Farmers Buy Purebred Bucks

"SPECIAL BUCK TRUCK" MEETINGS OF INTEREST.

The recent visit of the "Special Buck Truck" in Charlevoix County for two sheep meetings met with a very decided success.

For the first time the farmers who were present were able to view representatives of five different breeds and to note the difference in breed types. V. A. Freeman, Extension Specialist from M. S. C. gave a detailed discussion of the points to consider in selecting good breeding stock, and the necessity of making good selections if any improvement can be obtained in the farm flocks.

Mr. Freeman strongly advised sheep owners of small flocks to stick to one breed, instead of crossing different breeds, as in most cases the weak points result rather than the good points. In large flocks the practice is more apt to give benefit.

2. KO-IAG lyJident, aCaOGdagi. We are indeed highly gratified to announce that there will be thirteen purebred bucks used on flocks this winter as a result of the two stops. These bucks were personally selected by Mr. Freeman and assure the purchasers of higher quality rams than have been formerly used.

The following sheep raisers made the purchases:

Maple Slope Farm, formerly the W. H. White & Co. Farm—4 Hampshires.

Alfred Williams, East Jordan—1 Hampshire.

Orchard Bay Farm, Charlevoix—7 Hampshires.

John Smith, Charlevoix—1 Ontario.

Charlevoix County farmers purchased approximately one-half of all the rams brought on the truck and feel sure that they will assist materially in improving the flocks where they will be used.

NEW PASTOR FOR EAST JORDAN M. E. CHURCH

At the annual Michigan Conference of the Methodist Church, held at Ann Arbor last week, the present East Jordan pastor—Rev. V. J. Hufton—was appointed pastor of a three-point circuit with headquarters at Frontier, Hillsdale County, 40 miles from Albion. Mr. Hufton will deliver his farewell sermon here next Sunday.

Rev. James Leitch was transferred from the Newayo to the East Jordan pastorate. Mr. Leitch has been pastor at Newayo the past six years, and, through his efforts, a new church edifice was built at that place. He was at one time pastor of the Central Lake-Ellsworth churches. He was transferred to the West, serving as pastor in Idaho and Oregon for several years. At one time he was Chaplain of the State Penitentiary of Idaho.

The wife of Rev. Leitch passed away May 26th last, leaving the husband and three grown sons.

SHEEP CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED

Plans are being made to organize a Sheep Club for boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20. With the increasing interest being shown by farmers in sheep, it is felt that it is a worth while project for the rural boys and girls.

Any boy or girl is eligible who will purchase a purebred ewe, preferably bred, and of any of the leading breeds, such as Shropshire, Hampshire, Oxford, etc.

The members of the club will keep records of the feed costs and will promise to faithfully care for them in an approved manner. If properly cared for and the increase of the original ewe kept from year to year, there is no reason why a farm flock cannot be obtained in a short time.

If you are interested in the development of a farm flock and have a boy or girl who is interested, please get in touch with your County Agent at Boyne City and he will be pleased to discuss the project with you. Your assistance in this matter will be deeply appreciated.

B. C. MELLENCAMP, County Agr'l Agent.

Select Potatoes For Show Now

TOP O' MICHIGAN POTATO SHOW OFFERS LARGE PREMIUMS.

The time to start selecting potatoes for the Potato Show is at digging time, according to A. C. Lytle, Secretary of the Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show.

As the potatoes are picked up behind the digger those that are most nearly perfect should be placed in separate crates and carefully stored for later hand picking of the Show stock. If several bushels are selected in the field in this manner, it will be much easier to select the last thirty-two (1 peck) potatoes than if all the selecting is left to the bin. If the potatoes are dug by hand, the selection will be still easier. Hand dug potatoes are often less liable to mechanical injury and should make the best exhibits, all other things being equal.

The following suggestions for beginners are offered by Mr. Lytle for selecting potatoes for the Show; others may also profit by following them:

1. Be sure they are true to type.
2. See that they are uniform in size, shape and color. Select early varieties about 7 to 9 ounces in size and late varieties about 8 to 10 oz.
3. Be sure the lot are all of the same variety.
4. They should be free from disease, such as scab, black leg, fusarium wilt or late blight rot.
5. They should be free from internal discoloration and hollow heart.
6. They should be physically sound, clean, firm, bright, ripe and free from cracks, checks, or mechanical injuries.
7. Place in a cool, dry place for a week or more before wrapping and packing for shipment.

The same liberal premiums will be offered this year as were offered last year when the largest list of premiums was ever offered. Over $650 in cash premiums will be offered in potatoes, alone besides the special prizes, cups and special premiums. Over $1,600.00 will be offered for all premiums, prizes, and contests in both the apple and potato sections.

The premium books are now in the hands of the printer. They are sent to a large list, but it is impossible to send them to everybody unless they are requested. Your copy may be had by addressing the Secretary, A. C. Lytle, Top O' Michigan Potato and Apple Show, Gaylord, Michigan.

FUR FARMING IN MICHIGAN

Lansing, Sept. 24.—The Game Division of the Conservation Department reports that applications for permits to conduct fur farms, and correspondence pertaining thereto, promise to be even greater this fall than during the peak attained last spring. Many of the letters indicate that there are a good many inexperienced people who are unduly optimistic over the future of the fur farm business.

During the summer months, H. D. Ruhl, Department of Conservation specialist in fur bearing animals, has visited dozens of licensed fur farms in order to become thoroughly acquainted with the problems confronting the licensed fur breeders.

Under the law, a permit must be taken out by everyone who has protected animals in captivity during closed seasons, and everyone who engages in fur-breeding operations must construct satisfactory enclosures and must take out a license before he may legally sell or otherwise commercialize protected fur-bearers. Over 300 licenses on muskrats, 200 on raccoons, 125 on mink, 50 on skunks, and 30 on beaver are now outstanding and the administration of the fur-breeder's license law has developed many new and difficult problems.

LIQUOR-CONTROLLED GOVERNMENT

(From "The Christian Herald") Friends of Gov. Alfred E. Smith are constantly pointing north and exclaiming "Prohibition is a failure; Canada has what we want."

What does Canada have?

What are the facts?

Well here are some of them.

The Ontario liquor board reports liquor sales of a million dollars a week. The Alberta board announces for the second year of "control" the sale of 4,000,000 gallons of intoxicants. The Quebec commission informs us that 1,000,000 more gallons of beer were disposed of this year than last. Seven provincial liquor control boards for a Canadian territory with 10,000,000 inhabitants report an annual "booze" expenditure of $160,000,000—$16.00 per capita.

