NOTICE OF FARM ALLOTMENTS AND OF MAXIMUM ACREAGES OF WHEAT FOR 1934 UNDER CONTRACTS FOR MEMBERS OF THE WHEAT PRODUCTION CONTROL OF CHARLEVOIX COUNTY, STATE OF MICHIGAN

Listed below are statements of the allotments which have been determined for members of the Charlevoix County Wheat Production Control Association from Charlevoix County. These allotments are to hold for the duration of the present wheat contracts, and they are the basis upon which adjustment payments are to be made. They have been determined by the County Allotment Committee after careful consideration of the application statements. Every effort has been made to have these allotments as accurate as possible. The maximum acreage which may be sown to wheat for the 1934 crop on each farm, under the reduction requirements of the contract is also listed.

The Charlevoix county allotment, which has been calculated from records of the United States Department of Agriculture, is 4204 bushels. This is the total number of bushels allotted to the county under the wheat plan. The total of the individual allotments, including those participating under the wheat program, must be in line with the county allotment figure. The number of nonparticipating wheat farmers in the county is 81; the average total wheat acreage for those nonparticipating farms during the base period is 2 1/2 acres, the total average wheat production on these nonparticipating farms during the base period is 15.6 bushels.

MacDonald — Darbee

Miss Thelma MacDonald, the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. MacDonald, of East Jordan, Mich. was united in marriage to Robert Darbee, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Darbee, of East Jordan, by a ceremony marked by simplicity and dignity, performed Saturday morning, Oct. 28th, 1933, at the home of the bride's parents by the Rev. James Leitch, pastor of the local M. E. Church, the double ring ceremony being used, the happy couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Jasper W. Stallard, sister and brother-in-law of the bride.

The bride's gown was of mulberry shade chiffon velvet with white satin trimmings. The groom was attired in a suit of dark gray. The room was beautifully decorated in baby chrysanthemums and roses.

After the ceremony a bountiful wedding dinner was served, those attending were just the immediate families of the contracting parties.

The groom is a graduate of the local high school, and also a graduate of the Engineering Dept. of Michigan State College, and while there was honored as Cadet Colonel, the only one so honored in M.S.C. The bride is also a graduate of the local High School, and also a graduate nurse from The Memorial Hospital in Owosso, Mich. and is at present in service in the Lockwood Hospital, Petoskey.

The community extend to these young people their hearty congratulations. The happy pair left in the afternoon for a wedding tour throughout the southern parts of the state.

Guzniczak — Kullik

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Augustine Catholic Church of Boyne Falls, Oct. 28th at Low Mass, when John S. Kullik of Petoskey and Miss Mary A. Guzniczak of Deer Lake were united in marriage by Father Narlock.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of tea roses. Mrs. C. Molewicki of Chicago, sister of the bride acted as maid of honor and Miss Sophia Dubis as bride's maid. The groom was attended by Frank Bryzik and following were bride's maids and escorts: Barbara Krowl, Peter Kullik; Martha Guzniczak, Louis Kullik; Viola Florinski, John Guzniczak; Billy Guzniczak and Cecilia Kuherick.

A sumptuous wedding dinner and supper was served to over one hundred guests at the home of the brides parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Guzniczak.

The following relatives from Chicago and Grand Rapids attended the wedding: Mr. and Mrs. C. Molewicki, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Molewicki, and Vincent Guzniczak, Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Prowicza and son Stanley and Mr. and Mrs. Wolccka, Grand Rapids, besides a host of other relatives and friends from Petoskey, Elmira, Boyne City, Cross Village, East Jordan and vicinity.

The newlyweds left Monday for Petoskey where they will reside, with the best wishes of their many friends.

Weeks — Steenburgh

Mae Weeks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weeks, and Floyd Steenburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Steenburgh, were united in marriage October 16th, at the 3rd Pilgrim Holiness Church, Detroit.

The bride wore a dress of blue silk crepe, carrying a bridal bouquet of yellow rose buds.

Miss Ruth Farley, niece of the bride, as bridesmaid wore a dress of cream colored silk, and carried a bouquet of pink rose buds. The groom was attended by Richard Barrett.

Miss Helen Weeks, ten year old niece of the bride, played the wedding march.

Rev. Fred D. Reed performed the ceremony.

After the ceremony the Weeks family had a reunion at the home, the ten children being all together, at the home of their parents for the first time since July 1925.

The out of town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weeks and Miss Ardis King of Kingston, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. George Weeks and two sons of Cheboygan, Mich.; and Mrs. W. A. Lanway, a sister of the bride, from Hayward, Calif.

The many friends of the happy couple wish them a pleasant and prosperous voyage on the sea of matrimony.

FIND NEW RASPBERRY SUITABLE FOR STATE

Viking, a recently developed variety of red raspberry, has shown promise of being a valuable addition to Michigan's list in trials made at Michigan State College.

The berry originated at the Vineyard Station in Ontario and has been tested several years at East Lansing. It appears to be the most valuable of the new varieties grown on the College plots. The original plant was a cross between Cuthbert and Marlboro.

The variety grows vigorously, is hardy, and produces a moderate number of upright canes, which are practically free from spines. Most of the fruit is borne on the outside of the plants and picking is comparatively easy. The fruit ripens about the same time as that of Cuthbert.

Production compares favorably with Cuthbert. The fruit is large, firm and has a bright red color. The berries do not darken in color as they are kept, and they retain their firmness so they are good shippers.

Viking is somewhat susceptible to mild mosaic but the disease does not seem to seriously impair the vigor of the infected plants. The variety seems to be as free from other diseases as the common varieties of raspberries. Fertile, well drained soils are needed for Viking.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY YOUNG PEOPLE ARE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

Ann Arbor, Oct. 31—Among the 1,307 members of the freshman class at the University of Michigan this fall, are several graduates of Charlevoix County schools. The freshman class this year is larger than those of the past few years, and besides this group the University also admitted 1,097 students on advanced standing, transfers from other schools or colleges. The Charlevoix County freshmen include: Ruth Beverly Neymark, Boyne City, College of Literature, Science and the Arts; Lysle Hamilton White, Jr., Boyne City, College of Literature, Science and the Arts; William Howard White II, Boyne City, College of Literature, Science and the Arts; and John Franklin Vogel, East Jordan, College of Engineering.

Prepared to Save Lives

One of the most valuable services given to the American public by the Red Cross is through its Life Saving and First Aid courses. Virtually all of the life guards at beaches and pools in the nation are Red Cross life savers. Nearly every industry in America supports the First Aid work of the Red Cross because it annually saves lives of thousands of injured persons. These courses are taught by Red Cross experts in both lines. Last year 66,354 certificates were issued to persons completing the First Aid course and 78,795 certificates for completing Life Saving instruction.

War Veterans' Problems

Not since the period of the World War has the Red Cross faced a greater problem in handling the claims of World War and other veterans. Due to the changes in the regulations covering veterans' claims, chapters all over the nation have been crowded with veteran applicants for relief and for service in preparing appeals. During last year Red Cross home service workers in 3,268 chapters dealt with the problems of 414,124 ex-service men or their families. The chapters also aided 7,346 men still in the regular army, navy and marine corps.

An Army of Children

The membership in the Junior Red Cross last year was 6,529,866 boys and girls in schools, private, public and parochial. They enjoyed volunteer work in hospitals and for orphans, the aged and crippled, and also aided their schoolfellows by providing attention for their eyes, purchasing their glasses, and giving many other types of service to them. The Juniors aid their school work by carrying on correspondence and the exchange of portfolios with school children in other nations.

ELLSWORTH ROD AND RIFLE CLUB HELD GAME SUPPER

The Ellsworth Rod and Rifle Club enjoyed a game supper on Friday evening at the Big Fish Inn when 100 members and guests sat down to a sumptuous banquet. The dining hall was attractively decorated carrying out the Halloween scheme. The Captains were L. O. Isaman and Chas. Edson. Mr. Edson's side winning by a large margin.

Christine Tornga, Gladys Shooks, Clara Bergsma, Geneva Edson, and Naomi Isaman acted as waitresses.

After everyone has been filled to repletion a most interesting program was rendered with E. R. Harris acting as toastmaster. The invocation was given by Rev. C. Conklen; duet by Henry and Arthur Dreith, reading by Miss Bernice Nelson, Chester Bonney of Charlevoix gave a short talk on the duties of Conservation officers, selections by the male quartet; talk by Jim Deevy of Bellaire, remarks were given by both captains, a talk by Supt. Kleintert, music by the Coeling children, talk by Robert Dunham, and remarks by Peter Wieland. The meeting adjourned at a late hour, the members looking forward for these annual suppers as they are real events in Ellsworth's social calendar.

