The National Smelt Jamboree

PLANS FOR FIFTH ANNUAL TO BE MADE NEXT TUESDAY

A men's get together dinner, sponsored by the local Chamber of Commerce, is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 23rd, at 6:30 p. m.

The local Sportsmen's Club, who are in charge of the arrangements for the Smelt Jamboree, want to make this year's Jamboree the biggest and best yet. Ways and means of doing so including plans to date will be discussed at the meeting. The Jamboree has been set for the week-end of March 20th. The Sportsmen's Club want 100 per cent support and ask all men, whether interested or not, to attend the meeting.

The committee in charge states that, after all business in connection with the Smelt Jamboree has been disposed of, the meeting will be turned over to an informal and frank discussion of Civic Affairs in general. Anyone with any constructive ideas will be given an opportunity to be heard. Suggestions for the improvement and advancement of our City will be solicited.

The proposed dinner meeting appears to be a step in the right direction. It should be well worth attending. Tickets are on sale at the State Bank of East Jordan.

Tibbit's Daughter Aids In Uncovering Bribery Conspiracy In Lansing

Miss Alberta J. Tibbits, 20-year-old daughter of State Representative Douglas Tibbits, of the Charlevoix-Leelanau district played an important role in a bribery conspiracy at Lansing last week.

An employe of the state board of pharmacy, Miss Tibbits reported to her superiors that she had been offered $100 for advance copies of questions to be asked in the state examination for would-be pharmacists.

False sets of questions were prepared and given to Miss Tibbits. Detectives hid in her apartment and arrested Samuel Skolnick, 54, of Detroit, his wife, Sadie, 46, and their son Maurice, 23.

It is charged that Skolnick paid Miss Tibbits $40 for the questions at her apartment as the detectives waited in hiding. It is alleged the information was to be used by the Skolnick son in attempting to pass the pharmacists' examination.

Arraigned at Lansing on a warrant charging bribery conspiracy, the three defendants stood mute and a plea of not guilty was entered. Examination was set for February 23.

Miss Tibbits will be the state's star witness in the bribery case if it goes to trial.

Second School of Co-operation To Be Held February 23rd

The second meeting in the School of Cooperation series will be held at the Dilworth Hotel on Tuesday, February 23, beginning promptly at 10:00 o'clock. Mr. Hibel, manager of the Cadillac Growers Exchange, C. L. Nash and Arthur Howland from the Agricultural Economics department of the Michigan State College, will be present and present topics of immediate interest to all cooperators. These meetings have been very instructive and filled with useful information, and no doubt this second one will be just as valuable as the preceding discussion.

Many people realize the many activities of cooperatives. In the first place many tax problems have to be considered in addition to merchandising and distribution phases. It is expected that some 7 or 8 cooperatives will be represented by their managers and directors.

Any interested farmer is invited to listen to the discussion and to participate. Remember Tuesday, February 23, at the Dilworth Hotel at 10:00.

B. C. Mellencamp, County Agr'l Agent.

Smelt City Flourishing Again At Boyne City

"Smelt City", made up of about 100 fish shanties, is flourishing again on the waters of Lake Charlevoix at Boyne City.

Some of the shanties are rented to visiting fishermen who come from all parts of the state to make a catch of smelt through the ice. The shanties as a rule are equipped with all necessary fishing gear; some have revolving reels attached to the walls so that the smelt can quickly be reeled in when hooked. Catches of as many as 100 smelt per fishermen have not been uncommon for a night's fishing.

Girl, 8, Selected As State's Bravest Citizen For Work At Ironton

Little June Pillsbury, eight-year-old heroine of a tragedy that took the lives of her three cousins, was selected to receive the rainbow division veteran's medal of valor at Detroit last week.

June rescued her mother from drowning in South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, June 24, 1936, near Holy Island.

Mrs. Pillsbury, a strong swimmer, had plunged into the water fully clothed when June's cousins, Joan Parker, 10, and her sister, Patricia, 8, ventured beyond their depth. As she struggled to bring them to shore, Mrs. Charles G. Parker, mother of the girls who was unable to swim, leaped into the water in her terror.

Quickly surveying the situation June shoved off in a rowboat with her sister Nancy, 4. She reached the spot where her mother, exhausted from futile struggle to save the three Parkers, was attempting feebly to swim toward shore. June with the aid of her sister, dragged her mother into the boat and made for shallow water.

The Parker family, residents of Arlington, W. Va., were guests of the Pillsbury's at their home near Holy Island.

June will receive her medal Feb. 20. Her act of heroism was selected from a list of seven examined by a committee headed by former Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker.

South Arm Extension Club

The South Arm Extension Club will meet Wednesday, Feb. 24th, at the home of Mrs. Clara Liskum for an all day meeting. Bring needles, scissors and thimble. There will be a quilt to quilt. Pot luck dinner. Secretary, Lucy Heileman.

E. Jordan's First Winter Queen

CROWNED AT H. S. GYM WEDNESDAY EVENING

In a ceremony marked by its simplicity and dignity, Miss Phyllis Bulow was crowned East Jordan's first Winter Queen, in the High School Gym Wednesday evening. Mayor Kit Carson, acting as coronation official, placed the crown on her.

The Gym, decorated to resemble an outdoor lodge, made a very fitting place for a winter sports coronation. Deer heads and crossed guns on each of the basketball backboards, Indian blankets and outdoor pictures on the walls, an elk shield and gun in the center back wall, skis, snowshoes, bobs, etc. made it very unique for such a ceremony. Another very attractive feature was the stone fireplaces at each end of the gym, with rustic benches and chairs on either side.

