Kills Deer While Enroute to East Jordan With Auto

Enroute from Detroit to East Jordan last Friday to spend the week end with his family, Ted Malpass reports he was considerable upset as he broke over the crest of a hill just north of West Branch, to find the road completely blocked by three deer. Unable to check the speed of his car because of their nearness, he struck one of them: a large doe, but fortunately he was able to swerve enough to keep from hitting her squarely thus avoiding a major accident.

Upon investigating it was found the car has one badly dented fender and the deer dead with a broken neck.

About two miles farther on he was forced to leave the road to avoid striking still another one.

The conservation officer in Roscommon to whom he delivered the carcass commended him for his consideration in bleeding and dressing the animal and said it would be distributed to the poor of that community.

Cheboygan Pair Get Term For Arson

Swift justice followed the burning of the Kimberly Funeral Home at Cheboygan, May 12th, which fire caused smoke damage to the rest of the Masonic Temple building.

Ceryl Kimberly, undertaker of Cheboygan, and Archie Bradley of Wolverine, were arrested last Saturday, pleaded guilty, and, in Circuit Court, Monday, Kimberly was sentenced to from three to 10 years in Jackson prison and Bradley was sentenced to from six months to 10 years in the Ionia reformatory.

Chain Stores Being Investigated For Tax Action

With revenues from the chain store tax showing a decrease for the first four months of 1935, as compared with the corresponding period of 1934, together with the fact that only one of the 28 litigants contesting their 1933 and 1934 taxes, has paid its tax since the state supreme court sustained the act recently, Orville E. Atwood, Secretary of State, has laid plans for examination of the whole situation. Increase in the number of chains, with decrease in the average number of units in each organization, has already furnished one clue to reduced revenue.

As to the contested levies, Harry S. Toy, Attorney general, furnished with a list of the 27 delinquent litigants, is investigating the legal aspects which may be involved. Bonds were long ago posted to guarantee payment of 1933 and 1934 taxes, but meanwhile, 1935 taxes are overdue. Collections from Jan. 1, to May 1 this year, were $75,988, contrasted with $111,562 for the same period of 1934. Taxes are due April 1 for each current year.

4-H Club Summer Projects Being Initiated

At this particular time of the year, considerable interest is being noted in many communities in the summer 4-H Club Program. The outstanding accomplishment up to the present, is the organization of the Charlevoix 4-H Club, sponsored by members of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club and consisting of about 20 boys. In the majority of cases, the members have selected potatoes as their project. Other crops, such as corn and beans are likewise represented in the membership.

An appeal is hereby made to the various communities in the county, to arrange for meetings, at which time your county agent will be delighted to meet with you and assist in the organization. For the boys, it is expected that crop projects and livestock activity will be the most attractive. For the girls, food preparation and canning club work, are available, and it is hoped that Charlevoix County will have at least ten canning clubs this year, and at least four dairy clubs, two or three potato clubs, and other projects in lesser numbers.

It is tentatively planned to have the summer Achievement Day in connection with the County Picnic on Labor Day, to be held at Whiting County Park. Premium money will be available to recognize the winners. Will be pleased to hear from the various communities in the county in regard to the date for their organization.

Twenty-three Trout Taken From Jordan Costs Over $50.00

L. B. Bolinger and Lowell Bolinger, his son, of Paw Paw were fined $25.00 and costs each at a special session of justice court called by Justice Hierlinby at Bellaire Sunday night. They were arrested by conservation officer Mike Muma charged with taking twenty-three undersized trout from the Jordan river.

U. S. Arms Roar Into Thrilling Action

On land, at sea, and in the air the American battle forces present one of the greatest of spectacles as they engage in war maneuvers as the back ground for "Devil Dogs Of The Air" which is being presented at the Temple Theatre for three days starting Sunday, May 26th. James Cagney & Pat O'Brien are starred and engage in several major wars of their own before the final fade-out brings to an end the thrills and comedy of this great picture... you're sure to like it!

The complete new Temple program follows:—

Friday — Saturday: Richard Dix in Zane Grey's West Of The Pecos.

Sun-Mon-Tues: James Cagney — Pat O'Brien in Devil Dogs Of The Air.

Wed-Thur: Cary Grant — Myrna Loy in Wings In The Dark.

And it would be well to remember that the Temple is presenting an extra matinee on Memorial Day in addition to the regular Sunday and Saturday matinees.

Top O'Michigan Show To Initiate A Dramatics Contest

At a largely attended meeting held last Thursday night, Professor Cecil Nickle outlined the state-wide program to representatives from many farm communities. Not alone Charlevoix County, but several attended from Emmet, Antrim, and Otsego counties.

The representatives decided to participate in the program, and already communities have been appointed in some of the granges in this district.

It is expected that from 20 to 25 applications will be received for the contest. Northern Michigan will be divided up into several districts, each district being eligible to present their best one act play at the Potato Show at Gaylord. This is the first time that this activity has been accepted in Northern Michigan, and judging from the interest and enthusiasm shown by those in attendance, this section will give a splendid account of itself in state-wide competition.

Rules and regulations governing the contest will be gotten out very soon, and sent to all known farm community organizations existing in the county. Full details will be gladly furnished anyone interested in this locality. These plays will afford recreation and amusement to many people who enjoy this type of activity. These plays are short productions, usually not taking more than thirty minutes.

Tuberculosis Clinics To Be Held In County Next Week

From time immemorial, tuberculosis has been present, and in a much lesser degree is still present. Tuberculosis is caused by a germ from a person who has contracted the disease. Fortunately, this germ cannot live outside the body as long as was formerly believed possible, and thus, tuberculosis almost always comes from tuberculous persons.

While tuberculosis attacks mostly the lungs, other parts of the body too may be damaged by it. In young people especially, the bones and joints may suffer. The kidneys, bladder, the eyes, the ears, in fact any part of the human body may be attacked by tuberculosis. Whatever organ is attacked the general treatment is rest for the whole body.

Contrary to a rather common belief, tuberculosis is never inherited but is always acquired. The problem that confronts mankind is the prevention of the spread of infection. Medicine has made great strides in the early recognition of tuberculosis. By a thorough examination with the aid of the X-rays the disease can be recognized in its very inception at a stage when a cure is most easily obtained.

For the patient diagnosed as tuberculosis, rest and preferable rest in a sanatorium is still the most reliable form of treatment and probably the greatest weapon available for the control of disease. A general principle is that the patient should never be overfed. He should eat just enough to gain gradually in weight. A good diet consists of:—

Milk
Eggs or meat at one or two meals.
Plenty of vegetables (some fresh) including one that grows above the ground, such as cabbage, and another that grows beneath the ground, such as potatoes.

Leafy salads, raw fruits.
Desserts that are easy to digest.

During the past two months an extensive tuberculin testing program has been carried on in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties in order to find any early cases of tuberculosis. Miss Winnifred Golley, Charlevoix County Nurse, and Dr. Dean of the District Health Department, have been actively engaged in this program, having tuberculin tested 1,002 children in Charlevoix County and finding 51 positive reactors. All positive reactors to the tuberculin test and all contacts to tuberculosis will be offered the advantages of an X-ray which will be given at the Boyne City Schoolhouse on Wednesday, May 29, and at Charlevoix Grade Building on Friday, May 31. Be sure to come early! Clinic will be held from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. This X-ray service is made possible through the Michigan Tuberculosis annual Christmas Seal sale.

East Jordan Independents Lose Opener To Charlevoix Red Sox

East Jordan's City base ball nine lost its first start of the season to Charlevoix at the latter place, Sunday, by the score of 8 to 5. The local team did not show such playing as they showed last year. The game was filled with errors on the part of the locals. Although they out hit Charlevoix they were unable to shove across as many runs because the Charlevoix players gave their pitcher good backing. It was the first game of the year for the locals and they certainly showed they were out of form.

"Amos" Johns former portsider of the locals pitched for Charlevoix against his old team-mates and allowed 5 runs and 11 hits. Leo Sommerville the locals regular center fielder because of the lack of a hurled, pitched for the locals, giving up 11 hits and 8 runs. The runs were due chiefly to errors. Leo struck out 7 of Charlevoix's batsmen while Amos succeeded in sending only 5 of his former team-mates down swinging. Swafford worked behind the plate for Leo, while S. Lord worked for Amos.

Kirby and S. Lord led the hitting for Charlevoix with 2 hits in 3 trips to the plate. L. Sommerville led the locals with 3 softies in 5 trips to the plate.

179 Ladies Receive Certificates

ACHIEVEMENT DAY PROGRAM AT CHARLEVOIX ENJOYED

The Achievement Day for the extension ladies in the county, held last week Thursday in the Methodist Church, at Charlevoix, has now taken its place along with the many other successful Achievement Days. This year the weather was fine, the exhibits splendidly arranged and displayed, the program greatly appreciated by the audience, and all the other appointments carefully and diligently completed.

Without a doubt, the big feature of the program was the address by Cecil Nickle, from the Michigan State College, who selected for his topic, "Our Play Life." In addition, Mr. Nickle led the group in several community songs, and as a special favor, sang a solo as the concluding number on the program. He possesses a beautiful voice which is seldom equaled.

