Year's Work of D. H. I. A.

ELMER MURRAY HAS HIGH HERD
IN BUTTERFAT.

July 31, 1928 closed the fifth year of the Charlevoix County D. H. I. A. There were 292 cows on test throughout the 12 months, which averaged 304.74 lbs. of Butterfat per cow.

Of the eighteen members that have been in the entire 12 months, thirteen averaged over 300 lbs. of B. F. per cow in herd.

High herd in butterfat production is owned by Elmer Murray, East Jordan, a herd of 12 Gr. and P. B. J. and Gu., averaging 8,341 lbs. of milk and 398.0 lbs. of Butterfat.

High herd in milk production is owned by Orchard Bay Farm, Charlevoix, consisting of 23 P. B. H., averaging 10,515 lbs. of milk and 326.4 lbs. of Butterfat.

High cow in B. F. production is owned by Elmer Murray, a four year old Gr. Gu., having 13,278 lbs. of milk and 568.8 lbs. of B. F. to her credit.

An eleven year old P. B. H. owned by the Breezy Point Farm, Ironton, is high cow in milk production, making 14,937 lbs. of milk and 514.9 lbs. of B. F. in the Association year.

The thirteen members that average over 300 lbs. of B. F. are as follows:

Elmer Murray, 12 Gr. and P. B. J., and Gu., 398.0 lbs.

Breezy Point Farm, 12 P. B. H., 362.4 lbs.

Geo. Meggison, 9 P. B. J., 345.2 lbs.

Murphy Bros., 8 Gr. and P. B. Gu. and J., 342.6 lbs.

Al. Balch, 7 Gr. J. & H., 332.3 lbs.

Floyd Black, 5 Gr. J. & Gu., 330.6.

Orchard Bay Farm, 23 P. B. H., 326.4 lbs.

Henry Potter, 7 Mixed, 323.1 lbs.

Fred Wurn, 6 P. B. & Gr. J., 308.3

Lawrence Boss, 10 Gr. J., 308.3

John W. Brock, 9 Gr. G., 299.5

Louis Brown, 6 P. B. & Gr. H. & J., 305.4

Irving Crawford, 7 Gr. Gu., 304.8

During the year, 46 cows were sold to the butcher as unprofitable producers, eight of which were P. B., proving that Purebreds also can be culls. Many more that should and will be sold for a gain to the owner.

The herd sire question is one of vital importance to the dairyman. At the present time there are twenty Purebred Sires owned and being used by the members, seven of which are going to be kept until proven and three have already producing daughters.

Sorry to say, there are still six members that use Grade Sires. This matter could be corrected by forming bull associations. One member is from now on going to reap the benefit of group ownership.

The alfalfa and sweet clover acreage is still on the increase. This can be accounted for by the simple reason of good feeding qualities and the excellent pasture they make.

Seventeen of the members fed grain the year around. At the beginning of the year two members were weighing their milk and keeping a daily milk sheet, now there are nine.

Two members have the past year installed drinking cups, making a total of eleven. The rest have tank heaters or some other improved way of supplying water in the winter.

Michigan Solons Need Local Man

GRUDGE FIGHT SEEN IN ACTIVITIES OF ANDERSON PARTY.

The Courier for some time has been at loss to know why a few Charlevoix County voters were so interested in the election of a Leelanau County candidate for Representative to the State Legislature. We could not, and do not now, understand why Charlevoix County is in the same district with Leelanau. No one so far has been able to give us a satisfactory explanation. We have come to the conclusion that politics were the cause, just as they were at the time of the "shoe-string" congressional district with Charlevoix county to the north and Gratiot county to the south. Politics are a funny thing, aren't they?

But what staggered us most was the interest shown by a small coterie from Boyne City, also Charlevoix, in the candidacy of Mr. Louis E. Anderson from Northport. According to the Michigan State Digest, published at Lansing, and from what our inquiries have brought out, we find the Boyne City leader in the opposition against Judge John M. Harris, present Representative, was involved in a certain tie up of funds in the local bank in that city, to satisfy a certain claim of an outside oil company.

(The Boyne City leader in the Harris opposition is in the oil business in that city.) The oil company seeking settlement with this Boyne City oil dealer employed Judge Harris as their attorney, and from what we hear, the claim was paid. No wonder he has it in for Mr. Harris.

We have been told also that an effort was being made by a few Charlevoix would-be politicians to throw the Bohn followers' influence against Mr. Harris. The Courier did about as much work toward the recent election of Mr. Bohn as congressman as anyone in the county, and we want to say right here that we intend to do our bit toward the re-election of Mr. Harris. We haven't any sore spots, never held a political office, consequently have never been ragged over the handling of county affairs, funds or fees, or criticized along this line. We sincerely hope those who expect to use this Bohn "influence" against Mr. Harris will not depend on us, and at the same time we are expressing the views of over 98 per cent of Mr. Bohn's Charlevoix friends. Again we say, aren't politics peculiar?

