Slapped a Critic

This is Lillian Foster, American actress, who slapped Hannen Swaffer, English dramatic critic, in the luncheon room of a London hotel, because he had said unkind things about her performance and also because he has a habit of attacking everything American.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Two Chemistry Branches

The science of chemistry is divided into two great fields, or branches—organic and inorganic. The former deals with the carbon compounds found principally in plants and animals. Inorganic chemistry embraces those compounds that lack carbon. The division between the two fields is hard to establish.

MISS VIRGINIA PRAY WED TO GEORGE HOWE

Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Pray received a telegram Tuesday, announcing the marriage of their daughter, Virginia, to George Howe of Detroit. Mr. Howe is a graduate of the Howell High School and the Detroit School of Law and at present is associated with one of the Detroit Law firms in the National Bank Building.

The bride is a graduate of the East Jordan High School and the Mount Pleasant Normal, and for the last 4 years has taught in the Detroit schools.

"GO-TO-CHURCH-SUNDAY," NOV. 24

East Jordan is to observe "Go-To-Church-Sunday" a week from Sunday, Nov. 24. In a great many cities some Sunday has been appointed on which everyone shall make a special effort to go to Church. Special services are not always planned; in fact they usually are not. The idea is that if everybody will make a special effort to go to church at one particular time the attendance itself will insure a service of special interest.

The invitation is given that everyone in East Jordan and surrounding country try to make their plans so that they will be able to go to Church on Sunday, Nov. 24th.

Harbor Springs—Maud Bussard, formerly a teacher in the public schools here, ended her life by hanging herself. She had been in ill health.

Coldwater—Philip Bishop, local contractor, narrowly escaped death while hunting in a swamp near here. Bishop, alone at the time, was knocked down when two leaden pellets from another hunter's gun struck him. Two shots struck Bishop near the eye.

Buchanan—Eli Helmick, 89 years old, last Michigan survivor of General Sherman's march to the sea, died in the home of his son, Milton, of this city. He was the second Buchanan Civil War veteran to die recently, John Curtis having died at Niles a few days previous.

Monroe—There are more mallard ducks in the Monroe marshes than ever before at this time of the year, according to Henry Duby, well known fisherman and hunter. They are also much heavier. Duby attributes this condition to the fact that the birds had received excellent food elsewhere before reaching Monroe.

Dowagiac—Roy Clemens, 44, St. Joseph farmer, received wounds resulting in his death when his son, Roy Clemens Jr., accidentally discharged a shotgun while they were on a hunting trip. The boy raised the weapon to fire at a woodchuck. The gun went off as he was raising it and the charge struck Clemens in the back.

Lansing—Twenty-one fingerling brook trout were taken from a Great Blue Heron, killed by Guy Lincoln, overseer of the Oden fish hatchery, according to a report made by Lincoln to the fish division of the department of conservation. The fingerlings were believed to have been taken from the Oden rearing pond.

Mt. Clemens—A needle was removed from the stomach of Floyd J. Hubert, 9 months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Hubert, of North Mt. Clemens, in an operation here by Dr. Fred K. Lenfesty. The needle was located by an X-ray examination made after the child had cried constantly for hours.

Merrill—Leon Allen, 22 years old, of Saginaw, was killed while hunting with four friends, eight miles north of here. The accident occurred when Alex Anderson raised his shotgun to fire at a rabbit. The charge struck Allen, who was standing a few feet in front of him, in the neck. Coroner Baulthaus Gugel declared death was accidental.

Battle Creek—Crosby A. Galley, 37 years old, Grand Trunk Railway engineer is dead from a self-inflicted bullet wound. Galley, according to doctors, has been in ill-health for several months, because of injuries suffered in a wreck at Edwardsburg, Mich., about a year ago. Failure to make satisfactory recovery is believed to have been responsible for his act.

Traverse City—An ordinance providing a fine up to $100 for failure to repair electric motors that cause radio interference, was passed on first reading by the city commission recently at the request of radio engineers and dealers. An amendment may be attempted calling for a receiving set license fee of one dollar a year to enable the city to employ a radio trouble shooter.

A warrant was out for Reed, charging disturbing a religious meeting and he was said to have been speeding to elude a deputy sheriff.

Marshall—A party of Battle Creek men, hunting in the Nottawa Woods, near here, found the body of Louis Tuepke, 69-year-old Fredonia Township resident, who had been missing since July 25. He had hanged himself. An empty jug and a bottle partly filled with liquor were found near the body.

Grand Rapids—George H. Godfrey, of Pierson, has challenged the recently published statement that the last soldier who marched with Sherman to the sea, had died. "I marched with Sherman to the sea," he said. "I was in every skirmish and engagement. I am now 86 years old, in fair health, and can still march a bit and hope to live for a good while yet."

Ypsilanti—The work of junking the property and equipment of the defunct Detroit, Jackson & Chicago Electric Railway is now under way. The property, except real estate, was sold to the Woodmere Scrap Iron & Metal Co. of Detroit for $450,000. The property includes 76 miles of track, the rails estimated to weigh 76,000 tons. Seven hundred tons of copper trolley will be torn down.

Ithaca—Fay Wiles, 63 years old, of Gratiot County, has faced Judge Kelly Searle, of the Gratiot Circuit Court, four times in 21 years. The girl is in the detention home here.

Lansing—Rewards aggregating $400 are being offered in Iron county for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person who slaughtered a doe in the Fortune Lake County park, Iron county. The board of supervisors has offered $100 and the county park commission has added $300 to the reward. The big doe, one of the two deer in the park, was clubbed to death. The reward is believed to be the highest ever offered in connection with such an offense.

If seeing is believing, then men must have the most implicit confidence in women.

New World Was Rather Cold to Them

Frantisek and Anna Mrza, aged eight and ten, arrived bag and baggage in the New world of which they had dreamed for weeks, only to find that their father was not at the dock in New York to meet them as arranged. When Mother Mrza died several years ago back in Czecho-Slovakia, little Frantisek and Anna went to live with their grandparents in a village near Prague. Their father, John Mrza, came to America to make a new home for them, and settled in Endicott, N. Y., where he married again. The children were cared for by the Travelers' Aid society.