Under the able chairmanship of Mrs. Verna Hartnell, of Boyne City, other numbers presented were; an organ selection by Mrs. W. H. White, Boyne City; a song by the Boyne River group; a solo by Mrs. Countis Mascho; a demonstration on, "Good Grooming"; and the presentation of certificates by B. C. Mellencamp, County Agent. In addition, the style show supervised by Miss Irene Taylor, Clothing Specialist of the Michigan State College, proved to be a feature that was greatly enjoyed. At least 15 ladies participated in this, and displayed dresses from morning to night.

At the business session held in the forenoon, the most important transaction was the election of officers for the new year. This resulted in the selection of Mrs. Countis Mascho, Charlevoix, as chairman; Mrs. Mildred Burns, Boyne City as county recreation leader; and Miss Irene Van Hoosen, Boyne City as county secretary. The ladies selected the project work for the coming year and had a careful review of the lessons to be covered in the new project. Indications point to at least 10 ladies attending Farm Womens Week at the Michigan State College. The program is already being developed for this fall, and an earnest plea is extended to all communities to participate in the extension activity. Kindly notify us if there is any interest in your community, and we will cooperate fully in organizing the locality so that it might also participate in the county project.

Dipping Sheep Pays Big Dividends

All sheep should be dipped each year regardless of whether ticks or lice are present. The best time is usually one month to six weeks after shearing, as the wool will then hold more of the dipping powder used in the solution. The powder remains in the wool after the fleece dries and will help eradicate ticks and lice that hatch out from the eggs and nits that were present at the time of dipping. It will also act as a preventive against reinestation until the fleece is shorn. After that reinestation may take place unless the sheep are dipped. Michigan sheep men, for that reason, prefer to use the arsenical dipping powder as they find that one application gives them complete and satisfactory results.

If your sheep do considerable rubbing and scratching, and where the wool hangs in straggling lots on the sides of the sheep, it is likely that they are infested with lice. In some cases men have tried to control ticks and lice by dusting powder into the wool. Best results are received when sheep and lambs are dipped in special constructed metal or concrete tanks. In connection with tanks, you will be interested in the announcement that a dipping vat will be constructed on the farm of R. K. Paddock, Charlevoix, on June 13th. This tank is economical to construct and will make the job of dipping sheep a relatively easy one. While it is not the policy for extension workers to recommend products to use, in the past we have had most satisfactory results with the use of "Coopers Powder Dip." This is an arsenical, and meets all the requirements expected of a dip, very nicely. Don't fail to carry out this practice on your sheep four to six weeks after shearing.

FOOLISH FEARS THAT TORMENT YOU

Dr. Donald A. Laird, well-known psychologist, points out that only two of the silly bugaboos that haunt men are "inherited" — The rest are "learned" and can be overcome by any normal person. Read the article in The American Weekly with Sunday's Times.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

President Stirs Wrath by Calling Critics of AAA "Liars"—Senate Votes NRA Only Brief and Restricted Life.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

FOUR thousand farmers, gathered from all parts of the country, invaded Washington and told President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace that they were enthusiastic believers in the efficiency of the AAA program and supporters of the amendments which the administration asks congress to make in the agricultural adjustment act. Mr. Roosevelt addressed, from the south portico of the White House, what he called a "surprise party," and prefaced his remarks with the statement that "a great many of the high and mighty" have been deliberately trying to mislead many people by "lying about the kind of a farm program under which this nation is operating." He went on to deny emphatically that the government has "wastefully destroyed food in any form."

Next day many of the visiting farmers in the senate gallery and heard Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, Republican, score the President for characterizing critics of the AAA program as liars. The senator said:

"In his radio speech of April 28, the President urged his audience to 'feel free to criticize.' He invites criticism and then shows that he 'can't take it.' We who have criticized the New Deal were earlier called 'torches,' 'traitors,' 'whiners,' 'chiselers,' etc., but now we are called 'liars,' and everybody understands just what that means, and it comes with little dignity from a man who holds the high position of President of the United States."

"But I want to say that if this term is applied to all of those persons who have criticized the New Deal, we have developed the greatest crop of 'liars' within the last six months ever found in any country."

Senator Hastings then introduced a resolution calling upon the secretary of agriculture to submit all correspondence between the department and the visiting farmers, together with any instructions sent out to county agents with a view of producing the "spontaneous" visitation. Mr. Hastings also demanded to know how the delegates were selected and what financial assistance "directly or indirectly" was extended to them by the agricultural officials.

Over in the house Representative Fish of New York started a lively debate on the same topic, and he was even more outspoken than Mr. Hastings, saying:

"Confused and confounded by the marked swing away from the unsound and Socialistic New Deal policies, the President lost his head—and that is the mildest term that can be applied—when he called his critics liars."

There were plenty of defenders of the President and Secretary Wallace in both chambers.

BY ADOPTING the resolution of Senator Bennett C. Clark of Missouri, Democrat, the senate gave the NRA life only until April 1, 1936, and considerably curtailed its powers. The expressed wishes of the President and NRA Chairman Donald Richberg for a two year extension with enlarged powers were ignored. The changes called for in the Clark resolution provide for prohibiting inclusion of business firms engaged wholly in intra-state commerce under NRA codes or regulations; banning price fixing except in mineral resource industries, and directing the President to revise all codes within thirty days to conform to the provisions of the resolution. Majority leaders in the house were prepared to fight for the two year extension, but admitted the Clark resolution was likely to prevail there also. In that case, in the opinion of many observers, the NRA will be practically dead.

While the senate was debating the matter, Mr. Richberg told a mass-meeting of NRA workers that the Clark resolution was "complete folly." This aroused the Missourian to wrath. He called it "the most brazen exhibition of impudence on the part of a bureaucratic official which has fallen under my observation during my lifetime," and next day, in a set speech, he told his fellow senators at length just what he thought of Mr. Richberg and his ambition to be a Mussolini in the United States.

An organization called the Industry and business committee for NRA extension was called into action, as were the farmers for AAA, and its head, Ward Cheney, silk manufacturer, announced that a meeting of delegations of industries would be held in Washington May 22.

SENATOR HUEY LONG'S resolution for an investigation of Postmaster General Farley was rejected by a vote of 62 to 20, the "Klingfish" being the only Democrat recorded in favor of it. The senate then passed the Norris amendments to the Tennessee Valley Authority act, increasing the TVA's bonding authorization from fifty to one hundred million dollars and protecting its electric power activities from court interference.

Next on the senate program was the Wagner labor relations board bill which its author declared was "responsive to the ominous industrial disturbances of last summer when blood ran freely in the streets and martial law was in the offing."

After several amendments designed to limit the power the measure inferentially gives the American Federation of Labor had been rejected, the bill was shoved through by a vote of 63 to 12.

RURAL electrification administration, one of the new divisions of the works relief program, was established by President Roosevelt in an executive order, and Morris L. Cooke, a Philadelphia engineer, was appointed to be its chief. The sum of $75,000 was allotted for its administrative expenses, and allocations are to be made later for authorized individual projects.

The executive order described the duties and functions of the new unit as "to initiate, formulate, administer and supervise a program of approved projects with respect to the generation, transmission and distribution of electrical energy in rural areas."

The order permits the administrator to acquire by purchase or by the power of eminent domain any real property or any interest therein and improve, develop, grant, sell, lease or otherwise dispose of any such property.

CONGRESSMAN MICHAEL I. IGOE of Illinois was appointed United States district attorney for Chicago and immediately confirmed by the senate—and thus Senator James Hamilton Lewis scored one on Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who had hoped for the naming of a man of his own choosing so as to strengthen his position in Chicago politics. Mr. Igoe temporarily lost his standing in the Democratic party when he sought the Illinois gubernatorial nomination which went to Judge Horner; but through the good offices of Senator Lewis he was restored and was elected congressman-at-large last fall.

BY A vote of about 2 to 1 the striking workers in the Toledo Chevrolet plant decided to accept a compromise offer that had been fixed up by federal labor committeemen, A. F. of L. leaders, company officials and federal mediators. It was expected that this would result in the return to work of 35,000 men in Toledo and other motor car manufacturing centers. The strike in Toledo was engineered by the local union and really was not in accord with A. F. of L. plans.

DENNIS CHAVEZ, who contended that he really defeated Bronson M. Cutting in the election of a United States senator from New Mexico last year, now has Mr. Cutting's seat in the senate. Following the senator's death in an airplane crash, Mr. Chavez was appointed by Gov. Clyde Tingley to fill the vacancy. He will hold office until the next general election in November, 1936, when a successor will be elected. Dennis Chavez and it is likely Mr. Chavez will again be chosen.

The new senator, who is the head of the Democratic party in New Mexico, was born in that state 47 years ago. While serving as a senate clerk he attended Georgetown university law school and after returning to Albuquerque to practice law he was elected to the state legislature. In 1930 he was elected New Mexico's one representative in the national house and was re-elected in 1932. He resigned in 1934 to oppose Cutting in the senatorial race and was defeated by about 1,000 votes.

PIERRE LAVAL, French foreign minister, held important conversations in Moscow with Dictator Stalin and other high Soviet officials, and the result, according to a joint communique, is that France and Russia will unite in an effort to bring Germany and Poland into a general pact of non-aggression to insure peace in eastern Europe. Both governments will open diplomatic negotiations to this end.

The communique declared that neither country will allow its "means of national defense to weaken in the slightest degree," although preservation of the peace is a primary duty of both countries.