Judge John M. Harris has served four years in the State Legislature; he has been a resident of Charlevoix County for 47 years; he served the county some 15 years as Judge of Probate; he has been active in public affairs every one of those 47 years and few men in Charlevoix County are better posted on local needs; his knowledge of general State affairs, his acquaintance with State officers, has made him a valuable man for the district. Gov. Fred W. Green says this of Mr. Harris: "I consider him extremely able and the work he did in preparing the criminal code Michigan now has was work that marked Michigan's most forward step in crime control."

Again we ask: Why go to Leelanau County for a State Representative?—Charlevoix Courier.

A few would-be political gentlemen have been in East Jordan of late trying to stir up some interest locally in the Anderson candidacy, with disheartening results. The citizens of East Jordan and surrounding townships have known Mac Harris for many years, and knowing his ability to serve Michigan, will continue to support him as their Representative in the State Legislature.

Voters Must Re-register

THIS SATURDAY NIGHT IS THE LAST OPPORTUNITY.

Re-registration in the City of East Jordan is meeting with good results, over seventy-five per cent of the voters already having filed their names with City Clerk Smith.

The State law provides that no voters shall be registered after the second Saturday before the day of any election. In other words, citizens of East Jordan cannot register for the Primary Election of Sept. 4th, after this Saturday night, Aug. 25th.

If you fail to register, do not blame anyone but yourself.

Lightning Kills Garl Brown

DURING HEAVY STORM OF MONDAY AFTERNOON.

Garl Brown, well-known farmer of Jordan Township, was killed by lightning during the severe electrical storm Monday afternoon, Aug. 20th.

Mr. Brown was assisting a crew of men harvesting oats at the Frank Lilak farm east of Chestonia. As the storm approached the team and wagon were drove into the barn, and had just got in when a bolt of lightning struck the barn and in grounding hit Mr. Brown, killing him almost instantly. It also set fire to the barn. The workmen nearby extinguished the blaze and summoned a physician. The accident took place about 3:30 p. m.

Garl Brown was born in Wells County, Ind., Nov. 7th, 1892. In 1913, he was united in marriage to Cora Coons at Marion, Ind. About seven years ago they came to this region, purchasing and locating on a 160-acre farm in Jordan township.

Mr. Brown is survived by the wife and three children—Margie, Robert and Bernadine.

Funeral services were held from his late home, Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. George Weaver of Petoskey. The remains were taken to Marion, Ind., for burial.

A UNIQUE CHURCH SERVICE LAST SUNDAY

Last Sunday morning the auditorium and the side room of the East Jordan Presbyterian Church were crowded to capacity for what was a unique and very impressive service of worship. In addition to the local congregation, there were present Professors from Schools of Higher Learning from several States, many prominent Clergymen from different parts of the country, business men from a distance, and many other visitors who were assembled for the worship of God. Such a congregation was possible because of the choice quality of some of the summer resorts in Charlevoix County.

At the echo of the last inviting peal of the Church bell, Prof. John Thompson, of the Department of Music of Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., began a subdued and reverent prelude.

The three Ministers who had part in the services then took their seats. They were Dr. John Gardner, eminent Congregational Divine, of Riverside, Calif., father-in-law of the preacher of the morning. He was followed by the local pastor, Rev. C. W. Sidebotham. After him, came Dr. George Buttrick, noted religious author, and Pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City.

The strains of the organ prelude glided into the music of the Doxology. The quartette from Sequanota Resorted in the singing of this sublime paean of Christian praise. It was sung with a stately joyfulness of spirit and of tempo that challenged everyone present to "Praise Him From Whom All Blessings Flow." The invocation was given by the Pastor, and then followed the "Gloria." One could not participate in the ecstatic rendition of this rapturous music without being conscious that the shadows of the night had passed and that everyone with full abandon should render glory to the triune God.

After the reading of the scripture lesson, Prof. Harry Miller, violin artist of Chicago, played the immortal "Largo." Then all hearts were welded to God as Dr. John Gardner led in prayer. Then followed the singing of "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," by the quartet. The members of the quartet are musical artists of a high grade, but the impressive thing was that during the singing the Cross became vivid and redemptively precious to the hearers. In such an atmosphere it is no wonder that the congregation enthusiastically sang "O Jesus I Have Promised to Serve Thee to the End."

The theme of Dr. Buttrick's sermon was "He Steadfastly Set His Face to Go to Jerusalem," away from flower decked Galilee to Gethsemane and Calvary. The sermon was scholarly in thought, artistic in construction, and the choice of words was like the flashing of light through sun-kissed jewels. But these things were incidental. The spirit of the preacher was simple and sincere and one forgot the ability of the messenger in the thought of the glory of the message. The sermon stressed the path of duty as the one to be trod rather than that of passing pleasure, and the thought of redemptive sacrifice as an exhibition of the Divine nature and as the highest manifestation of the human was pressed upon the attentive worshippers.

Dr. Buttrick is eagerly sought to preach before the student bodies of our best Colleges. This is an evidence that in college life today there is a strain of the heroic that appreciates the appeal to the stern realities of life and to the gentle ruggedness of the Christ whom Dr. Buttrick

To Resume State Building

GOV. GREEN PREDICTS RESUMPTION OF BUILDING PROGRAM.

