Boyne City Falls To Locals

LOCAL FOOTBALL TEAM CLOSES SEASON AT BOYNE CITY, WINNING 9-0.

The traditions between Boyne City and East Jordan High School Football teams has been that the former usually wins. But as a number of old sayings are called to mind, "The worm sometimes turns," "It's a long road without a turn," and "He who laughs last laughs best," etc would apply possibly in this case.

We understand that our good sportsmen and friends at Boyne had quite a celebration previous to the all important game—which is entirely fitting and proper, but made it all the sweeter for the locals to take them into camp Saturday.

East Jordan always admires good hard, clean fighters and sportsmen, we can say this for our friends of Boyne. We appreciate statements from the school authorities and others after the game. "Without question the game gives East Jordan the championship of the Tip of Michigan Conference." However, this is a matter for the representatives of the different schools to decide, and East Jordan awaits their decision.

Although Coach Cohen's boys won 9-0, it was a real football game. There isn't any question in the minds of Boyne City people that East Jordan was the stronger team, but we would have no one think that Boyne was "easy picking." For they were not. Without question both teams played the best game they have played this year. We mean by that—there wasn't a real bone-head made. Every play was fought with abandon.

Boyne City was on the average, heavier than East Jordan, especially behind the line. But East Jordan's line completely out-played the Boyne line and Sandel, White and others could hardly get started. A good share of the time Boyne had second or third down and 15 yards to go. On the other hand Boyne City's kicking was the finest seen in northern Michigan this year. Without question Ham White is the best punter in northern Michigan, absolutely barring no one. One of his punts carrying 70 yards down the field to put East Jordan on the defense two or three times. In fact his kicking was one of the features of the game.

As already stated, the East Jordan line seemed to be the deciding factor. With the line opening good holes and charging hard on every play, Somerville, Heinzelman and Hignite tore through Boyne City for long gains. Hignite broke through once between guard and tackle for 44 yards. Followed almost immediately by Howard Somerville for 15, then Bob Somerville grabbed a pass for 7 yards. Hignite again went through for 15 yards and East Jordan was dangerously near Boyne's goal when one of the many 15 yard penalties was attached to the East Jordan team.

To open the game Boyne City received. East Jordan kicked to the 20 yard line. Boyne returning to the 30. Boyne was held almost immediately. White punted to East Jordan's 35 yard line. East Jordan started a march towards the Boyne goal after about six minutes of play. Howard Somerville seeing the going tough, on the Boyne 20 yard line, nonchalantly dropped back and dropped kick a beautiful goal straight between the bars. Somerville looked more like a college star than the average High School boy.

The ball came out to 20 yard line and Boyne advanced about 25 yards, making two first downs on some good line plunging, getting the ball up to the middle of the field where East Jordan held. Boyne punted the ball to the Jordan 20 yard line. Having trouble getting off one or two of their punts—this one in particular. Heinzelman made 5 yards. On a bad pass East Jordan lost 8 yards then Hignite broke through the Boyne line and into the clear and almost got away making 44 yards on the run. A 15 yard penalty checked East Jordan's advance. Bob Somerville grabbed a 7 or 8 yard pass. Hignite made 15 yards deep in Boyne territory when East Jordan received another 15 yard penalty. East Jordan being forced to kick. Boyne again tried the Jordan line without any success. They punted and East Jordan carried the ball a short distance when another 15 yard penalty was inflicted. Somerville made 7 yards. East Jordan was off side and was again penalized and on a bad pass from center the locals lost about 25 yards, giving the ball to Boyne on East Jordan's 23 yard line just before the end of the half. Boyne made one play to the 20 yard line when the half ended.

To open the second half East Jordan received and led by Howard Somerville, the team started for the Boyne goal. This time not to be denied. They went over 70 yards down the field on as pretty a piece of football as you will see anywhere. Howard Somerville tossed a pass to Lorraine for 20 yards. After one or two plays Somerville tossed another pass to Heinzelman for 25 yards. Hignite made 4 putting the ball down on the Boyne 7 yard line where on two or three off tackle smashes by Somerville and Heinzelman they had four and two to go. Somerville faked a kick, grabbed the ball and plunged more than two yards on his head and shoulders over the Boyne goal line for a touchdown. His try for the extra point missed the bars.

Boyne received and the same old story: Sandel and White were dropped almost in their tracks most of the time, very seldom making more than 2 or 3 yards. Both sides featured some savage tackling. Lorraine in particular did stellar work on tackling as well as real playing at end. Continually forcing the ball carrier to the side line, which shows real end playing. In fact both of East Jordan's ends played by far the finest games they have played this year. Boyne City soon punted to East Jordan and on the second play Heinzelman almost in the same spot that Hignite made his 44 yards, broke through the entire Boyne team into the open eliminating the one stumbling step, there isn't any question but what he would have run 70 yards for a touchdown, but just stumbled enough so that a Boyne man grabbed him after making 35 yards. It was a nice run. Howard Somerville made 4, followed with a 10-yard gain. Where with another 15 yard penalty, East Jordan was held for downs. Boyne City taking the ball and on the second play was tackled behind the line for a 20 yard loss. Boyne was forced to kick again. Somerville again went 10 yards and again followed immediately with another 10 yard gain. Apparently going thru the Boyne City team without much difficulty. Here the game ended and a number of people well versed in football said that both teams were to be congratulated very highly on the magnificent football played. Boyne and East Jordan are traditional rivals and usually put up a real scrap. This was no exception and East Jordan feels they won from a good hard playing, scrappy team and we have every respect for Coach Brotherston and his boys.

Boyne City team all played a good game. As already mentioned, Ham White featured with some beautiful kicking. He and his brother Bill and Sandel did some very good defensive work. As one or two Boyne men themselves said, East Jordan was just a little too good.

The locals outclassed Boyne in line charging, better ball carriers, and as usual, featured by savage tackling, as well as good teamwork. East Jordan has a man in Howard Somerville that looks just about the class of the North as far as half backs go. He can do anything in a football game. Punt, pass, drop kick, hit the line, as well as open field kick and a real defensive back as well as being the one drop kicker we have seen in High School circles in this section. In the last three games he has dropped kicked four goals from the field. In Hignite they have the best returner of punts in the North as well as a fine open field runner. Heinzelman gets credit for being one of the best blockers seen in High School fields hereabouts. Bob Somerville is fast developing into a strong running back and should be heard from another year. The East Jordan line played a magnificent game from end to end. Roy Bussler, Frank Sweet, Martin Somerville in center of the line practically stopped every play attempted thru the middle of the line. Brooks and Joynat at tackles played stellar games. They are both real tackles. William LaLonde and Gordon Prause were the only two East Jordan substitutes. Gordon substituted for Martin Somerville and played a stellar game at guard. He will be a real lineman another year. Bill LaLonde, East Jordan's star half back in the first two-thirds of the season went in the game in spite of a badly wrenched knee and played an excellent brand of football under a severe handicap. This is Bill's last game, as well as Howard Somerville's and Roy Bussler's. They will be a loss to the team, and a severe blow.

Cohen and the boys are to be congratulated on the very fine finish to one of the most successful seasons East Jordan has had in quite a few years. It is true that East Jordan hasn't beaten Boyne for 10 years, out four or five years when East Jordan had championship teams they won from teams that had beaten Boyne. This was during a period of four or five years, which for some unknown reason to any one locally Boyne and East Jordan did not play.

Score by quarters:

LOANING OF HUNTING LICENSES IS NOT LAWFUL

Lansing, Nov. 14.—Reports received from various sources about the State of wholesale borrowing of hunting licenses has caused Howard R. Sayre, chief of the Division of Field Administration of the Department of Conservation, to order all conservation officers to carefully scrutinize the licenses of all hunters they meet.

Conservation officers will compare the license descriptions with the persons carrying the licenses and when there is doubt as to the legal ownership of the licenses, to check actual identification.