EVERYONE who knew anything about the matter knew long ago that the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" were a fraud, and now a Swiss court has declared them "false and obvious plagiarism" and fined two Swiss Nazis for circulating them. The court said it was definitely established that the protocols were copied or plagiarized from Maurice Joly's "Dialogues in Hell," which appeared in 1864 and was a vile attack on the despotism of Napoleon III. The object of the suit, brought by Jewish leaders in Switzerland, was to vindicate world Jewry by proving the falsity of the protocols which professional anti-Semites everywhere had been using to excite hostility against Jews.

REAR ADMIRAL RICHARD EVELYN BYRD and members of his South Polar expedition came sailing home at last on their ship Bear of Oakland and were given the warmest kind of a welcome in Washington by President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Navy Swanson, other officials and a host of their relations and personal friends. The admiral and Mrs. Byrd spent a night in the White House.

Then he was joined by his mother, Mrs. Eleanor Bolling Byrd, and his four children, and the family party left for the Byrd home at Winchester, Va. The Bear of Oakland and the Jacob Ruppert, supply ship of the expedition, departed from the Washington navy yard for Boston, the admiral planning to board the Ruppert en route.

Admiral Byrd has plenty of work ahead, with the mass of data gathered in the Antarctic, a book to be written and a lecture tour to be made, but his plans for the immediate future were uncertain.

ETHIOPIA'S government renewed its demand that arbitrators be named to settle the disputes between that country and Italy, as provided in a treaty, and Great Britain and France were reported to be trying earnestly to persuade Italy to a peaceful course. Unless settlement of all differences is assured at the League of Nations council meeting May 20, or if more Italian troops are sent to the Ethiopian border, Emperor Haile Selassie will mobilize his warriors.

Foreign residents of Addis Ababa said they were ignorant of any war preparations by Ethiopia, and that there had been no troops or munitions concentrations or censorship on travel. This contradicted a story in a Rome newspaper to the effect that great quantities of munitions had been shipped into Ethiopia and were being concentrated, along with thousands of troops, near the borders of Italian Somaliland and Eritrea.

Premier Mussolini, in a speech in the Italian senate, warned all other nations not to interfere in the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel, declaring that no nation but Italy "can be the judge in this most delicate matter." He denied that Great Britain and France had taken diplomatic steps to avert the threatened conflict and said those nations need not fear that Italy would be weakened in Europe by the sending of thousands of troops to Africa.

"We shall maintain under arms for all the time necessary," he declared, "the three classes of 1911, 1913 and 1914. Moreover, another class, that of 1912, is in reserve and ready."

RIGID censorship, such as would be imposed in war time, shrouded the American fleet's tactical operations in the Pacific, but was relaxed enough for the announcement of two unfortunate occurrences. While leading destroyers were larger vessels through an "enemy" network of submarines the Lea smashed into the Scard, tearing a big hole in her side. Richard Chadwick, second class gunner's mate on the Scard, was killed and three other men were slightly injured, official records stated.

Lieut. Mathias E. Wyatt of San Diego, a graduate of the naval academy, was piloting one of eighteen fighting planes which took off from the aircraft carrier Saratoga 200 miles east of Honolulu to ward off an attack of "enemy" submarines. His plane was caught in the slipstream from another and fell into water three miles deep. No trace of him or his ship was found.

In connection with the maneuvers the greatest interest was in the mass flight of forty-three planes from the Pearl Harbor naval base westward, presumably to Midway Islands. They were under the command of Commander E. W. Tod, U. S. N., and for the time being all that the public was permitted to know was that they reached their secret destination safely and were "executing their missions."

COMPLICATIONS in the already precarious European situation were expected to result from the death of Marshal Josef Pilsudski, the virtual dictator of Poland. The "father of his country" succumbed to cancer of the stomach in Warsaw and his death was a great shock to the Poles for the serious nature of his affliction had been concealed from the public.

The government announced it would continue to function as though Pilsudski were alive. The authority of the dictator, it said, has passed to his life-long friends, President Ignace Moscicki, Premier Slawek, Foreign Minister Beck and Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly.

Robinson the Key Man

Washington—On June 16, 1934, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, rose in his place in the senate and presented for the Congressional Record a summary of accomplishments of the first regular session of congress under the New Deal. The vast amount of legislation enacted was analyzed and its importance to the country set forth. The one thing that was lacking in that summary was any reference to the Herculean effort of Senator Robinson. He took no credit for himself although it was everywhere realized that Senator Robinson had been the key man in accomplishing that great amount of work.

Congress still will be in session on June 16, 1935. Senator Robinson, of course, will not present a summary of legislative enactments by the current session until the closing day—and your guess is as good as mine as to when that will be. But after virtually five months of the current session, observers cannot help looking back to see what has been done. Comparisons can hardly be avoided.

We find from the records at the Capitol that a total of fifty laws of a public character have completed passage through congress and have received Presidential consideration. That number appears large—an average of ten pieces of legislation a month—but when the nature of the bills themselves is examined, a contrary conclusion must be reached.

I have reported to you heretofore some details of how congress has been balky. Undeniably, there has been stalling and delays accountable only in politics. There have been controversies over entirely minor and inconsequential matters. Individual representatives and senators, having no claims to leadership either from ability or seniority have been able to block enactments in a fashion almost unknown except where congress has been at loggerheads with the Chief Executive.

Through all of these, I think it is fair to say that Senator Robinson has been the most vigorous fighter in behalf of the New Deal of any who maintains a position of prominence in the present administration. Instead of receiving credit, pats on the back, as he did a year ago, the Arkansas senator has been receiving some wholly unwarranted kicks in the pants. If there is to be a goat in congress through the failure of some of the highly controversial New Deal legislation it is liable to be Joe Robinson. If such is the result, it will demonstrate better than anything else the ingratitude of politics because observers agree that except for Senator Robinson the senate would be out of hand and President Roosevelt really would have a serious problem as regards the enactment of his program.

It is my own belief that Senator Robinson deserves all of the acclaim which the New Dealers can heap upon him instead of criticism that is cropping up here and there. Senator Robinson's job has been made much more difficult than a senate leader's job ought to be by constant messing from brain trust quarters. By the same token Senator McNary, of Oregon, who carries the title of Republican leader, has had numerous opportunities to give prominence to Republican doctrine. But Senator McNary has been just as quiet as Senator Robinson has been active.

So, when it is shown that only four important pieces of legislation have passed congress this session the blame, if there be blame, must be attributed not to the Democratic leadership, but to an undercurrent of objection to New Deal principles. The house under the speakership of Representative Byrns of Tennessee has performed as the house usually does where there is a preponderant majority by one party. It has obeyed Presidential instructions and has put through bills about as the White House desired. The obstacle has been the senate and in all probability it will continue to be troublesome ground for the administration.

Borrowing the favorite phrase of a one-time Democratic candidate for President, "Let us look at the record." Up to the present four bills of national scope have passed. The five billion dollar works relief legislation was passed after a delay of two months; legislation extending the life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation was not controversial and was passed almost by unanimous vote, and the additional appropriation of $1,750,000 for the Home Owners Loan corporation brought little objection in its course through congress. The other national piece of legislation that has been finished is the soldiers' bonus, a measure highly objectionable to the President and therefore, after all, not completed legislation.

With regard to the other bills that have passed, none of them can be said to be of consequence. They are designated as public laws, distinguishing them from purely private bills of limited effect. Naturally, they did not provoke controversy.

But awaiting action we find such legislation as the proposal to extend the life of the National Recovery administration, the so-called social security bill, revision of the agricultural adjustment act to strengthen the hand of the Department of Agriculture, and the bitterly fought Roosevelt-Eccles banking reform measure. When action will come on any of these is highly problematical. It is also a matter of pure guesswork to predict in what form these measures will emerge from the Capitol.

Each of the four bills of national scope that is pending involves principles of a character that may precipitate a deadlock at any time. The senate in times past has been known to act with utmost speed and it is possible the differences over the legislation outlined above may be adjusted so that an early adjournment will result. The prospects, nevertheless, are entirely to the contrary. Indeed, it appears that congress is due to get a taste of Washington summer heat.

I am indebted to attaches of the senate for the following compilation of public laws, the passage of which is finally completed:

Theodore O'Hara

O'Hara's Tomb

Francis Miles Finch

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS is the story of two men—a Southerner and a Northerner.

It is also the story of the two poems they wrote.

It is a tale that can well be told as May 30 approaches. For that date is Memorial day.

On February 11, 1820, a son was born to Kane O'Hara, an Irish political refugee, who was living in Danville in the Bluegrass region of Kentucky. The boy was named Theodore O'Hara and when the war with Mexico began he was a captain in the United States army. By the time the war had ended, he came back to the Bluegrass a major. There were other Kentuckians who came back also—to rest in the soil of their native state. When they were buried at Frankfort, Major O'Hara, standing on a grassy hillside in the midst of a great crowd, recited a poem which he had written in tribute to his fallen comrades. It was:

THE BIVOUAC OF THE DEAD

The muffled drum's sad roll has beat
The soldier's last tattoo;
No more on life's parade shall meet
That brave and fallen few,
On Fame's eternal camping-ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards, with solemn round,
The bivouac of the dead.

