EAST JORDAN, MICHIGAN, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1936.

NUMBER 43

At East Jordan Saturday, Oct. 31

ANTRIM-CHARLEVOIX POTATO AND APPLE SHOW

Farmers are becoming interested in the approaching potato and apple show. The program is being developed and will be announced in next week's paper. Headlining the program will be talks by Prof. H. C. Moore, specialist in horticulture. A big banquet will be held Saturday night with no doubt 150 in attendance.

All exhibits must be in place by noon so that they may be judged early in the afternoon. A feature of the exhibit will be the display by the 4H club and Smith-Hughes members. They have been busily engaged for the past two weeks in selecting their samples.

Approximately $270 will be spent in staging this show, which will assure a much higher premium list than formerly. It is expected that the best exhibits will be saved for the Kalkaska show which comes on November 10, 11 and 12.

In the apple division all of the leading producers in the county are selecting their exhibits. This will make some real hot competition as the best exhibits at the Gaylord Top O'Michigan potato and apple show have always come from these two counties. If you want to see a real show and enjoy a splendid evening make your plans now to attend the Antrim-Charlevoix Potato and Apple Show, to be held in East Jordan Saturday October 31.

Why Not Plant A Tree?

Such is an ad in this paper of the nursery which this community has been benefited by.

We can ask ourselves, are we appreciating to the full the benefits of our trees? Do we hold them in high esteem as we should? Are we doing all we can to encourage planting and doing our individual share in holding a proper tree balance.

In Germany—we are told—it is a firm rule of economy to plant a tree whenever one is brought to the ground. How far short we have been in doing our part to keep the trees growing on for the generations to come?

We hope many of our readers will be awakened by the ad above referred to and plant trees for one good purpose or another.

Homecoming In East Jordan Was A Gala Event

A successful homecoming was held the past week in East Jordan. Invitations were sent to all parts of the United States inviting the football members of the past thirty years to come back to East Jordan to help celebrate the big week-end of activities. On Wednesday night, the football boys and their mothers enjoyed a pot luck supper together and after the supper, some fun was had in trying to guess the score of 16 important football games that were held Saturday. The winner of this guessing contest was...

School songs and school yells were passed out to the mothers. Thanks to the Merchants who made the football program possible and to the Freshman class for their securing the financial aid that was necessary in going through with a successful homecoming program. The windows of Brabant's, Clyde Hipp's, "Billy" Hawkins, and the Coffee Cup were attractively decorated for the occasion; also attractive posters were seen at the State Bank, Hite's Drug Store, and the New Studio. The Sophomores are to be thanked for their work in the decorating of the stores and their artistic posters; the Eighth grade for their artistic designs on the blackboards.

The Juniors had charge of the decorating of the lamp posts. (Too bad the weather man interfered with us or we would have had the goal posts decorated also.) The Seniors had charge of the invitations to the football teams of 1906, 1916, and 1926. Also the mimeographing of the school songs and yells and arranging for the pep meeting on Friday.

On Friday afternoon the pep meeting was held. Edward Stanek read the message that Harry Simmons had written in behalf of the 1906 football team, and Joe Clark spoke for the teams of 1916. Captain Bowman passed his speech onto assistant-coach, Harry Jankovick, and Donald Johnson really spoke for the team. The band played a few peppy marches. The students yelled and sang and then everybody went down town along with the band and serenaded the town for fifteen minutes.

After the snake dance at 4:30 p. m. on Friday, the annual "grudge" battle between the Freshmen and Sophomores was held in back of the school house. It ended peacefully 6 to 6. So all sides were satisfied until next time.

The weatherman turned the opposite way on Saturday and we were confronted with inclement weather. Sleet, rain, snow, a strong wind, white caps, cold, etc., but the spirit was high on the part of the teams and crowd and a hard-fought battle was the result. The score resulting in a scoreless tie. (More details of the game found in another column.)

In the evening, the Future Farmers of America staged a homecoming dance at the high school gymnasium. A large crowd attending from all parts of Charlevoix County. Refreshments of ice cream and cake was included in the dance admission. Everyone seemed to be enjoying themselves. Wexstaff's orchestra of Charlevoix furnished the music.

So when the clock turned to 12:01 a.m. Sunday morning, a sigh of relief and a revue of another successful homecoming day in East Jordan went down in history.

Battle To Scoreless Tie

FIVE HUNDRED FANS WATCH BATTLE IN THE RAIN.

The Charlevoix Red Raiders ventured here Saturday and held the local Red Shirts to a scoreless tie before an estimated crowd of about five hundred fans, who watched the battle in the rain. This game was the feature of the Homecoming held here Saturday.

The Red and White were a well-balanced team with an experienced line and shifty back field. The game opened with East Jordan kicking to the visitors on the 30 yard line, where they were held for downs and were forced to kick. The locals taking the ball on their own 13 yard line then began a drive down the field which netted them three successive first downs; Gregory and Bowman carrying the ball through the line. This was the only time in the game when it looked as if the Crimson Wave might come-through and score but they were then held for downs and were forced to kick. The remainder of the first half was a seesaw battle with both teams kicking frequently.

The Red Raiders began to get under way in the second half as they threatened to score in both the third and fourth periods. Both of their threatening drives came on a series of pass and end run plays. Bowman, Crimson Captain and quarterback, saved the locals in both of these occasions by two beautiful punts of 50 and 60 yards respectively. The Jordan lads again showed that they have a capable and hard-tackling line. The local backfield showed improvements over last week as they began to knock down a few passes which might have spelled defeat for them. Coach Kipke's eleven had a fine assortment of plays many of them taking the locals unexpected. Kicking by both teams was the feature of the day both Bowman of the locals and Gallagher of the visitors kicking for large gains both with and against the strong North-westerly wind which prevailed.

This week Coach Cohn will travel, with his forces, to Rogers City where they will take on the well-balanced and highly-touted Orange and Black in a conference tilt. The Orange and Black will be slight favorites over the locals although with the Red and Black functioning well do not be surprised to see them come out on top. The Crimson Wave played well Saturday and should be given a great deal of credit.

Who is the Future President
At this time of the year many people are campaigning, trying to get votes for their candidates, and most of all wondering which person will hold the presidency of the United States.