The vote was: Bowles, 131,030; Smith, 122,435. It was Mr. Bowles' third attempt for the mayoralty, and his third contest against Mr. Smith. Twice, in 1924 and 1925, Smith defeated him.

Grand Rapids—Judgment for $6,600 was awarded in Circuit Court to pretty Olga Bobat, 20 years old, Russian, in her breach of promise suit against Anthony Braccio, 25 years old, a Grand Rapids furniture dealer. The jury deliberated less than two hours. A mute witness to the trial, of which he was a central figure, was Boris, the 7-months-old son of the girl.

Before her marriage she was Miss Josephine Vriesenga of Grand Rapids.

Grand Haven—That Capt. Robert McKay of Grand Haven, commander of the Grand Trunk car ferry Milwaukee, true to the tradition of the sea, went down with his ship when it sank in a storm on Lake Michigan Oct. 22, with a loss of about 50 lives, was revealed when his body, with the bodies of two members of his crew, was washed ashore between Holland and Saugatuck.

Miller formerly lived in Monroe.

Mt. Pleasant—One unexpected result of a recent experimentation with rats at Central State Teachers college developed when wild rats declared war on the tame ones, killing four of their number. Department of biology officials are keeping 28 remaining tame white rats in a safe place where the wild rats in the basement of the science building can not carry on their war of extermination against their tamer cousins.

Manistee—C. DeLong, 40 years old, received fatal injuries when he was struck by a pile driver while employed on a dock and harbor project at Seul Choix. The pile had just been lowered into position when DeLong leaned forward to remove a cable. The hammer came down, knocking him into the lake. Other workmen pulled DeLong out of the water, but he died while being taken to a Manistee hospital. He leaves a wife and four children.

Thompsonville—Three children, the oldest a girl 4-years-old, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the farm home of Frank Eddy, near here, while both Eddy and his wife were away. The dead are: Lulu, 4; Lena, 3; Walter Melvin, 1 year old. The cause of the fire has not been determined but it is believed that the children may have set it by playing with matches since the parents said there was small likelihood of the flames having started from fires in stoves in the house.

Manistee—Despite the recent action of the Manistee County board of supervisors in refusing an appropriation of $2,000 towards the purchase of an adequate airport for Manistee, an airport seems assured for this city, the result of action of the city commission. GARDEN, ONCE HOBBY, NOW WORLD FAMOUS

Under the above caption the Detroit Free Press of Sunday last contains a feature article with illustration, of Joel Johnston and his Dahlia Farm. Following is the article:

Charlevoix, Mich., Nov. 9.—A few years ago Joel Johnston had a nice flower garden just like hundreds of other nature-lovers. He spent his spare moments from farm duties in the garden. He enjoyed it as a pastime. Johnston's flower beds always stood out a little above others, however, and were envied by everyone who saw them.

Today Johnston has acres of flowers at his place north of Charlevoix and, instead of putting in idle moments there for mere enjoyment, has made a business of it. His hobby has grown to an industry of international scope—just because his flowers were a little better than those of others.

Johnston's specialty is Dahlias. He has discarded all others and has centralized his efforts upon this one flower. From the dozen or so varieties he used to experiment with in the beginning, Johnston now has 50 distinctly different Dahlia plants, one with the only fragrant bloom in existence.

Another plant bears flowers of two colors. Still another had eight blossoms this summer, several of which were more than nine inches across the flower.

This winter Johnston will store in the neighborhood of 48,000 bulbs. He has shipped bulbs to nearly every State in this country and other consignments to Ireland, Scotland and England.

He is a great booster for Michigan, his home State. Critics have proclaimed his Dahlias equal to those for which California is famed and Johnston never fails to point out to visitors that the Golden State has "nothing on" Michigan when it comes to producing Dahlias.

An old timer is a man who still remembers when it seemed funny to call two a family.

RELIEF FROM DREADED COUGHING.

Drinking is very harmful if done when the stomach is empty. The real trouble is that it is too often done when the head is empty.

Hard coughs that strain and weaken, resulting from colds and recurring bronchial attacks, are very quickly eased and relieved by reliable Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, that dislodges irritating mucus without effort, and clears up the distressing cough. Mrs. F. A. Gibson Racine, Wis., says: "Coughs never last long in our family—Foley's Honey and Tar puts a quick end to coughing, and heals the sore spots. Our druggist recommended it." For Sale at Hite's Drug Store. adv.

GOTHAM VAULT HAS BIG SILVER HOARD

Bars and Ingots Come From All Over World.

New York.—The biggest store of pure silver in the United States lies under the pavement in Spruce street. Its repository is the vault, reaching out under the street, of a company which so dominates the world silver market that it is virtually a clearing house for the metal.

Bars and ingots of the treasure are constantly coming into the vault from the mines of the world, and as constantly being shipped away to mints and jewelry manufactories in the United States and Europe, and to China and India, which, because of their silver coinage system, are two principal silver-consuming nations of the world.

Insurance Rate Low.

The business of getting the pure silver in and out of the vault is highly organized. Armored cars and caged wagons bring it in and carry it away. It is carried up and down between the sidewalk level and the steel vault in electric elevators, and armed attendants are always on guard. The trucks that carry the treasure back clear up to the elevator shaft so that the silver can be transferred with minimum exposure, and most passers-by do not even stop to watch the operation. At the docks the metal is handled under guard, and on ships and liners it is kept in specie rooms. So efficiently is it transported that the insurance rate from New York to India is only 15 cents on $100 worth, and in 25 years not an ounce of silver has been stolen.

Is Handled "Naked."

The silver is handled "naked," with no covering around the bars. Handlers are careful not to rub them against each other and, although the metal in its pure state is comparatively soft, the loss from scratching in shipment averages but five ounces in every 8,335 pounds. Before the war London was the great silver bullion market. Now New York has usurped the place, principally because the use of silver has become so much more extensive here.

