EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, MARCH 18, 1932.

NUMBER 12

TONS OF SMELT RUNNING ON JORDAN RIVER

Over a Thousand People Dipping Each Night.

Already Several Tons Have Been Lifted By Enthusiastic Sportsmen.

The annual run of Smelt up the Jordan River from the head of the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix started Friday night, March 11th, and, barring a few nights of cold, windy weather, has been steadily increasing.

As soon as the run was made certain of, the daily newspapers in Michigan featured the event and many messages were sent from friends here to those outside who were interested in coming.

The result has been that each night the number of fishermen are increasing and the banks of the Jordan River are lined with people with their dip-nets, ready for the starting gun.

The habits of smelt in their run are more or less unknown and it has been found necessary to change the opening hour to conform to what is thought the best interests of all concerned. At the outset it was found too many people lined the banks of the river near its outlet and thereby prevented the smelt from taking their usual course. The opening hour was then changed to a later one, and it seems to be working out more advantageously. Both Wednesday and Thursday nights the catches were good and smelt were found trekking their way up toward the head-waters.

Amount of the catches vary with "fishermen's luck." Many who stuck by the sport all night were rewarded with from a bushel to a bushel and a half. While most of the succulent fish are of comparatively small size many are being taken about 14 inches in length. The largest reported is about 15 inches.

Many old-time fishermen are of the opinion that the run has not, as yet, reached its peak, believing that with milder weather the run will increase. One of the worth-while features of this year's event and which the Committee in charge are to be commended for, was the establishment of a "Smelt Headquarters." With cold nights and a precarious footing at places on the banks of the Jordan river, many fishermen received a ducking, and a place to go to once where it was warm and they could dry their clothing, has proven invaluable.

The register at "Smelt Headquarters" indicates that, while a majority of smelt visitors are from points in Northern Michigan, many from the Southern part of the State as well as other points in the United States are enjoying the sport. A visitors feature was that of an aeroplane landing on the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, Tuesday. The owner and pilot, Dale Mollenkott, and friend, Leonard Pierce of Coldwater, Mich., came up to try their luck, and returned home Wednesday with a load of smelt. While here he entertained Mayor Watson, several of our school teachers, and others with fights over East Jordan and surrounding region. While here, they were guests of Chief Caller of Smelt, J. W. Loveday.

Each night several Department of Conservation officers are present on the stream assisting the Jordan River Sportsmen's Club in enforcing the few regulations necessary. The requirements for good results in landing smelt on the Jordan is hip-boots and a long pole—one 10 to 12 foot preferable.

Good Friday Services

TO BE HELD IN ALL CITIES OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY.

Arrangements have been made for Union Good Friday Services to be held in the three Cities of Charlevoix County on the afternoon of March 25. All the business places in the county will be requested to close during the time of the services.
For several years the custom of holding Good Friday services has been growing in favor in this country. Such services have been held for years with increasing interest in the larger cities. For the past few years such a service has been held at Boyne City; and last year a fine service was held at Charlevoix with the assistance of the East Jordan pastors. All the business places were closed in both places.
East Jordan has not had such a union service heretofore because there have not been enough ministers in this vicinity to carry on such a program. This year the County Council of Religious Education has arranged with the ministers of the county so that by ministers leaving a church when they have spoken and driving to another city there can be a service in each of the three cities. For example, Revs. Leitch and Sidebotham, local pastors, will speak both at East Jordan and at Boyne City, and five other ministers who speak in the other cities will also speak here.
The program calls for an address on each of the seven words spoken by Jesus on the Cross. Each minister is allotted 15 minutes, which time includes the singing of a hymn. The service in East Jordan will begin at 1:30 p. m., and close at 3:25. While everyone is welcome to be present at the opening and remain until the close, it is understood that people should feel free to leave at any time during the singing of a hymn, or to enter at any such time.
In East Jordan the service will be in the Presbyterian Church; in Boyne City in the Methodist Church, and in Charlevoix in the Baptist Church. Everyone in the vicinity of East Jordan is asked to attend at least a portion of the service. This is the largest and the finest co-operation there has ever been among the Churches of Charlevoix County.

DAIRY-CROPS TRUCK SCHEDULED FOR EIGHT MEETINGS

That alfalfa raised dairy profits was the belief voiced by Charlevoix County dairy delegates at the recent county-wide dairy conference held at Boyne City. Also, home grown roughages of the right kind will help reduce the feed costs for dairy cows.
The survey developed by the Charlevoix County dairy delegates showed that there is a great lack of sufficient good quality roughage and especially alfalfa grown in the county. The dairy delegates believe that keeping fewer cows and feeding those that are kept better by growing a higher quality of roughage will help improve the net returns received from dairy herds in this county.
A truck operated by the Michigan State College co-operating with the County Agricultural Agent, B. C. Melencamp will be the first step in a program to get more alfalfa started on the farms of this county. It is a part of the general plan developed by the delegates to the dairy conference. At this conference, delegates urged that enough alfalfa to feed all the dairy cattle be grown on every farm. They pointed out that it ranks first among all hay crops in feeding value and in total value per acre.
Watch the next issue of this paper for the schedule and other details of the coming meeting.

If all the money in the country were divided equally—

ONE of the serious results that come from the experience through which our country has been passing for the past two years is loss of faith. Because some have put their trust in things which they have found do not always endure, they draw the hasty and unwarranted conclusion that it is useless to have faith in anything. They propose to abandon all standards, seek only the easiest course, and live merely for the present, on the theory that they may as well eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow they die.

It cannot be denied that many people have had an experience which at first thought seems to warrant such an attitude. They had profitable employment on which they believed they could rely for a permanent income. That has gone, and they are unable to secure work. They had a house which ultimately they expected would be their own and would make a home for themselves and their family. They have been unable to meet the payments due on it and have seen it taken from them. Others have found that investments on which they relied for provision for their old age have turned out to be of much less value than had been supposed. Some have met with losses through the failure of banks in which they had money deposited.

It is easy, in these circumstances, for the individual to conclude that these disasters have arisen through no fault of his own, that it must be the fault of someone, and he is inclined to blame something he loosely calls society. Sometimes a feeling of injustice results in a threat of defiance against constituted authority. Among all these people, those who most strongly appeal to our sympathies, those who seem most warranted in their discouragement, are the ones who want work and cannot find it. But even they should take the larger view of their situation. It is no new experience for a wage earner to be without employment. Such a condition has always been temporary. It will be temporary now. Surely the country will go back to work, back to production and consumption. The condition of the wage earner in America has long been the despair of all the rest of the world. Some hope should be derived from what has been and some confidence entertained that the same again shall be.

But a new element has entered into the situation of the unemployed. Heretofore, few have known anything about it, few have cared anything about it and nobody has done anything about it. Now the whole nation is aroused. There is scarcely a hamlet in the land where there is not an organization and active public effort for the relief of the unemployed. They will be cared for in an unprecedented way. We have had a tremendous spiritual awakening concerning our duty to relieve human suffering. It is true some homes have been lost through default of payments. That risk is always incurred when property is bought on credit. But even in this field, where one home has been lost, an enormous number have been retained. Their owners now find themselves securely and comfortably housed because they saved money and bought when they had an income, instead of spending all their money on rents and expensive living.

If all those who have bought homes in the last twenty years could be assembled, it would be found, in spite of some failures, that, as a class, they were distinctly better off than their neighbors.

The desire to build and own a home is one of the primal human instincts. It is especially strong in women. Even the present age of hotel apartments and flats is not likely to eradicate so strong a natural longing. But those who have given up the effort in despair or disgust certainly must live somewhere—if not in their own house then in the house of someone else. Their real position in the world is disclosed by supposing that everyone else followed their example. The whole race would be without shelter in about a generation.

Those who have come to the conclusion that they will do nothing to make themselves a home are injuring themselves most, but they are also injuring the whole community.

