Potato Club Entertained

BY THEIR SENIOR PARTNERS AND BUSINESS MEN TUESDAY-NIGHT.

This is the Businessmen's first venture in supporting boys and girls club work and it proved a success. Out of the sixteen boys and girls taking part in the Potato Club project, thirteen of them had their potatoes on display at the Russell House Tuesday evening and according to Mr. Melencamp, County Agent, and Mr. Benjamin of Gaylord the quality of the potatoes was excellent.

After the usual good dinner, Pres. Sloan turned the meeting over almost immediately to Mr. Melencamp. He gave a talk on the fine co-operation he received from the business men as well as the boys themselves. He thanked W. P. Porter for the awards, in the form of cup and money, given for successful competition. Then he gave some statistics that would surprise most people. Two of the boys in the club had an average on his half acre of potatoes of three hundred bushels. This is a surprise turn-out for the present season. The largest of any reported in the State so far, according to a Michigan State College authority. The prizes were awarded not on the number of bushels per acre but on the quality of the stock. After thanking the business men and the boys for their part in the program he introduced a live wire in L. V. Benjamin, club leader in Cheboygan and Otsego Counties. Mr. Benjamin holds the unique position of club agent and his whole time is taken up in sponsoring boys and girls' Agricultural Clubs in the above counties. Mr. Benjamin spoke on the awards to the senior partners in sponsoring a boy in club work. He said in many ways they get more out of it than the boy himself. Mr. Benjamin judged the potatoes and picked the following winners:

Gordon Boyer—First place.
Fred Ranney—Second place.
Gwendon Holt—Third place.
Ralph Shepard—Fourth place.
Alfred Crowell—Fifth place.

All of the boys received prize money and the following boys also took part in the potato display: Rodney Rogers, Bruce Sanderson, Forrest Fernell, George Johnson, Cyril Gordon, Homer Emmons, Albert Omland and Gardell Nice.

Another very interesting feature of the meeting was the presence and talk of Carl Wigger of Gaylord. A boy about 18 or 19 years of age who won the State Championship in club work, also the championship of his county and in one or more of these championships he got a free trip to Detroit and one to Chicago. He has also been club leader at Gaylord. Carl is a boy about six feet or more in height and weighs about 190 lbs., and looks every bit a man and a champion. With the money he has earned through his project this year he is going to attend the Michigan State College. He not only is a potato club man but has a herd of his own Guernsey cattle. Next year he expects to go in partnership with his father. He is a very good example of what this type of club work will do for a young farmer boy.

LICENSE PLUMBERS UNDER NEW LAW

Approximately 5,000 Michigan plumbers will be affected by the new law which went into operation Aug. 28, requiring the licensing after Jan. 1, 1930, of all plumbers in the State, according to announcement from the Michigan Department of Health which has supervision of the enforcement of the law.

Both master and journeyman plumbers are urged by the department to file their applications for license immediately. Those applying before January 1, and furnishing proof that they were engaged in the business of master or journeyman plumber on March 1, 1929, and possess the qualifications required by the law will be granted a license without examination. After January 1, 1930, licenses will be issued only after the applicant has passed an examination prescribed by a board of three plumbing examiners. Plumbers' apprentices also must be registered.

Plumbing inspection will be started after the first of the year, when the system of licensing has gone into effect, the announcement continues. Inspectors working under the direction of the Bureau of Engineering of the Michigan Department of Health will carry out the provisions of the law.

The latest thing in foresight is the bootlegger who wraps his bottles with instructions on how to learn the Braille system.

Advantages of The Library

FUNDS NEEDED TO PURCHASE MORE BOOKS.

It was a cold, stormy night and the city library reading room seemed doubly attractive.

I was a guest in the librarian's home and, while waiting with her for the closing hour, was idly turning the leaves of a magazine.

Two boys, seated at a table, had been talking quite audibly for some time and finally my friend asked me to take my magazine over and sit at their table.

As soon as I did so they resumed their reading and the room became quiet.

Later, in her home, my friend told me this story.

The boy, who was really creating the disturbance, had been a town problem for some time, but he had one redeeming virtue, a love for reading. The rules of the library provided that any person who persisted in being a source of disturbance in the rooms should, after a third warning, be debarred from all library privileges. This boy had been warned twice and my friend was trying, in every way, to avoid giving the final warning. She felt that the library was the only thing left to save that boy and, thru it, she was trying to maintain an interest that would build and develop a stronger and better character.

Here, in a nut shell, is one of the strongest advantages of a well-equipped city library; in providing a fascinating, wholesome reading matter that will attract the adolescent youth; to provide a comfortable place to spend some of the evenings that youth craves to spend outside of home or, in many instances, a pleasanter place than the home provides. To meet this demand, the local library board is planning a four day Drive for Funds to buy more books for our library.

The $270 of library money received by the schools is NOT a part of the Public Library funds; SCHOOL LIBRARY MONEY being used for the library at the SCHOOL BUILDING, which has to be maintained, not only for the use of the students, but also to comply with the law, thru which the money is received.

Only about $150 is available each year to cover cost of magazine subscriptions, replacing or rebinding of old volumes, in addition to what new books are added.

A little thought will reveal how pitifully inadequate this sum is, compared to the needs of a library to render real service to the community, and the committee is looking forward to a generous response to their appeal, from both rural and city friends of the Library.

E. Jordan Not Down-hearted

SAYS ARTICLE IN P. M. R. R. SERVICE BULLETIN.

The October Pere Marquette Railway Bulletin, which has a wide circulation throughout the United States and in some foreign countries, devotes the back page of this issue to an illustrated article relative to the passing of the lumber industry in the lower peninsula of Michigan, and the future prospects of East Jordan. Following is the article published:

The curtain was rung down forever on the lumbering industry of the lower peninsula of Michigan at East Jordan on August 7 last! The occasion was marked by the shipment of the last carload of pig iron from the plant of the Michigan Iron & Chemical Company which also passed out of existence.

In the days of the pine stands, of the saw and shingle mills and of the flooring plants there naturally sprang up about these industries other concerns that were attracted by cheap fuel and other by-products of the lumber industry. The Michigan Iron & Chemical Company was one of these. In its production of iron, of course, it drew its raw materials from the northern peninsula. Incidentally, it produced chemicals, some of the bases for these also coming from the surrounding lumber concerns. During the war, the Michigan Iron & Chemical Company made big money from its acetate production. The price reached heights that were undreamed of before. With the close of the conflict, the profits became smaller and smaller until the period of post-war competition when German production reduced the margin of profit to the vanishing point. Meanwhile, the cutting of timber had become a matter of history and there was no incentive for the company to continue in business. It finally closed down. On August 7 last, the last carload of pig iron left this plant consigned to North & Judd Manufacturing Company at New Britain, Conn., the car moving via East Jordan & Southern, Pere Marquette, Lehigh Valley and New York, New Haven & Hartford Railways.