Even in our class rooms elections are being held to find out who the students would vote for if they had a chance. The majority of votes were cast for Alfred Landon, with President Roosevelt coming in second, and Norman Thomas earning one vote. It seems as though the remaining four parties do not meet the requirements of our next president.

However there is little doubt that our following President will either be Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate, or Alfred M. Landon, the Republican candidate, but the Union Party, Socialist-Labor, the Prohibition, the Communist, and the Socialist Party will also play an important part in the election, as we shall see.

In voting one must first receive true facts concerning both sides of the different parties. Do not state facts about the candidates unless you have reasons to back them, also listen to both sides of the arguments, don't jump at conclusions, and ask yourself if the statements made by each party can possibly be carried out as they claim they can, so that when you go to the polls you will know definitely whom you are voting for. Last of all when you have decided whom you are voting for do not change your mind the night before the election because of a Republican, Democratic, or any other rally that you may have attended.

ALL ABOARD!!!

Mrs. Bartlett's first grade class was pleasantly delayed en route to the canning factory Friday afternoon. The depot and the train that had just come in seemed to attract them, so to the depot they ran. The conductor at seeing this little party, let them have tickets, then took them out to Mt. Bliss on the train, including the "All Aboard" and everything. When this destination was announced instead of changing cars and going on, our travelers choose to stay on the immediate one and go back home.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

New "Temporary" Gold Standard Adopted—Russia Accused of Using Spanish War to Rouse International Discord—Belgium Abandons Alliances.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD © Western Newspaper Union.

"IT IS a new gold standard, a way of doing business which has never been tried before," was Secretary Morgenthau's characterization of the agreement just entered into by the United States, Great Britain and France, whereby, subject to 24-hour cancellation, they will exchange gold for each other's currencies. Financiers, economists and business men were taken by surprise by the move and immediately gave it close study. Some were disposed to label the maneuver "political expediency," but experts generally said it was a logical step in the sequence of monetary events but not positively in the direction of stabilization.

The new plan, Mr. Morgenthau said, differs from the old gold standard in that it will permit the export or earmarking of gold only to and between governments instead of private business institutions and traders.

"The door is wide open," said Mr. Morgenthau. "We're not going out drumming up business, but we'll welcome all other countries which want to participate."

According to the Treasury department, the United States alone will announce a selling price for gold. France and England will keep their selling prices secret, though there will be a free flow of gold between the stabilization funds of the three nations.

It was believed that Great Britain was the prime mover in this new pact. As one commentator put it: "The agreement was made necessary when France devalued her currency and placed an embargo on gold exports, because Great Britain suddenly discovered that nowhere in the world was there left a fixed yardstick against which to measure international commitments and handle international exchange."

SOVIET RUSSIA made a second determined effort to aid the beleaguered government of Spain, and sustained a second rebuff. Ivan Maisky, Russian ambassador to England, handed to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the non-intervention committee, a virtual ultimatum demanding immediate convocation of the committee to consider blockading the coast of Portugal against arms shipments destined for the Spanish insurgents. It was understood in London that Lord Plymouth replied that if the proposition were seriously made, it should be presented through diplomatic channels to the governments concerned. The Russian plan was for a blockade by English or French warships.

Observers in Europe are convinced that the Soviet government does not expect the powers to agree to any such blockade as is suggested, but is chiefly interested in stirring up discord among the nations.

British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden, after hearing of Lord Plymouth's reply, made a speech at Sheffield in which he pledged Great Britain's unwavering support to the policy of nonintervention in Spain. He declared the government was determined to "confine that tragedy within the boundaries of that country."

Leaders of the Fascists were reported to have planned a steady, steam-roller advance on Madrid, and this offensive was already underway. The defenders of the capital were hastily building fortifications in the suburbs and surrounding the city with trenches. In Oviedo the dynamite-armed force of loyalist miners was still battling with the garrison and rebel troops sent to the rescue were about to enter the city.

MAURICE THOREZ, French Communist leader, made a speech in Strasbourg that is causing a lot of trouble. He was charged with deliberately insulting Adolf Hitler, and the Berlin government entered formal protest. The official Nazi organ, Der Angriff, says the speech was an attempt to precipitate war between France and Germany, and also that it was an attempt "to overthrow the German Reich and to achieve the definite bolshevization of France for the benefit of the Soviet Communist international."

The French rightist newspapers declare the Thorez incident was part of the Russian Communist scheme to throw France against Germany so that Russia will not be left alone to face "any eventual German attack." The rightists were even more vigorous in their accusations when it was learned that Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar, was secretly in Paris.

FIGURES made public by the American Navy Department show that since July 1 last every great naval power except the United States has increased the number and tonnage of its war vessels.

In the 2½ months from July 1 to September 15, the United States reduced the number of its ships from 324 vessels totaling 1,080,715 tons to 306 vessels, totaling 1,062,875 tons.

Great Britain increased ships from 37 to 309 and tonnage from 1,224,329 to 1,232,854.

Japan increased ships from 213 to 217 and tonnage from 772,797 to 776,397.

France increased ships from 178 to 187 and tonnage from 558,452 to 571,734.

Italy increased ships from 191 to 195 and tonnage from 403,865 to 406,333.

Germany increased ships from forty-nine to fifty-three and tonnage from 113,708 to 125,458.

The British foreign office announced that France and Italy had agreed to sign that protocol of the London naval treaty forbidding the use of submarines except under strict limitations.

BELGIUM, which since the close of the World War has been tied tight to France by a military alliance, has decided to drop that and all similar alliances and to rely for her safety on strict neutrality and a larger army. King Leopold so informed the cabinet, telling the ministers that Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland "practically puts us back where we were before the great war." Belgium's geographical position, he said "makes it imperative for us to maintain a military machine of such size as to dissuade any neighbor from using our territory to attack another state." The period of military service was extended from twelve to eighteen months.

"Belgium must pursue a policy exclusively and wholly Belgian," Leopold said. "In any case our engagements should not go beyond keeping off war from our own territory. Belgium must remain outside of its neighbors' conflicts."

"Any policy of alliance with a single country would weaken our position abroad. A purely defensive alliance would not meet the case because, however prompt the intervention of our ally, it would only come after the invader's blow, which would be crushing."

AUTHORITY of the national maritime commission to declare a permanent truce in current contract controversies is challenged by the negotiating committee for the Pacific coast maritime unions, and members of those unions are instructed to vote on a proposal for a coast-wide waterfront strike.