Al, but you say Canada is drinking beer while we are guzzling hard liquors. Is that so? The reports of these same boards of control state that hard liquor sales have increased 33 per cent in two years and 50 per cent since the opening of beer parlors.

The Province of Alberta issued 60,000 permits the first year. Two years later 144,000 permits were issued.

What about drunkenness? The Montreal Star informs us that drunkenness among women has increased 53 per cent. Police Commissioner C. F. Burton of Manitoba has written, "If all the drunks were arrested there would be no room for them in the

Fire Prevention Week

CONCERTED EFFORT IS THE ONLY PREVENTION.

Of all the special weeks during the year, "Fire Prevention Week" must rank high in national importance. The loss of life and property in the United States annually by fire is most staggering. Most of this loss of life and property is due to carelessness. October 7-13 has been designated as "Fire Prevention Week." Now is a good time to study some of the things that can be done to stop this gigantic waste. Concerted effort is the only prevention.

Carelessness causes most fires. Every fifteen minutes someone's home catches fire.

Fifteen thousand burn to death each year in America.

Help prevent fire! Be careful!

As the days grow cooler, and fires are necessary in stoves, fireplaces and furnaces for comfort, the danger of losses increases. It is important, therefore, that flues should be examined, cleaned, and repaired where necessary.

Not all losses of property and lives, by any means, are caused by defective flues. A frequent cause of danger is rubbish collected in basements or in and around buildings. A general cleanup is an effective method of fire prevention.

Statistics show that over $1,000 worth of property was destroyed every minute, and a life was lost every 35 minutes last year through fires. Thirty million dollars in losses were caused by careless smokers. It should be remembered that there is always danger in the discarded cigarette or cigar stub.

Common suggestions on fire prevention include the following:—

Keep matches in metal boxes where children cannot reach them.

Don't keep ashes in wooden boxes or deposit them against wooden buildings or partitions.

Don't change your electric wiring without consulting a competent electrician.

Don't hang electric light cords on nails.

Use metal protection under all stoves and protect woodwork where stoves or furnaces are close to walls.

Don't pass stovepipe through ceiling, roofs or wooden partitions.

Every open fireplace should have a screen.

Don't use gasoline or benzine to clean clothing near an open flame, light or fire.

Don't use kerosene, benzine or naphtha in lighting fires or to quicken a slow fire.

Don't use liquid polishes near open lights. Many such compounds contain inflammable oils.

Don't go into closets with lighted matches or candles.

It is evident that favorable action upon the suggestion by the general public would greatly decrease fire losses the coming year.

state opposite them.

1.—This will denote that the habits or attitudes are so well established that the student's conduct is very satisfactory.

2.—This will indicate that the habit or attitude is present but not quite so evident as indicated by a "1."

3.—Student's conduct is neither very satisfactory nor unsatisfactory.

4.—This shows that the habit or attitude is so little developed that the conduct is quite unsatisfactory.

A mark of "4" is to be considered serious and will be investigated. It is definitely known that very few students possess all of the attitudes to the utmost degree. Yet when all are considered toward a composite mark, it is quite possible that a certain percentage may receive a mark of "4."

All have a chance. The 12 points listed are very desirable qualities. Each one should make personal inventory, nothing to what degree these qualities are possessed, and strive to attain a mark which will stamp them as a worthy school citizen. Every student will receive this mark in Citizenship in each class. The mark will appear as follows:—

Latin-B2; Geom.-C3; Hist.-C2; etc. The number at the right hand being the rating in Citizenship in that class.

Kinsey—Price Marriage

The marriage of Mrs. Ida M. Price and Lyle Kinsey, both of Jackson, was solemnized at the parsonage of the Ida Stiles M. E. Church, Saturday evening, Sept. 15th. Miss Etiole Cross, niece of the bridegroom, and Charles L. Kinsey, brother of the bridegroom, acted as attendants. Rev. L. T. Robinson read the ring service. Mr. and Mrs. Kinsey will make their home in Jackson at 336 Union St.—Jackson, Mich., Daily.

Don't expect to discover a man who isn't willing to live without work.

It's a pity that a man's stomach isn't built to correspond with his appetite.

Public School Citizenship

BASIS FOR MARKING ACHIEVEMENT AND CITIZENSHIP.

The students are to receive two marks at each marking period, one for achievement and one for citizenship. The mark for achievement should indicate only the degree of attitudes, abilities, skills, and capacities, which the instructor by carefully daily observation and careful testing has noted. The mark in citizenship, fully important as the former, should be a composite one. It is the purpose to give some reasonable basis upon which these marks may be given.

One theory of education is based upon the idea that what the individual does is fully as important as what he knows. The student must be taught to act properly and should act in an habitual manner in certain established ways. Habits are made through practice. We can become good citizens only by doing those things which the good citizen does.

Hence, before we have a chance to become a good citizen, it is necessary to analyze those qualities which if carried out will make the individual a good citizen. Intelligence is a factor, but ideals and habits are vitally important.

THE FOLLOWING POINTS CONSTITUTE A WORKABLE BASIS FOR JUDGING CITIZENSHIP. If any student or individual possesses the following points to a high degree, he will be a very valuable member of East Jordan High School and the community as well.

1. HONESTY—Is honest and truthful; willing to accept any deserved blame; willing to disclose any fact detrimental to the school in general; refuses to accept gossip and searches out the truth.

2. TRUSTWORTHINESS—Will attend to business without supervision; willing to accept responsibility and senses the spirit of it; is dependable.

3. WORKMANSHIP—Dissatisfied with sloppy work; appreciates good work of his fellows; hands in neat assignments; always works up to his ability.

4. OBEDIENCE—Willing to abide by the school regulations and recognizes the authority of the (1) teachers, (2) pupils in charge.

5. LOYALTY—Gives constructive criticism instead of "knocking"; tries to improve the school spirit and has faith in its students and teachers.

6. PRIDE IN SCHOOL'S APPEARANCE—Keeps locker in neat order; picks up waste paper in corridor, classroom and lawn; does not crowd in the halls or block traffic.

7. COURTESY—Actions are genuine and not mere conformance to social custom; is not selfish or rude in manner; is not boisterous in classroom or halls.

8. SPORTSMANSHIP—Is a cheerful loser and not a conceited winner; plays game hard, but fair, sees good points in other team.

9. SENSE OF VALUES—Respects his own property and the school's; is industrious; thrifty; and uses his time to the best advantage; values expert advice and opinions.

10. COMRADESHIP—Is cheerful and optimistic; tries to imitate the best; is not snobbish, but a friend to all; recognizes other students besides the "clique."