The phrase "born with a silver spoon in his mouth" hasn't much significance any more in this country, for almost every family has some silverware now, and since the war American industry has found many new commercial uses for silver. The laws require sterling silver to be 925/1000 pure. The silver in the Spruce street vaults runs higher than 999-1000 pure.

Find Faculty of 22 in School with Nine Pupils

San Francisco.—Opera bouffe armies, with a dozen officers to each private, were rivaled here by the Jesse W. Lillenthal school, it was revealed, when an auditor's check was made of the pay roll.

The school staff was discovered to be 22, consisting of 18 attendants, a principal and five teachers, to care for the instruction and needs of nine boy students.

The school is a correctional institution founded 50 years ago and taken over recently by the city. At that time there were 72 inmates. The drop in attendance came under the regime of Juvenile Judge Michael Roche, who returned the "incorrigibles" to their homes whenever possible for "adjustment and correction."

Only one teacher will now be provided, and the attendant staff will be cut to nine, with further cuts scheduled.

Ancient Village Perched

on Roof of Old St. Peter's

Rome.—One of the oddest villages in the world is located on the roof of St. Peter's in the new Vatican state. It has been there for ages, and consists of little cottages in which several persons live. The view from this village is said to be unequalled in the world, commanding the entire "Eternal City" and a magnificent stretch of the Campagna and the Appian way.

Massachusetts Town Has

More Cars Than Homes

Hudson, Mass.—There are nearly 200 more automobiles in this town than there are houses, according to the board of assessors. Citizens have registered 1810 automobiles while the number of houses is about 1,620, according to the assessor's statistics. Last year there were 1,201 power vehicles in the town.

Plague Slays 500

The Hague, Holland.—Three hundred and twenty-two persons have died of a mysterious plague in Java in September. One hundred and seventy-eight died in August, bringing the total to 500.

So Old Dobbin Again Moves to Back Seat

Winchester, Kan.—That the tractor and the motor car virtually have made "Old Dobbin" obsolete on the farm, was demonstrated at the Mike Hoffman public sale, held five miles east of here. A mule brought $1.50. Several horses sold for $2.50 apiece, and a span of work mares brought $12.50 each.

LIGHTS BY GRANT DIXON of NEW YORK

For Baby

New York.—There are, even in this day of fabulous royalties and sales of motion picture rights, writers who are not wealthy. Of several such that I know, one recently became a father and all his friends showered the young son with gifts—appropriate clothing, silver spoons, mugs and what-not.

"But the best present of all," the writer told me, "is one good old George X sent. George gave my young hopeful two $20 gold pieces, and my wife and I have been instructed not to start the child's bank account with them. Instead, we must, each morning, hold the coins close to the baby's eyes and blink them together.

"As he grows up he will realize what real money is, and he will be trained to grab for it whenever he sees it."

Detective Story

A colored man walked into a pawn shop with a $250 camera. The pawn broker was suspicious and questioned the man regarding where he got such an expensive instrument. The colored gentleman thereupon departed hastily, not even troubling to take the camera, and not getting a ticket for it, either. The pawnbroker turned the camera over to police, who found a roll of film in it. This they had developed and prints made from it. The pictures were scenes aboard a yacht and at obviously expensive beaches. "Aha!" said the detectives. "A rich man owns this camera." One snapshot showed a close-up of a man in yachting costume, and a detective recognized the subject. It was Edmund O'Brien, an actor and the son of a former Supreme court justice. Pursuing the picture clue still further, the detective learned that the camera had been stolen from O'Brien, who hadn't even bothered to notify the police.

Sensitive Fellow

Here is a story they are telling about Jimmie Durante, comedian. Durante, who used to play the piano for a singing waiter named Eddie (actor, is known far and wide as Schnozzle, because of his de Bergerac nose. He is, perhaps, sensitive. At any rate, rather than have people laugh at him, he expends tons of energy in making them laugh with him.

He was playing golf one day, out on Long Island. Part of the course lay alongside a railroad track, near a station. A crowded passenger train had pulled in. Just as Durante was getting ready for a tee shot.

Decidedly nervous, Durante was the last of a foursome to drive. He took a terrific swing, and missed the ball entirely. Without a word he started down the fairway.

His companions called to him: "Hey, you missed the ball!" Durante retorted for them to pipe down: "I know it," he said, guardedly, "but look at all of those people in the train watching me. They don't know it."

Acid Air

Chemical properties in New York atmosphere are hard on woodwork. It has been found after an examination of the steeple of St. Paul's church on lower Broadway. The church is 135 years old, and in excellent condition, but the wooden steeple has been eaten away. Scientists insist that it is chemicals that have done it, for the steeple has received as much care as any old Colonial mansion, many of which look as good as new. The old steeple is being demolished and will be replaced by one made of metal, colored to resemble the original. Even that may not last, for not long ago it was discovered that the metal figure of Justice, atop the Municipal building, was all but losing her flowing robes, due to a peculiar rivet disease in her costume.

Tooth Aches, So This Hero

Removes It With Revolver

Santander, Spain.—The most original method yet discovered for removing an aching tooth was employed recently by a laborer in the town of Astillero, who shot out the offending molar. Unable to stand the pain any longer, he placed the barrel of a revolver against the tooth and pulled the trigger. He said he was relieved immediately. The only trouble was that the bullet also penetrated his cheek.

Women Give Cup to Town's Model Husband

Cushing, Okla.—A man who never drinks "more than enough," swears only moderately, drives a new car, uses tobacco in every form, plays a moderate game of golf and fills in at bridge only when forced to has been selected the "model" husband by the Cushing Women's Professional and Business club. Dwight Buell, the model, was presented a silver loving cup by the club.

Doctor Roll Grows

Washington.—The average American has at his beck and call more doctors than has the citizen of any other nation. The United States bureau of education has discovered by a survey that the number of physicians is increasing every year. America'sills now support 140,521 physicians, it was found.

Railways and The Telephone

A freight train puffs quietly on the siding—waiting—the outlines of the cars showing dimly through the darkness. A minute passes—two—three. Then over the night air floats a muffled whistle. Far down the track a light appears. The rails begin to hum, the light grows bright, and a passenger train roars past, windows gleaming. Then the freight comes to life and the long, shadowy outline moves away.

