Guernsey Show Big Success

29 GUERNSEYS EXHIBITED AT EAST JORDAN LAST FRIDAY

The first Annual Guernsey Summer Show and Picnic held at East Jordan last Friday was a decided success and exceeded the fondest expectations of its sponsors. Twenty-nine head of the most representative Guernseys owned by some twenty-five dairymen of Charlevoix County were exhibited and made the most complete Guernsey Show ever displayed in the County and one that reflects the progress and development of this breed of dairy cattle in the last three years.

The Charlevoix County Guernsey Breeder's Association should be congratulated on their efforts in this their first project, and who, in their business session recommended bull associations, calf club projects and belonging to cow-testing associations as a means of improving the Guernseys locally. The success of the show was largely due to the East Jordan Business Men's Club who generously contributed funds with which to furnish transportation for the animals, to purchase ribbons for the winners, and in furnishing coffee and its accessories to the Picnicers.

W. D. Buntington, State Guernsey Fieldman, gave a most inspiring and instructive talk on items of great interest to the Guernsey Breeders and judged the exhibit.

Mr. Lounsbury, Mgr. Editor of the Guernsey Breeder's Journal was also present and cited statistics indicating the progress that the State of Michigan has made in Guernseys.

Charlevoix Co. Pullet Show

TO BE HELD AT WHITING PARK, WEDNESDAY, JULY 25.

As a final meeting of the "Grow Better Chick Project" carried on in Charlevoix County this spring, a big pullet show will be held at Whiting Park on Wednesday, July 25th. The entire public is cordially invited and urged to attend as this will be the Red Letter Day for all people interested in poultry. A picnic dinner will be enjoyed at noon and the program will start at 10:00 o'clock.

The Grow Better Chick Campaign has been carried on with eight different organized groups in the County, giving them the latest information in the incubation, feeding, caring and management of baby chicks. The most important baby chick diseases were also discussed and the control measures given. In order to show the poultry farmers the benefits of this project in the development and growth of the baby chicks reared this spring and to show those interested in poultry what points are looked for in the high quality and typy birds, this show is dedicated.

There will be several classes of pullets in the show, classed according to breed and variety, as White Leghorns, Barrd Rocks, etc. A pen of six pullets will constitute an entry. Coops will be furnished at the Park. Ribbons and special prizes will be awarded to the winners. All poultry raisers are urged to select a pen of six pullets and enter them in this show. Please inform your Agent that you will enter a pen.

Following is the highly instructive and interesting program. The time in each instance is fast time.)

10:00—Arrival of pens
11:00—Judging of Show by Leon Todd, Poultry Specialist of M. S. C.
Noon—Picnic Dinner.

With this fine program, you cannot afford to miss this opportunity of entering a pen of six pullets, of hearing the splendid program, and of finding out how to judge properly the birds of different breeds. Don't forget the date—July 25th—and plan to spend the day at Whiting Park.

E. J. Flooring In New England

AMERICA'S LARGEST SCHOOL BUILDING CONTAINS EAST JORDAN PRODUCT.

For a number of years past over one half of the Public Schools in the New England States have been using the East Jordan Lumber Company's Imperial Maple Flooring in construction work.

And now East Jordan has the signal honor of having its product go into the construction of America's largest school building.

The Boston, Mass., Sunday Post of July 1st contains a two-page article relative to the recently-constructed Roxbury Memorial High School. The cost of buildings with nine acres of land runs considerable over three million dollars, and it has taken five years in planning and construction work.

The article contains the following paragraph:—
"School Superintendents, High School Principals, as well as School Principals and school agents from other sections of the United States will surely desire to inspect this building when coming to this city. It is the last word in every detail. The material markets were diligently searched for the best that money would buy to carry out the purposes of the design and give a long life of satisfactory service. The craftsmanship throughout will favorably compare with any downtown office structure."

While not generally known locally, the East Jordan Lumber Company's Imperial Maple Flooring has a national reputation for quality, and shipments from East Jordan are made to both Atlantic and Pacific coast States.

AL Balch, Gr. H. 1191 48.8

There are 24 cows producing over 50 lbs. of B. F., and 26 over 1250 lbs. of milk in the 30 day month.

Fifteen of the 26 members are feeding grain on pasture. Nine that weigh their milk and keep a daily milk sheet.

CECIL G. DOBBEN,
Charlevoix Co. Cow Tester.

SEPTIC TANKS INSTALLED

During the last week, three more septic tanks were erected by Specialists from Michigan State College at the farms of W. K. Straw, Charlevoix, Benj. Smatts, East Jordan, and David Smith, Boyne City, which brings the total demonstrations up to seven the last two years.

Of all the demonstrations conducted in the County, none are of more practical value than the septic tanks meetings where a tank is completely installed in one day and where the people present can watch all the operations from beginning to end.

It is hoped that several people will install tanks this year as they are necessary before many home conveniences can be installed and the cost is very small. The forms used at the demonstrations can be rented at a cost of $2.00, the bell jar and siphon if sent for by your County Agent, costs $6.00, and as a result of this savings, the entire cost of the tank and tile system will be very close to $50.00.

If interested in building one, please get in touch with your County Agent as he will gladly assist you in the installation and in securing the forms and siphon.

B. C. MELLENCAMP,
Co. Agr'l Agent.

Mr. and Mrs. Will McGregor and daughter, Miss Doris of Whiting Park motored to Tustin Sunday. Mrs. McGregor and Doris plan to stay a week, with her parents, but Mr. McGregor who is caretaker of the Park will return immediately.
Mr. and Mrs. Bob Willson and son, returned to Muskegon Sunday, after spending two weeks' visiting on the Peninsula. They were accompanied by Miss Ann Willson.
Haying is well under way and is an abundant crop.
Quite a delegation from the Peninsula attended the Guernsey Picnic and Show at East Jordan Friday last.

Ray Loomis of Gravel Hill got first prize on a two-year-old heifer and an 8 months-old calf, the only stock he took to the show. He is justly very proud.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Hayden of Orchard Hill returned from Lansing Monday evening where they attended a family reunion of Mrs. Hayden's father.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Loomis who were expected to come from Detroit did not come as Mr. Loomis was laid up by a fall which broke some ribs and injured his leg, and Mrs. Loomis is ill in bed with pleurisy.

Decatur—Joe Kezerle, 13 years old, struck by an automobile while carrying lunch to his father, is dead at his home. The boy was struck with such force he was hurled against a telephone pole, fracturing his skull.

