VOLUME 36

EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, APRIL 1, 1932.

NUMBER 14

New Supt. of Public Schools

E. E. WADE OF ALPHA, MICH., HERE NEXT SCHOOL YEAR.

At a meeting of the School Board of East Jordan Rural Agricultural School District held recently, E. E. Wade, Superintendent of the Mastodon Township Schools at Alpha, Mich., was selected to succeed Supt. A. J. Duncanson who resigned a few weeks ago. Mr. Duncanson's term expires at the end of the present school year, and Mr. Wade's duties will start next fall.

Mr. Wade is well qualified for the position at East Jordan and comes well recommended.

In College training he received an A. B. degree at Indiana State University, Bloomington, Ind., in 1917. An M. A. degree at Columbia University, New York City, 1923. Since then he has done post graduate work at the Chicago University.

In teaching and administrative experience he was teacher of rural schools in Indiana for three years. Principal Consolidated High School at Cutler, Ind., three years. Teacher mathematics and biology, Male High School, Louisville, Ky., two years. Teacher of educational subjects, School of Education, Tri-State College, Angola, Ind., summer quarter, 1923. Superintendent of Mastodon Township Schools, Alpha, Mich., since September, 1924.

The Mastodon Township Schools is a township unit system in Iron County of the iron mining district of the Upper Peninsula. The school there has sixteen teachers, operates three buses and is considered up-to-date.

Supt. Wade is 41 years old, married and has two children. In sports he plays baseball, basketball and tennis.

BISON NOW THRIVE IN CANADA'S PARKS

Herd Brought From Montana Increases Manyfold.

Ottawa.—Bison Americanus is doing well in Canada. Rescued from what seemed certain annihilation, watched and guarded and encouraged by the government, its progeny now are so numerous that it became necessary recently to slaughter 1,500 of them.

Bison Americanus, of course, is the buffalo, which is thriving now in this country, although the herds are numbered in hundreds and thousands where once their ancestors roamed the great plains of the Middle West in uncounted millions. They wandered in great armies when the white men came to North America, they were found over one-third of the continent, and there are records of them massed on a front of 25 miles to a depth of 50 miles.

Once Almost Extinct.

Their decimation is an old story. In 1870 they were plentiful; by 1880 they were becoming scarce; in another decade they were all but gone. At the turn of the century, so far as was known, there was not a single wild buffalo left in Canada save one herd of 2,000 of the so-called "woodland type" which had its feeding grounds in the then almost inaccessible country south of Great Slave lake.

Today the great Buffalo National Park near Wainwright, Alberta, maintains between 5,000 and 6,000 of these magnificent animals. Nearly 7,000 have been transported north to join the wood buffalo in the Great Slave lake pastures, where also they are under the protection of the government, and in the past nine years some 7,500 have been slaughtered.

The Story of a Herd.

Canada's experiment in buffalo conservation dates from 1907, when the government purchased 710 of these animals from Michael Pablo, a shrewd half-breed of Pablo, Mont., a small herd which has increased almost 30-fold since that time.

By 1923 Wainwright park had the full quota of 5,000 buffalo which was the number set as its most efficient maximum, and surplus animals were slaughtered. In another year the overflow from the park was sent to the Great Slave region. Since that time both means have been adopted to keep the number within bounds.

The surplus buffalo transferred to the Great Slave by rail and scow live in a vast game preserve of 10,500 square miles, said to be the largest of its kind on the continent.

The slaughtering of buffalo helps in a small way toward reimbursing the government for its expenditures in behalf of the herd.

GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES WERE SUCCESS

The simultaneous Good Friday services held in Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan were the finest example of religious co-operation there has ever been in Charlevoix County.

In each City the places of business were closed and large gatherings were assembled. In East Jordan the Presbyterian Church auditorium and the side room were both well filled. While people were free to come and go during the singing of any hymn the great majority of worshippers in all three places remained for the entire service.

Eleven ministers participated in these services. By leaving when through speaking in one church and going by appointed schedule to another city it was possible for each city to have a service with seven different ministers taking part.

CROP PRODUCTION LOANS MAY BE APPLIED FOR NOW

Plans have been definitely made to handle applications for crop production loans beginning the first of April and up to the first of May.

To facilitate the securing of loans, it is suggested that you get in touch with the crop production loan committee which consists of W. G. Corneil, East Jordan; Wm. Sanderson, Ironton; and Richard Paddock, Charlevoix. In addition to the above committee, County Agent, B. C. Mellenkamp of Boyne City also has the application blanks and materials necessary to handle the loan. If interested, get in touch with your nearest committee man and secure further particulars.

It must be remembered that these loans must be repaid by Nov. 30 1932 and that the money borrowed cannot be used to pay up old indebtedness or to buy additional machinery and equipment. In the application, you must absolutely inform the committee as to how this money is to be used.

The loans are made on an acre basis with limits set as to the amount per acre for certain crops.

The committee wishes to make the statement that they are not setting up this machinery with the hope of encouraging people to go in debt, but rather to help a farmer who is unable to buy seed, oil and gas for his tractor, or fertilizers and spraying materials, etc., to efficiently produce a crop this season. Furthermore, it is quite generally known that it is highly difficult to borrow money or to receive additional credit and in that case, this crop production loan may be just the remedy for this situation.

Blind to "See" Usual Print by New Device

Paris.—Two French inventors, MM. Thomas and Conland, have devised an apparatus by which ordinary print can be made legible for the blind.

The apparatus is called the photo-electrograph. A ray of light is made to pass over the printed page and as each letter is illuminated the corresponding letter is presented in relief and in magnified form in another part of the machine, where the blind reader identifies it by touch.

Not only ordinary print, but Braille can be read with the machine; in the latter case it has the advantage that the Braille characters can be printed with ink on a smooth page and need be no larger than ordinary type, thus reducing Braille types to a convenient size and making them cheaper and easier to produce than hitherto.

Women Rolled in Wax to Reduce Their Weight

London.—Many are the lengths to which women will go in search of that fickle lady—Beauty.

The latest is a reducing idea by which the "victim" is covered from head to foot with hot wax. She is then rolled in grease-proof paper, just as if she were a cake, and looking nothing so much as like a huge candle, and left for half an hour.

The effect is rather like a Turkish bath, except that the hair is not affected. The treatment is said to be drastic, but is guaranteed to take off three pounds at one waxing.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation of the many acts of kindness and words of sympathy extended by friends and neighbors during the illness and death of our son. Also thank the Rebekah and Odd-fellow Lodges, and those who sent floral offerings.

VALUABLE POINTERS GIVEN TO FRUIT GROWERS

The visit of D. H. Hootman, Fruit Specialist, was enthusiastically received by a splendid attendance from all sections of the county.

At the Boyne Falls Agricultural Day program held on March 22, fully 200 people heard his message. Much of his time was spent in discussing the merits of raspberries and strawberries in making an additional income on the average farm. He discussed briefly the main factors to consider in making a success of the small berry business.

At Eveline Orchards on the forenoon of March 23, 20 farmers attended a pruning demonstration on cherries and apples. Mr. Hootman pruned dozens of trees to demonstrate the principles of proper pruning. A person many times is more apt to over-prune than under-prune so it largely resolves itself to using good judgment. The main objection is to eliminate undesirable limbs and to take out limbs that interfere with others and to take out where the growth is thick.

An attendance of 59 heard Mr. Hootman in the afternoon in East Jordan where he talked upon the many problems facing the growers of raspberries, strawberries, cherries and apples. From the use of charts he was able to show the audience what the situation is today and what may be possible for any fruit raiser to do to become successful.

In regard to cherries the surplus has been practically all used up so that the cherry man faces the year of 1932 with a clean slate. While prices, of course, will not be favorable, they will justify a man in taking good care of his orchard and in using a good spraying program.

Gives Rules for People Who Have Weak Hearts

Buffalo, N. Y.—Dr. Franz M. Groedel, German heart specialist, gave 12 commandments to be followed by persons having or fearing heart trouble.

1. Avoid all disturbance of the heart and circulatory system.
2. Eat often, but never too much.
3. Avoid overuse of nicotine.
4. Use very little alcohol, and drink only weak coffee.
5. Take exercise by walking, riding, or golfing; but do so in moderation.
6. All exercise should be regarded as a remedy and not a sport.
7. Rest in the middle of every day.
8. Take excitement in moderate doses and be complete abstainer from extreme excitement.
9. Spread your vacations through the year.
10. Take one day a week of rest, and, if possible, get into the country.
11. Follow your physician's advice.

Rats From Idle Ships Form Vast London Army

London.—London is suffering from a minor rat plague. It is estimated that there are 23,000 rats to every square mile here and it is said that the number is increasing.

The increase largely is due to disease-carrying ship rats, which have taken up residence ashore. Twenty years ago the proportion of sewer rats to ship rats was about nine to one. The figures are reversed now.

Various explanations are given. Principal among them is the number of ships lying idle at the docks, from which the rats are being driven by hunger. Once ashore, their superior agility and strength enable them to outst the sewer rat, and they remain and breed in their new quarters.

Strange Animal Puzzles People of Delta, Colo.

Delta, Colo.—Delta is trying to name the strange animal that ate its way through the walls of Paul Kinney's home and settled down as though it belonged there.

Experts said it was a catwampus, or ring tailed cat.

The creature had a head like a weasel, a body similar to that of a gray squirrel, and a tail, several inches longer than its body, ringed like that of a raccoon.

It had a very pointed nose, and sharp teeth. The fur was very soft.

Letter Is Delivered

Fall River, Mass.—A letter, with only a telephone number for an address, was delivered to the proper party by the Fall River post office.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I will be a candidate for the office of Supervisor of South Arm Township on Ticket No. 2 at the annual spring election to be held April 4th. Your support will be appreciated.

POMONA GRANGE WELL ATTENDED AT IROTON

Regular meeting of Pomona Grange met with Ironton Grange on Saturday, March 26. Richard Paddock, Master, opened the meeting. Community Singing. Flag salute was given.

Recess until evening. Ironton, Barnard and South Arm sang their new Grange songs, which we all enjoyed.

County Agent B. C. Mellenkamp entertained us with movie reels, loaned by the Conservation Department showing Isle Royal.

Short talks were given by members of the Chamber of Commerce of East Jordan relative to the consideration of having a Fair. Emmet County representative also spoke on the subject.

Next meeting will be on April 30, evening session only, at Boyne River Grange.

Six candidates were initiated in the 5th degree. Eight Granges represented in Charlevoix County, one from Emmet County. Total attendance 146. Banner goes to Rock Elm for having the largest attendance on percentage basis.

YOUNG SON OF WM. SCHRAEDER PASSES AWAY

William Thomas, 4½ years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Schraeder, passed away at the home of his parents in this city, Friday, March 25th, 1932, following a three weeks' illness from pneumonia.

"Billy" was born at East Jordan Oct. 13, 1927. Besides his parents he leaves a sister, Sarah, and a brother Robert, to mourn his untimely death.

Funeral services were held from the Presbyterian Church, Tuesday afternoon, March 29th, conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. W. Sidebotham. Interment at Sunset Hill.

Among relatives here to attend the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Attinger of Traverse City; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wolverson, Mr. and Mrs. S. Morrison of Boyne City.

"SOUP, SAND AND SAGEBRUSH"

The above title is the name of a Pageant that the Young People of the Presbyterian Church of Boyne City has given in their own church and in the Presbyterian Church of Petoskey. The pageant has a missionary flavor and the setting is a simple western home.

This Pageant will be given in the Presbyterian Church of East Jordan next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The Cantata, "Christ, the Victor," that was to be given next Sunday evening by the Charlevoix Congregational choir and some East Jordan voices has been postponed until the evening of April 10.

