Majority of Farmers In Carn-Hog Program Continued For 1935

The past week has seen the sign-up campaign completed for this year's program. Five different meeting places were scheduled last week. It is assumed that those who did not attend one of the meetings are not interested in continuing the program this year.

The payment plan is somewhat different than last year. In fact, the payments to the farmers average about 40 per cent of the 1934 plan. On the other hand however, only a 10 per cent reduction is necessary, while in 1934 it was 25 per cent.

This year in the case of those who in the program last year, it has been a very simple task. In a case of a new contract signer, it is just as difficult as it was the year before, and requires the securing of a lot of information relative to the farm business in 1932-33. As a result, only three new co-operators were secured for the program.

County Agr'l Agent.

34 Farmers Keeping Farm Account Records

As far as the farm account project is concerned, the 1934 year is past history. In this work, March 1st is the beginning of the new year. 34 Charlevoix County farmers have been keeping an accurate account of all the receipts and expenses pertaining to the farm itself. In addition, there are approximately 20 farmers who are starting a farm account book for the first time. This work is very closely supervised by the County Agent who starts each new man with his books, provides for a farm visit once during the year, and who assists in the checking of the books at the end of the year.

It is too early to determine the farm returns, but it is safe in saying that they will show up to better advantage than the previous year. The state records show clearly that the 1932 year was the low point in this depression, with 1933 slightly improved, and 1934 better yet.

Within a short time some additional publicity will be published in regard to the results of last year. Also, a list of names will appear soon.

B. C. Mellencamp,
County Agr'l Agent.

Mrs. Marian Bence Passed Away Saturday, March 9

Gertrude Evans was born July 4, 1851 in Ohio and passed away March 9, 1935 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wetzel, where she had made her home the past four years. She had been in poor health for some time but was compelled to take to her bed Thursday, March 7, with an attack of heart asthma.

When but a small child she came to Michigan with her parents. On January 1, 1874, she was united in marriage to Marian Bence of Antrim, who preceded her in death, about ten years ago.

She is survived by one son, Bert Bence.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. W. Sidebotham of the Presbyterian Church, Sunday afternoon, with burial at Charlevoix.

Those from away to attend the funeral were, Mr. and Mrs. Olin Tenney and J. Tenney from Saginaw and Mr. and Mrs. R. Bence of Torch Lake.

Campbell — Taylor

Alva Jerome Campbell and Miss Stella May Taylor, both of Boyne City, were married at the Presbyterian Manse in East Jordan, on March 10, Rev. C. W. Sidebotham, officiating. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Leonard B. Nelson, of Boyne City.

Time Sales of Cars Showing Improvement

Percentage of time or contract sales of passenger automobiles throughout the state, is rapidly creeping up on cash sales, records of the Department of State show. Contrary to the general belief, when the percentage of time sales shows a gain, more cars are being sold, records show. This is because, in times of stress most of the cars sold are to those able to pay cash; as men return to work, they buy cars, generally on a contract basis, automobile dealers' experience shows.

In some areas of the state, cash sales showing gains in percentage, are sometimes explained by the fact that some banks are beginning to handle automobile loans for preferred risks without taking chattel mortgages, which transactions are reflected as cash sales, and dealers point out. Selection of 100 sales of new cars throughout the state for each of the past four months, indicates that time sales have composed from 44 to 54 percent of the total volume of this trade.

Michigan Potatoes

While Michigan potatoes go begging at less than 20 cents a bushel according to localities, Maine and Idaho tubers continue to command market prices two and three times as high with the demand strong. And this in face of an almost unprecedented raise in the prices of all foodstuffs. Perhaps an answer to this discrimination is to be found in the failure of many Michigan growers to market their product with the same care shown by their competitors. For years these growers have been dumping their crop on the market regardless of looks or quality.

Housewives are not prone to voice irritation when the bushel of potatoes brought to her door and so highly praised by the grower is far from possessing the quality claimed. It is natural that following several such misrepresentations she is to be found in the market place asking for foreign grown brands at excessive prices. Until such time she can be assured of not being subjected to further deceptive sales methods local growers will be unable to recapture the home market which has been rapidly slipping from their grasp. Prompt recognition and proper corrective measures will go far to remedy the present situation.

Homemakers' Corner BY Home Economics Specialists Michigan State College

The home is the workshop where all human values should be encouraged to grow and mature, home economics child care specialists of Michigan State College believe. The best teachers are parents who observe carefully, plan hopefully, and measure mental growth accurately.

Parents are prone to think that education takes place at school and that they are not equipped to educate their children. At best, the school only can provide opportunity for increasing a child's fund of information and with limited possibilities for contacts with other people of his own age.

The school can not see that the child attempts the new with eagerness and zest instead of self-consciousness and fear. It cannot even attend to his social development enough to make certain that he improves opportunities for contacts with his friends so that he becomes more co-operative, or that he takes the lead in initiating activities and in getting others to work with him.

About the only way the school can help the child "grow up" is to see that he dispatches class work assigned him with some reasonable degree of promptness, neatness, and accuracy. Parents still have the responsibility for seeing that their children are as independent, reliable, and responsible as they should be for their ages.

Parents are advised to do a little scouting and observe their child as though he were any neighborhood youngster and learn to know in what ways he is not developing as well as he should. No one else with whom the child comes in contact will take the time to do such painstaking teaching as is necessary to mature his social relationships at the same rate as his intellectual attainments.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our most sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends, especially Mr. and Mrs. Wetzel, for the loving care during the illness and death of my dear mother and aunt and to Rev. C. W. Sidebotham for his comforting words.

Submit Proposed Amendment To State Constitution

There will be submitted to the electors at the Diennial Spring Election to be held on Monday, April 1, 1935, the following proposed amendment to the Constitution of this State.
(Proposal No. 1)

Amendment with reference to the determination of the votes and contested elections by the Board of State Canvassers.

Amending Section 4 of Article XVI of the Constitution:—

Sec. 4. In all cases of tie vote or contested election for any state office, except a member of the legislature, any recount or other determination thereof may be conducted by the board of state canvassers under such laws as the legislature may prescribe.

The section of the Constitution which would be altered or abrogated in the event of the adoption of this proposed amendment is as follows:

Sec. 4. In case two or more persons have an equal and the highest number of votes for any office, as canvassed by the board of state canvassers, the legislature in joint convention shall choose one of said persons to fill such office. When the determination of the board of state canvassers is contested the legislature in joint convention shall decide which person is elected.

(Under the present Constitution, recounts in contests for state offices are conducted by the legislature. This amendment, if adopted, will permit the board of state canvassers to conduct any recount in all cases of tie vote or contested election for any state office, except a member of the legislature.)

ORVILLE E. ATWOOD,
Secretary of State.

Treat Those Grubs In Dairy Animals

The cow business in Michigan suffers several losses each year from a preventable source. Rapidly rising prices of butterfat, milk, beef, and even hides are encouraging better practices, and many livestock men are wondering about the effect of the "ox-warble" or "rub-in-the-back," they are noticing on their cattle on a production of these salable commodities.

Grubs in the back of an animal do decrease the capacity of that animal to produce. As much as 10 per cent to 15 per cent losses may result in the milk and butterfat production of dairy animals. The cost of control is so small that Michigan livestock men who have grub cattle are wasteful. The grub lives only in cattle in Michigan and all of them grow through the winter in the animals. They must emerge through the skin and reach the ground, to develop into flies and produce eggs for next years grubs. The eggs are laid on the hind legs of the animal, and the young grub wanders inside the animal for several months after entering the skin on the leg where the eggs are laid.

The best treatment consists of treating the grubs as soon as they appear, with non-poisonous washes or ointment. The grubs may be squeezed out by hand, but it is far simpler, and more pleasant to use the treatment suggested. In treating, the scab is removed from the bump, and the ointment pressed into the small hole there in the skin. This results in immediate death of the grub. Among the remedies that may be used in all probability, the Gusanol preparation is the best that we know of. This is a product made by the Cooper Company, and is now available in the county at the Charlevoix and Boyne City Co-operative Companies. A 50c bottle will treat your head several times and eliminate this undesirable condition. More complete details are available upon request.

County Agr'l Agent.

No New Taxes!

Governor Fitzgerald continues to warn the legislature that unless his program for state economics through consolidation of various departments meets with legislative sanction, there will not be sufficient state funds available for public aid. Nor will he allow himself to be swerved from his campaign promise to the people of "no new taxes." The responsibility rests squarely with the lawmakers and not with the governor as to what happens to our educational institutions during the coming two years.

Mr. John W. Taxpayer is going to applaud the governor for the stand he is taking no mistake about that. In past years the humble taxpayer has been promised during campaign time drastic relief from tax burdens, only to have those promises broken. It would be a reflection on his intelligence to believe he will not continue to support any man who insists that campaign promises are a solemn pledge to the people that must be kept.

THE Week At Lansing

(By FRANK D. BROWN,
Special Correspondent)

Despite republican victories at the polls in Monday's four special legislative elections, which technically gives the administration control of the lower house, the Fitzgerald program is not going to have such easy sailing as outward appearances would indicate. By winning all four seats in the House, the republicans, according to the official roll call, have 51 votes as against the 49 which the democrats can muster, but this does not mean a whole lot if the republicans with their newly gained strength attempt to antagonize the minority group to the extent that they become blindly partisan. The only result can be the defeat of many worthwhile measures and the ultimate failure of much that is good in Michigan's 1935 "new deal."

The clean sweep which republican candidates made in all four legislative districts, naturally, is the source of much gratification to Gov. Fitzgerald and his followers. On the other hand, it is the source of bitter disappointment to the democrats, nevertheless, the democrats are inclined to accept the reversal philosophically and they appear willing to co-operate insofar as no attempt is made to employ "steam roller" tactics to drive them into line.

