Dick Henderson Passes

Richard Henderson, for years an institution with theatre goers of East Jordan, passed away Friday, Nov. 15th, at his home in Mason, Mich., at the age of 59 years. He had closed his summers season with the Henderson Stock Co. out in Iowa, Nov. 5th, and motored home for the winter. He had not been in the best of health and his role in the play "Dr. Jekel and Mr. Hyde", which was always demanded, included in his weekly repertoire taxed his strength and led to his final curtain. He was born in Portland, Mich., and at an early age moved to Mason, Mich., where he grew to manhood and married Fanny Asbury in 1914. He and his father and wife carried on the Stock Co. for many years, it having been organized by himself and his father in 1898, and has ever since been known as the Henderson Stock Co. Many prominent players have appeared under his management. Al Warda, who was an intimate friend of his, motored in company with Mr. and Mrs. McGhee down to Mason, Mich., Monday to attend the funeral which was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic order. Interment was made in the Mason cemetery. Many managers of theatres and professional people were in attendance at the last rites.

Treasure Hunt To Be Staged This Saturday Evening

East Jordan and environs will be the scene of a Treasure Hunt to be staged on Saturday evening, November 23. Treasure seekers are asked to register at the Co-op Service Station at 100 ft. West 100 ft. Due to the fact that the hunt will include territory within a radius of 3 miles, it will be necessary for those entering to come in cars. Hunters are asked to come equipped with flashlights, paper, and pencil.
A small fee of fifteen cents a person will be charged at the beginning of the hunt. That group of hunters having first succeeded in finding ten clues, will be presented with the treasure, which will consist of the money collected as entrance fees from all participants.
Anyone is eligible to enter this hunt. However, contestants are asked to wait for complete directions before attempting to hunt.
This hunt is being sponsored by Miss Margaret Staley and Miss Mildred Kjellander, of the East Jordan Public Schools.

Union Thanksgiving Service At Methodist Church

The annual Thanksgiving service will be held Thursday, Thanksgiving morning at ten o'clock at the Methodist church. According to custom, the Presbyterian pastor is responsible this year for the sermon, and Rev. G. E. Smock, of the Presbyterian church of Boyne City will preach. The usual offering will be divided between the participating churches.

New Equipment For Temple Theatre

In spite of the fact that the present sound apparatus at the Temple is only two years old, Mr. Drew feels that the rapid advancement made in the science of sound reproduction during the last two months warrants the installation of the latest type equipment. The order for this equipment has already been approved and includes the most advanced development of Wide Range High Fidelity application as well as a stage reproducing unit engineered for the acoustical requirements of this particular installation. As this item is being fabricated to order the definite date of installation is not known at present but is expected to be within the next week. This equipment will give the Temple the most modern sound system in this part of the State and will add materially to the enjoyment of the fine entertainment our progressive theatre is making available.

MARRIAGES

McGhee — Stevens

A very pretty wedding was solemnized before the Rev. C. W. Sidebotham in the presence of a host of intimate friends at the home of Mr. Al Warda on Saturday, Nov. 18th, when Walter V. McGhee and Lola A. Stevens plighted their troth. Mr. McGhee has for years been the manager of a theatre in Flint, Mich., and Miss Stevens is a vaudeville artist, having been on the stage since she was a child — born and reared in the theatre. The bride was gowned in a beautiful creation of white cut velvet and carried a bouquet of yellow tea roses. The groom was attended by Mr. C. C. Kurtzrock of Flint, Mich.

Out of town guests who motored here for the occasion were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Kurtzrock, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Martell, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Foosee, H. P. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Morgan, From East Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Drew, Al Warda and Lee Rosegrant. The ceremony was at 3:30 p. m. followed by a seven course dinner served in the Cherry Vale Lodge dining room by Mr. Warda. Mr. McGhee and Mr. Warda have been life long friends having been in the theatrical profession together for many years. The bride and groom, after a brief visit here and a stop off in Flint, are leaving for the west coast where they expect to make their home.

Changes in the Basket Ball Rules For 1935-36

(From "Official Basketball Rules")

Rule 1, Section 5 — Each free throw arc is to be extended, describing a complete circle, the new arc to be denoted by a broken line. The free throw circle is to be a restraining line when jump ball occurs at the free throw line.

Rule 7, Section 10 — The definition of a dribble is revised. A fumble, or attempt to gain control of the ball is not a dribble; that is, after muffing, or fumbling, or tapping the ball from a group of players, a player may then recover the ball and start a dribble. A player is to be given a reasonable opportunity to gain control of the ball; but if, having had an opportunity to gain control, he makes an obvious attempt to advance the ball, he should be considered a dribbler.

Rule 8, Section 6 — The last two sentences are new. On jump balls at the free throw line all players except the jumpers must remain outside the free throw circle until the ball is tapped.

Rule 10, Section 1, Note — On courts having an out-of-bounds margin of less than three feet, a fine broken line should be drawn in the court three feet from the boundary line. This is a restraining line for defensive players on out-of-bounds balls.

Rule 13, Section 5 — The first sentence of this section covers one of the most important changes in the Rules. If the free throw resulting from a personal foul is successful, the ball is to be put into play from out of bounds.

Rule 14, Section 12 — An important change occurs here. A player may not remain in his free throw area, with or without the ball, for more than three seconds while the ball is in play and in possession or control of his team. Obviously this is a further restriction on the "pivot-post" or "bucket" play. Much of the roughness arising from this play is due to laxity on the part of officials. In many instances they have permitted defensive players to hold, push, or otherwise foul the pivot player, and have ignored pushing, charging, or hipping on the part of the pivot player. These difficulties can be cleared up if officials will enforce the rules. It is senseless to talk about "lack of uniform interpretations" in this connection: Holding, pushing and charging are fouls in every game, wherever played, and should be regarded so by all officials.

Rule 15, Section 14, Penalty — This important penalty has been reworded, but only two changes have been made. In (b) it is provided that when a foul is committed against a player who is not in the act of throwing for goal, the official may award an extra free throw for unsportsmanlike conduct. This penalty would apply in the case of an unusually rough foul. Item (c) states that officials must disqualify a player for any flagrant unsportsmanlike infraction on certain Sections. In case of disqualification under this stipulation the extra free throw should be awarded also. The Note following this penalty makes it possible for a play to be credited with a goal even if the ball leaves his hands after the whistle blows. The statement should be studied carefully in order that its purpose may be understood. If this is done, there should be little difficulty in making a correct ruling.

Galaxy of Stars on New Bills At Temple

Special Thanksgiving Program

Thanksgiving Week at the Temple is a star-studded array of grand entertainment with three extraordinarily fine bills scheduled for presentation. Starting Friday and Saturday with another special double feature show: "Fighting Youth" with Charles Farrell and a cast of noted football stars and "Stolen Harmony" featuring George Raft and Ben Bernie. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday "Goin' To Town" brings us a Mae West streamlined to cut down resistance and how she goes as the rampaging queen of the cattle country!

A grand show has been selected for Thanksgiving and will be presented Wednesday and Thursday. This feature is "The Irish In Us" starring James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh... a slap-bang-up action comedy that the whole family will enjoy to the limit. Because of contract restrictions there will be no Family Nite during the presentation of "The Irish In Us" but this popular Temple feature will be continued the following week.

"DIED — BUT RETURNED WITH SOUL OF ANOTHER PERSON?"

An article in The American Weekly with Sunday's Detroit Times reveals how science explains the curious case of a young school girl who suddenly woke up from an illness, could not recognize her own family, declared she was a Spanish woman, and spoke and wrote Spanish — a language she had never had an opportunity to learn.

Reunion in Michigan

ON THE last Thursday of this month the people of Michigan, like millions of their countrymen, will observe Thanksgiving Day. In doing so they will be following a thoroughly American custom, a custom which originated more than three centuries ago when the Pilgrim Fathers, immediately after their first harvest in the New World, set aside a day of Thanksgiving for the year's blessings.

The custom, antedating our Republic, survives as our oldest native holiday. Despite the interval of three centuries, despite the momentous changes they brought into American life, the annual festival continues to draw countless American families into yearly reunion at Thanksgiving; and among the modern forces that foster this ancient custom, the telephone occupies an important place.

The telephone helps to combat the distance created by the extension of our frontiers. It fills a modern need. It contributes its share in making the arrangements for any celebration — ordering supplies, extending and accepting invitations, arranging meetings, changing plans at the last minute, sending regards, regrets or congratulations.

Efficient, unobtrusive, often taken as a matter of course, the modern-telephone thus plays its part in our daily lives, serving us all as readily and faithfully on holidays as during the working week.

Quezon Inaugurated First President of Philippines—Coordinator Berry Has Troubles—Reassurances for Business Men—Armistice Day Celebrations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union

SELF-GOVERNMENT became a reality for the Philippines on November 15, according to schedule, and it is now up to the islanders to utilize their independence wisely and safely, with only general supervision by the United States. In the presence of a great throng of distinguished persons in the magnificent legislature building at Manila, Manuel Quezon, veteran advocate of independence, was inaugurated as the first president of the commonwealth. Representing the United States were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a large party of senators and representatives with their wives. Many foreign governments sent unofficial observers, and the leading statesmen of the islands were present.

After Quezon had taken the oath of office, Sergio Osmeña, vice president, and the members of the new unicameral legislature were sworn in.

President Roosevelt was personally represented by Secretary of War Dern, who made a pleasant speech and read the proclamation, simultaneously issued in Washington, terminating the old government of the islands and establishing the commonwealth government which is to lead to complete independence of the archipelago in ten years. A cablegram of congratulation also was received from Mr. Roosevelt.

Because of the danger of outbreaks by the extremist followers of Emilio Aguinaldo who have opposed Quezon, the constabulary was out in full force, thousands of its members being brought in from all over the archipelago.

The day before the inauguration the legislature held its final session and Frank Murphy, the last of the governors general, appeared before it to review the accomplishments of the American regime that lasted 36 years. "Having found democracy good for itself, America believes it will be good for the Philippines," he said. Mr. Murphy was then sworn in as high commissioner of the new government.

The entire American delegation attended a grand reception and ball given by Mr. Quezon in honor of Mr. Murphy.