Four million persons in Michigan are served by this steam transport system—four million persons rely upon it, and upon its worthy partner, the electric railway lines. Michigan desires the prosperity of these efficient and progressive railways, for only as they prosper can they serve.

Over hill, across valley—paralleling the rails or following the highways—go the telephone wires, freighted with the spoken commands of industry, agriculture, finance and business.

Railways and wireways traverse the land as partners in progress. Upon the one you depend for the transportation of yourself, your family and your goods. To the other you give your voice to be flashed immediately, one mile or thousands, from your home or your office.

The great rail transportation systems and the universal service of the telephone are vital factors in this country's development and prosperity.

CHAPTER XI

Canneziano.

Hubert answered the telephone, and called to Sam. I followed him into the living room to hear what was to be heard. I think that John and Mrs. Ricker followed for the same reason. When Sam said, "Read it, please," I knew that it was another telegram. They telephone all of our telegrams to us from Rattall, and mail them later, when they get around to it, if they don't forget.

Sam kept writing things on the telephone pad, and asking central to repeat, and to repeat again, and to spell that, please. Lands, but I got nervous, before he finally hung up the receiver, and turned to us, and asked: "Any of you ever hear of a fellow named Lynn MacDonald?"

None of us, of course, ever had. "Seems he is a kind of detective," Sam explained. "He calls himself a crime analyst, and he specializes in murder cases. Works on his own hook, kind of like Sherlock Holmes did, I guess. He wants to come here and take the case. He wants his expenses, and nothing else, if he fails. If he succeeds, he wants ten thousand, cash. Poor fish, I'd have said twenty thousand just as quick. Anyway, that's a fair proposition. I'm going to wire him to come. Let's see—Danny is coming up on Friday afternoon, isn't she? I'll wire MacDonald to take the same train. That will save us two trips to Rattall in the heat."

"Listen, dad—sleep over it," John urged. "If Mrs. Ricker is right about all this, and I swear that I think she is, isn't it enough for us to know about it, dad? If you get a detective here, and he comes to the same conclusion, we can't keep it a secret, then?"

Sam said, "He won't. And we aren't wanting, nor needing any secrets on the Desert Moon, just now."

He sat down and began to write the telegram. Five minutes, and he was reading it to the operator at Rattall.

My Heart Stood Stock Still. He Was Daniel Canneziano.

tall. He had just hung up the telephone receiver when the doorbell rang.

For a minute I did not recognize the man standing there on the porch. In the next minute I did recognize him. My heart stood stock still. He was Daniel Canneziano.

He pushed right past me, into the room, without waiting for an invitation. He always was a polished, perfumed little fellow, but that evening, what with his gray spots and a cane, he was right-down dandified.

If you love me as I love you, I guess you know that we are through.

GLYCERIN MIXTURE STOPS CONSTIPATION

The simple mixture of glycerin, buckthorn bark, saline, etc. (Adlerika) acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel and relieves constipation in TWO hours! Brings out old waste matter you never thought was in your system. Don't waste time with pills or remedies which clean only PART of the bowels, but let Adlerika give stomach and bowels a REAL cleaning and see how good you feel.—GIDLEY & MAC, Druggists. adv.

"Got a chap to drive me up from Rattall," he said.

"I left my trunk down there," he went on, taking off his light gray overcoat and brushing it, and folding it across his valise, "but he had set on a chair. 'The chap couldn't bring it. I thought you could send a truck down for it, tomorrow, Sam.'"

"Counting on paying us quite a visit, eh, 'Canneziano?' Sam found his voice at last. "Trunk and everything."

"As a matter of fact," Canneziano answered, sitting down and making himself comfortable on the small lav. enport, "all that mess you stirred up about me, on the night of the murder, makes traveling not altogether agreeable for the present. Yes, I think all things considered, that having me for a guest, after having set all the police in the country on my trail keeping me safely here, as it were, is about the least you can do. Isn't it?"

"I reckon I could do a little less in a pinch," Sam drawled. "But, all things considered as you say—though it might be you and I aren't considering the same things—I'm glad to see you here. Make yourself right at home, for you may be going to stay even longer than you planned."

"Right! However, if you have some neat little scheme of trying to pin the murder on me, I'd advise you to abandon it. If I hadn't had water right all this, all along, 'he line—"

"Keep your water-tight all this in a dry place till you need them," Sam advised. "Maybe you will need them. We've got a crime analyst, specialist in murder cases, coming up here Friday day. You can give your all this to him."

"That crime analyst sounds like Lynn MacDonald. That's what she calls herself."

"She?" Sam said.

"If you've got Lynn MacDonald, you've got a woman."

"H—!" Sam exploded.

"Just the same," Canneziano said, "she's the best die on the coast. Some say that she is the best in this country. If anybody can find out who killed Gaby, this MacDonald woman can."

"We don't want a woman. Better wire her not to come, dad," John urged.

This time it was Canneziano who looked quickly and sharply at John. "You're dead right you had," he said, "if you don't want the murderer discovered."

"Sam," Hubert Hand suggested, "you'd better wire and verify her references, anyway."

"There's generally more than one way to skin a cat," Sam said, "besides the way you are told to do it."

Leaving us to think that over, he went to the telephone and called the office of the Morning Record at Telko, and asked for Mr. Clarence Pette. Pette was a reporter on a San Francisco newspaper, who had been at the ranch at the time of the inquest on Gaby.

When Sam got him, he asked him whether he knew Lynn MacDonald. Evidently he said that he knew who she was, for Sam told him to take number Twenty-one at Telko, Friday afternoon, and to meet him here and he would pay him fifty dollars for his trouble.

I remembered my manners. "Mr. Canneziano," I said, "this is John Stanley, Sam's adopted son. He and Danny are engaged to be married. This other gentleman is Mr. Hubert Hand, and the lady is Mrs. Ricker."

Things felt real polite, for a minute, as they always do just after folks have been introduced.

"Bad times you have been having around here, lately," Canneziano said, pleasantly, as if he were talking about the weather.