TWO GOOD ATTRACTIONS COMING TO TEMPLE THEATRE

Two fine motion pictures are scheduled to be shown at the Temple Theatre this coming week.

"DADDY LONG LEGS"

Tuesday and Wednesday, April 5-6

One of the best Cinderella stories ever written (and the whole world loves a Cinderella tale) has reached the talking screen in "Daddy Long Legs" with two of the most popular stars and a splendid supporting cast to put it over. Janet Gaynor does the best job she has done since "Seventh Heaven" and Warner Baxter gives another of his smooth, satisfying performances as the "Daddy Long Legs" to Miss Gaynor's Judy Abbott.

It is a picture that will satisfy almost anyone. It is good for the high school trade, for the family trade, for the down-town trade or the neighborhood trade. If you like your pictures smart there is plenty of smartness; if you like some tears prepare to shed them; if you prefer laughs you'll get your money's worth.

"Daddy Long Legs" is the story of the little orphan girl, Judy Abbott, who never remembered her parents, but has grown to beautiful young girlhood in an orphanage. There she is seen and adopted by Jervis Pendleton, a wealthy young bachelor who never permits her to know who is responsible for her good fortune. She only knows him by the name she has given him, "Daddy Long Legs." He sends her to a fashionable girls' boarding school where, in spite of her past, she becomes the most popular girl in the school. At her commencement she graduates magna cum laude and is the class valedictorian. Of course, Pendleton finds himself in love with her, and permits her finally to meet her "Daddy Long Legs" in one of the cleverest fade-out scenes in a long time.

"THE THIRD ALARM"

Thursday and Friday, April 7-8. Under auspices of East Jordan Fire Department.

Fire! Fire! An apartment house in flames. Heroic rescues by the firemen of men, women and children trapped in a flimsy structure while at their dinner. And when the walls crashed they buried beneath them only one person—one man who was the best liked member of the entire Fire Department and who has waiting at home for him a motherless young daughter and a baby son.

Dad Morton had gone into the smoke and flame time and again and brought out people unconscious from suffocation, but he went one time too many. He, who found life so good, had laid it down in the line of duty—and left two children to be sent to a Children's Home!

The story of Dad's children, Milly turning into a beautiful young woman, and Jimmy, just a baby, is told in "The Third Alarm" against a spectacular background of fire and heroics. This Tiffany special production is the attraction next Thursday and Friday, April 7th and 8th at the Temple Theatre, East Jordan, with Anita Louise playing Milly and James Hall portraying the fireman hero who appoints himself foster father to the children and then discovers he loves Milly and wants her for his wife.

Jean Hurst plays Dad Morton, Paul Hurst is a dumb fireman known as "Beauty," and Hobart Bosworth is the Captain. Others in the cast are Mary Moran, little George Billings, Nita Martan, Dot Farley, Walter Berry and Aileen Manning.

Never did advertising have such a story to tell as today.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I am a candidate for re-election to the office of Supervisor of South Arm Township at the annual spring election next Monday, April 4th. Your continued support will be appreciated.

Sportsman's Club Hold Election

DIRECTORS & OFFICERS ELECTED MONDAY NIGHT.

At a special meeting of the Jordan River Sportsman's Club held at the Library Building, Monday night a complete re-organization was effected.

The following Board of Directors was elected:

Three-year term, Dr. Charles H. Pray, Walter N. Langell, J. W. Loveday; two-year term, Mayor R. G. Watson, Barney Milstein, Kit Carson; one-year term, Samuel E. Rogers, Charles Strehl, Earl H. Clark.

The Directors elected the following Officers:

President, Samuel E. Rogers; first Vice President, Charles Strehl; 2nd Vice President, Dr. Chas. H. Pray; Secretary, J. W. Loveday; Treasurer, Earl H. Clark.

Attorney Walter N. Langell was appointed to draft a set of by-laws which will be presented to the Club for approval at its next meeting.

The following Committees were appointed: Publicity, J. W. Loveday, Lewis G. Corneil, George N. Secord; fish planting, Peggy Bowman, Chas. Strehl; game and birds, Leslie Miles and Oscar Weisler.

It was voted to ask each town having a smelt run to appoint a representative to meet with State representatives prior to the next session of the Legislature to plan regulations for the handling of smelt runs in their respective communities. The Club also went on record as opposed to the proposed shotgun shell tax.

The secretary was instructed to get in touch with the Conservation Department regarding the riddance of carp in local waters.

WILSON TOWNSHIP BOY SUCCESSFUL

William Raymond of School Dist. No. 4 is on his way to Russia in the employ of the Ford Motor Company. He has been employed as an architect for the Ford Motor Co., for several years, getting around $9.00 per day and a satisfactory bonus extra for the six months he is to be in Russia Superintending the construction of some of his blue prints.

The plant he will help construct is being done by Russian capital but supervised by Ford's architects.

Mr. Raymond has a Master degree as an Architect. He spent one year at the University of Michigan and studied in many Detroit institutions.

He was born in 1899, attended school in an old-fashioned one room log schoolhouse, two and one-half miles from home, over non-traveled roads, many times the snow was very deep. Some of his first teachers were Olive Murray, Lottie Carson, Emma Hausler and Belle Henning.

When but a small boy his home was destroyed by fire. The family suffered the loss greatly, the father, Eugene Raymond found it difficult to get food and clothing for the family of five children, and after William had finished the grades he worked his way through High School, making four years in three at East Jordan High School. He has worked day times and studied in night schools. He has never used tobacco or alcoholic drinks. While at home his mother taught him much about cooking as her health was very poorly. This was in his favor later as he earned many dollars to help him through school. He spent some time serving meals during Resort season at Charlevoix.

Many northern Michigan sportsmen remember him, as he spent several hunting seasons cooking for Dr. Parks and his hunting party while deer hunting in Upper Michigan.

He will be on the minds of many who wish him a success and a safe return to his wife and son, William, also his boyhood home, where the golden rule was not just taught but lived up to.

Compliments of School Board.

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Voters of Charlevoix Co.:

I wish to announce that in the September Primary Election I will be a candidate on the Republican Ticket for State Representative from Charlevoix and Leelanau Counties.

I believe that I am qualified by age, experience, and education to satisfactorily perform the duties of this responsible position.

I am a resident of Eveline Township, Charlevoix County. I own and operate the 40-acre orchard known as Cherry Hill Farm, where I have lived for the past ten years.

Scenes and Persons in the Current News

1—General Pershing receiving the first of this year's American Legion poppies from Mrs. Louise W. Williams, national president of the American Legion Auxiliary. 2—West Virginia's new capitol building in Charleston, which will be dedicated this spring. 3—Miss Eleanor P. Myers of Youngstown, N. Y., who has been crowned queen of the Niagara fruit belt and will reign over the apple blossom festival of Niagara and Orleans counties.

Scene in the Tornado-Swept Region of the South

More than three hundred persons were killed by a series of tornadoes that swept across five southern states, most of the fatalities being in Alabama. Our illustration, transmitted by wire, shows the wreckage of Professor Babcock's residence in Athens, Ga.

State News in Brief

St. Clair—Helen, 4-year-old daughter of Charles Moak, was burned seriously when her clothing caught fire as she played near a stove.

Port Huron—Henry Peterson, telephone lineman, died of injuries received when he fell from a pole near Wadhams. The buckle of his safety belt became unfastened and he fell 35 feet.

Alpena—When Rudolph Richards' radio went dead he examined it and found the charred remains of a mouse which had been electrocuted. The weight of the body bent a wire which put the machine out of order.

Howell—Mary Von Soest and Cella Cranston, both of Belmont, were injured seriously four miles west of Howell, when their car collided with one driven by R. McQuarrie, of Detroit. They were brought to a Howell hospital, unconscious.

Jackson—A pipe organ purchased by the contributions of inmates of the Michigan State Prison was installed in the chapel and dedicated on Easter Sunday. Maude Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, participated in the dedication.

Menominee—Charles Cherney, music store proprietor, has traded a used piano for a canary. Chris Meuer, goldfish and canary breeder, got the piano. "I didn't get a cage with the bird," said Cherney, "but I didn't give a box with the piano. The bird was priced at $3.50.

Adrian—Adrian has a new landing field four miles west of the city. The site has been leased by W. C. Underwood and Howard Hagerman, of Adrian, and it was inspected by Major Floyd E. Evans, of Detroit, director of aeronautics. Major Evans said that a state license would be issued as soon as two runways are completed.

Big Beaver—Ray C. Haney saved the lives of his three children and leaped to safety through their bedroom window, as fire swept through their cottage home. The house, its furnishings and the family's clothing were destroyed. He was $170 in currency. Mrs. Haney is in a hospital in the East. Haney had planned to send the money to her to permit an operation.

Petoskey—Ignoring danger signs placed in the vicinity of the new Levering-Carp Lake road relocation work now in progress, caused the death of Harry Fero, 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Fero, of Bliss township. Fero was struck in the head by a large piece of earth which was dislodged with a charge of dynamite. His skull was crushed and he lived only a few minutes.

Algonac—Dr. Oberholser, Washington, D. C., ornithologist, and Marquis Charlton, United States game warden, are here to assist Elgin C. McDonough, conservation officer, in saving wild ducks, which are dying off rapidly from lack of food. Hundreds of dead mallard ducks are found daily along the St. Clair River, in the Flats, at Pearl Beach and Anchor Bay. All food at this time of the year is deep in the water and mallards seem unable to dive deeply. Residents are putting grain on the ice for them.

Lansing—The 1932 Michigan Air Tour will be held the week of July 10-16 over an itinerary largely centered in the Upper Peninsula. Talbert Abrams, of Lansing, president of the association, has announced. Abrams was named permanent president to handle all future tours. Appearance of the name of Leslie Keegan, of Bay City, department commander of the American Legion—among the list of officers, indicated a possibility the Legion's sponsorship of the tour this year will remain permanent.

Owosso—The 12-grade, two-story brick school building at New Lothrop was destroyed by fire, causing a loss estimated at $45,000. The fire is believed to have started from the heating plant. No one was in the building.

Portland—An eastern textile concern may establish a branch factory in Portland if 500 persons, mostly women, can be located to supply its labor demands, the Portland Chamber of Commerce has announced. The chamber is canvassing Portland vicinity to determine the labor available.

Lapeer—Mrs. Forest Clark, of Caro, and Clarence Barber, of Lapeer, are in a serious condition in a hospital with injuries suffered in an automobile collision. Mrs. Clark was riding with Alan H. Rowley, of Lapeer, when his car collided with one driven by Fred Bullis, of Lapeer. With Bullis were Barber and Harold Crankshaw. Mrs. Clark suffered a skull fracture; Rowley, Crankshaw and Barber suffered leg fractures. Barber also has internal injuries. Police said Rowley turned out to pass a car and failed to get back on his own side of the road in time to avoid Bullis' automobile.

Jackson—When Joe Bronkovich, 37 years old, Grass Lake, came to the State Police post here to complain that his wife had deserted him for another man, Trooper Leon Hopkins was opening mail and was not much interested. When Bronkovich's photograph fell out of the letter he was opening, Hopkins thought the heebie-jeebles had him, but he shook them off long enough to slip handcuffs on the man. The deserted husband was identified as a bigamist who escaped from the Missouri State Prison, Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 2, 1926.

Millan—Construction of the new Federal prison farm north of here will start in May if bids fall within the congressional appropriation of $350,000.