Muskegon—Muskegon county's first water fatality of the year occurred at Spring Lake when Steve Padgett, 15 years old, of Fruitport Township, lost his life while swimming. The Grand Haven coast guard recovered the body.

Grand Rapids—Taken ill after having swallowed kerosene she found in a bottle while playing on the floor of the kitchen in her home, Ruth Bailey, 15-month-old daughter of Robert Bailey, of Paris Township, died at a Grand Rapids hospital.

Adrian—Waldo J. Skupny, of Detroit, was accidentally shot and killed here when a pistol which he and a companion, Anthony Okry, also of Detroit, were examining, was discharged. The man came to Adrian from Detroit with a fishing party.

Hartford—Harry R. Hewitt, former Hartford boy, has been appointed attorney-general of Hawaii by President Coolidge. He enlisted here in 1917, after his graduation from the law department of the University of Michigan. He is a graduate of the Hartford High school.

Muskegon—The local baz. on Sunday dancing has been removed by city authorities. Dance hall operators in Muskegon were able to keep their places of entertainment open for the first time in the history of the city. However, they will be violating provisions of the state laws.

Muskegon—The largest gasser in the Muskegon oil field blew in unexpectedly when drillers were engaged in bailing out the well. It was believed by experts that the well would show a gas production of more than 10,000,000 feet. Steps were immediately taken to control the flow. The well is the property of the Reed Oil Company and is known as this company's No. 1 Heinz.

SPECIAL-DELIVERY SPECIAL-HANDLING SERVICE COMBINED

First Ass't Postmaster General, Washington, July 8, 1928.

In order to make certain that the mailing public understands the meaning of the new service created by the act of May 29, 1928, with reference to the handling of parcel post, postmasters are asked to get into the hands of their patrons as far as practicable the following notice:

A New Special Service for Parcel Post
Under a new law enacted by the last Congress and made effective on July 1, 1928, a new service was created with reference particularly to the expeditious handling and delivery of parcel post.

While this new service is called "SPECIAL DELIVERY," it has the effect of making all classes of mail except the first, namely, the second-class mail, the third-class mail, and the fourth-class mail, all have the same expeditious treatment as first class mail IN TRANSIT, PLUS SPECIAL DELIVERY at the office of the addressee by marking the same "Special Delivery" and placing on such mail the following postage in addition to the regular postage, namely, 15c on matter weighing not more than two pounds; 25c on matter weighing more than two pounds but not more than ten pounds; 35c on matter weighing more than ten lbs.

It is necessary to put on the additional postage as above stated and mark it "special delivery." It is a combination of the former "special-handling" service and the "special-delivery" service. It will be seen that the combined service now is cheaper than the sum of the cost of the two former services.

"Mailable desiring 'special-handling' service in transit without 'special-delivery' at the office of the addressee may, if they desire, secure this service at the following rates, namely, 10c on parcels weighing not more than 2 pounds; 15c on parcels weighing more than 2 pounds but not more than 10 pounds; 20c on parcels weighing more than 10 pounds.

"There is no 'special delivery' now which does not carry with it also special handling in transit, so that if the mailer purchases special-delivery service now as above specified he thereby secures also special-handling service."

JOHN H. BARTLETT, First Ass't Postmaster General.

Increasing Feed Value of Turnips and Mangels

In the past few years plant breeders have aimed at reducing the labor of harvesting and increasing the feed value of roots. As a result mangels and improved feeding varieties of sugar beets grown from the higher quality of seed, grow largely above the ground so that the difficulty of harvesting, which applies to the poorer, rooty strains of sugar beet, has been eliminated. The modern types of mangel now grow almost entirely above the soil and can easily be harvested, even when the ground is frozen slightly. The feeding content has been greatly increased, the sugar mangels and improved varieties of feeding sugar beets being especially recommended in this connection. Of course, in this case, as with all crops, it is particularly important to use only the very best seed procurable.

Pasture Very Important for the Little Porkers

Pasture may be the determining factor in whether or not farmers make a profit from their hogs this season. Pasture is especially important for young pigs. Experiments have shown that the average daily profit on young pigs grazing in forage is higher than on those confined in pens.

Pigs on pasture need only half as much of the muscle and bone building feeds such as tankage, skim milk, buttermilk and linseed as when they are in the dry lot. Pasture crops are also rich in lime and phosphorus, the two minerals which are most likely to be lacking in the pig's ration. They also furnish a green succulent feed. Pigs on pasture will get plenty of exercise and be under sanitary conditions.

Lansing—The police are searching old records for some clue of a disappearance a quarter of a century ago with which to link a human skull, sharply split as by an ax, found here.

The discovery was made by William Joy, 9 years old, of Lansing, in the rear of a house on Isaac street. The boy and his companions were digging when Joy uncovered a length of stove pipe. It was penetrated by rust and when kicked to one side, broke into bits and from an elbow of the pipe out rolled the skull.

Grand Rapids—What is planned to be the first trans-Atlantic aerial honeymoon was revealed in an announcement of Lieut. Joseph Passmore of Grand Rapids, that his bride, formerly Miss Marjorie Huek of Holland, Mich., will accompany him on a proposed flight to Paris this summer. They were married June 30.

"When I told her I was going to try to fly to Paris she said, 'I'm going, too. If you go down, we'll go down together.'" They plan to start from New York about September 1.

August 6.

Halliday's expert was not particularly helpful, I gather. We have this to our advantage, however. If advantage it be; the typing was done on a Remington machine.

As I had expected, he does not take Annie Cochran's story very seriously, but he bases his skepticism rather on the beginning of the terror before the boy came, than on the attack on the boy himself.

Aside from this blind alley, up which Annie Cochran started us, we are all more nearly normal than we have been since the early days of the summer. I rise, shave and bathe and go to my breakfast, no longer with the feeling that it may be figuratively speaking, my last.

We are not worried by the uncertainty of the prospect before us; the long period ahead of Edith and Halliday before they can marry; that next year, and the year after that, and God knows how many years to come. I shall be pouring the priceless treasures of the English language into ears that will not hear; that my vacation is more than half over, and that its net result so far is a loss to me of some odd pounds of weight.

August 7.

Edith has today received the large sum of ten dollars for the lighthouse story. While she is still far from the opulence she has anticipated, there has been great excitement here today on receipt of the check.

I find that Halliday has been quietly working along the lines opened up by Annie Cochran. He is convinced that Gordon has been going out at nights, clandestinely, and using the car to do so.