Lansing, Aug. 21.—Resumption of Michigan's building program for State institutions next year was predicted today by Governor Fred W. Green, after a careful study of the State's finances. The building program has been held to a minimum during the last 18 months because of the $4,500,000 deficit in the general fund of the State which existed when the present administration took office.

There are a number of important items which the Governor has in mind for the building program next year. One is a woman's prison, to care for the women wards of the courts of the State who are now housed in the Detroit House of Correction. Plans for this institution are already drawn, and all that is necessary is a Legislative appropriation to go ahead with the work.

The Governor also will ask the Legislature for an appropriation to do away with the dormitory system now in use at the Ionia Reformatory, by the construction of cell blocks. The dormitory system, according to Judge Arthur Wood, Commissioner of pardons and paroles, is a crime incubator, and its use should be discontinued as soon as possible.

Funds for the building of additions to the Pontiac asylum, or provisions for the sale of this property subject to the construction of a new institution, will also be asked by Governor Green. All State Asylums are overcrowded.

Funds also may be asked for rebuilding a part of the old Jackson prison. With the completion of the new prison at Jackson, the overcrowded conditions in the penal institutions will be done away with. Governor Green and Judge Wood are now working on a plan which may result in the creation of a receiving prison at Jackson. If the plan is adopted, such a prison would receive all prisoners sentenced by the courts. Here they would spend their quarantine period, and during that time would be under the watchful eye of trained specialists. They would be studied as to their criminal tendencies, their mental and moral attitudes, their past records, and other investigations which would furnish definite information through which a proper segregation of prisoners could be carried out. Ionia Reformatory could then be turned into an institution such as its name implies, housing only first offenders and those in whom prison officials believe there is a chance for reformation.

The School for the Feeble Minded at Lapeer also will need some new buildings next year. This institution is now crowded, and it is likely the Governor will ask for an appropriation for several new cottages to house the inmates there.

The Governor has had Budget Director George Thompson busy for several months making a survey of all State institutions, so when the budget for the next two years goes to the Legislature early in January, all requests for appropriations may go in at the same time, simplifying the work on finances for the legislature and at the same time aiding in speeding up the deliberations of that body.

It was an impressive and inspiring sight to see two of the most eminent preachers of the United States, father-in-law from the Pacific coast, and son-in-law from the Atlantic, meet on a Christian platform in East Jordan.

The worship in song and in prayer and in sermon combined profound scholarship, high artistic expression and deep reverential humility of spirit. It was a service unique not only for East Jordan, such a service in any church in the country would mark a day to live long in high regard and in grateful memory.—Contributed.

LIGHTNING STRIKES WEST SIDE SCHOOL

The West Side School Building was slightly damaged by fire when lightning struck the structure during the storm Monday afternoon about 3:00 o'clock.

The bolt struck a corner of the roof, ran along the edge tearing up shingles, went down an eavestrough and ignited a door frame and window sill. Prompt response of our firemen made the loss nominal.

Monroe—Fire, caused by the explosion of a kerosene stove, did an estimated damage of $3,500 to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miller here. Mr. and Mrs. Miller were absent at the time of the accident. Alvin and Chester Miller, sons, 13 and 17 years old respectively, one of whom had been sleeping, escaped uninjured.

Detroit—A two to four inch increase over the average rise in the level of the Great Lakes was noted in July, the findings of the Government survey reveal. The average level is computed from the heights during the last 68 years. Lakes Michigan and Huron were 29 of a foot higher in July than they were in June, the survey states.

Hillsdale—Somerset Center, this county, western gateway to the Irish Hills on U. S. Highway 112, celebrated its silver anniversary home coming recently. For 25 years hundreds of former residents have returned to the old home town annually. It was the first organization of this kind in Michigan and the only one which has never missed an annual gathering.

Pontiac—Two barns on the Bald Mountain Golf Club grounds were destroyed by the windstorm which swept a section of Oakland county northeast of here recently accompanied by a severe rain storm. Although 16 horses were stabled in the barns only two of the animals were killed by the falling timbers and flying debris. A large farm house nearby was not damaged.

Lansing—Orville Hoepenthal, 30 years old, Flint, was killed at Pine Lake, a resort near here, when the parachute with which he leaped from a balloon, failed to open and he was dashed to the ground from a height of 2,500 feet. In two previous drops, Hoepenthal had landed in the lake but was uninjured. He had told friends that this would be his last parachute drop as he planned to retire from the business.

Muskegon—A walk-out of the eight patrolmen of the Muskegon Heights police force was threatened as a result of the order of T. J. Pedler, city superintendent, and the police committee that they must carry eight-pound clocks on their beats. The city is without a police call system, and so Pedler proposes the patrolmen carry the clocks and punch them at various places on the beats, where keys are available.

Grand Rapids—C. Sophus Johnson and Miss Olive Jones, receiver of the West Michigan State Fair, have been authorized by Circuit Judge W. B. Brown to proceed with plans for the 1928 fair to be held Sept. 10 to 14 and were granted permission to place a lien on the gate receipts as security for a $9,800 loan with which to meet unpaid 1927 premiums. The receivers told the court a plan of refinancing the fair through receivers certificates will be presented shortly.