First Meeting of Home Extension Club

The first meeting of the Home Extension work given by the Michigan State College was held at the home of Mrs. Amanda Shepard last Thursday, Oct. 26th, 1933.

The new project this year is clothing, the proper fitting of dresses, blouses, etc.

The meeting began with a balanced bountiful dinner at 12:30 after which the leaders, Mrs. Rosetta Gungsolus and Miss Anita Ruhling gave the day's lesson in a very capable manner. All members eagerly await the next lesson to be given Nov. 8th at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Cook. Pot luck dinner will again be served at 12:30. All members are requested to bring their muslin, scissors, and tape measure.

MISSOURI MAN MAY BE AUSTRIAN HEIR

Former Orphanage Boy Called Son of Slain Prince.

Providence, Mo.—This town of a half dozen families may, if the republic of Austria ever returns to a monarchical form of government, become a point of world-wide interest.

For here in an almost abandoned village on the banks of the Missouri river lives a man who, it is believed, may be a grandson of the late Emperor Franz Josef of Austria and Alexander II, one time czar of Russia.

Countess Marie Louise Larish, a favorite niece of the late Empress Elizabeth and Emperor Franz Josef, claims Cleveland is the true heir to the throne.

Cleveland's story—as much of it as he will reveal—is that he was born in Hot Springs, Ark., or Hot Springs, Va., in June, 1889. From there he was taken to St. Louis and placed in an orphanage, where later he prevailed upon a nun to reveal the circumstances of his entrance into the place.

Historians have recorded that Emperor Franz Josef and Empress Elizabeth had one child, Rudolf who later in life fell in love with the youngest daughter of the czar of Russia, Alexander II. Due to the fact that the young princess was a morganatic daughter, the marriage of Rudolf and the girl was forbidden by both families.

Prince Rudolf finally married Princess Stephanie, daughter of Leopold II of Belgium. Despite his marriage to Princess Stephanie, Rudolf continued to see the Russian princess. Upon learning that she was to bear him a child he proposed to divorce his wife and marry the girl. The czar, hearing of Rudolf's intentions, violently opposed the divorce.

Later Rudolf developed a passion for the beautiful Baroness Marie Vetsera. Five months before the birth of Rudolf's child he and the baroness were found murdered in his hunting lodge.

Upon receipt of this news the Russian princess fled to America to await birth of her child. After the child's arrival she returned to her native country, where she died. That child was Cleveland.

FIVE MORE CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HOMES LANDSCAPED

One of the most helpful meetings held in the county this year was the recent lesson on how to landscape by Mr. O. I. Gregg, landscape specialist, Michigan State College given last Thursday in the Boyne City Library. Twenty-nine interested folks were present. This was the first of three lessons to be given by Mr. Gregg and it is very gratifying to see the keen interest in beautifying home surroundings. During the forenoon five landscape outlines or planting plans were made out for five different homes in the county. The next lesson which comes on November 23 at the same location will be anxiously awaited by the same group with additional members to be added later.

Our plans permitted fifteen folks in the county to have the assistance of Mr. Gregg in making landscape plans. Already sixteen reservations have been made which conclusively indicates the renewed interest in home landscaping.

By the use of canvas Mr. Gregg demonstrated to the audience how to landscape and how not to. He especially stressed the use of curved driveways and sidewalks rather than the use of straight lines. He mentioned the desirability of having open spaces in front of the homes so as not to obstruct the beautiful views from within the home. He emphasized the use of border planting to frame the picture, mentioning the various kinds of shrubbery that could be used in carrying out this principle. These meetings are public to everyone in the county and it is hoped that more people will avail themselves of this opportunity on November 23 when the second demonstration will be given. The following places were landscaped: Mrs. W. H. Davis, Boyne City; S. G. Arbuckle, Boyne City; Chas. Crouterfield, Charlevoix; Mrs. E. P. Dunlap, East Jordan; and Oakley Saunders, Charlevoix. Each one of the above mentioned is all set to carry out the directions next spring. Think what this will mean to the county when these places will be beautiful and be so much more pleasing to the eye as one travels by.

Robot Pilots German Plane in Flying Tests

Berlin.—Remarkable progress, achieved by Germany in the construction of an airplane with "an automatic pilot" has attracted the attention of civil and military authorities.

The new mechanism is calculated to relieve the pilot of his work; the controls function automatically; during long flights the pilot can lean back in his seat and watch the controls while the craft navigates itself. The robot is of the greatest value in fighting the deadliest enemy of aviation—fog. The gyroscope combination is capable of keeping the plane on even keel, turning or banking, climbing or descending with virtually complete safety, regardless of clouds or mist. The plane's pilot need merely adjust the gyroscope controls and then let the machine fly, untouched and unguided for hundreds of miles.

U. S. War Vet to Live in Chateau Willed to Him

St. Louis, Mo.—Charles M. Zelgier of St. Louis has taken his family to France to make their home in a French chateau which he inherited as the result of his war-time friendship with the owner.

Zelgier was quartered in the chateau, owned by Adolphe Bonnet, during the World War. The estate consists of a house and 50 acres of fertile soil located near Arhage, south of Paris.

Zelgier, an insurance man, said he planned to stay in the chateau "for the duration of the depression, at least." He hopes not only to avoid the depression, but to build up a business abroad.

From Dog Pound to Canine Throne

Omaha, Neb.—Meet Tony, the dog, whose story is a true American epic.

From the humblest of beginnings to a kingship—that's Tony's history. Less than a year ago Tony was an unwilling occupant of the dog pound at Auburn, Neb.

There Charles Machon, of Auburn, saw him. Tony had no license and was almost certain to be condemned to pay the supreme penalty. But Machon bought his liberty.

Today Tony is a king—king of the coon hunting dogs of Nebraska. He won the title at the annual coon hunt in Talmage, Neb., where he defeated two blood hounds.

Tony has no royal ancestors—he's just dog.

Crimson Defeats Rogers City 21-0

LOCALS KEEP RECORD CLEAN AGAINST CALCITES

The Crimson Wave keeps a clean slate against Rogers City for another year, as a result of their 21-0 victory over the Calcites on the local gridiron Saturday. Rogers has yet to win from the Redshirts for the first time.

The Rogers team played a hard game all the way but five blocked punts and four intercepted passes kept their offensive well broken up. The Jordanites missed several scoring chances, mainly thru lack of punch to drive the last five yards. It was this same lack of scoring punch plus the absence of several regulars that lost us the Charlevoix and Harbor Springs games.

The first blocked punt came after four minutes play when the Crimson forward wall rushed thru to block a punt on the Rogers 45 yard line. The ball glanced back of the punter and was finally downed by a Jordanite as four others stood and looked on, on the Rogers 30 yard line. Nothing became of the threat and Rogers took the ball on downs and punted out of danger.

In the second quarter the locals opened a drive that netted two touchdowns. The first came on a drive of straight football and the second came after one of the most startling plays witnessed in Northern Michigan in some time. With the ball in the Calcites possession on their 47 yard line, they dropped back to punt. Martin Somerville, Crimson center, who played a sensational defensive game, broke thru the line as the ball left center, grabbed the ball as the punt left Winfield's toe, and carried it to the 35 yard line before being stopped.

The last score came when Clark took a pass from Chihak and, with nice interference, outran the Orange and Black boys to the goal.

As the last quarter opened, "Spin" Chihak gave the crowd their money's worth. After the Crimson Wave had rushed the ball to the Calcites 20 yd. line, they had a fourth down with eight yards to go. The pass from center went over Chihak's head but he finally gobbled up the ball and started to run as the Rogers boys swarmed on him. The rest of the team gave him some good interference and "Spin" twisted, dodged and ran to the 4 yard line before being pulled down. Here, again, nothing—and plenty of it) materialized.

The Jordanites rushed the goal line as the game ended but the Huron boys held for downs and got the ball, punting to their 15 yard line as the whistle blew.

Homemakers' Corner BY Home Economics Specialists Michigan State College

Lower the crown, raise it, or change the shape of the brim to bring out-of-fashion hats up to this season's requirements. Felts are easiest to remodel in this way. Hats made of other fabrics may be altered by combining with contrasting or harmonizing materials.