"I don't blame him for that," he said today. "The car's there, and not being used. And—I'm not keen about Gordon—but from such views as I have had of Mr. Bethel, a little of him would go a long way. Gordon's disconnected the speedometer, by the way. But there's something else."

He thinks it was Gordon who set fire to the boathouse. He found a bit of waste outside the garage, hanging on a limb of blue-spruce there, and a similar scrap on the raised walk over the marsh to the boathouse.

"But why?" I asked. "There has to be a reason."

"I can go a long way for one," he said thoughtfully, "and imagine he knows I've been working on the case and wants to get rid of me. But I grant that's not good. Burning me out wouldn't do that, unless he hoped I was inside! But that is to imply that he is guilty of the crimes, and I don't believe it."

But he added, as an afterthought: "There's one curious thing, though. That is, it may be curious; I'm not sure. The machine he's using is a Remington."

August 8.

This has been a nerve-racking day. For one am willing to cry quits to compromise with crime, and to say in effect, that if the murderer leaves us alone we will not disturb him.

My condition probably arises from sheer confusion. For the life of me I cannot see where the results of Halliday's search can lead us, nor I think does he.

Edith this morning, at Halliday's request, telephoned to Gordon and asked him to lunch with us. He accepted, after a brief hesitation, and promptly at one o'clock came down the drive, clad in white flannels and with an additional dose of pomade on his hair.

Whether he was suspicious or not we cannot tell. I know that, watching him from a window, part way down the drive he came to a dead stop and then turned, as if he had some idea of going back on some pretext or other. But he evidently thought better of it, looked at his watch, and came on again.

He made a poor impression on us, furtively watching Jane's choice of fork or spoon and otherwise bestowing most of his attention on Edith. With attention, that is, as he bestowed on anybody at the beginning. And he was restless. From where he sat he had his back to the windows, but more than once he managed

Harvesting Flax

The usual method of harvesting flax in European countries is by hand pulling, and this method has also been used in certain sections of the United States where laborers could be hired at reasonable rates. Marked improvements in the efficiency of flax-pulling machines have been made in recent years, and the expensive back-breaking work of hand pulling is being superseded by machine pulling.

to turn and look out. I had the feeling that the small room enclosed him too much; that he felt somehow trapped. And more than once I found his eyes on me, and felt that he suspected me of some purpose he was attempting to discover.

His nervousness finally infected me, and even Jane began to show signs of distress. The small lunch party, for some reason she could not understand, was going badly. Only Edith played up well; she pushed back her plate at last, and with her elbows on the table and her chin in her hands said:

"And now, tell us about the night you were hurt."

"I'll do that," he said, with his twisted smile, "if Mr. Porter will tell me how he and the doctor both happened to be such Johnnies on the spot."

But he carried that no further, and although the covert insolence of the speech brought the color to Edith's face, she continued to smile.

"There isn't much to tell," he went on. "The fellow got into the house all right; I turned to go in by the door and head him off, and that's all I remember."

"But you rang the bell first, didn't you?"

Whether because he hated to acknowledge that call for help, or for some reason none of us can determine tonight, he hesitated.

"Yes," he said finally. "I was pretty well excited, but I suppose I did."

Almost immediately he asked me if I had tried hearing the bell as far away as the highroad, "with a motor engine going."

"I don't believe it could be done," he said, with his sideways glance at me. "He's got good ears, the doctor."

He said something before he left about looking for another job, as this one was too confining, and the old man not easy to live with. "I only took it for the summer," he said, "and I'm about fed up with it. It's too confining. And he'd let that car of his rot before he'd let me take it out."

With which clumsy attempt to allude himself regarding the car, he took his departure. Edith believes that in some manner he knows that the car has been examined, and she may be right.

Halliday's investigation of his room during his absence proceeded with out difficulty. With my keys and Annie Cochran's connivance he made an easy entry. Mr. Bethel having retired for his after-luncheon siesta.

At first glance the room offered nothing, and leaving Annie Cochran on guard outside under pretense of cleaning the passage, Halliday made a more intensive search. The bed disclosed nothing, nor did the closet; his suitcase was locked, and over it Halliday spent more time than was entirely safe.

"Toward the end," he says, "I was pretty shaky. I kept thinking I heard him, and of course the more I hurried the more I bungled the thing."

He got it open at last without breaking the lock, and found in it the note-book.

(Note: I find I have given no description of the note-book in the original Journal. As it played a considerable part in the approaching tragedy, it deserves some attention.)

It was a small compact volume of the loose-leaf type, a sort of diary, but not regularly kept. Most of the entries, due to the complication of the cipher, were very brief. One or two, however, occupied almost a page and all of them had been typed.

Needless to say, the cipher was the one we had found on the scrap of paper picked up in my garage.)

The discovery of the note-book with its cipher sent his excitement to fever pitch. He ran through it for the code word, but was unable to find it. Then, replacing the book and leaving the suitcase as he had found it, he set to work more carefully on the room itself.

The coil of rope and the knife were behind a row of books on the book-shelf, a packet of typing paper and a box of carbon sheets thrown over them with apparent casualness; to conceal them still further.

So closely had he calculated the time that he had barely restored them to their places when Gordon slammed the entrance door downstairs.

Halliday had not time to make the back staircase, however. Annie Cochran opened the linen-closet door, and he bolted in there. He heard Gordon unlock his room and enter it, and almost immediately repeated and demand of Annie Cochran if she had been in it during his absence. An angry dispute followed, within a foot or two of the linen-closet, not the less acrimonious because of its lowered voices, and of an almost hysterical quality in Gordon's.

Every particle of his veneer had dropped from him, and the threats he made if he should find she had been in his room are not even to be recorded here.

And now, once again, where are we? We have, as against Gordon:

(a) The knife and the coil of rope.

(b) Our belief that he uses the car clandestinely, at night.

(c) At least an indication that he set the fire under the boathouse.

(d) The cipher, found in my garage.

(e) The note-book, in the same cipher. A man does not record his thoughts in this manner, unless he wishes to keep them hidden.

(f) The linen strips muffling the oar-locks, and suggested to Halliday today by his place of concealment. The inventory of the main house shows a certain number of linen sheets. If one is missing it will prove a strong factor in connecting him with the boat.

(g) The locking of his bedroom.

(h) Last and not least, an unpleasant personality. Halliday uses the word "degenerate," but I am not prepared to go so far.

As against all this, however, we have:

(a) The attack on him at the kitchen door, and the manner in which he was tied, corresponding to the rope about Carroway.

(b) The sheep-killing and murder of Carroway, taking place as they did before his arrival.