At 9:30, to the music of Wexstaff's Orchestra, Queen Phyllis, her court of honor, composed of Ruth and Pauline Clark, Mayor Kit Carson and Junior Class President, Arthur Rude entered the gym for the ceremony. They were preceded by Sally Campbell and Douglas Nimmo as crown bearers. Arthur Rude then introduced Mayor Carson who performed the coronation.

Winter Queen Helen Gallagher of Charlevoix came over for the ball, as a guest of Phyllis and the sponsors.

As was stated before, the beauty of the ceremony was marked by its simplicity and dignity. This also held true for the entire ball. The Junior Class should be complimented on their ability to not over-decorate. Where most high school people fall down the Juniors came out on top. The gym had all that was needed to make it attractive. It looked like a hunting lodge and not a museum for outdoor curios. The class worked hard to put the winter coronation ball over and East Jordan commends them for their well spent efforts. Music for the ball was furnished by Wexstaff's Orchestra of Charlevoix.

Wise men make mistakes; fools continue to make mistakes.

New Comedy Hit Starts Sunday At Temple

Studios, like stars, become gradually "typed" and usually each builds a "name" for some particular kind of entertainment. In human comedy the Columbia studio has earned top recognition, and each year turns out pictures like "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes To Town" but restrains productions to only one of such hits a season. The current Columbia special is "Theodora Goes Wild" starring Irene Dunne gay, loaded with wit, sparkling with action, and pungent with hearty humor. "Theodora" is comedy gone wild, it will keep you in constant hysterics from start to finish! This production starts a three day presentation, starting Sunday. The complete week for the Temple is as follows:

Friday and Saturday; Dick Foran in "California Mail". Our Gang Comedy. Featurette, "Sweethearts and Flowers." Latest News Flashes. Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday; Irene Dunne in "Theodora Goes Wild." Three Stooges Comedy. Screen Snapshots.

Wednesday, Thurs: Guy Kibbee and Warren Hull in "The Big Noise." Technicolor musical western "Sunday Round Up." Color Cartoon. This is Family Nites with two for .25 prices.

Train vs. Bicycle— A Lesson in Economy

"Train travel is the cheapest means of land transportation," the Louisville (Ky.) Times points out in a current editorial. The journal says: "A Pittsburgh dispatch tells of a Savannah couple traveling 800 miles to East Pittsburgh on bicycles. The cost of the trip, food, tourist-cabin lodging, bicycle repairs (depreciation of machines not figured in) was $40. The time was twelve days.

"The trip could have been made in an air-conditioned railroad coach for $16 train fare, plus the cost of two or three meals eaten on the train.

"That the time would come when railroad travel would not be uncomfortable because of soot, cinders, poor ventilation, and that it would be cheaper to travel on a train than to ride a bicycle, could not have been believed twenty years ago or ten years ago.

"Travel by rail for long distances is less costly than walking, if you pay for food and lodging when you walk."

WHAT THE "BUMPS" ON YOUR HEAD DON'T MEAN

An article in The American Weekly with the February 21 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times reveals that many supposedly intelligent people still believe in the long exploded idea that the shape and size of your head have anything to do with the quality of your brain.

E. J. H. S. Quint Defeat Kalkaska

BY A 28 - 14 SCORE. GO TO BOYNE CITY TONIGHT

Coach Cohn's Jordan Basketeers emerged victorious over a more favored Kalkaska quintet here Friday night 28 to 14. The locals getting away to a fast start were never threatened leading at the half-time 18 to 2. Vandenberg, local left forward, hit his stride for the first time this year scoring 10 points to lead his teammates' scoring. Winstone also played a fine game starting the team out to an early lead with two successive field goals early in the opening period. The local lads showed improvement in their offensive work over that of the Elsworth game last week. The visitors reported to be a powerful quintet were ineffective against the tight defensive work of Coach Cohn's fighting crimsonites. The locals now seem to have recovered their spirit and fight which was grabbed from them in their stinging defeat by the Charlevoix "Red Raiders" a week ago. The local lads who saw service Friday were Winstone, Vandenberg, Morgan, and Saxton as forwards, Bowman and Antoine shared the center post with Somerville, Stanek, and Holley working at the guard posts.

Coach Jankovial's reserves polished off the "Kasky" seconds, winning handily 16 to 10. This week Friday, Coach Cohn will move on to Boyne City to play the powerful "Big Red" team. The locals could hardly be given a chance to win but by fighting hard the Red and Black should keep the score down, and bigger upsets have occurred, so come on fans follow the team to Boyne City.

Demoralized Canners Lose 32 to 13 To Kasky Independents

The local Independent Canner basketball quintet, a completely demoralized five, took a trouncing defeat at the hands of the "Kasky" Independents, losing 32 to 13. The locals, handicapped by the loss of Simmons for the year, and an injury to Spike Russell, were also without two other regulars in the absence of Saxton and Jankovial, forward and guard respectively. With only two regular, LaPeer and "Spin" Cihak, starting, the visitors took a long lead in the opening quarter, and from then on coasted easily to victory. Boger led the scoring for the visitors, getting 15 points. Cihak led the Canners with 6.

General Motors Strike Ended, Both Sides Yielding—Opposition to President's Supreme Court Plan Increases—Great Plains Drouth Program.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

BOTH sides making concessions, the General Motors strike came to an end in what Governor Murphy of Michigan called "an enduring peace." Operations of the great corporation had been paralyzed for 43 days, and the losses to it in business and to workers in wages have been immense. Partly through the skillful efforts of James F. Dewey, veteran federal labor conciliator, John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and other union leaders, and the officials of General Motors were persuaded to modify the defendant stands they had maintained through eight days of negotiations in Detroit, and the governor was enabled to announce the settlement.