While a few cases of "borrowed licenses" have been reported in the past few years, it is claimed that large numbers of men are now borrowing licenses from friends and relatives.

It is unlawful not only to borrow a license but to loan one and the penalty is as severe for loaning a license as it is for using a borrowed one.

Act No. 825 of the Public Acts of 1931 says that "any person who shall use or attempt to use the license of another or any person who shall loan or permit any person to use his license—shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on convictions shall be punished by a fine of not exceeding one hundred dollars and costs of prosecution, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding ninety days or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court."

Sportsmanship Or Victory?

THE OTHER SIDE TO THE HARBOR SPRINGS-EAST JORDAN CONTROVERSY.

(From Emmet County Graphic of Harbor Springs, Thursday, Oct. 29.)

We are presenting here Mr. Duncanson's reply to our editorial of last week relative to the Harbor Springs-East Jordan Football game. Based on information which we had, Mr. Duncanson had been advised before the game that Bradley was eligible as far as the State was concerned. Mr. Duncanson in his reply disputes this fact, and justifies his action on that basis.

In order to be fair to him we offered our columns for his reply and it is given here in full.

By A. J. DUNCANSON
The East Jordan Athletic Association and I refuse to accept any part of the blame for James Bradley not playing in the football game against East Jordan, Saturday, October 10 for the following reasons:

In the first place three other towns besides East Jordan were interested in the above case. The Coaches and Athletic officials had discussed the matter for some time when they came to me about it. The questions in the mind of rival school athletic associations is the fact that the Harbor Springs school authorities signed the regular eligibility list the past number of years and the one for 1930-1931 stated that last year was Bradley's fourth year in athletic competition. No one thought anything of it. This fall the Harbor Springs eligibility list appeared with the name of James Bradley on it, contrary to all expectations and indicated that the year 1931-32 was his fourth season in competition. One or the other of the lists must be wrong.

When Coach Cohen and others called my attention to the matter, I phoned A. W. Thompson. He said that he was checking upon the matter and would let us know later. I asked Mr. Thompson what we could do by if we did not use the eligibility lists. He said, "Nothing."

In the meantime Harbor Springs school authorities received a day letter asking them to have James Bradley withdrawn from competition until final disposition of the case. A copy of which was sent to me and at the bottom stated that East Jordan and I would be informed of the final disposition of the case. This letter was signed by C. E. Forsythe.

The next day Coach Cohen received the current eligibility list from Harbor Springs and Bradley's name did not appear on the list. To be absolutely sure that East Jordan was correct, I phoned Mr. Forsythe the second time. One of the first statements Mr. Forsythe made was, "Well Duncanson, what have you got to worry about, he can't play in your game." Three witnesses to my second question and the reaction from the other answer can be verified. I said, "Well am I correct in assuming that Bradley can not return to the game until the case is settled." "That is correct," is his statement.

Then Harbor Springs received a telegram from C. E. Forsythe. As I recall their statement, the telegram (Continued on Last Page)

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO OWNERS OF CHRISTMAS TREES

Word has been received by County Agricultural Agent, B. C. Mellenkamp to the effect that County Agents cannot inspect Christmas trees. This has been the practice in the past, but E. C. Mandenberg, Orchard and Nursery Inspector Department of Agriculture, Lansing, Michigan, has made a ruling that hereafter all inspections must be made by a representative of his department.

More important yet is the announcement that applications for inspection must be sent in immediately, as no inspections will be made after the 1st of December. In the past, many Charlevoix County farmers have waited until they have a buyer and then desire to have an inspector at once. Obviously, it would take hundreds of inspectors to take care of these short-notice applications which is out of the question with reduced budgets.

If you desire to sell trees, get in touch with your county agent immediately as he has all the necessary blanks, and other material that you will need when you send in your application for inspection. This notice is merely to state the reasons why your county agent will not be in a position to perform this service for you as has been the case in the past. Get your application in at once.

THIRD LESSON IN HOUSE FURNISHING AT BOYNE CITY

The third lesson in the House Furnishing Project given by Miss Gertrude Reis, Specialist from Michigan State College, was decidedly the most interesting to the Leaders of any thus far conducted. Every group was represented by two leaders, and the information up to date indicates that over two hundred ladies have already enrolled in this splendid project.

The subject matter discussed by Miss Reis was that of rug making, and to say that the ladies were interested in it would be putting it mildly. Even the janitor can attest to the fact that large quantities of burlap and overalls and other discarded clothing materials were in great evidence. It seems rather strange that beautiful rugs can be made with this type of discarded materials, but several rugs were displayed by Miss Reis which eliminated any thoughts along this line.

This will be the last lesson to be given this year, so no doubt during the long winter-months many of the ladies will be actively engaged in rug making. The next lesson will be given sometime in April and the County Achievement Day will be held sometime in May to avoid bad road conditions, thus enabling everyone to come for this very pleasant occasion.

PROGRESSIVE DINNER WAS A SUCCESS

An elaborate progressive dinner was given Tuesday evening, Nov. 10 by the hostesses, Mrs. Clarence Healey, Mrs. Charles Malpass and Mrs. Walter Davis, honoring the birthdays of Misses Eloise Davis and Gwendolyn Malpass.

The guests assembled at the home of Miss Gwendolyn Malpass where the former's mother informed them that they would have to hunt for their dinner out-of-doors.

Miss Malpass assumed the responsibility of directing the guests to the home of Miss Rea Healey which was a surprise to Miss Healey as well as to the guests. The first course, a cocktail, was served there. The table was graced with exquisite decorations.

The next course, a delicious chicken dinner was served at the home of Miss Malpass. The table was beautifully appointed with bowls holding flowers. The place cards marked the poetic ability of the guests for on each card a poem consisted of descriptions of each guest and these were used for the purpose of each person finding his or her own place by their descriptions.

The last course was served at the home of Miss Eloise Davis. The table was beautifully decorated with birthday cakes, honoring the guests of honor for whom the reception was given.

Following the last course, an entertainment was sponsored by Mrs. Malpass and Mrs. Davis. Games were played for which the winners were given prizes. Latter part of the social hour was spent in numerous musical amusements.

Everything seemed to have moved in a splendid manner and it is assured that it was a huge social success.

"Bob" Darbee Appointed Cadet Colonel

AND REGIMENTAL COMMANDER. DISTINCT HONOR TO HIMSELF AND LOCAL SCHOOL.

Robert Darbee, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Darbee of East Jordan, was appointed head of some fifteen hundred men in the military unit of Michigan State College, a distinct and unique honor. From indirect reports from students at Michigan State College it was won because of Robert's all around ability, pose, and school attitude. Only a man who qualifies most highly in the eyes of the faculty could be considered for such an honor. It is more Robert's steady, hard plodding and ability that won him such a high honor. His family, himself and the school is to be congratulated on the above honor.

It means that Robert is in charge of some fifteen hundred men assisted by Lieutenant Colonel Snover H. Sargeant of Grand Rapids and under them, three Majors, eighteen Captains, 29 First Lieutenants, 35 Second Lieutenants, etc. In fact Robert is the "big gun" at Michigan State College this year and East Jordan should be proud of such a record. His official title is Cadet Colonel and Regimental Commander of the Michigan State College Unit.

Robert is a member of two of the honorary fraternities—Theta Kappa Nu and Phi Lambda Tau, Engineering fraternity and any one who makes the above engineering fraternity must be a "crackerjack" in mathematics. Robert's appointment comes in the face of the fact that he was not a member of any military fraternity. This is one of the most surprising facts of the appointment. The above appointment carries other very distinct honors and is received as a real pleasure to all the students attending Michigan State College and apparently making good along with Robert.

