School Calendar For 1929-30

SUPT. DUNCANSON ANNOUNCES YEAR'S PROGRAM.

School Opened.....Sept. 9, 1929
 Mich. Educational Meet. Oct. 21-22
 Thanksgiving Vacation Nov. 28-29
 Christmas Vacation Dec. 20
 School Begins Jan. 6, 1930
 Semester Exams Jan. 29-30-31
 Second Semester Begins Feb. 3
 Memorial Day May 30
 Class Day June 11
 Commencement June 12

The above calendar was made out after quite careful consideration, having in mind the State requirement of 180 days actual school attendance in a standard High School. The fact that school started one week late this year and the fact that many boys and girls like to get jobs and are able to get jobs about the 12th or 13th of June or soon after, we do not care to run school until the 20th. We therefore have not considered our usual Spring Vacation. On the other hand we are giving a full two weeks Christmas vacation. Then again there is a little breathing spell for a good many between semesters. Another question under consideration that might help to relieve the tension before the final stretch is the possibility of getting off the first and second of May. This gives us a little rest and at the same time gives us a chance to count the three days as a week and still be five days to the good on our requirements.

The above calendar is not absolutely iron-clad but in a rather definite way gives everyone an idea when vacations are coming. Should some of the farmers require some help of some of the larger children during potato digging time, it is possible to arrange for same through the Supt. I am sure that most people would not take undue advantage of this privilege; however the school will go the limit on giving you the necessary help during this rush season. This would also apply in the Spring as well as the Fall. It might be urged that the boys and girls that might want to get off for a few days make an effort to get their work in ahead of time, making it easier for the teachers to excuse them.

SUPT. A. J. DUNCANSON.

HARVEST HOME SERVICE AT PRES. CHURCH

Next Sunday morning there will be a Harvest Home service at the Presbyterian Church. The service, and its setting, will be designed to call attention to the fact that God is the beneficent power back of all our harvests. The decorating of the church for the service is in charge of those who work with the soil and help to produce the harvests, with Mrs. B. Smatts as chairman.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK—OCT. 6-12

A PROCLAMATION By the Governor

For some years past it has been the custom to inaugurate a campaign of education and action for Fire Prevention, with the view of reducing the great unnecessary fire losses which cause an enormous destruction of property each year.

The time designated for this commendable undertaking is the second week in October of each year, therefore as Governor of Michigan I proclaim the week from

OCT. 6 TO OCT. 12, 1929
"FIRE PREVENTION WEEK"

The work which will be accomplished during that period will result in a great saving of life and property, therefore it is essential that it be given the co-operation which movement deserves. It should be observed in cities, villages, and rural communities to the fullest extent.

Heretofore there has been a lack of extending fire prevention week activities into the rural districts where it is so much needed. A scattered population, numerous buildings grouped and no means or apparatus for fighting fire, the farmer is quite helpless in case his buildings take fire, facing the complete destruction of his accumulations of years. Therefore it is hoped that the work may this year be extended into rural districts.

Great benefits would follow in the years to come if teachers in rural schools would instill in the minds of the growing pupils the most common dangers of fire on the farm, and how to combat them, with the suggestion that they closely watch for fire hazards, that their parents be advised and the property made safe.

With the near approach of time for the starting of heating plants, fur-

ALMEDA LORRAINE PASSES AWAY AT FLINT

Mrs. Almeda Lorraine passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. J. Trombly at Flint, Monday, Sept. 23rd, 1929, following an illness of a year's duration from a complication of diseases.

Almeda Frances Munson was born at Chicago, Ill., Jan. 11, 1856, her parents being Alvin and Cornelia Munson.

On March 20, 1873 she was united in marriage to Clarence Lester Lorraine at High Forest, Minn. They came to East Jordan in 1892, where Mr. Lorraine took up the work of newspaper publisher which he continued until his death May 17, 1918.

Deceased is survived by two sons and two daughters, viz—Roy L. Lorraine of Monroe, Mich., Mrs. Cora Burney and Bert L. Lorraine of East Jordan, and Mrs. Verschel Trombly of Flint. Also by five brothers—Wilbur Munson of Mountain Home, Idaho; Lewis, George and Giles M. Munson of Stewartville, Minn.; and C. D. Munson of Chicago.

Mrs. Lorraine was a member of the East Jordan Presbyterian Church and was an active worker in church affairs during her many years' residence here.

The remains were brought to East Jordan Wednesday. Funeral services will be held from her late home on Mary St., this Friday morning at 10:00 o'clock, conducted by Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, pastor of the Presbyterian Church. Interment at Sunset Hill.

Circuit Meeting Here This Week

LOWER MICHIGAN CIRCUIT NORWEGIAN LUTHERAN CHURCH.

The Annual Circuit Meeting of the Norwegian Lutheran Church for Lower Michigan will be held at the Lutheran Church, East Jordan, beginning this Friday evening and continuing through Saturday and Sunday. Following is the naces, stoves, pipes, chimneys, etc., should be placed in safe condition, rubbish removed and burned, all combustibles, gasoline, oils, paints, varnishes, etc., should be safely stored.

The marked interest shown by the Michigan Fire Chief's Association, in their efforts to make Michigan safe from fire furnishes an example of what may be accomplished by other similar organizations.

Through the united action of the citizens of our State, it is hoped that we may be able to continue to decrease the great unnecessary fire waste.

Given under my hand and the great seal of the State this 12th day of Sept., in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-nine, and of the commonwealth the ninety-third.

FRED W. GREEN, Governor

POMONA GRANGE

Charlevoix Pomona Grange, No. 40 will meet with Peninsula Grange, Saturday, Oct. 5th.

Election of Pomona delegates take place at this meeting.

Election of officers for the ensuing two years will be held at night.

This is an important meeting and every Grange should be well represented.

The crank is seldom willing to give you a good turn.

What is the difference between a summer dress in winter and an extracted tooth? One is too thin, the other tooth out.

PLEASE READ THIS AND ACT

You may still own property in East Jordan which you either desire to sell, or if not, you want the satisfaction of knowing that it is salable.

If you ever lived in East Jordan any length of time, whether you now own property here or not, you have a "warm spot in your heart" for the "old home town" so beautifully situated on South Arm of Lake Charlevoix and Jordan River.

In either case you will get a great "kick" out of coming back here, even for a visit, and see that the town is progressing—both for beauty as well as for business.

The East Jordan Business Men's Club (Chamber of Commerce) has appointed a committee, consisting of W. A. Loveday, John Porter and Lewis Cornell, to devise means for developing the summer business.

To accomplish that result, means re-construction and beautifying while at the same time providing accommodations for summer visitors. We must have something to offer them, and be able to accommodate them, if we expect to get them coming in "quantity production."

More strangers were in our city this year than ever before, and as soon as M-66 is extended to Charlevoix and M-32 brought here from Alpena, Gaylord and Elmira, to Ellsworth and Atwood—both of which now seem most certain—our opportunities will be greatly increased.

We suggest a "DEVELOPMENT COMPANY" with a paid in capital stock of $30,000 to $50,000, for the purpose of acquiring property, building, selling and renting properties, and eventually converting many of the old dilapidated looking properties into attractive summer homes—either moving to desirable location and rebuilding, or wrecking and using the materials—and while all cannot be accomplished in one season, a big start can be made now and ready for next year. Among things to be considered, may be a Golf Course nearby, and improved Hotel facilities.

A town never made itself, but "a town is what we make it."

This does not obligate anyone, but we want an expression from all the friends of East Jordan.

Then we will know whether efforts along that line may have favorable co-operation.

Some people can spare $100 to $500 easier than others can spare $10 but in any case, if we make a start, a few months (monthly payments) in which to pay in, can be arranged.

Tell us that you are with us, by filling out the attached coupon and mailing at once to W. A. Loveday, (Chairman of Committee) East Jordan, Mich.

I approve of the suggestion and will consider taking $_____ stock, when a satisfactory and definite plan is presented.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere gratitude and appreciation to friends for courtesies extended during our recent bereavement, the death of our mother and grandmother, Mrs. Anna Barnette. We thank those who sent floral tributes, and loaned cars, and are especially grateful to Rev. C. W. Sidebotham of the Presbyterian Church, and members of his church who sang.