11. LEADERSHIP—Shows energy; sacrifices self for the sake of the task, works faithfully until task is finished; does not seek personal gain or honor.

12. PROMPTNESS—Gets assigned work in on time; is never tardy to class or school, begins class assignment promptly.

Pupils will be rated on the above habits and attitudes on the basis of a four point scale. The mark only records the teacher's impression of the student's behavior in respect to the qualities listed. It is impossible to assume what the inward intentions or motives might have been. The figures 1, 2, 3, 4 will carry meanings

HANDICAPS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I have thought sometimes that maybe the mountains which loomed up as a barrier before the eyes of the first settlers in this country were a challenge rather than a discouragement as they pushed their way westward first beyond the Alleghenies and then, as the challenge flung itself into their faces still more arrogantly, to the Pacific coast. The thought of conquering the heights stirred their blood, fired their curiosity and their pride, became in time an adventure. So, too, I have been sure at times that what at first sight seemed a physical or a mental barrier to success has acted only as an incentive to greater effort on the part of the young person upon whom the handicap has been laid.

Four years ago I had a letter from a boy in a country town in southern Illinois. He was just graduating from high school and was hesitating about trying to go further with his education. A nervous disease had seemed to put up for him an almost insuperable barrier. He walked with difficulty; his speech was halting and sometimes almost unintelligible; and he was sensitive as to his physical deficiencies. I had known another boy much like him, however, who had overcome his handicaps and had done well as a free lance writer, and I said so.

I met the boy a few weeks ago. He has graduated from a neighboring college, he has made honors, for him the handicap has proved only the challenge of the mountains which he has climbed.

A classmate of mine was almost blind. He could see objects only by getting his face close to them, yet he wanted to be a chemist. He went ahead as if there was nothing the matter. He used to go about the laboratory with the utmost nonchalance, sticking his face down into the mixtures which were brewing. He seemed never to have an explosion; nothing ever went wrong as far as we knew. He came to ignore the handicap, he received the degree of doctor of science in chemistry from an eastern institution, and is today one of the well-known commercial chemists of the country. Most people would have said at once that the thing which he accomplished was quite an impossible thing.

I had a letter from Ellis a few days ago. He has been blind from birth, but he has managed, without money and sightless as he is, to graduate from college, and now he has come up for an advanced degree and is going to teach in a recognized college. He is as cheerful as if he had his eyesight. One of the men who graduated from our college of engineering two years ago had been stone deaf since childhood. All the instruction he got was what he could pick up from reading the lips of his instructors. Yet he won honors in his engineering course; he was one of the most cheerful, happy boys whom I have ever known.

I sometimes think that a handicap is for many people a blessing in disguise.

by ANNA STEESE RICHARDSON

MRS. HOOVER'S quick wit and tact will stand her in good stead if she succeeds Mrs. Coolidge as first lady of the land. This incident proves the point.

Well known as are the Hoovers in Palo Alto and friendly though they have always been with the faculty and students at Stanford University, when Mr. Hoover returned to his old home in July, candidate for the highest office at the command of the American people, a natural chasm seemed to open up between him and his neighbors. In spite of bands and college songs and university yells, at sight of him there swept over the crowd a sudden realization that before them stood the man chosen by the Republican party to lead it to victory. The thought of his new responsibilities and his great opportunities gripped the welcoming crowd and it turned quiet.

In simple, direct language some one congratulated Mr. Hoover and told him how glad his old friends were to see him. With equal simplicity, Mr. Hoover replied that he was glad to be back.

Then, ensued silence until Mrs. Hoover stepped forward. She recalled that in their student days, just one phrase had been generally used at Stanford to express indecision as to the next move. She seized upon the old slogan:

"Well, do we ride or struggle?"

Shouts of laughter greeted the familiar question. The ice was broken. The awkward moment passed. The Hoover neighbors pressed forward to offer their congratulations.

There was something moving in the library, a soft footfall with it seemed to me, an irregularity. For all the world, like the dragging of a purrless useless foot, and—Livingstone was quietly releasing his grip of my hand. I made a clutch at him, and he whispered savagely:

"Let go, you fool!"

The next moment he had drawn his revolver, and was stealthily getting to his feet.

The dragging foot moved out into the hall. Livingstone, revolver in hand, was standing beside me and there was a quiet movement across the table. Cameron was apparently listening also; he made no comment however, and in the darkness and the silence the footsteps went into the hall and there ceased.

I had no idea of the passage of time; ten seconds or an hour Livingstone may have stood beside me. Ten seconds or an hour, and then Greenough's voice at the top of the staircase:

Livingstone moved then. He made a wild dash for the red lamp and turned it on. Hayward was not to be seen, and Halliday's revolver in hand was starting for the cabinet.

"More light," he called. "Light Quick!"

I had a confused impression of Halliday, jerking the curtains of the cabinet aside, of somebody else there with him, both on guard, as it were, at the wall; of some sort of rapid movement upstairs, of the door from the den into the hall being open where it had been closed before, and of a crash somewhere not far away, as of a falling body, followed by a sort of dreadful pause.

And all this is in the time it took me to get around the chairs and to the wall switch near the door. And it was then in the shocked silence which followed the sound of that fall, in the instant between my finding the switch and turning it on, that I will swear that I saw once more by the glow of the red lamp the figure at the foot of the stairs, looking up.

"Saw it and recognized it. Watched it turn toward me with fixed and staring eyes, felt the cold wind which suddenly eddied about me, and fancifully turning on the light, saw it fade like smoke into the empty air."

Behind the curtains of the cabinet somebody was working at the wall. Edith, very pale, was supporting Jane, who still remained in her strange, unto hypoxic condition. Livingstone's arm was about his wife.

And that was the picture when Greenough came running triumphantly down the stairs, the reward apparently in his pocket, and saw us there. He paid no attention to the rest of us, but stared at Livingstone with eyes which could not believe what they saw.

"Good God!" he said. "Then who is there?"

He pointed to the wall behind the cabinet.

Chapter III

The steps by which Halliday solved the murder at the main house, and with it the mystery which had preceded it, constitute an interesting story in themselves. So certain was he that by the time we were ready for the third sentence, his material was already in the hands of the district attorney. And it was not the material he had given to Greenough.

For the solution of a portion of the mystery, then one must go back to the main house, and consider the oldest part of it. It is well known that many houses of that period were provided with hidden passages, by which the owners hoped to escape the excise. Such an attempt, many years ago, had cost George Pierce his life.

But the passage leading from the old kitchen, now the den to a closet in the roof above it, had been blocked up for many years. The builder was dead; by all the laws of chance there might have gone on and the passage remained undiscovered.