Any such scheme of things as their actions presuppose could not be put into effect. Nature and reason are both opposed to it.

When we examine the complaints of those who have lost through investments we find that they fall into three classes: Some lost because they were plainly swindled. We are enacting more and more laws and setting up more and more regulations and safeguards to prevent a recurrence of such abuses. The practice of swindling is very old, and larceny has never been eradicated from any community where property was abundant. But because someone does wrong does not prove that we shall all abandon trying to do right.

Others have used poor judgment in investments. Usually they have been tempted to take large risks by the hope of making large gains. Some did not make great profits, while many more suffered heavy losses.

Those who trust to chance must abide by the results of chance. They have no legitimate complaint against anyone but themselves.

Still others, using all the judgment possible for human beings and guided by the best financial advice obtainable, have seen their investments seriously impaired. But this simply means what everyone should know; that even when surrounded by all the safeguards and all the integrity which it is possible to secure, the ownership of property involves a risk. No law, no regulation, no government supervision, no skill in management, has ever been devised that could protect invested property from temporary fluctuation and occasional loss. These are the hazards of our finite existence. Only omniscience can guard against them.

But that does not excuse us from making the most of what we have and doing the best we can.

While no one can tell with certainty what will happen to any particular property or what the market will do at any in life, we must take the risk of being responsible for the results.

If we could lay the blame for present conditions in our own country or in the world on society at large, against whom is the blame to be assessed? It is impossible to point out any general moral lapse, any widespread dishonesty. We may say it was the result of greed and selfishness. But what body is to be specifically charged with that? Were the wage earners too greedy in getting all they could for their work? Were the managers of enterprise, big and little, too greedy in trying to operate at a profit? Were the farmers too greedy in their efforts to make more money by tilling more land and enlarging their production?

Even if we could convict society on a general charge of selfishness, we could not point to any element that consciously brought about a condition of falling prices, particular time, the best financial judgment expects that, while further losses may accrue, sometime the general level of good standard properties will rise, so that some of the present losses will be reduced. Future prices at which property will sell are always uncertain.

There is no one to be blamed for what is unavoidably true. The great fact of life is uncertainty. The only thing we can do is to recognize the uncertainty and govern ourselves accordingly.

It is true that a considerable number of people have suffered through bank failures. In a time of declining prices the banks that have not been well managed always have difficulty. Some also that through no fault of their own have met losses have been compelled to close. But that does not mean a total loss to depositors. Sometimes the loss is heavy, but sometimes payment is made in full. In any case, funds are tied up and much inconvenience results.

Our national banking system is as sound as generations of experience have been able to make it. Most of the states follow a similar system. The nature of investments is regulated by law, and most banks are carefully supervised, rigidly controlled, and frequently examined by government agents. While absolute safety has been impossible to secure, it is probable that the records of money deposited in properly regulated banks in this country would show over a series of years that it has been in the safest place to keep funds.

Banks are an absolute necessity for the transaction of business. If it were possible to conceive of all of them being closed, starvation would face most of us inside of ten days. They exist to facilitate the process of exchange, which is the basis of all business. They are one of the main sources of credit, on which our economic welfare largely depends.

It is apparent that if their source of currency were cut off by people taking money out of banks and hoarding it, locking it up, or hiding it away, our banking system soon would become deranged and the whole nation would begin to suffer losses. Loans would have to be called, mortgages canceled, prices would fall, wages decline, credit would fail, and a general panic would be produced.

If all the people attempted to draw their money from the banks, all commerce would be reduced to barter, and universal bankruptcy would prevail.

While particular banks may become unsound, we can feel adequately certain that our banking system as a whole will not become unsound. If it ever did, we should find that the money we had hidden away had become unsound also. It would not be possible to buy anything with it. All exchange would be at an end. Even payments by the federal government would have to be suspended. While keeping money in banks involves some risk, because possession of property always involves risks, it is a risk that must be taken. Compared with the certain calamity that would result if the people drew all money out of banks, the risk can be considered as negligible.

Those who are engaged in hoarding currency are probably no safer as a class than those who keep their funds in the banks. They are injuring themselves and everybody else. They are in the position of not taking their part of the risks of life and are trying to make themselves safe by letting others carry their risks for them.

It might be a great personal comfort if we could lay all the blame for our misfortunes upon some source outside ourselves. That is why it is easy to convince some of us that we have not failed, but society has failed. Of course, it would follow that if society were to be blamed for our failures, that some society must be credited with our successes. If we want to look at it that way we shall have to admit that on the whole, society in this country has done very well by us. Our country, over its span of history, has been considerable of a success.

But while there is a relationship of all of us, which we term society, that differs from each of us, just as a house differs from the individual bricks in it, yet people are not bricks, and moral responsibility cannot be shifted to others. It must rest with the individual. The same society produced Paul and Judas, Washington and Arnold, Lincoln and Tweed, Edison and the gang leader.

If we are to be free to make our own choices unemployment, lack of confidence, business failures, and hard times. These were the last things that anybody wanted. The most we can say is that there has been a general lack of judgment so widespread as to involve practically the whole country.

We have found out that we were not so big as we thought we were. We were riding too high. We shall have to keep nearer the ground. We may not feel so elated but we shall be much safer.

Economic well-being is very important, but perhaps it is not so important as we thought it was. If it is used as it ought to be, to minister to spiritual well-being, we cannot have too much of it. But if it is made a vehicle for stimulating greed and selfishness, idleness and ignorance, extravagance and waste, destructive alike to body and soul, it defeats itself and vanishes, until, through adversity, we can learn to make a better use of prosperity.

The development of the real character of men and women can go on in bad times as well as in good times. After all, that is the important thing.

Neither the world at large nor our own most favored nation is going to discover some miraculous formula which, all at once, will remove the possibility of hardship, want and deprivation from the human race. With all the power of mass production, we are a long way from universal luxury. But in the United States we have approached the line of universal convenience.

Our system has produced a distribution of wealth so that those having incomes of five thousand dollars or less, according to the latest available records, are said to receive 87 per cent of the total national income. If they were given, in addition, the entire income of all those who receive more, the increase would be only about seven hundred dollars. Great as our resources are, they have a distinct limitation.

There is not wealth enough in our country to take care of our people without the ablest possible management and the hardest kind of work on the part of all of us.

There is no government in the world that can remove this burden from its inhabitants.

Under the pressure of events there are some who have become sullen and resentful. They are inclined to refuse to make an effort to pay their taxes and their interest. If they earn anything, they propose to spend it. They have lost faith in the standards by which they have lived.

Such people have made a great mistake. They have been born into the wrong universe for them. They belong in some place where there are no risks to be faced, where a backache would be considered "excuse baggage" where courage and perseverance, effort and self-denial, industry and thrift are not virtues in themselves, to be cultivated for their own sakes. The absurdity of this position is revealed by considering what would result if everybody else adopted the same attitude.

There is no power that can guarantee us economic security. We think we want relief from toil and worry, forgetful that all our real satisfactions are in our achievements.

If we will but make the effort to develop them, if we will apply ourselves faithfully to our tasks, we shall all find we have powers we did not know we possessed.

We shall come nearest to achieving our own economic security by the practice of the old-fashioned, homely virtues of industry and thrift; of buying a few things we can pay for, rather than many which leave us loaded with dangerous debts we can never pay; of small savings securely invested at moderate returns, rather than spectacular financial performances.

The best recipe for financial security is to live within our means. This is our ancient faith. We have found nothing better.

If we should undertake to put into operation any scheme based on the assumption that the world owes all of us a living, we would soon find the world was bankrupt. If we try to adopt some plan that will eliminate the changes and risks of life, we are likely to find that reverses will come just the same. We shall be better off if we work on the old standard that we owe a duty to the world to earn our own living, and instead of supposing we can abolish reverses, preparing to meet them. Under this homely, safe, and seasoned system we shall probably find we have the best chance of taking care of ourselves and securing the greatest distribution of wealth.