However, East Jordan is not down-hearted. It is one of the most prosperous communities for its size in the State. Agriculture is forging ahead; so is its dairying industry and its orchards are bringing in new wealth. Its industries include a good butter and cheese factory, a modern growing cannery that is absorbing the farm and orchard products, and there are some important cherry orchards with new ones being planted each year. The cannery has a proud record both as to output and quality. Among its principal packs are cherries, strawberries, raspberries and beans and plans are under way to add new machinery to enable this concern to pack various vegetables.

Another East Jordan industry is the Malpass Foundry & Machine Shop which is well established and enjoys a broadening market for its output. The Business Men's Club of East Jordan is making a survey of its possibilities with a view to attracting other enterprises. Already, the community funds much to be optimistic over even in the face of the transition period which it is passing through at the present time due to the ending of lumber activities. During the past summer the consolidation of schools was effected with nine of the outlying school districts. Its educational buildings represent a valuation of $175,000, and there is no bonded indebtedness on either the school district or the city. Lands are not held for inflated prices, notwithstanding that progressive farmers would find it difficult to find a locality anywhere possessing the same advantages.

East Jordan is on Lake Charlevoix which empties into Lake Michigan, and large freighters find sufficient depth to navigate its immediate waters. The East Jordan & Southern Railway connects with the Pere Marquette Railway at Bellaire. The city offers some excellent industrial sites, good homes are available at moderate prices, and the sounding of taps for the old lumber era is looked upon as the dawn of a new epoch of prosperity. East Jordan invites all and sundry to look into its possibilities.

County Nursery History Is Told

STARTED FROM HOBBY OF GEO. R. HEMINGWAY, OWNER.

The following article, from the pen of George R. Hemingway, Iron ton summer resorter and owner of the Charlevoix County Nursery, is taken from an issue of the Michigan Magazine.

"Back in 1911 the Charlevoix County Nursery was born, by accident to be sure, an outgrowth of a simple love for more flowers, flowering shrubs, and ornamental trees. As our home grounds in a Chicago suburb were limited in area, we could only have a few of the shrubs we enjoyed, but when we began to develop our resort home and had usually July and August in the North Country to do it, we went strong for the things of beauty. We found that the climate and soil both helped to bring the best out of flowers and shrubs and the temptation was too great not to get many varieties and more things than we really had need of, and so it went. In a short time folks that called wanted to buy some of our selections for their enjoyment too. We gave more away than we sold and were glad to share them. It was not long before our "farm" became a Nursery and we called it "Charlevoix County Nursery." Have told my friends often that it was my "avocation" and not my "vocation," as my own life work has been real estate for 33 years in Oak Park, Illinois. It's been a joy to see the Nursery grow and to realize the constructive influence it has had in building beauty in the nearby towns. Indeed, our shipments now extend to cities many miles away. Our resort friends seem to appreciate the material for landscape development in an unusual way. They seem to have more time and are more relaxed and this makes for capacity for appreciation perhaps. It's been most interesting to see the business of the cities become interested for the first time in the shrubs and trees and start to learn the names of the many varieties of evergreen and they are keen to know how the varieties all differ from one another. This interest really becomes a disease, and a good one, too, for tired nerves. The local townspeople find in the nursery, too, a real open book of wholesome nature study and they love it, too.

"We like to have folks come in and stroll through the nursery rows, and get acquainted with the seventy odd varieties we offer. We do a lot of experimenting as the winters of Charlevoix County are long and hard. Not all plant life, even of lower Michigan, will endure. We always try our stock for two winters or longer before offering it to buyers, but the soil, a sandy loam, gives encouragement to root development which is most necessary in transplanting nursery-grown material. The snow cover is a great help, and when the snow goes, life seems to be more abundant and all nature is raring to go.

"The stock in the nursery comes from afar, our Schwedler maples are budded in the State of Washington, same as our weeping birch and Pauls Thom, our Bay Berry shrubs come from Cape Cod, Massachusetts, most of our evergreens are from seed, planted on the prairies soil of Illinois, many varieties of shrubs from Ohio, Iowa and Minnesota. Our roses from New York and New Jersey, and many of our flower seeds come from England. Lilies direct from Japan, and a few maple still on hand which came from France, before the embargo. So it is a plant convention ground, so to speak, all friends, all combined with one purpose of making the world more beautiful and a better place in which to live. According to inventory, over 100,000 specimens.

"You will ask, 'Just where is the most northern nursery in Michigan?' The nursery is just east of the Ironton Ferry, six miles southeast of Charlevoix and 11 miles west of Boyne City and 10 miles north of EAST JORDAN, OUR POSTOFFICE ADDRESS. We are on the shore of old Pine Lake, now known as Lake Charlevoix. We invite all visitors to Michigan to come and enjoy these choice bits of God's handiwork.

"The home planting idea is sweeping the nation. All over the United States people are taking a new interest in the appearance of their yards and gardens. This new interest is a healthy contagion.

"The yard beautification idea is spreading from one home to another until entire communities now have a new ideal, 'The City Beautiful.' This new community idea has been accepted enthusiastically by municipal governments, civic leaders and the press everywhere."

"How did you learn to walk the tight-rope? Just pick it up yourself!"
"Oh, no—it has to be taut."

Ethylene Gas Speeds Ripening of Tomato Found to Be Effective Accelerator by Growers.

Tomato growers who wish to hasten the ripening of their crop to take advantage of early markets will find treatment with ethylene gas an effective accelerator, according to Dr. R. H. Harvey, agricultural botanist, University Farm, St. Paul, inventor of this process which has recently been granted a patent. Many wholesalers and commercial growers now are using the ethylene method of ripening with notable success.

All that is necessary in the way of special equipment is a suitable room or chamber and a tank of ethylene gas equipped with a simple flow meter. The meter, plus enough gas to treat several carloads of tomatoes; will cost only about $30. The gas cost is negligible, ranging from about 40 cents to $1.00 a carload. The room or chamber should be closed off so as to make a practically gas tight. An ordinary plastered room, or cellar room, will work satisfactorily, providing cracks around windows are closed with adhesive tape and if it has a fairly tight fitting door. Some means should also be available for maintaining a temperature of from 65 to 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

Tomatoes should be picked when they are beginning to turn or when they are fairly well along toward maturity. In no case should they be picked so green that more than four days is required to ripen them by the gas process. Doctor Harvey says. They may be placed in the ripening chamber in baskets, crates, or other containers.