Vassar—The accidental discharge of a shotgun which he was handling caused serious injury to Robert, 4-year-old son of Albert Deichman of Pigeon. Examination at a Saginaw hospital revealed nearly 100 shot in the boy's hip. His condition is critical.

Corunna—This city was without drinking water while river water was being pumped directly into the mains as a protection against fire and for uses other than drinking. The situation was brought about when the shaft in the electric pump broke far down in the well.

East Lansing—Poultry experts at Michigan State College are warning poultrymen in Michigan to beware of buying cheap chicks intended as producing fowl. Such practice is economically unsound, the college men say, for cheap chicks nearly always are found to lack characteristics that go to making paying egg layers. Poor breeding represents a yearly loss of $2.50 per fowl in the lessened production of eggs, it has been estimated by the college specialists.

Jackson—Joe Mora is in the hospital at the new Michigan State Prison with a knife wound in his face, while Frank Esparza is in a punishment cell as a result of a fight in the prison yard. The men were marching from the prison school to their cells when Esparza attacked Mora, according to prison officials. The knife has not been found. Mora was sentenced Dec. 4, 1931, to 1 1/2 to 5 years for carrying concealed weapons, while Esparza was sentenced to 2 to 5 years for manslaughter.

Lansing—It took 13 years for a letter to travel from the Secretary of State's office to Ann Arbor and back. Frank D. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, received on March 19, 1932, a certificate of automobile registration he mailed April 2, 1919, to C. J. Varshcrick, Ann Arbor. It was marked "unclaimed." Where the letter remained these many years is a mystery, as it evidently came out of hiding only this week. It was postmarked Ann Arbor, March 17 this year, and Jackson, March 18.

Lansing—Jurors may collect 10 cents a mile for their first and last trips between home and the courthouse, according to Atty.-Gen. Paul W. Voorhies, but daily trips back and forth during their period of service must be at their own expense. Voorhies' opinion is in keeping with the prevalent practice. The ruling applies to jurors of all kinds. If the attorney-general had held that daily trips should be at public expense, it would have cost the taxpayers many thousands of dollars a year.

Muskegon—Henry Wierengo, senior law student at Northwestern University, and son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wierengo, of Muskegon, will receive the entire $45,000 estate of Capt. John R. Freberg, who died in Chicago, Oct. 15. Young Wierengo met Freberg on the yacht Nalcone last summer and nursed him when he was ill. No written will was made, but Capt. Freberg, before he died, told attendants his property should go to Wierengo. The will was reduced to writing and has been admitted to probate.

East Lansing—Michigan State College has developed a new variety of peach marketable earlier than the Elberta, which promises to become popular on the Michigan market. It is the Halehaven, a cross between the Hale and South Haven varieties. The new peach was developed by horticulture experts at the South Haven experiment station of the college. Farmers interested in the new fruit are advised to test out the peach in limited quantities as growing conditions vary at different localities in the State.

Lansing—In an effort to prevent as much as possible the illegal taking of game fish, all conservation officers have been instructed to spend as much time as possible patrolling the streams during the Spring fish spearing season. The spearing season opened March 1, nearly double the amount of April 30 in the lower peninsula and May 15 in the upper peninsula. The open season permits the spearing of carp, suckers, redhorse, mullet, dogfish and garpike in non-trout streams without the use of an artificial light.

Ionia—A bandit chase in Indiana probably kept Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Tully and their three children from being trapped in a burning house. Mr. and Mrs. Tully had become interested in an Indiana police broadcast of a holdup and were sitting up late to follow the chase on the radio, when a motorist shouted a warning that the roof of their house was burning. As the motorist rushed away to call firemen, the Tullys struggled through the flames in an upstairs room to rescue their two daughters and a son, the oldest five.

Lansing—Michigan farmers had 9,738,000 bushels of potatoes in stock March 1, nearly double the amount of a year ago, according to Verne H. Church, United States Agricultural statistician. In 1931 the stock amounted to 5,006,000 bushels on the same date. Potatoes to find their way to the markets will represent a decided reduction under present stocks, Church said. Seed requirements will take between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 bushels, he estimated. In view of low prices, an unusually large quantity is expected to be fed to livestock.

"HOW JOHN SAVES MONEY . . . AND LIKES IT . . . !"

"In hard times it's possible to make a husband save money. But it's hard to make him like it. I've found a way."

"John used to smoke at least a package of ready-made cigarettes a day. I suggested that he roll his own, when hard times came. He sneered at the idea."

"I bought a package of Target and made John try it. Now he says he won't smoke anything else, because Target is real cigarette tobacco, just like the ready-mades use. He says those forty gummed papers you get free with every package would make any dub a good cigarette roller."

"Well, John's happy, and I'm happy, and we save at least 50¢ a week."

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government Tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

The Man Who "Brings 'Em Back Alive"

Frank Buck Holding a Tiger Cub

Frank Buck With a Young Gorilla

Frank Buck - "at His Most Civilized"

Frank Buck With a Baby Tapir

Frank Buck and "Baby Boo"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IF, a few years ago, a certain mother down in Texas had been more successful in performing the ceremony of "laying on of hands"—a ceremony familiar to innumerable mothers of innumerable active, venturesome little boys—then thousands of visitors to certain zoological parks in various parts of the United States would never have had the thrill of looking upon the only authentic man-eating tiger ever brought to this country, the biggest king cobra ever captured alive, two of the exceedingly rare Indian rhinoceroses and the tiniest baby elephant (just two feet and ten inches at the shoulder) ever brought across the seas.

But lest that statement appear to be too paradoxical let it be explained at once that she was the mother of Frank H. Buck, who as a collector of live animals, reptiles and birds, is without a peer in the world today. She had discovered her young son busily engaged in the capture of a big, angry, buzzing rattlesnake near the Buck home on the outskirts of Dallas, Texas, and the "laying on of hands" ceremony was observed forthwith to convince him that there were less dangerous ways for a lad of his years to earn money. (He was collecting rattlesnakes because an old doctor in Minneapolis, Minn., who manufactured a "magic snake oil," was in the market for the reptiles.)

Frank Buck will tell you that the ceremony was performed in a most thoroughgoing fashion. But it failed of its purpose. For from his earliest childhood wild animals and birds fascinated him and the desire to possess them was his mastering passion. So the mother who tried to shape the destiny of the foremost exponent of the art of "bringing 'em back alive" was due to be called from the beginning.

When the Buck family moved to Chicago, the boy, no longer able to capture small wild animals and birds as he had done on his native soil, haunted the Lincoln Park zoo and the pet stores in the big city, feasting his eyes on strange new animals and birds from far-off corners of the earth. What money he was able to save he invested in owning some of these birds—paying for one pair, incidentally, a price ten times as great as he himself could charge when years later he became a collector.

When he grew older Frank Buck's hobby took him to South America in search of rare birds. This was followed by a second trip to the southern continent and when he sold his collection of live birds he found the deal so profitable that he resolved to go in for wholesale bird and animal collecting. And that was the beginning of a unique career.

Today Frank Buck can go into almost any zoo in the United States or walk through the menagerie tent of any circus and, looking through the bars of the cages, greet the inhabitants thereof as an old friend. For it was he who brought that inhabitant from his native haunts to this place so that the thousands of Americans who have before only heard of the existence of some strange animal can see the animal in the flesh.

Obviously a man with such a record has had more than his share of thrills and narrow escapes from death. Obviously, too, an account of them could not be told within the space of this article any more than a full account of them could be told in the book "Bringing 'Em Back Alive," written by Frank Buck with Edward Anthony and published by Simon and Schuster. But there was space in that book to tell of the time Frank Buck found himself sliding into a pit with a man-eating tiger which he and his helpers were trying to get out of the pit into a cage; of the time one of his leopards escaped aboard ship and how he went into a cabin where the leopard was at bay and roped him; and of the time when a king cobra escaped from its cage and cornered him in a hut in his compound at Singapore.

Those are only three of the times when Frank Buck stared death straight in the eyes. There were many others. Perhaps the strangest of all of them was the time a tapir, ordinarily the meekest of all animals, tried to crush him to death with its six hundred pounds of weight and all but succeeded. Then there was the time when an orang-utan, the giant jungle-man of Malaya, was just ready to draw him into a death embrace with his powerful arms and then tear him to pieces with his teeth. There was just one chance to escape alive and Frank Buck took it. He's not a professional boxer, but when the orang came at him with outspread arms, Buck simply walked in and gave the jungle-man an uppercut on the point of the jaw that was as effective a k. o. as was ever demonstrated in the prize ring.

"Yes, I have had more than my share of thrills," Frank Buck will tell you. "But I am frank to say that these close calls do not represent a love of looking death in the eye. I am not that kind of adventurer. I take no unnecessary risks. When a man operates on as big a scale as I do he doesn't have to look for trouble. No matter how careful one is, something is bound to go wrong when live animals and reptiles are handled wholesale. It is then that experience counts."

And he might add that experience counts in other times than when something goes wrong and an adventurer such as he is looks death in the eye. A big game hunter has to think of saving only one life—his own. But a man who collects wild animals, as Frank Buck does, has to think of saving his own life and the animal's too. For the biggest king cobra, a giant orang-utan, an Indian rhinoceros, or a man-eating tiger is utterly valueless to a zoo or a circus if it is dead.

Experience counts, too, in keeping the animal alive after it has been captured. It may seem strange to call Frank Buck a dietitian. But that's exactly what he is and he is an expert in matters of diet to the most finicky epicures in the world. He can't guess how to accustom a wild animal to the change from the food which it eats in its wild state over to "civilized fare." He has to know! The capture of some rare wild animal may represent a great outlay of money and time, plus the ever-present element of danger to the collector. But if, after the beast is captured, its captor doesn't know how to keep it healthy, both physically and mentally, the whole investment of time and money and the potential value of the animal when it is delivered to the zoo or circus may be an entire loss.

Typical of some of the dietetic problems which Frank Buck has had to solve was the case of Baby Boo, the two-foot-ten-inch elephant which he brought back on one of his trips. So far as is known there has never been written any book on "The Care and Feeding of Infant Elephants." So when Frank Buck bought one from a party of Batiks in Sumatra and it was delivered to him in a half-starved, weak and wobbling condition there were no precedents for him to go by in determining what to do to keep from having a dead baby elephant on his hands. Here is what happened, as he tells it:

"My problem had just begun. I had to get some food into that elephant's belly—and without much loss of time. I sent Ali (his native assistant) out to scout around for a milk-goat. He brought one back and hurriedly milked it. I tried to pour some milk down the stubborn pachyderm's throat but I couldn't get her jaws open. Once or twice I managed to get them partly open but before I could pour the milk down she closed them again.

"I considered five or six different plans for feeding that animal, dismissing them as impractical as fast as they popped into my head. Then I got an idea that I thought was worth trying. The first step was to send Ali to a nearby clump to cut me a length of bamboo. As is commonly known, a stick of bamboo is made up of a series of joints, the wood being hollow between joints. Ali brought back exactly what I had sent him for, a piece of bamboo about two inches in diameter. I cut off a piece about nine inches long, leaving the joint to form the bottom. This gave me a device which I planned to use as a feeding tube. I sharpened the opening till it came to a point, and, satisfied that I was on the right track, I proceeded with the next step.

"Before this could be carried out we had to get our elephant (we practically carried her) to the shack where we had arranged to spend the night. I instructed Ali to bring some rice in water. When the rice was cooked, I mixed some goat's milk with it, the result being a thin but nutritious gruel. Then I proceeded to fill my bamboo with this substance.