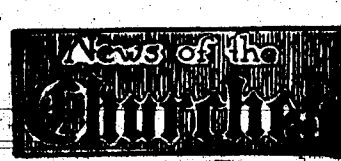

Camp Custer—Corp. Harry A. Evans, 26 years old, serving as a mess sergeant instructor in the C. M. T. C., escaped death during a thunderstorm that drenched the camp when he was struck by a bolt of lightning. Corp. Evans, a member of the Second Infantry, was lying on his cot in a squad tent when he was struck and made unconscious. Others who were in the same tent suffered shock, but none was injured. Evans was taken to the camp infirmary, where he was revived.

Three Rivers—Four members of one family were killed when a train on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railroad struck the automobile in which they were riding at a crossing on U. S. 131 a mile south of here. The dead are Harold S. Titus, Sr., his wife, Florence, and their two sons, Donald, 14 years old, and Harold, Jr., 8. They lived in Battle Creek. Titus was an interior decorator. The automobile was struck in the side and carried 500 feet down the right-of-way before the train could be stopped.

St. Joseph—Wind which reached a hurricane velocity recently did damage amounting to at least $250,000 in Berrien County, county officials estimated. The fruit in this section was hit the hardest and several cities in this section suffered property damage. Many persons narrowly escaped death in freak automobile accidents and when trees fell on parked cars. In St. Joseph the two young sons of Edward Small, a garage owner, escaped when a tree two feet in diameter fell on the car in which they were sitting.

Lansing—More than half of the $164,000,000 increase in state valuation was placed in Wayne County by the state board of equalization in allotting each county's share of the state tax burden for 1928. The remainder of the increase will be shared by 10 industrial counties, while many of the farming communities were granted decreases. The figures issued fixing the state's valuation at $2,209,120,920 are merely tentative. Protests will be heard by the board and a revision will be made if the members find it necessary.

Lansing—Huron national forest, largest preserve of this kind east of the Mississippi, has been accepted by the federal government. President Coolidge's proclamation which was made public at Washington, provides for the taking over of land in Crawford, Oscoda, Isocoma and Alcona counties in the lower peninsula. The forest contains a gross area of approximately 500,000 acres, of which about 200,000 acres is now owned by the United States, and the remainder is either in private ownership or owned by the state.

WHAT THEY ARE FOR

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I HAVE at one time or another in my life joined a good many things, attached myself to a considerable number of enterprises, become a member of groups or an advocate of movements. Sometimes this relationship has been developed so rapidly and so without deliberation that I have not had time seriously to consider what it was all about. I am paying dues in organizations now whose halls I have not visited since the night I was initiated, and sometimes I stop and ask myself what they are all for—these groups of which I am in many cases so ineffective a part. I am sensible enough to realize without much thought that no man is justified in allying himself with an organization of any sort wholly or even in large part for what it will do for him, but rather for what he may be able to do for the benefit and the advancement of the group.

Grant came into my office not long ago wearing on his lapel a fluttering yellow ribbon which indicated I knew that he was an adherent of an undergraduate political party which was at that time pretty deeply involved in the throes of an election. There was an opposing organization whose colors were white indicating, I presume, purity of purpose and action.

"Why the yellow ribbons, George?" I inquired. "What are the noble purposes which actuate you in this political campaign?"

"Well, I hope," he confessed, "that if our party wins, as it looks to me just now pretty sure to do, some of our sophomores and juniors will be able to cop off a few fat jobs."

One belonged to a political party George thought for the sole purpose of getting out of it for himself or his friends something worth while in a social, financial, or official way. It is a point of view which is not confined to the adherents of college political parties.

Walter had just joined a fraternity and, having moved into the house, was taking a good deal of liberty with the furniture and making more disturbance as he went about the place than the head of the house thought best for the development of proper study conditions, and he thought it wise to say so to Walter.

"Well, what's a fraternity for?" was the freshman's query. He had conceived the idea, not unusual I must confess, that a college fraternity is a place for freedom, for rowdiness, for doing as one pleases. He had not yet gotten the conception of responsibility and co-operation which one assumes when he joins such a group. It was for his own pleasure only that he joined.

Men think of the church often in the same way. It is to them an opportunity to advance their business interests by coming through membership in it into contact with the best people. Or it may be a sort of insurance association to protect the member in the next world against the consequences of his irregularities in this world.

Too often it does not occur to us that membership in any group is primarily for the good of all rather than for profit to the individual.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Constipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c to-day at the nearest Rexall Drug Store.

State News in Brief

Sturgis—In a determination that this city will go to polls at the coming primary election no less than 100 per cent, the local post of the American Legion made a roundup of all factory workers and professional men and women with a fleet of automobiles and took them to their respective registration places.

Greenville—The digging and marketing of new potatoes has started in the Greenville area with some of the early potatoes reaching near enough maturity to come out of the ground. An excellent crop is in prospect. Prices of 65 to 75 cents a bushel have been paid. Carload shipping is expected to start about September first.