MAJ. GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial co-ordinator of the New Deal, is having a hard time co-ordinating industries. An industry-labor conference has been arranged for December 9 in Washington, but it is evident that some very considerable industries will not be represented. First, the Ford Motor company refused curly to send a representative; then the Automobile Manufacturers' association objected to the affair, announcing its opposition to any revival of the NRA, though most of its members signed the old NRA code; and next came a sharp letter from the National Hardwood Lumber association, one of the country's oldest and largest trade associations, flatly refusing to attend the conference. The letter, written by J. W. McClure of Chicago, secretary of the association's board of directors, labeled any attempt to impose a new NRA on industry as "impractical, unworkable, unenforceable, a menace to respect for all laws and therefore opposed to public interest."

Nevertheless, the conference will be held, and representatives of labor are expected to advocate a plan for licensing industry, a proposal that all government contractors comply with code provisions and the 30-hour week.

IF SECRETARY ROPER in addressing the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America in New York was speaking with authoritative knowledge of the intentions of the administration, business may feel considerably reassured. He said "the breathing spell which we are now enjoying is to be the end of governmental regimentation." He declared business was the "scapegoat" of the depression and he upheld the profit system. Of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a "breathing spell," the secretary said:

"This declaration of the President is clear-cut and concrete. It means specifically that the basic program of reform has been completed. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

According to a Washington dispatch in the New York Times, informal orders have been issued by President Roosevelt to administrative officials to cut federal expenditures under the 1937 budget to $500,000,000 less than the newly estimated total for 1936.

As a result, the dispatch says, the lives of many federal bureaus and agencies were reported to be hanging in the balance.

The economy wave is heightened by signs of better business, the Times says.

THAT story, originating with the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, that George Norris had said he would not seek re-election to the senate from Nebraska, seems to have been at least premature. The veteran senator says he will make his decision at election time next year, and not earlier. "A campaign would be a small disturbance, compared to the trouble my not being a candidate has cost me," he said in Los Angeles. "I have received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States urging me to run next year."

ARMISTICE day was celebrated in the United States more generally and elaborately than it had been since the first of those occasions seventeen years ago. Chief of all the ceremonies, naturally, was that at Arlington National cemetery in Washington, where many thousands gathered to hear an address by President Roosevelt. Standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Chief Executive paid a brief but eloquent tribute to the gallantry of America's fighting men in the World war, set forth America's hopes and intentions for world peace, and announced the imminent signing of a trade treaty with Canada which Prime Minister King had been negotiating in Washington.

At exactly 11 o'clock the President bared his head and stood silent for a minute, as did millions of his fellow citizens all over the land. The President next placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb. For six hours, afterward, uniformed organizations marched up the hill in Arlington and laid their wreaths at the tomb.

The celebration in the national capital was culminated by a ball arranged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressional Medal of Honor men headed the list of guests, others being cabinet officers, diplomats and high officials of the army, navy and marine corps.

GOV. CYLDE L. HERRING of Iowa and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota made a bet of one hog on the football game between the universities of their states. Herring lost, and paid by delivering a fat porker to Olson. That seemed all right, but Virgil Case, a vice crusader and editor of a Des Moines monthly paper, immediately swore out a state warrant for the arrest of Herring on charges of gambling, and said he would file federal charges against Olson.

Under Iowa statutes, gambling is a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and a year in prison. The federal charge is a felony, Case said, punishable by a $5,000 fine and a prison sentence.

Neither governor appeared to be perturbed by the charges. Herring named Olson as his counsel, along with Senator Dan Steck of Iowa, who accompanied him to St. Paul to deliver the pig.

BRITISHERS went to the polls in the seventh general election since the World war, to elect a new parliament. Counting and publishing the vote over there is a deliberate process, so at this writing the results are not known. But there was no doubt of the victory of the government forces, though probably they would lose a number of seats. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was unopposed. But the Laborites made a hot fight to defeat Ramsay MacDonald and several other members of the Baldwin cabinet.

The government, in its campaign, urged support of its League of Nations activities and its program of unemployment relief and stimulation of national trade.

Liberals and Laborites took issue with the Conservative candidates on national defense questions, with Labor candidates particularly insistent on disarmament and international control of war materials.

PROMOTED by the powerful nationalistic party WAFF, riotous demonstrations against British domination in Egypt broke out in Cairo and other places. Several rioters were killed and many wounded by the police commanded by an Englishman. The WAFF party insists that Prime Minister Tewfik Nessim Pasha must resign. There is a large Italian community in Egypt, and for a long time it has been understood that Mussolini's emissaries have been stirring up discontent against Britain there.

JAPAN'S apparent determination to dominate northern China has created another crisis in that oriental country, and Shanghai is involved for the Japanese have taken advantage of the slaying of a Japanese sailor there and landed a naval unit 2,000 strong which occupied the Hongkew section of the city.

As the Japanese force began patrolling with fixed bayonets and full war equipment, international settlement authorities mobilized a White Russian regiment of Cossacks under Col. F. R. W. Graham, British army officer detailed as commander of the local volunteer units. The Cossacks, paid by the international settlement, constitute a small standing army for the foreign quarter.

The Chinese were terrified and thousands of them fled from the native quarter to the international settlement, believing the Japanese intended military action in retribution for the murder of the sailor. This the Japanese government denied, but it declared the situation was "serious."

THREE Greeks went to London to invite George II to return to the throne, in accordance with the plebiscite of the Greek people. Deeply moved, he replied:

"I shall never forget the past. I shall return almost immediately to my beloved people. May we have divine guidance to bring happiness, peace, and prosperity to our Greece!"

Following the ceremony, the forty-five year-old monarch, with the Princess Paul and Peter and the Princesses Catherine and Olga, the latter a sister of the duchess of Kent, attended a special service of thanksgiving at the Greek orthodox church.

VICTOR EMMANUEL, king of Italy, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday rather quietly because of the war in which his people are engaged in Africa. He reviewed a parade of armed forces, and with him was the real ruler of the country, Benito Mussolini. Il Duce then appeared on the balcony of his Venezia palace to address a great throng of cheering citizens in the plaza. He spoke just these two sentences:

"The forces you have seen this morning with all their weapons, and especially in their spirit, are ready to defend Italy's interests in Europe, Africa or anywhere."

"In one month we have regulated two old accounts (apparently the Italian defeats at Aduwa and Makale, Ethiopia, in 1896) and the remainder will be settled later."

Mussolini that same evening sent to the nations participating in the sanctions against Italy a formal protest against their action, and warned them that Italy would be forced into reprisals with serious consequences to the economic world.

Dispatches from Rome said Pope Pius was making a supreme effort to persuade the League of Nations to postpone the imposition of sanctions, believing this not only would spare the world great economic disorder but also would increase tremendously chances for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, which might come through collapse of the Ethiopian resistance.

Meanwhile the Italian armies in Ethiopia were advancing steadily toward the interior from both the north and south. The strategic towns of Makale and Gorrabel were occupied practically without resistance.

Halle Selassie lost one of his ablest commanders in the death of General Afework, who was struck by an Italian bomb splinter at Gorrabel.

NOT of vast importance, but interesting enough to command the presence of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and 100,000 other persons, was the twelfth annual national corn husking contest held on a farm at the village of Newtown, Ind.

The winner was Elmer Carlsen, twenty-six years old, of Audubon county, who was competing against 17 opponents, the winners and runners-up of nine midwestern states' contests. Carlsen shucked 41.52 bushels of the golden corn in 80 minutes, which means that he ripped the ears from the stalks, tore the flimsy husks from them and pitched a gross weight of 2,695 pounds into his wagon.

Carlsen set a new world's record, the old one being 38.9 bushels, which mark was beaten also by four others of the contestants. The first prize was a check for $100 given by the Prairie Farmer.

ONCE more Jefferson-Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, has been saved from assassination, the intelligence operatives of the Cuban army having discovered and thwarted the plot on the eve of its execution. Dispatches from Havana said the army officials believed the plot was nipped by the arrest of Cesar Villar, leader of the Confederation of Labor; that the assassination was to have taken place when Mr. Caffery left the embassy for home on November 1, and that six automobiles were ready to carry the assassins to a place of refuge. They believed the plot was inspired by radicals who seek to provoke American intervention in Cuba and hope this would bring on a revolution. It was said 20 men had been sworn to kill Mr. Caffery and certain others.

NEWS from MICHIGAN

Lansing—For the first time, Armistice Day was a legal holiday in Michigan this year. It was made so by the 1935 Legislature.

Bay City—The Saginaw-Bay City River road, a winding 40-foot concrete lane joining the two valley cities, has been dedicated as the Veterans' Memorial Parkway.

Lansing—A 5,000,000-acre woodland playground project for Barry County has been announced by the Federal Resettlement Administration, along with word of final approval of the 13,000-acre Waterloo recreational project. The Barry county project includes 50 lakes.

Lansing—The State Highway Department has added 11 oil aggregate road surfacing projects to its program, to be carried out jointly by the Department and the WPA. The $866,063 worth of projects will employ 1,593 men in eight months. Work will start immediately.

Lansing—In the 84,908,000 hours of work it had provided in 17 months the State Emergency Relief Administration has had only 891 accidents serious enough to cause the victims to take time off from their labor. In 13 of the 83 Counties no injuries to SERA workers were reported.

Lansing—According to Ray E. Cotton, secretary of the State Conservation Commission, no open trapping season has been set for trapping other or beaver this fall. The Legislature left the open trapping dates on both of these fur-bearers up to commission, and it is anticipated that a spring season will be declared instead of fall.

Allegan—The city of Allegan has hurdled the last of a series of obstacles that had drawn out its campaign for municipal power production for nearly a decade. City officials estimated that dynamo in the new municipal plant, finally approved, would begin turning next April, 10 years from the time the council engaged engineers to survey the project.

Ann Arbor—A new laboratory in which experiments in paper making and wood pulp utilization will be carried on has opened at the University of Michigan. The laboratory, one of the few of its kind, is a gift of paper products manufacturers to the University. It occupies three large rooms of the east engineering building and is equipped to make experimental batches of any paper product.

Ludington—Five men, acting under authority of a Department of Justice search warrant, dug on the farm of Fortenatis Zukas, near Scottville, in an effort to find $85,000 in gold which Fred Noyes, Ludington, former owner of the farm, says he buried there more than 30 years ago. Noyes obtained the help of Federal officials from Grand Rapids because of the Federal regulation which prohibits possession of gold.

Marine City—Carrying mail seems to run in the Cottrell family. Col. George Cottrell, said to have been the first settler on the Saint Clair River, distributed all the mail for that district until 1818. In that year his son, David, was appointed as the first official postmaster of the region. The latter's grandson, Fred L. Cottrell, of Marine City, has just completed 32 years as a rural carrier. Now his son, Charles, has taken over his route.