The maritime commission had peremptorily demanded that the Pacific coast ports be kept open while it sent an investigator to San Francisco to discuss the conditions which have long threatened to bring on industrial warfare.

In telegrams to President Franklin Roosevelt and the commission, the committee said the commission had caused "great unrest" among the workers through its participation in negotiations between shipowners and dock and shipboard employees.

The seven unions, claiming a membership of nearly 37,000 workers, are the International Longshoremen's association, the American Radio Telegraphists' association, the Marine Engineers' Beneficial association, the Masters, Mates and Pilots of America, the Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Marine Cooks and Stewards, and the Marine Firemen, Oilers, Watertenders and Wipers' association.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho, whose attitude in the Presidential campaign is a matter of great interest to all parties, has declared he would confine his attention to state matters; but then, being irked by some criticism from Republicans he went further and said he was "going after the Republican party." The veteran said he had been accused of not being regular.

"Well, what is a regular?" he asked. "A regular is a man with no ideas, who waits for someone to tell him what to do. My idea of being regular is in doing what you believe to be right in the interests of the people you represent."

"Let this be understood—I'm telling all parties, Republican, Democratic, Union—I'm going to advocate the things I believe in whether they cross party lines or not."

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about Salad Mixers de Luxe.

LANSING, MICH. — About once in so often you meet the man—it's always a man—who knows how to make the perfect salad dressing, and on the slightest provocation does so. The trouble with this party is when you get him off salad dressings he's practically a total loss.

Nevertheless, a decent salad dressing—and a decent salad—are boons to humanity. The right commingling of astringent, bitterish green things with a smooth, bland dressing—there you have something. But often we are confronted by a monstrosity featuring whipped cream, nut kernels, sweet cheese, preserved fruit, even marshmallows or pickled ginger.

Such an atrocity is never a salad. Put a crust on it and it might pass for pie, but would be very low-grade pie.

CONCERNING Mr. Earl Browder. HAVING been discouraged by a perhaps overzealous police force from speaking in Indiana, Earl Browder, one of the almost countless candidates for President, now threatens suits for false arrest.

As Al Smith says, let's look at the facts. Mr. Browder stands for communism—stands for all communism stands for. Therefore he must look on the Russian government as the one ideal government, it being the very flower and perfection of applied communism.

Now, in Russia any man publicly advocating doing away with the existing national system and substituting some other system therefor would find himself in jail—or even in a worse fix—before he could say Jackovitz Robertsonoffski.

So what I say is that Mr. Browder shouldn't crave to sue anybody. If he believes in the practice of what he preaches, which, of course, he does, he ought to go around kissing everybody on both cheeks.

CRUELTY to Animals. LATELY a dog was tried before a judge for biting a boy. And another judge was appealed to, that he save an elephant condemned to die. So some one proves that, through many centuries, animals were accused of high crimes—dogs, rats, pigs, oxen, roosters, storks, also ants, spiders, snakes, grasshoppers, dolphins, locusts, gaffies, eels, and, being convicted, were burned, flayed, hanged, destroyed by slow torture.

But think of the charges on which the so-called brutes might condemn mankind—offenses of which they rarely or never have been guilty—malice; slaughter of weaker things for love of slaughter; deliberate wastefulness of natural resources; wanton destruction of natural beauties; wars without rational cause; unnecessary greed; bearing false witness; neglect of our own young; drunkenness; slothfulness; bigotry; intolerance.

Newspapers Vs. Spellbinders.

IN MY reportorial youth nearly every newspaper, big or little, was bitterly partisan. We distorted facts and editorialized in news stories when dealing with the accused opposition. Otherwise we'd have been traitors to a sacred cause. These times the average paper, big or little, prints honest accounts concerning both sides—their relative chances as revealed by polls, their waning or gaining hopes. The political views of a columnist or a special contributor may differ from the publisher's policy—still he gives them space.

But the spellbinders go right on spouting fiction which everybody knows is fiction. And the volunteer debaters clamor with prejudice and misinformation for their ammunition.

By the way, will all those who ever heard of anybody being converted by one of these barber-shop arguments kindly raise their right hands?

Currency Juggling.

BEING frightfully smart to begin with, I know as much regarding currency juggling as the next fellow—which is precisely nothing at all. Up to, say, $18.75, most of us know what money is—or used to be. But when they talk in terms of billions or trillions or jillions, they've got us going down for the third time with a low gurgling cry.

And the more a financial technician, with both his pants pockets full of figures, tries to explain these governmental manipulations, the more convinced I am that, like the average specialist, he has concentrated on being expertly ignorant upon one involved subject rather than remaining, as most of us do, broadly and comprehensively ignorant upon practically all subjects.

Household Questions

To polish a table that has become spoiled by hot dishes, apply a few drops of essence of peppermint with a clean cloth and rub briskly.

Never allow cold water to run into an aluminum pan while it is hot. If done repeatedly the rapid contraction of metal will cause pan to warp.

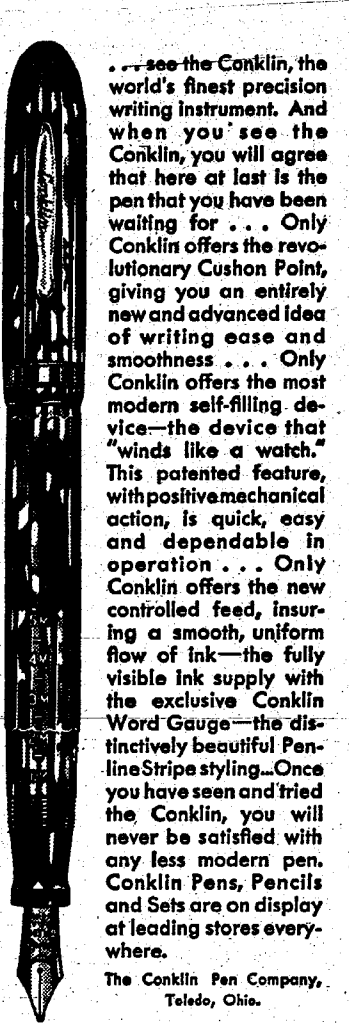

A teaspoonful vinegar beaten into boiled frosting when flavoring is added will keep it from being brittle or breaking when cut.

When whisk brooms have become worn, cut them down for sink brushes.