The administration-republican group in the House this week delegated a committee of its members to confer with Speaker George Schroeder (D), relative to reorganizing certain important standing committees. This was the first gesture on the part of the newly ascended republicans to gain control of the House machinery but up until the time this was written no overtures has been made to the speaker. Whether or not such demands will be foisted upon the speaker remains to be seen. If the republicans are "smart", they will let the matter stand where it is. The treatment received thus far at the hands of a democratic-controlled House has been most generous. If not they will attempt a reorganization of committees and thereby engender bitterness which can only result in a delay of legislative progress and the possible slaughter of many administration bills.

As now aligned, the House stands 51 republicans and 49 democrats but the fly in the ointment is found in the forced absence of Rep. William A. Ward (R) of Grand Traverse. Rep. Ward since many weeks before last November's elections has been confined to the hospital and without his vote on important measures the republicans can only hope for a "styptic", that is unless enough democratic bolters can be found to ride along with them. This latter possibility is rather remote in event efforts are made to reorganize committees and the blood of the partisan ox is spewn along the footpath of legislative accomplishment.

Rep. Ward, it is understood, has sufficiently recovered from his prolonged illness to be brought to Lansing in event the importance of his absence demands such a radical step, however, this is considered mere idle gossip. The republicans likely, will seek to make peace with their neighbors as the easiest way out of an embarrassing position and the present session brought to a close as quickly as possible.

For the first time in years, if not in the history of a Michigan legislature, one of the houses has adopted the procedure of regularly convening in the morning rather than at the usual hour of two o'clock. The legislative workday has been a standing joke with the public for some time; the time of actual meeting usually running from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. This gesture on the part of the senators counter acts the odium attached thereto but it still fails to meet "Mr. Average Citizen's" conception of just what a real day's work amounts to.

The governor is still in combat with what is probably one of the strongest organized groups of lobbyists in the capital—the Michigan Educational Association. Gov. Fitzgerald declared this week that the schools have and always will be fully taken care of but on the other hand deplores the tactics of the school group to "hi-jack" the state treasury.

"Not in a single instance have we failed to meet the demands of the schools," the governor declared. He pointed out that the state has already advanced $2,000,000 a year ahead of time and has released in addition $2,000,000 this year from the $10,000,000 appropriated to assist the schools. "What the school lobbyists are attempting to do is gradually remove from local authorities all authority," he said.

The patronage squabble which has been raging in Lansing for the past two months seems to have taken a more resigned attitude during the past few days. While there is still plenty of pressure being exerted in various quarters most of the job-seekers have come to the resolution that there is no use in forcing matters and that the thing will work itself out with the passage of time. The big thorn in the side of the vast army of state pay grabbers is the office of Carlyle Gray, chief patronage dispenser of the Fitzgerald administration. Gray is less accessible than the governor himself and while serving ostensibly as the chief of the prison industries seems to be doing a pretty good job of holding the boys in check.

The patronage question has been placed on the quota basis. The first quota of most counties has been filled. It now remains for the faithful who have not already been docketed to patiently await the second call to arms. But ah! The patience of many has reached the point of exhaustion and those who voted the republican ticket for probably the first, if not one of the few times in their lives, are ready to go out and condemn the administration for what it has or has not done during the few brief weeks it has been in power.

Paraphrasing Shakespeare: Frailty, thy name is politics. Friends of the University of Michigan and Michigan State College are genuinely disturbed over the likelihood of having their mill tax appropriations cut-off by administration bills now before the House. The House taxation committee, headed by Rep. Vernon J. Brown (R) Mason, has reported out bills with the recommendation that they pass. The measures would repeal the mill tax for these two institutions and thus remove from your tax receipt next year the last semblance of a property tax levied by the state.

Rep. Brown declared that unless these bills find approval that the entire administration program is placed in jeopardy. "If the administration's program to abolish the $3,500,000 state property tax is to be accomplished, these bills must pass," he declared. The bills were advanced from general orders to third reading and will undoubtedly meet eventual approval, both in the House and the Senate.

While perhaps it should not be considered in the light of partisan differences between Lansing and Washington, the first indication of friction between Democratic Washington and Republican Michigan over relief problems has come to light this week. The Washington authorities have indicated that they will not hesitate to set up their own Michigan organization in event the state's arrangement of administering welfare funds proves unacceptable. The whole matter smacks of playing politics with human misery by both the state and the federal governments.

So the merry grind goes on. In the House 295 bills have been introduced to date and in the Senate, 228. Most of these will never see the light of day for which fact the people of Michigan can be truly thankful.

Sermons of Dr. Wm. Lampe Published

Last week Rev. C. W. Sidebotham received a booklet containing four sermons preached by Dr. Wm. B. Lampe, Pastor of the West Presbyterian Church of St. Louis, Mo. The title of the group of sermons is "Keeping the Candlestick". They were delivered recently in the West Church of St. Louis and have especial reference to that church but their application is based on deep foundations so that they, in a marked degree, apply to all churches. These sermons made so profound an impression that the Session of West Church insisted on the privilege of printing them.

The sermons display the breath of scholarship and the depth of conviction and the power of presentation that has made Dr. Lampe an outstanding preacher in the country. Every year brings an increasingly appreciation on the part of East Jordan people for the opportunity that we have of hearing Dr. Lampe preach in our city.

About 4,000 Drunk Drivers Get Insurance Cancelled

Automobile drivers of the state are continuing to be placed under the financial responsibility act, which requires mandatory revocation of a driver's license for three years, unless financial responsibility to meet damage claims up to $11,000, is proven by deposit of cash, securities or insurance policies. One of the most interesting trends developed thus far is that of the some 5,000 drivers who have run afoul of the act, about 4,000 are drunk drivers, who generally have their insurance cancelled as the result of their conviction. These drivers are often unable to get further insurance, and relatively few of them can show financial responsibility in any other form.

Heavy Fighting Reported as Greek Government Seeks to Put Down Insurrection—Senator Robinson Scores Huey Long in Heated Senate Session.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union

THE Greek government is making a grim effort to stamp out the fast growing revolt which started in Crete and has spread to the mainland. Greek government planes bombed the home in Crete of former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, and also struck at five naval vessels manned by rebels standing off the shore of Crete. Venizelos is openly heading the forces of sedition, and reports say, has seized $1,000,000 from the Canea treasury to finance the revolt.

Ex-Premier Venizelos

Martial law prevails throughout the country; rail, telephone and telegraphic communications have been cut off and normal activities suspended. Heavy fighting with serious losses on both sides has been reported in the Struma valley, and in the Macedonian city of Kavalla. Fear has been expressed that the country will be plunged into a factional civil war of unestimated proportions. The government has offered amnesty to the rebel troops if they capitulate peacefully.

Saloniki harbor has been heavily mined in preparation for an attack by the rebel fleet, and land batteries have been reinforced by heavy caliber naval guns. Eight additional classes have been called to the colors as wounded troops pour into Saloniki from the battlefield. The government claims 100,000 loyal troops, 60 airplanes and a quantity of heavy motorized artillery are ready, although good part of this equipment is said to be old and defective.

A report from Alexandria claims that Venizelos has abandoned Crete and fled toward Egypt.

The rebellion had been plotted for a whole year, and broke when 20 naval officers, both active and retired, seized the Salamis arsenal. As the revolt spread, rebels boarded the five warships while the crews were ignorant of the plan, and put under steam. Government planes were dispatched to the scene and pursued the rebel ships down the Aegean sea. The cruiser Averoff was struck by an aerial bomb while the vessel lay in Souda bay, near Crete, and two other ships were reported to have been overtaken and bombed near the Island of Cythera with undetermined damage.

DMINUTIVE King Prajadhipok of Siam has renounced his throne, relinquished his claims to being known as "brother of the moon and possessor of 24 umbrellas," assumed the simpler, if still unpronounceable name of Prince Sukhodaya, and retired to the simple life of an English country gentleman. By his action, the ex-monarch set a record, for it is probably the first time in history that a ruler has abandoned power because his government rejected his demands for greater freedom and democratic control for his people. "My intention that the people should have a real voice in the policy of the government has been ineffective," the ex-king wrote in his message of abdication. "Since I realize that now there is no longer any way of my assisting or protecting the people in the future, I hereby renounce all rights which I had as king or rights of succession, but I reserve the rights which I had formerly enjoyed before accession to the throne."

Prince Ananda, nephew of Prajadhipok, has accepted the throne, reports state. The prince, now eleven years old, is attending school in Lausanne.

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, jurist, scholar, soldier and gentleman, is dead. Two days before his ninety-fourth birthday, the beloved "great dissenter" succumbed to the ravages of pneumonia. The next day, in the somber Supreme court chamber, the court led by Chief Justice Hughes paid tribute to the man whose career, he said, had been one of "unique distinction." Justice Hughes' voice choked as he spoke. The grind of legislation and the disputes of the day were forgotten in congress as both the house and senate paused while glowing words were said in memory of the retired justice. Funeral services were held in Washington, attended by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and members of the Supreme court. After the ceremony, Holmes was given military burial in Arlington National cemetery, as befitted one who had served his nation so gallantly. Justice Holmes was born in Boston, the son of the noted American poet of the same name. He entered Harvard and was in his senior year when the Civil war began. He enlisted as a lieutenant, was promoted to a captain and retired with the rank of colonel. He was wounded three times. After the war he returned to school and obtained his law degree. In 1882, Holmes was elevated to the Supreme court of Massachusetts, and in 1902, President Roosevelt appointed him to the United States Supreme court. On October 4, 1928, when he was eighty-seven years old, he became the oldest man ever to sit on the bench of the Supreme court. He retired in January, 1932.

SENATE administration leaders have decided to virtually abolish NRA when it expires in June, and set up in its place a plan of self-government in business, eliminating present coercive measures, and giving over administrative functions of the new program to the federal trade commission. This would end one of the administration's most spectacular and far-reaching experiments. In its general form, the plan calls for permission to join in voluntary codes regulating trade practices and eliminating unfair competition. Price fixing will be outlawed. Business and industry will agree to minimum wages and maximum hours, and only when these standards are violated, can the government apply compulsory codes.