Lesson for March 20

JESUS DIES ON THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—John 19:17-22; 25-30. GOLDEN TEXT—For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us. JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Gives His Life for Us. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Dies for Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Christ Died.

This lesson presents the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is in a real sense the climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of life and liberty for all the world. It is highly important that every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for himself and then endeavor to get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death. We escape judgment because the judgment we merited fell upon Christ.

I. The Place (v. 17). It was on a hill called in Latin "Calvary" and in Hebrew "Golgotha," which in shape resembled a skull. This hill is a few yards outside Jerusalem. This is a most significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as a result of sin—life and intelligence gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern.

II. His Companions (v. 18, cf. Luke 23:33). Two malefactors were crucified with him. Their names are not given. This was in fulfillment of Isaiah 53:12, "He was numbered with the transgressors." He was sinless, but became sin for us.

III. The Inscription over Him (vv. 19, 20). It was customary to place an inscription over the cross, stating the crime for which the victim suffered. Although Pilate did this in bitter irony and contempt, he uttered a great truth, affirming more than he intended.

IV. Gambling for the Garments of Jesus (vv. 23, 24). This was a fulfillment of the scripture, "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture." Ps. 22:18. This is an exhibition of how men's hearts may be so calloused as to plan an act for present gain under the shadow of the cross of Christ.

V. Utterances from the Cross (vv. 25-30). 1. "Behold thy son—"Behold thy mother" (vv. 25, 26). In this crucial hour he forgot his own bitter anguish and interested himself in those he loved. This is a fine example of human sympathy, and especially of filial love at its best.

2. "I thirst" (v. 28). As the sinner's representative, he suffered not only untold agony of mind, but of body as well.

3. "It is finished" (v. 30). While no one can fathom the depth of meaning in these words, they no doubt indicate that the calamities and indignities heaped upon him were at an end. His trial was grossly illegal. False witnesses were employed to incriminate him.

4. His awful sufferings were at an end. The penalty of the unnamable and indescribable sins of the world were resting upon him, wringing from him the pathetic cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

5. The fulfillment of every type and prophecy.

6. His life of perfect obedience.

7. The great work of redemption. "Finished" means more than ended. It means "accomplished." All that he started out to do was now completed.

8. The judgment of the world and the casting out of Satan. (See John 12:31.)

"From this point on there was no more humiliation, insult, or outrage. From the moment when the spear-thrust made it certain that he was actually dead, no cherished infant form could be more tenderly taken in arms, wrapped in clean linen with aromatic spices, and laid at rest in a faultlessly clean-chamber. Neither was he ever again seen by an unfriendly eye.

Truly, as to all sorrow and suffering and vicarious agony, it was finished."

VI. His Death (v. 30, cf. Luke 23:44-45). His death was voluntary. It was unlike any other death in all history. By an act of sovereign will he dismissed his spirit. No one took his life from him. He had power to lay it down and power to take it up again. So shocking was the crime that nature herself threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide him from the godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday.

BABY FRETFUL, RESTLESS?

Look to this cause

When your baby fusses, tosses and seems unable to sleep restfully, look for one common cause, doctors say. Constipation. To get rid quickly of the accumulated wastes which cause restlessness and discomfort, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Castoria, you know, is made specially for children's delicate needs. It is a pure vegetable preparation; contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. It is so mild and gentle you can give it to a young infant to relieve colic. Yet it is as effective for older children. Castoria's regulative help will bring relaxed comfort and restful sleep to your baby. Keep a bottle on hand. Genuine Castoria always has the name:

TOURIST BODY
REPRESENTED ON WORLD FAIR BOARD

Hugh J. Gray of Grand Rapids, Secretary-Manager of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, has been appointed by Governor Brucker to the Recreational Exhibits sub-committee of the Century of Progress Committee. George E. Bishop of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau is general chairman of the committee which will supervise Michigan's exhibit at Chicago in 1933. Recently a new lease for the Chicago office of the Michigan Tourist and Resort Association was signed and it is expected that a close tie-up will be had between this office at 161 North Michigan Ave., and the World's Fair, so that visitors may get information on the Playground of the Nation. Millions of visitors will attend this World's Fair and with this great playground right in the front yard of Chicago it is an opportunity that Michigan resort interests must not overlook. Now is the time for co-operative action through the Michigan Tourist and Resort body to lay plans for greater advertising and publicity to bring these visitors to Michigan.

"A TAXPAYER"
WRITES THE TAX COLLECTOR

Dear Mr. Tax Collector:
I beg leave to inform you that the present shattered condition of my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you a check in response to your request for a remittance. The state of my present financial condition is due to the effects of federal laws, state laws, county laws, brother-in-laws, mother-in-laws, out-laws, that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws, I have been held up, walked on, set on, sandbagged, battered and squeezed until I do not know what I am, where I am, or why I am.

These laws compel me to pay a merchant tax, capital tax, excess profit tax, income tax, state tax, auto tax, cigarette tax, street tax, real estate tax, gas tax, sur-tax, syntax, and carpet taxes.

In addition to paying these taxes I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization that the inventive mind can organize. To the society of John the Baptist, Women's Relief, the Navy League, the Children's Home Fund, the Policemen's Benefit, the Dorcas Society, the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts, the Jewish Relief, the Gold Digger's Home. Also every dog, cat and human hospital, and every charitable organization, the Red Cross, Black Cross and the Double Cross.

The government has so governed my farm that I do not know who owns it, or why, I am so suspected, expected, disrespected, examined, re-examined, informed, required, commanded, expelled and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to prove an inexhaustible supply of money for every human need, desire or hope of the human race, and because I refuse to donate all I have and go out and beg, borrow and steal more money to give away, I am cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, held down, knocked down and robbed until I am nearly ruined. So the only reason I am clinging on to life now is to see what in— is coming next.

Yours sincerely,
A TAXPAYER.

P. S.—I have one dollar left but that goes to the bank to pay for the privilege of letting them keep my money for me until it was all gone.—Michigan Farmer.

WAR ON GERMS IS GREATEST BATTLE

French Scientists Praise U. S. Research Work.

Paris.—The greatest war of the ages, according to Dr. Harry Plotz, noted scientist, is that being waged between intelligent human beings and germs. Doctor Plotz has just returned here after three months in America, and in addition to being a scientist he is a well-known bacteriologist associated with the Pasteur Institute.

Specializing in infantile paralysis, smallpox, measles, etc., diseases caused by altrable viruses. Doctor Plotz expressed great admiration for the intensity of the work in American laboratories directed toward combating these particular germs.

Doctor Dochez of Columbia, according to the French scientists, has succeeded in isolating the germ of the common cold in cultures and incubators and has proved the possibility of infecting humans with it. If the germ can be grown, which is the next step, it is very probable that an anti-toxin to the ordinary cold may be developed, in the opinion of Doctor Plotz.

As yet, there seems no accounting for infantile paralysis. "We know how to take it and isolate it and infect others with it," he said, referring to the actual germ, "but we do not yet know where it comes from. And we know now that the only practicable serum is the human convalescent variety—for example, such as Governor Roosevelt of New York, a former sufferer, has given on recent occasions."

Of 4,000 cases of infantile paralysis studies this year, there was an average of about 12 1/2 per cent fatalities in the epidemic of 1918, Doctor Plotz pointed out, explaining that approximately 80 per cent of infantile paralysis cases are to be expected in children up to ten years.

An adult, while immune to the disease, may very well infect a young child with infantile paralysis by kissing it or coughing or sneezing in its presence. He believes that such diseases are largely conveyed by the eyes, nose and mouth. "That is how I think the germ is spread," he said.