(c) The fact that Halliday cannot identify him as the man he picked up in his car.

(d) The distinguishing mark by which the criminal has signed his crimes, so to speak, is the circle and triangle, drawn in chalk; while this is not vital, Halliday found no chalk in the room.

I have put to Halliday the boy's veiled inquiry about the doctor. It is impossible for us to experiment with the bell, but he thinks it could be distinctly heard from the main road.

On the other hand, the arrival of Hayward on the scene almost as soon as I had got there is extremely puzzling. We have tonight paced off the distance, in view of my statement that I had lighted only one match when the doctor's flashlight was turned on me.

There seems to be no doubt that Hayward was on the property last night. But I do not accept the possibility, suggested by Halliday, that as he was in Greenough's confidence he had been watching me. A man does not, I imagine, go out on such an errand with his medical bag in his hand, and the doctor had carried his bag. I recall distinctly his taking from it the dressings for Gordon's head.

August 9.

Nothing new today. Halliday watched the main house last night, but no one left it. Annie Cochran reports that Mr. Bethel is suspicious of Gordon, and that the feud between them still continues. He declines the secretary's assistance as much as possible.

That he is not certain, however, is shown by the care with which he now has the house locked up at night.

"He waits in the library," she says, "until I've locked all the doors and windows. Then I bring him the keys, except the one to the kitchen door. He lets me have that to get in with in the morning."

He is showing considerable courage to my mind.

Mrs. Livingstone told us a new story, illustrative of the general state of the local mind. She says that three nights ago Hadly, who keeps the hardware store in Oakville, when passing the cemetery where Carroway is buried, saw a figure walking slowly past the grave. It stopped, looked at the mound and then moved on, fading into nothing at the clump of evergreens beyond it.

Hadly seems to have made no further investigation.

August 10.

At midnight last night Halliday wakened me by throwing pebbles against the screen of my window. He was standing close underneath, and asked me to put on something and work my way quietly toward the other house.

"What's wrong?" I asked.

"He's getting ready to go out. I think. He put his light out at eleven and turned it on again a few minutes ago."

Halliday moved away, and as quickly as possible I dressed and followed him. He was under the trees, waiting when I joined him, and together we worked quietly across the garden and toward the garage, coming out beyond it, toward the lane. Here, while concealed ourselves, we had a full view of the house, but the light was out again and for a time it looked as though nothing more were to happen.

We stood together, well hidden in the shrubbery, for some time. Halliday, who has not had much sleep for a night or two, fell to yawning, and I was not much better off when I heard some sort of stealthy movement in the woodland to our left. I touched Halliday on the arm, to find him rigid and bending forward, staring toward the house.

"He's coming," he said. "Quiet! The boy was rising his window screen, with all possible caution. Even when it was accomplished he stood so long, probably listening and watching, that I began to think he had changed his mind and gone back to bed, but as events showed, he had done nothing of the sort.

Up to this moment I had not suspected the use of the rope, although I believe Halliday had. The darkness was extreme. But now I heard a faint scraping against the wall of the house and realized that Gordon was coming down by means of the rope.

His coming was as stealthy as the preliminaries had been. He was probably half-way down, coming hand over hand, before I had interpreted the sound.

I was not even aware that he had reached the ground, when I saw him, a blacker shadow among other shadows, near at hand. But he did not come directly toward the garage; he walked along under the walls of the west wing to the gun-room window and stood there. Then, with extreme caution, he raised it an inch or two, as if to reassure himself that it had been unlocked from within, and closed it again.

From there, with somewhat less caution, he moved to the corner of the house and seemed to be surveying the waterfront and the boathouse. We had our only real view of him then, as he stood silhouetted on the top of the rise. But suddenly something alarmed him. Neither Halliday nor I saw or heard anything, but evidently he did, and realized, too, his exposed position.

He dropped to the ground. So unexpected was his sudden disappearance, that I gasped; it was not until I heard him creeping along the ground that I understood his maneuver. He lost no time in his retreat, nor did he attempt to use the rope again. He raised the unlocked window, crept over the sill, and closed it again, all with surprising rapidity and silence, and sooner than we could have expected we heard him drawing up the rope from his room overhead.

No interpretation of this is possible without taking into consideration the really horrible stealth of the boy's manner. He was engaged on some nefarious business of his own, whether we can connect that with the crimes or not.

As to the extremely dramatic manner in which he chose to escape from the house, when he had already unlocked the gun-room window, Halliday is divided between two theories, of which he himself favors the second.

"He may be merely dramatizing himself; you'll find a certain type of degenerate mind, which is always acting for its own benefit. Or—and this is more likely—our old friend Bethel is suspicious and is watching him. The old man's door commands his. He locks his door from the inside, uses his rope, and is free to go where he pleases."

"But," he added, after a pause, "he unlocks the gun-room window, too, so he can beat a retreat if he has to. That's the best I can do, and if it isn't correct it ought to be!"

Today I am convinced beyond doubt that Gordon is our criminal and I think even Halliday is shaken. I am no detective, but it seems to me that the boy coming here during the height of the excitement about the sheep-killer and young Carroway, found the way already paved for a career of secret crime, and adopting the methods and the symbol of some still undiscovered religious maniac, has carried on, one may say, under his banner.

Certainly one fact at least supports the idea. Halliday may be right, and the attack on him not have been made by Gordon. But there seems no reason to doubt that, some time on the day before we got back, he crept in to my garage and put the infernal symbol where we found it.

We have discussed today at some length the desirability of notifying the police once more. But our recent experience with them is not reassuring. On the other hand, I feel strongly that Mr. Bethel should be warned. But Halliday argues against it.

"He knows something already," he says. "He is on guard, and the boy knows it. Then you have to remember that the game so far, has been to strike in the dark, and run. That is, if you are correct, Skipper, and it is a game, without motive."

Probably he is right. There would be little chance for him if he attacked the old man; he is too well known to be on bad terms with him. Such a warning, also, might alarm Mr. Bethel to the point of getting rid of him, and after all the only chance we have is to let him go a certain length, and then, with our proofs, call in the police.

But I am very uneasy tonight as I make this entry. I have not Halliday's easy optimism that he "won't get away with anything without our knowing it."

August 11.

I had a visit last night from "Cuckoo" Hadly, our village Don Juan, who sells hardware over his counter to pretty village-matrons, and who was dubbed "Cuckoo" some years ago by a summer visitor who saw a resemblance to Byron in him.

Hadly was slightly sheepish. He knows, and he knows I know, that his road home at night lies nowhere near the cemetery. At the same time, he had something to tell me, and was determined to go through with it.