Under the terms of the agreement: 1—The corporation recognized the union as the collective bargaining agency for those employees belonging to the union. 2—The corporation and the union agreed to commence collective bargaining negotiations on February 16. 3—The union agreed to end the strike and evacuate all plants occupied by strikers. 4—The corporation promised to resume operations in all strike-bound or idle plants "as rapidly as possible." 5—All employees are to return to work without discrimination against strikers.

6—The union agreed that pending negotiations there will be no other strikes or interference with production. 7—During existence of the collective bargaining agreement contemplated, all opportunities to negotiate shall be exhausted before any other strike or production interference is attempted by the union.

8—After evacuation of plants the corporation agreed to dismiss the injunction proceedings started by the corporation against the union or any members in Flint, Mich.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, whose own efforts to end the strike were futile, was highly gratified by the settlement. She gave out a statement praising the leaders on both sides for their give and take spirit and complimenting Governor Murphy on his success. Probably considerable credit should be given President Roosevelt, who kept constantly in close touch with the situation and talked with the conferees by telephone from the White House.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S proposals for legislation that would permit him to pack the Supreme court have met with such widespread and determined opposition, even from many members of his own party, that it was suggested to him that he accept certain modifications. These include appointment of Supreme court justices only when those over seventy-five do not retire, and limitation of the number a President could thus appoint during his term to two. His plan as submitted to congress would enable him to name six new members of the court if the present six justices who are over seventy do not retire voluntarily.

Mr. Roosevelt announced to the correspondents that he was quite aware of the controversy he was confronting but would not tack down on his demand for the legislation as outlined in his message.

It is probable that the President can get his measure through the house without great trouble, but a hot fight against it is certain in the senate. So far the Republicans in congress haven't had much to say on the matter, for the Democratic opponents of the scheme are vociferous enough to suit the G. O. P. It is said there is a good chance that the senate judiciary committee, headed by Ashurst of Arizona, will report unfavorably on the measure in so far as the proposal for increasing the membership of the Supreme court is concerned. The other parts of the President's plan, designed to expedite the work of federal courts, do not meet with much opposition.

Probably the scheme will be separated into several bills; and indeed that already has been started, for Representative Summers of Texas, chairman of the house judiciary committee, introduced a bill providing for voluntary retirement for Supreme court justices with full pay at the age of seventy. This was passed quickly by a vote of 315 to 75.

CONCLUSIONS of the great plains drouth committee were laid before congress by President Roosevelt, the report being accompanied by a special message in which the President urged the development of a "new economy" in the vast area between the Alleghenies and the Rockies to save the region from the effects of future drouths. The

Views on President's Plan to Enlarge Supreme Court

Senator Byrnes—I'm for it. Senator Nye—I think the President has hit upon a most ingenious method of speeding up the work of our tribunals.

Senator Vandenberg—I am opposed to tampering with the Supreme court.

Senator McCadoo—The President's message receives my unreserved commendation.

Senator Capper—I am certainly opposed to increasing the number of Supreme court judges for the purpose of allowing the executive during any one administration to control the decisions of the Supreme court.

Senator Hale—Should his recommendations be followed, I can see no hope of an independent Supreme court.

Senator Gerry—I'm definitely opposed to the President's proposal in regard to the Supreme court.

Senator Thomas—I think it is a timely and happy solution of a perplexing problem.

Representative Snell—This is pretty near the beginning of the end of everything.

Representative Fish—The message is political hypocrisy.

Speaker Bankhead—The plan for adding additional judges is a sound policy.

Senator King—I am unalterably opposed to it.

whole matter, said Mr. Roosevelt, dovetails into the proposed six year public works program.

The great plains committee suggested for the federal government:

1. A ten year program of additional investigations and surveys.
2. Continued acquisition of land in range areas with rehabilitation as the objective.
3. Measures to increase size of farms too small for efficient operation.
4. Development of water resources.
5. Resettlement within and without the region.
6. Compensation to local governments where federal land acquisition results in shrinkage of the local tax basis.
7. Control and eradication of insect pests.
8. Exploration of possibilities for developing other resources, such as vast lignite deposits to provide alternative occupation for some of the people in the area.

Similar action was suggested for states with the addition of suggestions for legislation to permit formation of county soil conservation districts, encouragement of co-operative grazing associations, revision of the taxing system to take account of land income and assistance to farmers in meeting water problems.

For local co-operation the committee suggested crop rotation, creation of feed and seed reserves against dry years; conservation of moisture, supplemental irrigation, fuller utilization of springs and wells, planting of trees and shrubs as windbreaks and flexible cropping plans to permit adaptation of each season's crop to the amount of moisture in the land.

BARCELONA, capital of the autonomous Spanish state of Catalonia, was bombed by a Fascist warship, and the Catalan council of state immediately decreed a new mobilization to meet the threat of an insurgent attack. It also ordered the strengthening of fortifications and set up a superior defense council.

Following the capture of the important Mediterranean coast city of Malaga by General Franco's Fascist troops, a general clean up of loyalists there was started. Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, rebel commander in southern Spain, announced over the radio that more than 150 leaders and military officers of the government had been arrested and executed after trial. He said an attack would soon be made on Valencia, the loyalist temporary capital on the east coast.

France was vexed by the reported assistance given the Fascists by Italians in the taking of Malaga, and renewed her threats to intervene in behalf of the government unless Italy and Germany ceased their active support of Franco.