Mrs. Ricker excused herself and went upstairs.

Sam spoke directly to Canneziano. "Did you ever know a man named Bauermont—Lewis Bauermont?"

"Strangler Bauermont? Very well indeed. Has he anything to do with it?"

"What's that you called him?" Sam asked, sharply.

"Strangler Bauermont, you mean?" I remembered that Danny had told me his nickname was "Mexico."

Sam said, "That's what I mean. How did he come by a name like that?"

"He is by way of being a wrestler. I believe, and won the name for some particularly clever hold that brought his man down every time. I have never gone in for that sort of thing—can't give you the scientific details. He was a ju-jitsu expert, also. Oh, no, no," as he noticed our quickening interests. "He is a continent and an ocean away, at present. Moreover, murder is quite outside his line—quite."

"You are sure he is in Europe, now?" Sam questioned.

"I had a letter from him, only a few days ago, written and sent from Deauville. A cable to Scotland Yard would locate him precisely for you. I have no doubt."

"That letter you had from him," Sam said. "I suppose you destroyed it?"

"I don't tie my letters into packets bound with blue ribbons."

"Was it written in code?"

"No. You see, the hotel where I was putting up just then, was, one might say, over regulated. Letters written in code were not favorably regarded there."

"Could you read a letter written in his code?"

"I fancy I could decipher it, with a bit of study."

"Do they speak Spanish in Mexico?" I questioned; and was rewarded by having all present look at me as if they thought that I had just developed a yearning for cultural, geographical knowledge.

"I am getting at something," I explained. "Was this Bauermont man ever in Mexico?"

"Unfriendly persons," Canneziano answered, "insinuate that Mexico is his native land."

"Did anyone ever call him 'Mexico'?"

"To his fury, yes. Is it relevant?" Sam asked, "Where were you, do you know, at the time of the Tono pah train robbery, three years ago?"

"I was in Denver, since you insist."

"This Strangler friend of yours told the girls that you and he robbed that train."

Canneziano's face went dark and ugly. "So the girls say, uh?"

"He told them that," John said. There was threat enough in his voice to make Canneziano come off his perch.

"Is that possible?" he questioned, but pleasantly enough. "I can't see his motive. If he had not included himself in his confession to the girls, I would think that he had some friendly reason for preferring me in captivity. No, I don't get it."

"We think he has denied it, since," Sam said. "We think that the code letter, which none of us can read, is his denial. No matter. Your story tots up straight enough with the one we have."

"Gratifying, I am sure. I wonder whether I might see this code letter? I am rather clever with the things."

I went upstairs to get it. I am not denying that it gave me the creeps to go into Gaby's room, alone at night when I opened the door, and saw that the light on the table was lit, and that someone was standing beside it, I all but jumped out of my shoes.

It was Mrs. Ricker. She turned to me, and apologized, quietly, for having startled me. "I was looking at these things," she went on. "They know. They were there. If only one of them could talk—"

I was so put out with her, for startling me, and for being in Gaby's room, anyway, poking around—though land knows she had a right to be there, and I might have done the same thing myself, with my lists of clues, and so on—that I just picked up the letter, at the same time looking over the other things on the table, to be sure nothing was missing.

"Perhaps," she said, "I should not have come in here? I suppose, when the detective comes, he—she would like to see the room as nearly as possible undisturbed. Do you think it would be a good plan to lock it, and to give the key to Sam, until she does come?"

She went around with me, while I locked the doors on the inside. We went into the hall through Danny's room. I locked that door after us. She told me goodnight and went to her own room. I went downstairs, and gave the key and the letter to Sam.

"Wise idea, Mary," he said, when I told him that I had locked the rooms. "I suppose Canneziano would tell you, though, that locked doors do not a prison make." He handed the letter to him.

"Looks rather confusing, doesn't it?" Canneziano said, when he had unfolded and straightened the pages. "What price deciphering it, Sam?"

"No price, to you," Sam answered. Canneziano returned the letter to its envelope and tossed it on the table. "Fair enough," he said. "My proposition, cards on the table, is this: If I beat Lynn MacDonald to it, discover the murderer before she does, will you pay me what you have agreed to pay her?"

"Canneziano," Sam said, "get this. Get it now. I'll pay you not one red cent for anything. Not one red cent."

"Fair enough," Canneziano repeated. "And my mistake. Undoubtedly, I should have worded it differently. For instance—What will you pay me not to discover the murder on the Desert Moon ranch?"

A week ago, Sam would have got up and kicked him out through the door for that question. This evening Sam sat still and looked him over, sort of sliding his eyes up and down over his smooth dapperness. Finally he drawled, "Go as far as you like, Canneziano. Only—you won't get anywhere you'd like to be, not on that line."

"Presently, perhaps," Canneziano answered. "No hurry."

"I'll be switched if Sam didn't sit there and murmur, mildly, 'Said the carpenter.'" to himself.

CHAPTER XII

Lynn MacDonald.

On Friday afternoon, late, I went with John and Sam down to Rattall to meet the train. Just before it stopped, with its usual roar of protest against Rattall, Clarence Pette swung off it.

"Miss MacDonald is on this train," he said to Sam and me. "Is there anything else I can do for you?"

"Not a thing, if you are positive that she is Miss MacDonald, except to take your fifty—here it is—and vamoose."

"I'm positive. Thanks. Here she comes now."

I looked up to see her coming. I could hardly believe my eyes. I don't know what I had expected; but I surely had not expected anything to get off that smoke-dirty train, in the middle of a Nevada desert, on a sweltering hot July evening, that looked as she did.

In the first place, in her pongee silk dress with coat to match, and perky little green hat, she looked as if she had been fresh picked, in the last nice California garden, and had been kept under glass, on ice ever since. She was tall; taller than most women, and with weight enough to look durable and useful, but not a mite fat. She had eyes that were as gray as pussywillows, and that did no monkey-tricks of changing to green or blue; she had wavy carrot-colored hair; that was so full of life it looked as if it were trying to break the bonds of its neat, boyish bob and go floating off, on its own, to make maybe a tiny sunset cloud. Her nose was small; her mouth was a mite too large, showing freely in a smile her teeth, little and polished white, like a puppy's.