However, Robert's record at Michigan State isn't a case of sudden prominence or success for Robert Darbee was one of the finest all round students that East Jordan has graduated in many years. You could depend on him any place you put him. One of the best science and history men that has graduated from the local schools. Knowing about his reliable habits and abundance of industry in High School we naturally would expect a record at College. Robert should be an inspiration to every East Jordan High School student. As the writer has often remarked: "Be REAL GOOD at something."

Another East Jordan boy receiving rather distinct recognition in being appointed one of the First Lieutenants is Edward Carr, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Carr. The honors given by Michigan State College is entirely out of proportion to East Jordan's size of school and town.

The photograph shows some of the workmen putting the finishing touches on the roof.

U. S. GOLD SUPPLY CLOSELY GUARDED

Treasure Caves 80 Feet Below Street Level.

New York.—The steady flow of gold into the United States continues, adding more millions to the more than $5,000,000,000 in hard metal which the vaults of the country already hold.

Recently the United States held $5,015,000,000 in gold, 42 per cent of the supply of the world. With a similar movement going to France, the two countries hold 65 per cent of the world's supply.

This vast supply of the yellow metal is stacked in vaults in various parts of the country, but chiefly in New York and Washington. About half the supply is in New York. The remainder is distributed in federal reserve vaults and such places as the Denver mint.

This gold is guarded in the storehouses of the nation.

Eighty Feet Below Surface.

Eighty feet below the sidewalks, in the massive steel and concrete vaults of the New York Federal Reserve bank, about half billion dollars in bars, ingots, and coin is stacked in great piles, awaiting the time when it may be called on as a part of the nation's reserve.

The gold presents a fascinating sight, stacked in symmetrical piles on steel shelves. To steal it would be impossible. The safeguards comprise steel and concrete walls eight feet thick, massive doors, complicated locks and electrical devices, the secret of opening which is possessed by no one man, but several. They are devised so that in event of an uprising or a revolution, they could not be rushed.

The treasure is in the bottom vaults on the deep foundations of the building. No staircases lead to them. The only ingress is by elevator and the elevators are not controlled by the operator, but from a central control room which lets the elevator down or up only on official command. The controls could be put out of commission and there would be no entering or leaving.

Marksmen Stand Ready.

At the top is a steel fortress surrounding the entrance, with holes for shooting, behind which expert marksmen stand. At the bottom various locked doors lead along the corridors to the ponderous steel vault door, weighing many tons, which is operated by time locks and machinery. Behind that are iron gates with three locks, requiring three men to open them.

Then the gold store is reached.

Steel Cells, Partitioned Off by Steel Mesh, Contain Shelves on Which the Bars of Gold are Stacked in Ordered and Numbered Piles, as Much as $100,000 Worth of Gold in Each Bar.

Some are in bricks, and some in the conventional metal pigs and ingots, like so much iron. But the bars are smooth and deeply yellow.

In other corridors, American gold coins and English sovereigns, worth millions on millions, are stacked on similar shelves in canvas sacks, not waiting so much to be put into circulation as to remain there, like the bar gold, as guarantee for the American paper bills that are issued against them.

Corporations Turning to Air Transportation

Chicago.—Need for air travel by executives and business men is increasing. Sixty per cent of 784 corporations capitalized at $100,000 or more have executives and representatives using airplanes regularly, shows a compilation of United Air Lines.

Executives of 784 corporations in cities on its transcontinental, Middle West, Intermountain and Pacific coast routes reported:

Four hundred and seventy-seven now have executives and representatives traveling by air and 301 have not and an average of four men in each firm use planes on company business.

Of 784 reporting firms, 378 reported need for air travel is increasing.

Washington Farmers Report Monstrosities

South Bend, Wash.—Potatoes that grow up on vines like tomatoes, and five-in-one ears of corn were this section's contribution to 1931 agricultural monstrosities. The "aerial potatoes" appeared in the garden of R. L. Robertson. Four vines in his patch developed fully formed potatoes—more than a foot up the vines. The five sectioned ear of corn was grown by C. W. Van Tuyl. It had the shape of a pyramid, with four small ears growing symmetrically about the main ear.

Police Find Litter of Kittens in Mail Box

Indianapolis.—Discord issuing from a mail box puzzled Motor Patrolmen Cooney and Welsh. "Maybe it's an infernal machine," said Cooney. "Or a ghost," offered Welsh. They summoned a mail man to open the box. Inside was a litter of kittens. "That cat was smart. She wanted her kittens to travel," said Cooney. "Yes," said Welsh. "And she licked them but she forgot the stamps."

MAIL ORDER QUACK IS STILL BUSY

Post Office Department Reports Fakers Busy.

Washington.—The elixir of life, the chemist's secret potion, the magic ring and the miracle-working necklace still are popular with the American people. During the last few months the Post Office department, after investigating advertisements, has put the vendors of many of these wonder-workers out of business, so far as using the mails is concerned, by issuing fraud orders. But the mail order doctor, boundless in his claims, is still functioning, the department believes.

The usual procedure is for a post-office inspector to answer an advertisement, giving the symptoms of some chronic or incurable disease, or some disease that never existed. When the remedy is received it is submitted to the proper government laboratory for analysis and tests.

Then comes the fraud order. But the business goes on in other channels and its profits are evidenced by large sums spent in advertising.

The inspectors find most of the claims ridiculous. A southern "professor" was selling two ordinary pieces of zinc which he said had electrical

Nebraska Man Makes Claim to First Plane

Havelock, Neb.—Thirty-four years ago, G. A. Hughes drew the plans for a flying machine. In 1902 he completed a model plane and sent it into the sky.

Hughes challenges any airplane manufacturer today to show any item of major consequence that has been developed in airplane construction which does not hinge on some of his plans.

In bolstering his claim that he was the original inventor of a plane to navigate the air, Hughes points out that he built 62 model planes. Finances handicapped him, he says, from carrying his project through.

He applied for a patent of his queer-looking machine—a boxlike contraption with a wing spread of 9 feet—in 1899, several years before men actually flew. Hughes demonstrated his plane at a fair in Wray, Colo., in 1899. His model flew successfully.

Returns After 32 Years; Drops Dead at His Home

Berlin.—Konrad Link, fifty-five, recently returned to his home, the village of Oberhillsheim, after an absence of more than thirty-two years, only to drop dead before he could say one word of explanation to his only surviving relative, his sister.

Maria Link, who had heard a faint noise at her window the night before, thought it to be the wind and went back to sleep.

The following morning she found a dead man lying below the window. She recognized in the man her own brother, who had vanished thirty-two years ago.

It is stated that the brother, sick and starved, died of heart failure caused by emotional strain. He took with him the secret of his whereabouts during his long absence.

U. S. Jewelry Bill Half Billion in '29

New York.—The United States spent $536,940,551 for jewelry in 1929, or $4.37 per capita, according to the official figures of the bureau of census.

New York leads in per capita sales with $9.00, Washington next with $9.58, and California third with $6.38.

There are 20,095 jewelry stores in the country, of which 2,650 are in New York, while Pennsylvania has 1,755 stores and California 1,408.

Air View of "the West Point of the Air"

Known as "the West Point of the Air," the new Randolph field, 16 miles northeast of San Antonio, stretches like a model city before the camera eye in this aerial photograph. The "field" will include 500 buildings surrounded by flying fields for the use of the 500 planes and 3,500 pupils and instructors who can be accommodated.

They Brought Their Home With Them

Old Man Depression has no terrors for these resourceful brothers, Clement and Maurice March, who are students at the University of Idaho. When they returned to school this fall, they brought with them their own living quarters, a real house, which they have christened the "Depression Special." The home boasts two bunks, a bookcase, tables and chairs and a stove. The brothers received permission from university authorities to park their house on campus grounds when they arrived with it on a truck.

WHITE HOUSE AIDE

Lieut. Com. Gale Aylett Poindexter received orders from the Navy department for additional duty as aide at the White House. He has been attached to the office of naval communications. The son of the former senator from Washington, Miles Poindexter, he was appointed to the Naval academy in 1913 and saw service in the World war.