Airplane Birth Raises
New and Knotty Problems

Winnipeg, Man.—Aviation has given rise to many new problems and the latest one is not the least. This is it: If a child is born in an airplane flying between two points, where should the birth be registered? Or supposing the airplane is flying over an international boundary, how can it be said which country it was born in?

The attorney general of Manitoba, W. J. Major, was confronted with this problem in a most unexpected way, for it appears Manitoba is a pioneer in airplane births. Some time ago a child was born in a plane while the mother was being rushed to a hospital at the Paz.

News of the event reached Belgium through the newspapers. Legal authorities there were designing laws to deal with just this situation. They decided to consult Manitoba, and Mr. Major has a letter from the advocate of the general court of appeals at Brussels asking what locality was given as the birthplace. He thought the mother's home would be the logical place, but wanted to make sure.

The letter calls attention to the difficulty of determining the exact political division an airplane may be in at the time of a birth in the air.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

Dr. Hartley B. Alexander, noted philosopher and author, has been visiting New York. He told me of a man and his wife, he heard arguing on the brink of the Grand canyon. It seems the man was a contractor, and that he was bent on demonstrating to his sceptical better half that the canyon could be filled up, and estimating the number of truck loads of stone and dirt that the job would require. To those who have seen the place, it would appear that the man was taking in a lot of territory.

These doctors of philosophy and science tell some funny stories. When Dr. A. V. Kidder of Carnegie Institution was doing some archeological work at Pecos, New Mexico, tourists used to stop and evince great curiosity in the operations. They asked all sorts of unusual questions. One day, in the midst of such a conversation, a man said: "My name's Spiderwhistle. What's yours?" "Kidder," replied the archeologist. "Gee!" said the man. "What a funny name!"

It was at another site that Doctor Kidder was down in a trench, excavating a skeleton. When a skeleton is perhaps 500 years old, work of excavation has to be carried on with the most minute care. Doctor Kidder was engrossed in his work when he suddenly became conscious of a tourist peering at him intently from the ground above. "Did he die there," asked the visitor breathlessly, "or did he fall in?"

Two women on a bus were talking so loudly that one couldn't help hearing what they said some seats away. "One was extolling the desirability of living in a certain part of the West. She said that her son would not live anywhere else and named a small town.

"It is the only place to go," she said. "Well, yes, the days are hot there. Yes, some of the night's are hot there, too. But my son wouldn't think of living anywhere else. And it is a great town for business."

"What is your son's business?" inquired her companion.

"He is an undertaker," said the woman, "and once he got five jobs in one night."

An author who had been called to Hollywood actually met one of the heads of the movie firm for which he was supposed to be working. He asked him what he thought of his story.

"You should excuse me speaking out," said the magnate. "I think it is terrible and lousy."

"That's all right," said the author. "I always have heard you were a great fellow for innuendo."

Corey Ford, author of several books and a very prolific all around writer, is highly incensed. A publisher, of whom he had never heard, wrote to him saying that he had happened to see an article of Mr. Ford's in a magazine and that if he ever wrote anything else he would be glad to consider it.

There is a woman whose one parlor trick is her ability to imitate perfectly the cries and gurgles of a baby. But where she has the most fun with this accomplishment is in a sleeping car. She has the porter and other travelers searching the place for the supposed infant in distress.

Find Gold Ring in Snake
Killed in Clothes Box

Axtell, Kan.—To discover a snake in a clothes box and later find a gold ring in the reptile was the experience of Mr. and Mrs. Claire Conable. Mrs. Conable found the snake when she put her hand in a box to take out some clothing. Her husband killed it, then cut it in pieces. A flattened ring fell out of the body. It was brought to a jeweler to have it rounded.

Fish Had Human Teeth

Pecos, Texas.—Sheriff E. B. Kiser is exhibiting a mounted fish with two teeth resembling those of a human being. He said he found a dog dragging the fish near the Pecos river.

Traffic Cop Cuts
Phone Call Time

Chicago.—Thomas F. Zapotocki, a traffic policeman stationed for the last six months at Monroe street and Wabash avenue, makes a routine report to a police operator every hour. His conversations over the patrol box phone used to run like this:

Zapotocki—This is Zapotocki. Operator—Who?

Zapotocki—Zapotocki. Operator—I didn't quite get that.

Zapotocki—Z-a-p-o-t-o-c-k-i, Zapotocki!

One morning Policeman Zapotocki went before Judge William J. Lindsay in the Superior court with a petition to change his name. In the afternoon he made his "pulls" as follows:

"This is Zapp."

"O. K." sang the operator.

State Honors Awarded To Gwendon Hott
of East Jordan

Word has been received from A. G. Kettunen, State Club Leader, that Gwendon Hott of East Jordan has been awarded the State Championship of the potato project for the year 1931. This news will be of interest to all the folks in the county who have been in contact with the 4-H club program. This honor is merited by Gwendon as he has been one of our most loyal club members and has won many prizes not only at local shows but at the district Top O' Michigan Show at Gaylord and at the National Club Congress Show at Chicago.

Three years ago Gwendon joined the potato project and that year averaged over 300 bushels per acre. The next year he likewise had one of the highest yields in the county. Last year he cared for approximately 7 acres and again hit the 300 bushel per acre class. This state recognition of Gwendon's exceptional club activities reflects a distinct honor to the entire club program in Charlevoix County and the many club members who make up the new agricultural generation. Gwendon, we all join in extending our sincere congratulations and hope you continue your meritorious program.

Ancient Troy

Excavations in the city of Troy show that there are a number of successive settlements on this site. The city believed to be Homeric Troy was defended by a strong wall of rough stone, topped by crude brick, and seems to have extended its circuit twice, the second time with marked alterations in the situation of the gates. The later settlement was also defended by a strong wall of stone, but of far greater circuit than the former. This wall was pierced by gates provided with strong towers. Near the end of the fourth century it was fortified by a wall some five miles in circumference.

Coconuts From Sea

The white man's first knowledge of the coconuts came from the sea. Early explorers, long before the discovery of America, reported finding coconuts in the ocean hundreds of miles from the nearest land. Later, on South Sea islands, they found the stately palms that dropped the coconuts into the water.

In many tropical countries the coconut palm is the "family cow" of the natives, furnishing healthful meat and drink.

Although spelled similarly, coconut and cocoa are entirely different. The coconut is the fruit of the coconut palm; cocoa beans come from the pods of the cacao, or chocolate tree.

Pint Was Once a "Paint"

It is only of comparatively recent times that a foot or a yard or a quart or some other measure has become standard. People of today think of them only in constant terms, yet it was not always thus. The "foot" of today was once that of the king's or some officer appointed by him. The "yard" comes from an old word meaning a rod or a stick. The "pound" meant originally a pendant. These may first have been carried around the king's girdle or that of his officer. The "gallon" was a large bowl. The "quart" means a fourth part of something, and the "pint" is really "paint" and is probably a reference to a painted mark made on the larger bowl or tankard.

Love Maxims

"All love that does not uplift, debases; It is a mistake to look for tenderness in love, seek tenderness in friendship; All women without love are the same age; A woman is eighteen when she is in love; A hundred when she loves no longer; When a man says: 'You are the companion of my life, my best friend'—look out for your rival; Love is a spring garden where the sun shines between two showers; The joys of love last no longer than roses." These maxims are from the pen of Lucie Paul Marguerite, daughter of the late Paul Marguerite, novelist.

Investigation into the feasibility of the purchase of automobile license plates on a quarterly-payment plan is being made by executives of the Department of State. Due to economic conditions, thousands of motorists have been unable to pay the weight tax and therefore are unable to use their cars. It is believed that if motorists were able to pay the tax in four installments, an appreciable additional number could use their cars all year round. But there are many disadvantages that must be given careful consideration, in studying this question. The State of Arkansas has adopted a quarterly-payment plan which will be watched closely by the Michigan Department of State.