At the same time United States District Judge W. G. Borah, in New Orleans, denied a government petition to compel a box manufacturer to comply with the maximum hour and minimum wage provisions of the lumber code, ruling that the national industrial recovery act is unconstitutional. The ruling is expected to bring before the United States Supreme court the constitutionality of the interstate commerce clause of the lumber code.

THAT "ancient repository of dignity," the senate, has been treated to an exhibition of personalities, vituperation, barely avoided fistic encounters, and general uproar centering about Senator Huey Long that should set a record for even that august body. Goaded into action by the almost daily tirades of Louisiana's Kingfish, majority leader, Joe Robinson of Arkansas arose white with rage and let loose a castigation designed to blast the irrepressible Long into submission. Robinson appealed to the senate to assert itself and put Long, whom he called "a madman," in his place. Vice President Garner and more than a dozen senators shook hands with Robinson when he closed, and galleries applauded until the chair threatened to clear them. It had no perceptible effect on Long other than to cause him to rush back to the senate chamber, and renew his attack on Robinson.

Senator Robinson

The next day Huey precipitated another verbal free-for-all when he resumed his one-man campaign against Postmaster General Farley and the New Deal in general. Long charged that Farley was instrumental in quashing an indictment against a bank in which Norman Davis, "ambassador at large," was interested. For his trouble Kingfish received a liberal supply of ridicule. He also sent to the senate post office committee a letter in which the accusation was made that Farley is "profiting" from 25 business concerns in New York city, involving violation of four criminal statutes. When questioned, Farley said he had no statement to make.

S. CLAY WILLIAMS, head of the NRA, tendered his resignation to the President, starting what is expected to be a wholesale housecleaning of the recovery administration's high command. Chairman Williams explained his action by saying that he had to return to his job as head of one of the country's largest tobacco companies. Three of the four remaining members of the board, Arthur D. Whiteside, Walton Hamilton, and Sidney Hillman, are known to have their resignations ready. Rumors say that the President will not fill the vacancies, but will return the NRA to a one-man command.

MONEY markets of the world reacted violently after President Roosevelt declared his administration would seek further jacking up of commodity prices. Stocks rallied in New York, government bonds sagged, and the falling British pound rose four cents. The President hurriedly issued another statement explaining that his advocacy of higher prices did not mean further devaluation of the dollar, at least not for the present. The first statement was made by the President at a press conference when he was asked if he believed prices had now risen sufficiently to warrant stabilization. He replied that they had not; that they were still too low in relation to debts.

ITALIAN government officials state that nearly 1,000 aviators and several squadrons of planes have sailed for East Africa, and that a second wave of troops has been started to join the 20,000 already massed in Somalia. General Graziana has been named governor of Somalia and commander of the troops.

THERE seems to be no doubt about the "pink slip" clause in the income tax law being repealed. Overwhelming sentiment for its abolition has been expressed in both houses of congress, and the house ways and means committee has already approved the resolution offered by Chairman Doughton. Polls taken disclose a heavy majority in the senate favor repeal, and both Democratic and Republican house leaders are pledged to lend their strength to prompt passage of the measure. Congressional decision on the "pink slips" must be registered before March 15.

BY a vote of 23 to 1 the house ways and means committee approved the Vinson bonus bill, and gave the rival Patman bill a possible edge. The committee instructed Chairman Doughton to ask a wide open rule permitting inflationists to move the Patman measure as a substitute on the floor. Patman supporters claim the house will pass the first bonus bill brought up, but conservatives are working to jockey the "printing press money" measure out of preferred position. The Vinson bill is favored by the American Legion.

DONALD RICHBERG, executive director of the National Emergency council, and one of the closest advisers of the President, "guaranteed" that there would be no monetary inflation as long as Franklin D. Roosevelt is President. His statement came in answer to a questioner at a lecture in Boston.

Donald Richberg

"If we are to assume that President Roosevelt will be President for the next six years, I can tell you this: I can guarantee there will be no inflation while Franklin D. Roosevelt is President," Richberg said.

He dodged further discussion of the subject, and refused to comment as to what was being done by the government internationally and nationally on monetary policies. However, Richberg did touch on the Townsend plan for payment of $200 monthly to all persons over sixty. He said: "If everybody over sixty is to get $200 a month, you can be certain it is going to come out of the pockets of everybody between eighteen and sixty."

"When those under sixty have arrived at the unselfish attitude where they are ready to dig to pay everybody over sixty the $200 a month, there will have been a tremendous spread of real Christianity. But the government can't get the money out of this air."

Richberg flatly denied that the government was issuing baby bonds because bankers had refused to lend the government money, and asserted that several billion dollars more could be borrowed without endangering national credit.

THE American Federation of Labor proposes to find out immediately what are its chances of fully organizing the workers employed in the automobile industry—and if Doctor Wolman's figures are correct it is likely the federation is doomed to be greatly disappointed. The method adopted is the calling of a secret strike vote among members of the 176 federation locals in the industry. Organizer Francis J. Dillon explained this did not necessarily mean there would be a strike, only the federation's national officers having authority to order such action.

"Now is the time to find out, once and for all," he said, "whether the workers in the automobile industry want the American Federation of Labor. If they want the union, we will find it out through these strike votes. If they don't, well . . ."

The automobile industry is in the midst of the busiest season it has had since 1930. The great majority of its workers are not in the federation ranks and probably would not strike; but its plants could be seriously crippled by strikes in allied industries. Perhaps the American Federation of Labor leaders have some way of explaining how all this would help on the cause of national industrial recovery.

SECRETARY OF STATE CORDELL HULL encountered his third success in carrying out his policy of restoring foreign trade by concluding a series of reciprocal agreements with other nations, when a trade treaty with Belgium was signed. Although not entirely satisfactory to Secretary Hull, it was nevertheless a step along the way. The Belgians gave us a tariff or quota concessions on a number of our exports, including automobiles and parts, calculating machines, radios, grapefruit, pears, oatmeal and corn starch. We cut tariffs on plate glass, glass sand, iron and steel mill products, linen fabrics, lace and cement. Reciprocal agreements have been previously concluded with Cuba and Brazil.

THE United States and Great Britain remain unconvinced of Japan's high purpose in China, although Elji Amau, foreign office spokesman, declared that Japan is not trying to persuade China to leave the league, and is not urging China to dismiss foreign advisers. He also insisted that no attempt is being made to force China into an Asiatic bloc in return for financial assistance. In Washington, William Phelps, acting secretary of state, and Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, went into conference. Twenty-four hours later it was announced from London that Great Britain together with the United States, France and Japan was "exploring proposals" to help China financially.

Lansing—More than a half million persons bought fishing licenses in Michigan during 1934. The exact figure is 523,204, according to the License Division of the Conservation Department. This is a new high mark for the sale of licenses. Sales were divided as follows: Resident licenses, 431,794; non-resident annual licenses, 23,973; non-resident ten-day licenses, 45,210; non-resident wife licenses, 22,227.

Flint—Four women escaped unhurt when flames from a 10-inch gas main destroyed their car. Gladys Dormire was driving the car when it struck a petcock on the gas main on a bridge over the Flint River. A column of fire erupted from the pipe beneath the car. The women fled but Miss Dormire returned in an attempt to save the car. Robert Tavish, 12 years old, saw her and cried a warning. She retreated but fainted as she reached safety.

Coldwater—Gerry Paul Donnel, 10 years old, who gave his life for his dog, won the Automobile Club of Michigan's medal for "outstanding or meritorious service." H. O. Rounds, safety and traffic director for the club, made the posthumous award to the boy's mother. Gerry and an older brother were hunting on Jan. 20 when the brother raised his gun to fire at a rabbit. Gerry saw that the "rabbit" was his dog. He grabbed the rifle. It discharged. The bullet killed him.

Lansing—Michigan's State Police radio may be further expanded. The Senate Finance Committee now has under consideration the recommendation of an appropriation of approximately $125,000 for the construction of two new transmitters to supplement the operations of the transmitter at the East Lansing headquarters. Knott for the university and the Modern Language Association of America.

Houghton—For the third time this winter, the United States Coast Guard saved fishermen from being swept on ice floes into Lake Superior. The third rescue was effected when 50 fishermen were caught in the break up of the ice in Keweenaw Bay. Thirty of the fishermen leaped from the floating floe to the firmer shore ice when a strong southwest wind began to push the ice floe into the bay. Twenty other fishermen were aided by the Coast-Guard in pulling their own boats off the floe.

Pontiac—Forest A. Marble, 23 years old, of Flint, driver of a beer truck, escaped with only a slight hand laceration when the wheels of his truck became locked with those of another when the second truck passed him on a curve. With a concrete viaduct post looming in his path, he swerved his truck toward a pedestrian passage and succeeded in driving the cab and engine into the passage. The wheels were sheared off and the rear end upset. Ten thousand bottles of beer were smashed to bits.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington—The wide apprehension over the increasing cost of food and the prediction of a new problem for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

New Problem for AAA—The Department of Agriculture will ascend something like 11 per cent more before July 1, has given rise to a new problem for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. It threatens to be serious, as food questions always are serious, and as this aspect of the situation becomes better understood its political importance is becoming greater.

There can be no doubt that the New Deal program for raising prices has had its fullest effect on the food prices and therein lies the basis for the trouble now brewing. To make the problem more serious from the political standpoint, increased food prices are felt first and most extensively in the metropolitan areas. It is in these same areas that the greatest number of unemployed live and must be cared for. It becomes plain then that increased food prices are directly interwoven with the problem of relief and it is difficult to predict what mass psychology may be developed from such a circumstance.