Storage Buildings Above Ground Are Now Favored

Most new common storage buildings for apples are being built above ground with insulated walls and ceilings. The floor is usually left as earth to keep fruit from shriveling in storage. Slatted floor racks of barrels are often used, over the earth. Intake openings are cut at intervals of 10 to 12 feet around the building just above the floor level. These openings are usually 18 by 20 inches or larger to permit easy intake of air without too much loss from friction. Many storages in the past were built with intake openings too small to let in the cool air quickly at favorable times for ventilation and cooling. The total area of the intake openings is usually in proportion to one square foot of intake space to 700 cubic feet of storage volume. Stacks for outlets are built up through the roof. These are usually 3 by 4 feet or larger to permit free movement of air. They are placed about 20 feet apart the length of the building. The outlets are usually designed to figure at least one square foot of area to each 1,200 cubic feet of storage volume. It is a good fault to make them a little oversize.

Growing and Fattening of Hogs During Summer

The growing and fattening of hogs in the summer time without the use of some good pasture crop is usually an uneconomical practice. A saving of from 15 to 25 per cent of the total amount of grain and supplements may be expected through the use of forage. It may even be possible in some cases with an abundance of legume forage to obtain fairly satisfactory gains for a time on forage alone, but the greatest returns will be obtained when grain is fed in addition to the forage at the rate of three or four pounds per day for each 100 pounds live weight. When the grain feed is very much limited on pasture, naturally less grain will be used in making the early gains, but in the experiment cited above, eventually a total of more grain may be required to finish the hogs and the time required will be longer.

Agricultural Squibs

Large horses are worth more than small horses both in value a head and value a pound.

A good thing to remember at this time of the year is that a wormy pig will never get big.

The season for camping and for forest fires is here. Help make it only the camping season.

Aphis are likely to attack almost every tree, shrub, or plant, and this year the pests are widespread.

Pigs of all classes respond to good forage. It is especially valuable in the ration of young, rapidly growing pigs.

Strawberry beds will develop stronger and more productive runner plants if side dressed with nitrate of soda and superphosphate.

Electricity on the farm for lighting alone is an expensive luxury; if used for labor-saving devices it becomes a desirable convenience.

It is not much trouble to get rid of lice on hogs, since either crude oil or the waste oil taken from the crank case of your car will do the job.

During the past two or three years hulled oats have attracted considerable attention among hog men as a feed for growing and fattening pigs.

FAIRM STOCK

GOOD SIRES WILL RETURN PROFITS

Bull Will Influence More Calves Than Five Cows.

(By J. J. MOXLEY, Extension Live Stock Specialist, Kansas Agricultural College.)

In the opinion of Kansas cattlemen, a good sire is worth 20 per cent of the value of the cow herd. These same live stock raisers figure the sire will influence more calves than five cows during his lifetime.

The bull represents the corner stone for a foundation of successful cattle production. Closely connected with him is the right kind of cows. They should represent the good, big beef type.

In the Minnesota car lot baby beef contest, where the weight of a car load of calves at 15 months was the method of determining the winning load, calves out of the biggest, beefest cows and sired by medium to big bulls were the ones which ranked at the top.

Giving consideration to a demonstration in Clay county the past year, a group of cows which would class as "good cows" were compared with those which were classed as medium in the weight and value of the calves. The good grade cows had calves weighing 80 pounds more than those out of the medium grade cows. Their calves were worth $1 per hundred more—making a difference for the year of $15.91 more in favor of the calves out of the good grade cows.

From every angle in the cattle production business, a good sire is a necessity and a good cow herd is a great help in the production of beef that will return a profit.

Proper Care of Horse's Feet Often Neglected

An important but oftentimes neglected job is to trim the feet of farm horses. In dry weather the feet become tough and hard and it is difficult to do anything with them. However, following a rain, or a spell of damp weather, they will cut easily, and it is no great effort to get them into shape for the season's work. Most farmers own a rasp which can be used to file down the rough, unsightly edges of the hoofs which have grown during the winter. Few farm horses are expected to work on cement or concrete roadways and they do not have shoes. A little judicious trimming at this time will give the horse better grip on the ground and more confidence to go at heavy pulls. The colts, also, should not be forgotten for the care which you give the feet of a colt may govern to a large extent the conformation of his legs at maturity.

Find Lambs on Pasture Are Most Profitable

Lambs produced on pasture are more profitable, is the conclusion of Purdue university agricultural experiment station after two years' work. When ewe and lambs were both fed on grain and hay the profit per lamb amounted to $4.11, and when both were pastured on timothy, oats and alfalfa pastures, the profit per lamb amounted to $9.81. "The market finish of the two sets of lambs was the same," said Claude Harper, sheep specialist.

"Does it pay to feed lambs on pasture?" is a question often asked by Hoosier farmers. Purdue found that lambs developed on pasture returned a profit of $9.81 and lambs fed grain on pasture returned a profit of $9.97 per lamb above feed costs.

Red Clover Excellent Pasture for the Hogs

Red clover makes an excellent pasture for hogs and ranks close to alfalfa as a forage. From the standpoint of the average farmer or hog feeder, it will probably be the most used forage crop particularly because it fits better into almost any system of crop rotation than does alfalfa. However, it will not usually support quite so many head per acre, nor will the forage season be quite so long, but if not pastured too closely and not allowed to go to seed, it will generally produce an abundance of good forage all summer. An acre of clover should furnish ample pasture for from 8 to 16 hogs if properly handled. Clover is high in protein and will replace a large part of the tankage or similar feeds, necessary to get maximum growth.

Cure for Worms

Tetrachloethylene, in single doses, has been found to be approximately 100 per cent effective against the sheep stomach worm, and is also very effective against the hook-worm and some of the other round-worms found in the small intestine of the sheep. The drug is given in capsules, in doses of five cubic centimeters. The animal should not be fed for 12 hours before treatment. If possible, the drug should be administered by a veterinarian.

Obtain Healthy Seed for Spuds

Most Profitable Plan Is to Eradicate All Infectious Diseases.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sweet-potato growers will find it profitable to eradicate, so far as is possible, the several destructive diseases which annually cause losses in the growing of the crop. Of these diseases, stem rot is one of the most difficult to control, and control methods minimizing damage from stem rot also reduce injury from several other parasitic infections.