No rumor of the foe's advance
Now swells upon the wind;
No troubled thought at midnight haunts
Of loved ones left behind;
No vision of the morrow's strife
The warrior's dream alarms;
No braying horn nor screaming file
At dawn shall call to arms.

Their shivered swords are red with rust,
Their plumed heads are bowed;
Their haughty banner, trailed in dust,
Is now their martial shroud,
And piteous funeral tears have washed
The red stains from each brow,
And the proud forms, by battle gashed,
Are free from anguish now.

The neighing troop, the flashing blade,
The bugle's stirring blast,
The charge—the dreadful cannonade,
The din and shout are past;
Nor war's wild note, nor glory's peal,
Shall thrill with fierce delight
Those breasts that nevermore may feel
The rapture of the fight.

Like the fierce northern hurricane
That sweeps his great plateau,
Flushed with the triumph yet to gain
Came down the serried foe.
Who heard the thunder of the fray
Break o'er the field beneath,
Knew well the watchword of that day
Was "Victory or Death."

Long had the doubtful conflict raged
O'er all that stricken plain,
For never fiercer fight had waged
The vengeful blood of Spain;
And still the storm of battle blew,
Still swelled the gory tide;
Not long, our stout old chieftain knew,
Such odds his strength could bide.

'Twas in that hour his stern command
Called to a martyr's grave
The flower of his beloved land,
The nation's flag to save.
By rivers of their fathers' gore
His first-born laurels grew,
And well he deemed the sons would pour
Their lives for glory too.

Full many a norther's breath has swept O'er Angostura's plain—
And long the pitying sky has wept
Above the moldering slain,
The raven's scream, or eagle's flight,
Or shepherd's pensive lay,
Alone awakes each sullen height
That frowned o'er that dread fray.

Sons of the Dark and Bloody Ground,
Ye must not slumber there,
Where stranger steps and tongues resound
Along the heedless air.
Your own proud land's heroic soil
Shall be your fitter grave;
She claims from War his richest spoil—
The ashes of her brave.

Thus 'neath their parent turf they rest,
Far from the gory field,
Borne to a Spartan mother's breast
On many a bloody shield;
The sunshine of their native sky
Smiles sadly on them here,

And kindred eyes and hearts watch by
The heroes' sepulcher.

Rest on, embalmed and sainted dead,
Dear as the blood ye gave,
No impious footstep here shall tread
The herbage of your grave;
Nor shall your glory be forgot
While Fame her record keeps,
Or Honor points the hallowed spot
Where valor proudly sleeps.

Yon marble minstrel's voiceless stone
In deathless song shall tell
When many a vanquished age hath flown,
The story how ye fell.
Nor wreck, nor change, nor winter's blight,
Nor time's remorseless doom,
Shall dim one ray of glory's light
That gilds your deathless tomb.

When in the spring of 1861 the drums began beating the long roll again, O'Hara cast his lot with the South. He served until the end of the war, engaged in business at Columbus, Ga., then retired to a plantation in Alabama where he died June 7, 1867. In 1873 the Kentucky legislature voted an appropriation to bring the body of her soldier-poet back to the Bluegrass. The next year they buried him with military honors in Commonwealth cemetery in Frankfort. He rests there beside his fellow soldiers for whom he wrote the poem that has become world-famous and which has been called "the perfect requiem of four wars"—Theodore O'Hara's "The Bivouac of the Dead."

"Perfect requiem of four wars" though O'Hara's poem was, it remained for another to become more particularly associated with the Memorial day observance which grew out of the conflict of 1861-65.

In 1865, the women of Columbus, Ga., decorated the graves of their war dead and the following January the members of the Ladies' Aid society there decided to perpetuate the custom. They picked upon April 23, 1866, as the date for their Memorial day celebration.

So they held their memorial services in the cemetery on that date and decorated not only the graves of the Confederate war dead, but also those of some Union soldiers buried there.

The next spring there appeared in a New York newspaper a brief paragraph which stated that "the women of Columbus, Miss., have shown themselves impartial in their offerings made to the memory of the dead. They strewed flowers alike on the graves of the Confederate and of the National soldiers."

At that time a young man named Francis Miles Finch was practicing law in Ithaca, N. Y. Born in 1827, he had been graduated from Yale

In 1849 and, as class poet, had delivered a memorable poem at the commencement exercises. When he read the newspaper item about the action of the women in Columbus, Miss. Francis Miles Finch, the lawyer, became Francis Miles Finch, the poet, again, and in 1867 there appeared in the Atlantic Monthly this poem:

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY

By the flow of the inland river,
Whence the fleets of iron have fled,
Where the blades of the grave-grass quiver,
Asleep are the ranks of the dead;
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Under the one, the Blue,
Under the other, the Gray.

These in the robings of glory,
Those in the gloom of defeat,
All with the battle-blood gory,
In the dusk of eternity meet:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Under the laurel, the Blue,
Under the willow, the Gray.

From the silence of sorrowful hours
The desolate mourners go,
Lovingly laden with flowers
Alike for the friend and the foe:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Under the roses, the Blue,
Under the lilies, the Gray.

So with an equal splendor,
The morning sun-rays fall,
With a touch impartially tender,
On the blossoms blooming for all:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Brodered with gold, the Blue,
Mellowed with gold, the Gray.

So, when the summer calletch,
On forest and field of grain,
With an equal murmur falleth
The cooling drip of the rain:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Wet with the rain, the Blue,
Wet with the rain, the Gray.

Sadly, but not with upbraiding,
The generous deed was done,
In the storm of the years that are fading
No braver battle was won:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Under the blossoms, the Blue,
Under the garlands, the Gray.

No more shall the war-cry sever,
Or the winding rivers be red;
They banish our anger forever
When they laurel the graves of our dead:
Under the sod and the dew,
Waiting the Judgment-day;
Love and tears for the Blue,
Tears and love for the Gray.

This poem became instantly popular. It was reprinted in hundreds of newspapers throughout the land. It was set to music and sung as a patriotic hymn. A famous anthology of American poetry calls it "a national classic."

In later years Finch became a justice of the New York Court of Appeals, helped organize Cornell university, was a member of its first board of trustees, became dean of its law school in 1892 and held other positions of honor and trust until his death in 1907. But America does not remember the famous jurist and educator nearly so well as it remembers the man whose poetic message of reconciliation helped reunite a nation and heal the wounds of a great war.

THE LORD'S SUPPER

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 26:17-30; I
Corinthians 11: 23-29.

GOLDEN TEXT—This do in remembrance of me—I Corinthians 11:24.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Supper Jesus
Gave His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why We Have the Lord's Supper.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOP-IC—Why Observe the Lord's Supper?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOP-IC—The Meaning of the Lord's Supper.

I. It was instituted by Christ (Matt.
26:17-30).

1. The time of (I Cor. 11:23). It was on the night of the betrayal of Jesus, just after the betrayer had been announced.

2. The circumstances of (Matt. 26: 26). It was in connection with the eating of the Passover. At the command of Jesus the disciples had made ready the Passover, and while they were eating he took bread and blessed it and gave to the disciples.

3. The elements used (v. 26). Bread, doubtless common bread of the Passover feast, and the cup which was the fruit of the vine.

II. The Significance of the Lord's Supper (I Cor. 11:24-26; cf. Matt 26:
26-29).

Jesus took natural and literal elements and made them to be symbols of his own body and blood. Just as our bread and drink are transformed into brain and brawn, becoming integral parts of our bodies, so by means of these symbols the communicant partakes of Christ. We are in him and he is in us.

1. It is a memorial of the Lord (Luke 22:19). When he left the world he left the bread and the cup by which the disciples would remember him.
Every true disciple will gladly avail himself of the opportunity thus to remember his Lord.

2. To show the Lord's sacrificial death (v. 26). Jesus Christ did not die as a hero or as an example of unselfish devotion, but as a substitutionary ransom. On the cross he made expiation for sin.

3. It is a guarantee that our sins are forgiven (Rom. 4:25).

"It was the signet of the Son of God attached to redemption."

4. It symbolizes the believer's reception of Christ (I Cor. 10:16). The communicant thereby participates in the body and blood of Christ, becoming a member of his body.

5. It is a forward look to a completed redemption (I Cor. 11:26). When faith is exercised in Christ, redemption begins and its completion will take place at the coming of Jesus Christ (I Thess. 4:16, 17). The bread and the cup constitute the keepsake of the Lord until he returns. These elements possess not only a spiritual, but a tremendous psychological value, both as a memorial and as a prospect.

III. Qualifications for Participation in the Lord's Supper (I Cor. 11:27-29).

1. A proper apprehension of its meaning (v. 27). Eating and drinking unworthily primarily refers not to the desert of the communicant, but the failure to grasp the meaning and importance of the ordinance. To engage thoughtlessly in this service is to do it unworthily. Only a regenerated person can discern the Lord's body. Faith in the integrity of Christ's person and work is essential. Anyone who does not believe in the absolute deity of Christ and his vicarious atonement is an unworthy communicant.

2. Church membership (I Cor. 11:
18-22). Christ's body is the Church, which is composed of regenerated men and women united to him as head and to each other as members of that body
by the Holy Spirit.