For Russian dressing, mix two tablespoons of chopped dill pickles, two tablespoons chopped ripe olives, two tablespoons chili sauce and one tablespoon of catchup to one-half cup of mayonnaise. Serve on lettuce or vegetable salads.

To prevent unnecessary cleaning: eighteen waste baskets, one floor mat and twenty four erasers.
Furnishing light and air we have: seventy three windows, six skylights, seventy-two lights, (twenty-three light switches), twenty-four ventilators, twenty-five doors (only one hundred and forty-nine door hinges), also fifty-one shades, and eleven thermometers to regulate the light and air.

GUESS WHO?

This week it is a girl again. She has blonde hair, blue eyes, medium height — sunny disposition. She plays in the band, officer of latin club —takes active part in class affairs. She likes winter better than summer. School IS NOT one of the reasons. She is a Junior—has been known to run into model T's with the help of others—likes outdoor sports.

A GOOD GAME WAS PLAYED BY ALL

Though the day was very cold and everyone on the side lines was freezing a good game was played by both East Jordan and Charlevoix. The teams were almost evenly matched so no scores were made by either team. We are wondering if the team was as cold as the rest of us were.

F. F. A. DANCE

A large crowd attended the Home Coming Dance sponsored by the F. F. A. Wexstaf's orchestra furnished the music which everyone enjoyed. Ice cream and Cake were furnished as refreshments. (Of course everyone enjoyed that.) We did miss some of the teachers, who, it seems, must have been somewhere else instead.

Why Not Plant a Tree?

Why not plant a tree—as an expression of a motive, a memorial that will endure?
 Why not plant a tree, to mark the birthday of each of the children?
 Why not plant a tree, as a marker of some special occasion of joyful remembrance?
 Why not plant a tree to symbolize some outstanding event or experience in your own life?
 Why not plant a tree to mark a meaningful historical event?
 Why not give a tree, a real evidence of gratitude, to say, Mother or Father?
 Why not "say it with a tree," so that you will be reminded of...?
 Why not have the joy and satisfaction that you have planted a tree, at least, and made this old world a little better place in which to live?
 Why not have "a living Christmas Tree," by planting a spruce?
 Why not have a tree to remind you of the daily blessings through the changing seasons?
 Why not have a tree, your very own, to closely watch the marvelous growth and romantic maturity year by year?
 Now is planting time!
 Now Mother Nature has stopped the wheels of toll and growth to permit the moving of the tree from nursery now to permanent location. Now is the day to resolve to plant a tree for many good reasons not mentioned above. No reasonable amount of money will give greater degree of satisfaction and pleasure and contentment and be assured of increasing joy.

Come to the nursery and pick out the perfect tree you want, or send a card, or phone for us to help you in any way, to plan with you, to arrange date or place of planting or review types best suited for the purpose.

We are here to serve you, small orders as well as larger ones receive our best attention. We will be planting until the soil freezes, but do not delay!

CHAPTER I

The events to be related began upon a certain afternoon and early evening when Doctor Greeding became for almost the first time in his life furiously angry. Call these events coincidence; yet it is permissible to suggest that if human passions be supposed sometimes to have a force of their own, so that a violent emotion in one individual may without any physical action on his part project itself and impact upon other individuals, then these occurrences will fall into an ordered pattern.

Doctor Greeding's own experience had persuaded him that incidents do occur, and conditions do arise, for which there can be no natural explanation. Certain episodes in his life, certain unique traits which he recognized in himself had long since convinced him of this.

Thus his sense of smell was far more acute than normal. If he came into an empty room, he knew instantly who had last passed through that room. In the same way, perhaps from the peculiarity of structure which his occultist early remarked, he could see with some precision in the dark. Incidentally, his eyes sometimes shone like those of an animal; and Mrs. Greeding might be startled, when they both awoke at night, to see her husband's eyes thus gleaming.

Doctor Greeding cultivated these unusual capacities—taking care, for instance, not to smoke, lest he blur his sense of smell; but this was a matter as much of inclination as of choice, for he had a dog's distaste for tobacco. Mrs. Greeding, and his daughter Nancy, respected this feeling on his part. Mrs. Greeding never smoked at all, Nancy never when she was near him.

But he had other gifts not so definitely physical. For instance, he sometimes knew what a person was about to say before the word was uttered. Or when he approached a street-corner, or a closed door, he might find himself perfectly sure that when he turned the corner, or opened the door, he would discover a certain person or scene.

Also, he had had occasionally the experience of wishing very much that something entirely out of the ordinary run of expectation would happen—and having the wished-for event occur. But this he attributed to his luck. Doctor Greeding was in fact a child of good fortune. Life ran well for him. He had married, with the deliberate intention of furthering his career, the girl he chose; and their life together had been all that he had hoped. He had desired one child, a daughter; Nancy was their only child. He had sought material and professional success, and found it.

And in other ways, in the small incidents of daily life, luck was likely to break in his direction. His mother—she was a simple woman—once told him that he had been born under a caul. "So you'll always be lucky," she explained.

The thing began with Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business man near Doctor Greeding's own age, whose life the Doctor had saved by a difficult operation. From that day, as a not unnatural consequence, their friendship had steadily deepened.

Today Jerrell had telephoned Dr. Greeding and made an appointment to lunch with him, at their club. During the luncheon they spoke of casual matters. Afterward, Jerrell started to light a cigar, then hesitated.

"Light it, Ira," the Doctor bade him, smiling. "The window's open; and if any tobacco can be tolerable to a sensitive nose, it is yours."

So Jerrell scratched a match. He was a man physically fit, lean and hard. His thick hair contributed to the youthfulness of his appearance; but there were betraying lines at the corners of his mouth. He said, after a moment, quietly:

"I want to have a talk with you, Ned—about Nancy." There was a slow color in his cheeks.

The Doctor nodded. "Yes, I know."

Jerrell looked at him curiously. "How can you know?" he asked. Doctor Greeding only smiled, and Jerrell said: "Ned, I always have a feeling, in talking with you, that you know what I'm going to say. You're a curiously understanding man." He chuckled. "I should not like to try to keep a business secret from you."

"If I could read your mind, I'd have been able to retire long ago," Doctor Greeding remarked.

"You don't speculate, do you?" Jerrell inquired. He had never invited the other to participate in any business affair.