Breeding Plot.
L. L. Harter and J. L. Welmer, sweet-potato specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture, in a recent publication say they "have learned from experience that the use of what may be called a 'breeding plot' is of considerable value in eradicating stem rot and other diseases."
Use Separate Field.

"While it is advisable to pull up and destroy all diseased plants," they continue, "it is a big task where the acreage is large. Where it is not possible to do that, it is recommended that the farmer set aside a part of his field from which he will take his seed potatoes for the next crop and rogue out all diseased plants from it during the entire summer. Such a practice does not involve great labor and will greatly improve the crop in a year or two. This method is especially to be recommended if the stems are not split when selecting for seed. . . . To prevent diseased plants from producing seed by pulling them up and destroying them would eliminate much loss in the succeeding crop. This practice should be followed each year."

Dairy Thermometer Will Be Found Quite Useful

It may be no fault of your separator that there is a high percentage of fat in the skim milk. Experiments carried on at the Purdue experiment station indicate that milk separated at a temperature of 90 degrees Fahrenheit showed a fat content in the skim milk of .028 per cent, while milk separated under similar conditions except that the temperature had been allowed to drop to 60 degrees Fahrenheit contained 39 per cent of fat in the skim milk.

Sometimes it pays to warm the milk if the separating is done at a long distance from the stable. Many times the purchase of a dairy thermometer will be found to be a profitable investment.

Cockerels and Pullets Should Be Separated

Cockerels should be separated from pullets when they are from eight to ten weeks of age. The pullets for next winter's laying flock will develop faster and more evenly if there are no cockerels in the lot to disturb and annoy them, according to William Kohlmeier, of Purdue university.

When pullets are left in the brooder house by themselves they have additional room, which in many cases is badly needed. When cockerels are sorted out it is often possible to leave the pullets in the original brooder house until they are ready for the laying house.

Late Ducklings Have Several Advantages

The late hatched ducklings have a number of advantages over their earlier hatched brothers and sisters.

In the first place, the summer and early fall hatched ducklings, if pushed for rapid and cheap gains, will go on the late fall and early winter markets in time for the Jewish and Christian holidays. They are, naturally profitable, for at this time the highest prices can be realized and in addition, the weather during the growing season for late hatched ducks is more favorable for rapid growth.

Agricultural Notes

Alfalfa makes a well-balanced ration for horses when fed with corn alone.

To feed cows well will help prevent a milk shortage next fall; furthermore it pays well.

Bluegrass probably is used more frequently as a hog pasture than any other forage crop.

The lamb's mother should have all the legume hay she wants, because legume hay makes milk.

Disking or otherwise cultivating early plowed fields to keep down weeds and volunteer wheat will aid materially in controlling Hessian fly and will increase the yield of wheat.

Carefully choose varieties of apple trees to be planted next spring. Many of the kinds once considered leaders are now being displaced by higher quality and better selling varieties.

Produce the best. Quality products bring prices high enough above the market quotation for ordinary products to make it profitable and economical to produce them. They also make satisfied customers and bring repeat orders.

Important to BUYERS OF NEW CARS

FROM time to time General Motors has devoted its messages in this paper to giving facts which help the car-buyer get full value for his automobile dollar. In keeping with that policy of frankness, this message gives facts about the prices of new cars which every one should know.

This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the delivered prices of their new cars.

List Price. The f. o. b. price advertised by the factory.

Freight and Delivery. An authorized amount to cover the freight charges paid by the dealer and the cost of unloading, inspecting, supplying fuel and oil—preparing the car for delivery to you.

Accessories. A charge for any additional accessories that may be purchased.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values. General Motors dealers' delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery, and the charge for any additional accessories that may be desired.

(NAME OF CAR)	(LISTED)
(Model No.)	(Body Style)
LIST PRICE (F. O. B.)	$
FREIGHT and DELIVERY
DELIVERED PRICE	$
ACCESSORIES (Not included in the List Price)
TOTAL DELIVERED PRICE	$

These prices are for cash. Purchase may be financed on convenient monthly payments if desired.

WHEN you buy a new automobile, it is the delivered price that you actually pay. The delivered price consists of the list price of the car—the f. o. b. price advertised by the manufacturers—plus certain other charges which the dealer makes. You should know exactly what those charges are and what each one is for.

There is no mystery about the charges added by General Motors dealers. They have adopted this standard price tag, which tells you everything. Nothing is hidden. There is no extra charge to permit a seemingly better trade-in offer. No extra charge to cover advertising or any other item. You know exactly what makes up the difference between the list price and the delivered price. Each charge made by the dealer is fair and reasonable.

Use this tag for reference. Make it your guide in comparing automobile values. For the delivered price is the price you really pay.

Below is given the range of list prices for each General Motors car. They are just as low as General Motors' vast production, centralized purchasing and reasonable profit per car can make them. General Motors dealers maintain this value in their delivered prices of these cars and show you every item on the standard price tag. Look over the General Motors line. Then clip the coupon.

She walked to the table by the window. I followed her. I dreaded seeing that bag again; but I was curious about its contents. It was lying limp on the table.

She picked it up, brushed it flickeringly with the tips of her fingers, and blew on it, as if she were trying to blow something off of it. "Everything," she explained, "sticks to the little pointed beads."

I took it from her and looked at it closely; but I could see no speck of ash, no minute particle of tobacco, nor of dust.

"It is a beautiful thing," I said. "I've wondered why it was that Gaby had all the beautiful, expensive things, such as this. Your clothes are pretty and tasty, but they aren't near the quality of Gaby's."

She hesitated a moment before answering. "I have been in England for the past eight years, while Gaby has been on the continent, where beautiful things are more plentiful, and cheaper."

"Lands alive! I thought you girls had lived together, all these years." "No," she said, and picked up Gaby's cigarette case, and banded it to me.

It was made of dull gold with her monogram, "G. C." set in tiny black opals, with green and blue lights flickering in them as if they were alive.

I set it down and picked up another little gold box. It had powder, rouge, lipstick, and a mirror in it. I had seen it often enough before. I put it back on the table, and took up a beaded coin purse that matched the large bag. It was entirely empty.

"Isn't it queer that that should be empty?" Danny asked. And her bill-fold is missing. She surely would not start to go anywhere with not a cent of money. Doesn't it look as if she had been robbed?"

"Only," I said, "if anyone had robbed her, why would he have left the valuable gold cigarette case, and vanity case?"

"He might have thought they would be hard to dispose of, Mary," Danny's voice, always low, grew lower still with her intensity, "there is one thing that no one has thought of. Daniel Canneziano could have reached here from California in a few hours, by airplane."