AN APPRECIATION

The members of the Good Will Sunday School Class wish to express their appreciation and thanks to those who donated chickens and to all who helped make the supper at the M. E. Church last Friday night a success.

SOUTH LAKE LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS INSTALL OFFICERS

At the regular meeting of South Lake Lodge No. 180, Knights of Pythias, held Wednesday evening, Sept. 18, the following officers were installed for ensuing year:—

C. C.—Barney Milstein
 V. C.—A. J. Duncanson
 Prelate—W. H. Sloan
 M. at A.—C. F. Snellenberger
 K. of R. & S.—George Jaquays
 M. of F.—Glenn Bulow
 M. of E.—C. H. Whittington
 M. of W.—Mike Gunderson
 I. G.—M. J. Williams
 O. G.—Carl Grutsch

Winners of The Contest

FOR BETTER YARDS AND GARDENS IN EAST JORDAN.

First prize for general improvement—divided between Harold Stueck and C. A. Brabant—$50.00.

Best new flower garden—M. J. Williams—$10.00.

Best care of lawn—Chas. Crowell, $10.00.

New planting shrubs and trees—Albert Frieberg—$10.00.

Repairs, cleaning, etc.—George Vance—$10.00.

The judges found it a difficult task to decide between the many contestants. Brabant's and Stueck's were a tie in counts and it was decided to divide the first prize, giving $25.00 to each one. Mr. and Mrs. Stueck changed their back yard from an ordinary vegetable garden plot into a beautiful planting of lawn, shrubs and flowers. Brabant's improved their yard, have taken over a vacant lot next door which they are beautifying.

Honorable mention is also due M. J. Williams and George Vance for great general improvement. The judges were undecided which prize to award them as only one was allowed a contestant.

The gardens of Sloans and Bechtolds and Mrs. Howard should have honorable mention as they have long been beauty spots of East Jordan.

We have many other beautiful gardens which the Business Men's Club regret were not entered. However, those who did not receive prizes and those did not enter may feel well repaid since attractive property is always a joy to the owner as well as to the town in general.

Let us hope this contest may be an inspiration to us all next year, and we may have a bigger and better contest with hundreds of entries instead of sixty.

The Business Men's Club wish to express appreciation to the judges for their work and to the Charlevoix County Herald for its co-operation.

BOYNE CITY YOUTH DIES AFTER CRASH

Ivan Davis, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Davis of Boyne City, died Monday in a Petoskey hospital from a double skull fracture, suffered when the automobile he was riding in overturned between Boyne City and Traverse City Thursday night, Sept. 19th.

Davis was riding with Melvin and Victor Clute and Merritt Smith, all of Boyne City. The youths were returning from the Fair at Traverse City and are believed to have gone to sleep, the car striking a tree.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the M. E. church with burial in Maple Lawn cemetery. The parents, four brothers, and one sister survive. Walter Davis of East Jordan was an uncle of the deceased.

DO YOUR KIDNEYS NEED HELP?

Physical vigor and mental driving power don't just "happen" to us. They result from the healthy normal activity of all our bodily functions. Good health is impossible when the kidneys falter and fail in their important work of thorough elimination. The tonic, corrective action of Foley Pills diuretic puts the urinary processes to work in a natural way, ridding the system of the lurking poisons that cause the distressing aches, pains, generally weakened, tired out, run down condition. Guaranteed. Try them.—Hite's Drug Store. adv.

Will Present Road Projects

CADILLAC MEET ON HIGHWAYS IS WEDNESDAY, OCT. 2.

The trunkline committee of the Northern Michigan Road Commissioner's Association will present more than two score projects to the Board of Directors of the Association at a meeting at Cadillac Oct. 2. The projects were presented to the trunkline committee at a recent meeting at Grayling.

The projects approved by the Board of Directors at the October meeting will be sent to the administrative board and to the State Highway committee for their consideration.

The resolution passed at the Grayling session will also be considered at the October meeting.

The resolution follows:—

"Whereas M-66 now runs nearly straight north and south from the proposed northern terminus south to Six Lakes in Montcalm county and from that point zigzags off to the southwest.

And whereas, existing trunk lines or parts of trunk lines are already laid out nearly all the way from Six Lakes south through Stanton and Ionia to Battle Creek.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that the State Highway department be requested to renumber these trunk lines, so that one number will be carried by the road from East Jordan south to Battle Creek, at least, and farther if found desirable, thus giving Michigan a short line north and south near the center of the Peninsula under one number.

"This resolution is offered by the counties in this association through which the route now passes, namely, Charlevoix, Antrim, Kalkaska, Missaukee, Oseola, Montcalm.

Among the proposed extensions of the committee of interest to the people of this region are:

M-32 East Elmira to East Jordan via Ellsworth and Atwood to U. S. 31 trunk line.

M-76 Kalkaska, Rapid City, Alden and Bellaire. Trunk line.

M-66 East Jordan to Charlevoix. Trunk line.

M-75 Boyne Falls east to U. S. 27. Trunk line.

U. S. 131 Fife Lake corners to Elk Rapids. Trunk line.

Cheboygan to Cross Village. Trunk line.

M-66 Manclona to East Jordan. Construction.

M-66 Lake City south to junction of M-55 and M-66. Construction.

U. S. 131 Kalkaska to Manclona. Construction 20-foot concrete.

U. S. 131 Kalkaska to Fife Lake. Survey.

M-88 Pavement and bridge in village of Bellaire. Construction.

M-88 Pavement in Central Lake. Survey and plans.

U. S. 31 Pavement 1 mile of Charlevoix to 3 miles north of Charlevoix. (Trunk line means adding the stretch to the trunk line system.)

PRELIMINARY STEPS TO ORGANIZE P. T. ASSOCIATION

A number of our citizens interested in organizing a Parent-Teacher's Association met at the High School, Wednesday afternoon and made a temporary organization with Supt. A. J. Duncanson, chairman and Mrs. Jessie Hager, secretary.

On motion a committee to organize an Association was appointed—one from each rural district and five from the City as follows:—

KNOWING HIS ASHES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Thomas was going through the annual orgy of having the basement cleaned out. His wife attended to the task of putting everything above the cellar into sanitary condition and seemed to enjoy it. Below ground it was Thompson's task, and among other things there was the winter's accumulation of ashes to be gotten rid of.

This is an age of specialization, and even in our small town we have an ash man who gives all his time and all his talents to the disposal of ashes. It was he, of course, whose services Thompson employed in carting away the remains of what had once been a supply of fuel.

"What 'a' you been burnin'?" the ash man inquired as he viewed the pile of cinders lying in one corner of the cellar.

"Well, coke, mostly," Thompson replied, "mixed with a little coal."

"I could see at the first glance that it wasn't coal," the laboring man stated. "I ain't educated, but I do know my ashes."

It is an accomplishment which is not infrequently lacking for a man properly to know his ashes.

"Have you Little Black Sambo?" I asked the clerk in the book store. I was getting a birthday remembrance for a child of my acquaintance and I thought he might be interested in the story of the little colored boy.

The salesman looked over the long line of shelves in an endeavor to find the desired volume. He opened a few drawers, paged over a table of miscellaneous books nearby, confusion showing on his countenance.

"I don't seem to find it," he explained finally, "but we have Black Beauty, and the Black Tulip."

Here was a man who did not know his ashes.

Denton occupies a prominent position in a big organization, but he has hard sledding. He is far from popular; he is even cordially disliked by many of the people who work with him, or perhaps I should say who work for him. Denton prides himself that he plays no favorites; he treats everybody alike. The trouble with him is that he doesn't know his ashes.

It has never got through his head that diplomacy is a virtue, that the sensitive self-conscious man should be approached in a far different manner than the bully; that some men are stimulated by praise and others by pride. Denton praises no one. It would seem to him a weakness to do so. He makes friends with no one. He sits in cold isolation in his bare office and gives orders. If he only knew a little of human nature and could some way get to it, he might some day be almost a great person.

The fish man could teach many of us a very important lesson. The recognition of different conditions, of different personalities, of a varied method of approach in business transactions, of the value of what at first might seem trifling details—these qualities make or mar success. It pays to know one's ashes.

A diamond, if intensely heated in a vacuum, expands or swells and turns into black charcoal. If intensely heated while in the air, the diamond will disappear as carbonic acid gas. This seems to indicate that they were formed in the earth from carbon, and subjected to great heat and pressure.