Greeding shook his head. "No. At least, I never have. I'm naturally cautious, and—it hasn't been necessary. I've been lucky in my investments. I was born under a caul, you know." His tone suggested that he was laughing at his own words.

Jerrell finally spoke again. "Well, you're right, Ned," he said. "It is about Nancy. . . . She's a beautiful, a lovely girl. . . . Why, yes," Doctor Greeding smilingly assented, rather amused at the other's indirection. "I think so."

After a moment Jerrell came to the point.

"Ned," he said, "here it is, in words of one syllable: If—well, I should like to marry Nancy."

Doctor Greeding's heart quickened its beat; but he held his tongue. Jerrell went on, hurriedly. "Of course, I haven't spoken to her," Jerrell explained. "It seemed to me that under the circumstances I ought first to come to you—my old friend, and Nancy's father."

And he continued: "I see quite clearly the difficulties in the way. I am twenty years older than she is, twenty-two or—three years older. That is an obstacle. Then I have known her, as a child and as a young woman, for years; but she has thought of me as an old man—who grew older—for as long. That is another obstacle. There may be still others. It may be that she is—in love with some one her own age; and it may be that even if she were not, you and Mrs. Greeding would object to her marrying me, either because I'm so much older, or for some other reason."

He hesitated, and when Doctor Greeding still held silent, he went on:

"I don't want to—distress her, if she—already loves—some one else, some youngster her own age. And I don't want to embarrass you or Mrs. Greeding, by putting you in the position of opposing her marriage to me."

He hesitated, said then: "That's the situation, Ned. What do you think?"

After a moment Doctor Greeding chuckled. "Well, Ira," he said, "I can't pretend to be—surprised. I've not been blind to your new interest in Nancy in these recent months. Mrs. Greeding has told me some things about your visit with them in Georgia." He added calmly: "And Nancy's fine. I should have been more surprised if you had failed to discover the fact."

He went on, thoughtfully: "Nancy has friends, of course—boys her own age. A girl of twenty-two is very much a young woman, but a boy of that age is still a boy. She has a troop of these youngsters at her heels most of the time; but no one of them more often than the others." He smiled. "I feel sure the field is open," he said.

"How about you? And Mrs. Greeding?" Jerrell asked bluntly.

The Doctor hesitated, then went on: "The difference in your ages may seem to her an obstacle, as you say. She may feel it a barrier too great to be surmounted. On that point, I cannot speak. That is for Nancy to decide."

Jerrell said simply:

"Of course, in the last analysis. But would you and Mrs. Greeding—"

The Doctor met the other man's eyes straightforwardly. "I know you pretty well, Ira," he replied. "If Nancy loved you and wished to marry you, Mrs. Greeding and I would be—gratified."

Jerrell chuckled with a quick, youthful pleasure; but he sobered then, and he said gratefully:

"Thanks, Ned. I appreciate your attitude." And after a moment he added: "I—love Nancy, Ned. And I'm not as old as my years. I've lived decently, taken care of myself. I believe—if she came to love me—I could make her happy."

Doctor Greeding nodded. "I know as much about you—physically—as you know yourself." He was proud of his tone. It was dispassionate and calm, with no hint in it of the excitement he felt.

Jerrell colored. There was always in him something deeply likable. He said awkwardly:

"I know that this is—an old-fashioned proceeding, my speaking first to you. . . . And I don't want to be rebuffed. Are you sure she is—free?"

"Perfectly sure," Doctor Greeding promised. "I have her confidence. If there were anyone, I would surely know."

Jerrell smiled, and his eyes lighted. "Thanks, Ned," he said. "I shall bank on what you say."

Doctor Greeding drove back up town in a complacent triumph. He had no least misgiving of what was to come. . . . Edward Greeding was the only son of a Maine farmer. Even as a boy on the farm, he revealed some unique and unusual quality; and his mother's pride furnished a driving motive force. By his own labor he put himself through Bowdoin and afterward through Harvard Medical school, where he ranked second in his class.

By the time he had finished his hospital work, both his father and mother were dead. In Cambridge he had learned to value the atmosphere of dignity and pride which surrounded some of the fine old houses there. In one of them —that of Doctor Bendon—he was a welcomed visitor; and he shrewdly decided that if Myra Bendon were his wife, his career would begin under good auspices. He wooed the girl—she was a little taller than he, plain and awkward, not beset by suitors—and won her. Later, when Doctor Bendon died, Doctor and Mrs. Greeding came to live in the old house that had been built by her great-grandfather, a hundred years before.

Mrs. Greeding would have preferred more modern surroundings; but her husband insisted. There were in the old house many things—furniture, silverware and the like—which had been old and fine when the house was new; and Doctor Greeding had a keen appreciation of these possessions. He took pride in them; took pride in having achieved them. But Mrs. Greeding kept the old things from a sense of duty. There were a few things—a vase, a modern painting or the like—which she had bought and against the Doctor's protests insisted on keeping; and her own dressing-room, her particular domain, was decorated and furnished in a modernistic vein.

The house stood on half an acre of well-landscaped grounds, with a fine bay hedge in front, and flowers, and a pool where goldfish swam, and a tennis court. The tennis court was at one side, and the wire screen designed to catch stray balls was itself overgrown by vines, so that the court was hidden from the eye of anyone not actually within the enclosure.

This afternoon—it was a day in May, when spring was already full blown, and the sun was warm—and only a little while after Doctor Greeding had assured Jerrell that Nancy was heart-free, the girl was playing tennis with Dan Carlisle. This young man was an assistant professor of economics in the university, and his book on the business cycle had already won respectful notice and was used as a text in the business school. He telephoned Nancy soon after lunch; asked whether she were free. She told him, eagerly, to come; and at a little before three he arrived, to find her driving balls against the batter-board at the end of the court.

"Thanks, Ned," He Said. "I Shall Bank on What You Say."

Doctor Greeding did not suspect that those great plans he had for Nancy were guessed by half the world; but they were not as secret as he supposed. Thus when Dan arrived, he peered through the gate in the screen around the court, and hissed sharply. Nancy heard, and called, "Oh, hello!" and she came swiftly toward him.

"Sh-h-h!" he warned her, finger on his lips; and he looked right and left, cautiously. "Are we alone?" he whispered.

"Idiot!" she laughed. "Yes, of course. Mother's gone to play bridge—won't be home till late."

"Ah!" Dan sighed contentedly. "And your father won't, either. So it's perfectly safe for me to show myself!"