Grand Rapids—Dr. William Haber, State emergency relief administrator, declares that Grand Rapids faces an immediate welfare crisis and said there was a danger that dependent welfare families would be unable to obtain grocery and rent orders from welfare agencies unless the city contributes $25,000 a month to relief funds, at least during December and January. Haber said the case of Grand Rapids might be placed before Gov. Fitzgerald by Feb. 1.

Lansing—Petitions to amend the constitution in such a way that the collection of a sales tax on food, whether raw or as served in a restaurant, would be prohibited, have been approved as to form by Secretary of State Owllie E. Atwood. The issue will go to the voters in November, 1936, if petitions bearing enough signatures are filed with the secretary of state. Exemption of foodstuffs from the sales tax would cut the State's revenues, it is estimated, about $10,000,000 a year.

East Lansing—The Michigan championship in the 1935 4-H meat animal achievement contest went to Thomas Bust, 18, of Charlotte. The judging was on the basis of written reports of profits received from projects, leadership in 4-H Club work and success in developing animals. The youth, who is a student at Michigan State College on a scholarship, won at the National 4-H Club Congress for livestock judging, submitted a certified audit showing a $427.85 profit on his projects. Of this sum $89 was in fair prize money.

East Lansing—The State Board of Agriculture has deferred action on financing of a $400,000 women's dormitory at Michigan State College. The board was informed that $50,000 bequeathed to the college by the late F. A. Kedzie is available. The will specified that the money be used for purchasing books for the chemical library. Don Bremer, known for years as the "campus cop," has been given the title of instructor of police administration. He is in charge of a new police training course added to the curriculum this term.

Lansing—Figures released by Harry L. Pierson, State WPA administrator, revealed that employment throughout the State on WPA projects on November 9 approximated about 60,000 persons.

Bay City—A Chamber of Commerce survey has disclosed that industrial employment in Bay City is at the highest peak in five years. The survey lists 7,050 workers on industrial payrolls.

Zeeland—The First Christian Reformed Church of Zeeland had a big share of keeping townsmen off the relief rolls this summer. Men of the congregation who were on welfare were employed to build a chapel.

Lansing—The State Department of Public Instruction announced it will soon make a final distribution of primary school money, amounting to $4,473,899.20. It is on the basis of $3.20 for each school census child.

Lansing—An appeal signed by 5,000 citizens to repeal its seventeen-year-old ordinance prohibiting the sale of groceries and meats within the city limits on Sunday, was recently presented to the city council here.

Ludington—Pere Marquette car ferry No. 15, first of its kind to be built of steel, has made its last voyage. It left here for the Manitowoc (Wis.) shipyards, where it will be scrapped after 32 years of carrying cargoes and buffeting storms between here, Milwaukee and Manitowoc.

Lansing—The Finance Committee of the State Administrative Board has approved the expenditure of $12,000 to advertise Mackinac Island and the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Michigan College of Mining and technology at Houghton. The fund will be divided equally between the island and the institution.

Lansing—The State Public Debt Commission has completed a statewide survey showing counties have reduced their Covert road indebtedness 13 per cent in the last fiscal year. Total bonded indebtedness for Covert roads dropped from $35,369,273 to $29,037,892, which, according to Wells is a remarkable reduction in the face of large public debts.

Lansing—Thinly populated rural areas in Michigan are watching with rising interest the efforts of the State and Federal governments and utility companies to push power lines into new markets. Emerson R. Boyles, State public utilities commissioner and chairman of the State Rural Electrification Committee, has received more than 1,000 applications for the extension of rural power lines.

Kalamazoo—For the purpose of making a more complete study of the physical causes of insanity, a research department is being organized at Kalamazoo State Hospital. With the assistance of a biological chemist, tests will be made which, it is believed, will indicate various glandular deficiencies. The experimenters expect to find direct relationship of these deficiencies to the mental condition of the patients.

Lapeer—Forty-six years ago, in 1889, G. W. Carpenter was sheriff of Lapeer County and his son, Ray, had a hammock at the northwest corner outside the jail. At the expiration of Carpenter's term as sheriff, the post was removed and the hammock moved to their new home. Lo Elliott was turnkey, and he stuck a little elm shoot in the empty post hole. Today the little shoot is a magnificent tree overshadowing the whole jail and Lo is still turnkey.

Lansing—Michigan's centennial stamp was on 176,962 covers which went through the Lansing postoffice Nov. 1, the day the stamp was put on sale for the first time. R. E. Fellers, superintendent of the division of stamps of the Postoffice Department, who was here for the occasion, pointed out that the number of first day covers exceeded the Boulder Dam stamp issue by 12,000. Almost $18,000 was taken in for the new stamps on November 1, a total of $557,746 being sold.

Kalamazoo—George Henschel has turned the knowledge he gained in the woods as a boy into a means with which to fight the depression and keep off the welfare lists. He gathers wild flowers, plants and nuts and sells them. His season starts in early spring, when he gathers hepatics, wild sweet williams, blue violets and other early flowers, which he sells in tiny baskets with water containers. He is careful never to pull up the plants, so that he may return for more blossoms.

Mt. Clemens—The receipt of "black gold" by the city's merchants last summer was unusually good. "Black gold" is the traditional name applied to the large quantities of heavily tarnished silver coins which flood Mt. Clemens every year. The silver becomes tarnished when mineral bath patrons carry it into the bath houses. The mineral waters are highly charged with an active gas, hydrogen sulfide. The sulfur allies itself with any exposed silver, and a hard, black coating is formed.

Jackson—Lawrence Weller, residing on a farm just north of Jackson, doesn't wait for the ducks to come to him. He goes after them on a pair of "mud skis" which he invented, originally to study wild life in marsh areas. The "skis" seven and one-half feet long and one foot wide, enable Weller to travel with ease in territory impassable to boats yet too soft and wet for wading. They are individual pontoons for each foot and are constructed of basswood. Weller recommended plenty of practice before serious use of the pontoons.

what Irwin S. Cobb thinks about:

Will Rogers' Memorial. SANTA MONICA.—Where I sit writing this, I can see his home across the canyon. There's still sunlight on the top, but the folds in the friendly hills are turning purple.

The most typical humorist since Mark Twain, the most beloved commoner since Abraham Lincoln, the most popular private citizen since Benjamin Franklin, his fame is an everlasting rock. Why, then, a monument of our fashioning to one who was a national institution whilst he lived, who became a national tradition almost before the breath left his body?

Nevertheless it is fitting that on his birthday this country should launch this memorial. For to help perpetuate the bright glory of that name is an obligation we owe to ourselves—a testimony of gratitude for a man amongst us who poured out so freely the precious gifts of sanity and sweetness, generosity and gallantry, a philosophy that was kindly, a wit that was salty but never was sour. You gave us so much, Bill, we're just figuring on paying a little something back on account.

Signs of Normalcy. WE MUST be headed for normalcy. I'm back on somebody's sucker list. As a charter member of the original mother lodge, I belong there. I'm a boob Ben Adhem whose name led all the rest.

Today I received, not a list of selected foreign bonds—that'll come later—but a prospectus about a gorgeous gold mining proposition with all the regular by-products guaranteed, such as quicksilver, lead, copper, molybdenum and, I think, amalgam fillings. Sorry I can't invest in this new bonanza. But I'm saving up to go into an equally timely enterprise. It's a buggy-whip factory, and on the side we're going to turn out flintlock muskets for the United States army.

Selecting a Candidate. IVE found out who the forgotten man is. It's any Republican officeholder above the grade of assistant state geologist who hasn't been proposed by self or friends for next year's Presidential nomination.

On every side, disinterested patriots feverishly suggest some deathless name that nobody outside the immediate family ever heard of and, lo, a national figure whose fame doesn't cover as much territory as a milk route is in the running. Almost anybody who can read and write appears to be eligible, especially if he lithographs well, and, if he has also the firm yet clinging handshake, his stock goes right up.

The concern is for a candidate only. When it comes to a platform, the Democrats can lend them one which has been used hardly any, if at all.

Return to Prohibition. ALL else aside, some of us contend there were two main underlying reasons why this country went "dry" the way it did go. One reason was brewers. The other was distillers. If a person of dubious repute opened a saloon in a neighborhood already over-provided, where, in order to live, he must break the liquor laws, there was, too often, a type of brewer ready to put up for the license and a type of distiller to help out with the rest.

Basically, it was the inarticulate resentment of orderly people against such practices which plunged us into the ghastly legislative error miscalled prohibition.

Now, with that mistake so nearly cured, one hears it directly charged that certain producers of alcoholic drinks are greedily back at the same old tricks. Well, the next time the people of this country vote liquor out—and there'll be a next time, unless the same men in the industry can curb the offenders within their own ranks—it'll be for keeps, no matter how deplorable the results in bootlegging and graft and crime and corruption.

You can tell a lunk-headed profiteer as far as you can see—but you can't tell him anything else.

Upholding the Constitution. SO HEATED is the controversy over the imperiled Constitution that professional politicians are all agog, many going out of one severe gog right into another, accompanied by chills, fever and high blood pressure. Everywhere you look, you see disputants, all lathered up with excitement, who wouldn't recognize that immortal document if they ran into it sitting in the middle of the big road, laying eggs.

I am offering a suitable prize—namely, Grimm's Fairy Tales in words of one syllable—to the first national committeeman, Democratic or Republican, who can tell offhand whether the Constitution starts off, "When in the course of human events," or "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party."

Besides, I'd like to know myself. IRVIN S. COBB, North American Newspaper Alliance, THE WYTT SERVICE.

Thanksgiving Poems and Poets

"Home to Thanksgiving" FROM CURRIER & IVES PRINT

John Greenleaf Whittier

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

VIRGINIA may dispute the claim of Massachusetts to being the real founder of this nation but the most truly deep-rooted holiday in our calendar and the most typically American feast day began as a Massachusetts or, more broadly, a New England institution. That is Thanksgiving day. As the tide of New England immigration spread into other parts of the country it carried the Thanksgiving idea with it and on November 28, when that day is being celebrated from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian line to the Mexican border, everywhere the observance will have a certain New England flavor.

Just as it was a New England woman, Sara Josepha Hale, who had the most to do with making a national holiday of this observance, which began as a purely local custom, so it was another New England woman who wrote the best-known Thanksgiving poem in our literature. Look at the picture, "Home to Thanksgiving," at the top of this article. It was one of the most popular of the Currier and Ives prints which once adorned the walls of every American home. One glance at it and there immediately comes to mind these lines:

Over the river and through the wood,
To grandfather's house we'll go;
The horse knows the way
To carry the sleigh
Through the white and drifted snow.