Her voice was low and pleasant, but there was something brisk and crisp about it, and about all of her, that seemed to say plenty and plenty of time for everything, but not one precious minute to waste.

In the background, during this meeting, John and Danny had been hugging and kissing. At last, to my relief, they came over to join us; Danny, looking paler and more snuffed out than usual, by contrast, maybe, with Miss MacDonald; John beaming with triumph at having her home again.

"You girls get acquainted on the train?" Sam asked.

"We had breakfast together in the diner this morning," Miss MacDonald answered.

"Did you know who I was?" Danny questioned.

"It was my business to know that, wasn't it?" Miss MacDonald smiled.

We got into the sedan and were riding along the Victory highway just as I was thinking how much more wholesome everything felt, since I had shaken hands with Miss MacDonald, Danny, who was riding in the front seat beside John, spoiled it all by emitting a shriek; it was not a very loud one, but it was thick with horror and repulsion.

John explained, over his shoulder to us, that he had told her about "that man" being on the ranch.

"Uncle Sam," Danny pleaded, "do I have to see him?"

"Well, Danny," Sam apologized, "I'm right down sorry about it; but you see, he is staying on the place. We'll keep him out of your way as much as we can."

Danny put her head on John's shoulder and began to cry, weak, choking little sobs that hurt like having to watch a sick baby.

I leaned forward and tried to soothe her; told her that we would all do what we could to keep him away from her, and to make it easy for her.

"It can't be made easy," she answered. "You can't keep him away from me. I won't see him, I tell you. I've been so homesick—and now to come home to this. I can't see him. I won't."

Miss MacDonald, who the minute before, had seemed all pity for Danny, began, suddenly, to talk right through and over her sobs, to Sam; to talk in rather a loud voice about stock raising, paying no more attention to Danny's troubles than she paid to the humming of the motor.

I sat and sulked and nursed my disappointment. If I had been a man—which praise the Lord I am not—it would have been a case of love at first sight with me toward Lynn MacDonald. But now I told myself bitterly that I had been a fool to expect real womanly sympathy and kindness from a person in her profession. Ferreting out criminals would make anyone as hard as nails.

Not until Danny had quieted down, and had turned to us with stammered apologies and attempted explanations, did Miss MacDonald ask "Who is this man?"

"Dreadful as it must seem to you," Danny answered, "he is my father. But he has brought sorrow, and fear to me. I won't."

She went on with her questioning. We had finished breakfast at eight thirty o'clock. At eleven thirty, I felt that she knew everything that Sam and I knew about the case, and, probably, a deal more.

She had asked Sam to explain, in detail, why he had entirely discounted Chad's note of confession.

Sam said, "The body was cold and stiff when we found it. That is proof, isn't it, that she had been dead more than an hour?"

"If you are certain of that, it is positive proof that she had been dead much longer than one hour."

"I am certain. Well, until seven o'clock the boy had not been out of my sight for one minute, after Gaby walked through the room, alive, for us all to see her, at four o'clock."

Miss MacDonald went on with her questions. They brought us to Martha's death. She took what seemed like a long time asking us questions about Martha's health. Had she ever complained of dizziness? Shortness of breath? Indigestion? And all sorts of other seemingly unimportant things.

"Where," she finally asked, "was this sleeping medicine purchased?"

Sam told her in San Francisco, with a doctor's prescription.

"Have you still some of them left, in the original box?"

"A few, I think."

"Good. Will you get it for me, Mr. Stanley?"

"I'll get it," I said.

I had seen the powder box, left out of place on the table, the morning of the fifth of July, when I had gone into the hall bathroom. I had picked it up, out of habit, and replaced it in the medicine closet. I thought that I could put my hand right on it.

I could not. When I opened the mirror door, the box was not to be seen. I searched and searched. I might have spared myself the trouble. From that day to this, the box with the remaining powders in it has never been found.

"I was afraid of that," Miss MacDonald said, when I returned with my information, and nothing else, to the dining room. "Now then: Would it be possible for you to remember who last took one of these powders, and when with no ill effects?"

"Danny and Mary each took one the night of the fourth, when Martha died," Sam answered. "I've asked them about it, and both of them say that they did not feel queer at all, afterwards. They were both wide awake in the morning."

"My word!" said Miss MacDonald. "I think," I offered, "that something was all wrong with Martha's heart before she took the powder. She acted sleepy, stupid, all afternoon."

"Yes. Now then—" She was off again, leading us with her questions, through Mrs. Ricker's confession, and her suspicions of Martha.

"After Martha came into the house with the bracelet," she asked, "was she out of the room again within the hour; or even within the second hour, between five and six?"

"She was not out between four and five," I said. "We all stayed right in the room. It was too hot to move around. I know that Martha did not leave the room. She sat beside Chad on the piano bench, for a while. She sat on the arm of Sam's chair, watching the chess game—"

"Hold on," Sam interrupted. "I've got two things to tell you that you are overlooking, and I know that they are both mighty important."

"What are they?"

"The first one is this. Gaby had lived here close to two months. Martha had never harmed her. Does it stand to reason that, on the very day Gaby was afraid she was going to be killed, Martha would do it? There's too much coincidence in that, isn't there?"

"I think so. Though we can not ever discount coincidence. What appears to be coincidence usually proves not to be coincidence at all, in the end. But, Mr. Stanley, unless the other thing you have to tell me is a fact, and not an opinion, I am going to ask you not to tell it to me, at least not until later."

"It is straight fact,"

"very well, then?"

"Martha was always trying experiments with feeding her rabbits. I guess she thought that they might like grain. Maybe they do. I don't know. Anyway, she, or someone, had tugged a half sack of grain up there. A lot of it had spilled out under the berry bushes. It is all fresh sprouted, and growing fine. There wasn't a spot out there, except under those bushes, where Martha could have hidden the body. A body, even as small as Gaby's, would have smashed down and broken those fresh sprouts of grain."

and trouble to my mother, and to my sister, and to me, whenever he came near us. He is a wicked man."