3. Orderly walk. Conduct which disqualifies for participation in the Lord's supper is—
a. Immoral conduct (I Cor. 5:1-13).
It is most perilous for one who is guilty of immorality to approach the Lord's table (I Cor. 11:30). Sickness and death are often visited upon such. This explains why some are mysteriously taken away in death.
b. Heresy (Tit. 3:16; I John 4:23).
The one who does not believe in the deity and incarnation of Christ is a heretic. Such should be excluded from the Lord's table.

c. The one who stirs up party strife
(Rom. 16:17). Those who cause divisions in the Church should also be excluded from the Lord's table.

Freedom and Triumph

To be gripped by an iron-handed necessity from without is slavery; to be borne along the path of duty by an inward force, which we would not resist if we could, is freedom, peace, triumph.

SEED THOUGHTS

Often it takes some tide of grief to lift us to our best.

Remember that every drop of rain that falls bears into the bosom of the earth a quality of beautiful fertility.—
G. H. Lewes.

All things and all acts and this whole wonderful universe proclaim to us the Lord our Father, Christ our love, Christ our hope, our portion, and our joy.

ATTRACTIVE IN ITS SIMPLICITY

PATTERN 2201

Here is a frock to make those numerous home chores pleasurable.
Its nice simplicity applies not only to its making—which is easy in the extreme, as denoted by the sketch of the garment spread open—but also to the laundering problem. A run of the iron and it is again fresh and immaculate, doing its bit graciously to keep you in trim. Its lovely, freedom-giving design lends itself well to the new cottons in stripes, plaids, checks or floral prints—so well, in fact, that you'll likely repeat the pattern in many fabrics. The smart yoke which includes the sleeve effect is decidedly becoming.

Pattern 2201 is available in sizes
12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38,
40 and 42. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 35 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number.
BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle
Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Little Known Facts About Banking

IF Banks Were Operated for Profit Only

Nowhere in the world do the banks put service to the community ahead of profits as in the United States.

The truth of this is shown in a recent survey, which revealed that "in the average bank 50% of the depositors carry but 3% of the total deposits" . . . In other words, American banks sacrifice profits by providing better banking facilities to more people than is considered necessary by banks in other countries. But that is the "American spirit" of American banking.

Need we add that service to the community comes first at this bank? Here the small depositor receives the same service as the larger depositor, and his account is just as welcome.

CHAPTER VI

The night train from Cairo to Asuan pulled into the station at Kenah. Only two first-class passengers alighted there, a man and a woman, a small, very slender woman.

The woman shivered as they entered a saloon car which awaited them in charge of a Nubian chauffeur and groom.

"You shiver, little one," said Yu'an Hee See.

The woman leaned against him. "I am so cold, Yu'an," she explained.

"In two days you will be in your own apartments—amongst your scents and jewels, and those other toys you love, with service and warmth, and those treasures amid which I delight to see you playing."

He stroked her slender knee with a plump, tapering hand, and his words came as a high croon.

The car passed swiftly, and almost silently, along a street in which were lighted cafes, above them a tawdry gaiety glimpsed through open windows.

Where a large mosque grotesquely broke the continuity of these houses, they swung into a narrow side turning. The driver skirted one high wall of the mosque, came into the very shadow of the minaret, and turned left again. Through an unpaved lane running parallel and behind the rowdy street, they proceeded, slowly now. Twenty yards along, they pulled up.

The Nubian groom deftly unrolled a length of carpet across the muddy path to a gate which was suddenly opened in an otherwise blank wall. An old Arab, black robed and white turbaned, stood there, holding a lantern high above his head. Its yellow light fell upon a wrinkled face which had earned for its owner the title of Father of Cunning.

Yu'an Hee See and the woman passed across a roughly paved courtyard.

Light shone out from rooms on the ground floor, and there was an outer staircase leading up to a balcony illuminated by two fine lattice windows.

One would have judged, and judged correctly, that this was an old Arab mansion. Around it the sordid life of Kenah had crept, fungus-like, almost concealing, but not defacing, the home of some former merchant prince.

Yu'an Hee See and his companion entered a lighted room. On the threshold they were met by Aswami Pasha. He bowed low over the extended hand of Orange Blossom, deeply saluting Yu'an Hee See.

"We have done our best, my lord," he said. "I trust you will be happy here for one night."

He clasped his hands, and an old Arab woman appeared.

"My lady," he bowed to Yu'an Hee See's companion, "your apartment is prepared; Magreba will attend you." Orange Blossom followed the aged attendant from the apartment.

"All are here?" Yu'an asked, upon a very high note, which betokened anxiety.

"All. I have the list showing where each man is tonight."

Yu'an Hee See waved a plump hand. "I do not wish to see it. Next?"

"The detective from Scotland Yard, who is on the Wallaroo, has been identified."

He is in touch with the American girl whom your excellency has taken under your protection!"

Yu'an Hee See began very softly to hiss. "It is almost certain then, that this man had read the notes in my book before."

"I fear so, Excellency."

Yu'an Hee See, his eyes apparently quite closed, nodded, slowly.

"Even so," said the Egyptian, "alone he could do nothing."

"He has had time to inform others. But he cannot know all. Yet this man it was who followed me to Singapore a year ago . . . and has escaped me since. . . The Hangman is on board?" he whispered.

"He is."

A pause, then: "Instruct Doctor Oestler," said Yu'an Hee See.

Aswami Pasha nodded comprehendingly; whereupon Yu'an Hee See began to laugh, his red lips seeming to swell, but his teeth never showing; the oblique slits of his eyes turned in the Egyptian's direction.

For five, ten seconds, Aswami sustained the gaze of those eyes which he could not see. Then, his own bold glance faltered—he dropped his dark lashes and turned aside.

The laughter of Yu'an Hee See reached a note so high as to be almost audible.

Dawson Haig sat in the room of Jack Rattray, the chief officer, or rather, he sat at intervals, pacing up and down like a wild animal.

"It's a most unholly business," said Rattray, in his slow fashion. "I've been looking on, and I've seen things. First thing: you're spotted!"

"I know!—and I can't read Oestler's messages! They're in a perfectly undecipherable code."

"Second thing," Rattray went on: "Two members of this slimy gang are watching Eileen; meaning Doctor O. and Mr. Chow. What for? She's not in their way, is she?"

Dawson turned, just inside the cabin door, and stared at the speaker. Then:

"You're right, Jack," he said. "I've seen them myself. I don't like it, and I don't understand it."

"But what's it all about?" Rattray asked helplessly. "What are all these birds doing on board? They're a pretty unsavory crew, in my reckoning, anyway. Oestler's plausible enough, but there's a nasty brute hidden under that amiable smile. As for the 'snake charmer,' she'd drown her own twins. Then there are the two Chinks on D deck. The learned one, with the glasses—the little bloke, I mean, Len Chow—doesn't seem in the Number One list to me. But his long pal with the strangled face ought to be put overboard, if I'm any judge. Then there's the big German, Hartog—he seems harmless enough and not in the same gallery at all. I don't know what to make of it."

"And let said Dawson Haig, continuing his restless pacing, "don't know what to make of my report to the chief. I'm acting on information, Rattray, that this scheme, whatever it is, comes to a head before we reach Aden. And as I don't know what the scheme may be, I can't reasonably expect Scotland Yard to go on granting me leave of absence and paying my expenses indefinitely. You see, I'm supposed to be in charge of the Limehouse murder case!"

"I know," said Rattray, and produced his slow smile. "It's never been clear to me what the passenger list of the Wallaroo had to do with it."

"It isn't clear to me," Haig confessed. "But I know there is a connection. And I know I have my hand on the solution of the mystery if only I can grasp it."

He paced up and down awhile longer, then:

"Do you remember, Jack," he jerked suddenly, "the loss of a big German freighter somewhere off Suakim about two years ago?"

Jack Rattray shook his head.

"I wasn't on this run two years ago. Why?"

"Well, there's no point in telling you why, if you don't remember the case," Haig replied. "But do you recall the wreck of the American steam yacht, Miss Minnesota?"

"Clearly! We were only forty miles off at the time! An aunt of Eileen's—Lady Dakenham—was lost in her. What's the chief idea grilling in your brain, pan?"

"There are several ideas. But I admit they're a trifle hazy. Did you get an S O S from her?"

"Not a thing."

"Then how do you know you were forty miles off at the time?"

"Ran into bits of wreckage and figured it out."

"Wasn't it funny they didn't send out a call for help?" Dawson Haig asked.

Rattray stared at him. "No," he replied. "In my opinion they hit some small heavily laden craft, and the pair of 'em sank almost at once."

"But surely there would have been a few survivors?"

"Have you ever had a good look at a shark?" said Jack Rattray grimly. "Followed a short silence, then Haig asked, "Is there much drug smuggling down that way?"

"Lots! Hashish for Egypt, mostly. Also, the good old slave trade flourishes exceedingly. I'm told the poor devils are driven up from Central Africa! The caravans travel at night, of course, and dig in during the day. They run motorboats across nowadays, high-powered craft developing forty knots. I've seen 'em from the bridge once or twice. They cross on dark nights, as a rule."

"But where can the markets be, Jack?"

"There's Mecca. That's still a closed city. Fez, up in Africa. And I'm told there's a small, sort of exclusive market somewhere on the Nile in Egypt."

A rap on the door.

"Come in!" Rattray called. The door opened, and Eileen entered, closing it carefully behind her.