Over the river and through the wood,
O how the wind does blow;
It stings the toes
And bites the nose
As over the ground we go.

Over the river and through the wood,
To have a first-rate play,
Hear the bells ring
"Ting-a-ling-ding"
Hurrah for Thanksgiving day.

Over the river and through the wood,
Trot fast, my dapple gray;
Spring over the ground
Like a hunting hound,
For this is Thanksgiving day.

Over the river and through the wood,
And straight through the barnyard gate;
We seem to go
Extremely slow,
It is so hard to wait!

Over the river and through the wood,
Now grandmother's cap I spy,
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!

The woman who wrote that poem was Lydia Maria Child, born in Medford, Mass., on February 11, 1802. In the period before Harriet Beecher Stowe stirred the country with her "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Mrs. Child was the most widely-known woman novelist. Her "Hobomok," a tale of life in early Salem in which the hero was a "noble red man" of the J. Fenimore Cooper type and the heroine was a white girl, was published in 1824.

This was followed the next year by "The Rebels; or, Boston Before the Revolution" and in 1835 by "Philothea," a poetical romance of Athens in the days of Pericles. Edgar Allan Poe heaped extravagant praise upon "Philothea," saying "We turn to these pure and quiet pages with that species of genuine satisfaction with which a drowning man clutches the shore."

"Shooting Turkeys for Thanksgiving Day" FROM CURRIER & IVES PRINT

James Russell Lowell eulogized Mrs. Child's work in his "A Fable for Critics."

An ardent Abolitionist, Mrs. Child published the first book written on the subject of freeing the slaves. It was "An Appeal for That Class of Americans Called Africans," published in 1833, and William Ellery Channing made a special trip to Roxbury to thank her for it. A prolific writer, Mrs. Child also produced "The Mother's Book" (1831); "The Ladies' Family Library" (1832-5); the series of "Flowers for Children" (1844, 1846, 1855); "The Progress of Religious Ideas" (1853); and "Autumnal Leaves" (1856). The "long life of Lydia Maria Child, in which is distilled a definite fraction of American sentiment and moral enthusiasm" came to an end on October 20, 1880. Critics are not always in agreement as to her "place in American literature" but her name is remembered by the American people each year at Thanksgiving time when they repeat the familiar lines: "Over the river and through the wood, etc."

Almost as well known, if not so frequently quoted, is the Thanksgiving poem written by another New Englander who was one of Mrs. Child's Abolitionist friends and a favorite poet of an earlier generation of Americans—John Greenleaf Whittier. It is his

THANKSGIVING ODE
Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems of gold;
Once more with harvest-song and shout
Is nature's bloodless triumph told.

Our common mother rests and sings,
Like Ruth, among the garnered sheaves;
Her lap is full of goodly things,
Her brow is bright with Autumn leaves.

O, favors every year made new!
O, gifts with rain and sunshine sent!
The bounty overruns our due;
The fullness shames our discontent.

We shut our eyes, and flowers bloom on;
We murmur, but the corn-ears fill;
We choose the shadow, but the sun
That casts it shines behind us still.

God gives us with our rugged soil
The power to make it Eden-fair,
And richer fruits to crown our toil
Than summer-wedded islands bear.

Who murmurs at his lot today?
Who scorns his native fruit from bloom?
Or sighs for dainties far away,
Beside the bounteous board of home?

Thank Heaven, instead, that Freedom's arm
Can change a rocky soil to gold;
That brave and generous lives can warm
A clime with Northern ices cold.

And let these altars, wreathed with flowers,
And piled with fruits, awake, again
Thanksgiving for the golden hours,
The early and the latter rain!

Then there is the familiar:
THANKSGIVING NIGHT
For summer's bloom and autumn's blight,
For bending wheat and blasted maize.

For health and sickness, Lord of Light
And Lord of Darkness, hear our praise!

We trace to thee our joys and woes,
To thee of causes still the cause,
We thank thee that thy hand bestows,
We bless thee that thy hand withdraws.

We bring no sorrows to thy throne:
We come to thee with no complaint.
In providence thy will is done,
And that is sacred to the saint.

Here, on this best Thanksgiving night,
We raise to thee our grateful voice;
For what thou doest, Lord, is right,
—And, thus believing, we rejoice.

Another New Englander wrote that poem. Who now remembers the name of Josiah Gilbert Holland? Probably not many, except the special student of American literature and journalism. Yet there was a time when Holland was known to thousands of Americans and two of his long poems were the "best sellers" of the day. Critics of today are inclined to dismiss his writings with the adjective "commonplace" or the statement that his career as an author is "illustrative of the evanescence of moral literature when unendowed with real talent." Yet the fact remains that his "Bitter Sweet" sold 90,000 copies and his "Kathrina, Her Life and Mine" sold 100,000 copies back in the fifties and sixties.

Holland was born at Belchertown, Mass., July 24, 1819. His first ambition was to be a doctor and in 1840 he entered a physician's office in Northampton as a student where he remained until he had learned the rudiments of medicine. Graduated from the Berkshire Medical college at Pittsfield in 1844 he practiced in Springfield for three years before becoming convinced that this was not his real profession.

Next he turned to journalism and in 1847 founded a weekly called the Bay State Courier. This venture lasted only six months so he was glad to accept an invitation to settle in Richmond, Va., as a teacher in a private school. Next he was elected superintendent of the public schools in Vicksburg, Miss., but after two years there he returned to Massachusetts where he joined the staff of the Springfield Republican. Holland's nom de plume of "Timothy Titcomb" soon became a familiar one all over the country and resulted in his becoming widely known as a lyceum lecturer. In 1853 his first long poem, "Bitter Sweet," was published by Charles Scribner and company, which also published most of his later works. By 1867 Holland had become so successful as a writer that he was able to retire from his editorial duties on the Republican and the next year he sailed for a European trip.

While abroad he made the acquaintance of another touring American, Roswell Smith, with whom he founded, in 1870, Scribner's Magazine, a publication made possible by the backing of Charles Scribner. As editor of the magazine Holland was mainly responsible for its success and he contributed to its columns his later successful novels "Arthur Bonnicastle," "Seven Oaks" and "Nicholas Minturn," as well as a number of poems. Holland died in New York city on October 12, 1881.

Possession Demands Our Service, Lest We Perish

The only hope of perfecting human relationship is in accordance with the law of service under which men are so saltetous about what they shall give. Yet people are entitled to the rewards of their industry. What they earn is theirs, no matter how small or how great. But the possession of property carries the obligation to use it in a larger service.

For a man not to recognize the truth, not to be obedient to law, to render allegiance to the state, is for him to be at war with his own nature, to commit suicide. That is why "the wages of sin is death." Unless we live rationally, we perish physically, naturally, spiritually.

Conestoga Wagon Drivers First to Keep to Right

Why do American drivers keep to the right instead of to the left as in England and some Continental countries? In the new Columbia Encyclopedia drivers of the famous Conestoga wagons are credited with originating the custom because they rode the left wheel horse. The wagons, often called "ships of inland commerce," carted freight over the Allegheny mountains before the railroads were built in 1850.

The Conestoga wagon originated in Pennsylvania before the Revolution, according to the encyclopedists. It was pulled by a six-horse team and was capable of carrying a five-ton load. The bottom of the wagon box was curved, rising at both ends so that in going up and down hills the goods would shift less easily and the end-gate be subject to less strain. The prairie-schooner was a modification of the Conestoga wagon.

Minor Furniture Scars

When perfume, hair tonic, or the like is accidentally splashed on the dresser or other furniture, the resulting white stains should not create the feeling that the piece is greatly damaged. Wipe the stains with a cloth dampened with spirits of camphor and rub dry immediately with a cloth. A little polish or wax will then remove the last traces of the stains. Even light scratches can be removed or hidden with very little effort. A generous application of polish on the scratched area followed, after the first has had time to dry, by a similar treatment of the entire surface will restore the original finish.

Home Wanted, Plea of County Official

Probate Judge Seeks Homes for Several Boys and Girls

A home wanted! This is the appeal issued by Probate Judge Ervan A. Rueggesser and County Agent Ralph Price in behalf of a number of Charlevoix county boys and girls. Judge Rueggesser's statement follows:

"There are at least a half dozen dependent, neglected or homeless children in Charlevoix county who want homes — someone who would take in a girl or boy and make a home for them, make them one of the family and send them to school as one of their own family. These children are most under 15 years of age.

"If you or any of your friends would like to take a girl or boy, get in touch with either County Agent Ralph Price, at Ironton, or Probate Judge Rueggesser."

Rural Electrification Possibilities in Charlevoix County

The Rural Electrification Administration has as its objective the electrification of as many American farms and farm homes as possible and to do this in the shortest possible time. At the same time R.E.A. seeks to put into action the fundamentally sound policies upon which rural electrification in United States may proceed, yield durable results and achieve the ultimate goal of social welfare.

In Charlevoix county for several years there has been a desire on the part of many farmers to have lines extended by their homes so as to have obtainable the conveniences that will result from the use of electricity. In the Horton's Bay community a special meeting was held Monday night with H. J. Gallagher, Michigan State College, and member of the State Committee, with the farmers and resort property owners.

Tuesday and Wednesday in company with B. C. Mellencamp, County Agricultural Agent, the situation on Beaver Island was carefully analyzed and investigated. At a special meeting held Tuesday night attended by a greater proportion of the population the set-up under the R.E.A. was discussed in great detail.

Plans have been made for the farmers living south of Charlevoix to meet Thursday night at 8:00 in the Marion Center Grange Hall to look over the possibilities and opportunities of electrification in this territory.

In southern Michigan many extensions have already taken place and it is hoped that in this part of Michigan much the same program might be carried out. If the possibilities are attractive it is possible for the R.E.A. to extend financial assistance. As a result of the great interest being shown, it looks very much as though some extensions will be made and the program brought to a successful conclusion. Developments in this project will be announced from time to time as they are made.

Child Care and Training To Be Studied By Several Groups

"Why our children behave as they do" is the subject of the first lecture to be given in Charlevoix County by Mrs. Lydia Ann Lynde, Specialist in Child Care and Training. Mrs. Lynde is brought to this county by the Michigan State College Extension Office and will conduct a series of discussions on the general subject of "Helping Your Child Be His Best."