KNOWING HIS ASHES
By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Thomas was going through the annual orgy of having the basement cleaned out. His wife attended to the task of putting everything above the cellar into sanitary condition and seemed to enjoy it. Below ground it was Thompson's task, and among other things there was the winter's accumulation of ashes to be gotten rid of.

This is an age of specialization, and even in our small town we have an ash man who gives all his time and all his talents to the disposal of ashes. It was he, of course, whose services Thompson employed in carting away the remains of what had once been a supply of fuel.

"What 'a' you been burnin'?" the ash man inquired as he viewed the pile of cinders lying in one corner of the cellar.

"Well, coke, mostly," Thompson replied, "mixed with a little coal."

"I could see at the first glance that it wasn't coal," the laboring man stated. "I ain't educated, but I do know my ashes."

It is an accomplishment which is not infrequently lacking for a man properly to know his ashes.

"Have you Little Black Sambo?" I asked the clerk in the book store. I was getting a birthday remembrance for a child of my acquaintance and I thought he might be interested in the story of the little colored boy.

The salesman looked over the long line of shelves in an endeavor to find the desired volume. He opened a few drawers, paged over a table of miscellaneous books nearby, confusion showing on his countenance.

"I don't seem to find it," he explained finally, "but we have Black Beauty, and the Black Tulip."

Here was a man who did not know his ashes.

Denton occupies a prominent position in a big organization, but he has hard sledding. He is far from popular; he is even cordially disliked by many of the people who work with him, or perhaps I should say who work for him. Denton prides himself that he plays no favorites; he treats everybody alike. The trouble with him is that he doesn't know his ashes.

It has never got through his head that diplomacy is a virtue, that the sensitive self-conscious man should be approached in a far different manner than the bully; that some men are stimulated by praise and others by pride. Denton praises no one. It would seem to him a weakness to do so. He makes friends with no one. He sits in cold isolation in his bare office and gives orders. If he only knew a little of human nature and could some way get to it, he might some day be almost a great person.

The fish man could teach many of us a very important lesson. The recognition of different conditions, of different personalities, of a varied method of approach in business transactions, of the value of what at first might seem trifling details—these qualities make or mar success. It pays to know one's ashes.

A diamond, if intensely heated in a vacuum, expands or swells and turns into black charcoal. If intensely heated while in the air, the diamond will disappear as carbonic acid gas. This seems to indicate that they were formed in the earth from carbon, and subjected to great heat and pressure.

Gratifying Growth of Zoning Activity Noted

During the last year, 87 municipalities passed zoning ordinances, while 101 either adopted more comprehensive zoning ordinances or amended existing regulations to make them more effective. An analysis of the 87 new zoning ordinances which were passed shows that 44 were comprehensive; that is, the use, height and area of buildings were regulated; 27 merely controlled the use of buildings; seven regulated the use and area of buildings; and two were merely temporary ordinances, pending the preparation of a zoning ordinance to suit local requirements.

Zoning activity is evident in practically all states, the report shows. New York led in the number of municipalities zoned during 1928, with 23 cities, towns and villages. Ohio and Pennsylvania tied for second place with six each. Youngstown, Ohio; Waterbury, Conn., and Altoona, Pa., were three of the largest cities which adopted zoning legislation last year. South Dakota and Idaho were added to the states having zoned municipalities when four cities in the former and three in the latter adopted zoning ordinances during the year.

New York is the foremost state in the Union in the number of its municipalities having zoning ordinances in effect with a total of 181. New Jersey is second with 84; California, third with 78; Illinois, fourth with 71, and Massachusetts, fifth with 62. Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Kansas follow in the order named.

Little Difficulty in Remodeling Old Home

As the average family grows more prosperous, it begins to think in terms of greater home prestige and comfort. The subject of new furniture for the living room comes up, the thought of moving to other quarters is given consideration, and there is a general uneasy feeling that the family is not getting all out of its home life that it should.

Many families who own their own home would not hesitate for an instant to leave the neighborhood for more pretentious quarters were it not for the fact that old friends and acquaintances would be out of easy reach.

The desire for a bigger home and one with more modern improvements can be accomplished through modernizing. Exterior walls can either be overcoated with shingles or stucco. The interior may be livened and made pleasant through the use of paint and varnish, new trim, the installation of a second bath and replacement of the worn-out heating system with a colorful, jacketed and insulated boiler and decorative thin tube radiators.

Brightening the Garden

It is surprising how much a few cans of paint can do in the way of brightening up the garden when applied to fences, lattice and arbors. This should be done before growth starts and the actual rush of painting begins. Also, garden furniture that has been stored inside or left out should be painted to look its best.

Bird houses should be put out so that they may weather a bit before the birds take possession. If they are home-made, do not paint the inner edges of the doorway or the inside of the house. These little houses will bring the friend of the garden nearer home and will help greatly in fighting against insects.

Shade Trees and Health

The health of a community is vitally affected by shade tree growth; leaves are continually, through transpiration and chemical processes, sending moisture particles into the air we breathe. They are absorbing, through the tiny openings (or stomata) of their leaf tissues the noxious and harmful gases of a crowded city and their growth is breaking up the heat of the sun, giving cooling and refreshing shade.—Boston Herald.

For Road-Sign Regulation

During the annual convention of the American Association of State Highway Officials held in Chicago, advertising signboards which tend to disfigure the landscape were discussed. A resolution was passed that advertising signs along highways are liable to create serious traffic hazards by distracting attention of drivers and should be placed at least 500 feet from all highways.

Quality Always Pays

From master to apprentice, from father to son, Colonial craftsmen passed their pride of manual skill. To them home building was an art. Charming, sturdy homes, many still standing, reflect the builders' dreams of a new empire. The home builder of today can have no finer examples of the worth of good materials and good workmanship. Quality always pays.

Hoover Model Act Favored

North Dakota has passed a city planning enabling act following in general the Hoover model act. Under this new law, territory within six miles of a North Dakota city can be made subject to the control of the city planning commission.

WIRELESS IS USED BY SCOTLAND YARD

Police Cars Keep in Touch With Headquarters.

London.—On the top floor of a grim range of buildings overlooking the Thames is a small room which contains some of the most carefully guarded secrets of the London police.

The room is the control point of Scotland Yard's wireless system. Throughout the day "tips" on the actions of criminals are flashed to or cars of the "flying squad" in all parts of London. There are times also when photographs and fingerprints of criminals are transmitted to police authorities half way across the world.

Not unlike a "Sparks" cabin aboard ship, the room contains a Futlograph transmitting machine and a Wright facsimile transmitter in addition to standard Morse equipment. It is thoroughly insulated against interference from the electric trains which run directly below Scotland Yard and the elevators in the building.

Effectiveness Demonstrated.

The effectiveness of the system was demonstrated recently when a squad car captured three motor bandits within ten minutes after it had been "tipped off" by the Yard.

Most of the squad cars are indistinguishable from ordinary delivery cars. There is no wireless equipment on the outside to reveal their purpose. As they whirl through the streets few of London's millions are aware of their mission.

At all hours of the day and night the units of the squad are in constant touch with headquarters by wireless and can be mobilized quickly for duty at any particular point. They can communicate with each other through the Yard but not directly.

The newest of the police cars have room for four officers in addition to their wireless apparatus. They can accelerate from ten to sixty miles per hour in fifteen seconds and attain a speed of seventy-five miles per hour.

Secret Code Used.

Scotland Yard engineers began experimenting with wireless in 1921 when two machines were fitted with portable radio sets. To eliminate interference, reflector recruits attached to the receivers were used. Telephony was the method of communication at first but telegraphy later was substituted because of its greater range and reliability.

Among the earliest experiments was the scheme used in 1921 and the following years for controlling the vast Derby day traffic by wireless instructions from airplanes.

The present wave length used by the police is kept secret. A secret code is used in accordance with an international agreement with other police forces.

Scotland Yard frequently sends messages to the United States, Canada and Australia as well as to the continent. Finger prints have been transmitted to the American police and replies confirming the identity of the suspect have been received within 24 hours.

Few countries have police owned wireless sets. Germany and France have a few and it is being used in several United States cities, including Chicago, but the Scotland Yard set is the only large one in England.