In 1899, however, Eugenia Riggs

Worth makes the man and it is often figured in dollars and cents.

There are no shade trees and hammocks along he road to success.

bought the property, and in making repairs the old passage was discovered. Although she denied using it for fraudulent purposes, neither Halliday nor I doubt that she did so. She points to the plastered wall as her defense, but Halliday assures me that a portion of the baseboard, hinged to swing out, but locked from within, would have allowed easy access to the cabinet.

But Halliday had at the beginning no knowledge of this passage, with its ladder to the upper floor. He reached it by pure deduction.

"It had to be there," he says modestly. "And it was."

Up to the time young Gordon was attacked at the kitchen door, however, Halliday was frankly at sea. That is, he had certain suspicions, but that was all. He had discovered, for instance, that the cipher found in my garage was written on the same sort of bond paper as that used by Gordon, by the simple expedient of having Annie Cochran get him a sheet of it, on some excuse or other.

But his actual case began, I believe with that attack on Gordon. At least he began at that time definitely to associate the criminal with the house.

"There was something fishy about it," is the way he puts it.

And with Bethel's story to me, forced by his fear that the boy knew it was he who had attacked him, the belief that it was "fishy" gained ground.

"Gordon was knocked out," he says. "And that ought to have been enough. But it was not. He was tied, too, tied while he was still unconscious. Somebody wasn't taking a chance that he'd get back into the house very soon."

It was that "play for time," as he terms it, that made him suspicious.

All this time, of course he was ignorant of any underlying motive; he makes it clear that he simply began first to associate the crimes with the house, and then with Bethel. He kept going back to his copy of the unfinished letter, but:

"It didn't help much," he says quietly. "Only, there was murder indicated in it. And we were having murder."

He had three clues, two of them certain, one doubtful. The certain ones were the linen from the neck of the boat torn from a sheet belonging to the main house, and the small portion of the cipher. The one he was not certain about was the lens from an eyeglass, outside the culvert.

He began to watch the house; he "didn't get" Gordon in the situation at all; there was no situation there, really; nothing, that is, that he could lay his hand on. But on the night he called him and he started toward Robinson's point, as he came back toward the house he saw the figure of a man, certainly not Gordon, enter the house by the gunroom window. When he got there the window was closed, and locked.

He was puzzled. He looked around for me but I was not in sight. Still searching for me, he made a round of the house, and so was on the terrace when I fired the shot. From that time on he saw Bethel somehow connected with the mystery, but only as the brains.

"There was some devil's work about," he said. "But always I came up against that paralysis of his. He had to have outside help."

On the night in question, then, he was certain that this accomplice was still in the house through all that followed; through Hayward's arrival and Starr's. He was so certain by that time of Gordon's innocence that he very nearly took him into his confidence the next day. But he was afraid of the boy; he was not dependable; Halliday had an idea that "he was playing his own game."

But if this man was in the house that night, where was he?

He grew suspicious of the den after that, and he found out through Starr the name of the builder who had put in the paneling in the den, for Uncle Horace. It was a long story, but in the end he learned something.

Tearing the old baseboard prior to putting up the panels, the builder had happened on the old passage to the room overhead, and he had called Horace Porter's attention to it. It seems to have appealed to the poor old chap; it belonged, somehow, to the room, with the antique stuff he was putting into it. He built in a sliding panel; it was not a particularly skillful piece of work, but it answered. And he kept his secret, at least from me.

I doubt if he ever used it, until prohibition came in. Then, no drinker himself, he put there a small and choice supply of liquor, some of which we found later on. And one bottle of which placed Halliday in peril of his life, a day or so after that night I had fired the shot into the hall.

He had borrowed Annie Cochran's key to the kitchen door, and after midnight entered the house and went to the den. Although he is reticent about this portion of it, I gather that the house was not all it should be that night.

"You know the sort of thing," he says.

But, pressed as to that, he admits that he was hearing small and inexplorable sounds from the library. Chairs seemed to move, and once he was certain that the curtain in the doorway behind him blew out into the room. When he looked back over his shoulder, however, it was hanging as before.

He had no trouble in finding the panel, and as carefully as he could he stepped inside. But he had touched one of the bottles and it fell over. "It didn't make much noise," he says, "but it was enough. He was awake, and paralysis or no paralysis I hadn't time to move before he was in the closet overhead, and opening the trap in the floor."

He had not had time to move, and even if he had, there were the infernal bottles all around him. So he stood without breathing, waiting for he knew not what.

"Things looked pretty poor," he says. "I didn't know when he'd strike a match and see me. And it was good night if he did!"

But Bethel had no match, evidently. He stood listening intently, and in the darkness below Halliday held his breath and waited. Then Bethel moved. He left the trap door above open and went for a light, and Halliday crawled out and closed the panel quietly.

From that time on, however, he knew Bethel was no more helpless than he was. He abandoned the idea of an accomplice, and concentrated on the man himself.

Annie Cochran was working with him; that is, she did what he asked her, although she seems not to have known at any time the direction in which he was working. Her own mind was already made up; she believed Gordon to be guilty. She made no protest, however, when he asked her to break Mr. Bethel's spectacles one early morning, and give him the fragments. But she did it, pretending afterward that she had thrown the pieces into the stove.

Bethel was watchful and suspicious by that time, and she had a bad time of it, but what is important here is that Halliday took the fragments into the city, and established beyond a doubt that they and the piece of a lens found near the culvert were made from the same prescription.

And he had no more than made his discovery, when Gordon, attempting at last the blackmail which he had been threatening, was put out of the way as quickly and ruthlessly as had been poor Peter Carroway.

"Twenty-four hours," Halliday says bitterly, "and we would have saved him."

But twenty-four hours later Bethel had made good his escape, and everything was apparently over.

But from that time Bethel as Bethel ceased to exist for Halliday.

He was not working alone, however. Very early, he had realized that he needed assistance, real assistance. Annie Cochran's help was always of the below-stairs order. And he found the help he wanted after the night Gordon was attacked. In Hayward, as a matter of fact, it was Hayward who went to him.

"He was worried about you. Skip per," Halliday says with a grin. "He considered it quite possible that the attempt to wrangle English literature into too many brain corals might have driven you slightly mad."

On the night, then, when Gordon was hurt, the doctor was impulsively on his way to Halliday and the boat-house.

"He came within an inch of having you locked up that night," says Halliday.

Later on, he did go to Halliday, and Halliday then and there enlisted him in his service. He was no shrewd, but he was willing and earnest, and from that time on he was useful. He had started, presumably, on his vacation but actually on a very different errand, when the murder at the main house occurred, and Halliday recalled him by wire.