This series is the second to be given in the County and is planned as a follow-up of the discussions given in Charlevoix and Boyne Falls last winter.

"Your Child's Behavior is a product of his environment" says Mrs. Lynde. "If it is not pleasing to you, study out the cause and change it. Manipulate the environment to meet the needs of the individual child. It is important that parents know and understand the effect of the so-called little things of daily life upon the activities of our children. Behavior does not spring out of the Blue — it has its definite beginning. Fathers and mothers should be able to trace and analyze these beginnings, if they would soundly help their boys and girls build up serviceable habits."

Mrs. Lynde has had much experience with children as teacher, adviser, homemaker and mother. She has had special training for this work in the graduate schools of Purdue and Indiana Universities. As a National Fellow in Child Development she also studied at the Universities of Minnesota and California.

The first lecture is scheduled in Charlevoix on Wednesday night, December 4, and in East Jordan on Thursday night, December 5. Places of meeting will be announced next week. The meetings are open to the entire county and all parents, teachers or other workers associated with children are invited to attend.

B. C. Mellencamp, County Agr'l Agent.

V-8 LEADERSHIP

JAN FEB MAR APR MAY JUN JUL AUG SEP OCT NOV DEC

On October 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $23,111,389.00 for materials.

Library Notes

Andrew Carnegie's portrait has been given to the East Jordan Public Library in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, which will be celebrated Monday, Nov. 25th, 1935.

The Influence of Childhood Reading
"The founding of many public libraries by Andrew Carnegie is significant of his appreciation for an early training in the use of books. The influence of a widely read father, an industrious mother, and two interested uncles in directing Carnegie's reading activities marked the beginning of a self-education for the young student. In later life, this interest found expression in Carnegie's participation in the thoughts of political economists, in the work of American institutions, and a deep-seated interest in the conditions of the working man. Reading, which developed a broad outlook, encouraged clear thinking and stimulated the initiative. The development of these traits of character successfully lead young Carnegie through many of the problems which face every ambitious boy and girl."

State Seeks Data On Auto Crashes

Possibly the most powerful weapon the state of Michigan may ever possess in its war against unfit or dangerous drivers, is being built up in steel filing cabinets in the Department of State where a central violations file is being assembled. Reports have been requested from prosecuting attorney in the state, of all convictions for violation of motor vehicle laws, and from every police department in Michigan of all automobile accidents reported to them which result in injury or death.

The ultimate goal of the plan is that the true and complete driving record of every person in the state, licensed to drive or not, shall be available on one card, against which applications for a driver's license can be checked. It is expected that this central violations bureau will be the means of eventually eliminating many dangerous drivers who might never get into serious criminal or civil suits as the result of their mishaps.

The Michigan State Police cooperate fully in building up this file. With complete cooperation of officials throughout the state, it is visualized that if a Detroit man, for example, is involved in a crash in Marquette, for instance, it would be only a matter of routine, a few days later, to enter this fact on his card in the central violations file. He would be confronted with his record when he applied for his driver's license. The Secretary of State may refuse to issue these licenses for cause.

"Cold Cash" JONES

They called him "Cold Cash" Jones. He always carried it with him. Paid on the spot. Didn't believe in new-fangled checks and short cuts.

Then two things happened. The first didn't cure him, but the second did. First, he lost his "roll" with $51 in it. He could never figure whether it was his own clumsy fingers or the light fingers of a purse-snatcher.

Right on top of this experience, he was called upon to pay a bill he knew he had already paid. But he had nothing to prove it.

Jones got "mad" at that. Today he "totes" a check book. Says he saves money and trouble.

STATE BANK of EAST JORDAN

Must Use Judgment To Feed Beet Crop

Feeding beet tops to dairy cattle may cause a flavor in the milk which is distasteful to some people unless caution is used in feeding and in the care of the milk, according to the dairy husbandry department at Michigan State College.

Abnormal flavors due to beet tops are not noticeable until the cows are getting at least 25 pounds of tops daily. The flavor occurs most often in night's milk, and is decreased when the cows are fed hay and grain along with the tops.

Beet tops should be fed an hour or more either before or after milking. When fed at milking time, abnormal flavors are more apt to occur in the milk. Mangers should be cleaned out often if beets are fed because the presence of decayed or frozen tops in the stable will cause bad flavors and odors in the milk.

The abnormal flavor in milk does not develop to a very marked degree unless the cows get beet tops as almost the sole feed, the tops are of poor quality, or frozen tops are stored in or close to the milking room. Milk with only a mild degree of beet flavor is improved by pasteurization but it can not be classed as high quality market milk.

Clean, well kept beet tops fed in quantities up to 25 pounds per cow per day should not cause any noticeable flavor in milk if the mangers and stables are kept free from any portions of the beets not eaten by the cows. High producing cows and low producers appear to be affected equally by beet tops as far as abnormal flavors are concerned. Storage of the milk does not seem to intensify any flavors which may be present.

According to any doctor you ask, the only safe way is never to give your child a remedy you don't know all about, without asking him first.

So—always say Phillips' when you buy. And, for your own peace of mind, see that your child gets this; the finest men know.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airways emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He insists that the others help. Ramill and his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie.

The Whip Hand.

The girl licked her fingers and turned to stare covetously at the pieces of moose dangling in the smudge-fire smoke. She spoke to Garth almost civilly: "I've no need to rest like Dad. Do I have to wait for another piece?" "Certainly not. But you've let the cook-fire go out. Keep this one going, and you can use it. Better cut another spit. Mind the knife edge, if you don't want to lose a finger."

She showed she could be deft enough when she chose. One stroke of the knife hacked off a willow twig, two cuts sharpened the end. Grasping the bottom of the uncut second liver, she sliced up lengthwise, all the way to the rawhide thong. She poked the green wood from the near edge of the fire, piled on dry sticks, and crouched down to hold her spit over the blaze.

Garth had at once begun to make catgut. It would be needed to sew the moccasins. He was intently at work, and the girl was still more intently eyeing her meat, when Huxby came striding between the spruces.

The once elegant engineer was smeared with mud from his midbody down to where the rock-milk water of the ford had drenched the bog slime from his shoes and leather aviator trousers. Snags had scratched his flying jacket—and even torn through one sleeve.

Worst of all, his bare face and neck was a swollen mass of mosquito-bite welts and the bleeding wounds of deer-fly stings. The skin had already begun to puff and discolor.

At sight of the man's condition, Garth picked up his rifle. Even the most cold-blooded, calculating schemer can be tortured into crazed violence. Miss Ramill glanced up from her cooking, and uttered a startled cry. It awakened her father from his doze. He sat erect to start at Huxby.

"My G—d, Vivian, what's happened? You look like something the car brought home."

"Those d—d pests," Huxby cursed. "Left my headnet. Hey, you airplane thief, fetch me a drink. Jump lively."

Garth lifted his rifle. "Put up your hands. No, don't reach for your pistol. Up with them, or I'll wing you—That's it. Now hold them there while Mr. Ramill takes your pistol. I've had enough of your threatening."

The millionaire looked at Garth's cool gray eyes, and heaved himself upon his feet to shuffle around behind Huxby's shoulder. He pulled open the leather jacket and drew the automatic pistol from its high-slung sheath. Holding the butt forward, he brought the weapon to Garth.

"Keep it yourself," Garth told him. "You can give it back to him soon as he gets over this fly madness. There's your headnet, Huxby. Better stand in the smoke till you get it on."

The tormented man first ran to lie down on the rill bank. Between deep drinks, he doused his bitten face in a pool and dashed the gratefully cool water over the back of his neck. The moment he stopped, the pests buzzed at him again. He ran to the smoky side of the fire without stopping for his headnet.

For the first time since Garth had met Lilith Ramill, she showed consideration for someone else than herself. Her second piece of liver had been cooked enough to be eatable. She tore it in two and gave half to her fiancé.

"It's good, Vivian. Try it. You must be famished."

Her unexpected graciousness calmed him half-crazed mind.

"Why, Lilith—you roasted this yourself! It will taste doubly delicious." He forced a laugh. "But I couldn't take the food out of your mouth."

"I'll soon cook more. There's plenty." Garth caught Mr. Ramill's hungry look, and shook his head. "Not yet for us, sir. We'll pack in some more of the meat before the wolverines get it."

He laid a mat of willow foliage, sliced up what was left of the second liver, and started off with Ramill.

Though at first stiff, the millionaire did not get out of breath so quickly as before. This was an encouraging sign. That easy climb to the claim and the fast return had been violent exercise for the mine investor. He could not have recovered so soon if his heart had been bad.

But when he opened his cigar case, Garth interposed.

"You have only four left, sir. Better hold them back to taper off gradually. This change of diet is going to jolt you hard enough. No wine or whiskey, either."

Mr. Ramill walked along quite a distance with the cigar case open, his face impassive inside the mosquito gauze of the headnet. When at last he looked up, he closed the cigar case and handed it to Garth. "You're the doctor."

Garth put the case in his shirt pocket.

"All right, sir. You'll get them when they'll do you the most good—and you'll get them all."

Again Mr. Ramill walked along with his gaze on the ground. They were near the muskeg swamp before he looked up. He turned his shrewd gaze upon Garth, and spoke with blunt directness: "What's your game?"

"My game?" "Yes. We may as well settle this now as later. Don't tell me you haven't some big scheme in mind. You guessed we meant to cast off and leave you holding the sack. Otherwise you wouldn't have taken that key part from the plane motor."

Garth chuckled. "Did you ever outwit a fox, corner a pack of wolves, or trap a crafty old bear?"

The ruddy face of the millionaire purpled. "What is the connection?"

"Nothing invidious," Garth assured him. "I had in mind only the fun of the game."

"So? Well, young man, it has already been admitted that you've so far taken all the tricks. I gave you credit for more sense, however, than you showed when you cast loose the plane."

Garth Lifted His Rifle. "Put Up Your Hands."

You had no need to walk up like a dupe and permit Vivian to get the drop on you. Easy enough for you to've come out of cover with your rifle up. Don't tell me you'd rather travel afoot to the Mackenzie than fly out in a plane."

"That depends, sir. Perhaps I did not wish to part company with you so soon. Over at the river, I could of course have invited myself to fly out to Fort Smith with you. But that would hardly have given us time to get acquainted. As it is, in the weeks of close companionship to come we may even learn to be friends."

Mr. Ramill frowned. "Is that a taunt, or maudlin sob stuff?"