It appears, then, that it was not near Carroway's grave that Hadly saw the figure, but in the old part of the cemetery, and that there are some facts which he has not given out. The cemetery is surrounded by a white fence, and inside it is shrubbery. Hadly, it seems, was not alone, but was standing in the road, talking to a friend. If, as I imagine, the friend was a woman, it was surely a safe place for a rendezvous!

It was the "friend" who saw the light, and who accounts for the suppression of this portion of the tale. It shone through the shrubbery, a small blue-white light about two feet from the ground, and directly in front of the headstone of one George Pierce, who died in the last seventeen hundreds.

Hadly did not see the light, but the "friend" persisting, he crept through the shrubbery to take a look around. It was then that he saw the figure, moving slowly and deliberately toward the trees.

He seems to have no doubt that he saw an apparition, or that the information belongs to me, the reason he gives for the latter being that George Pierce is the gentleman who was, according to local tradition, shot and killed while attempting to escape the excise in the old farmhouse which is now a part of Twin Hollows.

I have entered this here, because the day seems given over to the supernatural. We have breakfasted with the spirit world, and seem about to lunch with it.

Everything continues quiet at the other house.

Jane and I today returned the Livingstones' call. Although it seems absurd, I have never quite abandoned the hope of finding, in Uncle Horace's unfinished letter, a clew to the present mystery.

I therefore took it with me, hoping for an opportunity to show it to Mrs. Livingstone. But none came. Doctor

It Was Then That He Saw the Figure.

Hayward was there when we arrived and remained after we left. Perhaps, because my own world is awry, I think the universe is so.

But it seemed to me that we were shown in to what almost amounted to a situation; that Livingstone, usually dapper and calm, was flushed, and that Mrs. Livingstone was on the verge of tears. The doctor, standing by the window, hardly acknowledged our entrance, and remained standing, glowering and biting his fingers, until we left.

He is, I understand, soon to leave for a holiday.

Calcium Arsenate Is Efficient for Bugs

One of Best Poisons to Eradicate Potato Beetle.

Calcium arsenate, familiarly known as an efficient poison for the control of the cotton boll weevil, is also one of the best poisons for the common potato bug or Colorado potato beetle. "Calcium arsenate is the cheapest poison that potato growers can use at the present time for the control of the Colorado potato beetle," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State college. "Those who grow potatoes know that this insect can completely destroy the plants in a short while if no control measure is used. Calcium arsenate may be used either as a dust or as a spray and is absolutely effective if properly applied."

In using the material as a dust, Mr. Brannon advises that the potato plants be covered well. The amount to use will depend on the size of the plants and the material may be applied satisfactorily if the regular cotton dusters are used. There is little danger of burning the foliage, but too much poison should not be used for the sake of economy. Recent tests show that good control is secured by this method of poisoning. However, it should be kept in mind that the arsenate is not a control for plant diseases but for insects alone.

If desired, a spray may be made by using two pounds of the calcium arsenate to 50 gallons of water. For the grower with only a small acreage, a spray may be prepared by using ten tablespoonsfuls to three gallons of water.

In any event, the applications of either dust or spray should be started as soon as the beetles appear in numbers and should be continued just as often as the beetles become numerous.

Fireproof Barns to Cut Immense Farm Fire Loss

Savings of thousands of dollars in buildings and valuable cattle herds destroyed every year in the United States by disastrous fires may be accomplished in a few years by means of the fireproof barn, described in the Farm and Fireside Magazine.

"Ancestral barns that can be passed on from father to son and on to the next generation are likely as a result of successful construction of such a fireproof barn at the Iowa State college experiment station, says the magazine.

"If this type of barn proves as successful as it now appears to be it will be possible to do this thing at an expense not exceeding the cost of frame construction by more than 25 to 50 per cent," it continues. "The new type of barn is called a masonry arch barn, which, as the name reveals, is made entirely of masonry and with the upper story in the form of an arch. It is built of tile with reinforced concrete floors and reinforced concrete ribs in the roof. Since it is made entirely of masonry there will be no expense in keeping it painted with the exception of the windows and door frames. Made of construction material that is noncombustible this building would retard a fire to such an extent as to prevent destruction and it would also enable live stock in it to be removed safely."

Alfalfa Quite Popular

Roughage for Dairy Cow There are many roughages that might be used in furnishing dairy cattle with the necessary bulky food. Since roughage is usually the least expensive part of the ration, large amounts should be fed as is consistent with good results.

Roughages vary in numbers depending upon the geographic location of the particular dairyman. Each sector has its own roughages which it uses to good advantage.

Alfalfa hay has become one of the most popular roughages and is the best hay for dairy cattle because it is very nutritious, contains more mineral matter and protein than any other hay, is palatable and serves as a laxative. This particular hay is excellent when fed in the green state, but does not stand pasturing. As for silage, it is very good providing it is allowed to wilt before putting it into the silo. Alfalfa should not be made into silage if the weather condition permits making it into hay and other crops can be used for the silo.

Silage for Economical Milk Production Urged

Silage fed with legume hay and a good grain mixture makes a satisfactory and economical ration for the dairy herd. This succulent roughage helps to impart palatability to all feed consumed, keeps the bowels active, and serves as an appetizer when there is nothing but dry feeds available.

The Purdue experiment station found that a ration containing silage, alfalfa and hay and a good grain mixture produced milk for $1.03 for each 100 pounds, while the feeding of double the allowance of hay without silage and the same grain mixture raised the feed cost to $1.14 per 100 pounds. During the periods when silage was fed, the animals gained approximately one-half pound daily in live weight. When hay formed the sole roughage, the loss in live weight was double this amount. This represents a difference of approximately 1.5 pounds per day in body weight in favor of the silage ration.

FINDING THE WAY

The water flowing from the nozzle collects in a little basin beneath it, then overflows, in this direction or that, wherever it can find a channel.

Watch it for a few minutes. It is difficult to believe that it is not actuated by its own intelligence, instead of by that great intelligence which rules this universe.

The heads of the tiny streams creep this way or that, pause and turn and twist, till sooner or later they find a way out—a path that leads from the little pool down through the grass—always down and down.

If the hose is left flowing long enough, all the little basins in the grass will have filled and overflowed, and when the ground becomes saturated the water will flow out of the yard and into the street, to find its way sooner or later into the brook or gutter that has already discovered the direction of the sea.