"This done, Ali got his shoulder right under the elephant's forequarters till she was almost standing on her back legs. Then I forced the point of the bamboo tube between her tightly closed jaws, gradually working it in until I could tip it up and dump the contents down her throat. Stubborn to the last, she tried to keep from swallowing, giving in after a few seconds of gurgling. A second tubeful was prepared and the operation was repeated, this time the task proving less difficult. In all, I fed her three tubes of gruel that session.

"An hour later I put the obstinate little girl to bed, covering her up with some old gunny sacks. The following morning there was a definite improvement in her condition, some of the wobbliness having disappeared. We gave her her breakfast, repeating the performance with the tube. This time it was unnecessary to prop her up.

"A little later in the morning we put her on a bullock cart and took her back to Domji, from where she was transported, along with my other specimens to Singapore. We had no trouble feeding her en route, the bamboo feeding tube working perfectly."

One other item which a wild animal collector needs to have in his psychological equipment for following his profession is diplomacy. That Frank Buck has that is shown by the fact that some of his rarest specimens have been obtained because of his friendship with oriental potentates and his skill in handling the native peoples of the jungles where he has had to go to find his animals. Among these people Frank Buck is a great "tuan" (chief) and he is that to coolies in the Malay peninsula and to Indian rajahs. If he hadn't been he would never have been permitted to penetrate the forbidden jungles of Nepal, which is closed to white men, and bring back with him those two Indian rhinos which now have their homes in the New York and Philadelphia zoos.

If he hadn't been, it is doubtful if he would have been able to make the remarkable moving pictures which resulted from his last trip to the Orient. For it was a faithful coolie who came speeding to tell his "tuan" that a python was lying near a trail used by a tiger and that resulted in an epochal film record of a python-tiger fight, the like of which few white men have ever seen and none has ever before photographed.

For to cap his career of "bringing 'em back alive" Frank Buck has lately brought back a movie record of life in the jungle, which is as unique as the record of his career as a collector of wild animals. He also has brought back the memory of one of his narrowest escapes from death—the memory of being stalked by a tiger, of tripping and falling backward when the big cat hurled itself at him and of looking up and seeing the striped belly of the animal passing over him. "Yes, it was a rather close call," said Frank Buck in telling me of this incident. "But—well, you see we Lera, don't you?"

OLD CUSTOMS DIE HARD IN GERMANY

Peasants Still Adhere to Ancient Superstitions.

While there are many superstitions in Germany which appear to have a vogue and currency at Silvesternacht (New Year's Eve) and other special occasions, there are some that are tenaciously adhered to, particularly among the country people, throughout the year, due to the fact no doubt that the various favors sought are applicable to common and continuous human experience.

Among these irrational and illogical customs may be mentioned that of the Bavarian peasant who swings an ax against the trunk of any barren fruit tree on his farm, while his neighbor, standing near, intercedes, and seeks to avert its fate, by assuring the owner that the tree will soon bear fruit. Three times the ax is raised and three times the blow averted, the supposition being that the branches thus granted a new lease of life will repay such clemency with a lavish yield of pears or apples the coming summer.

Another custom, not such a difficult one to understand, is the laying of a pair of crossed hose beside the bed of a sick child. Others believe that while a stuffed owl guards the door, lightning, that peril of the husbandman, will never strike the barn. Some think that a gold ring, suspended by a string above an egg will, by some species of wizardry, disclose whether it will hatch out a cock or a hen. Then there are districts of Germany wherein it is an accepted hypothesis that one desiring to be cured of certain ailments need but crawl through the spokes of a wagon wheel. He will thus leave his sickness between them.

A fantastic notion of the old-time miller beguiled him into expectation of a prosperous year if on New Year's eve he threw some living animal into the mill-race. This practice, happily, is well-nigh obsolete.

Concluding this random miscellany with an instance similar to one or two already cited, it is firmly maintained by country-folk that a pear tree the trunk of which is crossed with bands of straw on Christmas eve will be especially prolific in its season.

Most of these beliefs, even the most illogical, are harmless, and when intended only to supplement, by a sort of rite or ceremony a steadfast diligence and patience, can surely do no mischief.—Berliner Tageblatt.

It was Peter Rainier who told me about emeralds. Mr. Rainier happens to have been born in Africa, but his great-great-grandfather was a British admiral. It was for this navy man that Vancouver named Mt. Rainier, in the state of Washington, the glacier clad peak you see from Paradise Inn, a resting place which was aptly christened, George Palmer Putnam, Johnny Held, Freddy O'Brien, Wallace Irwin, Charles Hanson Towne and I were there several years ago, and I never shall forget it. Just at present, Peter Rainier is at the Explorers' club, having come up from Columbia, where the emerald mine he is working is located.

To get to the mine from New York is a simple matter. All you have to do is to take a boat through the Panama canal and then go down the Colombian coast to some such place as Buenaventura. Then you take a train to Bogota, the capital. This takes only a couple of days and nights and you are theoretically at your destination. A hilly horseback ride of two additional days will bring you to the emeralds.

The emeralds are situated in some rock on top of a 9,000-foot mountain, but there is a bit of digging to be done before you can get at them. It is necessary, in fact, to remove about 400 feet of the mountain top before you get to the rock, the next thing is to find the emeralds, the largest of which may perhaps be as big as your thumb. To do this, you crack up and sift the rest of the mountain. Emeralds are found as crystals, and always in hexagonal prisms. Moreover, when they are found, each of the six faces is polished more perfectly than a jeweler can do it. They lie in veins in the solid rock and after one of these veins is opened you can dig the emeralds out with your thumb.

Diamonds are found in blue clay, and rubies and sapphires in gravel, but emeralds are more fastly guarded by nature. Next to the diamond, I believe they are the hardest of precious stones. The early Colombia natives used to barter emeralds, and the Spaniards later worked the mines. They did it by driving tunnels and shafts and it was by an Indian falling down one of these ancient workings that the mines were rediscovered.

A day's journey down the mountain slope from the mines Mr. Rainier has a 5,000-acre ranch. Here he raises vegetables, horses and cattle. I asked him whether he ever had imported cattle from the North. He said he had not. One reason was that imported cattle might not like the altitude and another that only the native cattle could stay on the mountain slopes. He couldn't even find a horizontal place for his ranch house and had to build it on two levels.

We always are hearing persons say that to be a good bridge player one must have card sense. Ely Culbertson never played poker, or any card game, except bridge. He declares that card sense is not essential. In his opinion, what a player needs at bridge is a good system and a good head.

Some one told me the other day that Olga Petrova's real name was Muriel Harding and that she was British born. They admitted, however, that she had learned to speak broken English with a more charming accent than a real Russian.

AFRICAN NATIVES
LIKE EPSOM SALTS

Will Spend Week's Wages for a Single Dose.

New York.—Mrs. William S. Seabrook, who shares the explorations of her noted husband, says that a white man can prosper by retelling epsom salts to the natives on the Ivory coast.

"Epsom salts," she says in the American Druggist, "are white magic to the people who deal in black magic, people who will work for a week to buy a single dose of salts, and consider themselves lucky to get it."

"One charming cannibal to whom my husband and I were indebted made a single request when asked how we could repay him for his many favors. He replied quickly and naively: 'Yes, send me epsom salts, and my torture is made.'"

"His idea was to go into the cut-rate business and sell epsom salts for ten cents."

"Natives of the Ivory coast suffer terribly from constipation. Here you have a primitive people struggling with nature in a dense jungle, afflicted with a condition which we have been told results from a civilized and sedentary life. The difficulty is with their diet. They eat practically no greens and even among cannibals starchy food predominates."

"Witch doctors and sorcerers brew magic stews and make a lot of mumbo-jumbo, but the black men have discovered the efficiency of the white man's drugs, so they beg to borrow or buy them whenever possible. They may continue the treatment prescribed by their own witch doctor because in no event would they want to hurt a local practitioner's feelings; but if they can combine witches' brew and a good stiff cathartic, they feel pretty certain of complete cure."

Home-Making Advice Is Given in U. S. Schools

Washington.—How to decorate the walls of a home, so that they will be restful to the eyes, how to plant fruit so it will not spoil, how to prevent an electric shock from your washer when the floor all about it is wet, and many other such bits of advice for the housewife are now being offered in vocational schools, the federal board for vocational education has announced.

The science of home making and all its component parts, such as economy and efficiency in child care, food and nutrition, home furnishings and equipment, sanitation and health, and in textiles and clothing, is now being taught. And there is no longer any reason, says the board, for ignorance of scientific principles essential to the housewife.

In the broad educational scope the instructors teach bacteriology, chemistry and physics with respect to their appliance to household activities. The methods of teaching are such that a fourteen-year-old child can understand them.

Show Larger Enrollment in Vocational Schools

Washington.—Increases in enrollment in practically every type of vocational education schools and classes and expansion of the field of service covered by these schools have been announced by the federal board for vocational education.

Schools of agriculture, home economics and those giving courses in trade and industrial subjects showed the greatest gain with an increase of approximately 61,000 in enrollment.

Effects of unemployment are visible in this change, according to the board, which says that the "new" students are mainly those who are training for available jobs, or are retraining for other jobs, having been deprived of employment due to changing processes or the introduction of machinery.

Oklahoma's Quail Fail to Show Rapid Increase

Oklahoma City.—Increase of the quail supply in Oklahoma has not kept pace with the 50 per cent decline in the number of licensed hunters. Although the number of licensed hunters decreased from 127,000 in 1929 to 30,000 in 1931, there has been but a slight increase in the number of quail. An extensive restoration program is in formation. Agricultural expansion, forcing all wild life into small restricted areas, where the quail are at the mercy of predatory animals, has taken a heavier toll than the hunter, Ben Moble, state game commissioner, said.

Four Eclipses Are Predicted for 1932

Wooster, Ohio.—Meteoritic showers and four eclipses will be the highlights of 1932, Dr. Benjamin F. Vanney of Wooster college predicts.

Two partial eclipses of the moon will occur on March 22 and September 14, being visible in various sections of North America. On March 7 an annular eclipse of the sun will take place in Australia. On August 21 the United States will be treated to a total eclipse of the sun.

Between November 11 and 17 a Leonid meteoric shower, comparable to the memorable one of 1966, can be expected.

Briefs of the Week

Henry Cook is at Detroit on business this week.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur C. Buchin, a son, Gerald, March 28.

Mrs. Emma Davis is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alden Collins this week.

Pep up with a little mustard, 14c for a quart. The Co.'s Store. adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Alden Collins were visitors last Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. James Davis of Jordan Twp.

Abe Carson's farm in South Arm Township is now named 'Sunnybrook Farm.'

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gorman of Muskegon were East Jordan visitors this week.

A snappy new line of Men's Shoes just in at prices surprisingly low. Rubber or leather heels. Bill Hawkins. adv.

The peanut growers are not making much when we can sell 2 pounds of salted peanuts for only 17c. The Co.'s Store. adv.

Just received our new spring Hats and Caps, light or dark shades. The hats that formerly sold at $4.50, now $2.95; Caps as low as 79c. Bill Hawkins. adv.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fetterhoff of Petoskey were guests last Sunday of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Kenny. Virginia Davis accompanied them home for a week's visit.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Usher and children of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Len Swafford and Norman-Pilkorn of Hermansville were over Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Carr. Mrs. Swafford remained for a longer visit.

The Sherman Lapeer family, residing in Echo township, were made homeless when their farm house was destroyed by fire early Monday morning. The fire is believed to have started from a defective chimney or stove pipe.—Central Lake Torch.

George Ruhling returned home from Jackson, Sunday, where he has been spending a few weeks. He was accompanied by Harold Price, M. A. C. student, who spent a couple of days here visiting at the home of his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ruhling, and then went to Traverse City for a visit.