Fitting to the head by creasing all the way around will lower the crown. Tucks or folds might be used. One fold may be long and deep, the other short and shallow, depending on the effect that proves most becoming. One of the advantages of remodeling an old hat is that many effects may be tried.

Holding folds in place by tacking them to a strip of ribbon laid inside the crown is another means of lowering the crown. A new sectional crown may be made using either fabrics or grosgrain ribbon.

A strip of sized fabric of right width, covered with a ribbon band or other harmonizing material will heighten the crown. Wide-brims may be narrowed by cutting off the edge. A straight brim may be reblocked making it irregular with slight dips, or a drooping brim may be straightened by stretching, steaming, or pressing.

Groups of Michigan women are being instructed in remodeling old hats by home economics extension specialists, Michigan State College.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Starts on His Plan for Managed Currency and Commodity Price Raising—Farmers' Strike Under Way—Move for Recognition of Russia.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

SOMEWHERE between the "sound" dollar demanded by the banker and the inflated currency urged by Senator Elmer Thomas and many others President Roosevelt takes his stand for a managed currency and a dollar of fixed value. In a radio address to the nation he declared he would undertake to raise commodity prices to a satisfactory level and then would lessen the gold content of the dollar and peg prices and dollars so they would remain in a constantly balanced equation. "Government credit will be maintained and a sound currency will accompany a rise in the American commodity price level," he said; but he insisted the price level must first be restored before anything like inflation is established.

For the present, Mr. Roosevelt said, it was important to tighten control over the dollar. He added: "As a further effective means to this end I am going to establish a government market for gold in the United States. Therefore, under the clearly defined authority of existing law, I am authorizing the Reconstruction Finance corporation to buy gold newly mined in the United States at prices to be determined from time to time after consultation with the secretary of the treasury and the President. Whenever necessary to the end in view we shall also buy or sell gold in the world market."

"My aim in taking this step is to establish and maintain continuous control. This is a policy and not an expedient. It is not to be used merely to offset a temporary fall in prices. We are thus continuing to move toward a managed currency."

"Our dollar is now altogether too greatly influenced by the accidents of international trade, by the internal policies of other nations and by political disturbance in other continents. Therefore, the United States must take firmly in its own hands the control of the gold value of our dollar. This is necessary in order to prevent dollar disturbances from swinging us away from our ultimate goal, namely, the continued recovery of our commodity prices."

Jesse Jones, RFC chairman; Undersecretary Dean Acheson of the treasury and Henry Morgenthau, Jr., representing Mr. Roosevelt, were entrusted with the job of fixing the price at which the RFC would buy newly mined gold, and the first day they fixed the price at $31.36 an ounce. Agricultural staples and securities immediately began to move to higher levels, as had been hoped. For the second day the price of gold was put at $31.54, and thereupon securities and commodities dropped, to the dismay of the Washington theorists. The RFC pays for the gold with its own debentures.

The President's monetary program is based on the plan of John Maynard Keynes, the British economist. Orthodox bankers in Wall street were rather disconcerted by it. Some were skeptical as to the practicability of controlling the internal price level by changes in the gold value of the currency; others thought the plan would give the government a powerful lever with which to lift prices.

If carried to its logical conclusion, the program means the ultimate fixation of the value of the dollar with a diminished gold content, the resumption of free trade in gold, and of gold redemptions, doubtless on a bullion basis.

IN HIS radio address the President told of the "relief that is being given to those who are in danger of losing their farms or their homes," and later said: "I have been amazed by the extraordinary degree of co-operation given to the government by the cotton farmers in the South, the wheat farmers of the West, the tobacco farmers of the Southeast, and I am confident that the corn hog farmers of the Middle West will come through in the same magnificent fashion."

There was, however, nothing in the speech that reassured the farmers who have embarked on a national agricultural strike. Milo Reno, president of the National Farmers' Holiday association, declared the strike would continue despite Mr. Roosevelt's assurances of higher farm prices.

"The President failed to even mention cost of production," he pointed out. "We're not going to stop this battle until we get what we want and have demanded—cost of production."

would join the non-selling movements in "great numbers."

At that time the farm leaders in six states—Iowa, North Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Oklahoma and Nebraska—had officially proclaimed the strike, and picketing of the highways had begun in some localities. Here is what Reno's association called for from the farmers:

1—Refusal to sell any grain, produce, live stock, milk, butter, eggs, etc., except for prices equal to the cost of production, but willingness on the other hand to exchange such products for whatever labor and the unemployed may have to tender.

2—Refusal to purchase groceries, merchandise, etc., except as necessary to sustenance and unobtainable otherwise.

3—Refusal to leave their homes, a tantamount defiance of mortgage foreclosures and eviction orders.

4—Refusal to meet capital payments on debts until prices reach production cost levels.

5—Refusal to pay taxes or interest on debts out of money needed for food, clothing and other necessities.

Meanwhile the embargo on wheat shipments out of the state of North Dakota, proclaimed by Gov. William Langer, went into effect.

That code for retailers so long in the making was finally completed and signed by the President. It seeks to insure fair practice and to protect the small tradesman, the consumer and the farmer with his low commodity prices. Retail employers with fewer than five persons on the payroll are exempt from the code. Those in communities of less than 2,500 population are exempt from many marking requirements. Local tribunals are to be established to hear complaints of retail profiteering. Child labor is forbidden, with certain exceptions, and the same applies to sales at a loss.

"Loss leaders," widely used by chain stores to attract customers, are absolutely prohibited "in order to prevent unfair competition against local merchants."

Under a comprehensive plan for working hours and wages, stores may choose to operate in one of three groups, having a choice of remaining open for 52 to 56 hours a week; from 56 to 68 hours a week; or for more than 68 hours a week. Employees in the first group will work not more than 40 hours a week; in the second group, 44 hours a week; in the third group, 48 hours a week.

Minimum wages range from $15 for a 48-hour week in cities of more than 500,000 population down to a requirement for a 20 per cent raise and minimum wage of $10 a week in places with less than 2,500 population.

MAXIM LITVINOV, foreign minister of Russia, probably already is on his way to Washington in response to the invitation extended to President Kalinin by President Roosevelt to open negotiations looking to the recognition of the Soviet government by the United States and to the adjustment of other matters at issue between the two nations. Administration officials in Washington believe the conversations will take about two weeks and that before the end of the year the President and Litvinov will announce the resumption of normal relations between the two countries and the establishment of a large credit for the Soviet republic to make purchases in this country.

Though in giving out the correspondence President Roosevelt said he was not committed to recognition of the Soviet government, it is said that preliminary soundings had satisfied him that Russia's desire for American recognition is a concomitant to its desire, to obtain credits for the purchase of American goods. The administration is prepared to join in the development of reasonable credit facilities for the quick disposition of accumulated surpluses in cotton, meat products, copper and other raw materials. There are other problems that must first be solved, such as the czarist debts and the Communist propaganda, but the administration believes these can be speedily cleared up.

The English press hailed the move toward a Russo-American accord as a great force for world peace, and said London could not do better than copy Washington. In Japan officials expressed pleasure over the news, though this may not have been entirely sincere.

COMMUNISTS were blamed for wild disorders that prevailed in Havana and in the Cuban provinces of Oriente and Matanzas. Bakers, butchers and truck drivers carried on their strike in the capital, and the condition was so serious that President Grau's cabinet was ready to resign. An attempt was made to assassinate Carlos Mendietta, Nationalist leader. A bomb was exploded at his residence, shattering the front part of the building, but Mendietta, his wife and his daughter escaped injury.

IF RAILROADS, merchants, hotel men and others vitally interested give sufficient evidence of support in the way of guarantees, A Century of Progress, the big World's fair in Chicago, may be re-opened next spring. There has been much talk of such a step, and now it is urged by President Roosevelt in a letter to the management telling of his enjoyment in his brief visit to the exposition. He writes:

"There seems to be a very considerable demand that you reopen next spring, and since there is every reason to believe that there are many, many thousands who were unable to afford the trip to Chicago this year, but hope to be in a better position next summer, I am inclined to agree with you that it would be a very fine thing to keep open."

"In the event that you and your board decide it is advisable to reopen next year, I shall assure you that I will recommend to congress that an appropriation be made sufficient to maintain the government building and exhibits there."

PREMIER EDOUARD DALADIER'S government in France was overthrown by the chamber of deputies and he and his ministers resigned at once. Opposition to the premier's economy program that included cutting the salaries of government workers and reducing war pensions caused his defeat, which came on a motion for a vote of confidence on the budget. The vote was 329 to 241. Really Daladier's downfall was brought about by an outbreak of political and personal enmities that had been held in abeyance for a long time.