"I had thought of that. But, Danny, no airplane ever came within twenty miles of the ranch without every man-jack of us hearing it, and rushing out with our heads tipped back to gaze at it. Airplanes aren't stealthy things, you know, that people can slip up in, and slip off again." "But, on the third of July, two airplanes passed over, going to the Telko celebration."

"On the third," I reminded her, "as advertised. And you know how much noise they made. And how we all went out and watched them, from tiny specks in the south until they were tiny specks and lost in the north again."

I picked up the carved ivory eigrette holder. It fell to pieces in my fingers. "Was this broken in her bag?" I questioned. "Yes. Snapped in two. And she loved it." I fitted the pieces together again, on the table, and took up a folded sheet of paper, and opened it, and read: "Glorious Gaby: Be a good sport. Be a darling. Be game—that is, be Gaby, and meet me this afternoon, around four thirty, in the cabin. H. H."

"Well!" I said. "Yes, I know," Danny answered. "But Hubert Hand swears that he wrote that note several weeks ago. Too, we know that he was playing chess with Uncle Sam at half-past four."

"He could have gone to the cabin later, when the men went to do the chores. Or was he right with Sam and Chad all the time?" "I suppose so. He must have satisfied the coroner's jury, at the inquest, of his innocence. Mary," her voice went all tense again, "does it seem to you that the jury was very readily satisfied?"

I spoke sharply, too sharply to her in answer to what I had imagined I saw in her attitude. "Never mind about the jury being easily satisfied. Sam is not going to be. He told me this morning that he would find the murderer if it took every dollar he had in the world to do it. Sam is going to get to the bottom of this. Be sure of that."

"I wonder," she said. "What do you wonder?" "Mary!" she exclaimed, close to a reproach. "I merely wonder whether or not Uncle Sam will succeed."

I looked at her brown eyes, all red and swollen from tears, and at the deep, dark circles under them, and I was ashamed.

I put my arm around her shoulders and drew her close to me. "Honey," I said, "forgive your old Mary. We are all overstrung, overwrought. I didn't mean to speak so sharply."

"I know. Were you looking for something else, on the table? There was nothing else in her bag." "I was wondering," I said, "about that forenoon-looking letter she got, on the second of July. Did she burn it, with the other things?"

"Oddly, she didn't. I found it in her desk; or, rather, beneath her typewriter. Either she forgot about it; or knew that none of us could read it. It was written in code. Here it is."

Code, indeed! When I took it from its envelope, this is what met my eyes:

"Paexzalytpl f-y nyx oggrago. rn fgao atf jan j-asm, ahzgo zkg e-ahhalo, vigt nyx cplzgr rg zkg kypulzae, zkaz nyx palf, vlxz nyx lrizazgf r-ya e-lpa prleg, "p-yoon yef fgao, l-rafe--"

I have copied only the first lines on the first page. There were four sleazy pages, all closely typewritten. Not a scratch of handwriting on it. What I judged to be the signature, was, "Strsl."

"Do you know who wrote this?" I asked. "I am sure, if I dare be sure of anything, that it was written by a man named Lewis Bauermann."

I counted the letters of "Lewis" on my fingers. Five. The number of letters in the signature, "Strsl." "If he signed his name Lewis," I said, "then 'S' would be 'L,' and 'I' would be 'e' and so on. Get a pencil, dear. Let's see if we can work it out."

"No," she said, "you see, the letter 's' comes twice in the last word, and there are no duplicate letters in Lewis. She didn't read the signature, when she read the letter to me. At least I don't remember--"

"She read it to you!" I exclaimed. "I thought that she did. Now—I don't know. I can't be sure of anything. She read to me what she said was a copy of the letter; that is, she worked-out code. She may have left out entire paragraphs. She may have changed it, in any way, in order to keep her terrible secret from me."

"Yes, but what did she tell you the letter contained?" "It is too long even to begin to tell now. And—I don't want to tell it again; not today. I have told John all about it, you see. Later of course—Or you may ask John to tell you. It—it was an insult from beginning to end. An insult to me. I can't bear thinking of it, any more, not today."

"Mary," her voice changed suddenly as did her manner, "do you know why Uncle Sam asked me—almost commanded me to be in the living room at three o'clock today?"

"No, Danny, I don't. But he told Mrs. Ricker and me to be there, too. I guess he just wants to talk to all of us, together."

"Oh—talk! What good is talk going to do? Talk, in a place like this, now, where there is not one true, certain thing to get hold of, anywhere; where not one of us can believe in another--"

She put a quick hand to her lips; her eyes widened; she turned, and hastily pushing aside the heavy curtain, went through the clothes closet into her own room.

I sat still, at the desk. The paper before me, and the sharp pencil in my hand, tempted me to make a list, as they always do in books of the clues, to date. I wrote:

"Locked door.
"Key in my pocket.
"T. A. (I put only the initials of tobacco ashes.)
"Chad's suicide.
"Chad's note. What person was he trying to shield?"

"What did Hubert Hand think that I had overheard in the cabin?" "Mrs. Ricker's threat.
"Contents of the bearded bag.
"Empty match-box.
"Empty purse. Missing bill-fold. (Robbery.)
"Crumpled handkerchief. (Tears?)
"Pleading?"
"Broken cig. holder.
"Hubert Hand's note.
"The code letter.

"Gabrielle's note to Danny." My face burns, even yet, when I realize that, at half-past two o'clock on the afternoon of the fifth of July, if I had been possessor of just one lick of sense, I could, instead of writing that list of clues, have written another one; a list that, step by step, just as sure as straight ahead, would have led to the guilty person.

Why did I not take into consideration the fact that, for two months, the Canneziano girls had been searching for something on the Desert Moon; something which I was all but certain they had not found?

Why did I not give a thought to the fact that John, after a secret conversation with Gaby—according to Mrs. Ricker—had been clean and clear away off the place since early afternoon until evening?

Why did I not include in my list the fact that Gaby had given the gold monkey to Martha?

Why, instead of trying to puzzle out the code letter, did I not read between the lines of Gabrielle's last note to Danny?

However, at the time, since it was of my own making, I was quite well satisfied with my list. I took it to the table to check over the items. Sam had put the key, with which I had opened the attic door, alongside the other things there.

I picked it up, now, and looked at it for the first time. I had not looked at it, I had merely used it, the night before. My heart jumped up in my throat. It was not the key to the attic door. It was a rusty old pass key that had hung on a nail in the broom closet, off the kitchen, for more years than I could remember.

Whoever had put this key in my pocket, must have been well acquainted with the Desert Moon kitchen, to have found that old key, under the brooms, and mops, and dust rags, and chamols-skins, and the rest, that hung around it and over it in the broom closet.