Because of reduced income, the Gaylord school has been forced to either close the schools early or trim 10 per cent off the salaries of the teachers during the balance of this year. The teachers were called into conference and voted to take the 10 per cent salary cut rather than have the school term shortened.

Charles Schrader and Frank Schultz, former Justice and Highway Comm'r, respectively, of Wilson township, were given jail sentences of twenty days for forgery by Judge Farm C. Gilbert in circuit court at Charlevoix Friday. They must pay court costs and refund money misappropriated. At expiration of jail term, they will be placed on probation to May court term under $500 bond.

Dr. David E. "Doc" Hills, one of the most lovable characters of Northern Michigan, Postmaster, Physician, newspaper Editor, conservationist and politician, of Fire Lake, died at his home early Sunday morning after a two weeks' illness. Dr. Hills was an East Jordan visitor last spring, smelting on the Jordan River. While here he paid The Herald a pleasant call. His talk to The Herald publisher about the habits of smelt was informative.

The Home Economics Class will meet at the Library again next Tuesday, April 5th. Please bring your rug whether finished or not so the Leaders and Secretary can report the number of rugs made by members. Soon after April 6th the Leaders can give their last lesson which will no doubt be of interest to you all. The subject is flowers. It covers the arrangement of flowers, the proper size and color of vase to use for the different flowers and their proper use in the color scheme of the room for which they are intended. Try to attend the remaining two lessons. The time of the next meeting will be announced later.—Mary Lenosky, Sec'y

TROTSKY HITS AT POWER OF STALIN

Deposed Leader Has Visions of Coming Back.

London.—Russia is in the throes of a serious rebellion against Stalin, the Moscow dictator.

The movement, judging from the very guarded references in the official newspapers, is directed by Trotsky, the deposed commissar for war, from his exile in Turkey.

The rank and file of the rebels, described as Trotskyites, or Left Wing, have invaded every strategic point in the Soviet economic machinery and, in spite of frequent arrests, have maintained their influence.

Soviet spokesmen, according to verbatim reports which have just reached the Daily Mail, openly admit that the rebels have been harassing Stalin's government for more than a year, and that their action has led to serious consequences in vital sections of the five-year plan for Russia's industrialization.

Trotsky still hopes to return to Moscow, and for this purpose keeps in touch with his Russian and foreign groups of followers. These groups, as well as Trotsky himself, are financed from a secret fund, which continues to grow. It is estimated that the Trotskyites in Russia are spending $15,000 a month on bribes and "other forms of corruption."

A private complaint of Trotsky's activities was made recently by Russia to the Turkish government, which replied that it was unable to take any action.

How greatly Stalin is perturbed by the growth of the revolt is shown by venomous attacks he has recently launched against Preobrazhensky, one of the Soviet's financial negotiators in London, whose crime, like that of Trotsky in 1925, is a book reviewing the world position. Every Soviet misfortune has been attributed to his interpretation of events.

Close observers of affairs in Russia believe that the days of the Stalin regime are numbered, and that his opponents will make a decisive bid for power when they are fully equipped and ready.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

(By REV. F. E. FITZWATER, D. D., Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)
 (© 1932, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for April 3

GOD IN CREATION

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 1:1-5, 16-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.
PRIMARY TOPIC—In the beginning—God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God the Creator.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Maker of All Things.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God in Creation.

Genesis, the book from which the lessons of the quarter are taken, as its name indicates, is a book of beginnings. It contains the only reliable information we have of the origin of the heavens and the earth, plant and animal life, human life, human institutions, and human relations. Without it we would be absolutely ignorant as to the origin of these fundamental things. The first chapter of the book from which our lesson is taken is one of the most wonderful in the Bible. Indeed, it is the key to the whole Bible.

I. God (v. 1).
 He was before all things. He had no beginning. Everything but God had a beginning. God, the uncaused cause, is the cause of all things. "Before the mountains were brought forth or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting, thou art God" (Ps. 90:2).

II. The Origin of the Universe (v. 1).

It was created by God. All things came into being by the will and act of a personal God. The Hebrew word translated "create," according to reliable authority, is the strongest word which the Hebrew language has to express the idea of the origination of substance. The first four words of the Bible exhibit the one fundamental, all-pervasive principle of philosophy of every right life. In the beginning of the universe—God. In the beginning of all science and philosophy—God. In the beginning of every life—God. In the beginning of every year—God. In the beginning of every day—God. In the beginning of every business—God. In the beginning of every human relationship—God. In the beginning of every thought—God.

III. The Degeneration of the Earth (v. 2).

Between verses one and two is a clearly marked interval of perhaps long duration. The earth which was created by God was later overtaken in a cataclysmic judgment. The Hebrew word for "was" might just as well have been translated "became." Instead, therefore, the earth having been created a void or chaos, we see that it became chaos through a judgment. In Isaiah 45:18 the prophet expressly declares that God did not create the earth a waste, but that he formed it to be inhabited.

IV. The Regeneration of the Earth (vv. 3-25).

As previously noted, the second verse of Genesis does not describe the state of the earth when it first came from the Creator's hands, but a changed condition which took place subsequent thereto. The following verses reveal a new effort of creative power by which the earth is again fitted up for the habitation of man. The power active in this reorganization is the Holy Spirit. On the first day the voice of the Almighty was heard saying, "Let there be light," and the darkness was dispelled by the light. In the second day the expanse or firmament was made which separates the waters above the firmament from those below it. The third day dry land appeared clothed with vegetation. The fourth day witnessed the appearance of the lightholders, the sun, moon, and stars. They were not created then, but set free from darkness and ruin. On the fifth day fish and birds were created and on the sixth day cattle, creeping things, beasts of the field, and man.

V. The Origin of Man (vv. 26-31).

He was created by God. This precludes the foolish idea that man ascended from or through the brute. He came into being through a special creative act of God. This image and likeness is not physical or bodily, but intellectual and moral (Eph. 4:24; Col. 3:10). God's likeness is reflected in man's three-fold nature. Man is spirit, soul, and body (1 Thess. 5:23). As there is a trinity and unity in God so there is a trinity in man. Spirit is that part of man by which he has the power to know God. Soul is self-conscious life, the seat of man's emotions and desires. The body is the seat of the senses, enabling man to have world consciousness. God made man to be a personality capable of having fellowship with himself, and with whom he could share his glory.

Song of Peace
 The bellies of all Christendom now roll along the unbroken song of peace on earth, good will to men!—Longfellow.

Paths to Triumph
 "God's trials nobly borne in obedience to his righteous will are the paths to victorious triumph."

A Favorable Light
 Faith takes in a favorable light even what appears adverse.—Bengel.

Lists Soybean and Alfalfa Varieties

Advice Given on Record and Performances.

Low soybean and alfalfa seed prices this year may result in more of these two crops being grown, according to H. D. Lewis, extension specialist in farm crops at the Ohio State university.

Because of the fine record and performance made by soybean seed available locally, the variety Manchu should be preferred in 1932 for hay or grain production, he believes. There is a specially selected strain of Manchu here in Ohio that is superior to strains from other states. Peking, Virginia and possibly Wilson are superior may beans for southern Ohio. Only soybean seed that has been tested recently for germination should be purchased.

Alfalfa seed prices also are very low in 1932 and in some cases may be obtained as reasonably as red clover. On suitable soils some of it may well be included in the regular hay mixtures. Pure stands may be seeded at low costs where all conditions as to drainage and line forecast successful results.

For best performance and persistent stands, Lewis recommends the variegated, alfalfas. Of these, the new Harman alfalfa from Michigan is superior. Grimm is a close second.

Good Growth of Alfalfa Depends on Many Things

Careful planning is necessary to insure a good stand and growth of alfalfa. Many prospective fields have been unprofitable because they were not carefully selected and planned. Unsuitable fields, improperly prepared seedbeds, too thick and growthy nurse crops, and unadapted seed, are causes of failure that are most common. Alfalfa requires a good loam soil that is well drained. Usually it does not do well on clay and most sand soils lack fertility to give it a good chance. A soil underlain with gravel to provide natural drainage is desirable. It is useless to sow alfalfa on sour soils. If a soil tests acid it should be treated with limestone. Alfalfa feeds heavily on phosphorus and potassium, and as a crop of alfalfa is left for three or four years, it is essential that the soil be well supplied with these plant foods.

In selecting seed, get clean seed free from weeds. The seed should have been produced in a climate as severe as where the crop is to be grown. Seed produced in mild climates should not be used. The seed should be secured well in advance, as last minute purchases may be disappointing.—Prairie Farmer.

When Burning Trash

Many farmers are tempted to burn the weeds and trash along their fences to destroy weed seeds and the eggs and larvae of insect pests. Such burning will help to some extent, although most of the eggs and larvae are in the ground safely below the heat zone. It should be kept in mind, however, that burning off a heavy growth of grass or weeds under a galvanized barbed or woven wire fencing will generate heat enough to melt or blister the zinc galvanizing and will materially shorten the life of the fencing. If it seems necessary to burn the fence rows, it is advisable to take down the fencing, burn the trash, disk the fence posts are solid and well braced, then re-stretch the fence tightly.—American Agriculturist.

Alfalfa for Ewe Flock

Alfalfa hay is a wonderful help to the stockman in winter, not only because of its nutritive quality, but on account of the mineral content, which prevents what is commonly known as "calcium deficiency" in the ration. This is an important matter with the ewe flock. They may rob their bodies of lime in growing the lambs and, the first one knows, they are down and perhaps dead. Correction of such troubles before they even start is the point of importance. Alfalfa or good clover hay, and turnips or other suitable roots, are the best winter insurance for the flock.—Rural New Yorker.

Around the Farm

It pays to use good seed because it means larger yields of better quality crops.

Ewes should be fed liberally enough to bring them up to good condition before lambing time. Keeping down feed costs on a flock of ewes may be the most expensive way they can be handled.

Economists believe that properly tared for farm manure will save enough in fertilizer bills to pay the taxes. Store it in a concrete-lined pit with a roof over it and apply on the fields as soon as possible.

Winter activity of bees to generate heat in the hive makes them age too soon.

A farm business without records is like a clock without hands. You can not tell whether it is gaining or losing nor even where it stands at any time.

Karakul sheep, valuable in the fur trade, might well be raised by more farmers in this country, particularly in the Southwest, says the United States bureau of animal industry.

Spring Coat Fashions Go Military

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASHION'S followers are sure going "on parade" this season, all dressed up in red, white and blue with brass buttons and epaulettes in everything that's military. It's quite exciting, this patriotic gesture of the mode. Even the very fabrics which go to make our apparel have been designed to commemorate the George Washington bicentennial celebration. In that the motifs of the newest silk prints center about the famous cherry tree incident, while stars and stripes and tricorned hats and kindred items enter the scheme of things.

But that is another story which has to do with spring weaves. What we started to talk about is the latest, smartest coats which have such a military bearing they quite overawe one, being so broad shouldered and all a glimmer with picket or brass buttons and the like.

Perhaps the most outstanding reaction to this martial spirit which is pervading the style realm is the importance of blues in the color range. Very keen blues some of them, for the spring coat. Most military in matter of color and all other details as well, is the coat shown to the right in the picture. Its color combination is bright navy lined with military red, the flange shining nickel buttons contributing their share of pomp and glory.

You should see the coat pictured to the left in its original color, for it is bright red—red corduroy. If you please, for corduroy has come back and there is no mistake about it. This model is for a young girl. In a more conservative color, say the new beige, it would be wearable for any age. Designers are using corduroy for most everything, for the swagger little hop jackets for pajama costumes, for sports dresses and suits with lots of white corduroy in prospect for summer wear. As to the coat mentioned, the diagonal lines of brass buttons dramatize its broad shoulders, while its trim, narrow waistline emphasizes the military mode that is scheduled to lead in the Easter style program. Note.