Salmon Fails to Make Curve; Beaches Self

Seattle, Wash.—They don't have any signs "dangerous curves ahead" in the rivers of the Northwest—nor do they have traffic cops. Hence this fish story, which, by the way, may be true.

With a "bone in his teeth" fins making 90 revolutions per minute, full canvas and throttle wide open, old King Salmon was going places up the Duwamish river. His speed was 40 miles an hour or thereabouts.

Fred W. Newell, Jr., saw the terrible commotion in the waters. He took a couple of looks at the white foam and saw the fish.

Came a curve.

Out went a fin for a signal—but the river wasn't banked for that kind of navigation.

Salmon couldn't make the turn and pined up on the beach.

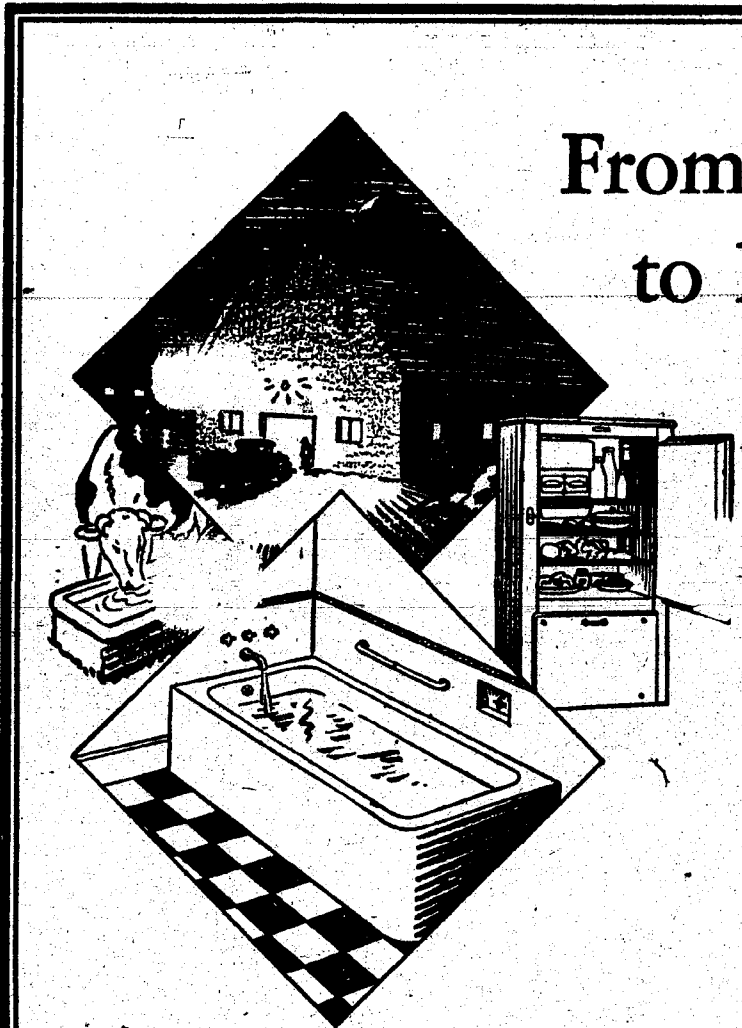

Newell picked up the fish, photographed it and took an oath his story was true.

Romance Collapses as Sweetheart Is Deported

Buffalo.—Romantic smuggling has palled on James J. Pfeiffer, twenty-three, who recently was fined $25 and saw his sweetheart deported to Canada. A love affair cropped up between the youth and a charming colleen, Anna Touhey, fresh from the rural districts of Roscommon county Ireland. In Quebec Anna told James she wanted to come to the "land of the free." Pfeiffer smuggled her across on a Lake Erie ferry, where the girl was arrested when casually questioned by officers in Buffalo.

Watch 125 Years Old Run

Nashville, Tenn.—W. S. Odle of Lexington, Tenn., has a watch bought in England about 125 years ago. It has not been running for 65 years but now, after being repaired by a jeweler, seems to be in perfect running condition. It is of gold, large size, open face with Roman characters and is exquisitely engraved over the back and around the edge.

From BARN to BATH TUB

A farmer friend who owns two General Motors cars went to the city the other day and stopped in to see some cousins. They showed him around their new roof-garden apartment, eighteen floors above the street, and proudly pointed out their Frigidaire in the pantry.

"Well," chuckled our farmer friend, "Mother has a garden full of old-fashioned flowers that she'd never trade for theirs . . . and as for the refrigerator, we have a bigger Frigidaire than they have!"

He also mentioned his Delco-Light power system and his DL water pump, which give him every other city convenience. As he often says himself, his farm is "General Motorized from barn to bath tub!"

It is perfectly true that General Motors, through its various units, offers even more to the farm family than to the city family. By applying methods of automobile production to home electric lighting and power plants, water pumping systems, and automatic refrigerators, General Motors can make the reliable kind of product that a farmer wants, at a price he can afford.

Winner Is Golf-Weary

The new champion of American amateur golfdom, stocky, likable Harrison R. Johnston of St. Paul, packed up his clubs at Pebble Beach and left the scene of his greatest conquest. "I don't want to look a golf club in the face again for sometime," he declared. "Of course, I am tickled to death. I was lucky to win, especially when you know I wasn't obliged to play the greatest player of them all, Bobby Jones."

THE DESERT MOON MYSTERY

By Key Cleaver Strahan

© by Doubleday Doran Co., Inc. WNU Service

One of Gaby's pleasant little ways was to refer to Martha as an idiot, right before her face.

"La-la!" Gaby exclaimed one evening, when Martha was wandering about. "The idiot gets on my nerves. Can't you make her keep still, Mrs. Ricker?"

"She isn't harming anyone," I said, since Mrs. Ricker, as usual, said nothing. "You leave her alone, and stop talking like that, Miss."

"I'm not harming anyone, now," Martha piped up. "But some day I might. I'd like to I won't, though," she walked over close to Gaby. "If you'll give me the gold monkey, I'll be good then, for always."

It was a bracelet charm of Gaby's, a gold monkey, about the size of an almond, with jade eyes. The Mrs. Ricker had seen it. She had begged for it. Gaby would not give it to her; would not so much as allow her to wear it for a few hours at a time. As usual, this evening, she refused to let Martha touch it.

"Yes, and you'll be sorry," Martha threatened.

Just as she had hated Gaby from the start, Martha had loved Danny; but she could not tell them apart. It seemed incredible that even Martha could be confused about the two girls; because, if ever girls were opposites, those girls were. Their faces, just their faces, did look alike. They both had large brown eyes, straight noses, small mouths, pointed chins, and complexions the color of real light caramel frosting. Danny's cheeks showed a faint pink, coming and going. Gaby painted her cheekbones, clear back to her ears, with deep orange-pink color. They both had wavy, dark brown hair, cut just the same in the back, real close fitting and down to a point. But Gaby brushed her hair straight back from her forehead, and put varnish stuff on it till it was as sleek and shining as patent leather. Gaby's clothes were all loud colored, or seemed to be—black turned gaudy when she put it on—and they were all insecure appearing, too defiant of paper patterns to be quite moral. Danny's clothes were as neat and quiet as a pigeon's.

Since Hubert Hand was too selfish ever to love anything that his nose wasn't attached to, his carryings on with Gaby should be classed, I think, not in the center ring, but as the main attraction of the third ring. And he almost old enough to be her father, with white coming into his hair at his temples.

To this day I have never understood those two, during those months. Gaby was in love with John. Hubert Hand was in love with Hubert Hand. Yet they hugged and kissed, and seemed to think that calling it "necking" made it respectable. It wasn't a flirtation, with them. It was more like a fight, where each of them was fighting for something they did not want. A perfectly footless, none too wholesome performance.

CHAPTER IV

The Cabin

The girls had been on the Desert Moon a little better than six weeks when, one evening, Sam came out into my kitchen where I was setting bread. "Mary," he began, real solemn for him, "the ancients used to have cities that they called cities of refuge. No matter what a fellow had done, if he could get inside into one of those cities, he was safe. Your kitchen always kinda seems like that to me—a city of refuge."

"Lands, Sam," I said, "what have you been up to that you are heading this safety first movement?"

"I haven't been up to anything," Sam answered, "and I don't allude to. But, Mary, some time ago you came to me with some suspicions. I let them off. I am not laughing. I'm worried. Queer things are going on around here. What I want to know, now is what do you know?"