Newberry—Orveline Hoover, 12-year-old daughter of Orville Hoover, a conductor on the Minneapolis & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad, lost her life in saving her companion, Violet Preiss, from drowning in Frenchman's Lake, near Trout Lake. Orveline, an expert swimmer, went to Violet's aid and kept her afloat until she was pulled into a boat. Orveline then sank before those in the boat could reach her.

Lansing—A substantial increase in the number of automobiles carried by the State ferries across the Straits of Mackinac was reported by Frank F. Rogers, State highway commissioner. Up to August 1, 36,916 vehicles had been transported, as compared with 34,809 during the same period of last year. The number of passengers carried was 62,659 this year and 60,857 in 1927. The receipts were $113,963, greater than last year's by $6,281.

Marquette—Thomas Braxton of this city was on his way to Milwaukee with his sister, Magdalene, in his automobile when a deer darted out of the woods and across the road, and as the car slowed down the animal began zig-zagging down the pavement, crazed with fear. Braxton set his brakes and the wheels locked. The car struck the deer and caromed off into the ditch. Miss Braxton was brought to the hospital here. Braxton was not injured.

Midland—Dorward Pevitt, 13 years old, son of Otto Pevitt, of Midland, was drowned in the Tittabawassee River when he suddenly went under while swimming to a raft. A nearby swimmer summoned aid at once when the boy did not come up and life guards had the body within three minutes of the disappearance, but three hours of resuscitation efforts failed. A physician said that the cause of death was drowning, discounting the theory of a heart attack.

Lansing—Contracts for the improvement of more than 50 miles of trunkline highway were awarded by the State Administrative Board recently. The projects included: 2.5 miles of concrete on M-21 in Genesee County; 6.1 miles of concrete on M-21 in Lapeer County; 43 miles of concrete on M-43, Saginaw County; 7.8 miles of gravel on M-28, Baraga County; 7.6 miles of gravel on US-2, Chippewa County and 7 miles of gravel on M-55 in Iosco and Ogemaw Counties.

Shelby—An undetermined variety of caterpillar, believed to be the larva of the dreaded gypsy moth, which has ravaged forest, fruit and shade trees along the Atlantic seaboard, has made its appearance in enormous hordes in timber tracts near Little Point Sable. Within two weeks 150 acres of choice hardwood timberland had been stripped bare of its leaves and looks as though it had been swept by fire. There are several thousand acres of hardwood timber adjoining.

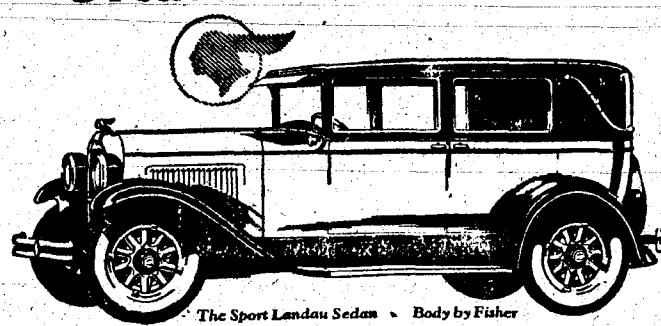

Traverse City—Canners in the Traverse region recently sent out an appeal to cherry growers to slow up on the picking of the fruit. Last thousands of pounds of cherries spoil on the canners' docks. The situation is due to the greatest crop in the state's history, which makes Michigan the leading cherry producing state in the country. Growers are receiving six cents a pound, one cent more than they have ever received for a bumper crop. The value of this year's crop is placed at $2,000,000.

Ann Arbor—Ann Arbor's pride in being the only city of the United States of that name is shared by almost 500 towns and cities within the borders of Michigan's far-flung water fronts. Postoffice Department records show. In spite of the many town names not reproduced, Michigan has many that are common to other States. There are listed in the postal directory 15 Hillsdales, 18 Jacksons, 28 Washingtons, 4 Grand Rapids and 32 Franklins, the last mentioned seeming to be the most popular town name in the United States.

Halfway—Halfway will vote Sept. 17 to determine whether the community will remain a village or become the city of East Detroit. A resolution providing this was adopted by the Village Commission. A survey has revealed that Halfway's population, approximately 8,000 persons, is sufficient to permit its becoming a city. Supporters of the change to a city point out that laws governing the bonding for public improvements would allow the territory to increase its limit, permitting a more rapid expansion.

The RED LAMP

Immediately on Cameron's return from the Adirondacks he had gone to bed with an infested hand, which had been torn by a fishhook, and had been too ill to look at the accumulation of mail. But the day before, although still very weak, he had gone through his letters, and there found one from Mr. Bethel, dated late in July.

In this letter Bethel recited various "abnormal conditions in the Twin Hollows house, and asked Cameron, at the earliest possible moment, to go out and investigate them. "And he wants to come?" I asked Lear. "I tell you he's been sick," Lear said impatiently. "He wants to know about showing it to the police. He doesn't want to be dragged in, if he can help it."

"You've seen it?" "Yes. There's nothing in it except what I've told you." "He doesn't describe these abnormal conditions?" "No. But he said he had had some experiments of his own, and was anxious to have his results verified. "Experiments? Using a red light?" "He didn't say," Lear said, with some asperity. "A red light? What heaven's name was a red light to do with the immortal soul?"