In his final speech before the vote was taken Daladier spoke frankly of the danger the franc is already facing from bear raids which have drained many millions of dollars worth of gold from the coffers of the Bank of France.

Albert Sarraut, who was naval minister in Daladier's cabinet, was given the task of forming a new government by President Lebrun and succeeded in gathering together a ministry that may or may not survive for a time. He became premier and retained the marine portfolio, Daladier taking that of war. Other holdovers were Paul-Boncour, Chautemps and Cot. M. Sarraut announced that France would not enter separate disarmament negotiations with Germany.

SENATE investigators learned a lot about Cuban loans in the inquiry that is being managed by Ferdinand Pecora, the operations of the Chase National bank being the chief feature. The banking subcommittee's counsel disclosed that in 1930 when Cuba's finances began to crumble, the Chase bank and associates, which held $40,000,000 of Cuban obligations, sold $40,000,000 of bonds to the public to pay off their own holdings.

He developed also that the prospect offering the bonds to the public did not show a $7,000,000 deficit in the Cuban treasury the year before, but Chase officials said the "best available figures" at that time did not disclose any shortage.

Albert Wiggin, former head of the bank, had previously told of the huge sums he received as salary and bonus and of the $100,000 a year life pension voted him by the bank's board when he retired. There was so much criticism of this pension that Mr. Wiggin told the senators he had renounced it.

WALTER JOHNSON, chief post office inspector in Chicago, announced that the federal operatives had broken up a nation-wide ring of mail robbers who used Chicago for the dumping ground of stolen securities, and that $500,000 of the loot had been recovered out of $650,000 taken in three robberies.

The recovery includes $100,000 in Italian government bonds of the $125,000 stolen from the steamer Leviathan several months ago; about $200,000 taken in the mail robbery in Chicago December 6, 1932, and part of the loot taken in a Sacramento robbery. In connection with the last named affair "Gloomy Gus" Schaeffer, a member of the Touhy gang under arrest in St. Paul for kidnaping, and George W. ("Red") Kerr, arrested in Chicago, have been identified.

NAZI propaganda in the United States is to be investigated by a subcommittee of the house committee on immigration, according to Representative Dickstein of New York, chairman of the committee. "If we did in Germany one-twentieth of what they are doing here, we would be smug," said Dickstein. German societies in New York were refused a permit to hold a celebration meeting by Mayor John P. O'Brien, on the ground that it was arranged to spread Nazi propaganda.

D. R. HUGO ECKENER piloted the Graf Zeppelin on another visit to the United States. The big airship came up from Brazil, stopping briefly at Miami, Akron, Chicago and again at Akron, and then started on its return trip to Germany.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by the War department that Henry Ford would not be permitted to bid on the $25,000,000 army motorization and airplane building jobs unless he signed the NRA automobile code; this notwithstanding the claim of his company that it is more than complying with the terms of the code.

Now they are buying only enough squash for one serving.

What To Do With Leisure Time

The depression has brought on many economic changes. Because of the new hours of work, the working men and women have more leisure time. The question is asked, "What shall we do in our leisure time?" A great many things may be done, such as developing a keen taste for sports, taking part yourself in out of door recreation, but among the things which should be considered very best of all is reading. Reading can be both entertaining and educational. One should not confine oneself to just one kind of reading, for there are many different kinds of books that fall under either heading. Let the statement be made about you. "He is a widely read person." This would be a worthy aim for the coming year.

HIGH POSTAL RATES CUT FLOW OF MAIL

Return to Two-Cent Stamp Being Agitated.

Washington.—Advocates of an immediate return to the time-honored 2-cent postage stamp for letter mail are planning to press their fight in congress, but whether they will be successful is held to be highly debatable by opponents of such a move. The 3-cent stamp for letter mail made its appearance last July, and while it is admitted that there has been a considerable decrease in the volume of first-class mail since then, Post Office department officials have been preparing to back up with statistics their assertion that many millions dollars more of revenue are being received now than would have been collected under the old rate.

Predicted Higher Revenue. When congress was considering last summer the rate, which it later voted, former Postmaster General Brown predicted that an increase of 1 cent in the first-class postal rate, if applied to letters for delivery outside the post office of origin, would raise substantially $100,000,000, and that $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 more could be raised by increasing the rate on letters for delivery at the post office where they originate.

The argument of the opponents of the present rates is that such a result is not being realized, and that on the other hand there has been a tremendous decrease in the number of pieces of mail carrying first-class postage.

The Post Office department has sought to back up its position by a comparison of revenues at twenty principal offices from letters and first-class packages in the week of September 19-25, the latest for which the detailed figures are available, and the comparable revenues for the week of June 20-26, the last week during which the 2-cent stamp was used. The figures show that the revenue from this source from the twenty cities under the 3-cent rate was 32.55 per cent greater, despite a shrinkage of 11.83 per cent in the postage ounces of letter mail as between the periods compared.

Shift to Third Class. That there was a considerable shift to third-class mail was shown by the fact that for the twenty principal cities in the week June 20-26 the revenue was $428,978 as compared with $580,912 in the week of September 19-25, an increase of $151,934 or 35.42 per cent.

The Post Office department has computed on the basis of all postal revenues from fifty selected cities for the first six months of the current fiscal year that the increases in first and second-class postal rates have resulted in additional revenue of $24,700,000.

Payment for Oil Nets Indians $240,000,000 Pawhuska, Okla.—More than $240,000,000 has been collected by Osage Indians from oil on their allotments, recent compilations revealed.

The 2,227 headrights of the tribe have drawn about $110,000 each, and the lands are far from depleted, said George Beaulieu, head of the oil and gas department of the Osage agency.

The area, already having 9,490 oil wells and 431 gas wells, was described by Beaulieu as "the coming oil field of northern Oklahoma." The original allotment was 1,147,008 acres. Some of it was reserved for townsites and railroads. All the rest has been leased for gas purposes and 317,762 acres for oil, he said.

He predicted that the old naval reserve area would develop into one of the best fields of the Osage, which already made this Indian-tribe the richest per capita nation in the world.

Death Rate Is Low in U. S. Hospital in Paris

Paris.—The death rate at the American hospital here for 1932 was 8 per cent, according to figures just compiled. This rate is lower than that registered by a number of Grade A hospitals in the United States in 1931.

Deaths at the hospital were fewer than the previous year, when the rate was 3.2 per cent. The figures in the United States for 1931 were: Average for all classes of hospitals, 5 per cent; average for Grade-A hospitals, 3.28 per cent.

The American hospital operates under far from normal conditions, a great number of its patients being American travelers from hotels, and a death rate of only 8 per cent for 1977 patients admitted in 1932 is regarded as unusually good.

Of the patients treated in 1932, 696 were surgical cases, 883 medical, 118 obstetrical. Births were 115, representing a decrease of 8 per cent over 1931.

EMPLOYMENT

THE JOB WENT TO SOMEONE WHO HAD A TELEPHONE

THIS young lady visited the employment office, day after weary day, in vain.

Eventually a job opened. It had to be filled immediately, but she wasn't there then. So the employment manager picked from his list of applicants one who had a telephone, and could be summoned instantly.

Other things being equal, the person who has a telephone and can be reached quickly and easily, is quite likely to be the first called back to work.

Order telephone service today from the telephone business office. Installation will be made promptly.

"And what was the number and location of the stateroom you occupied?" "I had Cabin 28 on C deck," Mrs. Jordan replied promptly.

At Rankin's request, she produced from her pocketbook the papers of her passage, which offered substantial evidence of her account.

It was not until the detective had thoroughly examined all these proofs and wrote down the names mentioned that he broached another subject of equal importance.

"Now, Mrs. Jordan," he said casually, "tell me of your romance with Stuart."

"Now, Mrs. Jordan," He Said Casually, "Tell Me of Your Romance With Stuart."

Stuart, so I can understand the circumstances that led to your marriage. How did you become acquainted with the boy in the first place?"

Willingly, the actress complied with a statement in some detail. She first met Stuart, she related, slightly over a year ago, at a party held in private rooms at one of St. Louis' most exclusive hotels. She was playing at the Forrest theater there. The party, a gay, rather abandoned affair, was arranged by Aberdeen students on a lark. The preponderance of young men had necessitated the presence of a few extra girls; and though unacquainted with any of them, Laura Dumont had, at the invitation of several of the chorus, attended to fill in. And there she was paired off with Stuart Jordan, reckless under the influence of liquor and participating in the general revelry.

