and seemed to feel that, with a doctor already in the house, his responsibility was ended. As there was actually nothing he could do, I helped him back to his bed and left him sitting on the side, an unpleasant but helpless figure.

The boy was conscious when I went back to the kitchen, staring around him, and particularly concentrated on the doctor and myself. He put his hand to his head and felt the bandage.

"Where'd I get that?" he asked thickly.

Traced to Real Skeleton

The precise origin of the phrase, "skeleton in the closet," is not known. It is supposed to have originated with a college professor who secretly conducted investigations in anatomy, and for this purpose keeping a skeleton concealed, since public opinion at that time was opposed to any desecration of a dead body.

After a time he tried to get up, and the doctor put him into a chair. "Now, Gordon," he said, "what happened to you? Try and think."

"He hit me," he said finally. "The dirty devil!"

"Who hit you?" "But he was still too dazed for coherent thought. He improved rapidly after that, however, although he complained of severe headache. He became garrulous, too, as happens after concussion, but out of his wanderings we were able to secure a fairly connected story.

He had been unable to sleep, because of certain noises in his room.

He had got up, and gone down to the kitchen for something to eat. After that, reluctant to go up to his room again, he had wandered out onto the kitchen steps and sat there. It was then that he heard some one stealthily approaching the house.

He listened, and finally he heard a widow of the old gun room next to the laundry being raised. He started that way, and insists he saw a dark figure there. The next moment it was gone, and he was certain there was some one in the house.

He had, apparently, turned to enter the house and head off the intruder but was struck down in the doorway. On the matter of ringing the bell he was rather vague at first, not remembering that he had done so, but later saying he had had his hand on the rope, when the blow came.

Hayward listened to this intently. Then he turned to me.

"And you were where, Porter?" "By the sun-dial. On the other side of it. I had started toward home."

"Do you mean to say that, after that bell rang, this man Gordon speaks of had time to go to the sun-dial, before you got here?"

"I've told you the facts. It isn't a simple matter to get here from the sun-dial, in the dark."