The long drawn out siege of Madrid continued, but there was one important development when the insurgents, attacking with infantry and tanks from the south, threatened to cut the highway to Valencia, the capital's only remaining line of communication with the outside.

SOLUTION of the farm problem, as devised by agricultural leaders who have been in conference with Secretary Wallace, is based on Mr. Wallace's ever-normal granary plan. It would operate on these four stages:

1. Soil conservation payments would be continued until production balances demand.
2. When a surplus in any commodity is grown, the government would offer farmers loans at market prices for storage of the commodity in bins.
3. If the surplus continued, soil benefit payments for removal of acreage from cultivation would be increased.
4. Should surpluses increase to 10 or 15 per cent above demand the government would impose taxes on excess production to force acreage reduction.

Officials said no definite plan of taxation has been worked out.

DESCRIBING it as a flood control measure, Senators Albion W. Barkley of Kentucky and R. J. Bulkley of Ohio introduced a bill in the senate designed to create seven federal "authorities" with powers similar to those of the Tennessee Valley authority. Together with the TVA, these would cover the entire United States. The measure is in accordance with the President's suggestions for regional authorities to co-ordinate flood control, power, reclamation and rehabilitation work.

As for the current flood, the people in the stricken regions were turning to the task of rehabilitation. Self supporting residents of Cairo who had been evacuated were permitted to return to the city, and martial law was lifted from the southern counties of Ohio and Indiana. The levees along the lower Mississippi were standing up well under the strain.

Contributions to the American Red Cross flood relief fund were nearly up to $20,000,000, twice the sum originally asked.

DOMESTIC manufacturers persistently refuse to offer bids on the steel that the navy needs for its warship building program. President Roosevelt wants to know why this is, and so far he has found out that the Walsh-Healy government contract law is to blame. That act requires that all manufacturers filling government orders in excess of $10,000 shall comply with minimum wage and maximum hour standards.

Since the act became effective last year, the navy has advertised for bids on 25,000,000 pounds of steel but has been able to place orders for only 7,000,000 pounds.

Spokesmen for the Navy department indicated no further bids would be asked until the industry has recorded its position or unless the Labor department moves to relax the labor standard provisions of the law.

THE house passed and sent to the senate a resolution extending for three years the President's power to negotiate trade treaties with foreign nations irrespective of congressional approval. Some Democrats voted against the measure and were applauded by the little body of Republicans. The revolters were led by W. P. Connery of Massachusetts, who hails from a textile city, and J. Mark Wilcox of Florida, whose district is noted for its vegetables. Both said the opposition was based on complaints from their constituents.

OUT of San Francisco bay divers were dragging the bodies of victims of the latest aviation disaster. A transport plane of the United Airlines crashed into the water when only a short distance from the air field, and all its occupants, eight passengers, two pilots and a stewardess, perished.

A German military plane fell in a busy street in Berlin and five persons were killed.

The bureau of air commerce in Washington recommended 11 new safety measures to be taken by air lines in an effort to prevent future air crashes. The recommendations were based on findings made by the recent conference on air safety which was attended by pilots, air line representatives, and members of the bureau.

SEEMINGLY confident that his government is now safely established, President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico issued a decree granting amnesty to all political offenders, under arrest for or accused of rebellion, sedition or other subversive activities. Under special powers given him by congress he quashed 3,841 court proceedings against more than 10,000 persons accused of antigovernment plots or acts.

Former President Calles, who was exiled nearly a year ago, said in San Diego, Calif., that he did not consider himself included in the amnesty.

FROM AROUND MICHIGAN

Lansing—Contrary to public opinion, the Emergency Relief Commission indicated recently that the automobile strikes had caused but a slight increase in Michigan's welfare burden.

Newberry—With raw fur prices at the highest level in seven years, trappers are again on the trail of Michigan's fast disappearing fur bearers. Fox, mink and other are fast reaching extinction and the closing of many areas by the Conservation Department is seen as inevitable.

Pontiac—Fuzzy, a Persian cat owned by Mrs. John Simon, cat-dains fish, scorns meat, but dotes on raw potatoes, tomatoes, sweet pickles and bran flakes. The feline vegetarian refuses to touch milk or any other pussy diet when he can spot a raw vegetable. His mistress claims that Fuzzy several times has ripped open a sack of potatoes in quest of a toothsome meal.

East Lansing—Farmers learned of the arts and wiles of the beauty parlor recently, when Edwin Smiley, Michigan State College herdsman, roped the wildest bull in the college herd and tressed it to the ground for a manicure. He explained that many valuable herd sires, sacrificed prematurely because their hoofs became flattened, could be saved by a hoof-trimming.

Clio—Dinah, 100-pound Great Dane who guards the cream station and poultry farm of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hardman here, is chicken hearted. A tender guardian, Dinah will overtake a fowl with the wnderlust, pick it up gently in her jaws, and bring it back to home territory. Dinah has never yet harmed one of the dozens of chickens who have strayed from the farm.

Bath—A gasoline engine here recently completed a thirty-year grind and still functions perfectly. Visions of an old-fashioned horseless carriage may be dismissed, as this engine of ancient vintage is used to turn the machinery in the Bath Farmers Elevator. In operation since 1906, it has ground 42,000,000 pounds of grain and has turned the machinery which has cleaned 92,000,000 more pounds.

Jackson—Successful tests were made recently of the first 4,000 feet of a concrete conduit through which the Grand River will course in this City's business section. WPA workmen are now constructing a second section. The tube is 10 feet high, and the river now has plenty of space for expansion. In the event of a flood, the water will flow over the top of the conduit and down the rip-rapped sides of the old river bed.