She fascinated the boy and he monopolized her the entire evening. And when the party was over, he accompanied her to the rooms she shared with another member of the cast. He made a date for dinner the following day. Subsequently, he became increasingly enamored; with a week's vacation in which to entertain her, they were together constantly at dances and suppers after the show. Naturally she was not insensible, she admitted, to his looks or position—as the heir of a fortune and a young man of breeding and social standing.

Their courtship, if such it could be called, was thus short and tempestuous. On the day before he returned to school, while moody and impetuous at the prospect of leaving her, Stuart proposed that they elope. In anticipation, he had already obtained the marriage license. They were on their way to a late dance, and Laura consented. She understood that the nuptials must be kept secret, at least until the boy completed his school year; meanwhile, she was to quit the show and settle in luxurious quarters. But she discovered the real reason for this arrangement, concealing the wedding until her husband reached twenty-two, only afterward.

Laura Dumont and the student were married at midnight on Saturday, February eighth, a year ago, in East St. Louis, across the Mississippi river. And they spent their first night together in a neighboring hotel.

"Your marriage, Mrs. Jordan," Rankin spoke more gravely than his query warranted, "was it a happy one? You had no serious differences with Stuart?"

According to Mr. Fletcher's interpretation, she had written her husband placatingly, as if following some disagreement: Her letters, he thought, conveyed the impression of attempting to effect a reconciliation.

The actress was suddenly anxious at the question; her effort to appear puzzled failed to ring true and she answered more vehemently than necessary.

"Happy, Mr. Rankin? Of course it was, else I would never have come east to join him."

"Are you certain about that?" Rankin insisted, unimpressed. "You had no quarrels important enough to cause a separation—or even a divorce?"

"No, the notion is absurd." She hesitated nervously; it was her evident apprehension of his curiosity that prompted her to ask, "Why you surely had no reason to think there was trouble between us, Mr. Rankin?"

"None particularly, except that Stuart made left you out west, when he matriculated at Philadelphia," the detective fenced adroitly. "You haven't been living with him since, and you waited so many months before re-joining him."

The actress looked relieved at his answer, disarmed by his caution in not referring to the letters, about which she seemed to have feared he might know.

"Oh, that's easily explained," she said quickly. "We were both afraid our secret would be discovered if we continued our double life out there. I was fairly well known and Stuart had a host of friends, so close to his home and college. In this section of the country, however, it was different."

"But besides that, Mrs. Jordan," Rankin misled her still further, "I found no letters from you among his effects in the dormitories. Your failure to write suggests some strain in your relations."

She had completely recovered her poise. "You didn't? Then he must have destroyed his mail," she declared glibly, "for I wrote him almost weekly. And he answered me just as often."

"He also sent you a check each month, didn't he? His check-stubs list a four-hundred-dollar outlay every month, but don't state for whom it was."

"Yes, that was for me. They were always made out to my order as Laura Du Monte. You have probably already learned that until he was twenty-two, he had an income of ninety-five-hundred a year."

"So his uncle, Mr. Merrick, told me. Did you ever hear Jordan say anything that might supply a clue to his murder—speak of an enemy, for instance?"

Mrs. Jordan was emphatic. "Never, Mr. Rankin; it is as much a mystery to me as it is to you."

"Well, I am determined to solve it," Rankin stated grimly, "before many days have passed."

Before he finished his interrogation, he learned what her address in the city would be—the Quaker hotel. From there, she intended to notify Mr. Merrick of her connection with his nephew.

It was from Mrs. Jordan's letters that he hoped to gather the facts she had plainly concealed from him. She was not at ease until assured that he had not yet located them; evidently then, they would contradict at least some of her account. At the same time, strangely enough, her manner had suggested she expected them to be missing—almost that she was aware they had vanished under the influence of liquor and participating in the general revelry.

The lawyer's chauffeur brought the letters at nine o'clock; and immediately Rankin locked himself in Captain Thomas' office to subject them to an uninterrupted study and examination.

The contents bore out Mr. Fletcher's notion that their separation was due to a rift in their marital life. In one letter, the detective read: "Even if I was guilty of a trifling indiscretion at the most, that's all over with now; it is unreasonable that we should continue to live apart like this." And in another, Mrs. Jordan wrote: "You surely can't be serious about getting a divorce; I refuse to allow you to cast off your obligations so easily." When he remained obdurate and unyielding, her insistence of her claims was almost abusive.

Whatever caused their estrangement, several references told Rankin it had occurred ten months ago, on May sixth. That was Stuart's last birthday, according to Mr. Merrick, and about three months after his nuptials. That, Rankin realized, finally explained his exchange of schools; for it was subsequently in May that he first mentioned his decision to get away from St. Louis to some eastern college. Though resolved on a divorce, his hands were tied until he reached twenty-two; the publicity of the suit would apprise his guardian of his unfortunate marriage. And the secret had to be kept until Mr. Merrick had no further power to act under the terms of the will. But while bound to Laura Dumont for almost another year, and maintaining her as was his duty, the boy naturally sought to avoid contact with her and forget her as far as possible.

Apparently, though only three months wedded, the actress was already faithless to Jordan. During his absences at Aberdeen, she had a lover with whom she carried on a vulgar clandestine affair. Her letters denied it, but it seemed this intrigue had begun before her marriage, and despite her vows, continued afterward. Stuart's discovery of her infidelity was evidently an accident; on May sixth, he had surprised her by an unexpected visit, in place of his customary vacation the previous week-end. But the complete story of that disclosure—where it took place and the succeeding events—Rankin could not assemble.

Not stretching each letter carefully did he find the name of Mrs. Jordan's paramour or any clue to his identity—the man for whom she played fast and loose with Stuart's affections.

Not once, either, did she mention her intention of joining the boy in Philadelphia, in March, and in view of her statement that it was prearranged, the detective regarded it with suspicion. But there was another interpretation for her appearance just at this time, so startling that Rankin wiped his brow excitedly as he contemplated it. Could her five-day journey east by boat be purposely to establish an alibi for herself covering the Tuesday night of the murder? That she wanted to protect herself, knowing in advance when the crime would be committed? Such conduct presupposed that she was aware of an elaborate plot involving others, to remove Jordan; but the theory was not beyond the bounds of probability.

The final deductions Rankin drew from the last two letters. In these, when blandishments failed, she had changed her tone. If Stuart did not come to terms, she promised to apprise Mr. Merrick of his disastrous nuptials before May sixth. It was sheer bluff, of course, Rankin reasoned; such a betrayal would give the guardian power to strip the boy—and herself, as well—of the Jordan estate. Not even for revenge would she deliberately rob herself of the coveted inheritance.

At the same time, the situation furnished the actress an all-powerful motive for murdering Jordan before his twenty-second birthday. On his death before twenty-two, there was no danger of her ever losing the property, either through the boy himself, or through Mr. Merrick. In the absence of a will, she alone, as his lawful wife, automatically fell heir to his immense estate.

But beyond establishing this motive, the letters did not involve Mrs. Jordan; and Rankin refrained from drawing far-fetched conclusions. Nevertheless, the situation was suspicious enough to justify his swift resolve to investigate the actress as his next move.

In the meantime, however, Mr. Merrick's alibi about his journey from Vandalla would not be neglected. As a suspect, his position was similar to that of the actress.

Before Rankin could call it a day and go home, he received from the sergeant a resume of his interview with the nurse at the university hospital. It was a short one, but verified Ben Crawford's account of his movements on Tuesday night as far as Florence Dalton could verify it. She had apparently, however, been forewarned by the student to expect some sort of interrogation by the police. And when Gilmore reassured her that her statement would not be made public, she spoke more freely. In accordance with Crawford's story, he had remained with the girl until morning.

As Rankin realized all too well, the report settled nothing about Crawford's whereabouts during the ceremony itself. It offered no support for his tale of the blind date that was not kept. The difficulty about suspecting Crawford of the crime was that there was no iota of evidence to connect him with it. And no suggestion of any motive he might have harbored for wishing Stuart Jordan out of the way.

CHAPTER XI

The Trail of an Alibi

The pursuer aboard the steamship Florida ran his finger along the passenger list he had placed on his desk before Rankin.