But when he returned, it was at Halliday's request, to hide in the Livingstone house. It was from there that he came, at night, to assist Halliday in guarding the main house.

One perceives, of course, that the Livingstones had been brought into the case. Drugged in, is the way Halliday puts it. But after the first conference between the doctor and him self they were in it, willy nilly.

"Who," Halliday asked Hayward, referring to his copy of my Uncle Horace's letter, "were likely to have access to Horace Porter at night?"

"No one, so far as I know. The Livingstones, possibly."

"Then the man who came in while he was writing this letter might have been Livingstone?"

"He was ill that night. I was with him."

"Then Livingstone's out," said Halliday, and turned in a new direction.

"Some theory, some wickedness, was put up to him. And it horrified and alarmed him. A man doesn't present such a theory without leading up to it. Let's try this: what subject was most interesting Horace Porter during the last years, or months, of his life?"

"Spiritism, I imagine. I know he was working on it."

"Alone? A man doesn't work that sort of thing alone, as a rule."

"I'll ask Mrs. Livingstone. If you like. She may know."

And ask the Livingstones he did, with the result that Halliday got his first real clue, and elaborated the daring theory which culminated in that fatal fall from the ladder. In the secret passage on the tragic night of the 10th of September.

All this time, of course, it remained only a theory. Hayward scouted it at first, but came to it later on; the Livingstones offered a more difficult problem.

HOOVER SAVED GERMAN YOUTH

Congressman Newton Tells of His Determined Efforts in Their Behalf.

ST. LOUIS.—A stirring tribute to Hoover's post-war activities on behalf of the suffering people of Germany and Austria is contained in a booklet just published here, prepared by former Congressman Cleveland A. Newton of Missouri.

"For eight years in Congress, I fought for food relief and the return of alien property to distressed people in Germany and Austria," said Mr. Newton. "I did this not because they were Germans or Austrians but because it was just. I would do the same for the French, the Belgians or the Russians. I believe in a square deal."

"I have personal knowledge of the great service rendered by Herbert Hoover to the suffering people of Central Europe, especially children. Hoover's answer to allied statesmen and others who objected to sending foodstuffs to the famished populations of Germany and Austria was: 'We were never at war with women and children!'"

"When my post-war proposals for sending food to starving Central Europe were up before the Congressional Committee, it was suggested that Hoover, America's food expert, be called. One may imagine my joy and delight as I listened for one hour to the forceful, masterly, unanswerable presentation which Hoover made in favor of relief for the suffering, hungry and starving people."

Colleges Favor Hoover

If college straw votes are indicative of the sentiment of the American people, then Herbert Hoover will go into the White House with an overwhelming popular majority. A straw vote at the Juniata College the other day showed the following results: Hoover, 35; Smith, 33; Will Rogers, 2. The faculty gave Hoover eighteen votes and Smith two.—Harrisburg (Pa.) Telegraph.

Send for Hoover!

U. S. Democracy's Guardian

As America a century and a half ago announced to mankind the great spiritual ideal of democratic government, so today the fate of that ideal for many generations to come must rest in the hands of the people of the United States.—Herbert Hoover.

PROTECTION FOR FARM PRODUCTS IS VITAL ISSUE

Republican Text Book Points Out How Tariff Has Helped Nation's Agriculture.

REVIEWS HOOVER-FARM PLAN

First Section of New Campaign Document Deals With Basic Farm Problems.

WASHINGTON.—The American farmer under Republican administration has had practically a monopoly of his home market. In this protected market, he disposes of 95 per cent of his products at prices higher than are paid elsewhere in the world for like products. This is pointed out in the Republican campaign textbook.

The complete book is being printed in installments of which the first is devoted entirely to agriculture, and includes pertinent extracts from Herbert Hoover's acceptance address, the agricultural plank of the Kansas City platform and other pertinent data relative to the farm situation.

In addition to this, there is a recital of the Republican party's constructive legislation in behalf of agriculture since 1920, a provision intended to show that the promises now being made to the farmers by Mr. Hoover and Senator Curtis spring from a sympathetic attitude and therefore will be fulfilled in good faith by the Republicans.

The problems of agriculture are treated from an economic rather than a political viewpoint, and emphasis is laid on the freedom from economic fallacies of the agricultural legislation already passed by Republican congresses which includes 24 measures since March, 1921.

"Republican legislation in behalf of agricultural producers has been formulated with a view of its having permanent value and being founded in sound political economy and good sense," says the textbook. "The control of every Republican Congress has been in the hands of those representing agricultural constituencies. So it has been logical and inevitable that the interests of agriculture have been conserved by the Republican party."

Loan Banks Aid Farmers

Since 1921 there has been made available to agricultural borrowers under Republican administrations a total of $2,774,198,040, chiefly through the federal farm loan banks, the joint stock land banks, the intermediate credit banks and the war finance corporation. This recapitulation does not take into account such organizations as the Agricultural Credit Corporation, organized in 1924 to relieve an agricultural crisis in the northwest, and the development of federal warehousing as an aid to marketing under the amended Federal Warehousing Act.

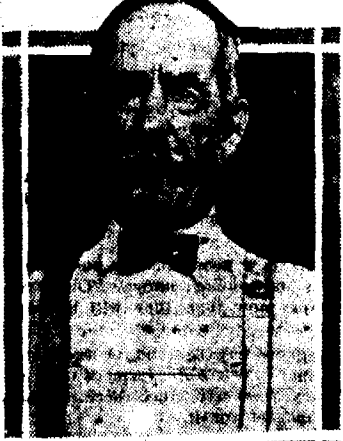

In the same period, under a Republican tariff which protects more agricultural products than any in history, the farm price of wheat has increased 30 per cent; rye, 20 per cent; corn, 70 per cent; oats, 30 per cent; barley, 60 per cent; flaxseed, 27 per cent; beef cattle, 80 per cent; calves, 60 per cent; butter, 15 per cent; hogs, 25 per cent; sheep, 80 per cent; lambs, 2 1/2 per cent; wool, 100 per cent.

The fallacy of arbitrary methods for assessing the spread between the producer and the ultimate consumer, such as are advocated by the 1928 Democratic platform, is pointed out. They would necessarily result in price-fixing, and inevitably the 85,000,000 agricultural consumers would be fixing the price they desired to pay the 38,000,000 agricultural producers.

"Such a proposal is abhorrent to the spirit of American institutions," says the textbook. "It is the very essence of state socialism in that it would completely eliminate the element of individual initiative and enterprise with their commensurate individual reward."