He enlarged on that savagely. He said, he had been off to a corner saying, "om, om" to herself half the summer, and when she dozed off in so doing, would waken to claim that her astral body had been off on some excursion or other. "I can't appeal to her reason," he said with a shrug of his thin shoulders, "but I have appealed to her decency. I've asked her if it is fair to intrude into the privacy every human individual is entitled to at times. But it's no good. She keeps a record, and I'm convinced it would fall her."

The only advice I could send Cameron was to use his own judgment concerning the letter. Personally, I do not see what value it has, save to corroborate my own ideas concerning the house. But it has suggested to me the advisability of asking Cameron to come here quietly and look the place over. I rather think he wants to do so.

August 28. All along, I have been impressed by the attitude of at least the summer public to our tragedies; as each one came it brought with it its temporary thrill; for a moment, one might say, the dancing stopped and a bit of drama was enacted on the stage. Then the curtain fell, the band struck up, and the whirl began again, with some inconsiderable of the dancers missing. Poor Carroway's widow is working at one of the shore hotels, and has bobbed her hair. And a small boy with adenoids delivers our milk and chickens; I caught him this morning chalking up a triangle within a circle on one of the pillars of the gate.

The mail house shut and empty, a new assistant keeper at the lighthouse, and perhaps a closed room and grief at the Morrison farmhouse—these are the only apparent scars left to mark our summer's wounding. I saw Larkin this morning. He believes that we may be able to sell the property as a hotel site; as this would insure destroying the house, it seems the best thing. But one other change I have not recorded. Watching Halliday as I do, affectionately and not too openly, I can see a very considerable change in him. He is like a man lit from within by some flame, of vengeance perhaps, or resolution certainly. And he is moody at times; his old gaiety is gone. He has put me out of his confidence, not because, he does not trust me, but because for some reason he is afraid of me.

And the same, I think, is largely true of Edith in the last day or two. It is as though he said in effect: "Keep out. It is dangerous. I am willing to take a chance, but I want to know that the rest of you are safe." Now and then, however, I gather something. Thus yesterday he said: "You have to remember this—we are not dealing with a criminal, but with an idea."

Again, he has asked me for Uncle Horace's letter, and has been apparently making a study of it. Only along the lines of what I call the superstitious phenomena of the summer does he show his old openness, and there he is frankly puzzled. My decision not to call in Cameron has, I think, disappointed him. But my reasons are sound. Cameron's coming might result in unpleasant press publicity for us, and more than that, puts me where I do not intend to be placed, among the believers in spiritism.

He accepted that decision without comment. But shortly after he asked Edith for the letter from Evanston, and sat thinking over it for some time. "Of course, with a little imagination," he said, "you might figure that these people were somehow lit in on what happened here last year. But why Evanston?" And after a pause, following a train of thought: "Of course I suppose, if you grant a spirit world, you have to grant that where time and space do not exist and only vibration counts—whatever that may mean—you could tune in Evanston as well as—well, as easily as you can on the radio."

But he got up soon after, saying that we were all crazy and he himself was the maddest of the lot, and went away. August 27. Livingstone is a curious chap; dapper, fastidious and tactful. He is almost too much of a gentleman; I have had the feeling, and I think Jane has also, that a part of his reticence is caution, that he is always watchful, subconsciously at least, lest the veneer crack, and something secretly vulgar be exposed.

I am still wondering why he came to see me today; he was sitting, gloved and spatted, in our small living room when Clara brought his card to me in the garage and I hurried in. Sitting, too, staring at our ridiculous parlor organ with an odd look on his face. "Haven't seen one for years," he said, in his clipped and yet deliberate manner. "Where'd you happen on that one?" "It was here when we came," I explained.

He gave it another glance before we sat down, and then apparently dismissed it. But not entirely. Now and then he looked toward it, and once I saw a slight smile, as though back in his mind was some equally faint humorous memory. But he came to the point with a certain directness. "You're a man of sense," he said. "I came because you've got a head on you."

"I used to have," I admitted modestly. "Lately, of course." He bent forward. "Use it," he said. "Don't let this spirit-bunk get you—Easiest stuff in the world to fake."

"I don't intend to let it get me." He brushed that aside, and glanced once more at the organ. "You take a thing like that," he said, "and start it in the dark. It gets you creepy in no time. They all use it; it used to be organs like that; now it's phonographs. They say it starts the vibrations! Well, I'll tell you what it does; it gets you worked up. Sometimes it covers something the medium wants to do."

"So I imagine," I agreed. His volubility suddenly left him then, and he seemed rather at a loss. "Let it alone," he said. "Let well enough alone." After a pause: "There may be something, but let it alone."

And that, so far as I can make out, was the purpose of his visit. He showed a certain relief, as if he had got rid of something momentous to him, and soon after he took an abrupt departure.

Thomas tells me that another attempt was made to get into the house last night. He had left his pruning ladder outside under a tree, and found it upright against Gordon's window this morning.

