NUMBER 32

Points On Consolidation

MANY ARE THE REASONS WHY IT SHOULD BE ENDORSED.

When the matter of school consolidation was approved by the Department of Education at Lansing, and a date was set for voting, an article in the Charlevoix County Herald requested that all who had questions in mind ask them of some responsible party. The questions that have been asked indicate that the people of East Jordan and outlying districts are alert, keen in their thinking, and alive to the problems of the best education for the youth of today, who are the citizens of tomorrow.

All who have asked questions have been answered so far as it is humanly possible to do so. This article is for the purpose of setting forth the nature of the more important questions that have been asked, and the answers to them. This is a matter on which all are entitled to the fullest possible information, and it is a wholesome sign to see the eagerness with which questions have been asked, and the readiness to answer them.

FINANCE? The official annual report of the East Jordan District made by an disinterested certified auditor appears in another column of this week's issue. Ass't Supt. of Public Instruction, B. J. Ford, who has to pass judgment upon all consolidation projects, has said that with its buildings and financial condition East Jordan offers the best financial situation for consolidation of such project in the State.

The tax rate, if consolidation is effected, should be between $17 and $18 per thousand valuation next year, and after that it should be lower. (See signed statement of East Jordan Board in another column.)

ROADS? How do we know that the roads will be kept open for the busses? The State would not permit an election on consolidation until satisfied as to this. Mr. Ford was assured by Grover C. Dillman, State Highway Commissioner that the State would back the County Road Commissioners in keeping M-66 open to East Jordan for at least 10 miles. The County Road Commissioners assure us that the road from the Mountain district, through the Three Bell district will be kept open to East Jordan. These are the long routes. Assurances have been given by the proper authorities that the shorter roads necessary to the success of the consolidation will be kept open. This does not mean that during the midst of a severe blizzard the roads will be open. There have been days in East Jordan when school was closed during a blizzard. It does mean that children will have access to school fully as much of the time as under present conditions, and doubtless more of the time. The County is increasing its fencing by 100 per cent. The local district, in its prospective budget, has provision for fencing. The local district, the county and the State are back of the enterprise of keeping the roads open that are needed for the busses.

BUSSES? The State will give $400 per year toward the expense of each bus, and practically the same amount for each two sub-busses. The bus drivers must be of dependable character and will be chosen by the School Board of the consolidated district, the State having a veto upon all appointments. In case of threatening storm the busses will take the children home before there is danger of being stalled. In case of a bus being delayed, the children will not be counted tardy.

QUALITY OF THE SCHOOL. The tax rate can be reduced considerably by lowering the quality of the school. But the East Jordan School is rated as A No. 1 and it should be kept so. A graduate of the East Jordan school can without examination enter any college in Michigan, or the State University, or any College or University in the 22 States included in the North Central Association. The vocational departments are (1) Commercial; (2) Home Economics; (3) Manual Training; (4) Agriculture; (5) Music.

SCHOOL BOARD. If consolidation is voted, all the members of the present School Boards resign, and legal notice will be given for an election to select a new Board. At this election all qualified members of the new unit are entitled to vote. This meeting can elect whom it pleases, but there is a strong sentiment that two members ought to be elected from what is now known as the outlying districts.

INCIDENTAL BENEFITS? It is impossible to state all the incidental benefits of consolidation. Some of the most conspicuous are: (1) better roads. This is especially appreciated when a doctor is needed in winter time. (2) The High School pupils can be at home every night. (3) A larger and a finer community spirit.

(4) More expert assistance possible for the farmers along the lines of their particular problems. (5) An increasing understanding of the value and of the dignity of farm life and work. (6) A warm school cafeteria lunch will be provided during the winter at about actual cost of the food.

TIME OF ELECTION? Next Tuesday, August 13th, from 10:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m. central standard time.

PLACE OF ELECTION? The rural school districts all vote at the South Arm Town Hall. The School Commissioners of the two interested counties determined this. The East Jordan district votes at the local high school building.

WHO IS ENTITLED TO VOTE? All tax paying citizens, and all parents or guardians of children of school age. School age is from five to nineteen, inclusive.

State Dep't Endorses

CONSOLIDATION OF RURAL DISTRICTS, GIVING REASONS.

The article below on reasons for consolidation was sent by the Department of Education, Lansing, Mich., along with other material on the above question early this spring. It does not apply to any particular location or proposition and it is therefore all the more valuable. The statements are conclusions drawn from long actual experiences by the State Department in this and other States.

RURAL AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS

Rural school education is one of the big problems of today. The "little red schoolhouse" has played an important part in the history of Michigan and of the country as a whole, but with the development in other lines it is no longer adequate for present needs.

The country boy and girl of today are not enjoying the same educational privileges as their more fortunate cousins in the town or city. This is unfair, especially in an agricultural State like Michigan. The remedy is to be found in large part in rural school consolidation.

What the consolidated school will do for the community:

1. It gives an opportunity for a four year high school course for every child in the school district.
2. It makes it possible for parents to have the direct care and supervision of their children who are pursuing high school work during the critical years of their life, when the formation of moral and social habits are so easily affected by environment.
3. It provides for fewer classes for each teacher so that each pupil may have the amount of attention that he should have in order to develop his intellectual abilities.
4. It makes possible the securing of better trained and experienced teachers.
5. It insures a higher percentage of school attendance.
6. It insures a larger enrollment of children of school age within the district.
7. It provides educational conditions so that the children may grow up under the influence of the ideals of a farm home.
8. It provides for a course of study that may include agriculture, sewing, cooking, manual training, music and drawing.
9. It furnishes a more stable basis for financing the school district.
10. It provides a place to foster and promote community ideals.
11. It becomes a meeting-place for farmers' clubs, women's clubs, community clubs, literary societies, and lyceum courses.
12. It prevents needless expense due to duplication of school apparatus and equipment.
13. It usually provides for a longer term of school.
14. It insures a better working library.
15. It adds dignity, character, and force to rural education.

Rural education is not local in its scope. It goes to the very basis of our democracy. It concerns every individual in this country. There must be no difference in the opportunity of one class of our boys and girls from that of another class. Both must have an opportunity to face the world unhampered with educational limitations inherited from another day under other conditions. The consolidated school is the best solution of the problem of rural education yet advanced.

What the State will do for the Rural Agricultural Consolidated School
1. It will pay $400 per year for each vehicle used for transportation.
2. It will pay $1,000 per year toward maintenance.

Dairyman's Picnic, Wednesday

CHARLEVOIX CO. DAIRYMEN MEET AT WHITING PARK.

The Annual Dairy Picnic will be held at Whiting Park on Wednesday, Aug. 14. This is the one day in the entire year that the dairymen of Charlevoix County can meet, play and learn together.

This event is sponsored and arranged by the Charlevoix County Cow-Testing Association, an organization that has operated for six consecutive years and assisted more than any other agency, the dairy progress and development that we are glad to note from year to year.

We want you to enjoy the day, so the program will be short and snappy but full of meat.

It will be featured by the presence of a Dairy Extension Specialist from Michigan State College, who will give the main talk. Then you will be interested in the report of last year's Cow-Test Association summary. Hear what the 300 cows have been doing. Archie Bedell, Tester, will give the interesting results that the dairymen have derived. Several others will also appear.

Get your arm warmed up for there will be a real ball game. Games and sports will be indulged in to satisfy your fun loving disposition.

And say don't forget to bring that well-filled lunch basket and enjoy it at noon. Whiting Park is well equipped to take care of picnickers, so come early. This is your day to enjoy. Come, play and learn.

WILL DEMONSTRATE POULTRY CULLING IN THE COUNTY

This is the time of year that all poultrymen should be thinking of weeding out their unprofitable layers. August and September are the two months during the year that the most accurate culling can be done.

In order to show farmers how to properly cull their flocks, two culling demonstrations will be held on Tuesday, Aug. 13th, with J. A. Hannak of the Michigan State College present.

The first will be at the farm of Hiram Potter, located one-half mile east of Barnard on Tuesday forenoon Aug. 13th, beginning at 10:00 fast time, and the second, at the Breezy Point Farm, Ironton, on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 13, beginning at 2:00 fast time.