Mr. Hoover's suggestions for the improvement of the farm situation, are reviewed, particularly the emphasis he has laid upon the need for development of the home market, rather than experimental attempts to increase shipments of our agricultural products to foreign countries.

Community Building

Keep Moving, or Fall

Behind, Natural Law

There is much food for thought for every community in this short editorial from the Kansas City Star:

The talk of W. H. Manss at the chamber of commerce luncheon was not the kind of thing to make Kansas City satisfied with itself. But it was the kind of thing that ought to make Kansas City think.

A community, like an individual, often needs to be shaken out of itself. Kansas City needs just that treatment now. The city has been content to rest too long on past achievements and to assume that its natural advantages and its facilities already acquired would, in some automatic, mysterious fashion, bring it growth and prosperity. But the city has learned, or ought to have learned by this time, that such an attitude is fatal to community progress.

It can't be every fellow for himself, first and last, if a community is to go forward. Individual citizens, civic and political groups that fall into the habit of placing their own imagined welfare ahead of anything and everything advanced for the good of the city will find after a while that they, as well as the community, have suffered. Mr. Manss has struck at the heart of Kansas City's problem. It is a test of the community's mettle. What will be the response?

Indiana Women Plan

Flower-Lined Roads

Plans of the 656 women's clubs in Indiana to plant larkspur, hollyhock, ivy, myrtle, honeysuckle and other perennial flora along all state and federal highways not only will make Indiana's roads pleasing to the senses, but will serve a very useful purpose. Vines and plants on sloping roadsides will hold the earth, preventing erosion and the slipping of dirt onto the pavements, and on new construction in a short space of time will hide the scars of contractors' shovels.

Indiana has a state forest at Henryville, 20 miles north of Louisville, where all shrubs and trees native to Indiana are cultivated. From this huge nursery are to be obtained saplings and flowering shrubs which the state highway department has promised to set out, in co-operation with the conservation commission and the club women.

Imagine the delight of traveling for miles on good highways bordered with colorful and fragrant blossoms! It would seem like fairyland. But, having planted their flowers, the next task of the club women will be to teach the city tourists not to pick them, or to transplant shrubs to tubs to set out on the fire escape.—Indianapolis Star.

Don't Paint on Wet Wood

Home builders who wish to obtain the best results possible in painting the siding and other exterior woodwork of their homes should be careful not to apply the priming coat to wet wood. If the wood has been exposed to rain or has become soaked with water from some other cause, the first coat of paint should not be put on until the wood has had a chance to dry out. Otherwise, a very unsatisfactory paint job may result. The paint may become chalky, peel off, blister or show discoloration.

If the first coat is put on while the wood is dry, a satisfactory paint job should result. No matter how much rain strikes the wood after it has received its priming coat, the moisture will not penetrate the paint film and will soon evaporate, leaving the paint in suitable condition for the second coat.

Label the Garden

In many gardens where a great number of varieties of flowers and vegetables are grown it is necessary to know just where each flower is located as each has a treatment of its own. Garden labels then must be resorted to unless a map is made of the garden, which is not as advisable. There is a new label on the market to take the place of the unsightly wood sticks, a metal card holder made of special rust-proof iron, galvanized and finished in dark green. To designate a special plant, the card is removed and marked, then replaced and covered with a piece of mica which makes it weatherproof.

Support for Roof

Roof permanence depends as much upon what holds up the roof as it does upon the surface exposed to the elements. A roof framed with 2 by 6 rafters spaced 16 inches apart and not spanning a distance greater than 10 feet, and which are not set at an angle less than 45 degrees, will be strong enough to support heavy roofing such as tile and slate. If a roof is wider, or if the angle at the peak is greater, rafters should be sturdier.

Use Materials That Last

Before building a home, be sure of each step. One of the best ways to avoid heavy upkeep costs is to strangle them at their birth. Be ruthless about that. Cut, slash, slay. Get the kind of materials that will endure. Endless bills for painting or renewing wall coverings which crack or fall off are unnecessary.

Grazed Woodlot Doomed to Death

Furnishes Poor Pasture and Forest Is Headed for Childless Old Age.

"If grazing is permitted continuously to a woodlot, it is doomed to a childless old age and death," declared Prof. Samuel N. Spring of the forestry department at Cornell university speaking at Farm and Home week at Ithaca, N. Y., on the dangers and losses from grazing done by farm stock in woodlots.

"In the long run, grazing is more destructive to hardwood forests on New York state farms than is any form of commercial logging. Forests may indeed deteriorate under careless cutting, but if fire and grazing are kept out, a new growth at least of some appreciable value results. No such hope can be extended to woodlots continually grazed.

"Little seedlings that spring up naturally in the forest are the next generation of timber trees. Grazing animals browse broad-leaved trees back to the ground and, in the case of conifers, they browse off shoots and needles as well and trample and deform the little evergreens. Of course, a few may escape but not enough grow up to prevent woodlot 'race suicide.'

Hopeless Woodlot.

"A heavily grazed woodlot was given an apt name by an investigator in Ohio some years ago, who classed it as the 'hopeless woodlot' in which mature trees, defective culls and weed trees formed the stand and grass was on the ground beneath. He struck a keynote when he stated that if the owner tries to combine pasture and woodlot neither will be first class, but if the owner divides them he will have both a good pasture and an excellent woodlot.

"Grazing slowly but surely changes conditions more rapidly if many animals occupy the woodlot. The soil is trampled and packed, roots of shallow-rooted trees become exposed, and as mature and overmature trees come down or are cut with none to replace them the litter disappears and grass replaces it. These grasses grow in the partial shade lack nutritive value and steal food and moisture from the trees. As the forest grows more open the wind may uproot trees and there are no younger ones to fill the gap, and so the process goes on. The ground loses fertility being robbed of its litter that releases plant food in decaying.

Losses Are Larger.

"Grazing of woodlots is beneficial from the owner's standpoint in furnishing shade to the animals and some food, but he loses the possibility of good returns from the woodlots, in exchange for relatively small benefits. A common-sense procedure would be to fence off the woodlot excepting such a portion as will afford the shelter required. The owner should decide what proportion he needs for wood production and manage it as intensively as he would any other crop.

"The question naturally arises whether a woodlot will come back after being grazed. There are plenty of examples. At Cornell in the management of the university woodlots an experiment in shutting out grazing from a part of a woodlot and permitting grazing in adjoining parts has been in progress for a little more than ten years. Conditions have steadily improved in the protected portion and skillful cuttings have given rise to a growth of useful young trees which will form the basis for a new crop as mature trees are removed in the future. The grazed part has steadily deteriorated in marked contrast to the part protected."