"I've caught them!" she declared, her eyes sparkling with excitement—"at last!"

"What?" Dawson Haig demanded.

"I saw the snake charmer slip a note into the hand of Mr. Len Chow as they passed on the promenade deck, three minutes ago!"

There was a dance after dinner that night.

Dawson Haig, desperately worried, went up onto the boat deck, quite deserted at the moment, and leaned over the starboard rail, at a point just aft the bridge, staring across calm sea in the direction of the African coast. He tried to think—to think calmly.

The problem was one demanding the exercise of all his powers. And, set like a jewel in this dark affair, was Eileen—a distracting figure (he could not be blind to the truth), and one upon which all too often he found his thoughts focused. That Eileen had twice proved of incalculable service did not alter the plain fact that many times when he should have been concentrating upon the mystery, he found himself concentrating upon Eileen.

From a professional point of view he was faced either with something very like ruin, or, alternatively, with a triumph which must prove a stepping stone in his far-flung ambitions.

Granted this success—now doubly to be prayed for—he might dare to think about Eileen as he longed to think about her; not as the charming sister of an old friend, nor even a capable little helper, but as . . . Eileen.

Where did the clew lie to these mysterious activities? What should be his next move? It was maddening to watch, to know some incomprehensible plot stretching from Limehouse to Paris, Paris to Marseilles, and thence to Port Said—further, perhaps, was fermenting under his very eyes, coming to maturity, and yet—to do nothing!

At which point in his reflections, he was seized from behind in a steely grasp and lifted lightly, as a nurse might lift an infant! He was in the grip of that creature of Yu'an Hee See's called "the Hangman." But of this fact he was ignorant.

Swung back over the shoulder of his unseen, but incredibly powerful assailant, he recognized, with a cold chill of dread, that he was about to be hurled into the sea!

Automatically to his mind sprang those instructions which every police officer receives, in jiu-jitsu. His fists were useless, flung high, impotent, above his head. But the cunning grip which told him that he was dealing with an expert, held him so poised that only at one moment—for which, dangerously, Haig must wait—could he counter.

That moment came—as the seemingly irresistible forward swing commenced which was to hurl him into the sea. He checked a cry in his throat. He was icily cool. And, following the curve of that mighty throw, instead of endeavoring to check it as an ill-informed victim would have done, he swung forward, drew up his knees, and kicked backward with all his strength!

It was sheer guesswork, but one heel registered dully upon the head of the athlete who held him aloft.

That death swing was never completed. Haig dropped with a crash upon the rail, hung perilously for a moment—and felt a vise-like grip upon his ankles. . . .

He was tipped forward, forward, irresistibly—until he saw the lights, of portholes beneath, the lower ones reflected in the sea. He clawed at the rail. That silent horror was behind him, hanging above him!

Clutching grimly, he kicked—kicked again . . . got a hold with his left hand higher up, and realized that the man was craning right over, was reaching down to relax that detaining grip. In desperation, resting his head against the lower-rail, he managed at last to free his ankles, to draw his legs down. Then, with all his remaining strength, he shot both feet upward!

There was an impact—a stifled cry. His jacket, held in clutching fingers, swept down over his head, but he clung on—clung on dizzily.

A wrench—a bulky shape streaked past him . . . a dull splash. The Hangman had fallen!

Disheveled, panting, Haig dragged himself back to the deck. He leaned dizzily against a boat, striving to adjust his disorder. Already the plan was forming which later he carried out. No one knew that the thing was overboard. No one should ever know, but the sharks, until his absence was discovered!

When, bewilderingly, came the swish of a silken shawl—a patter of feet—a soft, terrified cry . . . and Eileen's sweet arms were about his neck!

"Billy—Billy dear! Oh, my G—d! you're covered with blood! What is it? What is it?"

"My dear!" he said—"It's nothing. I'm safe—and no one must know—"

She was staring into his face eagerly, her own raised in a sort of agony of apprehension. Haig began to tremble. Gone was every resolution he so recently had made—useless—hopeless.

He held her so close that she thought, "He will break me in half," and exulted. He kissed her until she was breathless, helpless.

"Oh, my darling," he whispered.

He had so little to offer this wonder girl, locked, happy, in his arms—so much to tell her—so much to explain. Yet somehow all he could say over and over again, was:

"Oh, my darling . . ."

A few moments after the Wallaroo dropped her anchor off Port Said, the British consul came aboard. There was a conference in the captain's cabin.

Haig had deliberately failed to reveal the fact that there was a man overboard. It had gone into his Scotland Yard dossier, but he had suppressed it from those on board, with a specific object.

The first news was given by a steward entering the missing man's room in the morning. The conclusion was come to that the morose Chinese passenger had committed suicide during the night by jumping overboard. . . .

Now, in the closed cabin of the commander, Dawson Haig revealed the truth to Captain Peterson and the British consul.

"I take full responsibility," he said; "you can see for yourselves the sort of gang I have to deal with. First, the Limehouse outrage, and now this murderous attack on me. I got off lightly, with a cut scalp and a torn sleeve!"

The commander scratched his grizzled head.

"What do you wish me to do, Inspector?" the consul asked. "In my opinion, the persons whom you suspect of being associated with the missing assassin should be detained."

Dawson Haig stood up, grinning savagely, and shaking his head.

"Upon what evidence?" he demanded. "I assure you that except for a scrap of paper providentially discovered to associate Doctor Oestler, for instance, with any conspiracy directed against me. And even that is far from conclusive. I mean, he could explain it in all sorts of ways. He doesn't appear to be acquainted either with Miss Valerie Ednam or with Mr. Chow; and certainly not with the German, Hartog, on the lower deck. And what have I against these three people which would justify detention? I assure you"—he shook his head emphatically—"absolutely nothing."

"Then what are we to do?" said the consul. "Of course, I could detain them here, for a time—"

"No, no. Nothing official," was Haig's reply.

With the coming of daylight, the babel of the curious port rose to full blast. Sellers of all kinds of wares—carpets, lace, jewelry, Birmingham antiques, and the rest—set up their shops on deck, turning the ship into a miniature bazaar. The inevitable conjurer was there with his little brass cups. And there were divers in boats who shouted—who never stopped shouting—except when they actually dived.

Dawson Haig, very reluctantly, had agreed to allow Eileen to pursue her inquiries in her own way; but he didn't realize that she had actually left the ship until she had been gone some time. He was watching Len Chow, who, having collected his baggage, was now following a porter towards the ladder. Hartog had quietly gone ashore an hour before.

Just before Mr. Chow reached the gangway he passed a fortune teller, an evilly handsome fellow, wearing shabby European clothes and a tarbush—not an Egyptian, Haig determined, but possibly a Greek, or an Armenian.

Some words were exchanged rapidly, although Haig was too far away to overhear them. The Chinaman pointed shoreward. Haig looked and saw a native boat. . . . In this boat sat Eileen with two women passengers, the party being escorted by Doctor Oestler and the ship's surgeon!

Dawson Haig became acutely uncomfortable. The girl had played her part admirably, even to the extent of striking up a friendship with Miss Ednam. But neither from the woman nor from the Austrian physician had she gleaned anything in the nature of a clue. She was convinced, and had assured Haig of the fact, that they knew she was watching them.

Hurrying down the ladder, the dark-eyed fortune teller was pulled away in a boat which waited. Len Chow followed in another. There was nothing to show that the pair were associated.

But why had the Chinaman pointed out Eileen's party?

Haig stood there watching, and trying to make up his mind which of several courses to adopt. Eileen! At all costs he must keep Eileen in sight. . . .

He was up against a closely and cleverly organized group, he alone holding all available threads in his hands. It was a job for three men, but, somehow, it had to be done by one. . . .

Eileen had some shopping to do at Simon Arzt, and so to this store the party made their way. Doctor Oestler, it appeared, had purchases to make also. The ship's surgeon, Heatherley, went along. Dawson Haig, who had been in Port Said twice previously and, oddly enough, upon the same business, which saw him there now, having satisfied himself that this was the destination of the party, became interested in the movements of Mr. Len Chow.

This gentleman, depositing his baggage at the Eastern exchange, had strolled out, like a man with nothing better to do than kill time.

The fortune teller had entered a shop nearly opposite.

Dawson Haig, wearing the tinted glasses of "Mr. Smith," sat down at some distance from the door and ordered a cool drink. He was doing some hard thinking.

At about this time, Eileen had completed her purchases. Her companions—excluding Doctor Heatherley—had allowed themselves to be lured by wonderful shawls, scarves, and other pitfalls which await unwary travelers in Eastern shops.

Doctor Oestler was inspecting a handsome casket of inlaid wood. Eileen, covertly, was watching him. That this man was an associate of criminals, murderers, she could not doubt; yet he was a most entertaining companion, and in spite of his marked ugliness, possessed the rare quality of soothing without boring.

Airplane Machine Gun Inventor

Roland G. Garros, French aviator, is credited with the invention of the synchronized airplane machine gun. He is known in France as the father of air dueling, which changed the mode of air fighting considerably. In February of the year 1914 he mounted a gun in such a position that it was able to fire through the propeller of an airplane, which was a mode of fighting. In 18 days he is credited with shooting down five enemy planes. He was brought down on the day of his last victory, April 19, 1915, and was taken prisoner by the Germans. He was unable to destroy his plane, which the Germans copied, and his invention was no longer a secret. He later escaped and returned to France. He was killed in aerial combat in October, 1918.