Do you cull out around 60 or 70% of your flock every year and replace them with pullets in order to maintain profitable production? If you are not, you are keeping too many unprofitable hens during the heavy feeding months. It is perfectly easy to cull your flock after seeing the demonstration.

You will be surprised and amazed to discover that the hen tells all she knows about herself, if you only know the points to look for.

We are hoping to see you on Tuesday, Aug. 13 at one of the demonstrations.

HENDERSON STOCK CO. NOW PLAYING AT TEMPLE THEATRE

The Henderson Stock Co., is playing its annual summer engagement at the Temple Theatre this week, putting on good comedies and vaudeville at "way low" prices. Special scenery is carried for every play and a complete change of program at every performance. The list of plays for the balance of the week are as follows:

Friday night, the feature, play of the week—"The Amazing Trial of Billy Wells."

Saturday afternoon, at 2:30—"Little Orphan Annie."

Saturday night, the screaming farce comedy—"What Happened to Kelly."

Saturday night a live pig will be given away to the lady or gentleman who will go on the stage and catch it. Matinee prices 10c to everybody, any seat. adv.

Team Pulling Special Feature

AT CHARLEVOIX COUNTY FAIR AUG. 29-30. PLAN FOR TRAINING.

A plan for training teams to pull with maximum effort is suggested by Wayne Dinmore, secretary of the Horse Association of America. It has been tried successfully by a number of men before entering teams in pulling contests with the dynamometer, Mr. Dinmore said. The directions follow.

Load a stoneboat with a 1,000 lbs. of stone, sand, or other heavy substance, hitching the horses to this when they are first brought out in the morning and are fresh. They should be required to pull it for a distance of 30 feet, then rest; then pull again for 30 feet. They may then be unhitched and put to their regular work.

This can be repeated every morning, the load being gradually increased either by adding to the weight or by lengthening the chain from the stoneboat to the team. If the chain is lengthened the angle of pull changes, and the stoneboat tends to dig into the ground more as draw chain length increases. The team may be hitched direct with an ordinary pair of doubletrees, or, if preferred, the front wheels of a wagon may be used so the team will be hitched just as would be the case if they were drawing a wagon, the draw chain running underneath the front wheels from the doubletrees to the load.

Eventually, when the stoneboat is loaded with 2,000 pounds and a draw chain or cable 50 feet in length is used, it will be found that the team gets down and exerts a real pull. This plan of slowly teaching horses to exert a maximum effort is the only plan that will make a real pulling team, the final load and length of cable used varying according to the individuality of the team, Mr. Dinmore suggested.

It is pointed out, however, that many teams will pile up amazing records in pulling on the dynamometer without any special training for it, and Mr. Kit Carson, secretary of the Charlevoix County Fair, is urging team owners to enter their horses and mules in the pulling contest on Aug. 29 and 30 at the Charlevoix Co. Fair. The dynamometer is the only machine ever invented to show in actual figures the pulling capacity of draft animals, and the Charlevoix Co. Fair will give men an opportunity to discover who owns the best team in the county.

School Board Makes Statement

NO FUNDED INDEBTEDNESS IN THIS DISTRICT.

East Jordan, Mich., Aug. 7, 1929
We understand there are various reports in circulation regarding the financial obligations of School District No. 4, which is East Jordan District.

In order that the various school districts which are to vote on the question of consolidation may have the exact facts as they are entitled to know, we wish to state for the information of all concerned as follows:

This district has no funded debt, having paid off the last note or bond in 1928. For many years it has been the practice of the District to borrow locally or from the banks, a part of the funds for its annual expenses. This borrowing, or the larger part of it being paid when State or Primary moneys come in, about September 1st. This district's total liability at the first of July last, was slightly over $25,000, and this will be reduced, we estimate, when Primary and other moneys are received, slightly under $5,000.00. We have considered it good practice in the past to borrow for part of the expenses of the District for the school term each year, as we are able to do at a low rate of interest, rather than to raise more funds by taxation, part of which would be lying idle for a part of the year.

August Term Circuit Court

CONVENES AT CHARLEVOIX MONDAY. THE DOCKET.

RULES OF COURT
The following rules of practice are this day ordered to take effect in this Court and shall be observed by all parties doing business in said Court from and after this date.

PAYMENT OF JURY FEES
1. In any trial where the jury is ordered by the Court, the Plaintiff and Defendant shall pay one-half the jury fee.

In all cases the jury and stenographer's fee shall be paid to the Clerk of the Court as required by the statute before the trial begins.

If the Plaintiff neglects or refuses to pay such fees or any part thereof as herein required, he shall be non-suited.

If the Defendant shall neglect or refuse to pay any of said fees which it is his duty to pay, his plea shall be stricken from the file and he shall be precluded from making any defense thereunder.

REQUESTS TO CHARGE
2. In every case tried before the jury, each party shall upon the closing of the evidence and before arguments submit to the Court his requests for instructions and deliver a copy thereof to the Attorney for the opposing party.

DIVORCE CASES
3. In all Divorce cases, where there are minor children at the time Bill of Complaint is filed copy of Bill shall be served on Friend of the Court to aid in making investigation and report as to such minor children and their welfare and custody.

The written report of the Friend of the Court and the Prosecuting Attorney shall be made and filed within sixty days after filing Bill of Complaint in the cause. No such divorce cause shall be placed on the calendar nor be heard on its merits until such report is filed.

4. In all Pro-Confero cases for divorce, at the time of hearing and before any testimony is taken a copy of the proposed decree must be filed with the Clerk and the sum of $2.00 paid as decree fee.

If a decree is granted the Clerk shall then file it. If decree is denied, the Clerk will enter an order dismissing the Bill of Complaint.

Model Buildings Truck Coming

SERIES OF DEMONSTRATIONS TO BE HELD AUG. 15-16.

All farmers of Charlevoix County are cordially invited and urged to attend a series of demonstrations to be conducted on Aug. 15 and 16, when the Model Buildings Truck makes its maiden appearance.

For many years Agricultural Engineers throughout the country have tried to find some means of telling and showing the farm public how to remodel and build new farm buildings, realizing their inability of personally visiting the many farms. The Model Buildings Truck has been devised for this purpose and is accomplishing splendid results throughout Michigan.

On this truck you can see 15 farm buildings models covering, barn frames, poultry and hog houses, self-feeders, insulation, storage, lime spreading, bull pens and machine sheds.

If you are planning on remodeling any of your farm buildings, or on building new structures, you cannot afford to miss one of the following meetings:

Thursday, Aug. 15, at 10:00 fast time, farm of Lee Sneathen, 3 miles south of Burgess. At 2:00 fast time, farm of Alfred Williams, 1 1/4 miles west and south of Ironton.

Friday, Aug. 16, at 10:00 fast time, farm of Fred Larson, 2 miles south of East Jordan. At 2:00 fast time, farm of Frank Russell, 1 mile south of Pine Lake Golf Links.

Plans will be gladly given on all farm buildings. If you have a personal problem, bring it with you. In any case, come.

Proposed Agricultural Unit

East Jordan, Mich., July 30, 1929.
At a meeting of the East Jordan School Board, held Tuesday evening, July 30, 1929 to consider what the budget and the tax rate should be of the proposed consolidated Agricultural school district. After considering the valuation of the district and the necessary expenses, including the cost of busses, bus drivers, fencing, road opening, extra teachers and janitor and operating an extra building, it was the judgment of the local Board that the tax rate for the coming year ought to be between $17 and $18 per $1,000 valuation, and that the following year the tax rate should be lowered.

All highways leading into the State are to be posted with signs warning tourists of the meaning in yellow lines which have been placed on highways on curves and hills, Grover C. Dillman, highway commissioner announced recently. The signs will also be placed on highways throughout the State. "I do not believe that, even among Michigan motorists, it is generally known that to pass a car while the vision ahead is not clear is a violation of state ordinances," Dillman said. "With the posting of the signs we will expect fewer violations."

Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Warden of Adrian are here visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stanek Sr., entertained all their sons and daughter at their home in Wilson township to a bountiful dinner last Sunday. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Chester Walden and son; William Stanek and family; Mr. and Mrs. Pete Stanek and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stanek Jr., and family; also Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thomas of Elmira were there. Mr. and Mrs. Walden and Will Stanek furnished the crowd with ice cream, which was enjoyed by all. All said they had a good time and that they would come again.

PENINSULA

(Edited by Mrs. E. Hayden)

Mrs. Elmer Faust of Mountain Ash farm is the first to report picking string beans for the East Jordan Canning Factory, having begun Aug. 2nd. Mrs. Reich of Lone Ash farm began Aug. 3.

Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Hayden and two children of Orchard Hill are expected home Monday from a 11 days motor trip to Grand Rapids, Lansing and Detroit.

A very large crowd from Peninsula attended the Free Show put on by the East Jordan Business Men, Wednesday evening. A good many did not get in, but your correspondent got a good seat.

A. Reich of Lone Ash farm who was called to Muskegon July 24 by the severe illness of his sister, returned home Friday, leaving her much improved.

Clarence Johnston had the misfortune to lose one of his horses, Saturday, finding it dead in the barn when he went to do the noon chores.

Billy Frank helped Charles Healey at Willow Brook farm with his wheat harvest, Tuesday, and Mr. Healey helped Mr. Frank, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Russell of Ridgeway farm spent part of last week at the Mose LaLonde place in Chaddock Dist., haying.

F. H. Wangeman has completed his haying.

Bean picking has begun and promises to be a good crop.

D. D. Tibbitts of Cherry Hill has a large crew picking cherries. He has a good crop of extra fine cherries.

Daniel Reich returned home to Lone Ash farm, Saturday night, having finished his job with F. H. Wangeman.

Caretaker, Will McGregor, is making a desperate effort to save the beach road at Whiting Park by filling in with big stones, where the high water threatens to wash away the road bed.

The extreme hot weather of Monday and Tuesday was followed by cooler weather Wednesday, and near frost Thursday night.

A delightful rain Saturday morning did an immense amount of good to growing crops.

White beans and late potatoes are beginning to bloom.

Mr. Ager of the East Jordan Co-op was on the Peninsula Tuesday, delivering gas and kerosene.

W. C. Howe of Overlook farm has finally got his side delivery rake, which he ordered at the beginning of haying.

Because of a severe buzzing and snapping in the telephone, which has bothered for several days, it is impossible to gather news.

George Loomis of Detroit, Mrs. Myrtle Gaunt and daughter, Freda, of Flint, and Mrs. Lule of near Saginaw, and Miss Pauline Loomis of Gravel Hill, north side, motored to Mackinaw, Monday, and will camp, and Tuesday will proceed to the Soo and camp for a day or two. They expect to return Thursday if they do not go to Iron Mountain.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Conyer of Traverse City motored up Saturday night and visited the Geo. Jarman family at Gravel Hill, south side, returning Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Corey Stafford and son of Boyne City visited Mrs. Mercy Woerful and family at Gravel Hill, Sunday.

Bob Jarman took a hike July 28. A card received by his father, Geo. Jarman, was postmarked Canadian Soo.

Mrs. Ernest Loomis and guests of Maple Lawn farm, Mrs. Ray Loomis and family of Gravel Hill, north side, and Mercy Woerful and family of Gravel Hill, south side, attended the picnic given by Mrs. Brown of Boyne City to her music class last week Thursday.

The Star-of-Hope Sunday School session will be unusually interesting next Sunday, Aug. 11 because a lady traveler just returned from Europe will tell of some interesting incidents. The Sunday after, Judge Feed will talk to the Sunday School.

(Delayed Correspondence)
A. Reich of Lone Ash farm received a wire Monday, saying his sister at Muskegon was very ill, and left Tuesday for that place.

Miss Erma Cane of Boyne City visited Miss Eula Arnott at Maple Row farm, Thursday.

The Canning Club met with Miss Eula Arnott at Maple Row Farm, Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. Hayden and two children, Arlene and Lloyd, of Orchard Hill started Friday morning on a motor trip to the southern part of the State. They plan to visit Grand Rapids, Muskegon, Lansing and Detroit. They plan to return home not later than Aug. 6th.

A very good crowd attended the Gleaner dance Saturday evening, but the extreme heat made dancing an undesirable pastime.

String beans are beginning to set and late potatoes are coming into blossom.

Mrs. Earl Edwards and Master Jimmie Hills motored up from Dearborn Tuesday and spent the week with the Daniel and Elmer Fausts families. They returned Monday.

MILES' DISTRICT

(Edited by Mrs. E. Miles)

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Houston and Ray Lang returned to Detroit, Sunday, after spending the past two weeks at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Xelle Miles and two children, Madelon and Donald, arrived from Lansing, Saturday to spend a two weeks' vacation at the E. Miles' home and other relatives and friends.

Miss Agnes LaLonde and Mrs. Mary Clark spent the week end with the latter's daughter, Mrs. Roy Fowler and family of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Moblo took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Carl Moblo of East Jordan, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zoulek called at the L. Addis home Sunday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Addis were dinner guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Zoulek of Chaddock Dist. Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Evans and grandson, Wesley Zimmerman, and Mr. Roy Houston motored to Mackinaw City, Thursday. Ray Lang, who had been visiting there a few days, returned with them.

JORDAN TOWNSHIP

(Edited by Agnes Stanek and Miriam Gould.)

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jay Walling, a son, Aug. 3rd.

Samuel Bowers, a resident of this vicinity for the past five years, died very suddenly while on his way home Sunday morning, and was buried Tuesday of this week at Boyne City.

"TOO TIRED"
A healthy person never feels constantly tired. Being too tired continually is a sign of something wrong. Women who find themselves always "too tired" to be a companion and playmate to husband and children should first of all suspect the kidneys. When they are affected, good health, even life itself, is in danger. Foley Pills diuretic, a reliable valuable medicine constantly in use over 25 years, promotes sound health by stimulating kidneys and bladder to a normal healthy activity. Men and women everywhere use and recommend them. Guaranteed.—Hite's Drug Co. adv.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE NOTICE.

Default having been made in the terms and conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by William D. Tait and Myrtle E. Tait, husband and wife, jointly, to Theodore C. LaCroix and Leatha M. LaCroix, husband and wife, jointly, which said mortgage bears date the 17th day of December, 1928, and was recorded on the 18th day of December, 1928, in Liber 67 of Mortgages on page 85, in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan; that said mortgage is past due, and there is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage the sum of one hundred ninety-six and 56-100 ($196.56) dollars at the date of this notice, including principal, interest, taxes, and attorney fee, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

NOW, THEREFORE by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that on Saturday, the 17th day of August, 1929, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, standard time, at the east front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix is held, said LaCroix will sell at public auction to Theodore C. LaCroix and Leatha M. the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage and all legal costs and an attorney fee of fifteen dollars.

The premises described in said mortgage are as follows, to-wit:—
"The East half of the Northwest quarter (E½ of NW¼) of section eight (8), township thirty-two (32) north, range seven (7) west, containing eighty (80) acres more or less according to the United States survey, which said premises are in the Township of South Arm, Charlevoix County, Michigan."

THE FIXED IDEA
By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

There has been running in New York and Chicago in recent months with a good deal of success and interest a play which alleges to reproduce in a realistic manner an evening in a metropolitan newspaper office. There is much disorder about the place, as it is represented, much profanity and vulgarity, and chewing of tobacco and references to booze fests among the habitués of the office, for in some way these things picture the fixed idea of what a modern newspaper office is like. Now the facts, if looked into, would seldom, if ever, bear out this idea. A newspaper office is neither more disorderly nor more profane than other business offices, but it would be hard to make the general public believe so.

I noticed a statement in one of our local papers the other evening to the effect that one of our fresh young citizens had been vigorously slapped in the face, as he deserved to be, for making advances to a young woman with whom he had no acquaintance, and who was acting in one of our local theaters. The fixed idea is pretty prevalent that all actresses, being of easy virtue, court attention from strangers and welcome invitations from anybody who is willing to spend money on them. A good many young men have been slapped in the face for erroneously assuming such a point of view. It is a long exploded idea in the minds of those who know anything about the matter that chorus girls and actresses are less moral, less balanced, and less regular in their lives and habits than other professional women.