Over the whole face of the world, water is hunting a lower level, trying to get back to the ocean, so that after a while clouds can form and rain may fall, to refresh and cleanse the land again.

It is interesting and useful to watch these little streams that radiate fanwise from the pool under the hose—and to discover the channel which all of them are seeking.

Thus men and women work patiently to find their way, guided by an intelligence which is in themselves, and not merely in the universal law of gravitation.

The patient and the resourceful get out and away from the places where they start, but not till after repeated testing of every possible exit, and careful exploration of the surrounding country.

Thus did population flow out of the spot on earth where humanity first sprang into existence or evolved into existence, hunting out every possible abiding place, till now nearly the whole world is filled.

Thus by careful experiment must we each of us learn which is the best way for us to take.

It is easier to do this today, for we have the benefit of billions of experiments by our fellows.

Yet, if our minds are inert, we can move without thought or plan, and get nowhere, for there is no inevitable force to push us along our way, as in the case of the water, which is supplied with a substitute for the intelligence it lacks.

Most lives are turnings and twistings and gropings. But those which, directed by thought and energy, attain at least some of their objectives, are far more happy and useful than are those which only seek, like water, to move on and on.

Using Your Head

Three trolley cars in a neighboring city were stuck in a heavy tar and oil solution used in laying new tracks. Six men, conductors and motormen, tried to devise ways and means of moving the cars. Along came a laborer who put his shovel under one of the wheels. That gave it traction, and the cars were moved.

Education is what enables some people to get along without intelligence. And intelligence is what enables some people to get along without education. —Grove Patterson, in the Mobile Register.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE CROSS-ROAD

AS YOU journey along on the byways and highways of life, you will come frequently upon the unmarked cross-road where you must decide on your future course.

At the cross-road, where the scenes of youth change, you must bring into play every faculty of reason, ere you turn in the wrong direction and tread the path that takes to failure.

A mile or two on the wrong route may change your whole life, for it is on such a highway that you encounter and associate with mischievous fellows—travelers who are apt to lead you farther and farther astray.

You forget the pleadings of conscience and the promises you made in your earlier days to head always in the right direction.

It is at the cross-road that men and women make the first upward step to fame, or take the initial stride downward toward dishonor and shame.

So, young man or young woman, when you come to the cross-road the fateful turning point in your career, pause a while and let your memory take you back to your mother at the old homestead gate, as she stood there and watched you turn to a new world.

Try to interpret the loves in her moist eyes.

Think of her misgivings and fears, and the deep sorrow in her heart as the cherished home ties were rudely broken forever.

If you will do these things the likelihood is that you will choose the right course when you come to the cross-road, and keep your feet ever on the way that leads to highest achievement and an honored name.

But at this stage of life you are confronted with new difficulties. There are obstacles of self-importance, fancied wisdom gathered first-hand from your brief experience with the world, dominated by foolish pride.

You are so sure of your ground that you consider it would be trivial at this juncture to think of a mother's love, when in reality it is the grandest act you can do, sure in itself of clearing your vision and equipping you for any field of worthy endeavor.

Diary Makes Garden Growing Much Easier

A diary is of inestimable value in caring for a garden. Entries should be made every day not only of the work done, but its results as well as weather conditions. Experience is the most valuable teacher, but its lessons often are wasted on poor memories. A diary makes information on all discoveries and observations readily and permanently available for reference.

In planting the wise householder uses a stake and line to make rows straight and strives to give the garden an attractive appearance as well as making it productive. By the skillful use of vines, flowers and a little landscaping with pergolas and arches. It is possible to add immeasurably to the appearance of the garden.

There is such a thing, however, as overnicety. For example, some gardeners in planting green and wax beans go through the ordeal of placing each eye down. Despite their claims to greater success by this method the improvement is not sufficiently imposing to warrant that much extra trouble.

Germination may be hastened by covering the seeds with water before covering them with earth. Sometimes as in the case of parsley, which is slow to germinate, it is profitable to soak the seeds in warm water 12 minutes in the house before planting them.

Park Spaces Now Seen as Commercial Asset

Indiana, with 7,854.71 acres in city and county parks, stands tenth among the 25 most populous states in the nation in such park space according to a national survey by the Play Ground and Recreation Association of America.

California leads with 20,858 acres, and New York state is second with 19,415. Following Indiana are Minnesota with 9,030 acres and Missouri with 7,733.

Of 54 booster cities reporting to the survey, Indianapolis had the largest total park area, 2,566.16 acres, and Evansville was second with 623 acres. The smallest town to report a park was Jewellton, population 225.

Parks are promoting health and child safety and reducing juvenile delinquency, as well as adding to the beauty of communities, says L. H. Weir, director of the study. The use of city parks for active recreation has been the most significant trend in recent park development. Though more than a billion dollars have been spent in the United States to acquire and equip municipal and county parks, few cities as yet provide adequate park facilities and hundreds of small towns have reserved no park space the survey revealed. In urban communities, children's playgrounds and neighborhood recreation fields are the greatest lack. Mr. Weir pointed out.

Hedge Worth Consideration

A well-cared-for hedge adds a touch of privacy to your home and is more pleasing than a wooden or wire fence.

The most commonly used shrub for hedging is the privet. The best results will be obtained if three-year old plants are used. They should be cut back about one-half their size and set several inches deeper than they were planted in the nursery.

For single row planting, the plants should be set 12 inches apart in a row and placed about one foot back from the lot line to allow for the spread of the bush.

If double row planting is done, the plants should be set 18 inches apart. No two plants should be opposite one another. This will give a zig-zag effect.

Shrubs as Screens

Often in planting the garden, some sort of screen effect is required to hide an unsightly object; something for quick growth with sufficient height and foliage density. For this purpose there is nothing better than the tall, quick-growing shrubs Dentzia, Rose Weigela, Smoke Bush, Mock Orange, Rose of Sharon and Bush Honey suckle. If several varieties of these plants are planted around the yard, they not only afford beauty, but also a feeling of privacy and seclusion.

Pays to Plan Garden

In the creation of your garden, which should bear the stamp of your individual fancies, let the first step be the free play of your imagination. Vague day-dreaming, however, will not do it. Your dream garden must be definite, practical. Plan the garden with a fair degree of definiteness before going to the seed store, or sitting down with the catalogues to actually make out the order for your seeds.

Details That Improve Home

Next to your house, nothing adds more to the impression people get of your property than the appearance of the steps, walks and driveways. And nothing can detract more than worn, uneven or shabby approaches.

FREE SALVATION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THEY were singing lustily at the revival meeting, and I was joining in with my cracked voice which was in the process, quite embarrassing to me, of changing.