There are two sides of the problem from the political standpoint. One of them relates directly to the plans for providing food and affects directly those persons whose employment has been small and who have only limited amounts of money with which to maintain life. The second phase involves the future of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and affects directly the political situation that has for some time revolved about the focal point of the principle of attempting to manage prices as is being done under the AAA.

Connected with the latter phase, and likely to suffer from hard-riding politicians, is the movement within the AAA to broaden its power.

It will be recalled that last year Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture and a leading brain trust, sought to force through congress a series of amendments to the adjustment act which, in the view of many observers, would make the regimentation of farmers a compulsory instead of a voluntary proposition as is now the case. In other words, according to critics of the Tugwell plan, the amendments that were offered and defeated in congress last year would make the Department of Agriculture a veritable dictator over the agricultural industries in this country. Although Mr. Tugwell does not figure in the picture so much this year, the same amendments have been put forward and a considerable amount of pressure is being exerted to obtain enactment as law. Having defeated them last year, critics of the program, headed by Senator Byrd (Dem., Va.), are mustering in full strength to squelch the amendments again.

While it is yet too early to hazard a guess concerning the results of this battle, attention may be called at this time to some of the potentialities of such a legislative fight. In these debates lies real danger to whatever good there is in the Adjustment act, according to the best information I can get.

The danger is to be observed in this direction: Those who criticize the Tugwell amendments, though they do not now bear his name, are not going to confine their verbal fire to those proposals. They will go, as they did last year, considerably beyond the scope of the proposed legislation. They will attack any and all features of the whole adjustment program and it is not unlikely that their criticism will result in tearing down some of the admittedly good features of this phase of the New Deal.

I have heard considerable comment to the effect that if the brain trusters who are now promoting the new or revised AAA amendments would use good political judgment, they would not press for action on their proposals at this time. In other words, political commentaries are to the effect that the brain trusters are diving headlong into a whirlpool in which they may find themselves unable to swim. It is plainly a combination of circumstances with which they are confronted. Those were enumerated above. To many observers, therefore, it appears most foolhardy for the supporters of this extreme legislation to go further in their attempt to "strengthen the Adjustment Act" at a time when plainly Mr. Roosevelt does not have complete control of congress and at a time when the strongest tide of opposition to regimentation is running.

It is to be remembered with respect to the legislative situation that there will be opposition, as indeed there already has been opposition developed from among the processors. It should be explained that the revised amendments would place all of the processors under licenses from the Department of Agriculture. Without such licenses they become the equivalent of bootleggers in the prohibition days and no one can foretell what the reaction would be to this. My understanding is that there are something like one hundred thousand of these processors in the various lines of agricultural commodities coming under the jurisdiction of the Adjustment act. In addition to the processors, about nine hundred thousand retailers handling these products are subjected to control, directly or indirectly, by AAA licenses. Consequently, we see more than a million who could do business only if the Department of Agriculture saw fit to grant licenses. And when I say the Department of Agriculture, in law, it slimmers down to the secretary of agriculture. Secretary Wallace's policies and his personal attitude, I believe, are not such as to give cause for alarm respecting administration of these proposed licensing provisions. Yet, it has been freely suggested that a time may come when the secretary of agriculture will be neither as good nor as wise as Mr. Wallace. You can make your own guess as to the possibilities under the regime of a secretary of agriculture who was not big enough for the job.

These circumstances and conditions, in the minds of many observers here, point only to one thing now: The Adjustment act and the program drafted thereunder is not as popular as it was before it went into operation. Judging from correspondence received by representatives and senators, the Adjustment program is actually repugnant to some sections. I believe it only fair to state, however, that the Adjustment program is not blamed wholly for the increase in prices but always in times like these and under circumstances like those to which attention has been directed there has to be a goat. Apparently that goat is going to be the Department of Agriculture and its step-child, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Garner Overlooked—Roosevelt administration is being paid attention

President Roosevelt, it seems to me that one stalwart of the administration—Vice President John N. Garner—is being somewhat overlooked. It seems to me, also, that this should not be the case because all observers agree that Mr. Garner has placed the vice presidency of the United States on something of a new plane.

Much levity always has been directed at any man holding the job of vice president. It is true that the vice president is seldom, if ever, out front, as the expression is. With Mr. Garner, however, it has been decidedly different. I believe, from all of the discussions that I have heard since his election, Mr. Garner has filled, and is filling, a very constructive post in this administration.

Although Mr. Garner weighs about the same and is no taller; while he dresses much as he did before and his wit and humor is much the same, it certainly can be said that he is a much bigger man in the eyes of the people of this country than he was a few years ago. In other words, given the opportunity, Mr. Garner has performed in a way that probably will record him in history as among the outstanding individuals who have filled that second ranking elective post in our government.

It is not generally known, I think, how much influence Mr. Garner wields in the Roosevelt administration. He sits with Mr. Roosevelt and the other members in the cabinet meetings and there is no doubt among observers here that those men lean upon the long experience which the vice president has had.

The port of Baltimore, Md., witnessed an unusual sight the other day, arrival of a shipload

We Import Corn!—It was the first full cargo ever to arrive in that port and caused some observers to remark that it appeared to be "carrying coals to Newcastle."

This would have been true under conditions such as we used to have in this country before the inauguration of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The AAA has made the difference. Last year, the AAA set about reducing the corn acreage in this country because it was the conviction of the New Deal that production had been too great. Twenty per cent curtailment was decreed. To accomplish that end, the AAA offered to pay farmers at the rate of thirty cents per bushel for not growing corn. The plan worked as it might naturally be supposed to have worked and there was the expected curtailment of production.

But nature took a hand and the drought settled down over the vast corn producing areas of the Middle West. So great was this disaster that there is not now sufficient corn to meet domestic requirements. Importation of corn resulted, and the port of Baltimore had the novel experience of seeing corn shipped in instead of out.

Secretary Wallace has defended the AAA policies on the ground that they were exceedingly flexible and could be used to increase or decrease production as conditions required. It seems, however, that corn has a habit of growing only during the summer months and if the production in that period is insufficient the winter months must witness a shortage.

Sutter of California

GEN. JOHN A. SUTTER

JAMES W. MARSHALL

SUTTER'S FORT, NEW HELVETIA

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE recent "gold decision" of the Supreme Court of the United States, awaited so long and so anxiously by the whole world, has added another chapter to the history of money, and especially to that much-discussed and frequently perplexing angle of it, commonly known as the "gold standard." It is a far cry from the event which took place in Washington the other day to an event which took place in a little European village one February night 132 years ago—a far cry, indeed, from the stately hall where sit the black-robed justices of a nation's highest tribunal to a small room in the cottage of a Swiss paper-maker. Yet there is a distinct connection between the two.

Just before midnight on February 23, 1838, a son was born to Johann Jakob Sutter and his wife, Christine Wilhelmine Stoberin Sutter, but if, the next morning, anyone had told the simple burghers of Kanderli in the Grand Duchy of Baden that this little boy's career would change the destiny of a new nation across the Atlantic and vitally affect the economic history of the whole world, they would have stared at such a prophet with unbelieving eyes. But he would have spoken the truth. For the world, half a century later, was to know this little boy, whom his parents named Johann Augustus Sutter, as Gen. John Sutter—Sutter of California, the man whose name has become almost synonymous with the name of a yellow metal so highly prized by mankind—gold!

The result was his decision to seek his fortune in the New world and 100 years ago this spring the Odyssey of John Sutter (he had changed his name upon his arrival here) in America began. First a trader on the Santa Fe Trail, he went to the Oregon country in 1835, made a trip to the Sandwich Islands and to Alaska and finally on July 1, 1839, arrived in San Francisco, then called Yerba Buena by the Mexicans, and started on the career in the country which was to make his name forever famous.

At that time most of the settlements in California were along the coast but Sutter proposed to go inland and colonize. Obtaining a land grant from the Mexican officials he set out to select a site for his proposed colony. In August he arrived at a point where the American river joins the Sacramento, the site of the present capital of California. There he established his colony to which he gave the name of New Helvetia, after his homeland of Switzerland, and erected the fort which was to be the focal point in the empire he was to build.

The story of that empire is a familiar one—how he won the friendship of the Indians by using just the right mixture of kindness and firmness; how they formed a part of the hundreds of retainers who filled the fields and tended the herds and flocks of this feudal lord in the American wilderness; how he extended his holdings of land until he ruled over nearly 250,000 acres; and how he became the most important figure in all that region, both under the Mexican rulers and later when California passed from their hands into the possession of the United States.

To Sutter's Fort came many a notable traveler—Col. John C. Fremont, Kit Carson, Gen. Stephen Kearney, a young lieutenant named William Tecumseh Sherman and another named W. J. Revere, the latter a grandson of Paul Revere, who inherited some of his ancestor's talent for drawing and who made the sketch of the fort which is reproduced above. From Sutter's Fort went out the rescue party which saved the remnants of the ill-fated Donner party marooned in the snowy Sierras in 1847 and many another stirring chapter in California history was enacted in and around the capital of New Helvetia.

Many of these are recorded in the extracts from Sutter's diary with which Mr. Dana embellishes his biography. John Sutter could not have realized what history he was recording when he took his pen in hand one day to write this:

"August 27th, 1847. A host of Mormons here to buy provisions and have blacksmith work done. Made a contract with James Wilson Marshall for a sawmill to be erected on the American Fork."

Even more fateful is the entry for the following day:

"August 28th. Horses shod of many more Mormons. Employed nearly all them to work here since they seem to be uniformly honest, honorable and hard-working. James Wilson Marshall and Peter Wimmer departed early for the Mts. to determine a proper sawmill site."

When Sutter wrote that, he was writing the doom of New Helvetia. For the "proper sawmill site" which Marshall and Wimmer selected happened to be where some golden flakes lay near the surface of the ground and it was a Mormon, with booming voice, shouting the news of the discovery in San Francisco, who started the mad gold rush which ruined John Sutter.