The frock-coated, long-whiskered, absent-minded, near-sighted college professor has for decades been represented in humorous magazines and on the stage. So long and to such an extent has he been thus pictured that it has become a fixed idea in the minds of a majority of people who have never been to college that that is the sort of creature he is—impractical, imprudent, ill-dressed, a man of one idea, and that one a very narrow and unbusiness-like idea.

Now the college professor is in fact not so very different from other normal people. I am not infrequently asked, when on a railroad train I get into conversation with traveling salesmen, what line I am carrying or what business I represent. I have even been taken for a lawyer or a bank president at times and have not resented the suggestion in the least, and I am sure many of my colleagues would pass as representative business men, though there is a fixed idea against such a possibility.

There is the fixed idea in the minds of many people that all Italians work at hard labor, that all Greeks run restaurants, and Scotchmen are all stings, and that plumbers continually rob the public and eventually grow rich. The fixed idea is the surest indication of inexperience and ignorance. Our ideas are set upon the subjects about which we know the least.

PROBATE ORDER
STATE OF MICHIGAN, The Probate Court for the County of Charlevoix.
At a session of said Court, held at the Probate Office in the City of Charlevoix, in said County, on the 22nd day of July A. D. 1929.
Present: Hon. Servetus A. Correll, Judge of Probate.
In the Matter of the Estate of Leander Nyquist, Deceased.
Robert A. Campbell having filed in said court his final administration account, and his petition praying for the allowance thereof and for the assignment and distribution of the residue of said estate.
It is Ordered, That the 15th day of August A. D. 1929, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for examining and allowing said account and hearing said petition;
It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Charlevoix County Herald, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.
SERVETUS A. CORRELL,
Judge of Probate.

State News in Brief

Lansing—Fred P. Smith of Alpena has been appointed by Gov. Fred W. Green to succeed Judge Frank Emerick on the Alpena-Montmorency circuit.

Lansing—Governor Green has appointed William Sparks, of Jackson, to the state board of aeronautics, in the place of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, who resigned when he moved to New York.

Rogers City—Falling from a horse proved fatal to Lorene Boyke, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boyke of this city. One of the horses' hoofs struck her on the head as she fell.

Greenville—When Mrs. Eugene Schermerhorn lost control of her automobile on a curve north of this city, and collided with an automobile driven by M. F. Thomas, of Fargo, N. D., her 4-year-old daughter, Shirley, was killed. None of the other occupants of the cars was injured.

Luther—While swimming alone in Pine River, six miles northeast of Luther, Miss Ocie Miller, 16 years old, a maid at the summer home of L. J. Kempf, of Hilldale, Ill., was drowned. The body was found by Mrs. Kempf. Miss Miller was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Miller of Luther.

Lansing—Mrs. Bertha Barrus, 64 years old, ended her life here by pouring fuel oil over her clothing and then igniting the garments. The body of the woman was found in the basement of the home by Merle Long, vice-president of the Hager Cove Lumber company, her son-in-law, with whom she lived. Mrs. Barrus had been ill for several months.

Bay City—When her right foot became caught in the blade of a mowing machine, Georgiana Rau, 5-year-old daughter of Mrs. Estelle Farmer, of Flint, received injuries which necessitated the amputation of the member at the ankle. The accident happened at the farm of her grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Bohardt, near West Branch.

Battle Creek—Throwing himself in front of a speeding Michigan Central passenger train on a grade crossing here, Perry Pearce, 75, a retired farmer, committed suicide. His body was badly mangled and it was several hours before identification was made. Police say witnesses saw the man standing near the railroad tracks for about half an hour before the train killed him.

Manistique—High water in Lake Michigan has robbed shore line property owners of considerable land in this neighborhood. Beaches have been destroyed and in many instances summer homes undermined. The erosion this year has been greater than that experienced over any five years in the past. If the wash continues much longer, lake property owners will be forced to resort to dyking.

Rochester—To prevent village residents from drinking water which Detroit persons who mistook the village reservoir for a swimming pool, bathed, the village council has ordered the erection of a high barbed wire fence about the reservoir. Two swimming parties have made use of the reservoir this summer, according to complaints. A test of the water, showed that it had not been noticeably contaminated.

Sandusky—Most of the business section of the village of Argyle, 15 miles northwest of here, was destroyed by fire recently. The loss is estimated at $75,000. Three frame buildings, housing the James Perkins general store, the Walter Polewatz clothing store and the Emmett Herdell hardware store, were destroyed, with all the contents. A grocery store, the village bank and an oil station were the only business places escaping damage.

Ironwood—Once an important figure in the upper Michigan iron industry, Solomon S. Curry, 90 years old, died at his home here. Curry was born in Canada, June 12, 1839. He came to the Upper Peninsula in 1862 as a prospector on the Marquette Range. He discovered and opened several iron mines on the Menominee range, including the Curry and Beauford mines. He came to Ironwood and opened the Norris Mine in 1884. He retired 30 years ago.

Marshall—Caught in the knives of his binder when his three-horse team ran away, Frank E. Smith, 72 years old, former chairman of the Calhoun County Board of Supervisors, suffered injuries so serious that the amputation of his right leg was necessary. Smith was standing near the binder when the team started to run. In attempting to stop the horses he stepped in front of the knives and was caught by them, being dragged 20 rods before he was thrown clear of the machine.

Grand Rapids—In an insane rage, George Williams, 29 years old, dragged his wife, Catherine, 25 years old, into a tunnel which forms the approach to the palatial west side home of Frank A. Stone, where she was employed as a maid, and fatally wounded her. As the woman was being rushed to the hospital, where she died, Williams drove furiously to police headquarters and surrendered. Less than four hours later Williams had pleaded guilty before a Superior Court Judge and was sentenced to Jackson for the remainder of his life.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by the British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals his identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon.

CHAPTER II—His strength restored, Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Capt. Chater, of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He overhears the girl who had saved him talking to Lord Wellington about a "petition." Later, Chater introduces her to Fellowes as Cara Inglepin, daughter of the True Bounty, owner of the True Bounty. Cara is going home, with her duenna, a Portuguese, on the vessel, and induces Fellowes to sail as mate.

CHAPTER III—Fellowes soon realizes he is in love with Cara, and she seems to return his affection. The vessel is stopped by the British frigate Badger, whose captain, Collishawe, is welcomed on the True Bounty by Cara and Chater as an old friend. The three have a conference, Fellowes being convinced treachery to America is being planned. Collishawe claims Fellowes as a British subject, having been born in London, where his father was American consul. Despite his protests, and Chater's half-hearted intercession, Fellowes is taken aboard the Badger, a "pressed" man. Maddened at what he believes is Cara's and Chater's treachery, he strikes Collishawe, who orders him a hundred lashes with the "cat." Half dead from the punishment, Fellowes is befriended by a negro, "Cuffee," and a sailor, Tom Grogan, also a "pressed" American.

CHAPTER IV—Fellowes recovers slowly, but his hatred of Collishawe, as well as Cara and Chater, has become an obsession. Collishawe tells him Cara had nothing to do with his abduction, but he refuses to believe it.

CHAPTER V—While the Badger is off New York Fellowes learns a landing party, with Collishawe, is going ashore that night. He feels the party has something to do with the Inglepins and Chater's plans, and will meet at Chater's home near his own. Hoping to circumvent them, he with Cuffee and Grogan, swims ashore, meeting friends, who confirm his suspicions of the landing party.

CHAPTER VI—At the inn, kept by a vigorous-minded lady, a Mrs. Rhodes, Fellowes gathers a company of militia. They meet the British sailors, and in the fight Fellowes' shirt is torn from his back, but Collishawe escapes, declining Fellowes' challenge to a duel, but promising, as to an equal, to meet him again.