First Year Alfalfa Is Preferred for Pasture

Results reported from experiment stations where sweet clover and alfalfa were used for hog pasture have been compared indicate that the alfalfa is to be preferred. Sweet clover makes a fairly good substitute for the alfalfa during the first year of grazing. If it is kept grazed rather closely during the second year the crop is apt to become too woody and starchy to make satisfactory hog pasture. Experiments indicate that alfalfa, rape or alsike clover are all to be preferred to sweet clover as a hog pasture.

Agricultural Hints

Skim milk is much better than water for growing chicks.

Any fire in the woods, no matter how small, represents a loss.

Because of high prices of dairy cows, many more heifer calves are being raised than normally.

This is a good time to purchase a team of young horses. They are cheaper now than they will be soon.

Legume hay is a better cash crop for many New York farmers than ordinary grass hay, since there is a better market for it.

A number of insects, such as the white grubs, wireworms, and cutworms, are always present in sod. They frequently destroy corn and other row crops.

Von Elm Sets Record

George Von Elm set a new course record at Newport in the opening play of the gold masher tournament on T. Saffern Talfer's private golf course. Ocean links. Von Elm equaled the course record for nine holes with a 32 and broke the record for 18 holes with a 65.

Florence Trumbull

Returning from Europe, Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of the governor of Connecticut, virtually admitted that she expected to be married to John Coolidge, son of the President, some time next winter. She said the wedding would not be until after Christmas as "John has got to work and earn some money."

The dentist might not have such a pull if he were expected to act as a real drawing master.

Sault Ste. Marie—Pulling the trigger of a single-barrel shotgun with his toe, Ed Doherty, 25 years old, father of three children, committed suicide here. His widow and friends are unable to give any reason for the act. The man had slept until late in the afternoon. In his nightgown he had come down to the kitchen, where the shotgun was kept. A moment later his wife heard a shot and found him. He had removed the slipper off one foot to pull the trigger with his toe.

Lansing—Michigan's primary school fund this year reached $20,583,851.98 the largest amount ever collected by the State. Of this amount $788,645.87 represents the balance of 1926 and $802,824.72 the balance of 1927, while regular collections this year reached $18,992,281.39. The increase in the 1928 fund over that of previous years was caused by the heavy tax paid by large corporations, O. E. Fuller, auditor-general, said. Corporations paid a greater part of the State tax last year than ever before.

Flint—The note in a bottle, cast up by the sea near Aberdeen, Wash., purporting to give a last message from Miss Mildred Doran Flint girl, who was lost with two companions a year ago in a flight to Hawaii, is not genuine, in the opinion of William E. Doran, brother of the missing girl. Doran received the note by air mail from Aberdeen. He said an examination showed the writing was not his sister's. The note said "we have been floating days and days on the wing of the ship and are without food and water." It was signed "M. Doran."

Bay City—Francis Staphish, 10 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Staphish, was drowned at Water Works park here and his sister, Gertrude, 13 years old, who was with him narrowly escaped death in attempting to aid her brother. The two children were swimming in a pool with the aid of an old automobile inner tube. The boy lost his hold and the sister attempted to aid him. She was taken from the water, unconscious, but was revived.

Lansing—After having received 4,200 volts of electrical current through his body, Julius Becker, 21 years old, of Greenville, is in a Lansing hospital apparently sure of recovery. He is suffering from severe body burns but physicians say they will not prove fatal. He came in contact with the high voltage transmission wire near Howell, where he was at work for the State Highway Department. He is the son of Mrs. Frederick Becker, of Greenville.

If it took an experienced admiral 10 years to discover that gobs are called gobs, he will probably never know what gobs call admirals.

MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO.

Long Distance Rates Are Surprisingly Low

For Instance:

for $ 240

or less, between 4:30 a. m. and 7:00 p. m.

You can call the following points and talk for THREE MINUTES for the rates shown. Rates to other points are proportionately low.

FROM EAST JORDAN TO:	Day Station-to-Station Rate
Cincinnati, Ohio	$2.05
Des Moines, Iowa	2.30
Evansville, Ind.	2.40
Louisville, Ky.	2.30
Marietta, Ohio	2.20
Springfield, Ill.	2.10
St. Louis, Mo.	2.40

The rates quoted are Station-to-Station Day rates, effective 4:30 a. m. to 7:00 p. m. Evening Station-to-Station rates are effective 7:00 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. and Night Station-to-Station rates, 8:30 p. m. to 4:30 a. m.

A Station-to-Station call is one made to a certain telephone rather than to some person in particular.

If you do not know the number of the distant telephone, give the operator the name and address and specify that you will talk with "anyone" who answers at the called telephone.

A Person-to-Person call, because more work is involved, costs more than a Station-to-Station call. The rate on a Person-to-Person call is the same at all hours.

Additional rate information can be secured by calling the Long Distance operator.

HEALTH AND A HAPPY HOME LIFE.

Health makes for happiness in the home, not sickness. So when Mrs. A. G. Wells, Rocky Mount, N. C., suspected that her physical distress and tired out feeling resulted from disturbed kidney and bladder action, she tried Foley Pills diuretic, then wrote: "I am so happy over my regained health. Please publish this statement that people everywhere may know the wonderful benefit I have derived from the use of Foley Pills diuretic."—Hite's Drug Store, adv.

A message to the editor of this paper from GENERAL MOTORS

JUST about a year ago we published, in your advertising columns, a message in which we sought to give you and your readers an idea of what General Motors is and what it is trying to accomplish. At that time the public was purchasing our cars at the rate of about one in every three; and our Frigidaire automatic refrigerator and Delco-Light electric plants were leading in popular preference in their respective fields.

Since then each of our car divisions has introduced new, further improved models and public patronage has reached the point where almost one out of two automobiles purchased is a General Motors car. Frigidaire and Delco-Light products have showed comparable increases in sales.

The reason for this is two-fold. First, the public wants value for its automobile dollar and recognizes value when it is given. Second, General Motors is seeking so to conduct its operations as to deserve the goodwill of the public.

We are particularly impressed with the number of letters which have come to us from editors of small city newspapers during recent months. These editors, who are in a position to reflect local sentiment, speak of the goodwill which attaches to General Motors in their communities and express an obviously sincere appreciation of the character of General Motors' advertising in their publications.

For our advertising has been as much concerned with giving your readers facts of helpfulness to them in the purchase of automobiles as with the merits of our own products. Our messages have set forth the principles of trade-in transactions and used car allowances. They have dealt with time payments and the change in the public's attitude toward the used car. Other messages have told of the policies of General Motors and of how our resources are being employed to effect them.