Capt. Frank M. Hawks

Training Our "War Eagles"

FRANK M. HAWKS

By GEORGE BECK

THE young man with a strong urge to become an aviator and who has the time to learn the science of flying in a thorough manner, can do no better than to apply to Uncle Sam who operates the finest aviation schools in the country.

At fifteen army fields throughout the United States, Uncle Sam has enrolled at present over 5,000 reserve fliers whose training expenses far exceed, per man, the cost in any other branch of service. For the privileges extended the reserve flier, the value of the training he gets, the good times he has, all that Uncle Sam requires in return is an intelligent, industrious young man between the ages of twenty and twenty-seven who has had at least two year's college education and who has the makings of a flier in him.

In an exclusive interview the writer had for this article with Captain Frank M. Hawks, just returned from a spectacular tour of Europe in his speedy Lockheed-Vega, the Texaco 13, Hawks declared there was an urgent need for more and better trained pilots in this country.

The finer designing of planes, he said, and the necessary continued study of aeronautical science generally, particularly with respect to training of airmen, holds the future of aviation in this country.

Hawks firmly believes in the coming of high-speed planes for commercial use, for passenger transportation over the airways. In speed, he says, is the future of flying. In fact he believes in it for all future transportation, land, water and air.

"The day is coming," he said, "when we shall ride in planes that travel 200 miles an hour, trains that move at 100 m. p. h. and we will drive our automobiles over express highways at 60 and 70 miles an hour. Does that sound impossible? Then excuse it as the idle dream of a speed demon who likes to sit back in an easy chair and visualize through the smoke rings of his cigar, new speed pictures of tomorrow."

The glider, Captain Hawks recommends as one of the best means of training for the brotherhood of aeroplans pilots.

"Primarily," says Captain Hawks, "the glider has sound fundamental values. Unquestionably, it offers a very safe and inexpensive means to student aviators for instruction. The novice in flying gets a keener technique and a better knowledge of aerodynamics. In the first few tender hours of flying he can learn a great deal more with a glider than with a power-driven plane. He is not depending upon the motor but is learning currents of air, the action of the controls; he is depending more upon real flying as it is taught to us than by sheer horsepower. Every landing that he makes is a forced landing because he has no motor, so his judgment in approaching fields, and landing on marks is keener.

"The novice receives the thrill of his life on his first glider flight, though its duration may be only half a minute; he gains a decided feeling of power later when aloft for fifteen minutes, alone. I have observed many skeptics make their first glider flight and have seen them change in a snap of the fingers from doubting Thomases to boosters. I have seen many contemporaries who thought they had enjoyed all the thrills and sport of aviation through power-driven airplanes turn to gliders like children to a new toy. There's just as much skill required and just as much thrill and fun enjoyed in gliding as in speeding through the air at double express train paces."

The object of the flight of the Texaco Eaglet, in which Captain Hawks was towed from San Diego to New York last year by J. D. ("Duke") Jernigan, Jr., who flew the Waco Texaco 7, was to stimulate interest in gliding, which in brief, is a cheap and safe stepping stone to powered machines, provided, of course, that proper instruction is first given the student. Obviously, no student will move immediately from completion of a course in gliding to flying a ship such as the Hawks speed plane with its engine of more than 400 horsepower and a demonstrated speed of 270 miles an hour.

But here again, Captain Hawks has ideas: If a "kicker" motor of two cylinders is developed to drive gliders efficiently and safely, a new intermediate and valuable step in aviation will have been accomplished. Says Hawks further: "I have made a few observations which have convinced me that the so-called primary glider with its skeleton fuselage, inefficient wings and controls, has no place in the picture of American gliding activities. I would rather see young men start their glider work with the secondary or utility type of glider.

"I am opposed to the automatic launching device which spring tension snaps the glider into the air with such violence that it is not only unnatural but extremely dangerous to even an experienced pilot. I believe that gliders and soarers must be taken seriously by either those experienced in flying or by students. It is a real art, not as simple to accomplish as it seems, and cannot be taken lightly. Gliding, in my opinion, is safe if properly supervised and instruction is thorough.

Aerial Acrobatics

Talking It Over after the Flight

If gliders remain only gliders they will still impart the fundamentals of flying, and from them the student may step to a fledgling airplane and meet the "horses" that drive it. Here again, progress is obviously gradual, but sure. Out of such a mill it is easy to visualize the emergence of a new crop of aviators who might well provide considerable slipstream to veteran fliers of today.

At Mitchell field, Long Island, one of the army flying fields where reserve training is carried on there are planes reserved every week-end throughout the year for the use of reserve corps officers. This is the case at nearly all the army flying fields. It is the privilege of the officer and at the same time an Air Reserve corps requirement to fly an army plane a certain number of hours every month.

Once a year the reserve corp officers train for two week periods at the army fields throughout the country. At New York the observation squadrons composed of officers of the Second corps area camp at the Long Island field during the summer. At fields in the south and southwest reserve corps training is carried on throughout the year.

Lectures by regular army aviation officials cover such subjects as radio communication and equipment, navigation, cross country flying and aerial photography. Then with parachutes strapped to their backs, a strict army regulation, the fliers put these lecture subjects to actual practice in the air in addition to formation and observation flying.

There are two primary aviation schools in Texas and California and one advanced school at Kelly field, San Antonio, Texas. The graduate of the reserve school goes in the regular army for two years as a commissioned officer and licensed pilot.

Out of some several thousand applicants to the army flying schools every year, a few hundred are enrolled for the primary training. Less than half of these succeed in obtaining their diploma, commission and license as a reserve army flyer. This past June 98 cadets received their "wings" at Kelly field and were assigned to army fields throughout the country. A few days before 245 applicants were selected to begin training.

Courses in both the primary and advanced schools give the cadet 225 hours in the air with the necessary auxiliary studies in meteorology, airplane-engines, navigation, radio, aerial gunnery and other academic and field subjects for military pilots.

Besides strict physical examinations to determine whether or not the cadet is going to make a flier, he is put through tests which are described as psychological by the instructors. He needs, they maintain, a re-education to give him "air confidence" and "air sense."

One of the cadet's first experiences which is almost as frightening as his first solo flight, is a tryout in an "orientator," a mechanical device which whirls and revolves him through every revolution and movement a plane will make in the air.

It resembles the cockpit of a plane and in that the cadet sits. The mechanism is dual-controlled, that is, the cadet operates controls similar to those of an airplane and the instructor sitting outside of the device operates a control which puts the cockpit through its motions. The instructor, who gets a certain enjoyment out of the business, no doubt, tries to upset the equilibrium of the cadet while the cadet tries to maintain it.

Soon after he enrolls the cadet starts actual dual flying. After a few days of infantry drill and other ordinary military duties to put in the mind of the cadet that he is one of Uncle Sam's soldiers, within the first week he finds himself with his instructor ready for his initial flight. The cadet is getting his first lesson—to have full confidence in his instructor. In order to put this over the instructor goes through a few spins and rolls until, in some cases, a cadet is about ready to crawl in his teacher's pocket. Another purpose of this flight is to have the cadet "feel out the situation" of flying for he is told nothing before he starts except to hop in the plane.

The flying is done in the morning and the ground schooling in the afternoon of a day that lasts from 6:30 until 4:30.

His next venture aloft, the cadet is told, is for "air work." It consists of straight flying, spins, banks, forced landings and the course lasts ten flying hours in the forced landing instruction, the instructor kills the engine while the plane is in some precarious position or locality and the cadet must glide to the ground safely. A careless accident on his part will promptly eliminate him from the cadet ranks.

His next trial is a solo hop around the field watched closely by his instructor on the ground. And when the cadet returns safely to the field, even though he has shown, possibly, great skill in handling his first flight, he is greeted with, "Well, did ja bring that plane back without smashing it up," by his instructor. The purpose of this is to keep the embryo pilot from getting a "swelled head."