CHAPTER VII—At Chater's home Fellowes finds Cara, her father, and Chater. They tell him Collishawe came ashore to visit Cara. Fellowes scoffs at the girl's vehement denial of conniving at his kidnapping, though the sight of his scarred back causes her to faint. Search reveals no incriminating papers. The Inglepin party returns to New York. Fellowes follows them.

CHAPTER VIII—Joshua Inglepin is the wealthy brother, though implacable enemy of Ben. Joshua upholds the war, which Ben vehemently opposes. At Fellowes' suggestion Joshua purchases the ship Centurion, for operation as a privateer, giving the command to Fellowes, who promises that he may capture the True Bounty, with Ben and Cara Inglepin, and papers showing Federalist plots, which it is believed they are carrying to Wellington. Fellowes' main objective, however, is the humiliation of Collishawe by the destruction of the Badger.

CHAPTER IX—The Centurion follows the True Bounty when she leaves New York, but loses sight of her. Fellowes captures many British vessels, sending them to New York.

CHAPTER X—Finally overtaking Ben Inglepin's vessel, Fellowes, with a small party, boards her. Chater treacherously attacks Fellowes, and the latter kills him. A communication to the British government promising the aid of the Federalist party in bringing about the ending of the war is found, evidence sufficient to hang every signer—with Cara and her father.

"Blood me for a fool, Captain, but 'tain't in the nature of a man to see a lady the like o' her put up in the dock with a parcel o' highwaymen and coin-clippers! So if 'tis all the same to ye, just throw me in irons, and I'll swear out a declaration I was for murderin' every dirty politician in Washington. Or put it how ye will. Shure, we can sassy 'twas me wrote the letter and all."

An overpowering conviction of meanness, of unescapable malice, tore at Fellowes' heart. A voice within him cried that here was a stronger force than hate, but a second voice is sneed drily from his mouth.

"I fear you are the victim of your emotions, doctor. Treason is not a crime to be condoned."

"She knows no more o' treason nor I do of Boney's gizzard," fared O'Shaughnessy. "The poor lady may be made a mistake, but I'll take me oath there's not a morsel of harm in her."

"Nathless, she must pay for it." And as the Irishman opened his mouth to reply, Fellowes fell back upon the same argument he had offered Sophor: "The lady, being what she is, will not suffer another to assume her responsibilities."

exchange the briefest of greetings, but the day the wind swung astern and the sun came out boldly she crossed the deck to where he stood, sweeping the horizon with his glass.

"Do you look for the Badger, Captain Fellowes?" she asked.

"Not yet, ma'am," he answered, choking his surprise.

Her hands clasped together nervously. There was aching appeal in the eyes that met his.

"Oh, sir—is it not sufficient that we—my father and I—should be punished? Captain Collishawe is not responsible for what we did. He acted as an enemy, to serve his king. And he had his orders—from Commodore Hardy, from Admiral Cockburn. And my Lord Wellington's behind them all, for 'twas he supported us with the ministry."

Fellowes forced himself to speak, harshly, mechanically.

"Captain Collishawe is, as you say, an enemy, ma'am. As an enemy, 'tis my duty to destroy him."

"But to seek him out! To hunt him—as one beast hunts another! Must you and James, you two of all the world, be deadly enemies for—" her voice sank to a whisper—"my mistake?"

She trembled so that he put out his arm to steady her, conscious of the curious glances of the officers on the far side of the poop; his mind was in a whirl—hate, jealousy, pity, anger, resentment and an emotion he would not name, even to himself, boiling and seething in one nauseous brew. Touching her, he had a mad desire to embrace her, to cover her mouth with kisses. If that was his price, she'd pay, he had no doubt. She was no coward. But he heard himself say gently:

"You make too much of this, Miss Inglepin. We are all on the rack of fate."

"Fate?" she repeated, drawing away from him. "You should say hate. 'Tis an ill thing, sir, and recoils upon him who sponsors it."

Fellowes bowed his head.

"That is a point you need not argue with me," he said. "I have set myself a task, and I am bound in honor to complete it."

"To slay James?" Her voice rang scornfully. "You are over-confident."

"It may be." He paused, fumbling for words to phrase his thought. "If I might, I'd serve you. I shall have no happiness of what I do. And yet I hate him! I hate him as I hated Chater—and what satisfaction have I had from Chater's death? But I'll not rest until he's punished—or I am dead."

Her face was tragic; there was no scorn in her voice when she replied: "Yes, you are a proud man. And I am a proud woman. If my back had been beaten raw, I'd hate, too. Oh, you do well to hate, Lion! But 'tis you should hate. You should tie me to the mast there, and flog me as James flogged you, flog me while your sailors look on, and lick their lips and gloat as men do at sight of another's pain. Wouldn't that satisfy you? For I deserve it. I who have brought you to enmity, two men—"

Her voice broke in a wail, and Fellowes beckoned O'Shaughnessy to him.

"Conduct Miss Inglepin below, doctor. She is too have every attention. You understand?"

The Irishman gave him a saturnine glare.

"Aye, and 'tis more than ye do, Captain. God forgive ye! There, now, alanna, come along with Aloysius."

Westward drove the Centurion, top masts whipping from the fids, lee rigging slack; but so keenly did Fellowes watch her that she never carried away a spar, despite the press of sail he kept her under. There was no more grumbling as they neared their goal. The sea lawyers of the fo'c's'le had discovered that the sinking of an enemy's sloop of war must be rewarded by a handsome grant from congress—"Didn't the Constitution's crew get fifty thousand dollars for the Guerriere?"

Gradually, the Centurion's company came to understand the practical reasons for her unusual armament. All sea-faring men knew the Yankee frigates were heavier built, heavier armed. They could outlast their enemies, and their batteries could outrange any craft below a line-of-battle ship. And precisely so, the Centurion could outlast and outrange the Badger.

Next to the Long Tom, which he had named the "Big Serpent," Cuffee worshiped Cara Inglepin. "Him pity ill missee" was the one person aboard, except Fellowes, who was tolerated about when the negro was swabbing and wiping his pet.

Not the least of Fellowes' worries during this latter stage of the voyage was Cara's health. After his refusal to abandon the quest of the Badger, she remained secluded in her cabin for three days, and he knew, from Ben Inglepin's furious looks as well as O'Shaughnessy's resentful reports, that she was a sick woman—"on the bare edge of brain fever, Captain, and no fault o' your's, if I save her from that same."

At O'Shaughnessy's urgency, she was fetched on deck as soon as the fever abated, and the air and sunshine put new strength in her; but there was a shadow on her face that wrung Fellowes' heart, and the circles beneath her eyes were gouged deeper with every week the Centurion bore on into the west.

He was beginning to grow moody, plagued by a dread lest the Badger had succumbed to the winter's storms or been transferred to another station, and as they neared the American coast he consulted frequently with Tom and Cuffee, refurbishing his memory of Collishawe's cruising beat, deriving satisfaction from their matter-of-fact assurance of success.

The initial problem in trapping the Badger, as Fellowes saw it, was to toll her out of the blockading squadron, without exposing himself to one of the pinching maneuvers at which the Britishers were adepts. But sooner or later, he was sure, the Badger would beat the waters south of the Hook—that is, if she was still on the station. And south of the Hook he'd cast his lure.

Fellowes so contrived it that the brig sighted the highlands of Navesink an hour after sunrise of a clear, warm morning, but there were no signs of the Badger. Fretting and stewing, he ran southeast a day's sail, then lay to, and the next morning beat back against a contrary wind, plotting his course farther off-shore, on the chance that he might intercept the Badger returning from one of innumerable errands entrusted to Collishawe. But she was nowhere to senard, and in the night he wore ship and loafed south, planning to repeat his first approach.

This time he succeeded. At noon the hall came from the lookout, perched precariously astride the fore royal yard:

"Sail ho! Mebbe a p'int to sta'b'd, sir."

Fellowes caught a glass from the binnacle rack, and ran forward, beckoning Cuffee to follow him up the railines to the foretop. Cuffee, staring across the eddying banks, made a little ducking sound with his tongue, tawny eyes agleam.

"Dat him Badger, marsr'?"