"Don't be silly, Dan," Nancy indignantly protested. "You're not exactly an outcast, you know."

He insisted with mock gravity: "Indigent instructor plays clandestine tennis with daughter of wealth and beauty." He shook his head. "That's bad," he said.

Nancy cried, half-irritated: "Just for that, I shall beat you!" She spun her racket. "Rough or smooth?"

"Rough," said Dan; and the racket fell.

"Smooth," she announced triumphantly. "I'll take the serve!" So Dan stripped off his sweater and crossed to the farther court, and Nancy's racket rose and swung in a free full circle. The ball clipped the line, went untouched into the backstop. Dan had not moved, had made no effort to return it.

"Weren't you ready?" she called. "Sorry," he confessed with a grin. "You ought to wear a veil or something, Nancy, or black your teeth! How can a man keep his eye on the ball?"

"You'd better watch this one!" she retorted, her cheeks bright, and served again. But the ball came back, low and fast on her backhand, and at her very feet; and thereafter Dan managed to keep his attention on the game.

Yet—inattention might have been forgiven him. Nancy was slender, with loose dark hair; and she wore one of those scant tennis costumes calculated to permit the greatest possible freedom of movement, with no sleeves, and a skirt which even in repose scarce reached the knee. Her bare legs were golden brown from three months of southern sun, and her arms and throat were the color of honey. Dan thought her like that classic figure of Diana with the stag. Her movements were liquid and effortless; her body flowed through a succession of postures, each beautifully composed, like a fine work of art, which the eye recorded and remembered.

Dan himself was no work of art. He was taller than Nancy, but so broad of shoulder and heavy of leg that he seemed short and almost chunky. He moved about the court with a robust zest and a reckless waste of energy. His stroke seemed awkward, but had a surprising efficiency and power. Nancy had learned her tennis in a good school, and played easily and well; and she did in fact win that first set from him, though by sheer stubborn persistence he carried it thrice to deuce.

But in the second set his superior pace began to tell; the balls he hit had a steam behind them which when they struck her racket communicated the shock to her hand, to her wrist and arm. Little by little, her returns began to drift faintly to the right of the spot where she aimed them; she made errors. He broke her serve.

"Golly, Nancy," he protested, "you're blazing! Too hot?"

"Of course not!" She laughed at him. "You're no iceberg, yourself," she retorted. "You're red as beef! It makes me hot just to look at you."

"Want to call it off?" he urged. "No sense killing ourselves."

"Of course not. We'll play two sets out of three," she insisted stubbornly, and they came back to the court again.

She coasted through the remaining games of that set, husbanding her strength, making him run when she could, placing the ball rather than driving it. He took the set at six-four.

"There," he suggested. "That makes it even—Stephen. Let's call it a draw!"

"Of course, if you're tired," she said derisively.

He grinned. "You're a glutton for punishment."

"I've just begun to fight," she warned him.

"All right, have it your way," he assented. "It's my serve. Let's go."

And without pause, they began again; but Dan's game now had softened. She won his serve, then her own, and the first three points of the next game. On the third point he served a double fault; and she picked up the balls and walked toward the net.

"Dan, you beast, you're letting up," she said in angry accusation. "Not a bit of it," he insisted. "Liar," she retorted, and her eyes were hot. "Don't you suppose I know? And if there's anything I hate, it's to be babied."

"Why, listen, Nance," he protested. "I—Well, as a matter of fact," he confessed honestly, "I thought you were pretty hot and tired. We're not playing for blood, you know!"

"I'm going to beat you if I can," she said furiously. "And you're to beat me if you can. Is that clear?" He hesitated, himself angry now. "Perfectly," he retorted then. "You asked for it. I'll give it to you!"

And he turned and stalked back to the service-line. She took her place to receive. "Ready?" he barked.

She nodded, and the ball came blazing at her. Her whole arm tingled from the shock of it. Her return caught the net cord, dropped for an error.

His jaw was set, his face bleak. "Ready?" he took the game. The next. The next. He won five games in a row; and with the score two-five against her, she prepared to serve.

Driving herself to the limit, she served and came in. His return was hot; she met it weakly, could n. more than pop the ball feebly into the air. She saw his body bend backward for the smash, saw the sweeping curve of his racket, heard the explosion of the shot; and then something struck her bare leg just above the right knee.

She felt a pang like flame, a sickening agony. She heard his low cry of dismay, and heard her own voice in a keen fine wail of pain; and the world swam and dissolved, and she was on hands and knees, on the ground, dizzy, almost fainting.

Then he was holding her in his arms, and crying out regrets and self-reproaches, and trying to lift her; and the sandy surface of the court abraded her bare knees; and then she was being carried, and abruptly she was being kissed, and so forgot her hurts. Chaos resolved itself into order again, glorious and beautiful. She lay on turf, cradled in his arms, clinging to him.

"I didn't mean to, Nance?" he cried desperately.

"Please mean to, Dan," she whispered, drawing him nearer.

"I don't mean this," he confessed confusedly. "Oh, I've meant this, always, I think. Only I never had the nerve. But—hitting you . . . Was it awful? I'd rather break my arm."

Palindrome Reads Same

Backwards as Forwards

Whenever you find a word, verse, or sentence that reads the same backwards as forwards, there you have a palindrome. Single-word examples of this peculiarity are "re-pa-per" and "deified." The touch of wit in many classic palindromic sentences is unmistakable. Thus Napoleon, mourning over his exile, might well exclaim, "Able was I ere I saw Elba," and Adam could hardly have found more appropriate words to introduce himself to Eve than simply, "Madam, I'm Adam!"

A shrewd take-off of the tooth-extracting frenzy of Sir Richard Paget and old Irish pathologist, is contained in the palindrome, "Paget saw an Irish tooth sir, in a waste gap." Other long palindromes are "dog as a devil deified lived as a god" and "lewd I did live and evil did I dwell;" while every Etonian can trip out a further example in "now note Eton won."

The ancient Greeks and Romans went so far as to coin sentences with a different and sometimes more sinister meaning when interpreted backwards.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

The Typical American
Foreign observers note a marked change in the physical appearance of Americans within the last half century. Fifty years ago the tall lantern-jawed man typified Uncle Sam. Today, they say, the square-faced, stocky business man of the Babbitt type best typifies him.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington.—Some time ago I reported in these columns that Mr. Roosevelt had sent a commission to study Europe to study consumer co-operatives. I said at that time that the commission was likely to find itself unable to reach an agreement concerning a report to the President on the consumer co-operatives and that in the event they were able to reach an agreement, the publication of their findings would be delayed until after the election.