But for all the fuss she made about it, I will say that Danny did very well when we all went into the house and she saw Canneziano, standing over by the east windows, smoking a cigarette.

"What-ho, Dan," he said, smiling his smooth, smirking smile at her. "You are looking seedy. Bad times around here, lately."

She didn't go near him. She edged closer to John; but she answered, looking at him straight and lifting her

GIRL, 8 YEARS OLD, IS MUSIC PRODIGY

English Maid Has Composition Published.

Bexhill-on-Sen, England.—Life is becoming just one child "phenom" after another. Novels, poems, long stories, short stories, biographies, fake biographies and what not from, or alleged from, the hands and heads of child "phenoms," ranging from four to sixteen years, are being published every few days.

The latest child "phenom" strikes a new note, or a whole cord of them.

Her name is Ruth Glips. She is eight years old, which is rather aged compared to most of the child prodigies who have broken into print, but she was making herself heard, literally and figuratively, when she was three years old and she demonstrated that she was a true child "phenom" when she submitted a story for publication at seven.

Having had her career as an author checked by a rejection slip, Ruth turned to music and is having a musical composition printed. It is a little piece in the thoroughly modern style called the Fairy Shoemaker, and she suggested the design for the cover.

Her publishers have a high opinion of the work which they accepted on its merit, and it was awarded second prize in the Brighton Music festival. All the other competitors were adults, and the judges were unaware that they were giving the prize to a child.

Ruth comes of a musical family. Her mother, who is Swiss by birth, and her mother's six brothers and sisters are all in the musical profession.

There is nothing of the "prodigy" about Ruth's temperament. When she was introduced to her publisher she was in a bathing costume, playing with a bucket and spade on the sands at Eastbourne.

Sword of Franklin Is Discovered in Paris

Paris.—The long-drawn-out polemics and discussions as to whether Benjamin Franklin ever wore a sword at the courts of France and England have been solved by the discovery of the weapon in the private collection of M. Honore Hequet d'Orval, a descendant of P. J. Cabanis.

It was presented to M. Cabanis by Franklin shortly after the conclusion of the treaty of peace by which Great Britain recognized the independence of the United States of America.

A unique feature of the sword is that it is not similar to those usually regarded as a "courier's sword," being of full military length with a triangular blade of the finest Sheffield mottoes and the elaborately chiseled hilt and guard—the gift of Louis XVI—it might have been the sword of an officer.

The blade bears the inscription: "Sword which was carried by Benjamin Franklin in the battles fought in America for the cause of Liberty. He gave it later to his friend, P. J. G. Cabanis."

The discovery is due to M. Giroude, curator of the museum established in the historic chateau of Blerancourt by the citizens of the new French republic, shortly after Franklin bade his final farewell to the soil of France.

Rust-Proof Steel Easy to Weld, Says Expert

Washington.—Rustproof steel is easily welded by the acetylene-oxygen process and is even more rustproof after welding than before, due to loss of carbon, silicon and manganese during melting. These findings by W. Hoffmann, German metallurgist, have just been announced by the national advisory committee for aeronautics here.

The physical characteristics of rust proof-steel welds are better than those of soft-steel welds, but the hardness of the metal due to welding must be removed by heat treatment.

The tract, purchased in the Ozarks, will have a large administration building, dining hall, dormitory, and several cabins erected on it. A large lake and swimming pool are also to be built.

ENGLISH

Members of the Fourth Year English class have been enjoying the play "Macbeth," Shakespeare. The past week has been spent in dramatizing the most romantic scenes from this play. Students who were suitable for the parts were chosen to act, such characters as Macbeth, Lady Macbeth, Banquo, Duncan and the witches being portrayed. One outstanding scene was the gathering of witches around the fire—the waste paper basket filled with crepe paper and containing an electric light bulb, being used. The room was darkened by drawing the curtains and turning out all lights excepting the one just mentioned. The dark, mysterious forms of witches, wrapped in blankets, certainly produced the phantom effect desired; especially when they screamed their horrible messages and foretellings.

CHORUS PARTY

The members of the Chorus Group had a party Friday night in the Auditorium. Miss Chandelers directed the High School Orchestra, and most everyone danced. Those who did not care to dance played games in Miss Crofoot's Home Economics Rooms.

A Clog dance was rendered by the Misses Martha Gay and Ruth Clark. They were dressed as negroes and certainly proved to be peppy little ones.

At 10:30 jello and several kinds of cake were served. This refreshed everyone so that they were able to dance for another hour. The attendance was very near 100%, and we all agree that Miss Chandelers certainly knows how to show a large group a good time.

ASSEMBLY

Armistice Day was paid due recognition by the East Jordan High School faculty and students. Everyone assembled in the auditorium and sang the National Anthem. Rev. Sidebotham gave a very interesting talk, appropriate for the occasion. Such songs as "Katy," "Over There," "A Long Long Trail," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and "Tipperary"—songs that were popular in War time, were sung.

HOME EC.

The Eighth grade girls are starting classes in Home Economics, under the instruction of Marie DeMaio.

The Tenth graders are making woolen dresses. (By the change in weather, we're beginning to think warm dresses will come in handy very soon.)

The Home Ec. Club met last Thursday after school. After a short program, they spent the remainder of the time making aprons for the sale to be held at Hite's Drug store, Nov. 23.

Bonkura Ends 10 Years of Stomach Miseries

Lansing World War Veteran Obtained Speedy Relief From This New Treatment.

MR. CLIFFORD C. CLARK

"Bonkura went right to the source of my trouble," said Mr. Clifford C. Clark, 1009 Euclid Place, Lansing, Mich., an employee of the City National Bank and a world war veteran. "Since the war, I suffered something awful with stomach trouble, gas, indigestion and constipation. Many times I could hardly walk and do my daily work, because of the terrible neuritis pains across my back and in my limbs. I was always tired and had no energy."

"The many medicines I took were worthless, some made me worse, but Bonkura was the surprise of my life. The first few doses cleansed my system completely and brought out all poisonous waste matter; which eliminated my stomach disorders, gas and indigestion. Immediately my terrible neuritis pains disappeared and I felt like a new man. I now enjoy my meals and do my work happily. Bonkura deserves all the credit. I will gladly tell anyone, that it has done more for me than was claimed for it."