"Neither."

"Then what's your game? If you think, after marooning us here in these d—d wilds, you can win our friendship or gratitude by guiding us out, you're a sadly mistaken young man."

Garth agreed. "It would be a stupid mistake to expect anything decent from you or your daughter or Huxby. But think what fun I've already had, facing that pistol and telling Huxby he dared not use it."

"Fun? You must be crazy!"

"Not at all. I had him sized up. The game was to let him think he had me trapped, then give him the laugh."

The big man chewed on this. "That's clear enough. But why wreck the plane? Will your next joke be to walk off and leave us to starve?"

"Does it look that way? Two moose make a deal of eating."

squall shrilled into a shriek that nipped off into silence.

When Mr. Ramill rather hesitatingly followed Garth to the hanging legs of moose, he saw a three-foot, stub-tailed wildcat with black-tufted ears lying under a torn shoulder of moose meat. A second cat, slightly larger, had leaped several yards away before dropping.

Garth drew his knife. "Only a pair of lynx. Not much for two shots. We haven't any cartridges to throw away. But we can use the skins, and the meat will make a change from moose."

He flayed the bodies, bagged the best cuts of meat in the skins, and hung them high. The next move was to see if Mr. Ramill could pack the hide of the cow moose. He made a game attempt to walk off under it, but at once began to stagger. Garth relieved him of the load, and in place of it gave him one of the bagged lynx skins. He himself bagged one of the bull moose quarters in the cowhide and heaved it upon his back.

They came back to the camp with Mr. Ramill panting and sweating. Garth swung lightly ahead of him. He slipped off his heavy pack and stood looking at the idle couple on the rill bank. They had eaten their fill of liver, and stretched out to rest. No smoke was rising from the embers of the smudge-fire. Flies were beginning to cluster on the moose tongues and other meat.

The girl met his look with contemptuous indifference. Huxby stared with bloodshot hostility from between his swollen eyelids.

Instead of speaking to the couple, Garth addressed the girl's father as he relieved him of the lynx pack:

"As I remember, sir, I told Miss Ramill she could cook on the smudge-fire if she kept it going. I will say now that I do not intend to shoot any more meat until use is made of what we have. There are none too many rifle cartridges. If the three of you prefer rotten, maggoty meat, I'll go you to the last mouthful. I've lived for weeks at a time on spoiled fish and rotten walrus."

Huxby's face and neck were as swollen and sore as if covered with boils. His temper was no less sore. "You're the one who put us in this fix, you wood house!"

Garth gave him a pitying look. "That's the fly venom talking. No cool, calculating schemer in his right senses would ask for trouble when his hands were tied. I might point out, however, that the venom was due to your haste in trying to—uh—appropriate my discovery claim."

"That's a lie. You cast the plane adrift. I was stung while trying to save it. Curse the luck! I came within an ace of reaching the snagged line. Almost had it, when the plane dragged it loose and went down over those hellish falls!"

"I might remind you that you ordered me to cast off the line—at the point of your pistol."

The thrust proved too much for Huxby. He sat silent. Garth went on with his quiet argument:

"All that is now past history. We're more concerned with the present and future. Mr. Ramill has shown his common sense by facing the facts of the situation. He has fallen into line. The question is, do you and Miss Ramill throw in with us, or do you go on your own? If with us, I'm to be chief. How about it?"

Huxby had cooled down enough to see the point. "You win. I join up."

Miss Ramill looked puzzled and a bit alarmed. "What's the great idea, Vivian?"

"Very simple, my dear. He has the whip hand. He is boss. We must obey his orders, or we'll never get back to civilization."

"Oh! The despicable, cowardly—"

She met Garth's cool gaze and fell silent.

He nodded. "You'll begin by rebuilding that fire. After that you'll cook the other liver for your father and yourself. You will then start graining the hair off the moosehides while Huxby and your father go back for more meat."

"I will do no such thing!"

"Very well. That means you get no moccasins to replace your boots when those flimsy soles wear through on the rocks."

She flared: "Gallant Sir Galahad!" "Leave her be, Garth," her father interposed. "I'll tend the fire and scrape the skins."

"No. Lie down. Whenever you work, it's to be on your feet. We must build up both your wind and your muscle. Huxby, I'll ask you to fetch that pot and the gold pan."

The mining engineer rose and started up towards the trough without a word of inquiry or protest. Miss Ramill's eyes widened. She gazed wonderingly from him to her father. Mr. Ramill had no less obediently lain down as ordered.

Garth ignored the girl. He chopped deep notches in the trunks of the food-cache birch trees, about seven feet high. He then cut saplings to span across from tree to tree, with ends wedged in the notches. The next move was to fetch a number of alder poles

When he returned, smoke was billowing up to drive the flies from the moose tongues and muffs. Miss Ramill had rebuilt the smudge-fire and taken down the liver, ready for slicing. She gazed up at him, stormy-eyed, ready to flare if he had shown the slightest flicker of amusement or gloating.

Instead, he gave her a curt nod of acknowledgment, laid his knife beside the liver, and turned to space the poles across the sapling framework to make a grill above the smudge. Upon this he laid the moose leg and the pieces of lynx meat.

Huxby came back from the discovery stake with the gold pan and little aluminum pot. He stared in surprise at sight of Miss Ramill cooking the liver. She shrugged her slim shoulders, and drew back from the fire to give one spit to her father. After that she silently offered the other to Garth.

"Thank you," he said. "Let me suggest that you now fill the gold pan with water and slice into it one of the muffs. They don't look promising. But if simmered for a day or two, a single moose muffle will give us several delicious meals of what might be called aspic jelly."

This won no sign of interest from the girl. She was no longer hungry. Garth ignored her silence.

"After starting that dish, you may cook as much more of the liver as your father can eat. He will keep on resting while Huxby and I go for another load of moose meat. The sooner we pack all to camp, the surer we will be that other mouths do not get away with it."

He unbuckled his pack, slung the pack-board on his back, and picked up his rifle and belt-ax. Huxby trailed after him out of camp. They walked in Indian file all the way around to the muskeg swamp, Huxby with his gaze fixed coldly upon the back of his leader.

At the swamp Garth cut a tote-pole and passed it through the tendons of two hindquarters of moose. The remaining quarter he strapped to his pack-board. He folded the second lynx skin for Huxby to use as a shoulder pad. Upon it the mining engineer rested his end of the tote-pole.

Giraffe, Tallest Among Quadrupeds of the World

Tallest among the quadrupeds of the world, the giraffe is constructed along a variety of levels, its front legs longer than its long hind legs and its neck longer than the longest of its other members, with a tongue of length and flexibility entirely suited to the architectural whole.

In fact, notes a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, there are evidences in support of one belief that nature must have started to make something else when it got around to fashioning the timid creature. Original plans probably called for a quadruped of conventional dimensions and the barrel and rear running gear must have been completed before amendments were decided on. Very likely the many quadrupeds of comparative size looked too much alike. So it was probably decided this new animal should have a much longer neck, and to make its neck longer than the facts justified it must have longer front legs. So we have an animal started in regularity and finished in singularity, with its body sloping up from rear to front legs and a neck so long that it distorts the distortion.

Nature in all truth must have been in a sportive mood when it made the giraffe. If it sought to give the jungle a laugh it succeeded admirably, giving the laughing hyena something about which it could laugh without restraint.

The beast has to straddle itself all out of shape to get a drink of water from the level of its own feet! So by habit it has taught itself to drink very little water, or at least to drink it with great infrequency. The long neck, the long front legs and the up-tipped body could hardly have been anything but afterthoughts.

River Flows Uphill

It has been figured out by the United States geological survey that a point at sea level on the equator is about 13 miles farther away from the center of the earth than a sea level point at either of the earth's poles. Their calculations show the mouth of the Mississippi river to be four miles farther from the earth's center than its source. Thus, it may be said the "Father of Waters" runs uphill. This phenomenon results from the water in the river obeying the laws of gravity which cause it to run from the higher surface level at its source to the lesser one at its mouth.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Old Maid's Home an Arsenal

Residents of the peaceful Paris suburb of Montrouge were perturbed over rumors that a house in the district occupied by two aged spinsters was a veritable arsenal. Finally the police were prevailed on to investigate. In the house they found 17 military rifles, dating back to 1870, modern rifles, revolvers, rounds of ammunition and even hand grenades.

To Store Laces

If you have laces which you do not intend to use for a long time, do not just lay them in a box or drawer until wanted. They are likely to be ruined by dry rot. To prevent this, wrap the laces in waxed paper. Then store them away in a box. They will keep very nicely in this way.

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. On one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted
by WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG.
WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Several times in these columns I have adverted to criticisms that have been made of the Constitution and have reported the nature of attempts to obtain amendment of that document which is as old as our nation itself. I have reported to you likewise how President Roosevelt, himself, had hinted, if he has not said frankly, that the Constitution ought to be amended so that some of the policies for which he and his New Deal stand could be made operative. I have called attention as well to an apparent assurance that there will be a political campaign battle next year on these questions.

Now, because of developments within the past few weeks, I propose to discuss another phase of these attacks on the Constitution and their concealed purpose. Frankly, I cannot avoid the conclusion that many of the criticisms of our Constitution have as their main objective the clipping of wings of the Supreme court of the United States. I am convinced that many of the demands for amendment of the Constitution to permit broader latitude by congress are nothing more nor less than a disguised move to take away some of the independence which the court has and which, in my opinion, it ought always to possess. Further, I have no doubt that these "borings from within" represent the activities of those individuals of whom there are thousands who are not in sympathy with our form of government. So, if I am to serve my purpose as your observer in Washington, I would fall short of my duty were I not to say that in the election of the next congress lies the answer whether we will retain our Constitution and our traditions as a republic or whether we will lapse into some form of state socialism or of a proletarian government akin to that of Russia.

It was back in 1904 that the late Chief Justice Edward Douglas White—a former United States senator from the Democratic South and a former Confederate soldier—felt it necessary to make a public observation about the work of our highest legal tribunal. At that time there were certain attacks and criticisms being heard, none of a direct nature, to the general effect that the Supreme court followed the majority opinion of the nation's population. There were likewise veiled remarks that the Supreme court attempted to usurp power which was not its own. Strangely, present-day criticism and attacks have had much the same flavor. To those of that day, Chief Justice White said:

"No instance is afforded from the foundation of the government where an act which was within a power conferred, was declared to be repugnant to the Constitution because it appeared to the judicial mind that the particular assertion of constitutional power was either unwise or unjust."