"Sure of it?" Fellowes queried almost fearfully.

"S'pose yo' take him glass, yo' see." Slowly, very slowly, Fellowes swept the sea to sta'b'd. Yes, there could be no mistake about that tops'l. Fellowes, himself, had helped to set it.

He trembled so violently that Cuffee stended him on the confined platform of the top.

"Don' yo' fuss, marsr'," crooned the negro. "We golt' bust him Collishawe. Yah, him Big Serpent golt' go blam-blam-blam! Dat de bes' Long Tom Cuffee ever see."

Half-ashamed, Fellowes smiled crookedly.

"I was afraid something had happened to him. Does he see us?"

"Oh, my aunt, dar him r' yal' drop! Him come plenty quick."

Fellowes halted the deck.

"Wear ship! We'll stand off across his bows on the sta'b'd tack. Beat to quarters, Mr. Spencer. Cuffee, you might take a shot with the Long Tom."

Fellowes lingered in his lofty aerle while the drum thumped hysterically, and the stamping of sea boots beat an accompaniment. Forward, almost at his feet, he could see the gleaming bulk of the Big Serpent, swinging to la'b'd in response to the pressure of handspikes, Cuffee a figure of demomical energy, issuing instructions, adjusting the wad, shoving home the round shot with the last thrust of the rammer.

"Who's him match? Gib him Cuffee. Yah, Big Serpent, bliss yo' song!"

The brass throat of the gun clanged resonantly, and a jet of flame and smoke spat out in the Badger's direction. A rumble of cannon fire responded, muffled by the mist: the Badger's chase guns. And Fellowes listened for the whir of splash of shot, but the range was too great—probably too great for the twenty-four-pounder. Yet it was essential to give the sloop-of-war a mark to head for.

Fellowes hailed the sailing master, on the poop:

"Mr. Noggle! We must reduce speed. See if you and Chips can manage a drag to tow astern. In haste!"

lowes answered grimly. "At close range 'twould be a different matter."

"Surely, sir, you have accomplished enough by this cruise?" she persisted. "And is it honorable to sacrifice other men's lives in a private quarrel?"

Fellowes flushed angrily.

"By your leave, Miss Inglepin! This is war. I fight my country's battles equally with my own. Captain Collishawe is more than my personal enemy."

"Oh, forget what I said," she cried, distressed. "Yet I meant well. 'Tis my fault that you have singled out James. Deny it not, Your ship was equipped to fight the Badger."

"Sure, ma'am." Again a complexity of passions tormented Fellowes. He wanted to be kind. He wanted to be cruel. He wanted to help. He wanted to hurt. The sweat stood in beads on his forehead, clammy as the sea mist that dripped from the spars. If he might take her in his arms, and comfort her! But no, cruelty would be more kind. "If I slink the Badger, I do a service for my country, which should be your country. If I happen to kill Captain Collishawe"—he made a pretense at a shrug—"why, I shall remove a dangerous enemy of my country—and the man who flogged me."

She regarded him with that small mournful look, her lips curved in pity.

"And I have done this to you!" she said. "I should remember. But each time it hurts the same. I am so sorry, so very sorry! I've turned love into hate, and ruined two men's lives. Ah, and brought my father to the galloes! Isn't that sufficient? Oh, well, then, we'll go below. Anywhere! What does it matter? A few hours, a few days, a few months!"

Her father led her away, mumbling fustily, and Fellowes hurried forward to inspect Noggle's drag—anything to occupy him, to aid him to forget her. She was in love with Collishawe, of course. The letter—everything—her words, her humors, her palpable anxiety—proved it. D—n the Britisher, he must have swept her off her feet! But when? Before—that night? Or after?

He turned to Cuffee, his brain working simultaneously along parallel lines, to caution the negro to reduce his powder charges when the brig lost headway.

"I don't want to reach him yet. No use in telling him we have a twenty-four-pounder. Just tickle him up, Cuffee. Keep him hot after us."

And Cuffee laughed uproariously.

"Yah, sah, yah, Marsr' Fellowe! Dat big fun. Oh, we fool him Collishawe plenty too much."

Back on the poop straining anxiously through the mist, Fellowes recalled that last night on the True Bounty, a swish of skirts, a warm, pliant body pressed to his, the touch of soft lips.

CHAPTER XII Battle

Long before evening the two vessels were visible to each other, the Centurion blocked clearly against the fading light in the east, the Badger a blurred tower of canvas in the radiance of the sunset.

The Badger gained slowly on the Centurion, and under cover of darkness the privateer cut herself free of the drag, shortening sail to maintain her position just out of range of Collishawe's twelve-pounders. The men off watch were sent to their hammocks, and those on duty bidden to lie down beside the guns. Fellowes, himself, endeavored to set an example by curbing his excitement, and toward midnight snatched a nap in one of the wardroom bunks.

An hour before sunrise Fellowes was awakened by a messenger from Breed, who had the watch. He came on deck to find the crew astir, the galley smoking busily. Cuffee was crooning over the Big Serpent, removing yesterday's powder stains from its shiny barrel with a rag and polish.

Fellowes' first thought was to see to the feeding of his men. They were to have a hot meal and a special issue of grog. "And don't forget the prisoners, Mr. Breed. We may be hours at this job. Give them the same meal as the crew, and then stow them in the cabletars." Himself, he attended O'Shaughnessy to the cockpit. Cara opened the door in response to his knock.

"I am loath to disturb you, ma'am," he said; "but the doctor will be requiring his quarters soon, and I'd place you out of reach of shot."

She regarded him with the same pitting expression which had irked him the day before.

"Thank you," she answered quietly, "but if we may, sir, we'll stay here. Doctor O'Shaughnessy will require assistance."

"But you don't realize! Round-shot wounds are hideous. And grape!"

"I'd rather see the worst things than crouch below and imagine them. And I'm not one to faint and stew, Captain Fellowes."

"There's Mr. Inglepin," Fellowes suggested, "and your attendant?"

"I may be a fool," but Ben Inglepin retorted tartly, "but I can wind a band age or hold a basin—and I prefer anything to the darkness and stench of the orlop, which, I suppose, is where you'd put us."

"'Tis safe, at least," asserted Fellowes, puzzled.

to the hold! Your wounded will be more comfortable for what assistance you can render." She appealed to O'Shaughnessy. "You'll confirm me, won't you, doctor?"

The Irishman supported her gallantly.

"'Tis short-handed we are, captain, and with none but the stewards for dressers I'll be in a bad way."

It was a good argument, Fellowes admitted to himself. He owed his men every chance for life, and three extra helpers might turn the scale for the poor devils, whose bodies were maimed by the Badger's cannonades.

"Very well," he agreed, "if you are certain 'twill not distress you. Once we are in action, you must remain here."

"You speak of being in action, Captain," the girl exclaimed. "How soon—will it be?"

"Within the hour," he answered curtly, and withdrew.

Ascending to the deck, he rehearsed in his memory the fearful expectation mirrored in her face. She knew what he planned for Collishawe, and dreaded it. Well, he'd give her ample to weep over. When he'd finished with the Englishman—

The Centurion, at Fellowes' direction, wore handsomely, and stood north-east-by-north on the la'b'd tack. The Badger, apprehending the maneuver, indicated the Yankee brig intended to come to close quarters, commenced to take in her mains'l and clew up her after canvas.

Fellowes studied their progress, as the interval of blue water diminished with the persistent attempt of the Badger to point up higher than the Centurion, and when he thought the range was right for the twenty-four-pounder he hailed Cuffee!

"Aho, gunner! We'll try the Long Tom."

Cuffee's first shot skipped the waves in front of the sloop-of-war's bow. The next ricocheted over the enemy but the third was a clean hit forward amidships, and the Centurion's company raised a lusty cheer. Collishawe, undaunted, yaved to bring his chasers to bear, the twelve-pounder shot splashing up the water perhaps a quarter of a mile short of the target.

Cuffee fired a fourth time, and scored a hit in the waist.

"Come, come, lad, 'tis a spar I want," Fellowes called impatiently.