What Had Become of the Key to the Attic Door?

What had become of the key to the attic door?

CHAPTER IX

The Session

When I went down to the living room, at five minutes before three, Danny, John, Mrs. Ricker and Martha were all there. Martha was on the biggest davenport, playing with the monkey charm.

Sam and Hubert Hand came into the room together. Sam looked around, counting noses.

"All here," he said, and locked the door he and Hubert had come through, and dropped the key in his pocket. He went all around the room, closing and locking the doors and windows. He moved a chair to the foot of the stairway, pulled a small table over beside it, took his six-gun out of his back pocket, put it on the table, and sat down in the chair.

No one had moved nor had said a word. I know that I was frightened. I was not afraid of Sam, and I was not afraid of that six-gun. Mostly, I guess, I was afraid of being made afraid; partly, I was afraid of myself.

Hubert Hand spoke first. "Cannon ough?" he sneered.

"That's all right, Hand," Sam answered. "This is here, mostly I think, for ornamental purposes."

"Daddy," Martha piped up, "aren't we going to have the fireworks to-night?"

Sam frowned at her. "Not tonight, daughter."

She opened her mouth and began making those dreadful noises she always made whenever she was crossed in anything.

Sam rapped on the table, "Shut that up, here and now," he said. "Not another whimper out of you. Hear me, Martha?"

She closed her mouth with a snap.

I thought those immense eyes of hers would pop out of her head. I am sure the others of us all felt the way she looked. In all the years we had lived on the Desert Moon; it was the first time any one of us had ever heard Sam speak impatiently to Martha. As for scolding her, being stern with her, up to this minute it had never been in the book.

"I reckon," Sam began, "that all of you in here know that anyone could walk up to any man or woman in here and call him or her a murderer, and that not one of us could give him the lie, right now."

"I reckon that you know, too, as everyone in the country knows that, at this hour, the Desert Moon ranch is rotten with the muck of crime and suspicion. Maybe you don't know that it is not going to say that way for many more hours."

"We have called the law in, as was right and proper. And the law has been real polite, and blin'ke its eyes, and departed. 'Folded its tents like the Arabs, and silently stole away. Well, that's all right. I didn't much care about having those fellows mix into my private business; anyway, not until I had found out that I couldn't attend to it myself. I am not going to find that out. I can attend to it. I am going to, right here and now. Later on, when we need the law again, we'll call on it. The innocent in this room will have their names cleared. The Desert Moon will be a fit place for a white man to live on."

"Now this gun here may look like I felt violent or something. I don't. And I'm not going to act violent. This gun is here for just one purpose and I'm dead certain it won't be used for that. A word to the wise, though. No person, barring none—and including the ladies, is to leave this room until I give the word. No innocent person in here will try to leave. Any guilty person in here—and before God, there is a guilty person here; guilty, at least of aiding and abetting—is going to have too much sense to try to make a break. That is why I won't need the gun. Not, I mean, until we find the guilty person. When we have found him, it may be of some use until the sheriff can get here. All I'm asking of everybody here, is that you all tell the truth. You'll have to, sooner or later. Better make it sooner."

During this speech my dander had been rising. It had got up pretty good and high by this time. "Sam Stanley," I spoke out, "you ought to know that you can't force truth out of anybody at the point of a gun, nor by keeping them locked up. We'll get hungry. We'll get thirsty. And when we do we'll eat and drink and go about our affairs. At least I will—unless you shoot me. I'm not fixed to put up with this kind of foolishness."

"Mary," Sam roared at me. "That's enough out of you. You are quiet. You are going to do as you are told. So are the others."

Sam had never spoken like that to me before. It left me limp as a drained jelly bag. Before I could get my breath for an answer, Hubert Hand was talking.

"I changed your mind since morning, haven't you, Sam? You were dead sure this morning that no one on the place had had anything to do with the murder."

"Never mind about my morning's opinions, Hand. You are right. Dead right. I've changed my mind. Now since you are already going pretty good, I'll begin with you, and work around the room, taking each one in turn. I want you to tell everything you know, and everything you suspect concerning the murder."

"Sorry," Hubert Hand said, "but I don't know a d—n thing except that, apparently, she was strangled to death some time between four o'clock yesterday afternoon and eight o'clock yesterday evening. We saw her alive at four. We found her dead at eight. That's the extent of my knowledge."

"All right. Now go ahead with what you suspect."

"I can't see," Hubert Hand objected, "that suspicious have any place here. Beyond stirring up a rumpus and hard feelings, they wouldn't get any of us any place."

"That is for me to decide," Sam said. "You were mighty busy for a while this morning, throwing out hints and sturs. If this session doesn't do anything else, it can any way clear out all this whispering that is going around. Come on now. Hand. Come clean."

"Well," Hand said, "I can talk all right. But I want to start with this understanding. I don't know any facts that amount to a d—n. You're right that I have suspicions, and, since you are determined to have them now, at the point of a gun, I'll say that I think John did it, and that somebody else in the house is shielding him."

Danny gave a thin, sick little shriek and threw her arm around John in a protecting way. John straightened under his tan I could see the color seeping out of his face. Gently, he removed Danny's arm.

Sam lowered his white eyebrows until his eyes looked like two slits of blue-light, glinting out from away behind his face. When he spoke his voice was iron.

"Why do you think John killed her?"

"In the first place, John is the only one here who hasn't a water tight alibi--"

"Not by a d—n sight he isn't," Sam interrupted. "But never mind. G. on."

"At four o'clock Gaby came down through the room. While she was still in sight, Danny called down, trying to get her to come back. Now this is just another suspicion; I don't know whether anyone will back me up in it or not—probably not,"—he added the last in a hateful, sturring way—"but I noticed that her voice sounded strange, like she was excited, maybe, or else afraid."

Sam asked, "Did anyone else here notice anything of that kind?" Mrs. Ricker spoke. "I noticed it," she said.

Hubert bowed at her, in a sort of mocking way. Knowing what I knew, I thought that her corroboration would do Hubert Hand more harm than good. But, of course, the others did not know what I knew.

"Let me see," Hubert Hand continued, "where was I? Gaby, after going through the room, stopped on the porch for a minute to talk to Chad. He came into the house in a fine humor. Gaby then went around the house to the rabbit hutch, and for some reason, gave her bracelet to Martha. Martha was in the house again within five or ten minutes. Danny had come down by that time. From four to five, then, you and I were playing chess. Chad was at the piano. Danny and Mary were over there, talking together. Mrs. Ricker was tating. Martha was just fooling around the room. I'm pretty certain not one of us left this room during that hour."