Are you ever disappointed when you pick up your Herald and find that some social function, or a trip you have made to some other locality, friends visiting you, etc., etc., was not mentioned? We are when we do not mention it, but a newspaper cannot print the news unless it hears of it, and though we ask countless people each week for news, much of it escapes us. Won't you help us in printing all the news by calling us, phone 32, writing a letter, or coming to the office, telling us of these items? We will appreciate it, and it will make the paper more interesting to you and your friends. Don't forget to sign your name, so we will know whom to thank. EX-PRESIDENT COOLIDGE WRITES FOR OUR COLUMNS

On another page in this issue, our readers will find an important article written by former President Calvin Coolidge, entitled "To Bring Back Prosperity." We know every reader will be interested in reading such an article by such a writer, whether or not they agree with all that he says. It is not often that the newspapers of America are able to secure contributions to their columns by a man of such standing as an ex-President of the United States, and we feel that we are unusually fortunate in this case in being able to present to our readers in their home paper, an article by an ex-President of our nation. Be sure to read the article and then discuss it with your neighbors.

CHARLEVOIX CO. HERALD

Origin of famous Saying

"When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war," is from the fourth act of a tragedy in blank verse entitled "The Rival Queens, or the Death of Alexander the Great," and written in 1677 by Nathaniel Lee, an English dramatist, says Pathfinder Magazine. This play made the author's reputation and remained a favorite on the English stage until the time of Edmund Kean. The line in question refers to the stubborn resistance made by the Greek cities to the armies of Philip of Macedon and his son, Alexander the Great. "When Greek meets Greek" now is employed to suggest that when two courageous men or armies fight the contest is likely to be a severe one.

Souvenirs of 1918

A band conductor of the famous Rainbow division was among first organizations of the army of occupation to move up and he relates the following story:

As the train pulled into Metz, the station master, with all pomp and whatnot, doled up in brass buttons and epaulets, stood fit to drive a present-day motor bus. All the boys piled off the train and gave him a "huddle." When the engine tooted and the boys clambered aboard, there stood the station master, no buttons or epaulets on his uniform and his "panta" gone.

Motion Picture Vision

"Persistence of vision," in motion picture parlance, means that the eye retains a single visual impression for about one-sixteenth of a second. Motion picture projection is therefore a series of pictures thrown upon the screen at intervals of approximately one-sixteenth of a second. Because the interval between these pictures synchronizes approximately with the duration of vision, the projected motion picture gives the illusion of actual movement instead of appearing to the eye as a series of unconnected pictures.

"I don't know it," said Stanton. "If I did they wouldn't have walked out of the room. I'm only guessing."
"Yes, guessing. Well, I'd rather you guessed that I was alive because they were dead than that they were alive because I was dead. That's what it comes to. I can't go back to New York tonight. But how am I to know that they have gone? They may stay here in Newburgh."

"If I may use Mr. Darling's telephone, I'll loose the Dogberrys on them."
"There's the extension here on the table and there's an instrument in a closet off the hall," said Mr. Darling. "I'll not bother you with the mysteries of police business," said the lieutenant. "I'll use the other phone."
When he returned Roberts was bracing himself with another drink of Scotch.

"They will be quietly escorted into New York," the lieutenant said, "and from then on the watchful eye will be in the middle of their backs. Now, Roberts, here we are in a case which stumps me to think of the like of it. It seems that the only thing I can do, as John Law confronted with one transparent killing and two fairly plausible ones is to wait for another."

"Will you let me stay at your hotel with you tonight?" Roberts asked. "I'll figure out something. Maybe I can go back to Chicago with you. It may not be as hopeless as I think. I might be able to get West. If I could get away from San Francisco I might be able to disappear somewhere in the Far East, somewhere in the Pacific Islands."

He brightened perceptibly in tone and confidence of motion as he walked to and fro on the hearth-rug.

"I've got sixty thousand dollars a year now instead of thirty thousand dollars. That's right, isn't it, Mr. Darling?"

"Owing to the fact that Mr. Clayton, Mr. Brown and Mr. Trembley are no longer where they can receive checks, you are quite right, Mr. Roberts."

"Well, now, sixty thousand dollars a year is money. It gives a man freedom. He can live where it's pleasant and convenient. He can take measures to protect himself. If I can get a fair break at the start. That's all I'll need. Now, if Lieutenant Stanton will help, I know I can rely on Mr. Darling."

"We'll be leaving, Mr. Darling," said Stanton.
"Shall I see you again, Lieutenant?" the old gentleman asked, holding out his hand.

"I hope so. I must be going back tomorrow after I've gone down to New York. I've always said I was no detective, but this beats even my usual experience. I get my man! My nursemaid to the handsome gentleman who expects to be murdered. That's all I've got to show for my expense account. Come along, Mr. Roberts. And good day to you, Mr. Darling."

It was late dusk as Stanton and Roberts walked toward the Palatine. They passed by the Hustrouck house. "You might go in there a while tomorrow," said Stanton.

"Where? In there? Why?"

"It's Washington's headquarters."

"What of it?"

"Oh, go in and look at Uzal Knapp's grave."

"You're a nut, chief. There's only one grave I want to see, and it isn't filled yet."

"You discount Ashley, don't you?"

"I can handle him."

"Can you? I'd guess that in this elimination he'd be the survivor."

"Don't be ridiculous. What makes you think that?"

"Just looking at you three, I fancy Ashley."

When they entered the hotel Stanton told his companion to get himself a room.

"I must send some telegrams," he said. "I must go to the local chief's office and I may be able through him and by telephone to avoid going to New York."

"Do you think you'll be gone long?"

"I'd not think so. Why? You needn't be alarmed here in the hotel."
"Sometimes you seem simple-minded," Lieutenant. "You ought to know that often the safest places are the most dangerous."

"I'd get hold of myself if I were you, mister. You're safe here."
"When you are back I must buy some linen and things. I'll get a room and wait for you here in the lobby."

When Stanton returned a half-hour later, Roberts was in a leather chair in a smoking corner.

"I got a room with two bds," he said, "and I've had your things moved into it. Don't mind, do you? I'll feel easier. I meant to speak to you about it."

"I doubt that you did, Roberts. You preferred to have it done, and then tell me about it. I don't mind, if it makes you any happier. The furnishing stores are down the hill in the old town. You'd better go and make your purchases before dinner."

"All right. I'll go with you, Ashley and Blair are on their way to New York, but I can't afford to report back home without you alive. So come along, and then we'll have dinner."

CHAPTER VIII

A Night Visitor at Room 510

At dinner Stanton said he was going to the movies and that his companion might please himself, remain in the hotel or accompany him. Roberts was glum for a moment and then smiled.

"I'll go with you. I don't mind hick-town amusements. I like them."
"If the movies are hick the big towns are the center of the sticks," said Stanton.

"I know, but I only enjoy the movies when I'm laid up in a small place."
"Come on then. I'm a two-show man, mister, when I get a chance, and I saw by the signs that John Gilbert in 'Twelve Miles Out' is at one place and Sid Chaplin in 'Charley's Aunt' at another."

They claimed their overcoats from the checkroom and walked along the shadowy street leading to the Newburgh white way.

"I suppose you think I'm an awful coward," said Roberts as they walked.

"I'm not always. I've had my share of danger. There's some kinds I haven't dodged. I fought a man with a pistol placed in the middle of a table. You stand two feet away, and at a signal the man who gets the gun uses it."

"Did you cheat?" asked Stanton.

"Not much. Just enough to keep him from cheating more. But I didn't shoot him."

"Afraid to?"

"No. I couldn't shoot a man who didn't have a gun."

"I hope he appreciated it."
"He took a shot at me a half-hour later, and then I had to wing him."