"Salvation's free, for you and me, I'm glad salvation's free."

Sam Gregory, who had accepted confidently the simple faith propounded by the evangelist, and had just been baptized in the stream which ran through Cloyd's pasture, took the song literally. He had done everything which the minister had laid down for him to do; he was quite at peace and in his simple mind, for he told me so, he was safe for all time and safe for eternity. There was nothing further for him to do. He had got something very precious to him practically for nothing, and that was a new experience for Sam.

But he was quite mistaken. We get nothing worth while in the world, and possibly nothing in the next absolutely free. We don't always pay what a thing is worth, but we pay, and it wasn't long before Sam knew that if he were to be saved there was a price to be paid. He had taken on some heavy obligations when he stood up and joined the church. There was a slight financial obligation, but this did not disturb him. He had never contributed before to the support of the church, barring the stray nickel which dropped into the contribution box when he had a girl with him at the evening service, but the five dollars which he would be expected to subscribe did not worry him.

But there were other things. He had been rather profane up to the time of his joining the church, and he had a high temper which must now be subdued, and he had despised some of the neighbors with whom he had done business, and now "Love one another, for love is the fulfilling of the law" was the commandment. Sam was game. He was in no way a grafter. When he made an obligation he met it, and he came to see that salvation isn't quite free. Nothing is. It must be paid for in love and sacrifice and self-control. It is worth all that it costs, but there is a price to be paid. Sam paid it. No one ever heard him utter a profane word after the revival was over. He lived in peace and harmony with his family and with his neighbors. He came in time to see that generous giving was an obligation which he could not evade if he would pay what he should, and he saw, too, that the debt he owed for the salvation which was dear to him was one which he could never really pay; any more than he could fully meet the debt of obligation which he owed to his mother, and so he kept on trying to pay until the end.

Merely to accept a religious creed he saw was not enough. It didn't make him safe even for all time much less for eternity. It simply piled upon him a debt which try as he might he could never fully wipe out.

The Flint Chamber of Commerce sends out a warning against the activities of "a certain P. A. Hansen" who recently operated an advertising scheme in Flint. "Hansen, or Hansen is accompanied by a woman. Their scheme is to get permission from some minister to put out a calendar bearing the church's name. Around the edges of the calendar are small ads, about 18 in number. This permission is secured by telephone and the ads are sold in the same manner. The rate in Flint varied from $5 to $10, according to the space. They agreed to print 2,000 such calendars and to distribute them among the church congregation and other householders. We have authentic information that only 100 calendars were printed, just enough to place in the hands of the advertisers and allow the young lady to collect the money. The selling was done on the telephone one day, and the copy made up and calendars printed and delivered the next. By the time three days elapse the money is collected and the persons have left town."

State News in Brief

Charlevoix—A plant to cost $1,000,000, is to be erected here by the Newaygo Portland Cement Co., it was announced recently. Work will begin immediately.

Moline—Shirley Smith, 11 years old, was killed when she became entangled in the rope attached to a hay fork and was drawn by a team she was driving for her father at his Green Lake farm.

Boorse—Losing his balance as he stood on a dock over the Detroit river while watching a soaring airplane, Charles Liko, 13 years old, of Boorse, lost his balance, fell into the river and was drowned. Members of the harbor-master's crew recovered the body.

Mt. Clemens—The army pilot who aided the Bremen fliers at Greenly Island and who carried food to Vermont flood victims will be transferred to Selfridge Field, September 1, according to word received at the local airport. He is Lieutenant Richard E. Cobb, now attached to the East Boston airport.

Ann Arbor—Miss Ruth E. Banfield, of Ironwood, Mich., is regarded as "the perfect scholar" by officials of the University of Michigan. Miss Banfield, who completed the literary course at the university this year, was an All-A student during the four years of her university career, having received perfect marks in all subjects.

Pontiac—Fifteen minutes after Arthur Teggs reported his automobile had been stolen from his home in the Huron Gardens Subdivision, west of the city, the automobile was recovered and Alton Cline, 30 years old, was under arrest. Cline was arrested as he drove from Sanderson into Oakland avenue, two miles from where the car was taken.

Buchanan—Levi Batten, life-long resident of this vicinity, is dead. Batten, during eight years as justice of the peace here, steadfastly refused to perform marriage ceremonies. Shortly after he took office he married a couple. The marriage did not turn out happily and after that the justice refused all requests of couples desiring to be married. Batten died on his 75th birthday.

Grand Rapids—Results of the leaf spot which has made heavy inroads in Michigan cherry orchards this year despite warnings to the growers, will not only be apparent this year in a reduced crop but for one or two years to come, Prof. R. V. Gardner, head of the horticultural department and director of experimental stations at the Michigan State College, told fruit growers here recently. He said control of the disease is not difficult.

Marshall—Funeral services for Carl Weber, believed to be the country's oldest baker, were held here recently. Mr. Weber was 92 years old and had been in active service at the Kuechle Bakery here until a week before his death. He had been in the baking business for 79 years, and was employed in the same shop for the last 60 years. In that time he had not been off duty for more than four weeks at a time nor for more than 10 weeks altogether.

Jackson—That Clara Wade Tillotson, well known Jackson business woman and former president of the Business and Professional Women's Club here, is Mrs. John Lee Lamont and has been for the last 15 years, became known here recently when announcements were mailed to Mrs. Lamont's friends. The marriage took place in Detroit Oct. 18, 1913. Since the marriage Mr. Lamont has been living at the home of his wife and her mother and was known to friends as a roomer there.

Lansing—The State probably will build more highways this year than in 1927, according to estimates based on a report for the first six months, prepared by Frank D. Fitzgerald, business manager of the Highway Department. Up to the last week in June 64.4 miles of concrete and 10 miles of asphalt and other hard surface had been completed, as compared with 67.8 miles of concrete in the same period in 1927. Indications are the State will spend at least $2,000,000 more for highway construction than it did in 1927.

New Haven—Two rows of venerable hitching posts line the main street of this village and the question of retaining them has become such a matter of public interest that the Business Men's Association deliberated at length on the question recently. It was pointed out by those who favored the retention of the posts that an occasional horse and buggy is still driven to town on Saturday night. Those who would remove the posts claim they take space that should be allowed for parking automobiles and that the posts are only used as leaning posts.