I have heard, and no doubt you have heard, assertions by unthinking people to the effect that since the court has held some New Deal laws unconstitutional, it was simply old-fashioned, out dated, or as Mr. Roosevelt said, its decisions were taking us back to the "horse and buggy days." Of course, anyone who has observed the Supreme court; anyone who has studied its precepts and examples; anyone who has considered the soundness of its logic and philosophy, cannot help reaching a conclusion that the Supreme court is not now and never has been an agency of government that is susceptible to the effects of rabble rousing or is influenced by suddenly developed waves of public opinion. It has consistently adhered to the principle of interpreting laws and administering justice without regard for the effect of its decisions upon the political plans or aspirations of individuals or groups.

I do not believe that a drive to limit the power of the Supreme court or use it in any other way than as the Constitution's drafters intended will be successful. Many people with whom I have come in contact, however, anticipate a drive of serious import. It may be that they wish to see it or it may be that they believe our Constitution is not sufficiently flexible and that we can hardly change the Constitution without changing the power of the Supreme court. However that may be, it does appear that the time has arrived for those who would be Americans and who would have America last as a Republic to be on their guard and to know before they vote for members of the house and senate whether those members are going to support and defend the Constitution, the Supreme Court and the things for which the Constitution and court stand in our national life. It is a non-partisan question: it is a non-partisan issue, and I think it is of as much importance as any question before the American people today.

All of this is highly important because of pending cases in the Supreme court. I need only recall to you that there are before the court for adjudication cases involving the validity of the Agriculture Adjustment act, the right of the federal government to control labor and employers as it has done in the Guffey Coal bill, the program of government in business as represented by the creation of the Tennessee valley electric layout and the sales of its product in competition with private industry, and four or five others of lesser consequence. I think it is generally agreed that the court will hold some of these legislative policies to be unconstitutional. Certainly, legal opinion is thoroughly divided and some of the lawyers must be right in their guesses as to the court's decrees. In that event, there will be disappointments. Those officials who have sponsored the various programs and projects that are now come into question will suffer because their pride will be hurt. The next step, a result that always obtains, the disappointed ones will attempt to find a goat on whom they can lay the blame. The goat undoubtedly will be the Supreme court but the general reverence held for the court will not permit open attacks upon it. Instead, these disappointed ones will seek to accomplish their purpose in another way, namely, by changes in the Constitution that will curb the power of the court. It will not be the first time that this has been done or that drives against the court have taken place. Proposals to change the power of the court by constitutional amendment or otherwise occurred in 1823, 1826, 1803, in the 1890's and again in 1923. Fortunately, congress rejected those proposals in every instance. It is to be hoped that congress will do it again.

Now, we have a total of four proposals in congress designed to accomplish changes in the power of the court. Probably the most important of these is that by Senator Norris of Nebraska who advocates a constitutional change that would give the Supreme court exclusive power to pass upon constitutional questions of law, and to pass on those questions within six months after enactment of the legislation in question.

On the surface, this would appear to be a meritorious proposition but I have found, in discussing it with men equipped to analyze the proposal, it contains some elements of grave danger. If such a provision were operative at the present time, for instance, it would be easy for some of the brain trust to make it impossible for the court ever to have an opportunity to declare the act constitutional or unconstitutional. The course that was pointed out to me was this: By the expedient of allowing a new law to be inoperative through non-enforcement for a period of six months, its terms could never be brought into question. If the administrative official did not seek to enforce the law and bring violators to the bar of the court within the six-month period the law would go on the statute books until repealed by congress.

Senator Norris likewise has argued that the Supreme court should never be allowed to declare an act unconstitutional unless two-thirds of the nine justices were in agreement in that regard. He has bitterly opposed rulings of the court which were decided on a five to four basis; so it seems the Nebraska senator may have a beautiful theory that could easily go off at a tangent when applied to humans.

Most of the other proposals now in congress will get nowhere in congressional consideration and, therefore, reference to them will be omitted. It remains as a possibility, however, that the next election could bring in enough rabble-rousing demagogues to put through resolutions proposing that the Constitution be amended. Of course, those resolutions from congress have to be adopted by the 48 states but it has always been the case that if proposed amendments to the Constitution are checked in congress the major battle has been won.

I do not know, nor do I care to predict, how the farmers of the country will react to a decision by the Supreme court holding AAA unconstitutional. Certainly, they will be disappointed but whether this disappointment will result in a concerted movement by them to amend the Constitution to permit operation of present AAA policies is a question only time can answer. There is this much that can be said, however, and it has no relation to politics: I believe they will regret it if they seek to open up the Constitution to amendments. If they do succeed, they will then find that all of the other interests in this country will be clamoring for changes and the result probably be a muddled mess.

Lesson for November 24

THE MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:3-8; 2:3, 9; Zechariah 4:6-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalm 122:1.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A New House for God.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Building a House of Worship.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Build Churches.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Building Adequate Churches.

After the returned captives had settled down in the towns surrounding Jerusalem, the people were called together for the purpose of establishing the worship of the Lord God. This movement was led by Joshua the priest and Zerubbabel the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifices might be offered at once to God.

I. The Laying of the Foundation of the New Temple (Ezra 3:8-13).

This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with impressive ceremonies.

1. The priests in their official apparel (v. 10). These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). Trumpets were used in calling the people together.

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). This was according to the arrangements made by David (1 Chron. 15).

4. They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively.

5. Mingled weeping and singing (v. 12, 13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent temple of Solomon wept when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad because of the favor of God which had brought them back.

II. The Building of the Temple—Hindered (Ezra 4).

The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people, the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive. The three perils which delayed the building of the temple for about fourteen years reveal the persistent methods which the enemies of God use to hinder the building program of God's people in every age.

1. An unthinking pessimism (3: 12). Because things were not as promising as they should be, some were not disposed to go forward with a constructive program and even hindered those who possessed a hopeful outlook. Under the circumstances, a glorious beginning had been made which had promise of great things in the future.

2. Worldly compromise (4:2, 3). The adversaries said, "Let us build with you: for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method. The help of the unregenerate in forwarding the Lord's work should not be accepted by the Lord's people.

3. Open opposition by the world (4:4-24). When refused a part in the work, open opposition was resorted to.

III. Assurance of the Completion of the Second Temple (Zech. 4:6-10).
By means of the golden candlestick is represented the restoration of the Jewish nation and the fulfillment of its divine purpose. It was to be a light in the world. There were insuperable difficulties in the way of accomplishing their restoration, represented by the great mountain, but assurance was given that God by his Holy Spirit could easily accomplish their restoration. The mountain would be displaced by a plain. The two olive trees represent Zerubbabel and Joshua. The Holy Spirit was to accomplish this work through them.

IV. The Temple Finished (Ezra 6: 13-15).

Through the ministry of the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 5:1; Hag. 1, 2), the people were encouraged to resume the work of the building of the temple. When the temple was finished, they solemnly dedicated it to God (Ezra 6:16-22).

V. The Blessedness of Dwelling in God's House (Ps. 84:1-4).

1. The longing of the soul for God's house (vv. 1, 2).

2. The sparrow and swallow find protection in the sacred precincts of God's house (v. 3).

3. At home in God's house (v. 4). Those who have a heart for God find their chief delight in dwelling in his house.

The Future
Don't estimate your future by the little troubles that comfort you now. The black clouds which shut out your sun today will be gone tomorrow. Learn to look at life at long range and put the right value on things in general.

Religion
Some men want to have religion like a dark lantern, and carry it in their pocket, where nobody but themselves can get any good from it.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Use Lamp to Call Doctor

Morse code signals flashed by a lamp on the telephone-less Papa Stour island of the Shetland group summoned a doctor and a nurse from the mainland the other night. The lamp signals explained an inhabitant had been taken ill and needed an immediate operation. The doctor and nurse rushed to the patient in a lifeboat.

"DUDES" WHO WASH BUT ONCE A YEAR REALITY IN KOREA

"One yard of eggs, please!" That's what the housewife says to her grocer in the Japanese colony of Korea. Eggs are here sold by the string, like sausages; they are tied together with long wisps of straw. One orders them to any length required. They cost less than a penny a dozen!

Korea is a land of unceasing surprises for the European. In a number of its villages the men wash only once a year; many are coal-mining villages, too! But these natives would be most indignant if one were to suggest that they were not well turned out, for they take great pride in their appearance.

The miner will come up from the depths covered in coal dust, then go home and change into spotlessly clean, beautifully pressed garments. He will spend a full hour "dolling himself up" before venturing out for the evening. But never, on 384 days of the year, will he dream of washing! The day when he does so is a national holiday.

There are many cows in Korea, but until the Japanese took over control of the land the people treated them entirely as pack animals. Nobody had any idea that they could be milked!

A Korean wedding is a very elaborate affair. It lasts for three days, throughout which the bride has to sit motionless on a throne, with her eyes demurely lowered, balancing an enormous headdress which weighs more than 20 pounds. Her husband is away from her most of this time; he ascends to a secluded spot in the mountains, and prays for hours on end that the two of them may be blessed with a large family.—London Answers.

2,150 Pounds Amount of Food You Eat Per Year

You will eat a ton of food this year—2,150 pounds, the statisticians say. Milk, fluid and canned, and other dairy products, will account for half of this. (Milk is heavy.) You will eat about 150 pounds of meat, and about the same amount of fresh fruit; 150 pounds of fresh vegetables, not counting 150 pounds of potatoes.

In bread and cakes and breakfast foods and macaroni, you will consume 290 pounds of flour and cereals. Sugar, 102 pounds of it, is the next most important item. Of canned fruits and vegetables, you will eat 38 pounds, states Today.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adierka. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adierka gives complete action, clearing your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your stomach and bowels a real cleansing with Adierka and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

"Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25c now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!"

EDITORIAL
The Library, An Asset To Modern Life

In our day of seemingly mechanical existence, humanity is becoming "wider read", a factor which inevitable results from the desire and the will to progress. As we look at the cycle of civilization's development, we note the lack of reading material and likewise the lack of knowledge prevalent in the earlier stages. As time went on, however, a continual improvement is noted and the more good literature that was circulated about, the more knowledge was achieved by man until in the present day, volumes upon volumes are filled with the best and most praiseworthy masterpieces of literature. Fortunate is the child who lives and learns among a collection of good books. He should be taught to enjoy the privilege of our numerous public libraries, and the school library which has a function distinct from any other. "School library enriches and vitalizes the school curriculum. It provides an atmosphere in which students may find new incentives to achievement and acts as an agency of integration." Quoting Mr. Hurley's opinion, "In the library flows the stream of school activity; here the pulse of the school may be felt."