Later, Halliday corroborates Thomas' story, with further details. He was on the lower floor, reading, when he was disturbed by the crash of a pane of glass above. He ran upstairs, but was evidently tardy. There was no one on the ladder when he got there; and a thorough search showed no one in the house.

The window was the one through which we had watched Gordon leave the house by the rope.

August 28. It is impossible for me tonight to draw any conclusion from last evening's discovery; I have not my old faith in circumstantial evidence. I can only ask myself if an innocent man hides in his own house.

Jane had one of her bad headaches last night, and at eleven o'clock I took the car and went in to the village pharmacy. It was closed, however, and I was at a loss to know what to do. In the emergency I thought of Hayward's office; like most country doctors he keeps a medicine cabinet, and fills many of his own prescriptions. I went there, therefore, and rang the bell.

It took some time and several rings to rouse the housekeeper, an elderly and tactful woman, and when she finally opened the door it was to say that the doctor was away, and to attempt to close it again. I prevented this, however, and managed to get past her and into the hall.

"I only want to get some medicine," I explained. "The cabinet is in the back office, isn't it?" "I'm not allowed to let anybody into the office." "Nonsense!" I said sharply. "Anyhow, you are not allowing me in, are you?" She seemed completely at a loss.

I thought too that she was listening. With my hand on the knob of the waiting room, I caught the attentive look on her face, and found myself listening also. It seemed to me that there was somebody moving in the back of the office, and immediately after I caught the stealthy closing of a door somewhere. With that she appeared to relax.

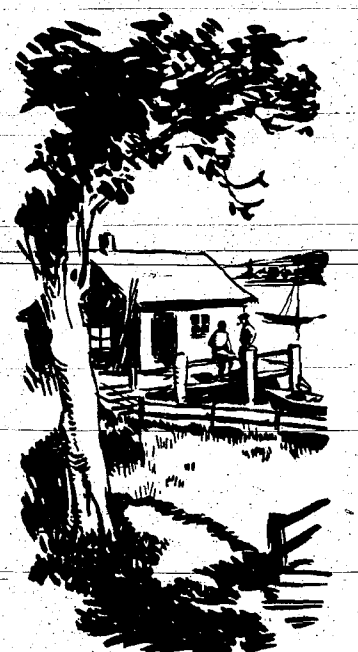

"You are sure you know what you want?" she asked. "Quite sure," I said, and went through the waiting room to the consulting office. She followed me and turned on the light, and stood there watching me intently. The room was filled with tobacco smoke, and she saw that I noticed it, for she said: "My husband was sitting in here. I'd be glad if you don't say anything about it."

I am not suspicious, and the confession satisfied my faint feeling that something was not quite right in the house. I got the tablets from the cabinet, and being nervous about my labeled bottles went to the desk; there, neatly piled up, were the month's bills for Hayward's professional services, written in his own wifty hand, and one not finished on the pad.

The woman was still watching me, and I managed to write my label, glue it to the bottle, and make my departure without, I think, showing that I had made any discovery whatever.

But nothing can alter my conviction that Hayward is hiding in his own house, and that he was in that back room when I rang the doorbell at something before midnight. Not even Halliday's opinion that, since Hayward is officially at home today, he had the right to be "not at home" last night.

"After all," he said, "give the poor devil his due. Skipper. He works hard, and why shouldn't he get back a day earlier than he is expected and steal a few hours to get out his bills? He has to live."

"After All," He Said, "Give the Poor Devil His Due."

But he seems to me to be a trifle too casual about it. I admit that he puzzles me, these days.

August 31. After all, one can find the mysterious where it does not exist. I may not yet know why Halliday considers it necessary to watch the main house at night. But I do know the reason for Livingstone's extraordinary visit.

Mrs. Livingstone, sitting with Jane during her convalescence, read the letter from Evanston, and is eager to form a similar circle to sit in the house itself. And poor Livingstone is opposing it and is making, for some reason or other, quite a business of it. Mrs. Livingstone has apparently some absurd idea that we may receive "a clew, or something," as she vaguely puts it; and on my firm refusal departed indignantly convinced that I have lost a great opportunity to solve our mystery.

Later, Halliday wants the seance! Nothing has so surprised me in years as his willingness to join the table-tippers. But I suspect in him some purpose not far removed from Mrs. Livingstone's, although just what he hopes to discover baffles me entirely.

"Why not?" he said, when I told him. "After all, we have to keep an open mind on this thing, and we've had enough already to make something of a case for the other side."

"The other side of what?" "The other side of the veil," he explained gravely, and then, seeing my face, was obliged to laugh.

"There is a pleasure in being mad, which none but madmen know," he quoted at me. "I've heard you say that Descartes advises us to seek for truth, freed from all preconceived ideas. Who are we, to stand in the way of truth?"

"And we are to search for it, sitting around a table in the dark?" "Precisely that, Skipper," he said, with sudden gravity, and has left me to make what I can of it.

Twelve days have now passed since the murder here, and the police know no more than they did on the morning of the twentieth.

Now and then a car stops outside the gate, but our curious crowds are gone. Save that some nocturnal ruffian has clipped a corner of the sundial, the place is much as it was before. All this water over the dam and it has brought us nothing.