GEN. W. T. SHERMAN

SAMUEL BRANNAN

"GOLD! GOLD! GOLD FROM THE AMERICAN RIVER"

One other fateful entry in Sutter's diary deserves quoting. On Friday, January 28, 1848, he recorded "Mr. Marshall arrived from the Mts. on very important business." The "important business" was to show Sutter some yellow flakes he had discovered in the tail-race of the sawmill he was building in the "beautiful vale" of Coloma, 40 miles away. They tested the flakes. It was gold!

Despite Sutter's efforts to keep the discovery a secret, the news leaked out. A teamster named Wittmer, hauling provisions to the sawmill, learned the news from one of Peter Wimmer's chattering sons. Wittmer in turn let slip the secret to Samuel Brannan, a Mormon elder who had led a colony from the East to California in 1846. Brannan had published one of California's first newspapers in Yerba Buena for a short time and was now running a store near Sutter's fort. Brannan was a crafty person. It was of the gold discovery in the Sacramento valley became known, it might start a gold rush there. The gold-seekers would need supplies. They could obtain them from Elder Samuel Brannan's store. Therefore

So, one day in May, 1848, a horseman galloped through the main street of San Francisco. "In his right hand he carried a bottle of glittering yellow grains.

"Gold! Gold!" he cried, "Gold from the American river!"

It was Elder Samuel Brannan.

Col. R. B. Mason, American military commander at San Francisco, paid little heed to the first news of the gold discovery. But as the rumors increased, his young adjutant, Lieut. W. T. Sherman, urged him to investigate. So Mason gave Sherman permission to visit Sutter's fort and learn the truth of these rumors. From that visit grew a friendship which had an interesting aftermath for both Sherman and Sutter. During his visit Sherman collected $3,000 worth of gold nuggets and hurried back to San Francisco. Then he wrote a long report which Mason signed and this, with the nuggets packed in a tea caddy, was sent by special courier to Washington. When President Polk, a little later, startled the world with the announcement of the gold discovery in California it was Sherman's words that he quoted.

What followed is a familiar story—the lust for the golden metal which swept the whole world and sent thousands by land and by sea to California. Sutter's empire of New Helvetia crumbled under the onrush of the gold-hungry fortune-seekers. In 1850 California became a state and Sutter believed that now his property rights would win recognition. But he was disappointed. In 1851 he realized a long-deferred ambition—that of bringing his wife and children to join him in his new home.

But the years which followed were sad ones for the man who had been "king of New Helvetia." Little by little, his property slipped away from him. Court decisions in his favor were followed by others against him. Soon only one small farm remained and there came the climax of his misfortunes. One night his house was set on fire. He and his family barely escaped with their lives. All of his deeds and other papers went up in flames.

In October, 1866, he started for Washington, confident that the American government would see that justice was done him. It was the beginning of a 14-year fight for justice.

He had the aid of powerful friends, one of them William Tecumseh Sherman, now a famous general. But congress repeatedly turned a deaf ear to his appeals. In June, 1850, he made another of his interminable trips to Washington.

"Washington was hot that June and getting hotter. Perspiring members of both houses were eager for an adjournment. John Sutter's claim found itself, as customary, on the agenda of the session's business. Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman sat in the gallery, mopping his face with a handkerchief waiting to carry the good news to the Swiss.

"In his hotel room, Sutter lay on his bed and slept. He was very weary; happy, too, that this was the last journey he would have to make to Washington. It was all settled. The pittance was to be finally allowed.

"Five o'clock came; a knock at the door awakened the general. The door opened. Sherman came in. There was a bleakness on him and his lips were straight.

"Sutter stood up, expectant. 'The claim?' he said, the blue eyes certain.

"It's a d—d shame, general!" burst out Sherman. "They're adjourned. Your claim didn't even go to a vote."

"A strangeness came into the blue eyes. They seemed to grow cold and old; blue ice they seemed to be, ice from a far-off Swiss glacier that suddenly ceased to know the sunlight.

"Next year," he said clearly, "next year they will surely—"

"He fell suddenly, like a stricken thing, back upon the bed. Sherman ran forward with a cry, shifted him slightly, held up the white head tenderly.

"John Sutter had passed beyond caring for any earthly claim, or for the task of sifting the ashes of empire. . . . And so the Swiss adventurer died, but the story of "Sutter's gold" which ruined him has kept his memory alive through all these years. As for the way in which his career changed the destiny of a nation, one historian has summed up the results of the discovery and the enormous production of gold in California during the next half century as follows: It raised the price of goods and labor; it opened new markets and extended commerce; it filled a wilderness with settlers, stimulated the development of the Pacific coast, established new lines of steamships, and in time made a trans-continental railroad a necessity; it extended the domain of free labor on the Pacific coast and effectually shut out slavery in all that part of the West; and it was one of the causes which induced the majority of the nations of Europe to stop the coinage of silver and to adopt gold as their sole standard money. . . . And that is why there is a connection between the birth of Johann Augustus Sutter in a little German village away back in 1803 and the world-wide interest in the "gold decision" of the United States Supreme court in Washington the other day.

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Acts 12:1-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—But prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him. Acts 12:5b.
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Peter Was Freed From Prison.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Peter Was Delivered From Prison.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Prayer Helps.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Power of United Prayer.

The young church had met and overcome some serious difficulties. She first had to face religious persecution at the hands of Jews. Then came internal troubles as to the support of certain widows. The separating wall of Pharisaical legalism was broken down in the admission of Gentiles into the church, but finally she had to meet the naked sword of civil authority. Through all these tests she was more than conqueror.

1. Peter's Imprisonment (vv. 1-4).
1. By whom (v. 1). Herod, the grandson of the wicked Herod who slew the innocent children of Bethlehem. His half-sister, Herodias, secured the death of John the Baptist.

2. The reason (v. 3). It was to gain the favor of the Jews. Herod was not a Jew but an Edomite. Therefore, he knew that his success was dependent upon his having the good will of the Jews. He seems not particularly to have hated the church, but to have loved popularity, for the sake of which he manifested a deep sympathy for degenerate Judaism. Since the church had so developed as to be a successful rival of Judaism, he saw an opportunity to curry favor with the Jews by putting forth his hands against it.

2. The method (v. 4). He was arrested, put into prison and guarded by sixteen soldiers, one group of four for each watch of the night. Humanly speaking it was impossible to escape. They had doubtless heard of Peter's escape from jail before, so they thought they would take no risks this time. However, they reckoned without God.

11. The Church of God in Prayer (v. 5).

The church was at a crisis. James, one of the brethren of the church, was dead, and Peter, the most prominent of all, was in prison. In this desperate strait, they betook themselves to prayer. This was a noteworthy prayer.

1. It was unto God. All true prayer is unto God.

2. It was united prayer. There is peculiar power in the united prayer of God's people.

3. It was more than unceasing prayer. It was the intensely earnest desire of the soul stretched toward God.

4. It was definite prayer. They specifically offered prayer to God for Peter.

111. Peter Delivered by an Angel (vv. 6-11).

This occurred the night before Herod's plan to make a public display of him.

1. Peter sleeping (v. 6). This shows that he was not disturbed over the matter. The Lord keeps in perfect peace those whose minds are stayed on him (Isa. 26:3).

2. Peter leaves the prison (vv. 7-10). A heavenly light shone in the prison. The angel smote Peter on the side. The chains fell off. Peter put on his clothes and passed by one guard after another, through the iron gate and into the city. The whole transaction was orderly and leisurely, showing that God is not in a hurry.

3. The effect upon Peter (v. 11). Although the matter was so wonderful to Peter, who thought himself in a vision, when he came to himself he knew that God had miraculously delivered him from Herod's wicked hands.

IV. Unconscious Unbelief (vv. 12-19).

1. The behavior of Peter and the church (vv. 12-17). Peter went to the house of Mary and knocked. The knock was answered by Rhoda, who was so overjoyed that she forgot to open the gate, and went right in and told them that Peter was at the gate. The disciples were not prepared for such good news, even accusing her of madness. She, undaunted, insisted. They offered as an explanation that perhaps it might be Peter's guardian angel in his likeness. Peter rehearsed unto them the Lord's dealing with him.

2. The behavior of the soldiers (vv. 18, 19). There was great agitation among them as to what had become of Peter. This was a serious matter, since they were responsible for him. Not being able to account for Peter's escape, Herod commanded that they be put to death. After this, Herod went down to Caesarea, where he was adored as a god. Because he arrogated this honor to himself, the Lord smote him. Herod died, but the word of the Lord grew and multiplied.

How to Love God
To love God is to love his character. For instance, God is purity. And to be pure in thought and look, to turn away from unhalloved books and conversation, to abhor the moments in which we have not been pure, is to love God.

Good Rules of Life
It is a goodly thing to die with the blessed consciousness of never having taken advantage of another's infirmity, or poverty, or ignorance; to die able to say that one has not extended the empire of evil on the earth.

Outstate Drivers Should Get Plates

Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has advised car owners expecting to drive outside the state, to equip their cars with full year 1935 plates, if possible, rather than merely with stickers.

While our states have been advised of Michigan's sticker system, in states requiring only rear plates, police officers are attracted only to the rear of passing cars. The sight of a 1934 plate there, has already resulted in some Michigan drivers being stopped until the stickers on the front windshield may be inspected. In any state, delay, loss of time and inconvenience may result from the use of a 1934 plate. Atwood had previously warned drivers against taking their cars out of the state, with neither new plates or stickers, during the current extension until mid-night March 14, for old plates.

Still a lot of us are guilty of sneaking a quick grin whenever Huey tosses one of those Washington stuffed shirts clear out of the ring into the laps of the paid customers.

Now a sales tax on liquor is proposed. As if it were not enough trouble for some of the boys on the welfare list sneaking out the price of an occasional flask without running into a price increase.

"When a man loves a girl, that girl can't let herself love him, can she, when she's under a cloud herself?"