"Nothing. What do you know?"

"Nothing."

"What do you suspect, then, Sam?"

"Nothing. What do you?"

"Nothing."

That, I see now, wouldn't have been

Too Bad

Customer: (upon entering store): "My! What is that smells?"

Merchant: "Do you smell it, too?"

Customer: "Yes, what is it?"

Merchant: "The business—it's rotten."

The first essential for happiness is to be popular with yourself.

a bad place for us both to laugh. Neither of us did.

"Have you any idea," Sam questioned, "why the girls go prowling all over the place, afoot and horseback, daytimes, and nighttimes, too, when they should be in their beds?"

"Well, all I know is just what I've known all along. They are hunting for something."

"Sure they are hunting for something. But what?"

"I don't know. But whatever it is, they are going to use it to get revenge, to injure maliciously somebody."

"Revenge, h—!" Sam said.

"Have it your own way. Only I happened one night to hear Gaby say to Danny that they had come to this ranch for the purpose of revenge."

"Revenge, h—!" Sam repeated himself. "Unless they are sore at me about Canneziano. What else did they say, when you happened to overhear this revenge remark?"

"If he was ready, at last, to listen, I was more than ready to tell what little I knew. I told; even to confessing about hiding in the clothes closet."

"Well, well," he drawled, when I had finished my story, "we are probably making a mountain out of a molehill. I wouldn't go pussy-footing around after them, any more. If I were you, Mary, there's a screw loose somewhere, that's sure; but it is not in the Desert Moon's machinery. We've got nothing on our consciences. We don't need to worry."

"Don't need to worry! Sam and I, sitting in that peaceful kitchen, talking so smart and frivolous, and deciding that we did not need to worry is a memory I could well be shed of. We didn't need to worry; a bit more than if I'd used arsenic in my covered pan of bread; not a bit more than if there had been a den of rattlesnakes in the cupboard under the sink, or gasoline instead of water in the tank on the back of the stove. That is how safe and peaceful we really were, at that minute, if we had had sense enough to know it. When I realize that four weeks from that very evening, three people—

But I guess it would be better to tell things straight along, as they happened. It seems to me a good book cannot be hurried, any more than a good cake can. "Mix and sift the dry ingredients," is the way all recipes for cakes begin.

For three days, beginning with the Fourth of July, there was to be a big celebration and rodeo at Telko.

Sam suggested at noon on the second of July, while we were at dinner, that maybe all of us would like to go; all, that is, except Martha and himself. Celebrations were never good for Martha.

I spoke right up and said to count me out. I know the deserts in July. But the boys were enthusiastic about it, and Danny was interested. Gaby, coming in late, greeted the idea with the same enthusiasm with which a woman greets moths in the clothes closet.

"Whence the crave for a Fourth of July celebration?" she asked.

"We have never seen a rodeo," Danny answered.

"Go, by all means," Gaby said. "Buy pink lemonade. March in the parade. Ride in the Liberty car. Mrs. Magin would be stuning as the goddess of Liberty, with—"

"Don't let my stunningness stop anything," I said. "I am not going."

"We'll think it over," Danny said. "It would be a long, hot ride. Probably we should all have a pleasant time, right here at home."

But there was something in the way she had said it, too quickly in answer to a look from Gaby, that made me think there was more to her backing out of the plan than had appeared on the surface.

Gaby had just begun her dinner. The rest of us had finished; so, according to our custom, we excused ourselves and went our ways. Chad tried to stay with Gaby, but Martha fussed and insisted that he come with her.

I had a sure feeling that Danny would return, and that she and Gaby would have something to say to each other. I went into the kitchen, stepped back into the pass-pantry, and opened the pass-window a crack.

Just as I opened the window I heard John say, "I thought Danny was in here."

"No," Gaby said. "But won't you come in and talk to me?"

"What about?"

"About—this."

I dared not peek, so I did not know what she meant until she said, "Why won't you kiss me?"

"Shall I say, I don't want to pick flowers in Hubert Hand's yard?"

"I hate you!"

"Don't be sore at me, Gaby," John said. "But I'm telling you, that's a lot nearer the truth than—than what you usually say."

John was one of the poorest talkers ever heard. One of those strong, silent men supposed to abound in the West, and who are likewise supposed to make every word that they say count. If John's did, they counted backwards.

"My dear, haven't I proven over and over again that I love you? In every way. I have made myself ridiculous here, because I haven't been able to conceal my feelings for you."

"I think," John said, "that most of that stuff you pull is just to spite Danny. It doesn't spite her, though. She knows she's the only girl in the world for me. I wish you'd cut it out—all of that, Gaby. Won't you and just be good friends?"

"You'd not want me for an enemy, would you?"

"Getting at anything, going any place, Gaby?"

"Perhaps. If Danny should hear that you have made love to me—"

"I have never made love to you. It would be your word against mine. I think Danny would take mine, if it came to a showdown. Listen here, child; don't you try to make trouble between Danny and me."

"Meaning?"

"Nothing. Except that it wouldn't be healthy for anyone who tried it."

"Boo-oo! Dangerous Dan McGrew stuff? Out where men are men? Killer loose tonight—all that, eh, Johnnie?"

A door opened. "John," came in Danny's voice, "uncle is looking everywhere for you."

"What," Danny questioned, when the door had closed behind John, "made you both look so angry, just now?"

"Never mind. Are you going to that fools' celebration, with only a day or two left, now?"

"I suppose not, if you don't want me to. I'd love going. I know there is no use in staying here."

"In other words, you would sacrifice my future for a rodeo? I more than half believe that you know—"

"What possible object could I have?"

"Many, my dear. Very many. Though I think that getting rid of me would outweigh the others. Listen to me, Danielle Canneziano, if I thought that you were keeping this from me, in order to bury me alive in this God-forsaken hole, and force me to watch you and John—"

"Gaby!"

"I've been a fool! Why can't I learn to take into consideration your d—n moralities? Understand this Dan. Don't fancy for one instant that failure is going to keep me here. Did you think, with a weapon like that in my hands, that I'd stand for anything less than a fifty-fifty proposition? Our original plan would have been better—easier, simpler. But I'll have my share out of this, anyway. So, if you do know—"

"Gaby, I don't know. I'll swear that I don't. How could I? But surely you wouldn't—wouldn't attempt—"

"That is for you to say, darling."

Darling, as she said it then, was as wicked a word as I had ever listened to.

"For me to say?"

"Give John to me. I've changed my mind. If you'll do that, I'll stay right here, and settle down, and do an imitation of a moral, model wife that would satisfy even you."

"Gaby, you speak as if John were a child's toy, to be passed about. I couldn't give him to you, if I were willing to."

"You could, and you know it. You won't. So, that's that. But keep your righteous fingers out of my life; stop your d—n preaching, and meddling. I am going to the cabin now. You would better come with me."

"We've searched that cabin a thousand times."

"All the same, it is the one logical place; far removed, and under cover."

The cabin is the one Sam built to live in when he first came to the valley. It is up Boulder creek, about half a mile from the ranchhouse. Sam has kept it in repair, inside and out; owing, I think, to sentimental memories, though he declares it is because he dislikes wreckage on the place. When John and Martha were little things, Sam used to hide their Christmas presents up there, under the shelf in the kitchen.

The shelf, about three feet wide, is built across one end of the kitchen. It served Sam for a table, pantry, and sink. Being a man, he built it right handily, like a chest, so that the entire top of it had to be raised to get to the storage place underneath. There was no secret about it. All anyone had to do, was to move everything off the top of it, and lift the lid. But I had read how the hardest problems for detectives always turned out to be something that had been too simple to notice; so my plan was to go up there and raise the lid.

On my way, I met the girls coming home. I imagined that they looked at me with suspicion. I passed a remark about the sweet-smelling clover hay, and hurried right along.

Half an hour later, when I was expecting instant death at any minute, I thought about that sweet clover smell, and how unappreciative I have been of it, and of the blue sky and fresh air, and of the green things, lighted yellow with sunshine, and I took a vow that, if I ever did get a chance to enjoy them again, I would spend the remainder of my life in so doing, and in being grateful to the Creator of them.

In the cabin, I went at once to the kitchen; and, removing fish-baskets, fly-books, and reels from the shelf, lifted the back.