The commission has returned to this country and has gone through its labor pains to the end that there are six different views, an opinion by each of the six different commissioners concerning the value or lack of it that consumer co-operatives have.

But it is important to know developments concerning this commission because it appears that by engaging in an investigation of the consumer co-operatives, the President has awakened a number of different interests in our own country to the fact that there are some kinds of co-operatives which are not helpful. The fuss stirred up by failure of the six commissioners to reach an agreement makes it seem unlikely that there will be any unanimity of opinion in congress if and when Mr. Roosevelt attempts to gain action in a legislative way to encourage creation of these co-operatives. In other words, if a move is made in congress, or if the Chief Executive attempts to force congress to enact legislation favorable to consumer co-operatives, we are likely to see a vigorous legislative battle. Personally, I hope that happens. Unless that end materializes, there is every likelihood that the average person who has not access to full information will be inclined to favor consumer co-operatives, without realizing he is lending his influence, whatever it may be, to fostering institutions that in the end are certain to cause heartaches and financial losses.

I am in a position to say that the one thing upon which the President's commissioners were able to agree was that consumer co-operatives in Europe constitute the focal point for radicalism. Not a single consumer co-operative was found, I am told, that was not controlled, managed or inspired by radicals of one breed or another, mainly communists. These hotbeds of radicalism constitute "pressure groups" that have been able to impress governments in the various countries of an ability and an influence that do not actually exist with them. That is to say, these groups, like minority groups everywhere, are cohesively organized and they are vocal, in addition. The result is they have been able to force upon peoples in many countries restrictions over private and independent initiative, or to gain for themselves exemptions and privileges not accorded to others. The result is an obvious alignment of peoples into fresh factions, the tendencies of which are dangerous.

It may be news to many persons that we have consumer co-operatives in this country and that these agencies or units already are being fostered by the United States government. I refer to the activities of Professor Rexford Guy Tugwell, who has installed in the resettlement colonies various and sundry consumer co-operatives. It may be news as well to many to learn that Mr. Tugwell has spent almost two million dollars in financing these co-operatives to get them started. And the third bit of news respecting this circumstance is that a book written by James Peter Warbasse is being used as a guide for the creation of these consumer co-operatives in federal resettlement projects.

Now, the name of James Peter Warbasse may not seem important. Many persons have written books, but there are not many volumes extant in the United States that advocate changes in the form of our government. Yet, there are propositions in the volume to which I have referred which do just that and these books, as I have said, are serving more or less as a guide for the people whom Professor Tugwell has "resettled."

With this brief presentation of the facts, it seems to me it does not take much imagination to see the basis upon which the promoters of the consumer co-operatives are building their structure in this country. Taking these facts into consideration with the information brought back by those who made the study for Mr. Roosevelt, it is made to appear at least that a foreign link is somehow or other being forged, and that link, I believe, is designed as a fundamental unit in the general radical program to change the form of our government as well as the form of our national life. I can arrive at no other conclusion.

There is still another phase of this general proposition of consumer co-operatives that ought to be of interest to every producer in this country. Let us assume, for example, that they were perfect in organization and management; that they prospered and expanded in numbers and that they were rendering genuine service to the people. If that condition were to obtain, does it not occur as a natural question that with so much strength, the consumer co-operatives would eventually establish a class alignment between producer and consumer? It seems to me that the natural course of events would lead to this end, and if it did lead to this end I am afraid that because there are more consumers than there are producers, the producers would get the dirty end of the deal. They would be short-changed because they would be outnumbered.

This phase seems the more important because the food stores, food fields generally, are the sectors in which these consumer co-operatives operate best. As a matter of fact, the food field is the most fertile field for experiments anyway and here is quite apparently another experiment that has fastened, or is fastening itself as a parasite upon the agricultural industry of this country.

I know there has been some argument that the consumer co-operatives are the answer to the effort to destroy chain stores. That is not so. Chain stores in foreign countries have licked the co-operatives. They have virtually destroyed them where the co-operatives attempted to drive the chain stores out of business. It becomes important then to recognize that while the United States has many chain stores, it has not now and never will have as many chain stores as it has independents.

Again, here is a threat to independent business men, particularly to the small shop owner, whether he be in a large city or in the thousands of small towns and villages where the owners of such stores are important to their communities and pillars of strength in our national society. If the consumer co-operatives get going, I predict a further decline in the number of independent merchandise houses throughout the United States. For that reason, if for none of the others that I have outlined, it does seem important that the consumer co-operatives move in this country should be stopped in its tracks and that those responsible in an official way for encouraging this sort of thing should be shorn of power.

It may seem a far cry from the farm field to the price of beer as working man finds it, but there is a direct connection and recent developments again demonstrate the fact that our whole economic structure is quite closely related. There is an increase coming in the price of beer. Either the working man and others who like beer are going to pay more for it, or else they will get a smaller glass. The answer is that ingredients entering into the production of beer have increased in price to such an extent that, according to official figures, the brewers are now paying about $1.50 more for the things that enter into the production of one barrel of beer than they did when the sale of beer again was legalized.

This circumstance is significant for the reason that it shows conclusively how tampering with the currency upsets the general balance within our economic structure and results sometimes in displacement of markets and sometimes in diminution of sales. In the case of beer it probably will result in a displacement of markets, rather than any decline in the amount of beer consumed, despite the fact that the ultimate consumer will be paying more.

This condition is of interest to agriculture generally because it has always been contended by the proponents of open sale of beer and whiskey that a substantial new outlet for farm crops was made available by the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Rather, it was a restoration of an old outlet that existed before the Eighteenth amendment was adopted. But there has been a combination of circumstances, largely the result of governmental meddling, that has mitigated against the farmers obtaining full benefit from repeal. These may be enumerated as follows: Devaluation of the dollar, crop restriction under the Agricultural Adjustment act, higher taxes, and a tendency on the part of the Roosevelt administration to increase imports from abroad.

In the case of the devaluation of the currency, the main purpose, as announced by the Roosevelt administration, was to increase prices. It has had that effect and has made the brewers pay more for the hops they must import from abroad, and they must import hops because our own production is insufficient.