The next shot was an even, clean betwixt main and mizzenmasts, and Collishawe, apparently appreciating the weight of metal against him, came about once more, and stood down before the wind, bow-on, in an effort to close, so that his heavy broadside batteries could come into play. But Fellowes was alert.

"Steady all," the order came from the speaking trumpet. "Take him, Cuffee. Mr. Spencer, hold your fire until I bid you loose."

Working with frenzied speed, Cuffee had the Long Tom loaded and fired almost before Fellowes had finished speaking. The shot struck the Badger on a level with the cat-heads. A second shot drilled the hull under the sta'b'd fore-chains, tossing a shower of splinters in air.

"Now, then, Mr. Spencer," Fellowes hailed the first lieutenant.

And the la'b'd twelve-pounders roared as one. All but two or three missed, but Fellowes was sure one shot had whistled through the fore-stays and a second hit the hull. He was satisfied.

"We'll go about, Mr. Noggle," he bade the sailing master. "On the sta'b'd tack."

It was time. As the Centurion wore, the Badger's chase guns flung their shot into the privateer's bulwarks with telling effect. When the confusion had abated Fellowes saw one man dead on his deck, and two others wounded. The Badger had teeth, and knew how to use them.

"Carry those men below," he ordered. "Bosun, where are your sand buckets?"

The Badger pegged away with her chasers, but the Centurion ran out of range quite easily and wore ship to give the Long Tom another chance. And an exultant yell greeted Cuffee's next performance—the main topmast of the sloop-of-war tumbled slowly from the fids in a sprawling litter of spars and canvas. Momentarily helpless the Badger flapped up into the wind and Fellowes swooped nearer for the benefit of his twelve-pounders. The broadsides roared as fast as the gun crews could swab, load and fire.

But Collishawe was a seaman. Before the privateer could smash another stick, he had the wreckage cleared from his deck, and the Badger manageable—and Fellowes must sheer off to avoid those hard-battering cannonades that would rend the brig to matchwood at close quarters.

A half-dozen more shots from the Long Tom, and the Badger's foremast, probably weakened by the hit in the chains, went overside in a clutter that dragged the sloop-of-war down by the head. Fellowes stood on, making use of the predicament to gain a position astern of her, but by some incredible effort, Collishawe was able to run both his long twelves aft, and in the face of a scorching fire from the Centurion's sta'b'd battery, actually succeeded in shooting away the brig's fore-topmast, blighting the Big Serpent! Killing one of Cuffee's gun crew and drowning a pair of Sophor's marines.

Fellowes, coolly determined to take no unnecessary risks, promptly retired out of range, cleared the wreckage from his fo'c's'le, and again ordered Cuffee to resume sharp shooting. The negro had warmed to his work, and the Long Tom hurled its shot into the crippled, sloop-of-war, with appalling regularity.

Fellowes called to Cuffee: "Take your time, gunner; but I want you to knock over another stick."

Cuffee's response was a clean hit in the Badger's mizzenmast, which broke midway to the top, and swamped the whole waist with its debris. The sloop-of-war broached to, all but helpless, while the Centurion headed across her bows, broadside batteries flaming as she tacked back and forth, back and forth, the Long Tom adding its resonant voice to the sharper detonations of the twelve-pounders. The smoke was banked so densely around the privateer that the enemy was practically invisible; but an answering broadside roared from the sloop-of-war, and the Centurion quivered under the impact of the cannonades' eighteen-pounder shot.

"Sta'b'd your helm, Mr. Noggle," hailed Fellowes. "He's swung his head around."

Two more broadsides smote the privateer in the interval required to tack out of the danger zone, and when she recovered her raking position the Badger continued to fall her with several heavy guns that could be aimed forward. A lucky shot dismounted a twelve-pounder and puddles of blood soaked the said powder boys had sprinkled across the deck. But one by one the Badger's guns ceased firing, as her hull was racked from end to end by the relentless broadsides of the Yankee brig, and presently the Centurion hailed out of the smoke bank to survey the situation, the Long Tom alone hammering away at the unfortunate Britisher.

The Badger was a dreadful sight, her remaining sails split and tattered, her rigging awry, her upper works largely demolished. And she looked to be somewhat down by the head. But the White Ensign floated at the jagged peak of her mizzen, apparently nailed there, at intervals in the riven belt of her bulwarks grined the muzzles of cannon and one of her chase guns that had been hauled aft belched defiance of the privateer.

"We're not ficked yet," it growled.

Fellowes examined his own ship, received hasty reports from his officers. Five men wounded, three killed. No damage worth mentioning aloft, except for the foretopmast. The hull sound, the well dry.

"We'll board," he decided, and a murmur of assent expressed his hearers' opinion. "Mr. Noggle, I'm turning over the ship to you. I shall be on the fo'c's'le with the marines. Mr. Spencer, you'll remain aboard, and fight the batteries, if necessary. Mr. Breed, I'll have you take the sta'b'd watch after the marines. That will be all, gentlemen."

Fellowes clung to a forestay, atop of the Centurion's bulwarks, peering into the furry smokeclouds that swirled and trembled to the throbbing cadence of cannon and musketry. Behind him the fo'c's'le was crammed with men. Tom Grogan, hefting an ax in a knotty fist, crouched at his captain's feet.

"Can ye see her, messmate?" he croaked anxiously, barriers of rank forgotten.

"Not yet—Ah, there's her main-truck!"

A wild cheer announced that others had seen it, too. The Long Tom thundered brazenly, the la'b'd battery boomed by divisions, and the concussion blew the smoke upward to expose the Badger's hull, rolling sluggishly like a wounded whale, half a cable's length distant.

"Hard over, Mr. Noggle," Fellowes hailed the sailing master. "Ready, you grape-men!"

The privateer slid easily around the sloop-of-war's bow, poking her bowsprit into the tattered boarding nettings aft of the forechairs. Grapnels jangled across the narrow belt of water, and slowly, very slowly, the two vessels ground together, broadside guns muzzle to muzzle, gun crews stabbing at each other through the ports, smallarms rattling in a savage crescendo.

From his perch Fellowes looked down upon the Badger's shattered deck. Scores of hostile faces scowled up at him. His eyes coolly scrutinized the Britishers for his enemy's face. And misgiving stirred in him, for Collishawe was nowhere visible. Carry, the first lieutenant, and a midshipman were the only officers in sight. The Badger was a shambles, although her crews were still unbeaten, surging forward to meet the Americans when Fellowes jumped among them.

Cuffee had lingered for one more shot with the Long Tom, and leaped

Mrs. Minnie Stewart and Mrs. Henry Pringle of Flint are here for a visit with the former's mother, Mrs. George Pringle.

Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Goodman and children of Chicago were here this week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Goodman.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bryant of Pontiac and Arthur Bryant of Cleveland were renewing "old home-town" acquaintances last Friday.

Misses Cathola Lorraine and Clara Leu, who have been attending summer school at Ferris Institute, Big Rapids, returned home, Thursday.

Wm. Murray landed an 8-pound rainbow trout Wednesday evening while fishing on the Jordan River. The trout was caught with a fly on a fly rod.

Robert Proctor, caretaker of the East Jordan Tourist Park, while fishing in the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, Wednesday evening, landed a 10-pound pike.

Mrs. A. J. Suffern of Greenville, and daughter, Mrs. Fred Krueger with husband and children of Chicago were here this week visiting at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milo Fay.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Aucompaugh, (Agnes Vogel) who have been visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Josephine Vogel, returned home to Lansing, Tuesday. Edd Vogel, who was here from Muskegon, returned with them.

Rev. and Mrs. James W. Ruehle with three daughters of Toledo, Ohio, were renewing acquaintances in East Jordan, Thursday. Rev. Ruehle was pastor of the local Church of God some ten years ago, and is attending the annual camp meeting near Charlevoix.

Mr. Poindexter, Ass't State Geologist, and two assistants will make East Jordan their headquarters for the next few weeks. Their work is locating the proper quality and quantity of gravel for road work on M-66. Mr. and Mrs. Poindexter are occupying Mrs. Waterman's home.