I am sure that I had expected to find it empty. What I had not expected to find, and what I certainly had never hoped to find, was what was there: any number of neatly wrapped packages, addressed to Mr. Sam Stanley, sent by express, and labeled, variously, "Danger," "Explosives," "Handle with Care."

It did not take any common sense to know, straight off, that, sent to him or not, Sam was not mixed up in any business that had to do with explosives, bombs, and Bolshevism. It was easy enough to remember, then, that Sam had not been to Rittall for the past ten days; that Hubert Hand had been making the trips down for the mail, expressage, and supplies.

Just as he came into my mind, I heard his voice. It was a startling coincidence; but I need a better excuse than that, for surely no mortal ever did a more foolish thing than I did then. I climbed into that chest, along with those packages, and lowered the lid down over me. If I had any idea, I suppose it must have been a desire not to let him know that I had discovered his secret—his and Gaby's together, undoubtedly—but I can't remember having any thought at all until, just as the lid closed, I remembered the sad poem about the bride and the mistletoe chest.

Then I heard, through the thin boards, Hubert Hand, talking to some one, come into the kitchen. I chose death by suffocation or combustion.

"My dear woman," were the first words I heard from him, "you may set

I Am Sure That I Had Expected to Find It Empty.

your mind at rest. I am not going to marry the girl. I am not a marrying man, as you know; and, if I were, she wouldn't have me."

"You leave her alone, then. Understand me. Leave her alone."

If I believed my ears, that was Mrs. Ricker's voice; that was Mrs. Ricker, not only talking, but talking like that to Hubert Hand.

"You flatter me," he said. "Jealous, still, after all these years? I told you that I wouldn't marry her, and that she wouldn't have me, if I were willing to."

"Wouldn't she, though? Wouldn't she? She is mad about you. She can't look at you without love in her eyes, nor speak to you without love in her voice. She tries to hide it; but she can't hide it from me. I know. She loves you."

I am not sure whether I read it, or whether I figured it out for myself; but I do know it is a fact that no woman ever accuses another woman of being in love with a man unless she could imagine being in love with him herself.

"As to that," Hubert Hand said, "what possible difference would it make to you, Ollie?"

"Only that I would kill her, and you, too, before I would let her have you."

"Easy on, there, my girl. Your last attempt at murder—at least I hope that was your last attempt, was not, you may recall, very successful."

"I would be successful another time."

I kept quiet; very quiet. Surrounded, in there by explosives, and out there by people who talked of murder as calmly and as comfortably as if they were discussing moss-roses, very quiet did not seem half quiet enough.

They went into the other room of the cabin and stayed there for a few minutes. I could not hear what they were saying, but I did not budge an inch. After I heard them passing the window, and was sure that they had left the cabin, I remained, very quiet, in the chest for about five minutes longer before climbing out of it.

I was progressing toward home, shivering in every bone, limping, since both my legs had gone to sleep, when Sam, riding his bad-tempered bronco named Wishbone, came up behind me and dismounted.

"Corns bad, Mary?" he questioned. "Want to climb up on Wishbone and have me lead him?"

"When I go to meet death," I told him, "I shan't go on the back of a nasty-tempered bronco. Considering that everyone on the Desert Moon is at this minute, in mortal danger of their lives, all your lighthearted jesting seems pretty much out of place."

I told him, then, about the packages of explosives hidden under the shelf. I had not told him about my climbing in with them; so I was in no way prepared for his actions.

He stopped. He dropped Wishbone's bridle. He put both his hands on his stomach and leaned over and burst into uproarious laughter. "Ho-ho-ho." It rolled out, seeming to fill the entire valley.

"Fireworks," he gasped. "I got them for Martha. Going to surprise her on the Fourth. Sent for them months ago. Hid them up there. Ho-ho-ho! I told you to stop pussy-footing around, Mary. Ho-ho-ho! 'Do not look for wrong and evil, you will find them if you do—'"

With as much dignity as a heavy woman, with both of her legs asleep, could muster, I turned and left him. His words and his actions had certainly given me one lesson. From this time on, I would tell Sam Stanley nothing.

When I got back to the house, John was driving up the road in the sedan. He had been to Rittall for supplies and for the mail. He tossed the mailbag out to me and drove around to the kitchen door to unload. There was a letter for Gaby, postmarked France.

About a month before this, Gaby had received another letter that was a duplicate of this one; the same gray paper, the same sprawling handwriting. Instead of taking it indifferently as she did other letters, and reading it wherever she happened to be, she had snatched it out of my hand and had run off to her room. All that evening she had seemed to be preoccupied, and worried. Sending only two letters in close to two months, it seemed to me that whoever had written them did not write unless he or she had something of importance to say. I was still puzzling over it, when Gaby came into the room.

Sure enough, she snatched it out of my hands, just as she had done with the other letter, and ran straight upstairs with it.

When John and Danny came in, a few minutes later, I went upstairs. Habit stopped me at Gaby's door for a minute, with my ear to the keyhole. Faintly, sounds don't come plainly through our thick doors, I heard the portable typewriter that she brought with her when she came to the ranch, click, clicking away.

I was tucked and tired. So, after telephoning some instructions to the kitchen, I took plenty of time to tidy myself up. I dawdled in my bath, and I cut my corns, and rubbed hair tonic into my scalp. But, when on my way downstairs again, I stopped for a second at Gaby's door, the typewriter was still going. There was nothing to be made out of it, so I went along. It was fortunate that I did, because, before I had reached the top of the stairway, Gaby's door flung open and she called to me, with something in her voice that made me shake in my shoes.

I turned and looked at her. Her face wore an expression that was not human; an expression that would have made any decent woman do as I did, and turn her eyes quickly away.

"Tell Danny to come up here," she said.

I hurried off downstairs, and delivered the message to Danny who was with John in the living room.

"What's the matter, Mary?" John questioned, when Danny had gone upstairs. "You look as if you had seen a ghost."

"I think," I answered, "that I have—the ghost of Sin."

"Doggone that girl," he said. "I wish she were in Jericho."

"Gaby, you mean?"

"You're darn right. She's causing all the trouble around here."

"What trouble?" I asked, just for a feeler.

"I don't know—exactly. She keeps Danny miserable. But that isn't it, or not all of it. Don't you seem to feel troubled around here, all the time? I thought everyone did. I do, Gosh knows."

"I know," I said. "I feel it, too. I think Sam does, though he won't altogether admit it. Just the same, John, there isn't a thing we can put our fingers on, is there?"

"I suppose not. Sometimes, though, when I see Danny looking as she looked when she went upstairs just now, I feel as if it would be a good thing if somebody would put their fingers around that vixen's throat."

"John," I spoke sharply to him, "don't say things like that. You don't mean it. It is wrong to say it."

I was sure that he did not mean it. I was sure that only the voice of one of his rare ugly moods had spoken, and that the wicked thought had died with the wicked words. But, from that day to this, I have never repeated those words to a living soul. Because that was the way that Gaby was murdered: choked to death, with great brutal bruises left on her throat.

CHAPTER V

An Insight

That evening, the second of July, the two girls came down, late, together. Danny was paler than usual, and her face had a drawn, hurt look, which she explained by saying that she had a severe headache. Gaby was gayer than gay.

I kept watching her, trying to catch her face in repose, to see if any trace remained of that dreadful expression I had seen in the afternoon. Her face, nor one bit of her, was in repose for a minute from the time she came downstairs until she went upstairs again, after twelve o'clock that night.

She put "La Paloma" on the phonograph, and did a Spanish dance, clicking her heels and snapping her fingers until they sounded like firecrackers. She did an Egyptian dance, slinking about, and contortions. It wasn't decent.

Mrs. Ricker was doing some tatting. As I watched her, I decided that, ears or no ears, she was not the woman I had heard talking, that afternoon, up in the cabin. Hubert Hand had said to that woman that she had attempted murder. She could not have been Mrs. Ricker; not our Mrs. Ricker, the thin, silent woman who had lived so decently with us for so long. Those tight, wrinkled lips had never said, "I would kill her, and you too." John had never said—I shivered. Wicked thoughts and wicked words breed wicked actions, and I knew it then as now.

Martha came crying to Mrs. Ricker. "Gaby hurt Chad," she said. "I wish she would die. We could make her a nice funeral."