Lesson for October 25

CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 18:1-4; I Corinthians 13. GOLDEN TEXT—And now abideth faith, hope, charity (love), these three; but the greatest of these is charity (love). I Cor. 13:13. PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Paul Was Not Afraid. JUNIOR TOPIC—Courage in the Night. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christian Love Is and Does. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love, the Law of Life.

By way of Athens the apostle Paul and his co-workers came to Corinth, one of the great commercial and social centers of Greece. It was a city known for its magnificent architecture and its patronage of the fine arts, but even more widely known for its abandonment to vice and wickedness. Here Paul, the apostle of faith, demonstrated that his faith was rooted in love, and it was to the Christians who were dwelling in this infamous spot of corruption that he addressed his supremely pure and beautiful discourse on love.

The first portion of our lesson finds Paul at Corinth, and provides an introduction to the study of the love chapter from I Corinthians by showing from his experience that

I. Love Is a Fact, Not a Theory (Acts 18:1-4). The man whom we now recognize as perhaps the greatest preacher and teacher of Christian truth who ever followed the Lord Jesus Christ "came to Corinth." That great and busy city in all probability knew nothing of his arrival and cared nothing for his message. No one met the distinguished messenger of God and received him into a home of comfort and honor.

But God had not forgotten him. For we read that Paul "found a certain Jew"—a convert to Christ, and his noble wife, and "abode with them." Persecution had sent Aquila to Corinth, and he was there for Paul to find.

And the humility of loving service expresses itself further in the fact that the one who was to bring Corinth the glorious message of the gospel did so at his own cost. He labored with his hands at the trade which he, as every Jewish boy, had been taught by his father. Christianity does not ask, "What will ye give me?" but "How much can I give?"

In his first letter to the church which grew up at Corinth we find the exhaustively rich chapter in which Paul so fittingly describes true Christian love. It is impossible in any short discussion of this passage to make a complete study of it, but we note

II. Four Truths About Love (I Cor. 13:1-13).

1. Love is superior to the other graces (vv. 1-3). Life has many excellent gifts and men seek after them. How do they compare with love? Glowing eloquence, the far-seeing eye of the prophet, mountain-moving faith, self-sacrifice—without love they all lose their worth; in fact they are nothing. All the attainments of men apart from Christ are vain and empty.

2. Love is necessary to the other graces (vv. 4-7). There is a sense in which love is not so much a grace in itself as the underlying and motivating power, which shows in every fine and noble expression of Christian character. Study these verses to see how patiently and unselfishly love works.

3. Love is permanent; other graces fall (vv. 8-12). Some gifts will cease, for there will no longer be any need for them. They are temporary in their value or simply a means to an end. But love—it began with God in eternity and will go on with him through eternity. Why then do we labor and seek after these other graces so diligently and neglect the one grace which is above them all, for

4. Love is supreme (v. 13). Even over these other graces, which with love will abide, namely, faith and hope, love stands supreme. It is the fundamental of all fundamentals. Without it all else is empty and futile. And let us remember, this is not pious theory; it is fact and to be translated into daily life.

Hardships Wounds and hardships provoke our courage, and when our fortunes are at the lowest, our wits and minds are commonly at the best.—Charron.

Common Sense Common sense in one view is the most uncommon sense. While it is extremely rare in possession, the recognition of it is universal. All men feel it, though few men have it.—H. N. Hudson.

An Odious Quality Conceit is the most contemptible and one of the most odious qualities in the world. It is vanity driven from all other shifts, and forced to appeal to itself for admiration.—Hazlitt.

Rushton Has Worked For Best Interests Of Northern Michigan

Supporters of Herbert J. Rushton of Escanaba, Republican candidate for congress from the eleventh district, are pointing with pride to the recent report that tourists brought over $270,000,000 into the state during the past season. Exceeded only by the auto industry, the tourist business is the second largest industry in the state. Statistics from the Department of Commerce in Washington show that 10 million persons visited the Michigan resort sections furnishing employment for 25,000. Labor Day week-end motor traffic across the Straits of Mackinac amounted to 7,900 vehicles, nearly 1,000 more than all previous traffic records at the Straits.

The increase in tourist trade in Michigan can be dated from 1929 when the Rushton-Hartman Act, fathered by Senator Rushton, was passed providing for the disbursement of $100,000 annually to advertise Michigan's scenic beauty and tourist facilities. It can well be said that Mr. Rushton's interest in the then infant tourist industry has resulted in the building in Michigan of its second largest industry. The department of Commerce report attributes the increase to the state's climatic and scenic resources and to the recent consistent advertising program of Michigan as Vacation Land.

Mr. Rushton was further instrumental in creating this new industry when he threatened to force an investigation of the Highway Department to determine why Northern Michigan had received only a few miles of concrete highway while several counties in the metropolitan districts of the state were paved 100%. It is significant, claim Mr. Rushton's supporters that there are today several hundred miles of hard surfaced highways in the territory comprising the Eleventh Congressional District. It is on the basis of these very definite things Mr. Rushton was able to accomplish for this district as a State Senator that his supporters in his campaign for election as Congressman are basing their claims that he will prove an equally efficient servant of the people in the National House of Representatives.

State Ram Truck to Again Visit County

The Michigan Sheep Breeders Association is again sponsoring the ram truck. The rams will be mostly yearlings of good type and will be representative individuals of their respective breeds. The rams have been selected by Delmer H. LaVoi, extension specialist in animal husbandry of the Michigan State College. In their selection special attention has been given to their usefulness for service on grade flocks and especially to the production of market lambs, wool. The ram truck will stop at the Boyne City Co-op on Tuesday forenoon, October 27, beginning promptly at 10:00 a.m. Mr. LaVoi will give a demonstration on the selection of lambs for market and the points to consider in the selection of a ram.

All rams are purebred and are purchased with the guarantee that they are breeders. The registration papers will be taken care of by the association and transfers made to the purchaser.

The rams will be priced according to their value and quality and will range from $25 up. Any special orders sheep men are to leave with the county agent will be forwarded to Mr. LaVoi and special selections made. If you are interested in buying a ram at a certain price and of a certain quality, be sure to inform your county agent so that your order can be taken care of.

Remember the ram truck will be at the Boyne City Co-op Tuesday forenoon at 10:00 o'clock.