DOUBLE DUTY FROCK FINDS WIDE FAVOR

The time seems to be over, for the present at any rate, when we had a different costume for such occasion. Now, our frocks have to do double duty and be just as good looking at ten as at a smart restaurant or night club.

For this reason we now dress in layers, slipping on over a decollete gown a bloused effect, jacket or bolero to make it perfectly presentable when the bright lights are not yet gilding the blue of night. This is an extremely practical and workable fashion and no matter how much the great houses may charge for such a model, the purchaser feels virtuously happy that she is effecting an important economy by buying a two-in-one frock.

Ensembles of Shoes and Bag Add Chic to Suit

It seems to be that although the shoes and the handbags are of necessity so far apart from each other, they are really soul-mates. But at last this fact is receiving proper recognition for nearly every smart shop here now shows ensembles of shoe and bag and rare it is nowadays to find a shop without several examples of this smart combination.

For smart it is, guaranteed to dress the simplest spring coat or suit and give it new charm and chic. More and more, we are co-relating our accessories and doing away with slipshod methods of selecting things that are totally unrelated and have no reason for being worn together.

Lacquered Hair New for Evening Coiffures

Lacquered hair is a new note in coiffures for feminine heads. The hair is treated with a lacquer which does not change its color, but which makes each hair almost twice its normal size. It is then arranged in ringlets and swirls and allowed to dry. The lacquer, which is used only in the evening, may be easily washed off next morning.

too, its collarless neckline which is a style feature worthy of comment, since many coats are sans collars so as to make way for these "nifty" separate fur neckpieces which fashion has planned for us.

A new treatment inspired by the general trend manifests itself in the use of considerable military braid, applied in rows, or perhaps for epaulet shoulder effects as well as many other attractive expressions. So, if you like braid trimmings, the hour has come to indulge your fancy. Suits as well as coats show this ornamentation.

It is very evident that the military spirit has pervaded every realm of fashion, from knitted wear to furs. The former adopts, for instance, the tri-color schemes which are so exceedingly popular, with double-breasted treatments employing flashing metal buttons. Then there's the new scarfs flaunting their reds, whites and blues via all sorts of whimsical stripes, stars and other design.

The little short spring jackets developed of gray kidskin accented with nickel buttons are a possession to be coveted, seeing that they blend with current fashions of military aspect.

And have you seen the detachable military capes which are of fur or of cloth and which boast of buttons in rows according to the latest dictate of fashion.

Dresses are military minded also in that many of them are fashioned of blue, sheer, wadded with trimmings of red and white print silk.

CHIC LACY MESH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

No, this very pretty and very chic afternoon dress is not lace. It's a young and extremely popular first cousin to lace. The technical name is durable cotton lacy mesh. This knit weave of softly lustrous durable is of diagonal construction. The designer of the frock has furthered the diagonal feeling through clever handling of the stripes. A dull-suede belt contrasts the subtle luster of the material. The skirt is tied to give a cowl neckline which to slender faces is amazingly becoming.

The New Cottons
 In material, cotton has been raised from humble rank to high favor. Printed cottons are shown for dresses, blouses and coat linings. Cotton day dresses are found in open weaves. Pique, wool and some boucle are seen in daytime costumes.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

... THROUGH CASTORIA'S GENTLE REGULATION

The best way to prevent colic, doctors say, is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste. But remember this: a tiny baby's tender little organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged. This is just the time Castoria can help most. Castoria, you know, is made specially for babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation, perfectly harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics. For years it has helped mothers through trying times with colicky babies and children suffering with digestive upsets, colds and fever. Keep genuine Castoria on hand, with the name:

Rocks in Demand

An unprecedented demand for rocks for ornate gardens of Cleveland residences has brought a new source of revenue to many farmers in the northern Ohio district. Boulders, which formerly were only sources of annoyance, are being carefully selected and sold to companies which do a flourishing brokerage business with home owners.

The Men on the Dead Man's Chest

by Clifford Raymond

A sergeant came to the door to say that the bureau had sent over two men.

"Bring them in," said the state's attorney.

Blair and Ashley were handcuffed to each other when they were brought in with a policeman at each side of them.

"That isn't necessary," Stanton exclaimed. "Take those cuffs off them, you men, and you can wait outside."

"That's a good scout, Lieutenant," said Ashley. "I didn't like the d—n things, not with Blair on the other end; not at all, anyway."

Blair scowled and then forced an expression of boredom and indifference.

"This is the state's attorney, gentlemen. The big boy is Mr. Blair. He took the lanterns away. The smiling lad is Mr. Ashley. Blair, I'm quite convinced, is a murderer. Ashley may be—And here we are and what do you? Their present police status is that of vags."

"We can ask the sheriff up in Vilas county if he cares for Mr. Blair," said the state's attorney. "Horse, go see if you can get him on the wire. Tell him we are holding a suspect with some strong circumstantial evidence."

The state's attorney looked the two men over for a moment of cool silence which was intended to be minatory and which was not. Blair stared at him and then laughed. The laugh was short and derisive. It could be taken in any trade of opinion as an insult. Ashley was cheerily interested.

"What are you fellows doing?" the state's attorney asked. "What's your reason for being in Chicago?"

"Ask the lieutenant," said Ashley. "He's detaining us. We were traveling. He said something about giving Roberts a break. We don't crave Roberts' company, Lieutenant. He isn't very interesting, not for hours at a time. You ought to have found that out last night."

"Why did you send that fat man up to our room in the Palatine?" Stanton asked.

"That's a sensible question," said Ashley. "Not insinuating that your question wasn't, Mr. State's Attorney. But the lieutenant's question is highly reasonable. Why did we send a fat man up to your room? That assumes that we did. Don't you know we went to New York?"

"You started for New York."

"And none of the dicks told you we didn't get there. You'll often find them that way. Sometimes they don't like to admit they were outsmarted, and sometimes they are indifferent to such cases. We decided to travel and got off the train. It wasn't going in the right direction. We wanted to go north and west. It was going south. It was my idea to send the fat man up to your room. Blair didn't think much of it. I don't myself now. I wouldn't have you judge me by it, Lieutenant."

Ashley's smile was intended to be deprecatory.

"I thought it would be fun to flutter Roberts and start him in motion. I knew he must be with you. He changed your room, didn't he? He shouldn't be so fluttry, but sometimes he is. But don't rate him as a coward. He has a good nerve as the next man, but he has his ruthers. Some things he doesn't like. He doesn't like heights. Neither does Blair. They don't bother me at all. Now, scorpions don't bother Roberts and Blair at all, and they panic me. That's a tip for you, Lieutenant. Introduce a scorpion, and I'll climb a wall. I suppose you know we were a bit confused as to your room. I thought you'd make inquiries. Well, no harm done. Just some good-natured fun. Did Roberts say where he was going? We thought maybe he would go to San Francisco and take a boat. We might run into him. We're going out to the coast."

"Does Mr. State's Attorney want to ask any more questions? I may have seemed to cut him off. I didn't intend to."

"Blair, where's Maisie?" the lieutenant asked.

"Now you've got him on a sore spot," said Ashley. "He doesn't want to know. That's why we're traveling. Maisie, you know, was Mrs. Trembley, and her husband was killed in an automobile accident. You knew that. You said something about the lights not being in place at a dangerous piece of bridge construction."

Horde came in the room.

"The sheriff thinks it would be useless to hold the man for them to come after," he said. "He says they couldn't make a case. He says the chances are a hundred to one no one would identify him as having been in the county, and if they did, how would that prove he took the lights out? There's the farmer's story that they were taken away and put back. As he sees it, that doesn't make a case, and it isn't worth the expense of trying to make anything of it and then having nothing. They're content to let it go as a reckless driving with fatal results unless better evidence turns up."

"That's all right with this office," said the state's attorney. "I think they are right, don't you Stanton?"

"I suppose they are," said the lieutenant. "Blair, of course, did it. He doesn't have to say he did, but outside a courtroom no one would have any doubts."

"And you think they will kill Roberts?"

"I'm not so sure. They'll try to, but Roberts isn't helpless and he may take them to get rid of his dread of them. A tip you're welcome to."

"It would astonish me if he tried to," said Ashley. "He knows we are his friends."

"Mr. Blair does not say anything," said the state's attorney.

"And why should I? I'll be glad when you are tired of this."

"There's no use keeping them, Stanton. We can't charge them, and it's foolishness to hold them merely to make them get a writ. Turn them loose."

"Gentlemen," said Stanton, "you're loose again. If I were you I'd take care of Roberts' health or allow him to cherish it himself. I've given him the advantage of this little interruption. Take it as a suggestion to let him alone. I'll have you safely conducted to the street. I'd not seek another way of coming in here again, if advice is admissible."

"We welcome it, Lieutenant," said Ashley. "Blair, we have the air again. Adios, gentlemen. We'll give your regards to Roberts. Adios."

CHAPTER XI

Maisie

Two days later Stanton had another telegram from Roberts, sent from Salt Lake City and, as before, through the state's attorney's office.

"So far so good," it read. "Thought you might like to know. I'll wire you before I take the final jump-off."

Stanton wished he could send him a warning. He still reasoned that the situation rationalized itself only for incredulity or the most thoroughgoing skepticism, but nevertheless three killings had to be conceded and the survivors of the group were not of gentler nurture and character than the three who were dead. It might be that the incentive was less, the deaths having doubled the income of the living, and the risks were greater.

With everything reasoned Stanton found he still considered Roberts in danger. He could not warn him to avoid San Francisco. He might warn him to be careful. A telegram sent in care of the telegraph company had an outside chance of reaching him, a small one but a chance.

After writing several drafts, trying not to alarm Roberts too much and yet to put him on guard, the lieutenant accepted as the best he could do and sent a telegram reading: "B and A. We're held a few hours here. They are traveling west. They spoke of San Francisco."

A week later the lieutenant had a telegram from Roberts:

"Adios, Amico. Good luck. All set for the big jump. A new life and a merry one. No more from me. Buenos noctes, R."

Stanton could not know whether his own telegram had been received or not. Nothing more was heard from Roberts.

A week and then another went by. The Turner case evidently had been folded up and filed away. Stanton wrote to Mr. Darling and to the young Mr. Turner.

The old gentleman in his reply said he had not received a letter from Roberts and did not as yet know where to send his December check. He presumed that in good time he would be informed.

In a few weeks more the routine of police work had put the Turner case even further in the background, although Stanton expected that some day in some fashion some phase of the affair would recur.

The recurrence came with a telephone call the afternoon of January 7, getting the lieutenant at his desk. It was a woman's voice, and she, finding that she was talking to the lieutenant, gave the impression of being uncertain how best to get to what she wanted to say.

"I am about to ask you to call on me," was what she did say after the instant of hesitation.

"Yes," said the lieutenant.

"I am at the Drake," she said. "My room is eight-eighteen."

"Why do you want to see me?" Stanton asked.

"I am Mrs. Arthur Trembley," she said. "I am Maisie. It is in that connection."

"I see," said the lieutenant. "When do you want me to call?"

"Now, if you can."

"I can."

He called the captain's chauffeur and was driven to the hotel. A development with its origin in a volunteer appearance of Maisie gave his imagination a lively turn.

At his ring of the bell the door was opened by a handsome woman of early middle age.

"Lieutenant Stanton? Come in. Take off your overcoat. That chair by the table is comfortable. There are cigarettes at your side."

She lighted one for him.