"At five we three men went together to let the cows in and to milk. Mary, I believe, was in the kitchen alone, getting supper, during that time. Mrs. Ricker, Danny and Martha remained here in the living room. Is that right?"

"Maybe it is, and maybe it isn't," Sam said. "There is the hour in there, before supper, that we'll all have to account for, right accurately. Before any of us has that water-tight alibi you were talking about, Hand."

"All right," Hubert Hand agreed. "You and Chad and I went down to the barns together. We let the cows in. We milked them. At least, you and I did. Chad stayed with you and was kidding around down in your end of the barn. I heard you laughing and talking down there, together, the whole time."

"I milked four cows. And I will swear that you were in the barn the entire time. Anyway, that is easy settled. Mary, did I, or did anyone of the three of us, come through the kitchen and go upstairs during that hour?"

"No," I answered. "Mrs. Ricker," Hubert Hand questioned, "did any one of us men come in, and go upstairs through the living room, during that hour?"

"No," she said. "Mrs. Ricker," Sam asked, "were you right there, alone, in the living room during that entire hour?"

"I was not alone. Martha was with me. And several times during the hour, five or six times at least, Danny came in from the dining room to see whether she could see John coming up the road."

"Danny," Sam spoke to her, "were Mrs. Ricker and Martha in the living room every time you went in there?"

"I think so."

"Only think so, eh?" Hubert Hand half sneered it.

"I mean," Danny explained, "that I am sure Mrs. Ricker was here. I did not particularly notice Martha."

"I can vouch for Martha," Mrs. Ricker snapped.

"All right," Hubert Hand went on, "so far, so good. The ladies, I think, especially if you remember the glass doors between the living room and the dining room, have established alibis that would satisfy any jury."

"Now for you and Chad and me, again. We walked together, carrying the milk to the dairy. There we took off the barn coveralls, and, at your suggestion, washed up in the dairy kitchen, to save time. We came back to the house together. Mary said that supper was on the table. We all sat down to the table together. All present, you see, except John."

St. Joseph—One of the largest and most severe fines ever imposed in Berrien Circuit Court was meted out to Ray Polley, local automobile repair shop employe, fine $1,000 and costs for liquor violation. Judge White also exiled Polley from the state for five years, on probation. This was his second offense.

Gladwin—Convicted twice at one term of court for making and selling liquor, Thomas Conner, 75 years old, of Estey, was sentenced to serve from one to two years in Jackson prison. The aged man was convicted of the first offense some time ago and was out on bail when the second offense was committed. He has been taken to prison.

Dexter—A fall from a tree into which he had climbed while playing "hide and seek" with four other Dexter boys caused the instant death of Robert Marshall, 13 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Marshall. Robert's skull was fractured when his head struck the pavement after a limb broke, plunging the boy 15 feet to the street.

The long looked for vacation which is always the result of Teachers Institute has finally materialized, much to the sorrow of all more or less ambitious students. Owing to this short vacation the newspaper staff will not be able to collect much gossip this week but there are a few things that need telling and will prove to be of interest to all.

DEBATE

The Michigan High School Debating League was organized by the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan in 1917 to be under the general direction of the University of Michigan Extension Division, in co-operation with the Department of Speech and the Library Extension Service.

The purpose of the League is to promote effective public speaking and the use of good English and to stimulate the public discussion of State and National questions through the medium of interscholastic debates.

Any four-year High School of the State may become a member of the Michigan High School Debating League upon application to the Manager and the payment of the annual fee of two dollars.

All member schools of the League debate upon the same debate question throughout the year. The question this year is: "Resolved: That a Judge, or Board of Judges, be Substituted for the Jury in all Trials in the State and Municipal Courts of Michigan."

The debates of the League are held in two series. The first is a point-winning or preliminary series in which each school debates four times, win or lose. Each Judge's decision counts one point and the victory counts one point. At the end of this series the schools having the largest number of points go through an elimination series, the losing schools in each debate dropping out of the schedule. The two undefeated teams meet at Ann Arbor for the State Championship Debate which is held in April. In the four preliminary debates, each school will have two debates on the affirmative and two debates on the negative. One affirmative debate will be held at home and one affirmative debate will be held away from home. One negative debate will be held at home and one negative debate will be held away from home. Schools allotted the affirmative in the first debate will retain the affirmative in the second debate and then change to the negative for the two debates after the Christmas vacation. Schools allotted the negative in the first debate will retain the negative in the second debate and then change to the affirmative for the two debates after the Christmas vacation. But it should be understood that while the above is the general plan, unforeseen circumstances may necessitate an occasional exception. The dates for the Preliminary Debates have been fixed as follows:

First Debate, Nov. 15 (Affirmative Entertains.)
Second Debate, Dec. 6, (Negative Entertains.)

Third Debate, Jan. 24, (Negative Entertains.)

Fourth Debate, Jan. 24, (Affirmative Entertains.)

These dates may be set ahead a day or two only by mutual consent of any two schools paired in debate, but in no case shall debates be held later than the scheduled dates.

As soon as the preliminary series of debates has been held, the 64 schools with the highest points will be declared eligible to enter the Elimination Series.

Through the co-operation of The Detroit Free Press the University of Michigan Wall Plaque Trophy will be presented to each of the 64 high schools that enter the Elimination Series of debates. This in itself is considered an honor and achievement.

The University of Michigan Extension Division will award a large bronze trophy cup to each of the two teams participating in the State Championship Debate, and a smaller bronze trophy cup to each of the two semi-final teams.

To each of the six debaters participating in the State Championship Debate, The Detroit Free Press will present a gold watch.

The growth of the Michigan High School Debating League, is shown by the fact that in the years 1917-1918 (when the League was first organized) it had a membership of only 66 schools; during the years of 1928-1929, 250 schools enrolled. This increase gives evidence of the growing interest in public speaking and formal debate on the part of the high schools of the State.

Since 1921, when East Jordan placed second in the State Championship debates, not a great deal of interest has been shown by the townspeople. All attention has been given over to athletics and the debate team has been left to get along as best as it could. But remember that Debating is just as important in another way as is football and basketball. This year we have very promising material and with your earnest support and interest, why can't East Jordan again rank as high as it did in 1921? It is true that the debaters have to do the biggest share of the fighting if they want to win but they can't do it all. It's up to YOU to give them the necessary backing and encouragement. Suppose YOU help them win some debates this year. If you give them your moral support you can be assured that they will respond in a way that will make your efforts worth while.