"There, you see, Mr. Rankin," he said as his hand paused under a particular entry, "is the name you are looking for—Miss Laura Du Monte. She occupied Cabin 28 on C deck. I don't recall her, but that seems to settle that she made the voyage, as she claims."

The detective verified his reading. "Not necessarily, Mr. Hammond," he returned. "It is possible, you know, for someone else to register as her, in her place. I think I ought to question your ship's doctor, the nurse, Miss Sumner, and Mrs. Winters, just to check up on it."

"I saw Doctor Ireland go ashore this morning," Mr. Hammond nodded affirmably. "But I believe the stewardess and Miss Sumner are still here; all cabin employees were to stay aboard till noon. I'll send for them, for you."

"Please do. And I'll appreciate any other assistance you can give me."

The detective first interviewed the nurse. At his explanation of his mission and full description of Mrs. Jordan's blond golden hair, bow lips and staturesque beauty, she promptly identified her patient of the last voyage in Room 28. She supported the actress' story that she was confined to her cabin throughout the voyage. Even when she felt better, she failed to go on deck. In fact, on embarking, she did not reserve either a deck-chair or a table in the dining room.

"And that struck me as peculiar," Miss Sumner asserted, "because it's practically the first thing every passenger does. You would almost suppose she had decided to stick to her stateroom and see no one."

"How do you happen to know she didn't arrange for a chair or table space?"

"I advised her several times to sit on deck, when the cabin became stuffy," the nurse replied. "The air would have helped her. But she refused because she had no reservations and declined to let me procure them."

"Do you mean to suggest she remained in her cabin to escape observation?" Rankin probed shrewdly. "That her illness was a pretense to avoid encounters with passengers and crew? Is it possible that she feigned much of her distress to have a reasonable pretext for keeping to herself?"

"Well, yes; I don't know why she should have, but I don't suppose it is out of the question."

As Rankin dismissed the nurse, he could not help being somewhat elated at this information, trifling though it was. For it raised some doubt whether the woman who occupied Cabin 28 was Laura Dumont. And when he summoned the stewardess, this mere speculation unexpectedly was fully and undeniably confirmed. An angular, middle-aged, sharp-featured woman, with inquisitive eyes and a firm mouth, Mrs. Winters took a chair; and Rankin repeated the story of his search. But the instant he touched on the passenger's appearance, she halted him by an abrupt gesture of the hand; as though in satisfaction, she nodded her head.

"There, I was right!" she announced proudly. "I'm not surprised at your wanting to learn about her. I was suspicious of her because her hair wasn't golden blond at all! She really had dark brown hair, straight and not curly; the light hair on top was just a wig over it!"

"How can you be certain of that—that she wore a disguise?" Rankin demanded.

Mrs. Winters answered volubly. "Well, I have eyes. Twice, when . . . this woman lay in bed particularly bad, she was careless and let the wig slip over to one side a little. I distinctly saw her real, darker hair underneath." She paused, hesitatingly. "And her name wasn't Laura Du Monte either," she added.

"You discovered that, too?" Rankin's appreciation increased with his enthusiasm. "That's wonderful, Mrs. Winters! How did you learn that?"

But suddenly the stewardess ceased to be loquacious; as though regretting her frankness, she glanced apprehensively at the pursuer.

"I . . . why . . . I only guessed that," she stammered nervously. "I . . . maybe she was registered correctly. I only supposed from the fact that . . . Perceiving the cause for her distress, the detective hastened to reassure her.

"You need have no fear about revealing where you obtained your knowledge," he interrupted. "Nothing will be said, I promise you. And you may be instrumental in clearing up a serious crime and bringing the criminals to justice."

"You understand, I didn't mean to be so newsy," the stewardess spoke apologetically. "But after what I had noticed, I couldn't help wondering who she was. And finally my curiosity got the best of me. Toward the end of the voyage, while she was in her bath, I opened her largest suitcase and examined her clothes carefully. Some of it was marked with name-tape."

"And who was she?" Rankin put the query with barely suppressed intensity.

"Her name was Myra Prentiss; she had it only on a few articles—an old kimono, a brassiere and two pairs of hose. The rest was new and unmarked."

The detective soon established the stewardess' inability to add further to his information concerning the passenger. However, he was not disappointed; already, he felt, his speedy uncovering of the fraud and identifying his quarry was more luck than he deserved. But for the woman's single blunder while she was sick, he might have drawn a blank.

It was indisputable that Laura Jordan had deliberately engineered an alibi for herself, to mask her movements during the murder. Such an elaborate deception could have no other interpretation. While her accomplice journeyed from St. Louis, she must have been in Philadelphia; presumably, she had just met Miss Prentiss and secured from her the details of the voyage. It mattered not whether her confederate aided innocently, or whether she knew of the murder plot, behind the trickery. She must be found; the fact remained that in one way or another, Laura Jordan, whom she could incriminate, was responsible for her husband's death.

But how, Rankin deliberated uneasily, was he to trace the actress' accomplice? Considering this problem, Rankin reflected on how Jordan's wife might have enlisted the missing woman in this imposture. Obviously, she was selected because of her superficial resemblance to the actress, which make-up and a wig would enhance. In that case, her participation could scarcely be guiltless; she probably expected to share the inheritance the murder brought Mrs. Jordan.

But there was still another source from which the Prentiss girl might have been recruited, if the actress had no convenient relative. What was more plausible than that she also came from the stage? If this idea were correct, the actors' organization should have some record of her. Actually, as Rankin knew, there were two such institutions for actors: the Actor's Equity association for principals, and the Chorus Equity association.

He finished questioning Mrs. Winters, expressed his appreciation to Mr. Hammond, the pursuer, and took his departure. Visiting the Chorus Equity association building first, he sought out the membership bureau upstairs. Good fortune again rewarded the detective. Myra Prentiss was listed, a member of Equity, as a chorus girl of some experience.

From Myra Prentiss' association card, Rankin gleaned that she was twenty-two and had been a show girl for three years. The past fall and winter she toured in a traveling company of "Up-Side-Down." That show, an employee was able to inform Rankin, had visited important cities between Pittsburgh and Detroit and disbanded in January, but two months ago, in St. Louis. But just as Laura Dumont had done a year before, she, too, for some reason, remained in St. Louis instead of returning east with the company. For the last entry about her was a notice she sent Equity on about January twentieth, of her new address in St. Louis, permanent until changed; this was the Holcomb apartments, 2435 Clarges street.

RESIDENT AT HOLCOMB APARTMENTS—SINCE JANUARY 15TH STOP AT PRESENT ABSENT FOR A WEEK STOP EXPECTED POSITIVELY TO RETURN TODAY OR SUNDAY AT LATEST.

This telegram was the reply to Rankin's inquiries about the girl by long-distance phone, of the St. Louis police; and as soon as it arrived, he purchased a train ticket to St. Louis.

At headquarters in St. Louis, Captain of Detectives Chambers, notified of his coming in advance, awaited him. He greeted Rankin cordially, extending a calloused hand.

"As you suggested over the phone, Rankin," he said, when preliminary introductions were completed, "I've had every train from New York watched for this woman's return. And her apartment has also been under observation, so that we won't lose track of her afterward. According to the last report I had from the chap assigned to that job, she is there now."

"Then she's arrived?" Rankin nodded his satisfaction. "Good! I was afraid she might disappear on the way or change her mind and destination. What time did she get in, Captain?"

"Only this morning, at ten-fifteen," Chambers replied. "She beat you by just a few hours. From your description, we spotted her at the depot."

The detective pondered a moment. "And she only reached New York at noon on Friday, the day before." He commented slowly. "That means she spent a single night there. . . . How did you learn so quickly that she had gone and when she was expected back again?"

"We inquired at the Holcomb apartments, yesterday afternoon. You see, she doesn't live alone; she merely sublets two rooms in apartment D8 from the tenants—a family named Dobson. Before she left last Sunday, she assured Mrs. Dobson she would return either this Saturday or Sunday—to prevent her quarters from being rented out while she was gone." The Captain paused. "Exactly why are you after her, Rankin?"

"It is in connection with a murder. The facts are rather complicated, but I'll summarize them for you on our way to see the girl. Now that I'm here, I'm anxious to question her and get her evidence as soon as possible."

As the detective rose, Chambers pursed his lips in a low whistle.

Washington Digest
National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—It is a scant two months until congress will be back here in the National Capital, and each day the inevitable question, "what will congress do?" is heard more and more. And when one considers the troubles of the day, it is difficult to avoid the conviction; there seems to be ample reason for wondering what congress will do!