The local L. D. S. Church joins with the Northern Michigan District in holding their annual Reunion, which takes place at the Park of the Pines, near Boyne City, and commences this Friday, Aug. 9th. Interesting programs are assured and all are cordially invited to attend the meetings.

Prof. F. G. Blair will have charge of the morning services at the M. E. Church this Sunday, Aug. 11th, commencing at 10:00 a. m. Prof. Blair, who has a summer home at Eveline Orchards, is Supt. of Public Instruction of Indiana and is a former president of the National Educational Association.

Thomas Morrison of Columbus, Ohio, youthful resorter of Bellaire, who killed Charles Canfield, 76, and the horse he was riding, the evening of July 9, near the Antrim County Infirmary, is out on bail under $1,000 bonds. He is under arrest on two counts. They are manslaughter and negligent homicide. His case has been placed in the probate court by Prosecutor Attorney Wellman, with a request that he be returned to the circuit court to stand trial. His age, 16 years, makes this course necessary. Probate Judge, Fred H. Pratt of Grand Traverse County will hear the case in probate court August 12. Probate Judge Bailey, who is in poor health, asking Judge Pratt to serve for him.

Report of Annual School Meeting

East Jordan, Michigan, July 8, 1929.

Minutes of the annual School Meeting of Dist. No. 4, Frl., South Arm Township held at the schoolhouse on Monday, July 8, 1929.

The annual Financial Statement and audit of books from 1926 to 1929 were read and approved.

Moved that the school year be 9 1/2 months. Carried.

The terms of Pray, Bechtold and Darbee having expired, the meeting proceeded to elect candidates to fill vacancies. C. H. Pray and George W. Bechtold were nominated to succeed themselves for a term of three years having no opposition, motion made the rules be suspended and Secretary be instructed to cast unanimous ballot for the above candidates. Carried.

A. L. Darbee who was appointed by the Board of Education for one year to fill vacancy of Roy E. Webster, resigned, was nominated to succeed himself, for one year.

James Gidley was also nominated for this office. Ballots spread and A. L. Darbee receiving the majority of votes was declared elected.

Motion to adjourn. Carried.
 C. H. PRAY, Secretary of Board of Education.

ANNUAL FINANCIAL STATEMENT

East Jordan, Michigan, June 29, 1929.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

This is to certify that I have audited the books of the Board of Education of the City of East Jordan from June 1, 1926 to July 1, 1929 and found them in exceptionally good condition.

I found no money has been paid by the Treasurer unless by a written order of the Secretary.

The following is my report:

FINANCIAL REPORT FOR 1926-27-28-29.

RESOURCES OR INCOME
Balance on hand June 1, 1928	$ 303.40

from the hot breach of the plect to the brig's bulwarks, yelling his war cry. A second leap carried him over the heads of the boarders, fighting to widen their foothold on the Badger's fo'c's'le, and into the midst of the enemy, who, for the first time, recoiled from the negro's cutlass and terrible, scarred face—"Grogan's nigger!" "Gawd, ere's Cuffee!" The old superstitions were aroused—"He'll tear ye wiv his teeth!" "A man-eater, lads!"

The resistance commenced to weaken. Still as numerous as the boarders, the Badger's crew suffered mainly from their dearth of officers, which became an absolute lack after Joe Doak had bayoneted Mr. Curry and Tom had disposed of the lone surviving midshipman. Where was Collishawe? Fellowes asked himself again. The Britishers would have been leaderless, if it hadn't been for Bob Clinch. The bosun was indefatigable, wielding a gory boarding pike, shouting hoarse admonitions to his followers.

But one man's steadfastness couldn't overcome the driving power of a crew who knew they were victorious, plus the superstitious fear engendered by Cuffee. Clinch, himself, realized this latter factor, and bravely sought the negro in personal combat—vastly to Cuffee's delight.

"Yan-aa-aaah, Bob! Cuffee goin' cut yo' nose fo' eat."

"No nigger deserter can stand up to me," growled Bob, thrusting desperately. "Ere's daylight in ye."

But Cuffee parried the pike with a single blow of his left arm, and raked his cutlass point down the unscarred side of the bosun's face. Poor Clinch, blinded by the flow of blood, staggered and would have fallen if Tom Grogan hadn't caught him.

The capture of Clinch disheartened the Britishers. They had kept together for a part of the mainmast, close ranks fairly impenetrable; but now, as Cuffee whirled into them, hacking and hewing, parrying strokes with his bare hand, blood gleaming ferociously in the shiny black mask of his face, a score of Americans wedging after him, they developed a tendency to scatter into isolated groups, which surrendered as rapidly as they were surrounded. Fellowes was leading an attack upon one of these groups when a pistol cracked behind it, and the ghost of a quarter-deck voice pealed languidly above the click-clack of steel:

"I'll shoot every man who tries to touch that flag!"

The startled bluejackets dodged right and left, flinging their weapons from them, and there, propped against the break of the poop, lay Collishawe, his eyes blazing in a face drained of all color, his body, from the waist down, a bundle of soggy bandages. Near by sprawled one of his sailors, dead, the smoking pistol in his hand telling its own story. While the Americans watched, he dropped the weapon, and selected another from a row convenient to his grasp, cocking it and shaking the priming in the pan as carelessly as though not an enemy was in sight.

Fellowes was embarrassed, uncertain how to act, mistaking the idea of violence against a wounded foe. But Cuffee was not so compunctious. The negro stole aft along the port bulwarks, and threw an empty water-bucket which brushed the pistol from Collishawe's hand, and then, before the Englishman could replace it, kicked the remaining weapons out of reach.

Collishawe had been wrenched around by the blow, and a trickle of blood began to seep from his bandages; but not a muscle twitched in his face, and his one indication of feeling was a curious glance at Fellowes. The Long Islander was more at a loss than ever. He had obtained his supreme objective. Here, before him lay the man who had flogged him wounded, defeated, at his mercy. The Badger was his. He had humiliated Collishawe as much as he had dreamed of doing. And the words that came to his lips were consolatory!

"Sorry you're wounded. What can we do for you?"

"Nothing, thanks," answered Collishawe. "I'm done for."

"Oh, no! My surgeon—"

"Have him spend his spare time with my men who need it." The Englishman's tone was inflexible, but Fellowes began to detect a slightly hesitant quality in it, a hidden weakness.

"Our Scotchman was bowled out."

"But won't you let me have a look?"

"Use. My legs are pulp. One of you—n' twenty-four pounder shot."

Fellowes looked away uncomfortably. He hadn't envisaged this ending to his quest. Suddenly he heard Collishawe speaking again.

"I say, you're a stickler. That was a well-fought action. Used your head. Did you, by any chance, plan that battery for me?"

Fellowes nodded. Collishawe frowned, plucking at the bandages around his thighs.

"Done the same, myself, in your place. Humph! But I couldn't very well help floggin' you, y'know. Discipline, and all that sort of thing."

"You needn't have pressed me," asserted Fellowes, recovering a sense of injustice.

Collishawe frowned again. There were tiny beads of sweat on his forehead, and his gaunt cheeks grew gaunter.

"Ain't sure," he answered. "Couldn't help myself, though. That swine Chater. Swore you were a British subject, said anyway 'twould be dangerous to let you get into New York—you'd talk about the True Bounty meetin' us."

One Feather Not Enough

Remember the old story of the Indian who heard about feather beds and that he would try one? He took one feather, laid it on a plank and slept on it all night. In the morning he woke up with a crick in his back and growled: "White man say feather bed heap soft. White man big fool."

Some retail merchants try advertising like that. They run an advertisement once or twice and because they do not note a big increase in business say that advertising is not good for them.

One feather is all right, but it takes more than one to make a feather bed.

The same principle applies to advertising. If intelligently planned and used, satisfaction and profitable returns are certain.

A WISCONSIN woman, 103 years old, attributes her old age to "minding her own business." Now you know why so few people live to be a hundred.

WHEN you think of the bond issues that must be retired by the next generation it is no wonder a new-born baby cries.

—WHY IS IT that a girl will believe everything a fellow tells her before marriage and nothing afterwards?