"As I told you, I am Maisie. That partly explains itself to you, I imagine."

"Partly," said the lieutenant. "Enough to bring me here in a hurry. I've a good many things to ask you. You're a long-overdue person."

"I suppose, but I have some things I want to tell you first."

Stanton, looking at her, thought he saw a woman of good mind and experience. The freshness of her good looks had passed, but she had not tried to reclaim it with cosmetics. Consequently she still was good-looking.

"Why did you write that letter to Clayton?" Stanton asked.

"I didn't," said Maisie, "and that's the beginning of my deciding to talk to you. My late husband, Arthur Buck Trembley, wrote that letter. Arthur's only period in the penitentiary was for not writing another person's signature quite well enough. It taught him to do it better when he did it at all. It was too good for poor Dunn. I couldn't be sure from reading the newspapers whether you had the pleasure of meeting Buck that night."

"I did," said Stanton. "He gave me the narrative of what happened."

"Smooth, didn't you think?"

"Very. Did he shoot Dunn?"

"I never knew," she said. "I think not. He put him there. He had some one to do the rest. What do you think?"

"I'll never be certain. I knew Dunn. He didn't need much of a chance, but I guess he wasn't given even that."

"No, he wasn't. They used me and Dunn's affection for me to kill him. He was the only square one in the outfit. He was the only one Turner had no business including in the will. Dunn and I were on the square. He was square, and I had to be. He would come to me anywhere if he got a note like that and believed it was from me. He probably thought I needed him. When Buck came in Dunn could suspect almost anything, except probably that I had not written the note. I'll not believe he could have thought that I had betrayed him. I'll not believe it. I suppose he sat there quietly awaiting the next move and planning his own. He had no chance."

"Your husband," said Stanton.

"Buck. It wasn't jealousy?"

"Not a chance. He was one of two people who knew I hadn't written the letter. I was the other."

"But his trick got a rise."

"He knew it would, but he knew Dunn was square. And jealous? Stanton, if I could laugh I would. My tender Buck was not of a jealous nature. I don't know why he didn't tell me to chase myself and get a divorce. And I don't know why I didn't do it without being told. Still we got along. You know. It was what they call respectable. An old hen would rather be in out of the rain. When you're thirty-five you're looking at the sunset. Most women think they are before that. No, it was this will. I'll tell you what it was. It was a panic."

"Is Ashley in town?" the lieutenant asked.

"Yes, dear little Howard himself."

"And Blair?"

"That I don't know. I'd presume so if Roberts were alive, but with him dead I can't tell. Howard will tell me."

"They got Roberts?" the lieutenant exclaimed. "I thought he'd get clear, for a time at least."

"I suppose they got him. All I know is that when Ashley telegraphed me to come to Chicago, he said that Roberts had died in San Francisco. How could I know? It might have been heart disease, an automobile accident, something else. It didn't make any noise, did it? No police stuff?"

"Nothing," said the lieutenant.

"You see, this has been a panic from the beginning. You know what I mean. Like people smelling smoke in a theater and sitting there wondering if they can trust one another not to break for the exit. Then all of a sudden they all break because each thinks the other is going to. You understand what I mean? A panic. These fellows could have gone along with what they had. Thirty thousand isn't so bad, but they couldn't trust one another, none except Dunn Clayton. He was the white man. He was also the most dangerous one. That's why he was the first to go when the instinct of self-preservation got to working. A panic, and Blair and Buck got the jump on the others."

"Did your husband talk to you about it?" Stanton asked.

"Not in so many words. He didn't say he was going hunting for them. He harped on what the others were likely to do. Either nervous or alibiing himself. Talked about getting away to some out-of-the-way place in Europe where the mere appearance of any of the other five would make a case of self-defense if you shot him on sight. I could see Buck living in an out-of-the-way place in Europe. And I told him if he was going to kill anyone in that kind of self-defense he'd better do his stuff in the United States, where they understood it. Imagine the gendarme patting a boy on the back who had just popped off an innocent visitor in their midst. Buck decided to be true to his own institutions."

"You and Buck were not living in Chicago?"

"Oh, my lord, no. In New York. We knew Dunn was here. It was Buck's excuse that he had to see some men here and then we'd go on to Miami. He knew Brown fished and hunted from the Lac Vieux Desert lodge."

"The other three were in Europe?"

"They were not. They had been but they had come back to New York. That's what started the panic."

"In September?"

"Lord, no. Back in mid-August."

"I'm too credulous," said the lieutenant. "I'm childlike."

"Maybe," said the lady. "Any one who believed any of them, except Dunn, on anything would be. Buck had me completely deceived in coming out here. You can see plainly afterward, but I didn't know then that the panic was on. Dunn, of course, didn't know that it was, but the others always were afraid of him. I suppose the plot in their minds was this—Dunn Clayton saw that it was winners take all and coffin for the losers, they were all gone. Blair and Ashley must have had the same idea. They followed us out here. We weren't hard to find. We were registered at the Sherman. What was the night Dunn was killed? Saturday, wasn't it?"

"September 29," said the lieutenant.

"Well, call it Saturday or Sunday morning. It was about one o'clock when the telephone in my room rang, and it was Blair calling. He asked if he could come up. I said certainly not. He said it was important. I'd better see him at the door anyway. It was about Dunn, he said. Something scared me. You know how a quality gets into the voice. I told him to come up. When I opened the door he stood in the hall and said that Dunn had been killed in the Dutch Mill. He didn't need then to tell me Buck had been there. He said Buck had been held by the police for a while and then had gone away."

"That's where I was taking a hand without knowing what I was doing," said the lieutenant. "Well, I guess it didn't make much difference, except mix the sequences a little."

"Blair said that Buck had killed Dunn and wanted to know where he had gone. He'd made a getaway, Blair said, and he wanted to know where I was to join Buck. Well, he had killed Dunn. I didn't know then that what Dunn thought was a letter from me had brought him there. I guess that wasn't necessary. Blair was looking eagerly at me. I didn't really know if Buck had gone anywhere, but I thought of Preston Brown at Lac Vieux Desert. Try Lac Vieux Desert, I told him. Brown's there, I said, and Buck may go there."

"That's what I wanted to tell you," she continued. "You may have known something of it, but I sent Blair to Lac Vieux Desert, and I wanted him, if he could, to kill Buck. I didn't know that he would find him. If the panic was on I knew the one I wanted killed after what had happened at the Dutch Mill. You'll ask why I'm telling this now. That's what you're thinking."

"FATIGUE?"

I just postpone it!

"No, I don't have 'nerves.' You can't have them, and hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others."

"Then I learned to rely on Bayer Aspirin."

The sure cure for any headache is rest. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Bayer Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And once you are comfortable, the pain seldom returns!

Keep Bayer Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, neuritis. These tablets always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying aspirin. Bayer is genuine. Tablets with the Bayer cross are safe.

Precepts of Franklin Should Be Remembered

The proposed $5,000,000 Philadelphia memorial to Benjamin Franklin should have some place in it calling attention to that American's 13 suggested virtues and precepts, on which the club of Washington and Sioux City, Iowa, patterned after the Junket club of Franklin's day, are founded, says the Pathfinder Magazine. They are:

"Eat not to dullness, drink not to elevation. Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself, avoid trifling conversation. Let all your things have their places; let each part of your business have its time. Resolve to perform what you ought, perform without fail what you resolve. Make no expense but to do good to others or yourself, i. e., waste nothing. Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions. Use no hurtful deceit, think innocently and justly and, if you speak, speak accordingly. Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty. Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries so much as you think they deserve. Tolerate no uncleanness in body, clothes or habitation. Be not disturbed at trifles, or at accidents, common or unavoidable. Be chaste. Imitate Jesus and Socrates."

Designs in Light

The photographic portrait artist requires a background for his pictures and recently the idea of making a background by the use of electric lights has become popular. The rays from a lamp are projected onto the plain background through a loosely arranged piece of foliage and the effects are often very beautiful. Decorators have taken up this idea and shades are being arranged over electric lights which throw a pretty design upon the wall or ceiling in light and shade.

Men and women find that those recurrent spring colds reduce their alertness of mind and body. To avoid such nuisances, doctors advise them to increase their bodies' store of Vitamin A. Indians Outclassed in Use of Bow and Arrow

Archery 200 or more years ago was a useful accomplishment as well as a competitive sport. Prior to the invention of gunpowder, the bow and arrow had been, for almost 1,000 years, the principal weapon of defense in England. So important was it considered that every Englishman was able to wield a wicked bow that archery practice was long compulsory for all men between the ages of sixteen and sixty. The Mayflower immigrants were armed with blunderbusses, but in order to conserve their supply of shot, they frequently hunted with the bow and arrow, in the use of which they were more skillful than were their savage neighbors. Indian prowess with the bow and arrow seems to have been much overrated by romantics. They usually shot their quarry at close range after it had been stalked for them, and in friendly shooting competitions between Redskins and Englishmen, the white men are said to have invariably won.

HORSES

This year more than in previous years farmers are showing an interest in using larger hitches of horses to do their field work.

H. F. Moxley, Michigan State College Animal Husbandry Specialist on horse hitches and colt training, will conduct two demonstrations on this work on Thursday, May 12. If any of you are interested in multiple hitches for four, five, six, or more horses, and care to have Mr. Moxley conduct a demonstration on your farm, drop me a card.

I would like to locate a farmer who is interested in training a colt. Let me know about this also.

The Horse Association of America has this to say regarding the keeping of farm work teams:

Low-Cost Methods of Keeping Farm Teams

Two or three pasture paddocks, about five acres in size, near the barns, and good pastures on the rougher, cheaper land of a farm are invaluable in holding down the cost of keeping horses and mules.

Wisely managed, work animals are in the stable only from 5 till 6:30 a. m., from 12 to 1:30 o'clock, noon, and from 6 to 8 p. m., four and one-half hours a day. During this time they eat their grain and some hay; the rest of the time they are out in the open, loose and untrammelled. The nearer one can come to putting horses in their natural state, the healthier and more vigorous they will be.

A roomy barnyard sloping to the south, well-drained, having an open shed on the north and west bedded down with ample straw to sleep on; a covered, self-feeder hay rack mounted on a strung-out, long-reach wagon, instantly movable anywhere, in which rick is available plenty of rough forage—corn fodder, sorghum cane, bright oat straw, and some hay; these furnish an ideal arrangement for horses at night, during the early spring months when pastures are not firm enough to turn on.

After frost is out, the ground settled, and the grass well started, the barnyard gates should be opened at 8 o'clock every night and the horses driven down the lane to the pasture paddocks. The movable hay rack filled with forage should still be accessible, however, providing dry forage as desired to balance the green grass; and animals will do their own balancing better than man can do it.

The nearby paddocks are only for use of animals working regularly. When it is known certain animals will be used in a few days, they should be turned into the remoter pastures where they will have no attention or feed until again required.

Under this system the work animals get grain once a day for about six weeks before spring work starts and while they are still on winter pasture. They get grain three times a day while at work, and no grain at all on idle days after pastures become good; but they are given access to good dry forage at all times when in pasture paddocks, in order that they may be fit for hard work after a day or two of idleness due to rain.

Pastures—both paddocks and those more distant—should be heavily fertilized with sheep or cattle manure, plus lime and phosphate wherever the last two are needed; re-seeded on all thin spots; and thoroughly harrowed down every spring as soon as practicable. Later snows and freezes will help to carry the seeds and fertilizer into the ground. The carrying power of pastures can be quadrupled within three years by such a policy, and it affords the cheapest possible way to maintain work animals, reducing grain and hay requirements, doing away with nearly all barn cleaning, and entirely eliminating time and labor for grooming. Horses turned out every night need no grooming.