September 1. I dare say there is no type of investigation in which the grave is dug here—is so mixed with the gay as in this particular psychic search on which we are at present engaged. For, for Halliday use it for such purposes as he will, to Jane, fifth and Mrs. Livingstone it is a deadly serious matter. Their reactions are peculiar. Jane accepts it stoically and without surprise; it is almost as though, from the beginning she has known that it was to happen. But she is nervous. Edith shows a peculiar and rather set-off intensity. Whether she knows that something quite different lies behind it, or only suspects it, I do not know.

Halliday, also, is grave and quiet. He is less interested, however, in the manner of the sitting than in its dramatic personae. The list he has made out himself; Hayward, the two Livingstones, Jane, Edith and himself. On my pointing out a slight omission, namely, myself, he told me cheerfully that I belonged among the Scribes and Pharisees.

"The Scribes, anyhow," he said. "You are to sit by the red lamp and make notes. I am particularly anxious to have notes," he added.

SMILES AND LAUGHTER

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

SHE was a very handsome woman I had to admit to myself as I caught a hasty impression of her sitting composedly in her section as I came into the car. I am influenced very strongly by first impressions, I am almost ashamed to admit, and there was an air of refinement about this woman which was very convincing. Her gown was in excellent taste—modest, conservative, and carefully tailored. Her hair was beautifully kept and her hands well manicured. I got all this in a quick impression as I went to my seat in the middle of the car. She seemed a person one might like.

It was when she laughed that the vision of her loveliness faded out like an electric light when the switch is turned off. It was a coarse, raucous, vulgar laugh that pierced to the remotest corners of the car. Women turned in their seats to see what had happened. Men craned their necks to discover whence came the jangling nerve-racking sound. It was an illiterate, untrained, undisciplined voice which spoke volumes. The most skillful art of modiste and hairdresser and manicurist could not efface the impression of that loud laugh. It would take a surgical operation to do anything with it. She was just common, that was all.

Those who first met Keene, even the most charitable in expressing their opinions, were wont to say that he had a very plain face. It was current opinion that he was the ugliest man in town. He had rugged irregular features, a large nose, and a wide cut-mouth. His was a very serious, almost a dull face when it was in repose. But when he smiled you would have received an altogether different impression of him. It was a smile that changed and radiated his whole countenance. It was the gentlest, friendliest, kindest, smile I have ever seen on a man's face. Before he spoke you could divine that his voice was soft and well modulated. You knew without being told that you could trust him. He was the sort of man you would go to if you were in trouble, knowing full well that you would find sympathy and understanding. Dogs wagged their tails when he came near them; children were never afraid of him as they were often of the more comely faced. I could never explain this excepting that his smile suggested gentleness, and his quiet gentleness won human beings and animals as well.

So far as I know, man is the only animal that expresses emotion or a state of mind by smiles or laughter. The hyena laughs we are told and the loon, but there is no more real laughter in the sounds they make than there is music in the bray of a donkey. Words, some one has said were given us by the gods to conceal our thoughts, but smiles and laughter are the most definite and sincere revelation of our true character and state of mind. The villain may smile but his smile only tends to reveal his villainy.

Male Mosquito Has Radio

You need not fear the male mosquito for he is quite harmless. He does not bite, neither does he sing. He lives entirely on vegetable matter. He possesses no ears but has a radio all his own in his feathery antennae which picks up sound waves and enables him to thus enjoy the singing of his female companions.

Louis E. Anderson

FOR REPRESENTATIVE STATE LEGISLATURE Charlevoix District, (of Leelanau and Charlevoix Counties.) (Republican Ticket) PRIMARIES—SEPT. 4, 1928.

Sutton's Bay, Mich., Aug. 11, 1928

To the Voters of Charlevoix County: Now that Mr. Louis E. Anderson's petitions have been filed for candidate for the office of Representative in the Legislature from our Charlevoix-Leelanau District, and he is probably unknown to a great many of you people in Charlevoix County, I thought it would be of interest to you and your friends, to receive from some one who know intimately, information as to what kind of a man he is.

Here in Leelanau County, we respect him very highly, both for his splendid manhood and ability in business. He stands for, and is able to put across, the things that will best benefit the Charlevoix District.

Forty-three years old, educated in the Northport High School, Alma College and The University of Wisconsin, and with a successful business experience of nearly twenty years, he is splendidly equipped in every way to represent our District at Lansing. Married, and having three children, he naturally stands four-square for all the better things in community life. He is conscientious, consistent and tolerant of others.

As Supervisor since 1921 of the largest Township in our County, he has learned the needs of the farmer and as well, understands the resort problems, and how to lend encouragement to that important matter. He encourages good roads. He is awake to the needs of the taxpayer, and especially in this northern section of the State where so many school districts, have been so hard hit since lumbering operations have ceased. He knows every need of a community like ours and has the ability and will do everything possible to alleviate those needs.

If Mr. Anderson receives your support and nomination at the Primaries Sept. 4th, you will have in him a 100 per cent Representative, and one who, because of the confidence the State administration and members of the Legislature will have in him, will be able to do splendid service.