"Dawn! Dawn, girl, don't think that! Why, it's—"

"But it's so, Able! I don't want to talk about it. All I can do for Ben now is to let him know how weak I was to doubt him and to use any influence I may have to protect him from this terrible danger. I will do that; I must do that because it is duty. But it must stop there. It can't go on, you see? Not while I have nothing more than just my faith in my father's good name."

Able, the wise man that he was, did not force the argument. He brought his team to a halt before the Hoot Owl office, gave the reins to Dawn and stepped out.

Martin, the bookkeeper, was the only occupant of the place.

"Where's Ben?" he asked.

The bearded man looked over his shoulder, recognized Able and then his gaze went past the man to the waiting cutter where Dawn sat.

"He's . . ." It seemed as though Martin's voice failed at that word. He half started from his chair and the pen, dropped from flexed fingers, rolled across the ledger sheet. He made a faint sound and in his eyes appeared an expression that startled Able.

"What's wrong, Martin?" he asked in alarm, stepping quickly into the room. "Sick?"

"No . . . all right, now," the other said, as if with great effort. "Ben? In the mill, I think."

He picked up his pen, then, and bent over his work.

Able crossed the mill-yard looking for Ben and as he went Martin rose cautiously from his chair, moved quietly to be in line with the window and stared for a long interval at the girl huddled in the robes. His hands worked and his breath was uneven.

"Dawn is here to see you," Able said simply as he encountered Ben. "She had me bring her out so she could talk to you. She's waiting over by the office."

Elliott stood hesitant for an instant; then turned and walked swiftly along the pond. Able watched him go but did not follow. What was to be said by the girl was not for his ears, he knew.

Ben gave no sign of recognition as he approached the cutter; made no salutation as he came near the girl who sat watching him so steadily. He only spoke her name, when he was at her side. She gave him a small, gloved hand and smiled wanly.

"I have come to say many things, Ben," she began in a strange, strained voice. "To beg forgiveness, to beg other things . . . perhaps to explain a little."

"A week ago tonight,"—struggling, now, to hold her voice steady—"I ran out of the dance hall and on home, thinking that that woman was honest. The time since then, until noon today, has been a nightmare."

"Lydia came to my house at noon. She explained everything. Aunt Em brought her. Aunt Em went to her house and convinced her that she had done a terrible thing to you and that an explanation to me was the only way to right the wrong. Lydia told me everything. . . . It was Mr. Brandon who thought out the plan and forced her to do it under threats of some sort. She didn't tell us what the threats were but left our house for the train and is gone from Tincup forever. . . . And I've come to tell you how miserable I feel to think that I was weak enough to act as Mr. Brandon seemed to be sure I would act. . . ."

Relief was singing through Elliott; relief and a great joy, lifting him above rage for Brandon.

"Oh, I'm glad!" he said earnestly. "I've . . . Why, it completely knocked me off my pins! Dawn, it's been terrible for you but . . . but this makes me so happy!"

"I'm happy because you are happy," she said, but something in her tone and expression dampened his enthusiasm, checked his soaring spirits. She was so calm, so steady, so restrained; her mood was not at all that of one who comes joyously to wipe out heartbreaking misunderstanding. "And I'll never forgive myself for . . . for falling into the trap that was set for me, Ben!"

"Why shouldn't you? Any girl would have felt as you did. . . . But it's explained, now. Let's forget it and begin where we left off and find peace and—"

The sharp shake of her head and the quick withdrawal of her hand cut him off.

"There are sterner things to think of, first; quite different things, Ben. That is why I came out here, to talk to you about Bart Delaney. . . . Able has told me what happened yesterday. You don't take it seriously enough. Keep safe until you're certain that the danger is past."

"Hide and skulk while other men protect me? A man can't do that, Dawn! I'll be on my guard, of course. But I can't run away from anybody who is trying to strike from behind. What would these boys here on the job think of me if I did? This man Delaney may be a hobgoblin for the rest of the country, but I can't let him be for me. If I do the safe thing and think of my own skin, some of our workers will tumble to the fact that I've no more courage than most of them, less than plenty. I can't let them down, you see, and still keep my standing in their eyes.

"It isn't worth it, Ben! It's my job, my property you're taking these risks for. It isn't fair to me!"

"I can argue that. I'm not anxious to be put out of the picture yet a while. I'll keep my eyes open. I've already made the move that should stop Delaney from trying me again. Able and the others have gotten you all in a flutter, Dawn. Don't worry. I'm coming to Tincup tonight and I'm going to appear to be thinking about nothing but the errands I have to do. Every second, I'll be on the watch for a crooked move from anybody. I promise you that. And when I've shown myself to people I'll come to see you and talk you into the same way of looking at this situation."

"Don't," she begged.

"But I can't keep away from you, now that this other mess has been explained!"

She shook her head.

"I'm asking two things of you. The first is to stay here; the other is not to come to see me. . . . Please!"

She put a hand on his with that plea, and he frowned.

"I can understand your being a little timid about having me around town but I can convince you that I'm right. It's Brandon or me, now, you see. If I run, he wins. . . . But this other: Dawn, don't you want me to see you?"

The girl's lips worked.

"No," she said, ever so faintly.

"No. . . . Oh, please don't argue with me, Ben! Please don't come to see me. You don't understand. You may never understand. . . . But I'm begging you from the bottom of my heart not to come and see me again!"

"No, I don't understand. It's . . . Why, it's . . ." He laughed aloud at his own bewilderment and Able, in the near distance, mistook that laugh born of distress for one of relief and came toward them.

"Well, have you two got matters cleared up?" he asked.

Dawn nodded silently.

"Some things are cleared up," Elliott

noticed that the girl followed him, waited outside while he bargained for a month's supply for camp in a butcher shop, and trailed along behind when he emerged.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the trap ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. He did not turn his head and she dropped back. She had no doubts of his loyalty from what Ben had told her of his bookkeeper.

When Elliott went into the drug store she stood out of the light from the building and noted that also Martin loitered near. When Ben reappeared, Martin followed.

For the better part of an hour this double stalking continued while the snow fell thicker and then Elliott turned into a side street and made the next turn into the alley where he had left his team.

Two figures followed him, hastening a bit as he disappeared into the gloom. Martin followed Ben, as Dawn trailed both.

And then, as Elliott drew close and spoke gruffly to his horses, another shadowy figure appeared: it was only a blur in the shadows, crouched and stealthy. The figure swept forward; an arm drew back and upward; it struck and with a muffled grunt Ben Elliott turned, falling sideways and backward under the impact of a blow.

Another voice lifted then in a sharp cry as John Martin ran forward and the indistinct figure which was poised over Elliott, about to strike again, turned, hesitated, whirled and fled.

"What is it, son?" Martin cried as he dropped to his knees beside Ben. Before a reply could come Dawn was there, moaning his name over and over.

"Knife!" Ben gasped. "In the neck . . . here . . ."

John Martin unbuttoned Elliott's thick jacket, ripped open the shirt and his fingers encountered a warm, sticky gush as he thrust them across the back.

"Knifed you! . . . Ah, son!"

Dawn peered close into the bearded man's face as though fearful of what he might say next.

"We've got to get him somewhere

SYNOPSIS

Ben Elliott—from "Yonder"—arrives at the lumbering town of Tincup, with Don Stuart, old, very sick man, who he has befriended. Nicholas Brandon, the town leader, resents Stuart's presence, trying to force him to leave. Elliott, resenting the act, knocks him down. Judge Able Armitage hires him to run the one lumber camp, the Hoot Owl, that Brandon has not been able to grab. This belongs to Dawn McManus, whose father has disappeared with a murder charge hanging over his head. Brandon sends Duval to beat up Ben, and Ben throws him out of camp. Don Stuart dies, leaving a letter for Elliott to be used when the going becomes too tough. Ben refuses to open the letter, believing he can win the fight by his own efforts. Fire breaks out in the mill. Ben, when the flames are subdued, discovers it was started with gasoline. Elliott gets an offer for logs, that will provide money to tide him over. But a definite time is set. Ben discovers Dawn McManus is not a child, as he had supposed, but a beautiful young woman. The railroad bridge over which the Hoot Owl lumber must pass is blown up. By superhuman efforts Ben builds a new bridge and himself drives the train over the rickety structure to Tincup, making the delivery with only a few minutes to spare. Brandon compels a woman (known as "Lydia") who is in his power, to accuse Elliott of misconduct with a girl. At a dance to which Elliott escorts Dawn, Lydia makes public her charges. Overwhelmed, Elliott can only make a feeble denial. Dawn, apparently believing him guilty, leaves the dance without waiting for him. While in the woods, Elliott is fired on, and drops, seemingly dead, but his fall has been a ruse to make his enemy believe him dead. The would-be killer is proved to be Red Bart Delaney, now in a desperate, "Aunt Emma," Dawn's closest friend, prevails on the woman Lydia to acknowledge the falsity of her accusation.

said. "But there are others. . . . Dawn, won't you explain?"

The girl turned her face to Able.

"I'm ready to go home now," she said weakly.

CHAPTER XII

Teams drove from the Hoot Owl toward town through the falling snow that evening. First went Ben Elliott, alone and sending his drivers at a spanking trot, wondering and at odds with himself.

Why was Dawn so obdurate in this matter of having him see her? Why that odd repression, as though she struggled to keep from saying the things that were bursting her heart?

His inability to answer those questions drove him into a dogged mood. He felt like blaming Brandon for this, as well as other troubles.

A half hour behind him came a team from camp, driven by Bird-Eye Blaine. A figure ahead stepped out of the ruts and awaited his approach.

"Town?" the man cried.

"Yup. . . . Hello, Martin! Whoa. . . ."

Blaine lifted the heavy robes for the bookkeeper and then clucked his team on.

"Misther Elliott gone in?" he asked.