In the minds of Washington observers, as far as I have been able to learn their views, little doubt remains that President Roosevelt will have a highly nervous and bull-headed congress on his hands. It appears certain the senators and representatives are not going to be so tractable as they were from March to June in the extraordinary session. It is equally certain that the members will come back from the hustings filled with a lot of new ideas, champing at the bit, eager to do things, demanding that things be done this way or that. Indeed, I think it can be said that Mr. Roosevelt is going to have both hands full, and if he pulls the reins successfully controlling congress, he will have demonstrated that he is not only a master politician but a super-politician. It is a test, beyond the shadow of a doubt, and a supreme test in every sense of the word.

Just stop and think of the situation: there is as much uncertainty in business as there was this time last year; there are fresh threats from labor; continuing threats from numerous agricultural sections; saber rattling from abroad, cries about the burden of taxation yet dire need for more money for the federal government, pressing social and political problems following repeal of prohibition, demands for relief for the farmer, for the debtor, for the unemployed, and generally speaking, some new crop of troubles every day.

It is to be remembered, too, that every time congress convenes for a new session, its members have come back to Washington filled to the brim with problems, pet or general, from a particular section or state. It is thus quite natural that in this circumstance, there will be partisans supporting everyone of the various questions I have set down. And don't forget, those senators and representatives will make themselves heard! They have never failed at that job, heretofore, and there are no signs indicating they will fall this time.

What the result will be, no one can do more than guess. There are certain phases of the advance showing of the picture, however, which I hear discussed; and I am going to relate some of them in the hope that a better understanding of forthcoming conditions may be had.

Faith in Roosevelt
In the first instance, the records fail to show many Presidents who have had popular faith behind them to the extent of that accorded Mr. Roosevelt. He has caught the public imagination and, although he has some bitter critics and will have more, there seems to be no doubt that he has a rather solid base from which to begin his fight. Next, the country as a whole will listen to that which the President says. Individuals may disagree with him and may oppose him in his programs and policies, but they will read what he has to say or listen to him on the radio. That is an advantage of great importance, since he has the audience. In the case of senators or representatives, except among a few of the real leaders, a limited group of followers will read what he says or listen to his mouthings, but generally there is the tendency to read a headline and say "it's just Congressman Ump-t-ump" and read the next column.

In the next place, there is an election facing all of the members of the house of representatives and one-third of the senators, and every day that any one of them talks on Presidential plans, he is just one day nearer the polls. If need be, you know, the President can let it be known that the individual congressman or senator is not wanted, and the cantankerous gentleman or lady member has something to worry about. In few instances can they win individually; they must have party support. So, the President can hold that club, ready to swing. I am told he has let it drop gently in several places already, but that is outside of this discussion and constitutes purely local party differences.

Besides these, few senators or representatives have the courage to defy the President openly on the floor of their own party. That is the record. Since the President usually is of the party in control of congress, the bills of local importance do not travel far along the legislative pathway when they are sponsored by one who has jumped over the party traces. The others won't trade with him.

These things I have mentioned are things that happen in normal times, normal both politically and economically. But the discussion heard these days gives rise to doubt whether normal rules will be followed. Hence, the question: "What will congress do?"

Superficially, it is made to appear that Mr. Roosevelt already has anticipated much of the trouble that will arise after congress convenes in January. Certainly, the consensus here is that he has built a hard-surfaced, all-year political road for himself as he has gone along. He is at the wheel of the party truck and it is being generally predicted that the boys and girls who want to ride with him will have to stay in their seats or be spilled.

The walls of the National Press club, that famous rendezvous of writers and those who like to associate with the fourth estate, in Washington, is replete with cartoons and sketches. They are the work of the best of the profession who present the ideas of news and conditions visually. Among them is a cartoon depicting a beer keg personified. It carries the caption: "Don't make a fool of yourself!" The cartoon was drawn just after three-point-two beer was legalized.

But, while the cartoon was directed to beer and beer drinkers, some of the officials of the present administration have taken the thought most seriously in its application to the general liquor question. As a result, they are now engaged in studies by which they hope to make it impossible for hard liquor to make a fool of itself when it comes back for legal sale, probably in time for Christmas celebrations.

Under Secretary Acheson, of the treasury, tells me that it is one of the most delicate problems with which he has had to deal. It involves social questions of far-reaching consequences; it touches vital spots in the government financial situation because of the probable revenue from liquor taxes and besides these it still remains a political issue despite the overwhelming sentiment for repeal that has been shown.

Mr. Acheson pointed out how all of these questions were interlinked, and that fact has not made their solution easier. For instance, he suggested that the committee of representatives from several departments of the government were searching for a proper tax level. If the rate of tax were too high, it would make liquor cost more than most consumers would be willing to pay. The result most certainly would be return of a large number of bootleggers, from whom the government would get tax only when it caught them. If the rate were too low, the legalization of liquor would have netted nothing, for one thing to be said in its behalf is that it will produce revenue for a government sorely needing it.

If the federal tax rate be too high, also, there would be little of the possible tax left for assessment by the states, and they need taxes as well. Further, a tax rate too high would naturally react against the sale of the raw materials used in distilling liquor and force those prices down. Such a rate obviously would hurt the farmers who grow so much of the raw materials.

Besides these tax questions, there is still another. Mr. Acheson suggested that to get the maximum revenue, the committee is looking around to determine what the difference in rates should be on wines and beer as distinguished from whiskeys and the high-powered stuff.

Under the new amendment, the repealer, it is hoped by government leaders that there can be a measure of control exercised that will rid the country of saloons to some extent. There certainly is sentiment for distribution only in packages. That, however, is up to the states, but the federal government nevertheless is studying the question.

No End of Problems
Practical problems of the liquor trade likewise must be considered, and there are any number of legal questions that must be ironed out. As an example of the legal problems, I am told that while it is natural to suppose repeal will take away the foundation of the Volstead enforcement act, there are nevertheless a good many provisions of it which can stand by themselves. Congress had authority to enact them even though the main features of the enforcement code must fall when the Eighteenth amendment becomes just a matter of history. This condition obtains with respect to numerous other laws, including the so-called Webb-Kenyon act, which for years has prohibited shipment of liquor into states where prohibition is operative. It was predicated on powers of congress to regulate interstate commerce as were several other pieces of legislation dealing with the liquor traffic.

The committee working under Mr. Acheson is going to the bottom of the questions and ought to be ready to make a report to the President within the next few weeks. Mr. Roosevelt wants all of the data so that he can advise congress what he thinks ought to be done just as soon as it convenes. Otherwise, the federal government will be unable to do anything about liquor control for a good long time.

Lesson for November 5 PAUL IN JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16: 1, 2, 22-31. GOLDEN TEXT—Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty, II Cor. 3: 17. PRIMARY TOPIC—Settling a Dispute. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Only Way. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Looking to the Church for Guidance. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Heeding the Voice of the Church.

I. The Controversy in the Church at Antioch (vv. 1-5).
The occasion of the controversy was the return of Paul and Barnabas from their first missionary journey. Upon their return they gathered the church together and "rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles." The difficulty was a most serious one, for it threatened the disruption of the church into a Jewish and Gentile division. The point at issue was not the admission of the Gentiles into the church. That had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was: On what ground could they be received? Should Gentile converts be required to keep the Mosaic law as a condition of salvation? That which brought this issue into prominence was the coming of certain men from Jerusalem who declared, "Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved" (v. 1). The problem was so difficult that Paul and Barnabas were unable to put these men to silence. The brethren at Antioch decided to refer the matter to the mother church at Jerusalem. Accordingly, Paul, Barnabas, and others were sent as a deputation to Jerusalem. On the way they passed through Phenice and Samaria, declaring the news of the conversion of the Gentiles.

II. The Deliberations of the Council (vv. 6-21).
1. Peter's address (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness of his acceptance of the Gentiles by giving his Holy Spirit unto them as unto the Jews (Acts 10: 34-47). Since, therefore, God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so.
2. Paul and Barnabas rehearse their experience (vv. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on their preaching of salvation by grace through faith apart from works.
3. The argument of James (vv. 13-21).—He showed how the truth declared by Peter harmonized with the prophecy of Amos (Amos 9: 11-17). He made it clear that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict with God's plan, but in strict harmony therewith. God's plan, as set forth in James' speech, is as follows:
a. God would visit the Gentiles to take out from among them a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now going on—the worldwide preaching of the gospel and the calling out of the church.
b. After the completion and removal of the church from the world, Israel as a nation will be converted and restored to their land with all its privileges by the Lord himself upon his return (vv. 16, 17a). The building again of the tabernacle of David means the restoration of the Davidic throne. Gabriel, in announcing to Mary the birth of Jesus, said, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David" (Luke 1: 32).
c. This will be followed by the conversion of the world through the agency of converted Israel (v. 17b, cf. Rom. 11: 15). He showed that there is no conflict when the Scriptures are rightly divided.
d. James' proposition (vv. 19-21). His judgment was that the Gentiles should not be troubled with the things which were Jewish, but should be warned against the perils of heathenism, such as meat offered to idols, fornication, from things strangled, and from blood.