Battle Creek—Walter Jarowski, 35 years old, a local factory worker, was killed in a pistol duel with Irving Compton, 45 years old, after he had attempted to slay Mrs. Virginia Losey, 40 years old, when she refused to marry him. Jarowski went to Mrs. Losey's residence and upon her refusal to marry him, fired four shots at her, none of which struck her. Compton, a boarder at Mrs. Losey's home, engaged Jarowski in a pistol battle on the front porch of the place, killing him and receiving a slight wound on his face.

BILLIE'S ZOO VISIT

BILLIE BROWNE was off a visit of the zoo creatures and the first he saw were the members of the seal family.

"Well, you are a splendid family," he said, "with your diving and swimming and performing. How you do delight people! Everyone stands around and watches you and everyone has so good a time looking at the performance you are constantly giving."

"We have a good time, too," they said, as they splashed about.

"There is one game we enjoy particularly. Our keeper throws the fish into our pool and we always catch it as he throws it.

"We know when it is time for our meal, too," they went on. "Yes, we are always ready waiting for the fish pail and the keeper."

"Perhaps it would be more polite to mention the keeper first, for we couldn't have the fish pail, or rather the fish from the fish pail, without the keeper, and anyway we're most extremely fond of our keeper."

"But then you know we aren't public speakers and we don't always say things as we should. We have other things to do such as swimming and splashing."

"The little ones can swim when they're six weeks old. I doubt if babies could do as much."

"I very much doubt it, too," roared Billie Browne. "In fact, I'm sure they couldn't."

"Very Much Doubt It, Too," Roared Billie Browne.

"Yes, our keeper will soon be along with the fish pail," they said.

"Well, good-by, Billie Browne, call again."

And they all splashed a most polite good-by.

Then Billie Browne paid a visit to his friends the Zebu and family. They had always been friends of his in their quiet way and they had often told him of the days in India when they had seen so many curious sights. Those days were so very different from the ones they now knew and the people were so different, too.

Mrs. Zebu, an animal something like a cow with a hump, gave Billie Browne a kiss and her tongue felt rough on Billie Browne's hand, but he was pleased with the kiss, and he thanked her and said she had sweet, gentle cow ways.

Then he went to call on the Himalayan tahr.

"Hello Teddy Tahr," he said.

And Teddy Tahr, a wild goat from India, laughed and said:

"Well, Billie Browne, so you've come to see me again. You do say all sorts of things about me, too, I've heard. Of course they're all true. But I mean I can scarcely walk around but that you'd think it was an interesting fact."

"And so I do, Teddy," said Billie Browne. "For a Tahr isn't the sort of a creature one runs into every day. In fact, you're my only Tahr friend."

"I haven't lots and lots of them. I couldn't give a party with only one guest."

"But why, Teddy, are you resting your feet in your feed box?"

"Ah, that is so my feet are kept warm," said Teddy.

"You see, it would not be dignified for a Tahr to have a hot water bottle for his feet, such as I've heard people have. And yet he doesn't want cold feet."

"Well, maybe I've met a few more besides you," said Billie Browne, "but I don't know the family intimately you know. However, the one Tahr I know well I like so much that I am delighted to call upon him whenever I get the chance." And Teddy Tahr was much pleased at the compliment.

Swine-Sanitation System Profitable

Owing to Improved Conditions Cholera Wanes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The continued success of the swine-sanitation system, developed by the United States Department of Agriculture in Illinois and now widely used throughout the Central West, is discussed in a recent report to the department by Dr. J. E. Gibson, federal inspector in charge of hog-cholera-control work conducted by Purdue university. In bringing the system to the attention of Indiana hog raisers, federal veterinarians have conducted post-mortem demonstrations, showing the damage done by roundworms which the system, when used, prevents.

A leading swine breeder in Rush county, Ind., stated that the benefits he had derived from such a demonstration and lecture delivered four years ago had "turned a losing proposition into one that is now showing a splendid profit."

"Up to that time," he continued, "the average number of pigs per sow had been about 8 1/2, and the few pigs that grew to maturity, when marketed at 10 1/2 months of age, weighed about 200 pounds. Now the average number of pigs per sow is a fraction above 7 and they weigh 200 pounds when about 7 months old."

Approximately 6,000 farmers in Indiana have attended lectures and post-mortem demonstrations similar to the one cited which resulted in such striking success.

Doctor Gibson also stated that the system of swine sanitation is now being fully carried out by more than 325 swine growers in 10 Indiana counties. Still other growers are following the system partially. Owing to the improved sanitary conditions where the system is followed, the danger of hog cholera is reduced considerably, though inspectors of the bureau of animal industry keep before swine growers the necessity for immunizing herds as a means of preventing hog cholera with practical certainty.

Manure Supply on Some Farms Now Inadequate

The supply of manure on some farms is wholly inadequate to the plant-food needs. Anything that can be done to increase the value and efficiency of this manure means increased profits, or at least a lower fertilizer bill, which means the same thing.

A ton of manure is equal in fertilizing value to about 100 pounds of a 12-5-10 fertilizer; in other words, each ton of manure will contain 12 pounds of ammonia, 5 pounds of phosphoric acid and 10 of potash. The weak spot in this analysis will be readily recognized as the low phosphoric-acid content, as compared with the relatively high supply of ammonia and potash per ton of manure.

This situation can be corrected by the addition of 50 pounds of 18 per cent superphosphate, or about 40 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate to each ton of manure.

This addition of phosphoric acid will give an analysis of 12:13:10 to the treated manure, making each ton equal to about 100 pounds of a 12-13-10 fertilizer in value. The practical application of this treatment is that the available supply of manure on the farm, increased in fertilizing efficiency, can be applied less heavily with equal or better results than the untreated, and can thus be made to cover an increased acreage of the farm each year.

Power of Trees

The power of tree roots is tremendous. Those of a five-year-old oak lifted a block of granite weighing 6 1/2 tons. In seven years the block had been raised two inches.

Lansing—The State Conservation commission at a meeting recently made arrangements for the tagging of 10,000 brook, rainbow and brown trout before liberation this fall. The fish will receive small metal tags on their gill covers, each bearing a number. They will then be turned loose in various streams throughout the state and a study started of their migratory habits. The information sought is similar to that now obtained through the banding of birds by Federal Government agents, which covers range, food habits and general distribution.

Milford—Howard Crawford, 8 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Crawford, of Milford, was drowned in the creek that runs through the village. Howard and a number of companions were wading in the creek, a mile south of Milford, when he apparently stepped into a hole and disappeared beneath the surface. Companions dragged him out alive almost immediately and two doctors worked for half an hour with a pump motor, but were unable to retain life in the body.