For eight months the cadet continues his lessons in his own plane. Those lessons include night-flying, acrobatics, cross-country and formation flying, navigation, gunnery, bombing, radio and military tactics of all sorts.

His training in acrobatics begins after he has had about twenty hours in the air. Keeping always a level head and a keen eye, he must put his plane through spins, nose dives, loops, rolls, slow rolls, half rolls, and snap rolls. Flying over an "air course" he must always come out of a roll aiming his plane at a certain designation. There is no fluttering about in the air.

A unique feature of gunnery practice is the use of a camera gun with which the cadet trains a lens on the target and "shoots" a picture instead of a bullet. The instrument resembles a gun in every way and the operation of it is almost exactly similar. The films are developed at the end of the attack and if a photograph shows the target, a hit is scored.

Navigation and cross-country flying are two of the most important branches of the flying course. It covers the study of compass and instrument reading, the use of the sextant and course spotting. An interesting subject, too, is the study of artificial horizons. Horizons are created in the sky for the guidance of the navigator just as a ship's captain uses the actual horizon of the sea to determine his position.

In the advanced school to which the cadet goes for about four months after he completes the primary school course, he gets classification training in all types of planes. There it is determined just what kind of flyer he is. In the army there are four kinds, observation group, attack, bombardment and pursuit.

The overly-cautious and apprehensive flyers are quickly detected and eliminated. It is the pilot who can smilingly pull himself out of a barrel roll; drop to the ground on a neat three-point landing; hop out and nonchalantly light a cigar, who is given the coveted gold wings.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.) (©, 1931, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for November 15 PAUL IN JERUSALEM

GOLDEN TEXT—For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.
LESSON TEXT—Acts 21:17-23:22.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul in Trouble.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul in Trouble, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Faces His Enemies.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Bearing Testimony in the Holy City.

I. Paul's Vow (21:17-26).
Upon Paul's arrival at Jerusalem representatives of the church there gave him a cordial reception. In order that the brethren in Jerusalem might graciously receive him, it was proposed to him by the elders that he take a Jewish vow to prove that he was in no way opposed to the law. They recognized that such an act would in no way compromise or involve the Gentile brethren. Nor did it compromise his own principle of action; namely, to the Jews he became a Jew and to the Gentiles a Gentile, all things to all men in order to gain them for Christ.

II. Paul's Arrest (21:27-40).
How far this act conciliated the Christian Jews we are not told, but it enraged the unbelieving Jews, causing them to resort to mob law. These maddened Jews seized Paul, dragged him from the temple and beat him mercilessly, intending to put him to death. He was rescued from the mob by the Roman guard. In order to protect him from the murderous frenzy of the mob, the soldiers lifted him upon their shoulders and bore him up the stairs. Paul kept himself under control and politely asked permission of the captain to speak to the people. When he addressed him in Greek and mentioned his Roman citizenship, the captain granted his request.

III. Paul's Defense (22:1-27).
Paul's chief concern was not his own safety. He used this last opportunity to witness unto them of Christ.

1. His claim for a rightful hearing (vv. 1-3).
a. His birth (v. 3). He was a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city of no mean reputation.

b. His education (v. 3). He was educated under the tutelage of Gamaliel, and instructed according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers.

c. His zeal (v. 3). He was as zealous toward God as the Jews who were trying to destroy him.

2. His former attitude toward Jesus (vv. 4, 5). "I persecuted this way unto the death."

3. How his attitude was changed (vv. 6-16). This change of attitude was brought about by the intervention of the Lord. While on his way to Damascus with authority to bind the Christians at Jerusalem, he was smitten to the ground by a light from heaven, and the voice of the Lord said, "Why persecutest thou me?" When Paul inquired as to what he was to do, he was told to go into Damascus where he would receive instructions. Ananias was sent to him by the Lord for this purpose.

4. The Lord commissioned him to go to the Gentiles (vv. 17-21). It was not of his own will that he preached to the Gentiles but by the Lord's direct commission.

IV. Paul before the Sanhedrin (23:1-10).
The Roman officer in order to learn why Paul was arrested, commanded the chief council to assemble and brought Paul before them. This shows that there was an effort made by the Romans to give justice to Paul.

1. Paul's earnest look at the council (vv. 1, 2). This was a solicitation of their honor to give him a fair hearing, and also a look of conscious integrity and unflinching courage.

2. Paul's stern rebuke of the head of the council. "God shall smite thee, thou whitest wall." Paul shows that he had the highest respect for the office, but the man now occupying it was not worthy of it.

3. Paul's appeal to the Pharisees (vv. 6-10). Seeing that he could not get a fair hearing, and perceiving that the body before him was made up of Pharisees and Sadducees, he appealed to the Pharisees, for his preaching had something in common with their belief.

V. The Lord Stood by Paul (v. 11).
He was in great need of grace. He may have begun to question the wisdom of his going to Jerusalem, but the Lord assured him that his course was right.

VI. The Conspiracy to Kill Paul (vv. 18-22).
More than forty men banded together for the purpose of getting Paul out of the way.

The Divine Presence
Of the reality of fellowship with God every religious man is assured. Religion implies such a fellowship of love and grace on the part of God. How such a consciousness brings strength and comfort to a human heart let every one who knows the power of salvation attest.

Chain of Blessing
Promise—prayer—performance are three links in the chain of blessing. If the middle link is missing, we have no right to expect the third.

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly.

Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic.

Frank Pedneault listened very thoughtfully to the Indian's story, and then began drawing some conclusions of his own.

As he stood in the barracks door gazing wistfully across the Mackenzie to the distant hills, he felt all deserted by his comrades.

When four hours passed and Pedneault failed to return with the launch, Haskell began to get suspicious.

When Pedneault came across and began asking roundabout questions concerning Alan and his venture, Elizabeth told him what she knew.

CHAPTER XI

How to Damn an Enemy

A T kudah brought word to Endurance of a strange happening at En Traverser lake. He had been fishing there at an inlet for barbutes, he said—half-asleep that morning, with the fish line tied around his big toe.

The sight of it, said John Afrad-of-his-Squaw, had nearly tumbled him from his boat. It had lit down on the water, he said, near Goose point.

At that moment Larry Younge, leaning forward in his padded chair, was shaking a fist out the window and emitting a weak—"Ye-ooow! Three whoops for Ped!"

When four hours passed and Pedneault failed to return with the launch, Haskell began to get suspicious. Five hours, six—and Pedneault still absent.

man and smoothed out this Indian trouble, it would look very well in a report. It would be a positive action, an achievement. He said: "All right. Go down and reduce them to order. But be back here in three hours."

Pedneault was already on his way up to barracks for rifle, belt-gun and keys from Whipple. Down at the wharf, he hurriedly tanked up on gas and put in a big drum extra.

A little puzzled by these preparations and all this haste, Haskell stepped outside his cabin. As he stood there, watching Pedneault's demolition driving, watching the scarlet-and-gold launch vanish in its own spray down the Mackenzie, he heard a feeble shout up the terrace behind him; and he turned and looked at the hospital.

At that moment Larry Younge, leaning forward in his padded chair, was shaking a fist out the window and emitting a weak—"Ye-ooow! Three whoops for Ped!"

It was Haskell's intention, as soon as Pedneault came back with the launch, to take Whipple and make a trip up the Big Atooska. Baker would probably use the MacMillan trading post as a maneuvering base against the bandits.

But as he sat there in his cabin, planning this blow, Haskell doubted if he was to succeed. A kind of fatalism had laid hold of him.

When four hours passed and Pedneault failed to return with the launch, Haskell began to get suspicious. Five hours, six—and Pedneault still absent.