"He has, eh? . . . 'Nd Misther Red Bart Delaney still persecutin' th' country with his presence, loikely. Ah, th' b'y, th' b'y!"

Martin proved to be uncommunicative, however, and they drove much of the way in silence.

Ben turned his team into an alley, hitched and blanketed them, and then made his way between buildings to the town's principal thoroughfare which was lighted by glaring store fronts. He purchased some articles in a clothing store and did not see Dawn McManus enter, observe him, and then withdraw. When he went out again he 'ud not right away," Martin muttered. "Got to . . . It's bad."

"My house is just around the corner!" she cried. "Bring him there. . . . Oh, hurry!"

Together they lifted Ben to his feet. His teeth ground shut to keep back the moans. He was sick and weak with pain. He could feel blood smearing over his side and back. He sagged against Martin as the man supported him.

"Tough, Dawn . . . to get you mixed up . . . in a mess. . . ."

"Hurry!" she said. "He's so weak!"

He was weak, indeed. With their arms about his body for support, they moved through the snow. Elliott felt Dawn close to him and closed his eyes almost happily. He struggled to help himself so he would not burden her, but he stumbled and nearly fell and another gush of blood bathed his body. After ages of effort and pain a glare seemed to be all about, warm breath fanned his face . . . and Aunt Em, standing in the doorway, was saying sharply:

"In here. . . . Your room, Dawn. . . . I'll phone the doctor."

Emory Sweet worked rapidly, once there. "Deep!" he muttered. "Gad, what a blow. Missed the jugular by a hair."

The wound was only a slender slit in the skin but the blade had been driven deep, indeed, and the blood that flowed from it had drawn the bronze from Elliott's face, the strength from the splendid muscles that lay relaxed now beneath clear skin.

"Now!" said the physician when Ben finally lay back on Dawn's pillow, breathing shallowly, eyes closed. "I guess he'll be all right in a few days."

But what an escape! He shrugged.

Sweet looked at John Martin, then. The doctor's brows drew a bit, he seemed to lean forward and blinked slowly, incredulously. Then Martin moved and the other relaxed. Still, his expression was one of startled speculation.

"Yes, a close shave," Martin muttered under his breath. "But now . . . He's in the best possible place in the world."

The doctor began gathering his instruments. Martin stood staring at Ben in deep thought. Then his right hand went to the lobe of his left ear and tugged slowly in that characteristic gesture. He did not observe Emma Coburn standing in the doorway. He noticed that the girl followed him, waited outside while he bargained for a month's supply for camp in a butcher shop, and trailed along behind when he emerged.

From place to place he went, Dawn behind him in the flying snow and when she had been following so for half an hour, her eyes alert for others who might be watching Elliott, another fell into the trap ahead of her. She saw this man step from a store entrance and follow Ben. She hastened to be close and not until she was abreast of him did she recognize John Martin, whom she had seen but once before. did not look at her until the woman gasped. It was a light, light gasp; so light that Emory Sweet did not hear. But Martin heard and turned and stood as though frozen in the posture. Aunt Em's head was held rigidly back, one hand pressed against a cheek.

Quickly, Martin's finger went against his lips in a sealing gesture. He held so an instant and then slowly shook his head, a movement of unmistakable warning.

Dawn entered the hallway from the living room and these two relaxed from the rigidity of their strange pantomime. Em hustled out into the kitchen and Martin smoothed the covers of Elliott's bed with a hand that trembled slightly.

"Now, the boy's going to be all right," the doctor said. "I'll look in tomorrow. Quiet is going to be essential for a few days. You two women all right?"

A close observer might have noticed that Aunt Em's eyes were oddly averted from John Martin's searching gaze and that her breathing was quick.

"Why, it might be handy to have a man in the house tonight," she said, evenly enough. "I'm . . . I'm wondering if Mr. Martin would stay. He could sleep on the couch in the living room."

"I'd be glad to," the man said and cleared his throat sharply. "There might be something I could do . . . for you."

He had looked at Dawn on this last and it seemed that his voice caught ever so slightly.

So it was arranged that he should stay through the night and the doctor left.

Aunt Em carried the light out of the sick room and placed it on a table in the hall. She bustled here and there, occupied with a variety of minor errands and finally drove Dawn to bed despite the girl's protests of sleeplessness.

Alone, she fixed blankets on the living room couch while Martin sat in the darkened bedroom. That done, she beckoned to him from the hallway.

They confronted one another there a long moment. The woman's face worked queerly and she seemed at a loss for words.

TO BE CONTINUED.

One England's Nazareth The Shrine of Our Lady at Walsingham, England, is where Henry VIII walked barefoot as a pilgrim. In a few years the ruler destroyed the Priory, confiscated the lands and treasures, burnt the shrine and executed five of the Priory canons for treason. Another shrine was built in the Slipper chapel, so named because in ancient days pilgrims removed their shoes when visiting it. Walsingham once was England's Nazareth, which brought it immense fame. It was founded about 1061. Like Lourdes, it had its holy wells, and became famous for the many miracles which were believed to have been wrought there.

The Baby's Faculties The ages when certain faculties first appear in average infants and children vary considerably. Memory and simple consciousness come soon after birth, curiosity at about ten weeks, the senses of shame, remorse and the ludicrous at fifteen months, self-consciousness at three years, the color sense at four years and the sense of fragrance at five years.—Collier's Weekly.

Seek Overthrow of Greek Government

Army Presses Forward to Crush Rebels

Troops Capture Town After Battle in Mud

Scenes such as this took place in Athens when insurrectionists attempted to overthrow the Greek government. The rebels under the alleged leadership of ex-Premier Venizelos were reported to have suffered heavy losses in engagements with loyalist troops.

The Greek government reported that they had recaptured the town of Seres, northeast of Saloniki, after a hard fight, and were pressing forward to crush the last vestiges of the rebellion. A heavy artillery bombardment drove the insurgents from their positions with heavy losses, it is said.

Tension increased in Europe as Bulgaria and Turkey massed troops on their frontiers, although they insisted their action was only as a protective measure. Turkey has 80,000 men stationed near the Greek and Bulgarian boundaries, and preparations have been going on for more than a month, it is said. France has ordered a destroyer to proceed to Athens to protect French property, and Great Britain has also ordered a battleship to speed to Phaleron bay.

Venizelos is reported as ready to flee from Crete, headquarters of the revolutionists, and seek refuge in Alexandria, Egypt, and the Yugoslavia government has acceded to a request of Greek authorities to hold Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, veteran Greek revolutionary leader, if he should attempt to cross into Greece by way of the Yugoslavia frontier.

PWA SCHOOLS

Ten Millions Spent in 38 States, Ickes Reports.

Washington.—More than $10,000,000 worth of school buildings have been completed in 38 states with the aid of PWA loans and grants, Secretary of the Interior Ickes announced. Hundreds of additional schools are being constructed and will be ready for occupation by fall. Ickes said this program was woefully inadequate. He held out hope for approval of a $630,000,000 school building program this year, if congress approves the President's work-relief program.

Champion Lady Lumberjacks of the Northwest

Champions, and real ones! Each one is six feet two inches in height, and can they fell trees! They are Miss Ruth Hoerschgen (left) and Miss June de Graft (right), both of Cataldo, Idaho. They were pictured after they had won the "Lady Lumberjacks" championship at Dalles, Ore., by felling a sixteen-inch tree in 1 minute 50 seconds. The girls undercut the tree with an ax, and then felled it with a cross-cut saw. Their feat further disproves the old term of the "weaker sex" and the ancient's contention about "woman's place is in the home."

"GOOD READING" MATTER FOR THE CHILD TO DECIDE

Supported by The Parents' Magazine, which prints the charge that may influence adult thought in regard to juvenile reading, Josette Frank accuses the nation's fathers and mothers of impoverishing their children's literary diet—letting them starve in the midst of plenty.

"Mother does not always know best, and no book is a good book for a child if it fails to interest him," emphatically declares Miss Frank, her conviction born of experience in the Child Study association.

"There is ample reason for doubting parental infallibility on this point when we realize how often parents have changed their minds as to what is and what is not good reading for children," says this authority, recalling that it is not so long ago parents regarded story-books with suspicion; then grudgingly approved painfully pure tales and only lately countenanced literature which addresses children as reasoning people. "There are no best books for children, only best books for the particular child. What is real meat to the girl of twelve may be 'applesauce' to the boy of the same age. Nor is there a law of heredity that makes children like what their parents liked before them. Our Jane may find 'Little Women' boring or 'Gulliver's Travels' dull."

Like the horse in the old adage, evidently one may lead a child to a good book but cannot make him read it. This being the truth, however much it may hurt, Miss Frank sanely concludes that about all parents can do is to make available to their children the best there is in the world to read and let nature take its course.

Success

Success depends to a great extent upon the way a person does things. To be honestly successful in life is to have achieved the things undertaken in an honest way.

There are many ways in which one may be successful. A person can be a successful thief or criminal in the sense that he was able to escape safely with all he took. A criminal lawyer might consider himself successful if he were able to defend victoriously public enemies and make it possible for them to remain at large, damaging property and endangering lives. Still, if you were in the place of either of these men, would you feel that you had lived a successful life by robbing others and defending a menace to society? Could you look back upon your life and find that it had done any real good or accomplished any worth while purpose? It is hard to believe that a person who is truly honest to himself could possibly answer, "Yes".

The word "success" has a greater meaning than mere ability to achieve selfish desires. It is not necessarily the amount of good we have been able to do for ourselves but also the amount of good that we have been able to do for others that will ultimately decide whether or not we have achieved success.

Why should so many of us continue to deceive ourselves by feeling that successful people are nothing more than lucky? Nine times out of ten we shall find that they have had to work for what they gained. Problems have to be met and dealt with. The manner in which we meet these problems and our fight to overcome them will be great factors in the enterprise.