The debating class has been divided into two teams. Helen Severance, Carl Weaver, Francis Votruba, on the negative, and Clara Leu, Thelma Sommerville, and Frances Brown on the Affirmative. Wednesday, Oct. 16, the two teams met for a try-out. Margaret Staley acted as judge and cast her vote in favor of the negative. The purpose of this debate was to see just how each team could handle its case and see how the squad stood on rebuttal. Wednesday, Oct. 23, a more polished debate will be held between the two teams, each keeping the side it upheld the previous Wednesday.

FOOTBALL
Gaylord Defeats East Jordan 40-6.
Gaylord played a strong passing game which the locals couldn't seem to stop. The entire first quarter, East Jordan kicked on first down, playing a defensive game while Gaylord was on the offensive.

The first half ended 14-6 in favor of Gaylord, both touch downs being made by long passes and end runs. East Jordan's only touchdown came in the second quarter of the first half when Quinn found a hole in the line and broke through the secondary defense for a touchdown.

East Jordan showed its school spirit through having the High School Band parade up and down the field followed by a snake dance in which all the students took part.

The second half was fatal for East Jordan, for Gaylord broke through the line time and time again for large gains. One touchdown for Gaylord came as a pass to McKinnon, former East Jordan student, who plays end on the Gaylord team. Other touchdowns followed on passes and line plays by Gaylord's fullback. The game ended as Quinn threw a "shoe-string" pass to Lee.

A large crowd attended the game. All of the East Jordan student body was present. A great number of Gaylord's representatives also came over.

Battle Creek—Knocked out of a boat by the recoil from his shotgun while hunting ducks, Thurlow W. Bell, 17, drowned in Hamblin Lake, near here. The youth's death marked the first hunting fatality of the year in this locality.

Merrill—Edwin King, Ithaca farmer, was killed while walking on M-46, near here. He was struck by an automobile driven by H. P. Hall of Elm Hall. The driver said King stepped directly into the automobile's path.

Owosso—The residence and barn on the farm of Delos D. Curtis, former supervisor of Fairfield township, were destroyed by fire early one morning. The loss is placed at $20,000. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis were awakened by the crackling of flames and escaped just before the roof caved in.

Battle Creek—A walking stick made from a plank from Admiral Perry's flagship has been given to A. M. Minty, local resident, by E. B. Willis, son of a pioneer. Senators Jim Read, Hiram Johnson and William E. Borah are said to be owners of canes made from the same timber of the historical ship.

Mackinaw City—The Secretary of War at Washington, D. C., has approved an allotment of $25,000 to be used in repairing the two breakwaters at Mackinaw City. The breakwaters were completed in 1914 and no general repairs ever have been made. Recurrent storms have caused settlement and displacement of stones to a serious extent.

Monroe—There will be many thirty residents of Monroe county this winter, on account of the grape crop failures. There was a small grape harvest by farmers in the southeastern portion of the county who owned vines along the shores of Lake Erie. The grape industry as a whole in Monroe county, however, suffered a loss fixed at, from $85,000 to $75,000.

Pontiac—The Oakland County supervisors have voted to hire a county conservation officer who will spend all his time in that one county although he will be under State officials. The salary has been placed at $3,500 a year to be paid by the county. It is stated that Robert McClure, of Royal Oak, who is the present State conservation officer, is slated for this new job.

Grand Rapids—When Arthur Taylor, Grand Rapids Gas Co. inspector, was called to the home of William Gardner here to investigate a gas pipe leak, he struck a match which resulted in an explosion, blowing out a basement wall, setting fire to the house and burning his face. Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze, which was accompanied by minor explosions, and Taylor was treated at St. Mary's hospital.

Bay City—Roy Sharkey, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sharkey, 1309 Marquette avenue, died at Mercy hospital from pneumonia resulting from inhaling smoke and flames when he was trapped in a dog kennel which caught fire. The kennel was under the porch at the Sharkey home and it is thought the boy was playing with matches and set the small building on fire. Firemen found it necessary to tear one side off the dog house to get the child out.

Charlevoix—The largest catches of whitefish and lake trout made in many years are being brought into Charlevoix by Beaver Island and Charlevoix commercial fishermen. The Beaver Island mail boat made a special run from the island recently with 17,000 pounds. William J. Gallagher, of St. James, lifted 5,000 pounds of whitefish from one pond net setting, the largest catch recorded in years. The excellent lifts are welcomed after one of the poorest summer fishing seasons experienced here in many years.

HE HAD A BOTTLE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

They were talking about England and what that small country has accomplished in power and influence.

"What one thing has helped more than anything else," one of the older men asked, "to put England where she is today?"

The boy to whom the question was put thought a little while seriously and then answered:

"Respect for law, I think."

He was quite right. No one who has kept his eyes open in London, for instance, can help but be impressed with the reverence of the Englishman for the law and for those who are delegated to enforce it. A policeman in America is often a joke and a byword. In England he is respected, loved almost, and his raised hand is the hand of God. He is the friend of children and of the crippled and the unfortunate; he is a haven of safety for strangers and his word puts an end to disturbances of every sort.

Three men were sitting in the observation car as I rode up to Minneapolis. They were beyond middle age; they were evidently experienced, and I gathered from their conversation that they were officials of the road. As we rode along they pointed out the one to the other, where changes should be made, where some subordinate had, perhaps, made errors in carrying out regulations. A fireman stoking an engine, as we halted at a division point, was wasting coal and breaking some regulation evidently, which had been laid down for his guidance. One of the men took the number of his engine, and I knew that some one would sooner or later hear about the dereliction. Law should be obeyed.

The oldest man of the group rose, finally, to go to his compartment.

"What did you do with my overcoat?" he inquired of his companion. "I have a bottle in the inside pocket and I shouldn't want it broken." He winked knowingly at the other man and whispered something interesting into his ear, and they went off together. I had seen him the night before sitting half drunk in the smoking room, mumbling incoherently, a glass of liquor in his hand too stupefied with drink to set the glass down or to finish its contents. No one better than he could realize the danger of one of his engineers or firemen or brakemen violating the prohibition law, but for him it was all right, the matter of a joke in fact. His attitude explains a lot of anomalies in American life. We do not respect law, though we expect the other man to do so. We want ourselves to cling to the forbidden bottle.

I talked to a young fellow a few days ago who had violated a well-known college regulation and had knowingly and intentionally done so. "Well," he said, in extenuation of his dereliction, "every one violates law, some time. You do, don't you? I don't see why I should be better than the rest especially when the majority of the fellows get away with it."

He could not see the ill-logic of his argument. He simply wanted his bottle in spite of prohibition.