Pontiac—The Biblical admonition that the sins of the father are visited upon the son has no legal standing, according to a court ruling here. A Canadian sought American citizenship. During the proceedings, a relative brought out the fact that the would-be citizen's great grandfather had committed some prank against the law. However, the judge ignored the alleged sins of the applicant's ancestor and granted naturalization.

Ann Arbor—The University of Michigan, seat of many notable advances in learning, has a new wrinkle in feminine styles. Fad-setting co-eds are wearing shoes to match the snow. Investigation revealed the shoes to be low-heeled white summer oxfords. Further sleuthing brought out the fact that mild winter weather has made crossing of the campus a nautical problem, and the lower-heeled, heavier shoes furnish the needed protection.

Buchanan—One of the few remaining Michigan orchards of Sheep's Nose or Black Gillyflower apple trees has been chopped down for firewood. The orchard, covering 22 acres, was planted 75 years ago on what is now the F. A. Harrington farm. The Black Gillyflower is a stranger on today's apple market. The fruit has a purple hue and is conical in shape. A protuberance like a lip on the end of the blossom, gave the fruit its odd name, the Sheep's Nose.

Flint—Recent strike disorders here were old stuff to Sandy, on duty with the Third Squadron, 108th Cavalry, of the Michigan National Guard, Sandy, a chestnut-colored horse with a wise look in his eyes, was born in 1910 and his military record states that he saw active service overseas. In 1920, Sandy was transferred to the National Guard, and has been on duty since. He is afraid of only one thing, thunder—a fear created by the heavy artillery during the World War.

Croswell—Does arbutus have an odor? Facing that dilemma, the botany class of Croswell High School set out on a mid-winter expedition to find the answer. A little animal with a white stripe was spied. One daring student heaved a rock at it. Maybe zoological students would understand, but how could students of botany know anything about species Mephitis Mephitis (more popularly known as skunk)? At any rate, due to the pervasion of a more pungent fragrance, the arbutus hunt was postponed.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington—More perhaps than ever before in our country's history, the courts of the nation, federal and state, are in a jam. They are being subjected to a greater strain than ever before and, I think, the strain is too great for them long to continue to bear it.

That sentence sounds sensational. It is meant to be. In the opinion of many sound thinkers, men and women of vision, there has never been a time when a wave or surge has attacked the courts or any other American institution with such ferocity.

One of the reasons the situation is to be regarded with so much concern is President Roosevelt's latest request of congress for a reorganization of the judiciary system. He is asking for more judges everywhere which, of itself, seems entirely proper, but the message astounded observers by proposing an increase in the membership of the Supreme court of the United States to fifteen. That is to say that if it were enacted into law, Mr. Roosevelt's own proposal would give him authority to select six additional justices of the highest tribunal. Inasmuch as the present membership of the court has refused a number of times to hold New Deal legislation valid under the Constitution, it takes no stretch of the imagination at all to figure out that Mr. Roosevelt's proposal would give him authority to select a sufficient number of new justices so that the New Deal would hold the balance of power in the highest court of the judiciary of the country.

There may be and probably is merit in the President's proposal that judges should retire at seventy years of age. It happens that the present membership of the court includes six men who are above that age and a statute compelling retirement at seventy would make six added vacancies in the court unless the present court should find that this law itself is unconstitutional in one regard. The judges are appointed for life and they cannot be removed without cause—which means they must be impeached by congress and tried.

The message respecting reorganization of the judiciary system was by far the most sensational to come from Mr. Roosevelt as President. He pointed out in it that he had proposed reorganization of the executive branch of the government so that it might function more efficiently. The next step, he said, was to reorganize the judiciary so that it could administer justice more speedily. But there are many minds throughout the country which find it difficult to believe that the necessity for speedy justice is the fundamental reason for the new proposal.

It is too early to tell, of course, how congress will act on the President's suggestion, but the more astute observers here are quite convinced that such legislation cannot go through without a bitter debate. The political implications are many. If a real struggle develops in the house or the senate, it is not outside the range of a good guess to predict that it could split the tremendous Democratic majority asunder in either house. If it did that once, undoubtedly enmities and factions would be created that would continue through the remainder of the President's new term and only the passage of time can disclose how far reaching such a thing might be.

But let us review for a moment some of the background of the conditions that have preceded the President's sensational proposal. There have been sniping and bushwhacking at the judiciary for a number of years and this was thrown into high speed by the President himself when the Supreme court threw out the NRA. On that occasion, Mr. Roosevelt made the well remembered remark that the decision had taken us back to "the horse and buggy days."

There followed an uproar by a vocal minority of radicals and persons who claimed to be liberal. They attacked the Supreme court for throwing out New Deal measures, ridiculed the justices as "the nine old men" and proceeded in general to spread poison to all and sundry about the country's judicial system. On top of that came Mr. Roosevelt's speech to congress last month in which he made a virtual demand upon the Supreme court for "a more enlightened interpretation of the Constitution." That was an unprecedented thing but it was not nearly so sensational as the present problem.

Much of the problem that is swirling around the courts of the land results from the position which congress has chosen to take. There are a goodly number of representatives and senators who, swayed by the vocal minority mentioned earlier, have voiced bitter criticisms of the judiciary and have even proposed that its freedom be curbed. They are doing this because they see the Supreme court deciding every now and then that some ill-thought-out piece of legislation should be tossed out of the window. A good many of these congressional shouters have only a slight understanding of the baffle that they put out on the floors of the house and senate, but the fact remains they are a part of the congress and hence their words are received with some consideration among those who want to believe the same way.