"Here's the Great White Way," said the lieutenant as they turned into the brilliantly lighted main street of the newer Newburgh on the top of the bluff above the old town which starts at the river's edge. "Here's the Chaplin nearest. We'll take the first show here, and John Gilbert next."

"You're a curious copper."
"You may be right there, mister, but it isn't because I like the movies. It's because I do dumb things. You're probably one of them."

Roberts was amused by "Charley's Aunt," but he was depressed by "Twelve Miles Out."

"Cheerful lot of gore, that finish," he said as they walked back to the hotel. "Looked like Blair and Ashley shooting each other's heads off. They would grin and yell at each other just that way. Ghastly pair of crooks. I never knew Blair to have the slightest compunction in anything he ever did. Nor Ashley either. Something they did to Turner got us in this mess."

"Meaning sixty thousand dollars a year for you?"

"I need the money because I've got it, if you can figure that out. I'd be well off if I'd never heard of it. What do you want to do, smoke a cigar in the lobby or turn in? I feel restless."

"I'll smoke a cigar with you, but I'm not restless and I'm about ready for sleep."

"Lucky cuss you are, Stanton. Got nothing to make you nervous or restless."
"I've got you."

"I said lucky cuss. You might have Blair. I once saw him strangle a black boy in Haiti who tried to slice him. Did it slowly, as if it were a pleasure."

"What did you, the six of you, do to Turner?" the lieutenant asked. "I'm going to make you come clean on that sooner or later."

"I don't know anything about it, whatever it was. I swear I don't."
"All right. It will be later, then."
"Did I tell you I've telegraphed for a drawing room or compartment when we pick up the train at Albany? I'll not trust an open Pullman. I'll get a magazine and go up to the room with you now if you want to."

He went to the cigar and magazine counter and came back with several periodicals. He looked about as they stepped into the elevator and glanced each way in the traverse hall on their room floor. When their door was locked he seemed relieved.

The lieutenant made ready for bed. "I'll only keep this reading lamp on," said Roberts. "That won't disturb you, will it?"

"No, nothing will disturb me," said the lieutenant, stretching out.

Later he was awakened by Roberts who was shaking him. When he opened his eyes in a daze Roberts signaled him to be silent.

"Listen," he said.
Stanton raised himself and saw that Roberts had a pistol in his hand. "The door," said Roberts. He spoke in a whisper.
For a second or two Stanton did not hear anything. Then there was the sound unmistakably of a key touching the lock outside. Apparently some one was trying to put it in the key-hole blocked by the key inside. As soon as this was beyond doubt the lieutenant got out of bed.

"What are you doing?" Roberts asked nervously.
"See who it is," said Stanton.
"Wait, where's your gun?"

"I don't need a gun," said Stanton, as he turned the key and pulled the door back.

Roberts instantly stepped behind him. The door opened on a whirl of liquor and a fat man who blinked. Stanton looked at him and smiled.

"Wrong room, brother," he said. The fat man's expression seemed to contradict that statement. He said nothing, but he stood his ground and blinked.

"Wrong room," the lieutenant repeated.
The fat man then looked at the metal disk attached to his key.

"Six-ten," he said to prove he was right.
"Five-ten. Wrong floor."
"Wrong floor? Not possible. That is six."

"Go to the elevator and begin all over."
"All right. I'll be back here. Six-ten."

"You come back here, and I'll pinch you. I'm a copper. On your way, brother. Take some advice of the elevator boy."

Stanton closed and locked the door. "Do you think that fellow was drunk?" Roberts asked.

"I wouldn't be so sure he was," said Stanton as he got into bed.

"I'd say he wasn't."
"He probably was. Touch of acting about him, but probably he had made a mistake in his floor and was trying to cover by seeming more stupid than he was."

"The Door," said Roberts.

"You're a good old Dogberry yourself, Stanton. That fellow had a purpose. He may have been only a bird dog. I never saw him before, but then they wouldn't use a fellow I ever had. If I had opened the door, myself you'd have been awakened sooner or later. It probably would have been by a draft through the open door, and you'd have stepped on me when you got up. They're working on the case. You can bet on that."

Stanton's response was to roll over in his bed and breathe heavily. From that on Roberts' troubles were his own until morning.

On the way to breakfast Roberts had Stanton turn aside with him to the desk.

"We were disturbed last night," he said to the clerk. "I have reason to question the explanation given by the disturber. We are in room five-ten. He insisted it was room six-ten. He had a key. Who occupies room six-ten?"

The clerk hesitated as if about to refuse to give the information. Stanton perceived his reluctance and supported Roberts.

"In the circumstances," said Stanton, "it is a fair question. As Mr. Roberts says, we were disturbed and were not satisfied with the explanation."

"Have you made any complaint?" the clerk asked. "I have been on duty only a half-hour."

"It isn't necessary to make a complaint," said the lieutenant. "We just want some information."
The clerk decided to give it. He looked at his board.

Rules for Pharmacist Under "Bluff King Hal"

A prominent pharmacist and physician of Henry VIII's reign named Bulleyn, who is said to have been a cousin of Anne Bolleyn, one of the king's numerous wives, laid down these rules for the practice of pharmacy, wrote Charles H. LaWall in "Four Thousand Years of Pharmacy":
"The apothecary must first serve God; foresee the end, be cleanly, and pity the poor. His place of dwelling and shop must be cleanly, to please the senses withal. His garden must be at hand with plenty of herbs, seeds, and roots. He must read Dioscorides.

"Room six-ten is occupied by Mrs. H. C. Carroll, of Providence, and her daughter."

"And room four-ten?"
The clerk turned again to his board.

"Room four-ten by J. D. Adams, of Des Moines. That is Mr. Adams at the other end of the cigar counter." He indicated a man of slender build who was selecting a cigar.

"Our visitor could not have had either room. He was fat. He was, or pretended to be, confused by drink."
"Is it something the management should take up?" the clerk asked.

"No," said Stanton, "we are leaving today. It was only an incident, but we were curious."

"Just another thing," said Roberts. "Lieutenant Stanton was moved yesterday from the room he was occupying—what was it, Stanton?"

"Three-twelve."
"To room five-ten. Would the register still show him in three-twelve? Let's see if it does."

He turned back the pages of the book and found the line where Stanton had registered.

"Yes, it does. Who had room three-twelve after six o'clock?"
The clerk again turned to the board.

"Mr. Peter L. Ashe, of Albany," he said.
"Ask Mr. Ashe, will you, when you see him, if he was aroused last night. We are going in to breakfast. Try to find out from him."

"It seems to me I should know why I'm making inquiries of our guests. If it is a serious matter the manager should be informed."

"If it's a matter of any importance it's only to us," said Stanton, "or may be. It's not likely to be to the hotel or to anyone else. Ask Mr. Ashe. Or we'll do it if you don't want to. You'll have a better opportunity."

"If I see him I will," said the clerk. At breakfast Roberts explained that he had not registered his name but had assumed another. He was not on the books as himself. If the fat man had been a bird dog he would not have found Roberts, but he would have found Stanton. If the occupant of room three-twelve had any experience with a fat visitor or intruder it would make the incident at room five-ten understandable in only one fashion.

"Then you'll admit," said Roberts, "that they have begun. They've gone at it quick. The very night of the day they find me here."

"I've been encouraging your ideas too much," said the lieutenant. "They're improbable. The only reason I've taken any of them in is because I'm a bit fanciful myself. And I've known the copper type which won't see at all with the mind's eye. Eat your bacon and eggs, man. I don't want to take only a package of coffee and gin back home. Put a little food around your ribs."

"You still think I'm yellow, don't you?"

"I'm not wasting much time thinking about it. You probably know yourself better than I ever will. But if half the things you think are true happen to be true you'll need both nerve and luck to get through."