When Pedneault came across and began asking roundabout questions concerning Alan and his venture, Elizabeth told him what she knew.

limit. He would turn thumbs down on any leniency toward Baker. The sergeant would be branded with disgrace, if he escaped the pen. And if he did get those bandits, he had awaiting him the news that Trader MacMillan, whose innocence he had championed, for whose sake he had done all this and whose vindication had been his great purpose—that Dave MacMillan, broken by shame and bitterness, was lying dead, a suicide, at Resolute.

Haskell saw that his only real difficulty lay in overcoming Williamson's earlier prejudice and winning his personal liking. That, called for shrewd psychology, but on that point he knew he could make Alan Baker look like a stammering farm boy.

The next evening, when Williamson arrived, Haskell first of all took him on an inspection tour of the post. Finished with that, they stopped and talked together on the slope, a little distance from the barracks.

Haskell was elated, he was secretly exultant, at his success so far in "working" his superior officer. Williamson was openly pleased with the inspection. Barracks, cabins, dog teams, canoes, guns—everything was in capital shape.

This auspicious beginning was all well enough, Haskell felt, but his trouble with Baker was the all-crucial thing. It was going to make or break him. The whole outcome depended on whether the division commander would believe his story or Baker's.

Haskell decided that the old officer had been favorably prepared for the story now; and he led into it gradually, shrewdly. Starting with the Midnight Sun robbery, he gave a detailed account of this last month, dawn to the hour when Pedneault stole the launch and joined Baker's venture.

"What hurts me the worst, sir," he added, with a consummate show of real sorrow, "is the refusal of these men to co-operate with me or let me help them. Maybe I'm at fault; I don't know. But by way of example, sir, if Corporal Hardsock had told me about needing gas and oil, he could have had every drop at the post. But he wouldn't tell me; he st— I mean, he took it. An Indian brought me word about him waiting at En Traverser lake for Baker. I figured Baker might need extra supplies or help, so with Whipple I went down there right away. We tried desperately to get in connection with Baker. Even shot signals for him to wait. But he scorned our offer."

"When I got back here," Haskell went on, "I planned to go up the Atooska and take him supplies. I wanted to put everything I had at his disposal. He's the best man-hunter in the country, and I felt he would get those criminals if anybody could. I didn't give a d—n—if you'll pardon me, sir—about him being so hostile to me personally. All I cared about was to help him run down those bandits. If they escape, it will be a blot on the splendid record here at Endurance. But, as I explained, Pedneault told me a lie about some trouble at an Indian camp, and ran off with the launch."

As he watched his superior's reactions, Haskell smiled to himself. His generous praise of an enemy was having its calculated effect. He was doubly damning Baker by praising him. He was gaining Williamson's sympathy, his approbation. He had beaten down the old officer's former prejudice against him, and had instilled a subtle hostility against Baker and the two deserters.

For moments afterwards Williamson made no comment. Surprised and alarmed at discovering this had blood here at an important post, the old officer gazed silently down upon the purpling river.

State News in Brief

Dundee—Dundee has just voted to engage Henry Ford as village night-watcher. The appointee is not related to the Henry Ford of Dearborn. He has lived in this county most of his life.

Blaine—J. E. Martin, who has an eight-acre strawberry patch on his farm near here, announced he had picked five cases of ripe strawberries from the patch in the first three days of November.

Albion—A corn shredder which robbed Fred Leonard, Devereaux farmer, of his arm two years ago, mangled the right arm of his son, Roy Leonard, 28, to such an extent that it had to be amputated above the elbow at Sheldon Memorial Hospital. The accident was on the same farm as the one which occurred two years ago.

Baraga—The Ford Motor Co. has started winter logging operations in Baraga County. About 2,000,000 feet of logs will be taken out at one camp. Cutting and skidding are under way and logging roads and skidways are being built. The timber will be hauled to the Ford railway for transportation to the L'Anse and Pequaming mills.

St. Ignace—The Mackinac Island Hotel Co., which operates the Grand Hotel, on Mackinac Island, has been placed in receivership in Circuit Court here. The receivership proceedings were instigated by Olive N. Ballard, of French Lick, Ind. At the request of attorneys for the plaintiff, Thomas G. Ellis, manager of the hotel, was appointed receiver.

Ann Arbor—A decrease of 286 in enrollment as compared with 1930 is shown in a tabulation completed by Ira M. Smith, registrar of the University of Michigan. Mr. Smith said the enrollment has dropped from 9,431 in 1930 to 9,145 in 1931. Gains were made in the schools of forestry and graduate work while the literary school had fallen from 4,514 to 3,996.

Grand Rapids—A telegram from President Hoover congratulating him on his 81st birthday made Royal Chase, Grand Rapids Civil War veteran, weep for joy. Open house celebration was held at the home of his daughter, Miss Elise Chase, with whom he lives. Among the many visitors was Comrade W. H. Wieand, 86 years old, who drove an automobile from Coldwater, almost 100 miles to congratulate his old friend.

Bay City—The City Power League, an organization formed to advocate the erection of a municipal generating plant, suffered somewhat of a defeat when the City Commission voted unanimously to renew the contract with the Consumers Power Co. for current the next six and one-half years. The new contract will give consumers of city current the immediate benefit of a much lower rate and effect a saving to the city of over $200,000.

Ludington—Fresh raspberries in November is rather unusual for this part of Michigan, but Earl D. Bates, caretaker at Epworth Heights, found several bushes thick with ripe berries on the north beach of the resort.

Saginaw—Work on the southern end of the Saginaw river dredging project will be started immediately, it was announced by the contractors. The dredges will work until the river freezes.

Lansing—Fred Smith, one of the Ypsilanti torch murderers, must spend 12 years in Marquette Prison before he can begin his four life sentences to which Judge George W. Sample sentenced him for the Washtenaw County killings. Morris D. Kirby, deputy parole commissioner, announced that Smith was sentenced to five to 15 years for breaking and entering in 1928. He was paroled in 1930 but since aiding in the four killings violated his parole, he must serve the maximum time of that sentence.

Lansing—Detroiters' automobile licenses for 1932 will bear numbers ranging from 2-001 to 322-000. The larger numbers will be sent to distributing offices elsewhere in the state. Numbers from 1 to 2-000 will be issued from the Lansing office of Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state. The plates will go on sale Nov. 15. The customary date is Dec. 1, but representatives of the automobile industry have told Mr. Fitzgerald that issuance and use of the new trade will be stimulated by earlier licenses.

Lansing—Airplane patrols to guard private lands against poaching deer hunters in the Upper Peninsula this season were announced after the Conservation Department approved air patrol plans of the Wisconsin Land and Lumber Company. The company has employed an aerial survey corporation of Lansing to guard its 50,000-acre preserve southwest of Newberry. Hunters permitted by the company will wear distinctive hats and coats. When the aviators sight hunters not wearing the approved attire notes will be dropped to rangers posted every few miles.

Lansing—Highway work involving an expenditure of approximately $1,410,000 was authorized recently by the State Administrative Board. About $9,500,000 worth of work now has been authorized, but only about $6,000,000 of this amount will be expended before April 1, 1932. In connection with Gov. Brucker's program of unemployment relief, the State expects to spend a total of $10,000,000 on highway projects before that date. Thus about $4,000,000 worth of winter work remains to be authorized.

Sturgis—C. W. Kirsch, millionaire manufacturer, has donated a 180-acre plot of ground at northwest edge of the city for an airport.

Mt. Clemens—Twenty-nine officers are expected here from Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex., for training, according to Maj. George H. Brett, commandant at the local post.

Lansing—Malt tax stamps of new design will be put in circulation by Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state. Counterfeiting in Detroit and elsewhere made a change of design imperative, according to Fitzgerald. Frequent changes are contemplated.

South Lyon—Three Brighton men, brothers, were instantly killed here when their car was struck by a west-bound Pere Marquette freight train on the Milford road inside the village limits. The dead are Harvey Blasi, 33 years old; William Blasi, 31, and Walter Blasi, 29.