On the other hand, there are men like Senator Borah of Idaho, who foresee real trouble for all of us if the powers of the courts are curbed. Senator Borah thinks the question of the freedom of the judiciary is a paramount issue and lately has made a powerful appeal that if the people want to make changes in their government, the people ought to do it and not the President and the congress.

The Idaho senator makes the point that only through a judiciary unfettered by politics, free to operate as it sees the law, can the people of the country retain their freedom. If judicial independence goes, liberty goes. So, it seems to me that congress, which just now is the spearhead of the movement to change the power of the courts, ought to recognize its own responsibility.

I said earlier that the courts could not continue long to bear the present burden of attack. That burden which they carry now results largely—and this is especially true of the Supreme court of the United States—from the fact that congress has ceased to be a deliberative body. It has tossed great chunks of undigested legislation at the courts and when the courts have held these laws unconstitutional, a bunch of nitwits each time has unleashed a great howl. It would seem then that the proper conclusion is that the nine old men are not older nor any less enlightened than the members of congress, or the executive branches of the government but that especially congress is failing to do its job. It is attempting to read election returns into the judiciary. It seems to me it ought to be remembered by members of congress and officials of the executive branch of the government that each and every one of them has taken an oath as an official of this government to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution and in so doing they must defend the courts.

In any discussion of congress and its activities, I find time to do a little laughing. Laughs Are Loud Today several weeks, a period when floods were raging and people were dying, when thousands upon thousands walked the streets without jobs, when other thousands walked the streets because a militant labor leader had called a strike and had permitted his strikers to violate laws of the land by seizure of property—while all of these things were happening, our congress was giving thought to a picaresque proposition. It was discussing a bill providing for alterations of the Capitol building, itself.

The tragedy of this particular thing is that it has a very good chance of being enacted into law before the end of this session. It is proposed to spend four or five million dollars to extend and reconstruct the central portion of the Capitol along lines that would make the three east wings extend the same distance from the main building. It would enlarge the central portion and provide more office space when, as far as any observers can see, there is ample space for all of the offices required now or for the next half century.

I said the tragedy of the thing was that this proposal stands a fair chance of passing through congress. Sponsors of the plan declare it will improve the appearance of the central portion of the old building. It may do that but I have found more architects who disagree than agree with that thought. As for the office space argument, it would appear that somebody in congress is quite determined simply to spend some more money. It is to be remembered that only two years ago, the house of representatives built a second office building at a cost of $9,000,000 for its members. About the same time, the senate added a wing to the senate office building so that each senator could have three rooms whereas heretofore the average senator had only two rooms in his suite. Committee chairmen always have had three or more rooms. In addition, there are several hundred offices in the Capitol building itself and a goodly number of senators and representatives have private offices in the Capitol as well as in the office buildings. So altogether, I think there is just ground for saying, as one hears said frequently, that the congresses of the last few years much resemble boys who have received too many toys in one delivery. They don't know what to do with themselves.

Aviators have succeeded in flying over the top of Mount Everest, the highest mountain in the world. Rear Admiral P. F. M. Fellowes, D. S. "The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart seemed to hurt. A friend suggested Adierka. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep and never feel better."—Mrs. J. S. Miller.

Adierka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adierka gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shook, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka greatly reduces bacteria and other harmful organisms in the bowels. GEORGE WASHINGTON

Washington's Colonial Home

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S colonial home, Mount Vernon, has not been a residence for many years, nor has it been owned by a member of the Washington family for three-quarters of a century, says the Washington Star.

Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, daughter of John Augustine Washington, the illustrious Washington's great-grandnephew, was the last private owner of the estate. She first saw the world from the most historic home in America in 1856.

Though General Washington's slaves, numbering more than 150, were freed by his will, his nephew, Bushrod Washington, who inherited Mount Vernon, John Augustine Washington Bushrod's nephew, and his son, John Augustine Washington, Jr., who in turn fell heirs to the estate, were slave owners.

Today, survivors of the last generation of negro folk born in the slave quarters of the old manor are proud that their slave parents served in the ancestral home of the Washingtons. Somehow, they give realism to the farm which George Washington owned and which they helped to care for, as young men. These white-haired men declare there never was any depression at the old farm where the nights were festive with the singing of "Roll, Jordan, Roll," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and "Steal Away to Jesus."

George Washington, who is said to have been worth several hundred thousand dollars in today's values, had a salary of $25,000 a year during his presidency and added resources brought to him by his marriage with the rich Martha Custis. With such wealth he was able to keep his estate of 8,000 acres in fine condition. This was despite the fact that he was constantly entertaining visitors.

By the time the property was inherited by John Augustine Washington, his nephew, in 1829, the plantation had been reduced to 1,225 acres, only about 100 acres of which were suitable for farming. When his son, John Augustine Washington Jr., came into possession of the estate in 1860, after his mother's death, he realized that such wealth as his great-uncle George had possessed was required to restore Mount Vernon and maintain it in its former splendor.

According to tradition a Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham of South Carolina, who was a Potomac boat passenger about the time when John A. Washington wished to sell Mount Vernon, became so impressed with the tolling of the bell and the historical importance of George Washington's home that she became active in working for the purchase of the estate.

In 1858 the organization she had formed as the Mount Vernon Ladies' association of the Union contracted to buy the mansion and the patriotic appeal of the women and the efforts of Senator Edward Everett of Massachusetts, who toured the country and raised $68,224.69, Mount Vernon was actually purchased in 1860 for a shrine. Then the Washington family left the estate.

With breaking out of the Civil war, Miss Cunningham appealed to the commanders of both armies to preserve Mount Vernon. As both General Scott and General Lee gave orders that no armed man should enter the estate, the shrine was self-protected, the only neutral spot in the United States.