That General Motors enjoys the goodwill of the people in the small cities and on the farms of America gives us an especial satisfaction and confidence in the future. It is in the country sections of the United States that half our population lives. It is there that the whole industry must look in increasing measure for maintenance of the production volume upon which high values and low prices depend. And it is there that General Motors is paying particular attention to its facilities for sales and service.

To our friends in your community we express our thanks.

Mt. Clemens—The board of education here has decided that all high school girls should have "it," interpreted as an attractiveness which includes grace, posture, and poise. Miss Hildegard Leitow, of Mt. Clemens, has started classes for girls in esthetic and social dancing. In the grades both the boys and the girls will be taught the terpsichorean art, but in the high school only the girls will be admitted to the "charmed circle."

Grand Rapids—Two armed bandits tossed pepper into the eyes of Stanley Malinowski, 37-year-old grocer, after leaping on the running board of his automobile and robbed him of $3,376. The money was being taken to Malinowski's store where he had for many years cashed pay checks of nearby mine employes. The grocer was so distressed by the pepper that he was unable to explain the hold-up for some time after the bandits escaped in an automobile driven by a companion.

Sault Ste. Marie—Three children from this city have been taken to the Pasteur Institute at Ann Arbor, three adults bitten by a mad dog are receiving serum treatments here, one baby bitten by a cat believed afflicted with rabies is under treatment, and city health and police departments are making every effort to destroy animals suspected of being afflicted. An emergency city ordinance has been drafted providing for the inoculation or destruction of all dogs in Sault Ste. Marie.

Grand Rapids—Escape of 38 prisoners from a second floor cell block at the Kent County Jail recently was prevented when Sheriff Byron J. Patterson and four deputies found a hack saw frame and 22 blades hidden in a bunk occupied by one of the prisoners. The investigation that led to the discovery of the saws was prompted by a telephone call received from an unidentified person, who explained his attention had been attracted to a man who had been seen loitering about the jail.

Menominee—Twenty-seven dairy cattle in five herds in the vicinity of Labranche, Menominee County, have died mysteriously of poisoning and as many more are being treated for poisoning. The poisoned cattle are scattered through a belt four miles wide and the source of the poison has not been traced. C. E. Skiver, Menominee County farm agent and Dr. K. F. Hanson, state veterinarian, are making an investigation. The State Police have been assigned to assist in the investigation.

Midland—Midland officers are endeavoring to find the man who has a hobby of wrecking threshing machines in the southern part of the county. Two machines, operating on Midland County farms have been damaged, in one case by the placing of a horseshoe in a bundle of oats and the other the throwing of a bolt in the machinery. During the same time two mysterious farm fires have occurred in the same locality, a dwelling and a barn having been destroyed. The trouble is attributed to a war of rival threshermen.

Sandusky—Although 2,500 residents of Sanilac County petitioned the Conservation Commission to close their county to Sunday hunting under the discretionary power law and were backed in their proposal by Director Hogarth, the commissioners refused to issue the order. At present Sanilac County is entirely surrounded by counties where Sunday hunting is prohibited and fears a tremendous influx of hunters that day unless the commission acted. The commissioners stated that this was a matter for the Legislature.

ENTHUSIASM

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

AND whatsoever you do, do it heartily," the Apostle Paul admonished the Colossians, and he added another touch—"as unto the Lord." We are to be enthusiastic in our work and this enthusiasm is to have behind it a moral purpose.

There is an undergraduate election on this afternoon and Kenney is running for office. The job he hopes to hold is not one which involves great issues or unusual responsibility, but it has something of both and besides a modicum of honor. He beams when he comes around, he has great ambitions as to the reforms he will institute if he is elected, he has planned his campaign intelligently, and he is no indifferent candidate. He has "chosen" to run, and he buttonholes every possible voter on every street corner. He has his manager and his committees and his headquarters. Just as if he were an honest-to-goodness politician. Probably he will win, for, having enthusiasm himself, he has inspired enthusiasm in his followers, and there is nothing more infectious than enthusiasm.

Norton is a philanthropist. He had a very hard time himself in college. He was slow in grasping abstract principles and he was absolutely on his own resources. He stuck to the job, however, for he had an enthusiastic interest in the problems of engineering which during the forty years he has been out of college has carried him far. He has made money and being of a generous turn of mind he wants to help other boys who show promise and who need help. Every year he has the high school principal pick out a boy who has done well in his preparatory work and without the boy's knowing where the help comes from sends him to college. The understanding is that the recipient of his favor shall make a report twice a year to the high school principal.

He wrote me the other day that he had not heard for some time from one of his proteges and he was curious to know why. Could I tell him? It was not a difficult job. The boy had started in enthusiastically at first and had done well. Here was a great chance which he had never expected to have given him. But his job was not easy; he lost interest, his enthusiasm waned, and when I talked to him he had quite made up his mind to rest on his oars; to give up the struggle and let matters take their course. Enthusiasm was gone, and so failure faced him. Unless his interest could be stimulated, unless he could go at his work joyfully, there was no hope of success.

Youth has had little experience, but it undertakes very difficult tasks at times and carries them with amazing success. It overrides difficulties because whatever it undertakes voluntarily it usually undertakes with great enthusiasm. If behind this enthusiasm there is an idea of accomplishing something of benefit to others as well as to himself, something that will help the world, there is no stopping him.

Moon Cooled Rapidly

The moon, like the earth and other planets, was once a very hot body, as indicated by the volcanoes and eruptions seen on its surface. However, it cooled much more rapidly than the earth because of two things: it lacked the protecting blanket of atmosphere that helped the earth to retain its heat, and because it is much smaller than the earth.

Big Trucks—Motor Busses—
Passenger Cars by the Thousand—Wide Concrete Roads!

Experience counts when roads must be paved for heavy traffic. Last year, the mileage of portland cement concrete pavements built on state highway systems of the United States was more than three times the mileage of all other pavements.

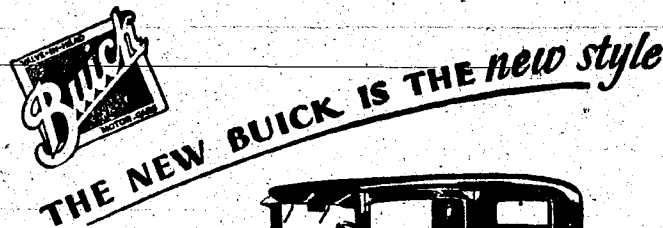

It is significant that the largest mileage of concrete roads was built by those states having the heaviest traffic, and the most experience in road building.