Belleville—While playing on a log extending into Edison Lake, two miles northeast of Belleville, Edward Smeraka, 5 years old, slipped and was drowned. The boy's body was recovered shortly afterward by Robert Clayton, special Wayne County deputy, after rescue efforts of the child's parents had failed.

Grand Rapids—Thomas Gordon, 102, of Grand Rapids, who has driven an automobile since 1915 without an accident, appeared at the Traffic Bureau to apply for a new driver's license. "Don't take any chances, obey traffic regulations, be prepared for what the other fellow may do," is Gordon's motoring philosophy.

Bay City—Contract for construction of a 165-foot ice breaker for the United States Coast Guard has been awarded the Defoe Boat & Motor Works, of Bay City. Delivery is scheduled for October, 1932. Construction of the boat will provide employment for approximately 225 men. The ice breaker will be used on Lake Michigan.

Ypsilanti—Police are attempting to identify the vandals who removed a marble slab 85 years old from some cemetery and placed it at the edge of the State Normal College campus here. Efforts also are being made to learn from what cemetery the slab was stolen. The marble bears the inscription "Jacob Kipp. Died July 31, 1846, aged 22 years."

Detroit—A train bearing 90 persons returning to their native lands left the Union Station recently. Persons taking voluntary departures at the Government's expense numbered 60, and the others are to be deported. Six of the party were from Saginaw and seven from Bay City. George F. Teleson, United States immigration deportation officer, was in charge of the party.

Oscoda—The grading crew on the shore road uncovered a human skeleton with a steam shovel from the sandy shore of Lake Huron. The remains are believed to be those of an Indian, although nothing to substantiate the theory was found with the bones. This was the second skeleton found in the last year. The first was found in March just north of town by a crew clearing debris from the new road to the lake shore.

Jackson—More than 100,000 trees to be used in the beautification of Michigan highways are being raised in a 40-acre plot four miles north of Jackson, opposite the new Michigan State Prison. The trees include many varieties. The nursery was established two years ago and the first transplanting probably will be made next spring. Inmates are caring for the trees under the supervision of E. F. Biebesheimer, prison forester.

Port Huron—Miss Margaret Franklin, Port Huron High School, dean of women, was responsible for the enforcing of the rule requiring a uniform dress for all girls students. The rule, which requires a garb of middie and skirts, is to be rigidly enforced to prevent a further decrease in the enrollment, as many students have left the school because they were unable to dress as well as other girls, according to Miss Franklin.

Jackson—The Jackson Chamber of Commerce has found a use for vacant houses here, provided the owners agree to the proposal. Appeals were made by D. J. O'Connor, manager of the Chamber, asking owners of unoccupied houses to turn them over rent-free to worthy families who are unable to pay rent. He believed, he said, that owners might prefer to have their places occupied rather than remain vacant month after month during the winter.

Lansing—State Police received orders from Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of public safety, to arrest and take to court anyone driving at night without two headlights and a tail light. "Now that the days are becoming shorter," said Olander, "the number of accidents caused by improper lighting equipment is increasing." Gasoline station attendants have been asked to co-operate in the campaign by looking at the lights of their customers and reminding them of any shortcomings.

Grand Rapids—Part of the profits of a post-season baseball game played in this city in July, 1930, between the University of Michigan and Cornell University teams is to be used in caring for needy persons in Grand Rapids. The remainder of the profits of the game, $18.64, was turned over to the community chest. The donation was made by James M. Crosby and Thomas P. Bradford, who, as students at the University, with Ferry K. Heath, now assistant secretary of the treasury, sponsored the contest.

HARD TO ESCAPE FROM ONE'S NICHE

Who Is Not in Clutches of Environment?

Certain environments suggest escape; we are not always satisfied with the niche provided for us; but, like the statues usually connected with the word, we are unable to move ourselves. It is obvious that there are several ways to deal with a formidable obstacle. We may endure it with stoical resignation, we may rise above it and ignore its presence, or we may run away from it altogether.

The amount of courage it takes to overcome the disharmony of circumstances varies in degree, according to one's temperament. Like Hamlet, we know not whether it is nobler to suffer or to oppose. To escape the leisure and ennui of too much wealth, the poor little rich girl dons overalls and runs away to sleep in barns, eat apples and make the acquaintance of rats. The rich little poor girl mounts her hobby and rides away to the land of imagination, hoping some day to find herself famous in Hollywood or other ambitious circles.

The environment of Elizabeth Barrett was such that in order to marry Robert Browning she was obliged to invent means by which she could escape her father's austerity and the tyranny of his home. Her need of something outside the narrowness of her father's selfishness must have strengthened the move for freedom already begun by Jane Austen at her little desk in the corner of the family sitting room trying to hide the products of her brain work from inquisitive eyes, and by Charlotte Bronte and her sisters pacing back and forth round the dining table telling their stories in the effort to see beyond the dreariness of the moors.

In her story called "Father," Elizabeth, of German garden fame, tells of the troubles of Jennifer, who having faithfully kept her promise to her dying mother that she would take good care of her father, feels that the time for freedom has come when her father suddenly confronts her with a new wife. Not yet. He expects her to go cheerfully on being his amanuensis, cook and housekeeper. Jennifer's lover also has a handicap in the form of Sister Alice who has dominated him since he was five and never allowed a single thought of his own to find expression. The author casually remarks that everybody has his Alice. True, is it not?

Having enjoyed that story, I happened upon Old Pybus, which everybody read long ago. The author of "Sorrell and Son" proposes the same conflict between environment and contentment, in a different way. The two sons of Old Pybus having disappointed him in their refusal to adopt his ideals of living, the Venerable, as he is called, severs connection with them, though he hangs their pictures on his wall and point them out as having been killed in the war. He finds a place for himself as "boots" in a public inn, but the venerable head never lost its gentleness, "like the gentleness of some stout old tree sunning itself in the light of a tranquil evening." Mary, in the same book, is called upon to sacrifice every interest in life to the whims of an ungrateful brother who has accepted his blindness in so early a fashion that it has made him spiritually blind to his sister's self-effacement. But some must watch, while some must sleep; thus runs the world away.

Odd Wedding Guest
Gayly clad in white silk ribbon and her best purple coat, Rosie, an elephant at a private zoo in Grimby, England, attended the wedding of the head keeper, John Haith, to Alice Sillis. After the ceremony Rosie posed for her photograph with the bride on one side and the bridegroom on the other.

Grandstand Hideaway
Klukker—Do you enjoy baseball, Mr. Rukker?
Rukker—No, I only go to get away from the bill collectors.

Astrologer's Game as Old as Science Itself

Signs of the zodiac have always impressed the general public more than new developments in the field of relativity, which, according to Dr. Dirk Brouwer, of Yale university, is one of the reasons why early astronomers were forced to deal in horoscopes in order to gain enough money for honest scientific investigations.

Astrologers battening on the public casting horoscopes supposedly based on scientific astronomical data, he said, are as old as science itself. "Then, as now, the public was willing to give money to some one to peer into the future, but was less inclined to contribute to an earnest, scholarly study," he continued. "Kepler, one of the famous astronomers of the Seventeenth century, was also known as an astrologer, but we have strong reason to believe he had no patience with the role he was forced to play in order to obtain funds for astronomy."

Astronomers of today know that for the most part, the so-called astrological tables are entirely inaccurate. Doctor Brouwer declared. And even if they were correct there never had been any evidence to show a connection between phenomena in the heavens and the lives of men. "What has happened," he said, "is this: Astrologers take some specific instance or several instances of events which have occurred when the stars were in a certain position. They then generalize on this basis. It would be just as inaccurate to try to reach a conclusion based on statistics by using only a part of the figures provided, except that the figures used would at least have some foundation in fact."

Wooden Shoes
The demand for economical long-wearing foot covering is now again turning the Italian poorer classes—particularly in the rural districts—to wooden-soled shoes, or clogs, a type of footwear usually more associated with north European peoples.