Mrs. Ricker's fingers darted faster, back and forth.

Danny spoke, from the davenport.

"You shouldn't talk like that, Martha, dear. It is wrong."

Her voice sounded as if it ached. She looked, lying in a huddle over there, as miserable as I felt. I was drawn to her. I went and sat beside her.

"Could I do anything for your headache?" I asked. "Get you some aspirin, maybe."

"No, thank you, Mary." There was so much gratitude in her big dark eyes for nothing but common decency on my part, that I felt downright ashamed of myself.

"Danny," I said, straight out, never caring much about mincing words, "I know that something is troubling you. Why don't you tell John, or Sam, or even me about it? Just tell us the truth. We'd all go far to help you, if we could."

Her eyes filled with tears. "Bless your heart, Mary," she said. "Bless all of your hearts. You are all so good, here—"

I was enough annoyed with John for coming up right then, to have slapped him. I answered his question for Danny.

"There is plenty you could do for her," I said. "You could shut off that screeching radio, for one thing."

Danny wouldn't hear to John's stopping the racket. Every one was having such a good time. Bed was the place for her. She couldn't hear any noise in her room, with the door shut. And off she went.

I know now that she would not have told me anything that could have helped matters. But I did not know it then, and I was sorely disappointed. For those sudden tears in her eyes, and her voice when she had said, "Bless your heart," had convinced me that there was sincerity behind them, and honesty, and good.

In the black days that followed, when all of us were living in the dark shadows of doubts, and confusions, and fears and suspicions, I was thankful time and again, for those certainties, for that one fleeting but sure insight into Danny's soul.

TURNING BACK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

Fayre in Maristan Chapman's "Happy Mountain" had lost his knife and he was sulking about it. If he hadn't gone so far with Mart he wouldn't have lost his knife, and he prized the knife very much, indeed.

"I was almighty to turn back about here anyway," he explained, regretting, as many of us do, his foolish action. "Erfu'd known a step or two back all I know, now, I'd a gone back afore."

How many of us would! But in life there is no retracing our steps. If we have wandered from the path, if we have made a foolish step, we must go on from where we are and pay the price of our error.

Barker has made a miserable failure of his first year in college. He has put off doing his tasks until the last minute; he has wasted his opportunities hoping before the end of the year to sprint up and finish the race with some sort of credit to himself. He has got into some habits which are not helpful through his inability to say no. Now he is in the same state of mind as Fayre was—if he had known a step or two back, all he knows now, he would have done very differently.

"Can't I forget what I've done, and start all over again as a freshman?" he asks me. "I know, if I started over again I could make good."

It is impossible both for Barker and for you and me. No one can get away from his past. Wherever he goes and whatever he does he must start from where he is now, handicapped by the mistakes he has made or pushed ahead by his successes.

McCord began drinking when he was a young fellow—moderately, of course, and with no intention of ever having the habit fasten itself upon him. He had never had too much before he was thirty, he would have said, though his statement would not have been wholly accurate, but it is true that he was seldom before that time seriously under the influence of liquor.

Now he is fifty or more and he is known about town as the village drunkard. He is talented, ambitious, he has more than the average amount of formal education, but he gets nowhere. People have no confidence in him; they shake their heads when any mention is made of him. He has lost the race.

"If I had known thirty years ago what I know now," he said to a friend not long ago, "I'd never have touched the stuff. And now it is impossible for me to turn back. I must go on in the path I have chosen, hoping only that the road ahead will be smoother, the hills less steep, the prospect more pleasing. If I had only known back there a step or two!"

There is no turning back.

Mrs. Margaret Pickard and daughter, Mrs. Clark Little and children expect to leave Saturday for their home in Mishawaka, Ind., after being called here last week to attend the funeral of the former's sister, Mrs. Anna Barnett.

This week will see the completion of the concrete pavement south of Cadillac on US 131, which will cut off six miles between that city and Grand Rapids, making the distance less than 100 miles. The pavement will be ready for traffic about Oct. 15.—Petoskey News.

Work is moving along rapidly on the grading for the remaining paving from the Cement Plant west to Bay Shore. The road is to be re-routed farther north along the Pere Marquette railroad tracks in order to avoid Marquardt hill and its deep cuts. Engineers say this will eliminate the snow blockade which is experienced each winter at this point. Big-dredges, power scrapers, stump pullers and other power equipment is busy each day on this new work. Petoskey News.

Hancock—it is nothing unusual for tourists in Upper Michigan to encounter deer along the highways, but the sight of a lumbering bear is a rarity. However, on the main highway between Hancock and Lake Linden two motorists were recently held up while a large black bear leisurely proceeded diagonally across the road. The bear showed little fear until one of the motorists appeared to leave the machine, when it beat a hasty retreat into the brush.

Lansing—Deaths in Michigan automobile accidents reached 716 during the first seven months of this year, according to statistics compiled by Dr. William J. V. Deacon, of the State Department of Health. In the same period last year there were 648 deaths. The increase is 88. Of this year's deaths, 52 resulted from collisions between trains and automobiles and 16 from crashes of automobiles and street cars. The other accidents involved only automobiles.

Sault Ste. Marie—While driving along a highway in the southern part of Chippewa County early one morning, Frank Hanks saw a moose dash from the woods toward the lights of his car. The lights blinded the animal and its front feet sank into a hole in the ditch, causing it to somersault. When it did not rise, Mr. Hanks made an investigation and found the animal dying with its neck dislocated. Game wardens apportioned the meat from the 600 pound animal among charitable institutions of the county and shipped the hide and head to Lansing.

Hillsdale—B. B. Palmer, owner of a large fox farm near this city, has discovered a den of silver badgers on his property. Not long ago he was successful in taking one of them, which has been mounted and is on exhibition. These beautiful little animals are extremely rare in Michigan of late years and, of course, are not protected. However, they are well able to protect themselves, since they are very wary and have the keenest scent, taking to their deep holes or dens promptly at the first indication of the presence of humans.

Baby Mountain Lion Is Barbara's Pal

This is no Maltese. It's a five-week-old mountain lion, the buddy and playmate of little Barbara Snow, three, who feeds and houses him. Barbara's father, Sidney Snow of Oakland, Calif., and J. C. Bruce had a tussle with the cub's mother which left him an orphan. He doesn't seem to mind.

TALES OUT OF SCHOOL

The results of the meetings of the various classes in the past week are as follows:

Seniors—President, Howard Darbee; Vice President, Francis Quinn; Secretary and Treasurer, Gloria McPherson. Miss McPherson, whose services have proved so satisfactory in the past year was re-elected to the office of Secretary-Treasurer. Mr. Snellenberger is the Senior Class Advisor.

Juniors—President Donald Stokes; Vice President, Robert Kenny; Secretary and Treasurer, Mabel Hudkins. Mr. Maynard has been chosen as class advisor for the Juniors.

Sophomores—President, Victor Millman; Vice President, George Sherman; Secretary and Treasurer, Marie St. Charles. Miss Stroops is the class advisor for the Sophomores.

Freshmen—President, John Vogel; Vice President, Teddy Kotovitch; Secretary, Eva LaLonde; Treasurer, Alba Brooks. Mr. Cohen is the Freshmen's class advisor.

Seventh Grade—President, William Swoboda; Vice President, Martha Gay; Secretary, James Lilak; Treasurer, Gertrude Sidebotham.

The eighth grade as yet have not had its class election, owing to the fact that a class advisor has not been chosen.

In the Home Economics department, the 9th graders are making jellies and butters. The third year students have practically completed the re-decoration of their living room.

The library class has met for the first time and has made preparations for opening the Library on Monday, Sept. 30.

The English 12 class is now taking up the study of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales."

The Student Council had its first meeting Tuesday, Sept. 23, for the purpose of electing officers. The results of the election were:

President—Carl Weaver.
Vice President—Bea Boswell.

Secretary-Treasurer—Ethel Staley. Mr. Snellenberger, who presided at the meeting made the suggestion that a Constitution be drawn up. The suggestion is being acted upon and arrangements are being made to obtain copies of the constitutions of student councils of other schools.

It was impossible to obtain any information concerning the grade building this week, but after this there will be regular school notes of the grades as well as the High School.