Preparing for Another Stratosphere Flight

HOCKEY MANAGER
Marvin (Red) Dutton, hard hitting defense man of the New York Americans, has been signed as manager of that hockey team for the 1935-36 season. He succeeds "Bullet Joe" Simpson.

Establish Camp in South Dakota

Preparations for another flight into the stratosphere are being made by the National Geographic society and the United States army. A camp is now under construction near Rapid City, S. D. In the photograph, army trucks are shown unloading equipment, marking first activities at the camp scene.

The American record for stratosphere flights was set by Lieut. Com. T. G. Settle, U. S. N., and Maj. C. L. Fordney of the marine corps at Akron, Ohio, on November 30, 1934. While Russian balloonists are said to have exceeded the American record of 61,237 feet, their flight ended disastrously.

Those sponsoring the flight this year hope that new and valuable data on a number of scientific subjects may be gained.

HE FLIES EVERY DAY

Here is Dr. John D. Brock, sportsman pilot of Kansas City, Mo., who was honored by the National Aeronautic association in Washington after he had made his two thousandth consecutive daily flight.

Confer Benefit on Mankind

Research Workers Have to Their Credit Long List of Important Discoveries, High Among Them Being the Production of Quinine.

Services of immense value to mankind have been rendered by the Royal Botanical gardens in Kew, London.

The white man's conquest and development of Africa, for example, might have been retarded for centuries and become a graveyard for European pioneers but for the curiosity of a woman who, in 1639, brought to the authorities at Kew samples of bark from a strange tree. She was the countess of Chinchon, wife of the viceroy of Peru, and the bark of this strange tree had cured her of fever. They called it Peruvian bark at first, and months of patient research at last produced from it that boon to civilization—quinine.

When the curative properties of quinine were realized in England several attempts were made to secure specimen plants for cultivation at Kew, but the natives of Peru and Bolivia were very hostile to the project and frustrated all attempts to take plants out of the country.

In 1878, however, Clements Markham was sent out from Kew in charge of a fully equipped expedition to secure living specimens of Peruvian bark—now called Chinchona. When Markham gathered his plants the natives tried to destroy them by pouring boiling water through the ventilation holes in the warden cases. A warden case is something like a small, portable greenhouse.

Markham managed to get a few seeds to Kew and three years later a crop of 10,000 plants had been raised there. These cultures were shipped to India to form the basis of what are now vast plantations in the Himalayas, where medicine is grown for millions of white people living in the tropics.

The story of rubber is one of the great romances of commerce—and of the laboratories at Kew. Rubber was unknown to western civilization until comparatively recently. The first investigations into this new "viscous substance" were conducted by French explorers about the year 1735, as the result of an expedition to Brazil and Peru. Members of this expedition party to South America reported that the natives coated their garments with a peculiar milky fluid they obtained by cutting the bark of certain trees, and the fluid—or sap—rendered clothing waterproof.

At first the milky substance was merely the plaything of chemists, and not until sixty years after its discovery was an attempt made to patent the process in London. Native methods proved to be too crude for the requirements of civilized society. In 1820 a certain Mr. Macintosh patented a new process for the manufacture of waterproof garments.

In 1840, when the vulcanization process was perfected, new uses for rubber were discovered with bewildering rapidity. It became obvious that a world-wide market awaited those who could supply the raw material. At this time the sources of supply were limited to Brazil, the East Indies, Peru, Bolivia and Africa—but the most important of these was Brazil, where grew the plant known to science as "Hevea Braziliensis."

At this stage the British government, anxious to take a leading part in creating a new industry, turned for assistance to the scientists at Kew. Experts were sent to Brazil in 1876 and there were gathered 70,000 seeds of the rubber plant. Owing chiefly to fine weather throughout the voyage, these seeds reached Kew in good condition and were cultivated there successfully.

The plants were afterwards sent to Ceylon, Malaya, and later Sumatra, where atmospheric conditions proved ideal for the growth of vast rubber plantations. Today 90 per cent of the world's rubber is provided by the "Hevea Braziliensis" (or para rubber), and thus did Kew help to secure control of the rubber market for the British empire.

Plants with peculiar properties are sent to the laboratories at Kew by explorers in various parts of the world. More plants are raised from the original specimens and, when ready for transplanting, are shipped to other countries with a suitable climate. In this way tea was introduced from Kew to Natal and the West Indies, and Liberian coffee to the West Indies and Ceylon. Coca, the cocaine-yielding plant, was introduced to Ceylon, where it is now cultivated extensively.

In the laboratories at Kew the coconut was studied and found to be highly nourishing food. Now the British empire is responsible for about half the world's supply of "copra." Even the coconuts "whiskers" were commercialized, for these provide fiber for mats and brushes.

One of the greatest services Kew has rendered to humanity is the production of chaulmogra-oil, used extensively in the cure and relief of leprosy. The seeds of the plant were first cultivated to perfection at Kew, and thus more than a million lepers owe their lives to the scientists at the Royal Botanical gardens.—Montreal Family Herald.

Right to Break Marital Promise

Breach of Contract Penalty Sometimes Seems to Be Unfair.

"Do you think it is always fair to make a man pay damages for breaking an engagement? It seems to me that the breach of promise thing is a racket in the hands of unscrupulous women from which no man is safe."

"After all, a girl has a right to change her mind—why shouldn't a man? Why should a man engaged for one month, after a quarrel, be compelled to pay $5,000 for breach of promise, as one did recently? Why should a self-supporting young business woman collect a large sum from a fiance who decided they could not get along, when she lost nothing by the short engagement but emotional strain of which the young man doubtless had his share? Why in one case a girl who married another man and was living happily with him sued her first suitor for breach of promise, and because he was richer than the man she married, the jury made up the difference with a verdict of $15,000. Is that reasonable or sane?—What do you think?"

This is the answer to this admittedly vexed question, made by a believer in and staunch upholder of women's rights:

"I think in a good many instances our breach of promise laws do put a 'racket' into the hands of unscrupulous women. Doubtless in the majority of cases where women are willing publicly to expose their heartaches for money damages, a man is being victimized. But in its origin the law was sound enough—to protect women from being taken advantage of by unscrupulous men with the understanding of marriage. That has happened often enough, and many a woman's life has been ruined in that way."

"I agree with our reader that in the ordinary case of a broken engagement, where both sides have been honest in motive, but where the relationship is unfortunately not successful, there is no more reason why a man should be penalized for ending it than would the woman. True, in cases of long engagements, the girl stands to lose more,' as they say, from the practical viewpoint. But the misfortune is mutual. It is in the case where a man has used an understanding of marriage to victimize a foolish woman that the law should punish him. Often in cases of this kind, most often, in fact, the woman cannot bring herself to go through with such a public action, and the law which was designed to protect her is invoked by calculating and designing women at the expense of a blameless man.

"Page a Solomon to protect gullible women and at the same time to make courtship safe for men, particularly men who have money."

Appointed Work Relief Executive

Morris L. Cooke, Atlanta engineer, has been appointed head of the rural electrification division of the works relief administration. Much research work has already been done on the problem of rural electrification, and Cooke's appointment is expected to speed this program.

"The advantage of electrification for the farm home and the farm itself are so obvious that there is hardly any need for comment on this work which the President and the congress have delegated to the Rural Electrification administration," Cooke said when interviewed.

"Approximately 86 per cent of the farms today are without electricity and the advantages it brings."

Fort Dearborn Project
Section one of the sixth grade has nearly completed a very interesting project. It is Fort Dearborn and an Indian Village. The Fort looks very true to life. Soldiers are keeping guard while in the distance one can see a band of Indians approaching. Further to the north is an Indian Village. It is a very interesting scene with all the wigwams and Indians in it. The pupils have also made tomahawks, bows and arrows, and other Indian implements of warfare. To keep right up with this project, they are studying Hiawatha and other Indian legends and poems.
The sixth grade girls of both sections enjoyed a nature trip through the woods last week. They found all different kinds of birds, birds' nests, and other works of Mother Nature.

Fourth Grade Pupils Study Foreign Lands
The pupils in the fourth grade are making posters with pictures of children from the different lands. They are also learning of the poets, artists, and musicians of these various lands. They find it very different and interesting.
In a recent completion test in geography, nineteen pupils received A.

Third Grade Loses A Pupil
The third grade is sorry to say that one of their more active pupils has moved to Charlevoix to carry on his studies. He is Estil Clark.