Dog Found Way Home

Traveling 400 miles across country from Lesser Slave lake to Bassano, says the Canadian Press, "Curly," a dog owned by Ben S. Plumer, of Bassano, has created something of a canine record for long-distance journeying without guide. Jack Regan, who worked on the Plumer farm at Bassano for some time, left for Lesser Slave lake by "covered wagon," driving across country. Before leaving, Plumer gave the dog to him. The journey having been completed, Regan wrote Plumer stating the dog seemed to be enjoying himself in his new environment. Then he disappeared. Several weeks later "Curly" was back home on the Plumer farm.

Dog Reveals Death of Master
How a dog revealed the suicide, by hanging, of his master was told at the inquest at Lewisham, England, over Sidney A. Phippen. William Shackleton of East Dulwich, said that he was walking over waste ground when a little white dog ran up and jumped around him. "I tried to send it away," he said, "but it would not go. I said, 'Where is your master?' and the dog began to bark furiously. It led me to a man leaning against a tree and hanging from a rope."

Reminder of Other Days
Newspapers seventy-five years old, including a copy of the New York Tribune when it was edited by Horace Greeley, were found as a foundation for wall paper when the paper was stripped from the walls of a house owned by Frank D. Kerr, near Newport, Ohio. A copy of the Marietta (Ohio) Register of 1878 also was found. It contained news of a "great business depression" which was sweeping the country.

Doesn't Know It
"My wife talks to herself, does yours?"
"Yes, but she doesn't realize it—she thinks I'm listening."
Those who know how to rife can't help being more or less ruthless.

Sportmanship or Victory?

came Friday afternoon. Harbor Springs knew that Bradley's name wasn't on the current eligibility list; and if they had any idea of using him in the East Jordan game why didn't Superintendent Dickie or other Harbor Springs authorities call East Jordan Friday night to have his name placed on the list. In the next place, inasmuch as Mr. Forsythe said that Bradley was under advisement and being withheld and not on the current eligibility list, why did he send the telegram the last minute to be brought to the attention of East Jordan at the very minute the kick off was to be made. It is not entirely the Harbor Springs school authorities fault in the opinion of a great many people. But as a well known lawyer of northern Michigan stated, the Harbor Springs authorities knew that to spring a matter at such a time was equivalent to inciting a riot, which is a pretty serious matter. The telegram was thrust in my face at this exciting moment and I was expected to make an immediate decision of the matter. When the last word I had from the State Department was that the case had not been settled as to whether he was eligible or not, he was not on the necessary eligibility list, the lists were in the process of being corrected and finally, that I would be notified of the final disposition of the case, there was nothing for me to do but to state that I could not possibly see how we could be asked to have Bradley play in the game. There wasn't a person from East Jordan but who backed me up in this stand.

After the unfortunate incident at the opening of the game I called Mr. Forsythe back the first thing Monday morning to have him restate the case again, which he did—exactly as stated above. In addition he said, "I purposely worded the telegram to Mr. Dickie or the Harbor Springs school men so that they would not attempt to use Bradley in your game." This only confirmed East Jordan in everything it did.

Up to this time we had heard nothing of the final disposition of the case. Along in the middle of the week came a letter stating that according to the evidence at hand, Bradley was eligible.

Just how anyone interpreting the above facts can put the blame on East Jordan and myself is beyond our ability to interpret. Rather than myself being blamed for poor sportsmanship, it looks like a little buck-passing and shifting blunders of the Harbor Springs school authorities on my shoulders. By the way, anything that is said in this article can be said again to a judge and it is my intention to push the matter to the limit unless things are explained in the Harbor Springs paper.

Entirely aside from the above statements, I wish to say that personally I have admired the Harbor Springs teams the past number of years. I even went to the trouble of sending the write-up to the Grand Rapids Herald which was placed under the picture of the Harbor championship team three or four years ago. In fact the Harbor Springs school men will recall that I phoned personally and asked them to get their picture to the Grand Rapids Herald and that I was going to pick an all-northern Michigan team. I think five of the men I selected on the regular first team were from Harbor Springs. On the all-northern Michigan teams I picked the past two years I gave Bradley the finest boost he has received from anyone. Going to the extent of selecting him Captain of the team and at the tournament presented the cups in the place of another man who should have done it in order to give the Harbor Springs team a very special boost which was well deserved and I was very pleased to do.

Harbor Springs the past four or five years and even before that has largely dominated football and basketball of northern Michigan. East Jordan quietly and like gentlemen took their medicine year after year. The past two years three Captains, two football captains and one basketball captain have been on the side lines. Only yesterday the captain had an examination which showed it would be impossible for him to get on the team again this year. The other captains were out because we did not consider they did their regular school work well enough to warrant their participation. Four years ago when without question, East Jordan would have had the best football in northern Michigan, had to withdraw our star kicker, full back, center, tackle and guard all because they were ineligible in one way or another—and this completely wrecked a chance at the championship. For years we have withdrawn all men who participated in any branch of sport four different years. That has been the custom of all the schools I know of in northern Michigan. (This accounts for the fact that Harbor Springs authorities signed their eligibility list a year ago that that was Bradley's last year. Showing that up to this year Harbor Springs recognized exactly the same rule, but this year thought they just must have Bradley's services again.) Yet Harbor Springs hangs on to a technicality in the rule which allows Bradley to play in athletic competition when he has already had four years of athletic experience in at least two or three other sports. And the only reason he can play in football at all is the fact that he was hurt the first year he was out for football at the Indian school and therefore did not make the team. This is the statement of Supt. Baumgartner of the Indian school to me Sunday morning.

It has been a question in the minds of nearly all the Class "C" schools of northern Michigan just how the spirit of the rules can allow from two to four well trained, already star, Indian players to appear on the Harbor Springs high school teams from year to year. It is a known fact that the boys play on the athletic teams at the Indian school from the sixth and seventh grades on. And while we are frankly stating the background of why the general sentiment has been that Bradley has played long enough, I am making the above statements to show the background from which some of the rest of us are drawing our conclusions. It looks to me as though Harbor Springs, after years of domination in athletics, saw defeat staring them in the face and could not stand the gaff. How seriously Harbor Springs took the matter is shown by the article in The Graphic. It looks to the rest of us in Class "C" circles as if Harbor expected another championship with Bradley leading.

The game at Boyne City showed they had no reason for such expectations and it seems to me that instead of East Jordan, myself, and other towns about being poor sportsmen, it is up to Harbor Springs to do a little checking up in its own back yard. I hold no grudge against Harbor any more than I have at any time. Even the day East Jordan played there I very nearly stayed down at the hardware in Harbor Springs to see if I couldn't make the Athletics win the championship—that is just how seriously I took the game myself. I did not anticipate any trouble. I did not think Bradley would be in the game at all and thought that very likely the East Jordan team would not have a very difficult time in winning. If they did, I figured they ought to be beaten.

It seems as though with the blunders on the eligibility list made with the State Department, the minimum penalty at least could be nothing less than the sacrifice of the services of the man in question until the matter was settled.

I have every right to be especially interested in this year's East Jordan team and, naturally would be expected to defend them at all times. For the reason that, if I were to include the captain on the side lines, seven of the regular team have been in my Sunday School class for six years.

I am not alone when I state that E. J. Hanna over-stepped the bounds of good judgment and laid himself liable for a good many mis-statements in his paper. I might say, however, that Mr. Hanna indicated to me over the phone that facts presented to him were contradictory to my position in the matter.

To show the fairness of East Jordan, we allowed T. D. Sutton to act as headlinesman against Gaylord and I personally stated that we in no way objected to Supt. Dickie refereeing our game against Mancelona at East Jordan, Friday. If East Jordan took the winning of a football game as seriously as The Graphic article indicated, we would not care to have the school authorities of a town who is in a football controversy as Harbor Springs is with East Jordan handle our games.