West Side School
The second and third grades are all in one room. The second graders have fallen behind in their spelling during the summer vacation. Miss Nicholls has a spelling chart and every boy or girl who receives the mark of 100 is given a star on the spelling chart. Sept. 24, there were twelve one hundreds, which shows great progress for there are only 15 in the class.

The fourth and fifth grades have been reviewing their last year's work. They are now ready for the fourth and fifth grade work. Sept. 23, they received their new books. There are 44 in the room now and a great number of country children have come in.

State News in Brief

Grand Haven—Dr. and Mrs. Arend Vanderveen, early residents here, recently celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. The couple were married in Holland, Mich. He was a Civil War surgeon.

Ludington—Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Gowell, of Millerton, Mason County, celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary here with 75 of their descendants present. Mr. Gowell was a Civil War veteran and came to Michigan with a soldier's land grant after the war.

Allegan—Paul Corey, 36 years old, a stepladder fell 100 feet to the ground while painting a tank on a water tower at the Baker Furniture factory here and death resulted a few days later. His skull was fractured, both arms, a leg and several ribs were broken.

Baldwin—The barking of a dog led to the finding of Walter Loshbrook, 66, Baldwin, along side the Pere Marquette tracks three miles west of here. He had been struck by a train. His skull and several ribs were fractured and both lungs were punctured resulting in his death.

Detroit—The last 18-ton beam of the new $20,000,000 Ambassador bridge, linking United States and Canada has been set in place over the Detroit river. A. G. Cone, resident engineer, announced that unfinished work would be rushed, so the bridge could be formally opened for use by December 1.

Detroit—Adolph Barlow, 362 Woodland avenue, who has voted in every election since the Civil War under the impression he was a citizen, is entitled to vote for the first time in his life. He was made a citizen by Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle. Barlow had believed his service in the Civil War made him a citizen.

Coldwater—Struck by a car driven by H. S. James, of Beverly Hills, Calif., three miles east of here on US highway 112, David Blanchard, 60 years old, of this place, was instantly killed. Blanchard was working with a road crew, and witnesses say he stepped out from the rear of a truck directly in the path of the automobile.

Detroit—President Hoover has definitely decided to visit Detroit on Oct. 21, Edison electric light anniversary day. The president will go directly from Washington to Detroit and will visit Cincinnati and Louisville on the return trip. He will speak at Detroit and at only one of the other two cities. Henry Ford will be his host at Detroit and Dearborn.

Grand Rapids—Mrs. Anna Matin, 65 years old, arrived here recently at the end of an automobile trip she took alone from her home in Los Angeles. Ephraim E. Brown, 85, a civil war veteran was waiting for her with a marriage license. Brown has been spending much of his time during recent years in Florida, but they decided to come here for their honeymoon.

Lansing—Michigan's impoverished school districts probably will be obliged to wait until early in 1930 for the $2,000,000 appropriated for their relief by the 1929 Legislature, State officials agreed here. The statute calls for the distribution of $2,000,000 annually, beginning this year, but the condition of the State Treasury renders it unlikely that this year's appropriation can be distributed before February.

St. Joseph—Because he was arrested last January on a charge of driving while intoxicated, Arthur Bischoff, of Benton Harbor, lost his chance of becoming a United States citizen. Bischoff's petition for final citizenship papers was dismissed by Judge Charles E. White in the Berrien County Circuit Court. The judge reprimanded him before a court room crowded with more than 60 other petitioners and 100 witnesses.

Kalamazoo—A holdup that netted the victim a profit was reported to the police by Leonard Rathford. Rathford was sitting in his automobile waiting for a friend when he was approached by a stranger, who said, "Hold up your hands while I go through your pockets." Rathford complied, but, in doing so, he accidentally knocked the gun from the bandit's hands. The stranger disappeared in the darkness, leaving his revolver in Rathford's automobile.

Kalamazoo—Air express service was opened recently by the Thompson Aeronautical Corporation, which operates the Michigan-Chicago air mail system. The corporation has entered into a contract with the Railway Express Agency, Inc., formerly the American Railway Express Co., to carry and deliver express parcels to destinations in Michigan or Indiana or to junction points on other air mail lines. Delivery of parcels will be advanced as much as a full day in some cases.

Lansing—Duck hunters can not evade the new conservation act, prohibiting the construction of artificial blinds more than 100 feet from the shore by a peculiar construction of the word "shore" the attorney-general has ruled in an opinion to George R. Hogarth, director of conservation. No artificial vegetation or structure can be laid out in the water to evade the provisions of the act, the opinion said. The shore line is the contact between the water and the mineral soil of the beach or strand, it stated.

FALL PIGS EXACT BEST MANAGEMENT

Should Run on Forage After Weaning to Get Start.

Fall pigs should be given a chance to run on forage crops for a time after weaning, says the animal husbandry department of the Ohio State university. This practice will give them a better start for the long winter months. Fall pigs demand the best of attention to feeding and handling if they are to be profitable to the grower.

During the growing and fattening periods concentrates fed to the pigs should be of high energy value with some protein supplement, or a combination of protein supplements. Corn probably is the best feed from the point of energy value, but must be balanced with high protein foods. Skim milk and buttermilk, both of them high in protein and mineral matter, are good to balance grains. Two and one-half to three pounds of milk should be fed with one pound of corn for 50-pound pigs. As the animals grow the proportion of milk may be decreased.

Tankage, fish meal, alfalfa meal or oil meal should be fed where milk is not available. A combination of 50 per cent fish meal or tankage, 25 per cent alfalfa meal, and 25 per cent oil meal has been successfully used with corn or other feed to start the pigs. About 15 to 20 per cent of the protein supplement should be fed in the beginning, and gradually decreased until at the finishing period only about 5 per cent is fed.

Tried Sows Found Most Profitable as Breeders

Old sows may be more profitable than gilts for next spring's crop of pigs, says E. F. Ferrin of the animal husbandry department at University Farm.

"The spring pigs grown this year have had very scanty grain allowances, consequently most of the gilts are small and undersized," he says. "These gilts are more miniature and undeveloped than during ordinary seasons. The litters from gilts such as these are apt to be disappointing next spring."

"On some farms there are thin sows still in the prime of breeding efficiency that have not yet been fattened for market because of the scarcity of grain during the summer. These sows will yield a good profit if bred to farrow next spring, providing they take the place of the undersized gilts. The sows can be bred to farrow earlier than the gilts and accordingly late farrowing of next year's crop can be avoided."

"A yearling or two-year-old sow will farrow and raise more pigs than a gilt because she is a selected brood sow. There is always an uncertainty as to how a gilt will suckle her litter, while the old sows which have been disappointing go to market. On the average from one and one-half to two pigs more per litter can be raised to weaning age from tried sows than from gilts."

Frequent Attention Is Needed by Self-Feeder

One advantage of the self-feeder is that it will probably save some labor, but the amount of labor saved depends somewhat on the size and type of the feeder. A small feeder requires frequent filling, and practically all feeders require considerable attention to see that the feed is feeding down properly. Frequent attention should be given to see that feed is not being nosed out and wasted and that, if the feeds are in separate compartments, the hogs are not eating too much of the protein feeds and not enough of the others, or vice versa.

Live Stock Notes

A shade for the hogs pays.
Cattle given free access to corn silage and alfalfa will balance their own rations.

The greatest mistake in feeding orphan lambs, is in feeding too much and too often.

Nothing will solve as many problems of the pork producer as will plenty of good pasture.

Many stockmen fail to balance their rations because they feel it necessary to feed what they have at hand.

Where pastures supplement grain rations for hogs, a saving in concentrate feed is made, the ration is improved from a dietetic angle, healthfulness is promoted, and the hog is brought to a marketable age at a lower cost than where grain feeding in pen or dry lot prevails.

On many farms a small flock of sheep should be profitable. It does not cost a great deal in either money or labor to keep a flock of sheep, and there is a double return from them in the form of mutton and wool.

Heroine Honored

Sculptured by Lorado Taft, this a notable monument of enduring marble was dedicated recently at White Hall, Ill., to the memory of Annie Louise Keller, a school teacher who gave her life to protect the children entrusted to her care. When a tornado swept over central Illinois on April 19, 1927, the school, with Miss Keller and her twenty-two pupils, was in its path. She ordered each child to crawl under a desk while she kept watch at the door. The building went down, killing the teacher, but every one of her charges escaped uninjured.