These methods will keep horses fit at a total cost of not over $50 to $60 per year. Moreover, prompt sale of surplus horses when the peak of the work is over will bring an average of about 1,000 hour's work per animal, on a well-diversified live-stock farm that has sound rotations. This holds the cost down to 5 or 6 cents an hour, 50 or 60 cents per 10-hour day, which makes a 5-horse team cost only $2.50 to $3.00, a six from $3.00 to $3.50, and an eight from $4.00 to $4.50 per day—about half the cost of operating alleged substitutes doing the same work.

OLD LEE MANSION IS BEING RESTORED

Will Revive Life and Culture of Old South.

Richmond, Va. — Stratford Hall, homestead of the Lee family in Virginia, a center of historical interest and a symbol of the life and culture of the Old South, has been saved for posterity. Through the efforts of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Lee Memorial foundation the mortgage on the eleven-hundred-acre estate in Westmoreland county has been paid off and the last obstacle to the preservation of the mansion as a national shrine has been removed, says the New York Times.

There remains now the work of renovating the fine old house and restoring the extensive grounds which formerly made it one of the show places of the state, and this work will proceed as funds for the purpose are made available. Within a reasonably short time plantation life of the eighteenth century will be resumed there in all its picturesque phases.

Completion of the purchase fund marked the close of another chapter in a dramatic story which had its start in Greenwich, Conn., early in 1928. Mrs. Charles D. Lanier of Greenwich, head of the William Alexander, Jr., Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, while rummaging through a desk which belonged to her mother-in-law, Mrs. Sidney Lanier, widow of the poet, came upon a penciled manuscript by Lanier, until then not known to exist.

A speech on Lee's death. The paper proved to be a speech he had made in Macon, Ga., in 1870, on the death of General Lee, in which he urged the establishment of a memorial "by contributions as shall be within the compass of the humblest citizen who loved him and who desires the grateful privilege of laying some tribute on his tomb."

On the following day Mrs. Lanier received a letter from a friend describing a visit to Stratford and asking why it could not be preserved. On the same morning she called a meeting of her organization, which resulted in the adoption of resolutions looking to the acquisition of the homestead.

After months of negotiations arrangements were made with Charles E. Stuart, the owner, for its purchase, and the Robert E. Lee Memorial foundation was formed to acquire the property and conduct a campaign for contributions in all parts of the country. The price was fixed at $240,000. The mortgage was cleared away by an unconditional advance of $115,000 by a prominent Delaware woman.

Stratford hall is more than two hundred years old and bears the distinction of having been the birthplace of two signers of the Declaration of Independence, Richard Henry Lee and Francis Lightfoot Lee, as well as the home of "Light Horse Harry" Lee and other generations of the distinguished family.

It stands on a hillock not far removed from the Potomac in a section of the Northern Neck which the older generation of Virginians especially looks upon as hallowed ground. The estate fronts for two miles on the river, and within a few miles are the birthplaces of three Presidents—Washington, Madison and Monroe.

The house itself, built in the shape of the letter H, is two stories in height, with a tall basement forming the first floor, and is topped by massive quadruple chimneys on each wing. It was started in 1729 by Queen Caroline, wife of George II of England, with a gift of £800 toward the cost of its erection following a fire which destroyed the original manor house, on the site of which now is located the Lee family burial plot.

The House Well Preserved. The mansion, in a fine state of preservation, is built of brick on English lines by English standards, with walls of fortress thickness, and was known as the statelyst house of its time in Colonial Virginia.

In restoring the plantation with its Colonial atmosphere and its arts and industries as pursued two centuries ago, the old brick and saw mill, now in ruins, will be rebuilt and placed in operation. Spinning, weaving and wrought-iron craftsmanship will be practiced for the enlightenment of visitors and students. The tobacco warehouse will be reconstructed, and scenes of the old planting season revived. The old kitchen, with its 12-foot fireplace, will be fired again, and the tall brick wall again will hide the culinary operations from alien eyes.

The Garden Clubs of Virginia will complete the restoration picture with landscaping, terraces, flowers and rare shrubs such as once were the pride of the Lees and the delight of their many distinguished guests.

RIO GRANDE RIVER SHIFTING BOUNDARY

One Might Retire in U. S. and Awake in Mexico.

Washington.—"News that a band of mounted cattle thieves rode across the Rio Grande river from Mexico into Texas recently, probably presents a picture of this southern boundary river of the United States far different from that conjured up by a look at the map," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"On the map the Rio Grande has the appearance, in its lower reaches, at least of being as wide as the St. Lawrence or the Detroit rivers, along both of which large ships ply. In flood times the Rio Grande is a wide, full river; but during portions of the year, owing to little rainfall on its tributaries, seepage into the sandy soil, and appropriation for irrigation purposes, its waters dwindle away until only a narrow stream remains, dodging in and out among wide expanses of sand. Quicksands make crossing dangerous in places, but at other points it is a simple matter to ride or wade from bank to bank.

Easily Waded at Times.

"Because the river can be so easily crossed in times of low water, United States and Mexican officials have had stubborn problems along certain sections of the Rio Grande in the enforcement of immigration, tariff, prohibition, narcotic, and other regulations. The problems are heightened by the fact that the American side of the river is not uniformly developed and that most of the Mexican side is unutilized. At some points on the American side the huge irrigated gardens and fields and citrus groves of the lower Rio Grande valley reach to the river, representing land in the highest degree of cultivation. But at other points the river bank and a zone ten miles or more in width is covered with a growth of mesquite and other bushes, and is virtually uninhabited. Chinese and other aliens secretly entering the country, and smugglers in both directions hide—in these wilderness spots, and when overtaken often 'shoot it out' with members of the border patrol.

"Wakes Up in Mexico."

"The Rio Grande in flood times has been equally a problem to the United States and Mexico. When the river rises unduly it eats away the fine sandy alluvial soil as though it were brown sugar, frequently forcing new channels across the narrow necks where the stream loops. When this happens the bits of land cut off ('bancoes,' they are called) are thrust into an alien jurisdiction. Many a river-bank resident has gone to sleep in the United States and waked up next morning in Mexico.

"All along the lower Rio Grande at one time were numerous bits of United States territory on the Mexican side of the river, and fragments of Mexico in the United States. The situation became so complicated that the two governments finally agreed that since in the long run the shifts of territory from side to side were about equal, new channels would be taken as marking the boundary, where the bancoes were small. It was provided, however, that if fragments of territory exceeding 618 acres or having 200 or more inhabitants shall ever be cut off by the river, they shall still belong to the country from which they were torn, the old channel remaining as the boundary."

Radio, Movies Creating New Standard of Speech

Detroit.—America has a new standard of speech, developed by the radio and talkie, according to Dr. Ray K. Immel, of the University of California.

Addressing the recent convention of the National Association of Teachers of Speech, Doctor Immel said the two agencies have brought about a greater uniformity in the nation's speech. He regretted that uniformity will eliminate quaint localisms.

"Laziness is one of the greatest handicaps to correct speech," Doctor Immel asserted. "Most of us are lip lazy. It's much easier sometimes to fall into the colloquial expression. Correct expression of a thought often requires effort."

The diction expert said he believed speech-consciousness is growing among the younger generation.

Killer of Prize Hog Is Charged With Murder

Oklahoma City.—George Jackson, a farmer, was charged with first-degree murder recently for the alleged willful slaying of a prize hog. The charge was filed by Assistant County Attorney Charles Webster on the complaint of John Willingham, who said Jackson beat the sow to death.

According to Willingham, the sow, a prize 400-pound Berkshire, was killed when it entered Jackson's field. Mr. Webster said he intended to prosecute. He said that according to Willingham the killing was willful. "It was murder, just like homicide."

Holland's Wooden Shoe Industry Is Booming

Holland, Mich.—Holland's wooden shoe industry is booming. Until this year all orders could be filled by hand labor, but recently manufacturers fell far behind, necessitating the installation of machinery. Orders are received from every section of the United States and some foreign countries.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE in the terms and conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by Robert Evans and Antonia Evans, his wife, she contracting separately and in bar of dower, of the Township of South Arm, Charlevoix County, Michigan, to Mrs. Lena Martin, of South Arm Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan, which said mortgage bears date the 11th day of April, 1929, and was recorded on the 4th day of May, 1929 in Liber sixty-two (62) of Mortgages, on Page one hundred fifty-seven (157), in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, and that said mortgage is past due, and there is claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage the sum of four hundred sixty-two and 90-100 ($462.90) Dollars at the date of this notice, including principal, interest, taxes, and attorney fee as provided for by said mortgage; and no suit or proceeding at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the moneys secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

NOW, THEREFORE, by virtue of the power of sale in said mortgage contained, and of the statute in such case made and provided, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Wednesday the 20th day of April, 1932, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, eastern standard time, at the east front door of the Court House in the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, that being the place where the Circuit Court for the County of Charlevoix is held, the said Mrs. Lena Martin will sell at public auction to the highest bidder the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount due on said mortgage and all legal costs and attorney fee.

The premises described in said mortgage are as follows, to-wit:

"The northeast quarter (NE 1/4) of the northwest quarter (NW 1/4) of Section twenty-eight (28), township thirty-two (32) north, range seven (7) west, and containing forty (40) acres of land more or less according to the government survey thereof."

Dated January 22, 1932.

MRS. LENA MARTIN, Mortgagee.

E. N. CLINK, Attorney for Mortgagee, Business address: East Jordan, Mich.

Italian Catch Canned Fish Intra, Italy.—The Sater-folk here made an exceptional catch on the banks and by the port of San Giovanni, when barrels of salted eel and cases of smoked cod and herring were washed up. The police were not able to trace the origin of the fish, which the villagers consumed, as there was no indication of ownership.

Prize Mother Waverly, Minn.—A red sow was claimed by its owner, Jim Demaris, as a prize mother. The brood sow has given birth to three dozen pigs in two litters this year. From each litter a dozen lived.

Pastel Suit Fate of Well Dressed Male

Cincinnati.—Suits in pastel shades are coming for the well-dressed young man, along with white summer suits. And he will use the tails coat oftener than the dinner jacket.

That is, if he heeds the edict of Raymond G. Twyford, fashion expert of the National Association of Merchant Tailors, in annual convention here.

Moreover, if sartorial perfection is desired one must have a Norfolk jacket with knickers for sports wear. And for entertaining in one's own home, the "host suit," a garment similar in cut to a dinner jacket, but made in conservative colors instead of black, will be used.

Good advertisers know that writing an advertisement is a job that requires care, even if it is going to be inserted in The Charlevoix County Herald, where results are almost certain.

"What would taste good for dinner tonight?"

How many wives have asked that question . . . and how many brides of the future will ask it . . . of indifferent husbands, right after breakfast or lunch? Hopefully at first, almost desperately after a time, and finally as part of a dull, daily soliloquy. For every wife discovers that a man with a newly satisfied palate is a total loss as a source of inspiration for future meals.

Nevertheless, it's an important and trying matter, this business of planning the menu. There are cook books, of course, but better than that, why not find out what's new in the markets? Pick up your newspaper—that will tell you. There's news about food—in the advertising of local markets and stores, and in that of the nationally known producer of tempting things to eat.

Here's a new way of buying and serving chicken, for example, and one that's no trouble at all. Or a ham, with a new and piquant flavor. It may be that artichokes have just come to market—the first of the season. Or berries, or fruit, or corn on the cob. The advertisements in your paper tell you these things, with the prices, and where you can buy them. Here is inspiration for many a meal, without dragging weary feet from store to store, looking for what would taste good tonight.