Whether some of us want to believe it or not, we will sometime have to admit that while we are in school we are not working only to receive good grades, but we are also developing our minds and character for the problems we will be forced to meet in the future. We cannot forestall what the next decade will have in store for us, but this we know, the coming of new conditions brings with it new problems. We will have to meet these problems and solve them just as others are doing today.

Success is something that must be worked for. The sooner we realize this the sooner we can start working toward our goals, not only to help ourselves, but that we may aid others who are also working along with us trying to attain the goal of success.

Fourth Graders Have New Books

The pupils of the fourth grade were very much pleased when Mrs. Hager brought them five new books. These books are "Talking Leaves", "See America First", and three interesting bird books. This grade has two new health posters that Miss Golley left them to be colored.

Twenty-seven pupils of this grade received A's in the Friday spelling test.

New Plans For Gym Work

The students of the sixth grade section I are planning on new and different gymnasium activities. These will include different stunts and contests.

The study of Africa keeps these pupils busy in geography. In arithmetic, section I, is studying measures.

Much improvement has been shown on English papers. At the present they are learning the different kinds of sentences.

The grade regrets that several scholars are out because of illness.

There are sure signs of spring in the sixth grade room. They have a very pretty bouquet of Pussy Willows.

Third Grade Studies "Hiawatha"

The third grades are making an interesting and thorough study of "Hiawatha". They find it very pleasing to study the life of that Indian lad.

There is quite a race in learning multiplication tables in this room. The third grade has a new star chart for the ones who learn them first.

WHO'S WHO

Ramon Dubas

Ramon was born on a hot August day, the ninth, 1918, in Chicago, Illinois. He began school at the age of seven at St. Pancravian's in Chicago. In 1926 his family moved to Michigan and settled eleven miles from East Jordan. Ramon then attended the Rockery school, where he skipped two grades.

When ready for the ninth grade, Ramon started school here. He has liked all of his subjects, but his favorite subject is commercial law. This is the first year Ramon has gone out for basketball, but he enjoys it very much. Although he says he hasn't any favorite hobby, according to the girls of the high school, Ramon is one of the very best dancers.

Ramon hasn't exactly decided what he will do after graduation, but he wants to go back to Chicago and go to school, perhaps to the University of Illinois.

Rhea Geraldine Fisher

Rhea, a good natured, sunny girl with a charming smile for everyone, was born in Byron Center, a town near Grand Rapids, November 27, 1916. She started school at the age of four, attending several schools in that region.

While there, she entered Caledonia High, becoming interested in glee club and basketball. At this time, Rhea was very active in 4-H work, winning two trips to Lansing by her canning and judging ability.

In her sophomore year, the family moved to East Jordan, locating on the farm they now occupy, west of town.

Here Rhea continued her good work in the 4-H clubs, winning a ninety-five dollar scholarship to Michigan State, and carrying away all the honors at the Achievement Day. She says home ec. has been her favorite subject. One would be able to guess as much by her record. She would like to be a dress designer.

Rhea's sunny smile wins friends for her every where, and whatever course she follows, success and happiness are sure to be her lot.

Martha Marie Gay

Martha, a small brown eyed girl, was born October 12, 1917. She has always attended the East Jordan Consolidated Schools where her favorite subject is chemistry.

Many interests have claimed her attention, but dancing seems to be the one that ranks first. She has been in the band the last three years and plays the tuba. It is always easy to pick Martha out from the other band members. She is the little girl with the great big horn.

Martha has ably proved herself a good little actress. You saw her last year as "Beatrice" in the junior play, "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy?" and this year, as "Lulu", the negro cook, in the commercial play, "The Path Across the Hill." She has also been a member of the glee club.

As yet, Martha is undecided as to what she will do after having been graduated from high school.

Magnetism of Eighth Graders Attracts Upper Class Students

The general science classes are studying electricity and magnetism. Members of the classes have brought many pieces of commercial apparatus to school for use in this discussion.

Four of the upper class students have made arrangements to be present at the class discussion.

So Near and Yet So Far

Why is it that students living in the middle section of the United States so often think of Alaska as being far removed from them in every respect? The world, figuratively speaking, has been growing smaller for the last few decades.

Probably there are very few American school children who have not at some time or other looked through the "Readers' Digest" and in it found a section headed "Toward a More Picturesque Speech". This little magazine has evidently found its way to our neighbor, Alaska, and has aroused much interest among some of the students.

In the paper edited by the printing class of the Sheldon Jackson School, located in Sitka, Alaska, appeared the following, contributed by the Junior English Class, showing what can be done with words:—

Our "Toward More Picturesque Speech"

His manner and walk were as self-satisfied as that of a young crow on his first successful flight.

The chemistry problem was as stubborn as a knotted shoelace in the dark.

She was a pansy with a serpent underneath.

He felt as heady as a spendthrift with a summer's wages on payday.

He is as touchy about his pet hobby as if it were a bump on his head.

The cat's green balls of fire burned and glittered, her tail was an angry furry banner waving enough to frighten the bravest, and her long dangerous claws were sufficient to put a scare into the heart of any dog.

Compared to her dainty pumps my new oxford were snow shoes.

The lake at night was a clear mirror in which the moon admired herself.

The yellow jellyfish slowly opened and closed like the ghosts of great California poppies.

Echoes

The American history class has been having some heavy discussions over the necessity of the Civil War. The opposition was fairly even, the class taking sides.

The "Brain Trusts" beat the "Window Watchers" in a closely contested game of questions and answers in the civics class.

East Jordan Boys Participate in State Table Tennis Tournament

Colin Sommerville, Donald LaPeer, and Preston Kenny, conveyed by Mr. Roberts and accompanied (also entertained) by Mr. Bippus, attended the Michigan Open Table Tennis Tournament held at Detroit on March 2nd and 3rd.

There were 275 men and women who entered the contest; so it is no disgrace that the boys did not bring home the championship.

Colin's first match was lost to an expert from Toledo. (It was not Mr. Bippus.) Donald played a boy from one of the largest high schools in Detroit. The game was close, but he was defeated in the final game, 19 to 21. Preston, or "Bud", won his first match but lost his second to the man who became the winner of the tournament.

They remained to see many of the matches, some of which were very spectacular, but they were unable to see the finals, played Sunday night.

The trip was not without its high spots: The boys were taken through many of Detroit's largest department stores; they attended church in one of its newest and most beautiful Catholic churches, and to cap the climax they went over the Ambassador Bridge into Canada and came back through the Detroit-Windsor tunnel under the Detroit River.

Daring Exploits Made in African Jungles!

Senior Girls Make Debut

The assembly Wednesday afforded all high school students with forty five minutes of relaxation and enlightenment when they were entertained by the freshman class. The boys contributed to their share of the program by presenting a comical imitation of hunters in the jungles, capturing everything from butterflies and galling galluses to headless howlitts, barely escaping with their lives from the most daring and thrilling adventures.

Mr. Sleutel displayed the efficiency of his shop boys by having them make a tie rack, a lamp, a blue print, and miraculously demonstrate how four and one do not equal five in the case of mixing cement.

Excitement increased when the freshman girls appeared, each personifying a senior girl in her most elegant attire as she would appear at her favorite activity. The star of the afternoon was Marcella Muma, represented by Clara Wade in a bathrobe — effect attire, as she would be dressed for Grand Opera. Rebecca Bowman as Madame Pardue from Paris presented the different personages.

Wilma Shepard, gowned as a bride, represented the hope of every senior girl.

Philatelists Address Sophomore English Class

That philately is an extremely interesting hobby was proved in the talks given by Geraldine Palmiter, a junior, and Arthur Marshall, a sophomore, to the members of the sophomore English classes last Wednesday. Both students, having been engaged in the hobby for some time, had many instructive facts to point out about their collections of stamps.

Miss Palmiter has an especially fine collection of American postage stamps and devoted most of her discussion to those. She has an almost complete set of the Washington issues, many others honoring our presidents, as well as most of the commemorative stamps, and some revenue and air-mail issues. Other countries' stamps that were especially noted were those of Canada, Great Britain, German, Greece, and Portugal. The Portuguese stamps are outstanding for their extremely fine engravings.

By means of squares of purple glass, students were able to detect water marks in some English stamps, the outline of a crown in the paper of the stamp. These water marked stamps are especially valuable to philatelists.

From the importance of mail as shown in the history of the methods of mail carrying, which was explained by Miss Perkins and illustrated by pictures, showing the ramant development of systems from the pigeon-carriers to our air mail ships, then from this evidence of the fascination of stamp study, students are engaging in practical work in letter writing with a great deal of zest.

You Can't Kill a Bear with a Pop Gun

Neither do the farmers of this county haul potatoes to the warehouse in their little boy's express wagon.

Both a pop gun and an express wagon are fine things for children to play with.

But when Dad and Uncle John start up to northern Michigan after some venison they get out their high-powered rifles.

Occasionally there is a business concern which tries to get business with two or three hundred handbills — advertising pop guns.

About all they succeed in doing is to disgust the housewives of the town by littering up their front porches. You can't get a woman's trade by making her angry and disgusted.

Also occasionally there comes along someone who says a farm auction can be well advertised with handbills.

Everyone knows that a successful auction sale depends upon the number of bidders. In these days of good roads and automobiles men often drive 20 to 30 miles to an auction sale they have seen advertised in their newspaper.

Handbills can be distributed over a limited territory and in public places. Few stop to read them. Many forget the location and date of the sale before they reach home.

The Charlevoix County Herald goes into practically all of the homes in East Jordan and a majority of the homes in surrounding townships.

In the evening, after the chores are done, the farmer sits down and carefully reads every item in your sale. If he forgets the date or location, he refers to his newspaper again the next day — or any following day — or cuts it out and places it in his pocket.

THIS IS ADVERTISING — the cheapest and best way to reach thousands of buyers.

Farmers subscribe to the Charlevoix County Herald and pay for it in order to get the news and keep track of the business bargains and the auction sales.