Students have come, or are coming, to realize the great value of books and the information that can be obtained from their pages. A senior high school boy of New York expresses his appreciation of a —

"SCHOOL LIBRARY"

This room is far more rich than all the rest.
In dreams and wisdom, here where volumes stand
In staid array with wealth from every land
And every golden age; this room is best.
Here is the hidden East, the roaring West,
With tales for any youngster's reaching hand;
Here History lies open to be scanned
For fun — or for a crucial monthly test.
Here Michael Strogoff races through the snow,
And Crusoe tells of all the deeds he did.
And three gay musketeers match laugh and blow.
Here Don Quixote rides beside the Cid,
And Little Women, Beth and Meg and Jo,

Cotton Raised In 4th Grade

Mrs. Hager's pupils are now studying cotton and how it is grown. To aid their study they have some cotton in full bloom. When the seeds dry enough they will be separated from the cotton and planted. They expect to have this cotton raising project started soon.

Fifth Graders Weave

These ambitious girls have made more Christmas presents already than lots of you will make at all. They each have made a large rag doll for the orphanage and now are weaving. Most of these girls have woven something very nice for mother. What? Oh, but that would be telling! They also have unraveled old mittens, sweaters, caps, scarfs, etc., and from this yarn are weaving handy little gifts for sister, aunt, or someone else. Perhaps someday you will discover what they are making.

Red Cross Has Drive

The Red Cross is making a drive in the grade building. Every child is bringing his pennies, nickles, and dimes for a Red Cross pin. The class that has collected the most money is Miss Clark's sixth grade ($1.20); the smallest amount was collected in Miss Bartlett's room (23c). For this the pupils not only get pins but the teacher receives a Red Cross magazine every month and now and then they receive posters and booklets concerning Red Cross activities.

October Attendance

It surely takes the third grade pupils to take most of the monthly grade honors. They have taken the honors of largest membership, and highest percent attendance for the month (96.9%). They also hold the attendance record for this year on an average of 96%. The smallest membership of the month goes to the fifth grade. To the sixth grade pupils goes the disgrace of having the lowest percent attendance both for this month and for the whole year. Moral: Take Miss Clark's advice and open your windows at night and use a handkerchief when you cough.
The total membership of the month was 347; 107 pupils were tardy. This should be remedied by a hundred present, not tardy.

Blue Ribbon Students

There were sixteen students neither absent nor tardy in Mrs. Kling's room this month.

The following grade pupils were on the Honor Roll this month:—

- Third Grade:—
K. Petrie E. Olstrom
B. Bennett C. Saxton
K. Blossie S. Sinclair
E. Eggert J. Somerville
N. Lord H. Whiteford

Debaters Prepare for Clash

Thursday, November 14, members of the modern history class and other students having a free period, heard a debate between the two school teams on the question concerning the advisability of government control of combat instruments of war. The judges, Miss Perkins, Mr. Bippus, and Mr. Wade, awarded the affirmative team composed of Frances Lenosky, Arthur Rude, and Pauline Clark. The decision over the negative team, composed of Mary Seiler, Lois Rude, and Barbara Stroebel.

This negative team engaged in another practice debate at Boyce City, Friday morning, November 15, where they again lost.

The first official State League Debate will be at Pellston, November 23. The East Jordan team will uphold the negative.

Freshies' Statures Recorded

As the last result of the questionnaire given to the Freshmen it is found that the average Freshman is five feet, five inches tall, weighs 111 pounds and is 15 years old. One person claims to be 105 miles tall, weighing 8 pounds at the age of 20 years. Still another reported his weight at 38 pounds. How modest these Freshmen are!

The smallest Freshman is 4 feet, 6 inches tall, weighs 72 pounds and is 12 years old, which, of course, is rather unusual.

The largest Freshman is 6 feet, 6 inches tall, weighs 164 pounds and is 18 years old.

These facts are very interesting because they give us an idea of the physical development of the students and reveal the range of sizes

Tribute Paid To Dead

Monday morning the high school assembled in the auditorium to pay tribute to the honored dead.

Numbers on the program were introduced by Mr. Wade. A fine talk on seventeen years ago today when the World War came to an end and the Armistice was signed, was given by Rev. Leitch. There were songs by Mr. Seiler and the assembly. A poem "In Flanders Field", was given by Pauline Clark.

Mr. Wilkins closed the program by sounding taps.

College Prof. Speaks

Friday the high school students enjoyed a speech given by Ernest Burnham of the Western State Teachers' College, Kalamazoo, who talked on "Progress in High School Organization". He gave many interesting facts concerning his high school days and how schools have changed since then.

F. F. A. Entertains

As the Bellaire chapter of F.F.A. is just getting organized, its members, desiring to learn the method of procedure and plan of organization, came to East Jordan last Saturday night, November 9, where they were entertained by the chapter here. Accounts were given by Ernest Rude and Alston Penfold of the various activities of the F.F.A. and ceremonies for the initiation of all greenhands, six from Bellaire and fourteen from East Jordan, constituted the business meeting after which refreshments were served.

The F.F.A. are pleased with the new blue and gold banner which has recently arrived, and some of the members have been observed wearing blue ties with the letters of their organization applied in gold, the royal colors of the institution.

The forest which the boys planted last year is coming fine, and they expect to enlarge it in the spring. Good work, F. F. A.!

Sophomores Plan Party

Our lively sophomores are living up to their reputation by planning a party for Saturday night, November 16. The original plan was for a dinner-dance, but even our invincible sophs must have decided that that was rather a lot to attempt, for the program now calls for light refreshments in the course of the evening. The refreshments (at this time) are supposed to be unknown, but we wouldn't be surprised if they were toasted cheese sandwiches and ginger ale. You'll hear later, perhaps, of the actual event.

Stricter Check-up

A new system of check-up has been instituted. Students absent first hours

"How'dja make it do that, Charlie?"

Charlie Chase and Joyce Compton, stars of Charlie Chase Comedies, had good reason to be surprised like a jackrabbit. It had never happened before—so it's a sure bet that they had Standard's new double-quick-starting gasoline in the tank.

Don't think for a minute that this new gasoline is so fast that your car is liable to take off before you're ready. It's not that lively. But it is a remarkably fast-mean a gasoline that simply gives a flash of action and then sputters and chokes when you try to drive away. We mean a gasoline that, even in bitter winter weather, responds to the first kick of the starter, catches hold at once, and gives you full steam ahead in regular mid-summer form.

That's promising a lot. But this gasoline has fully 35% greater warm-up speed, in zero temperatures. So get some of this new Standard Red Crown... and SEE WHAT HAPPENS next time you step on the starter!

Sold by Standard Oil Stations and Dealers everywhere, at the price of "regular" gasoline.

"Reading For Fun"

"Reading for Fun" is the motto chosen this year for Book Week scheduled for November 17 to 23.

Certainly, then, a number of new copies of juvenile fiction should find their way into the shelves of every school library. The emphasis upon character and their tremendous appeal to boys make the new Harbour books, "The Five-Dollar Dog" and "Five Points of Service," very popular.

Books by Frank Buck, the African explorer, will attract the attention of many pupils that have not yet learned to "read for fun." All the descriptions and atmosphere of the jungle, the habits of animals and birds, the pictures of forests, and the life in the wilds are described exactly and truly in Mr. Buck's books.

The best known books by Heyliger, "The Silver Run", "A Story of the Sardine Industry", "Ritchie of the New", "Johnnie Bill", and "The Builder of the Dam", are books that are well known for their authentic pictures of colorful and interesting vocations.

Other interesting books by different authors are, "The Boy Scouts Year Book", "The Faraway Mystery", "Even Sara", "The Mysterious Tutor", "Tabitha of Lonely House", and "The Graper Girls' Series".

Of course, there are a great many more books to add to this list, all of which make reading a pleasure and have sufficient value to be worthy of places on the shelves of any library.

Play Posters Completed

Despite the coldness of the school rooms on a Saturday afternoon, Miss Scott's Art Class has completed their first assignment in the line of posters. At Mr. Bippus' request several posters in striking colors were made, advertising the Junior play which, by the way, you must not miss its date this November 22.

New Music Expected

The Glee Club has been working on a Russian piece "The Peddler", a piece from the opera "Hans and Gretel". It has started a snow piece and intends to start the Christmas Carols as soon as the music arrives.

Junior Glee Club Progresses

The Junior High Glee Club has finished their "Sea Chants", "Negro Spirituals", and "Cowboy Songs". They have had a French and an English song also, and are now singing Early American songs. They are planning to start Christmas carols very soon.

Crowded Quarters for Band

Upon the arrival of the new music stands and chairs in the band room, Mr. Ter Wee exclaimed, "With all this new paraphernalia we either need a new band room or we will have to extend the present one six or eight feet."

Some of Mr. Roberts' excellent work again adorns a wall of the high school for awhile, this time photographs of the Junior play cast. Pictures of Katherine MacDonald and Donald Johnson, hero and heroine, above a group picture of the rest of the cast has excited much interest in the school.

Pronunciation Corrected

Miss Perkins has taken her annual day off to teach us ignoramuses how to pronounce "literature." Look it up in a dictionary if you think you pronounce it right!

And Mr. Roberts chided his civics class on their pronunciation of "industry."

Our careless pronunciation seems to deeply pain these exacting instructors!

It's No Longer News When—

Miss Cook informs Latin I students, "Vocabulary test tomorrow."

judging by the large gatherings, teachers are much in demand after report cards have been given out.

Mr. Roberts and Mr. Bippus hire assistants. Our classes are interrupted by four bells.

Bud Strehl neglects to shave. Mr. Eggert says, "Stop the horsing around."

Mr. Cohn says "In there."

Miss Westfall is seen carrying the speed test books into the typing room, the girls' glee club sings up to high "A".

one "gets it in the eye" when attempting to drink from the fountain. teachers do favors for common people.

Miss Westfall is cold. a half dozen aeroplanes stall merrily through the air during STUDY periods.

Mr. Bippus makes a speech. eighth graders ask seniors to explain Chemistry problems. Phyllis Rogers quarrels with Miss Westfall.

Probably the worst Scotch joke ever perpetrated on simple-minded Americans is some of the liquor labeled "Finest Old Scotch Whisky, Twenty Years Old."