III. The Decision of the Council (vv. 22-29).
The mother church accepted the resolution offered by James and came to a unanimous agreement. They not only sent a letter stating the decision of the conference, but took the wise precaution to send influential men along with Paul and Barnabas to bear the same testimony by word of mouth. This letter denied the authority of the Judaizing teachers (v. 24), and declared the method by which this decision had been reached (vv. 25-27). They wisely put the Holy Spirit first.

IV. The Decision Delivered to the Church (vv. 30-35).
The church at Antioch was called together to hear this report. Its reading brought great rejoicing.

The Abiding Presence
The promise of Christ that he would remain with his own, even to the end of the world, though given primarily to his apostles, was not for them alone, but for all who should believe in him through their teaching and that of their successors.

Meditation of Christ
Let it be today. Shut yourself in, sit down to think, and to meditate, and to read that which will assist your thoughts about him, and your meditations on him.

FEAST AND FUN IN BRIDAL RITE

Hungarian Weddings Full of Pagan Tradition.

There is hardly anything more picturesque than a Hungarian wedding celebrated with much revelry and merrymaking, a correspondent of the New York World-Telegram writes. The racial peculiarities of Hungarian peasant wedding customs derive from ancient pagan traditions and from the popular mind. Such weddings usually take place in autumn after the vintage. Customs may vary, but generally they are as follows:

At the feast of the betrothal, a plate covered with an embroidered cloth is presented to the betrothed, so that they may collect the so-called "kiss-money." The guests put money into the plate, according to their means, and at every gift the young couple must kiss each other. The money collected is held in high esteem—being the first the two young people have earned together—and it is either saved for the future household or spent on presents they give each other.

On the third Sunday after the betrothal, the master of ceremonies, decorated with gay ribbons and a garland by the bridesmaids and bearing a bunch of flowers on a staff, starts on his round. He calls on all the relations and friends of the couple, pronouncing an invitation to the wedding in verse. On the next day, Monday, they make a great ceremony of carrying the bride's bed to the house of the groom, together with other pieces of the dowry, such as a chest carved and painted with a brilliant design of tulips, containing cloths and linen, the distaff and the reel, household implements, and with wise foresight, a cradle. All this is stipulated by the marriage contract.

On Tuesday, the guests go to the bride's home to help prepare and cook the meals for the wedding, which takes place on Wednesday. Early in the morning the guests assemble at the bride's home. The best man and the person giving away the bride haggle in humorous verses over the bride. The splendid humor inborn in the Hungarian people portrays itself at such occasions in witticisms and impromptu rhymes, and finally the guests must put up the money the two demand.

Of old, it used to be gold pieces, but nowadays it is mostly pennies. This is called the "wealth money." Now the party proceeds to the church amid music, cheering and pistol-shots. The young men carry dasks of wine and invite every passerby to drink the health of the young couple.

MEDICAL ADVICE
If you want to... keep the bowel action regular and comfortable... make constipated spells as rare as colds... avoid danger of bowel strain... use a liquid laxative.

Can constipation be overcome? "Yes!" say medical men. "Yes!" declare thousands who have followed their advice and know. You are not apt to cure your constipation with salts, pills and tablets, or any habit-forming cathartic. But you can overcome this condition just by gentle regulation with a suitable liquid laxative.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the average person's bowels just as regular as clockwork in a few weeks' time.

Why Hospitals use a liquid laxative

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can be controlled. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will it irritate the kidneys. The right liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement, with no discomfort at the time, or afterward. The wrong cathartic may keep you constipated as long as you keep on using it! In buying any laxative, read the label. If it contains a doubtful drug, don't take it. If you

THE TEST:

This test has proved to many men and women that their trouble was not "weak bowels," but strong cathartics! First: select a properly prepared liquid laxative. Second: Take the dose you find suited to your system. Third: gradually reduce the dose until bowels are moving of their own accord. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has the highest standing among liquid laxatives, and is the one generally used.

When the New York Yankees are on the road, Gehrig sometimes goes down to the dining room ahead of Ruth and the Babe asks Lou to order his dinner for him.
"He always eats the same thing," says Gehrig. "I order him a steak and if it is not two inches thick, he sends it back."

But I know another favorite dish of the Babe's. I have often known him to drive from St. Petersburg to Tampa, because there is a restaurant in the latter city which gets stone crabs from the East coast.

Ruth now sees humor in an experience he once had, but he didn't laugh when it happened. He was driving his car to keep a golf engagement at a club which is pretty well out in the country, and he was hurrying. A small town motorcycle cop chased and baited him.

"He didn't recognize me," said the great man, in relating the incident to his friends, "so I told him my name."
"And what did he say then?" inquired a listener.

"He said," roared the Babe, "So your name is Ruth? Well, what business are you in?"

To a man who can't walk a block or two in New York without tying up traffic, this was a crushing blow.

It is an experience to walk on a busy thoroughfare in almost any large city with either of those two superlative showmen, Ruth or Jack Dempsey. Before you have gone a block, you realize that as far as avoiding attention is concerned, you might as well lead a lion on a leash, or take an airing on an elephant. As a matter of fact, I saw an elephant led through our streets for advertising purposes, and it attracted considerably less attention than I have seen crowds display for both the Manassa Mauler and the Bambino.

One more story about Ruth. When he was making a picture in Hollywood, a certain news service assigned a reporter to "cover him," with instructions not to let him out of sight from the time he rose until he retired for the night, and to write all he did. The representative of the press took his job so seriously that he got on the Babe's nerves. He asked Ruth whether he did any road work to keep in condition and was assured that he did. Why then, the reporter demanded, had he never seen the Babe on the road. It was because, he was told, he did rise early enough. Ruth, he was told, did his road work at 6 a. m. The news gatherer was shocked to hear that he had been missing something and announced that he would be on hand the next morning.

This was unwelcome news, but the Babe and Artie McGovern, who was with him, set an alarm clock for 5:45 and struggled out into the early dawn. They found the reporter waiting. They started to jog up the street, and the reporter jogged with them. But then the Babe increased the pace. At the end of a couple of blocks, the news hound was all in. He gasped a question as to whether they would return by the same route, was assured that they would, and dropping breathless on a convenient lawn, stated that he would wait for them. The Babe and Artie McGovern started on briskly, made a couple of right angle turns, came back to a side door of the hotel, and went back to bed. The reporter waited two hours. When he next saw the runners, he received the combined apology and explanation that, before they realized it, they had covered twelve miles and had caught a ride back.

Lights of NEW YORK
By WALTER TRUMBULL

Most of the big baseball players have a very warm spot in their hearts for youngsters. I know that Lou Gehrig, for example, recently broke an engagement to go to a party at a boys' club. And when he got there, with smiling good nature he autographed books, cards and everything the kids offered him on which to write his name. Gehrig, the man Clark Griffith and many other baseball men have frequently selected as their all-star, all-time first baseman, is a modest, likable giant, who has none of the so-called bad habits. Yet his baseball idol is Babe Ruth, who has not always followed the straight and narrow path. Because he has been on the same team with the Babe, Lou Gehrig has not always had the recognition his ability deserves, and it might be only natural if he felt some resentment. But his admiration for Ruth is uncolored by the slightest tinge of jealousy. The Sultan of Swat has no more loyal booster. Gehrig declares and believes that Ruth is a grand fellow and the greatest ball player that ever lived.

When the New York Yankees are on the road, Gehrig sometimes goes down to the dining room ahead of Ruth and the Babe asks Lou to order his dinner for him.

"He always eats the same thing," says Gehrig. "I order him a steak and if it is not two inches thick, he sends it back."

But I know another favorite dish of the Babe's. I have often known him to drive from St. Petersburg to Tampa, because there is a restaurant in the latter city which gets stone crabs from the East coast.