"I'll get by. I'm going out into the far Pacific. I'll get a couple of Malay knife-men who will be millionaires in their own coin as long as I'm alive. A few flower girls to go along with them. Some Chinese music and the Temple bells. Sixty thousand a year. It won't be so bad."

When they came out of the dining room a bellboy asked them to speak to the clerk.

"I saw Mr. Ashe," said the clerk. "He says he was called on the telephone some time after midnight and asked if he was Lieutenant Stanton. He said no and that was all."

"That's satisfactory," said the lieutenant. "It explains all we need know. Thank you."
"We'll pack and get out," said Roberts as they came to their room.

"Pretty plain what was up last night. Your Dogberrys must have stuck with Blair and Ashley for about two minutes. I thought you were rather simple about that."

"Mister, I'm always simple," said Stanton. "It's my trusting nature. Did I mention the fact that I'm not a detective?"

"You don't need to mention it. Why don't you call up the police here and ask them what they mean?"

"What they mean what?"
"Where Blair and Ashley are? What do you think we're interested in?"

"I don't give a d—n where Blair and Ashley are just now."
"Well, I do. There's a train up from Beacon on the other side of the river at ten. We're taking it. We'll get started moving and keep moving."

From then on until Stanton had him behind the drawing room door in the car of the train they took in Albany his nervousness increased. It had become acute just before train time. He was certain that he had sight of Blair and Ashley in the station.

Prized Gray Hairs

Went Into Discard

A young advertising man has long been handicapped by the fact that, while young, he is not nearly so young as he looks. His youthfulness of appearance has often caused persons in authority—such as traffic policemen—to treat him with a degree of condescension rather painfully noticeable. His office boy, whose appearance is one of slightly premature maturity, is everywhere treated by subway guards, box office employees and garage attendants with infinitely more respect than he ever can achieve.

This persistent youthfulness has worried him, mildly, for ten years or more. It was, therefore, with something near real pleasure that he welcomed the first gray hairs. He envisioned himself as, at long length, attaining the dignity of appearance he had come to covet—partly because so many people absent-mindedly addressed him as "boy." The gray came along nicely. It spread along the sides of his head. He approached maturity. Then his wife, embarking on one of her periodical campaigns to smarten him up, insisted that he keep his hair cut shorter. He explained the need to the barber.

He emerged from the shop pleased with the idea that he now looked like an alert young executive. He dropped in at a soda fountain and sat waiting the busy dispenser. Finally the dispenser, a lad of about twenty, turned to him.

"And what is yours, young man?" he inquired.

The advertising man looked in the mirror. The barber had cut the gray away.—New York Sun.

Long Hearstone Fire

Fifty years ago Ephraim Scroggs, pioneer Statesville (N. C.) resident, started a fire in his home on his wedding night and the fire has been kept burning continuously ever since. In the fifty years, Ephraim and his wife spent one night and one day away from home, but each time the fire was so well banked that it did not go out.

Young BODIES DEMAND it!

The bodies of all growing children require certain essential vitamins. Important among these are Vitamins A and D, both of which are found abundantly in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. "A" helps youngsters—and their parents, as well—resist common colds, the flu, and aches and pains in the growth and in the development of bones and teeth. In this emulsified form, cod liver oil is easy and pleasant for young and old to take. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. Sales Representative, Harold F. Ritchie & Co., Inc., New York.

FROZEN NORTH TO SUNNY SOUTH

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Smartly Tailored Is Spring Edict

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It is smart to be tailored this spring, but tailored "just so," with regard to all the little elegancies and niceties which go to make up a perfect tailor. There is an air of sophisticated simplicity about the new spring suits which bespeaks the touch of master hands. There is a subtlety in the handling of color, texture and details which satisfies the critical eye at a glance.

True, there is no lack of novelty in the realm of the suit, this season, a great play being made on military types reflecting the spirit of the Washington bi-centennial celebration. This trend involves high-waisted, double-breasted silhouettes and works out patriotic color schemes in navy, with white, with red or buff. However, these novel expressions do not detract from the prestige of the conservative types which though not startlingly new as to "lines," nevertheless carry a this-season conviction in matter of striking woolsens and other materials of which they are fashioned with especial emphasis being placed on the up-to-dateness of the accessories worn with them.

In the matter of details which give "class" to the spring tailored suit we would especially call attention to the blouse worn with the good-looking tailleur posed in the foreground of the picture. It is one of the very much talked-of Irish crochet blouses which may be worked either of mercerized cotton thread or of thin woolen yarn. Women who crochet are making their own, although, if one prefers to buy, the shops are displaying very attractive types. Those crocheted of mercerized cotton tub beautifully. The new fashion advocates pastel pinks and blues for these in Irish lace crochet stitch or in simple square mesh. It adds greatly to their appeal from a practical standpoint that they are color-perfect when it comes to laundering. The suit itself is of royal blue wool crepe finished with self-colored buttons. The fetching little street hat is also blue trimmed with a chou of milliner's velvet, which is tres chic seeing that many of the smartest chapeaux this season are straw with either a velvet bow or a velvet crown or at least a touch of velvet somewhere in their makeup.

Again, in the tweed suit illustrated to the right we see the vogue for blue emphasized, and in a very new way. In that the loose-woven and quite sheer woolen material which fashions it interweaves black with a bright blue, adding a scarf of powder blue, a black leather belt completing the color alliance. The hat is a black rough straw with velvet twist and bow over the right eye—thus again is the importance of velvet on spring straws stressed.

There's a revelation of new ideas in the suit shown to the left in the group. In the first place it is tailored of cornflower blue corduroy, a material which is staging a triumphant comeback, in that leading designers are sponsoring it for coats, for the little separate jackets, for pajama costumes as well as for sleeveless two-piece tennis frocks. Then, too, the fact that this suit is a tailleur a la militaire is significant. The military influence is going strong in fashion's realm at the present moment. Braid trimmings, wide shoulders, epaulettes and metal buttons galore together with red, white and blue color schemes are sounding the patriotic note throughout all fashiondom. It is the dropped yoke and diagonal-cut raglan sleeves which give smart width to the shoulders of this stunning corduroy model. Brass buttons and the trig, high-waisted belt add martial flavor.

Fashion has gone that patriotic that even the stars and stripes are used in a trimming way. A new silk jacket suit in the junior department has a striped scarf and four star-shaped buttons. Young girls are wearing red and white printed blouses with their blue suits accentuating the military theme with the addition of a red, white and blue scarf.

SANDALS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, STYLE

Sandals for all occasions is the decree of shoe designers who have looked over the summer trends. And the more original the material out of which the sandal is made the better.

Sports sandals are shown in pastels, suva, linen, shantung and basket weaves, combined with a touch of leather. The linen and shantung are the only fabrics used alone. Buck, calfskin kid are the predominating leathers.

But bright colors combined with white will be in good taste this season—red, green, blue and the pastel shades may be used for striping, piping and heels of the new spectator-sports shoes.

And for evening, sandals go cut out that you practically have no shoe at all with be the rage. These will be shown in every possible fabric to match your gown.

Epaulettes New Effect in Silhouette Gowns

The slim, soldierly silhouette is certainly the darling of the French dress-makers this season. Epaulettes in some form or another and trim, strict lines convey the wooden soldier effect.

These are sometimes designed simply on top of the shoulder seam to tip the point, but more frequently lap over into short tabs. Reminiscent of Elizabethan shoulders in one instance, the motif changes to a twisted roll of the material.

A tiny jacket closing in sharply at the waist resembles a caraco, the brief jacket worn by the French peasant woman. It comes in velveteen and is worn over a fine wool frock. Short cap sleeves over long ones give width at the shoulders.

MODISH WHITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The supremacy of white for sports-wear has already been established in winter resorts, the same setting precedent as to what will be worn later on when spring leads into summer. The attractive two-piece dress pictured is a likable style, fashioned of white corduroy. White, usually impractical because of cleaning expense, meets budget requirements in corduroy because it can be so easily successfully washed.