For several years members of at least four families of the Mt. Vernon slaves remained to care for the place, in the employ of the association. Some of the children grew up there and a few of the adults stayed long enough to gain the title of "aunt" or "uncle," which was a typical Southern respect for an aged negro.

For a while after the war visitors to Mount Vernon are said to have practiced such vandalism that they wrote their names over its walls and ceilings. Plaster was removed by those who cut pieces of laths as souvenirs, and even glass was broken in the cupola by those who wished to take away pieces of the famous home.

Today Mount Vernon, a national shrine, is a perfectly preserved plantation with mansion, greenhouse, kitchen, servant's quarters, coach house, smoke house, dairy, spinning house, carpenter's house, gardener's house and plantation office.

Perhaps the estate's closest touch with Washington are the beautiful trees in the grounds near the mansion which were planted either by General Washington or by his direction.

If the ancient ashes, beeches, buckeyes, hemlocks, coffee beans, elms, lindens, mulberry and the many venerable holly trees could speak, they would tell much about George Washington's life as a country gentleman.

America's most famous home, Mount Vernon, underwent not one but two major enlargements during the ownership of the First American who believed apparently, that the first duty of an American citizen to his family was to provide a comfortable home, according to a writer in the Washington Post.

When first built, about 1743, the Virginia home was an unpretentious plantation house of one and one-half stories, comprising the central section of the present mansion.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By REV. HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, Dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for February 21

THE POWER OF JESUS OVER DEATH

LESSON TEXT — John 11:23-25, 32-44. GOLDEN TEXT — I am the resurrection, and the life. John 11:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC — When Jesus' Friends Stopped Crying at Lazarus' Tomb.

JUNIOR TOPIC — With Jesus at Lazarus' Tomb.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC — The Power of Jesus over Death.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC — The Power of Jesus over Death.

Life, even to the follower of Jesus Christ, has its hours of sorrow, suffering, and bereavement. While the Christian is not "of the world," he is "in the world," and here he must meet the problems of life, including the evils to which the flesh is heir because of sin.

The fact that Jesus is our friend and our Saviour does not exempt us from human sorrow, but it does assure us of the needed grace to bear the trial and to trust Him even in life's darkest hour.

Lazarus, the friend of Jesus, was sick. The home in which Jesus had found rest and fellowship was in deep trouble. Jesus was no longer in Judea. In haste word is sent to him of his friend's illness. But he does not come.

Why does he delay? Such is the heart-cry of thousands today who call on Him in their hour of trouble. The purposes of God are beyond our ability fully to understand. We need but to trust Him and abide his time. Notice that his failure to respond at once to the message of Lazarus' sisters did not mean that he had deserted them (11:4-8). Nor did it mean that he had denied them his help (11:7). Lazarus may have been dead before the word reached him. He may also have delayed in order that there might be no question about the resurrection miracle. And he may have tarried in order that their faith might be strengthened.

Above all, do not fail to notice that he came. He always does. Jesus has never failed any child of his. The time and the manner of his answer to our prayers may not conform to our opinion of what should have been done, but let us remember that we know only in part, he knows all. Let us trust him. Job in his darkest hour said, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." (Job 13:15).

It is suggested that the lesson for today be studied and taught by considering three pairs of words giving cause and effect.

I. Death—Sorrow (vv. 32-35; also vv. 19-21).

Try as we may to temper its cruel blow, the fact remains that death is the enemy of man. It came into the world as the result of sin (Rom. 5:12), and only in Christ is it "swallowed up in victory" (I Cor. 15:54). Until the glorious day of Christ's returning when the redemption of the body will be complete (Rom. 8:23), death will still be the enemy which brings sorrow to the heart and tears to the eyes.

But let us not fail to notice that as the friends of Jesus we do not sorrow alone. He is with us. "Jesus wept" (v. 35) with Martha and Mary. He weeps with us in our trying hour. He is the "friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

II. Faith—Hope (vv. 23-28).

Those who believe in Christ have more than the comfort of his sympathizing presence—they have a sure hope. Read I Thessalonians 4:14-18. Sorrow and unbelief would becloud our faith and thus rob us of our hope. Martha needed to have her faith stimulated by the gracious words of the Lord, and then she triumphantly puts her hope in him as "the Christ of God." Once we recognize him as God, we have no hesitation in believing in his miraculous power.

III. Christ—Resurrection (vv. 25, 26, 38-44).

Majestic and authoritative are the words of Christ, "I am the resurrection and the life." He it was who gave life, for was he not "in the beginning with God"? And is it not said of him that "all things were made by him"? And Paul tells us that "by him all things consist." He is the only one who could say, "I lay down my life. I have power to lay it up again" (John 10:17, 18). So it can rightly be said that if we have Christ we have everything—both in this world and in the world to come. But if we do not have Christ we have nothing. We are without God and without hope.

One can sense the urgency of the soul-winner's task, when this truth is known and realized.

Happiness and Love

Happiness is the legitimate fruitage of love and service. It never comes and never can come by making it an end, and it is because so many persons mistake here and seek for it directly, instead of loving and serving God, and thus obtaining it, that there is so much dissatisfaction and sorrow.

(Edited by Mrs. Walter Clark)

Charles Cooper returned to Flint, Sunday.

Tommy Joyn, who has been staying at the Thomas home, is staying in town now.

Billie Walker had a birthday party Saturday to celebrate his fifth birthday anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Nasson had Mable Clark stay with their children Saturday night. They were at a Valentine and card party.