DEBATE

Thursday, Nov. 14, the battle of words between Charlevoix and East Jordan is to take place. As before mentioned, the members of the East Jordan team are Frances Brown, Helen Severance and Carl Weaver. A bus will go to Charlevoix that night and every student may obtain a round trip ticket for the small sum of 25c. The debate begins at 8:00 central standard time. We hope that every student will give his strong support.

On the same date 260 high schools in every part of the State will meet in 130 debates in which 780 high school pupils will participate.

This debate followed by three others on Dec. 6, Jan. 10, and Jan. 24, will constitute the four debates of the Preliminary Series in which every high school must participate in order to qualify for the Elimination Series of Debates.

Every high school that qualifies for the Elimination Series of debates will be presented with the University of Michigan Wall Plaque Trophy, which is a mahogany shield eighteen inches high by fifteen inches wide, upon which is super-imposed a nine inch solid bronze medallion with embossed lettering.

Only 64 high schools can qualify for the Elimination Series which will culminate in the Thirtieth Annual State Championship Debate to be held at Ann Arbor in Hill Auditorium on Friday, April 25, 1930.

The two schools participating in this final debate will each receive a trophy cup presented by the University of Michigan Extension Division, and each of the six debaters will receive a gold watch as a testimonial of individual merit.

In the final State Championship Debate held in Hill Auditorium at Ann Arbor on the 26th day of April, Cheboygan High School won first honors and Grand Rapids South High School won second honors. The audience assembled for this final debate numbered 4,000 people, which is the largest audience that has ever attended a debate in this State.

AG. CLUB

Last Wednesday the Mancelona Agriculture Club visited our local Ag. Club.

The meeting was called to order by President Kenny which was followed by a short talk by Mr. Eggert and also one by the Mancelona teacher. We were also very fortunate to have Mr. Mellencamp with us who in turn gave us a splendid speech and left with us some very good suggestions pertaining to agriculture and club work.

The recreation for the evening was an indoor baseball game which lasted until the fourth inning but was finally ended when something along the refreshment line was suggested. We all enjoyed a good lunch, after which the meeting was adjourned. We are hoping that the Mancelona Club will visit us again in the near future.

Three members of the Ag. Club will leave Friday morning for East Lansing, where they will compete in the State High School apple judging contest. The three boys are Howard Darbee, Harold Lee and Eugene Umlor. They will be accompanied by Mr. Eggert. While there the team expects to visit Olds Motor Works, Sugar Beet Factory, 1200 acre college farm, and other places of interest.

JUNIOR HIGH

The Seventh grade girls are having a tournament of side-kick. The 7th and 8th grade boys had a good peppy football game as one can easily tell by the score which was even, 6-6. For the first time the 7th and 8th graders are members of Chorus. Two or three of them have proved themselves to be splendid songsters, and one or two of them have solos in the Xmas Cantata.

WEST SIDE

The pupils of the West Side school have been busy chasing paper cats and goblins home and persuading turkeys and pumpkins to spend this month on their blackboards.

FOOTBALL

For the first time since East Jordan has had athletic relations with Frankfort in Football, East Jordan was defeated, but it was a defeat that was not hard to take. Frankfort has an all-veteran team and was expected to win easily, in fact, some of the townspeople wagered they would win by a 40-0 score, but our team showed that they could play real Football, and if they had played all season like they played at Frankfort it would have been a different story. The game opened with a surprise in store for Frankfort, for after an exchange of punts, Quinn took the ball around right end for the first touchdown of the game. The extra point failed, as a smash through the line, but the team lined up for the second kick with confidence and determination to make their last game a real battle.

Frankfort however amid the cheers of the Frankfort crowd, with Fredrickson doing most of the ball toting, soon afterward put over a touchdown. They completed the extra point by a "bullet Pass". This made the score 7-6 in favor of Frankfort.

The second quarter also was fatal for East Jordan for by some excellent trick plays, Frankfort put over another touchdown. Fredrickson went over for the touchdown. By a line smash they gained the extra point.

East Jordan's touchdown came in the first part of the fourth quarter, after some beautiful line smashes by LaLonde, and Quinn carried the ball over for a touchdown. A pass by Quinn to LaLonde was successful, making the score 14-13 in favor of Frankfort. The remainder of the game was a desperate struggle between the teams to score but they both lacked the final punch to put the ball over. Frankfort worked the ball down to the Jordan 15-yard line in the last few minutes of play but lost the ball on downs. East Jordan's only chance to score, and thus win the game came when Lee, threw a beautiful pass to Quinn for down the field in an open spot, but Quinn missed the catch. The game ended on the next play.

For East Jordan, Quinn was outstanding on offense and defense, making both touchdowns. The whole line played well, being out-weighted 15 pounds to the man. LaLonde in the backfield also showed up well.

For Frankfort, Fredrickson, was the star player doing almost all the ball-toting and being strong on defense. Frankfort's right guard also was a strong man on the line.

The following are the players that will not be back next year: Quinn, fullback; Capt. Hipp, Center; Kitsman, Quarterback; Kling, halfback; Lee, End.

Freshmen Defeat Junior High
In a very hard fought game last Tuesday the Freshmen defeated the Junior High. The first half ended 0-0. But in the second half James Addis intercepted a Junior High pass and ran for a touchdown. Claude Lorraine received pass for extra point.

The game showed that we have some real football players for our future teams.

It's just too bad if any smoker because of misinformation denies himself or herself the pleasure of CAMELS.

New smokers are not always in a position to have a real preference in cigarettes. But when they acquaint themselves with Camels they develop that sense of discrimination that leads to real smoking pleasure. Camels are made so carefully and of so good a blend of choicest cigarette tobaccos that even those with inexperienced smoking taste quickly recognize their superiority. They are for those who appreciate the taste of choice tobaccos, the fragrance of a perfect blend and the soothing mellowness of a really satisfying cigarette.