DAIRY

POINTS OF VALUE TO DAIRY FARMER

Owners Advised to Increase Their Herds.

"While we realize the value of milk as a food and know that there should be at least one cow for every five persons in the state, we should not overlook the opportunities provided in increasing the number of cows in all sections of the state," suggests John A. Arey, dairy extension specialist at the North Carolina State college. "In nearly every part of the state there is the opportunity to increase the number of cows so that the cream and milk may be sold. Farm dairying offers first a sure monthly cash income; second, profitable employment for farm labor throughout the year; third, a good market for home-grown feeds; fourth, a system of farming that will check erosion and build up the fertility of the land, and, fifth, cash returns from pasture land that would otherwise be idle."

These five points were also recommended by committees of farmers at the regional agricultural meetings which have been held in the state, says Mr. Arey. For a person to engage in the selling of cream or milk, he should have a unit of not less than five cows, for the expense of collecting either milk or cream from smaller herds is rather heavy.

To further develop the dairy industry, Mr. Arey says the committee recommended feeding liberally of a balanced ration made up almost entirely of home-grown feeds. Plenty of grazing in the form of permanent pasture and cover crops to last throughout the year where possible, was suggested. A good cow will need from 1,800 to 2,000 pounds of grain for one year.

Then, finally, good purebred dairy sires should be used to gradually build up the herd to a higher point of production and profit.

Wheat Inferior to Corn in Dairy Cows Ration?

Ground wheat does not appear to be as good as ground corn for feeding dairy cows. Experiments seem to indicate that wheat cannot replace corn pound for pound with equally good results from the standpoint of milk production. My own suggestion is that the wheat should not exceed 50 per cent of the grain ration and, better still, should not amount to more than 25 per cent. A grain mixture of half wheat and half corn would likely give you as good or better results than either wheat or corn alone. A grain mixture including bran is preferable. Two parts corn, 1 part wheat and 1 part bran would be a good mixture. Even such a mixture is likely to be low in protein and an even better formula would be to have 2 parts corn, 2 parts wheat, 1 part bran and 1 part cottonseed meal.—E. P. Davis, in the Nebraska Farmer.

Treatment for Garget

The way to handle garget is, first, to remove the diseased cow from the herd in order to prevent the spread of the disease to other animals. Milk diseased cows only after the other cows have been milked and milk the diseased quarter last. Do not milk on the floor. Milk in a utensil and throw it outside the barn at a spot where the cows cannot have access to it. Massaging the injured quarters helps. Camphorated oil or hot water can be used, although the rubbing is what does the most good. Milking affected quarters as often as possible, even as often as every three hours seems to help.

General treatment consists of reducing the feed perhaps to the extent of cutting out all grain for a day or two, and giving the animal a laxative, preferably from half to three-quarters of a pound of epsom salts.—American Agriculturist.

Beet Pulp for Dairy Cows

Most dairymen think it is necessary or at least desirable to soak beet pulp before feeding it to cows. Investigators at the United States dairy experiment station at Beltsville, Md., found that dry beet pulp gave as good results as the soaked beet pulp. In the experiment the cows were watered twice a day. The beet pulp when fed either wet or dry was mixed with the grain ration. The ration containing the dry beet pulp was fully as palatable as that containing the wet pulp. The cows when fed the dry pulp ate as much hay and gave as much milk as when fed the wet pulp. The gains in weight were a little greater when the cows received the wet pulp than when they were fed dry pulp.

Care Helps Also

In the winter season I find the cows do best when good care is added to a well mixed ration. I think certain that every cow in the herd has the ration on which she will give the most milk; but also see to it that they have plenty of water at the time they want it and are in every way comfortable. Worry over poor nutrition and cold stables and scant bedding requires energy that does not go into profits.—Arthur Frazier, in the Michigan Farmer.

Meal That Lingers in One Doughboy's Memory

Your discussion of breakfast as a possible contender for the position of "best meal of the day" (writes G. W. E.) reminds me of a breakfast I had in the army once that was a best meal. I had been out driving an ambulance over muddy French roads between Bar-le-Duc and Marquenterre for a day and a night, with nothing to eat but a can of sardines and a spare tank full of frog beer. I got back to camp about ten in the morning and found the cook away getting raitaillement for dinner. Well, I was so empty I could see my skeleton without an X-ray, so I rummaged through the trailer kitchen for solid grub. All I could find was a big pan of cold baked army-and-navy beans—Also a quart of maple syrup. Together they went and down they went and that was my best meal that day or any day.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Bad Language

A new family had moved into the neighborhood and Jack, accompanied by his dog, made a call. He came home disgusted and said:
"Mother, I wouldn't have anything to do with that lady, she says cursing words. When I went on the porch she said; 'Don't let that dirty cur come on my clean porch.'"

Daniel Webster Relic

A Boston directory issued to Daniel Webster in 1827 and bearing his signature has been found in the files of Sampson & Murdock, publishers of the Boston directory at present. The book listed 12,000 persons and their occupations, compared with 430,000 in the 1931 issue.

Self-love is a great flatterer.

These thick, safe suds give whiter washes!

THERE are all degrees of whiteness. If you want to see the very whitest white that clothes can be—just try Rinsol!

Rinsol gives rich, creamy-lasting suds even in the hardest water. Dirt loosens—soaks right out. Clothes come so white they don't need to be boiled. Even grimy cuffs and edges come snowy with little or no rubbing. Clothes last much longer!

Cup for cup, thrifty Rinsol gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—it's so compact. And no softener needed! It's so safe, the makers of 40 washing machines recommend it.

ENGLISH and PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASSES

The English 4 class has just finished studying one of the most important periods in English Literature from the standpoint of the number of famous authors whose work come in this period. We have made the acquaintance of Burns, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Scott, Byron, Shelley and Keats.

Knowing how important news is in our modern life the English 3 classes are interested in reading parts of one of the earliest English newspapers, "The Spectator." We feel that Addison and Steele must have been rather unusual editors to have their paper become real literature.

The Public Speaking students are trying their ability as impromptu speakers. Their first bit of this work was on topics concerning this school so that no research work was necessary. Slips of paper on which topics had been written were drawn, each speaker speaking on his topic for two minutes after having had some time to collect his thoughts. It is being seen that such kind of speaking will be the most commonly used later on.

Last week one topic for discussion from "The Scholastic" magazine dealt with various literary shrines of the world. This week everyone may enjoy a trip in imagination by the aid of some interesting picture of such literary shrines on our bulletin board.

BASKETBALL GAME

In the District Tournament at Charlevoix, March 4, East Jordan's red and black had the opportunity to play against Charlevoix's red and whites because East Jordan drew a bye to play the winner of the Charlevoix-Harbor Springs game.

The game was a good one all the way through with the boys up to their usual spirit of winning, and we only hoped that there had been a few more minutes to play to have made the score for East Jordan instead of for Charlevoix as it happened to be. When the whistle blew the score was in favor of Charlevoix 19-18. We all can see by that that it was a game worth seeing and a hard fought one at that. Besides the determination of the boys there was also a lot of anxiety and spirit aroused by the students and also the townspeople.

Many of the boys are all through playing basketball for East Jordan and we are sorry that they have to leave but we are hoping that the boys who are on the team now and are coming in next year will make as good a showing as some of these boys have.

CLASS GAMES

The different classes have been playing against each other for the last week and the Sophomores played the Freshman but it looks as though the Freshmen had a better team than the Sophs. The Juniors and also the Seniors are playing against the other classes and we hope that they can show the other classes how to play. The results will be given later.

Smelt-Smelt What Are They?

Many of the boys and even girls are finding a lot of fun in that great sport that is visiting our vicinity in the last few nights. Although the weather has been zero some of the time, all are out for a good time and also for a mess of smelt in smelt fishing.