E. J. Track Team Finished Third At Cadillac

The 1935 Class C honors in track for the northern Michigan regional track meet go to Shelby with 43½ points. Mancelona finished second with 36 points and East Jordan pressed a hard finish with 29 points.
East Jordan's weakness in the dashes and shot put, put them out of the running this year for the honors. Shelby had two stars in Swingle and Halleck who were accountable for twenty-five points. Mancelona was strongly balanced but weak in the 440 and 880 yard runs and did not place in the pole vault. Chester Bigelow stood out for East Jordan by placing first in the high jump, (surprise to everybody) third in the pole vault and fifth in the high hurdles. Bob Hayden finished first in his heat of the 440 yard dash, but the other heat was a faster race. David Pray gave a nice performance for East Jordan by jumping 19 feet 10 inches but only good for the 4th place, running 25.8 seconds in the preliminary round of the low hurdles to qualify for the finals and running a very fast 220 yard dash in the relay to make up lost distance. The prettiest race of the day to watch in Class C was the race in the half mile. This was between the record holder of last year from Frankfort and Bob Bennett of East Jordan. The picture of the finish leaves one in doubt as to the winner. Bennett used a little misjudgment in turning his head about 30 yards from the finish to see the rest of the field after leading throughout all the race. Walter Leist of East Jordan also was right up in the race at the finishing line, getting third. This is Walter's first year of track but he has put in a great year of running.
The pace was terrific in the mile and our boys just finished outside of the winners. Strehl was 6th and Duplessis was 7th. Guy Russell finished second in the high jump; tying with 4 others for second place; but won the second medal on the draw. Our relay team finished 5th with the time of 1:44.6. Gayle Saxton vaulted 9 feet 7 inches but not high enough to place. Alvin McKeague jumped 18 feet 8 inches but also out of the running. Most of these boys are back for track next year and by hard work next spring should be up close to the top again at next year's regional.

How Important is One's Speech?
Have you ever noticed people who are especially attractive and felt that you would care to meet them, and then felt yourself sharply withdrawing upon hearing them speak? Have you ever heard a girl describer as "beautiful until she started to speak"? These two illustrations should show how important speech is, and all of us should pay closer attention to the manner in which we speak. A low, well-modulated voice is as rare as it is pleasing, and the shrieks which rend the air at women's bridge-lunches indicate only too clearly the great need for voice culture in America.
Today it is far easier to find examples of pleasing speakers than it would have been fifteen years ago. Announcers on the radio, such as Graham McNamee or Ted Husing, may be used as being representative of those people who have purity of sound, and distinctness of articulation, a distinctness gained without mouching the words. President Roosevelt is another excellent example of one who speaks with the utmost clearness. By listening to such people and by comparing our articulation with theirs we can make a good start toward improving our own speech.
The following poem, taken from "Peter Nitwit" in "As I Like It" which was printed in the "Scribner's" magazine of December, shows in a rather humorous manner the important place that correct pronunciation holds in one's life.
Lines Indented by a Grouchy American Living in Paris
A pretty mid-west maiden with a smile
As lovely as a flower, called today—
Niece of an oldtime friend—
Smart, charming, gay,
But oh, the voice! As rasping as a file!
And when she mentioned aunt and called her aunt
My impulse was to lose control and rant...
A very little thing, you say? But man,
It's little things that cause most irritation.
Why should we be so careless as a nation?
Why not Ameri- (not Amurri-) can?
We're fine! Just add a modulated voice
And gods and little fishes will rejoice.
A reasonable respect for spoken English
Won't make us climb a high pedantic steeple.
Our language has a glamour which our people
All seem to do their darndest to extinguish.
Our slang's piquant as catsup; I decry it
Not as a condiment but an entire diet.
So having spent much vitriolic juice
I add a milk-and-water: What's the Use!

Oh, My, My!
The first year Latin students are wishing that the school would institute a four year course in Latin in the East Jordan school. Perhaps by the time they have waded through Caesar they will change their viewpoints.
Bud Porter has studied his Latin so hard this year that his hair is full of kinks, and the rest of the boys have studied so hard that it took all the kinks out of theirs. If school continued much longer, what would happen next?

Mr. Roberts Attains the Impossible!
To obtain one hundred percent attention in economics class has always been regarded as an impossible feat, but Mr. Roberts was able to face just such a class one day last week.
Upon seeing strange looking objects carried into the class room, pupils immediately sat up in their seats and began asking, "What now?" The mystery was soon unravelled and Mr. Roberts proceeded to explain a few of the secrets of photography, and told why some pictures which are taken by amateurs are so often blurred.
A picture which was taken by Mr. Roberts, without the class being aware of the fact, proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that every pupil was attentively following the topic of discussion.
"Importance of Being Earnest" Closing Dramatic Season
The "Importance of Being Earnest," presented for the benefit of the Athletic Association, brought to a close all dramatic presentations for the present school year.
As usual the Athletic Show was very well attended. The play showed that it was the result of unlimited work on the part of the directors and those who were in it. The decidedly English pronunciation was both interesting and amusing, and how thankful Americans can be that they don't live in England! The English atmosphere which was created was indeed remarkable.

Business School Presents Assembly Program
The Lewis-Chapin School of Business of Traverse City presented an interesting program for assembly last Monday. A short one act play, "What

WHO'S WHO

Herman Reinhart Rasch
A rash, blue-eyed baby boy first opened his eyes in the grimy city of Chicago on November 28, 1917. His thankful parents decided to call him Herman Rasch.
As little Herman grew up, he showed his good taste by leaving the smoky city for the better air and fairer country side in the vicinity of East Jordan. This year he is numbered among the graduating class.
He attended the Advance School for eight years; then began his high school life at East Jordan. Ping-pong, which has attracted much attention the past few years, found Herman among one of the more interested players. Baseball, his favorite sport, has also taken much of his time, to say nothing of an occasional game of basketball at noon.
Herman has been a member of the F. F. A. and last year won a prize in the Potato and Apple Show.
Physics, typing, and mathematics are his favorite studies, while literature and chemistry are at the bottom of the list. It is rumored that "The Bohemian Girl" takes first place.

Gertrude Sidebotham
Gertrude Sidebotham, another brown-haired senior girl, was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on August 4, 1917.
When she was four years old her parents moved to East Jordan, and this is the only place in which she has attended school.
Gertrude attended a girls' camp on Elk Lake for four summers and has been a member of the Commercial Club for the past year. She has been in two plays, "Who Wouldn't Be Crazy" and "Adam's Evening," and also a short playlet, "Dust of the Road."
Gertrude doesn't dislike any subject she has taken during her high school course, but this year English and chemistry have been her most interesting studies.
As yet she has made no definite plan concerning what she will do after being graduated.

Clara Skrocki
The seniors of '35 possess few blondes, but of the few Clara is one. She was born in Chicago, Illinois, January 24, 1918.
At a very early age she came to Michigan and began her life here on a farm near East Jordan. She attended the Rockery school until the ninth grade, when she entered the East Jordan High School.

Clara has been a 4-H club member three years, and she enjoys it very much. She got the first prize for her fruit canning one year. Ask Miss Westfall who, perhaps, is the neatest second year typist, and she will say, "Clara," for her budgets always look especially neat. Clara admits that she likes all commercial subjects very well, but is undecided what she will do after she is through high school.

Business School Presents Assembly Program
The Lewis-Chapin School of Business of Traverse City presented an interesting program for assembly last Monday. A short one act play, "What

A Difference in People" was given which clearly brought out the value of training and specialization.
Miss Greta Nylund, a cartoonist, drew many comic characters which are found in different newspapers, and Mr. Lewis' chatter helped to make them more amusing.
Miss Thelma Beardsley played several popular songs, among which were "Tiny Little Finger Prints" and "On the Good Ship Lollypon," on her accordion. This was quite a novelty for many of the students, and they insisted upon an encore.
This assembly was slightly different from any presented this year and helps verify the statement that variety is the spice of life.

J-Hop Fever in the Air
All students are hereby warned to beware of the deadly insect which is now at large. A pupil, when bit by this poisonous germ, has a craze to attend the annual J-Hop which is being held Friday, the 24th.
Hushed whispers, such as "Who are you taking?" or "What color is your dress?" are flying fast and furious, and everyone is looking forward to an evening full of fun and gaiety.

Band Concert Well Attended
The high school band and orchestra played their last concert for the school year, 1934-35, before a large and appreciative audience. The town people have always displayed their interest in the musical activities of the school by turning out in large number for all concerts.

All those who attended this concert were amply rewarded and must feel that the band and orchestra are very valuable assets for the school.

Echoes
The statement that the "rotton egg" odors had ceased coming from the chemistry department was made much too soon. That distasteful gas has again been used, this time in the making of colloids. Perhaps just for spite, this time it is much stronger than before.

Ancient history students are new beginning to wonder if they will be able to get their notebooks in on time. It may require the burning of some "mid-night" oil, and then what will the parents say?

The seniors have been trying to figure out why their composite has been hung in the darkest part of the hall. Are they shining lights that they are expected to light up the dark corners, or is the school ashamed of them.

Thirty Million Miles of Ford Economy

MORE MILES. Faster miles. Greater economy . . . that is the story of the Ford V-8. There are conclusive figures from owners to show that it is the most economical Ford car ever built.

A particularly interesting and complete report of costs comes from a national fleet owner who has owned 854 Ford cars which have run more than thirty million miles in business use.

175 were Model T Fords which were run 5,017,075 miles. 599 were Model A Ford cars which were run 24,041,632 miles. 80 are Ford V-8 cars which have been run 2,982,886 miles.

This owner's cost records show that Ford V-8 cars cost 12% less to operate than the Model A Fords and 31% less than the Model T Fords. And they covered more miles per month! The monthly average for the Model T Fords was 1509 miles. . . . For the Model A Fords, 1866 miles. . . . And 2571 miles for the Ford V-8.

Each year the Ford car gives you more in value and performance and costs you less to operate.

Actual Figures Show The Ford V-8 is 12% More economical than the Model A and 31% More economical than the famous Model T.