Mrs. Cooper received word from Flint that Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cooper have a new son, Walter, Jr., born on Mrs. Cooper's birthday anniversary.

Walter Clark took Mrs. Clark, Mable and Merman Clark, also Mrs. Andersen and daughter Lillie to Charlevoix to the 4-H Club banquet for the leaders and club members in the county. A large crowd was present and all enjoyed a good time.

The Helping Hand Club had a special meeting Thursday, at Knudsen's to complete the quilt they were making. They sold tickets and raffled off the quilt Friday night at the Grange Hall at Ironton. The money will be turned over to the Red Cross for flood relief. Mrs. Vhris Lyngklip had the lucky number and got the quilt.

Illegal To Remove Timber

Although the tax moratorium remains in effect in Michigan, it is illegal to remove timber from tax delinquent lands until all tax installments have been paid and the title holder has thus regained complete, legal ownership.

This was in effect the opinion handed down by Judge Frank A. Bell in circuit court at Menominee. The decision was given in the case of the people vs. Lars Guard of Bagley, who was accused by conservation officers of cutting an estimated $130 worth of timber from a 40-acre tract, on which the taxes were delinquent.

Guard was found guilty by a jury and ordered by Judge Bell to pay fine and costs totalling $200 or serve three months in the county jail.

Transaction Tax As Profit Maker For Business Man

Note:—The following article is being used at the request of one of The Herald subscribers. In no way does it represent the policies of this newspaper beyond using the columns as an open forum. — Editor.

E. W. Puellmann, of Chesterfield, Mo., is one of the many business men who have studied the Townsend Plan, with the result that he is able to present a clear digest of the transaction tax which is understandable to all business men.

"The Townsend Plan will finance itself through the transaction tax," Mr. Puellmann writes. "It only will not cost anybody a single penny but will make money for anybody and everybody who has to pay this tax."

Business Profits Would Increase

"For example: A man is doing a business of $1,000 per month before the enactment of the Townsend Plan Bill. If after the enactment his business increases 25 per cent, which is conservative, his sales will be $1,250 a month. His transaction tax on $1,250 is $25. His extra sales because of the Townsend Plan are $250. Now if he is working on a 25 percent basis, his extra profits on this $250 will be one-fifth of $250 or $50 (25 percent of the cost price is equivalent to 20 percent of the selling price.)

"Subtracting his tax of $25 from his extra profit of $50, he has left a clear profit of $25. In other words, he is making 100 percent on his tax investment. Should his business increase 50 percent because of the Plan, he would make 233 1-3 percent on his tax investment. Should his business double he would make 400 percent on his tax investment."

Mr. Puellmann insists that all must be made to understand that "the seller must assume and absorb this tax, or take the price of this tax out of his extra profits and not pass this 2 percent on to the buyer."

The chief point he hopes to impress upon both business men and all buyers is this: "The Townsend Plan will not only finance itself but will bring a handsome profit to everyone who has to pay this tax, no matter what his calling."

Support of the Townsend National Recovery Plan by merchants, manufacturers and other business men is being reported daily by Club officials and petition solicitors. Townsend supporters have long insisted that a misunderstanding of the meaning and provisions of the transaction tax has made it difficult at times to obtain

IMPROVING MICHIGAN ROADSIDES V. QUEER CONDITIONS

Editors Note: This is the fifth installment of a series of articles prepared by the Federated Garden Clubs of Michigan.

Abandoned, ram shackle buildings; unused gravel pits; automobile graveyards, various dumps, and an endless array of all sorts of roadside advertising in every sort of color and shape are some of the things which greet the traveler in Michigan and give peculiar impressions.

The state created the highway and has no control over the scars that mar its pathway through as scenic a country as can be found. It is an incongruous situation yet exists because no one has devoted sufficient effort to date to correct the condition.

Florida endured the "tombstones" of its real estate boom until the Junior Chamber of Commerce finally took it upon itself, several years afterwards, to remove the decrepit buildings during a statewide campaign.

Of all factors marring Michigan roadsides practically all of them can be corrected by local effort excepting roadside advertising and that being so broad and general in nature can only be brought to improvement by authority of the state.

The idea is not to abolish roadside advertising. But regulating roadside advertising, which is increasing by leaps and bounds becomes more of an evident daily necessity.

MICHIGAN LACKS REGULATION

It is not only the fact that property values are affected and scenery barred from view but these thousands of signs are attention detractors, are a menace to safe driving if allowed to continue without any regulation whatsoever.

Michigan has no state regulation of signboards except one law which forbids advertising signs "within" 500 feet from any highway intersection or railway crossing. This law has been applied in a limited manner only. In the meantime we wait for a better law. It is not fair to keep tourists guessing what is back of roadside advertising boards. We should show them how really beautiful Michigan is.

Yet Michigan can control the public utilities and has strict control in the matter of placing poles. The poles are granted a place on the right of way within five feet of the property line if this can be done without sacrifice to the trees. If not the poles go back on private property. The company must secure a permit for the line and for all tree trimming and cutting. A separate permit is required for each tree to be cut. Skilled men must then be used for the work.

It is inconceivable that Michigan does not find a way to protect the beauty which the state is both saving and creating. The beautiful Dunes highway was scarcely open before it had 11 filling stations, seven food stands, and 25 signs on its 22 miles.

The beautiful highway from Saginaw to Bay City which the state highway department by landscaping and planting is making a river parkway already is broken up with advertising signs.

FUTURE UNFAVORABLE

Ten years from now not much of the present beauty of these roads will remain if misuse continues at the present rapid rate.

Queer happenings, spending several hundred thousand dollars a year of motorist money to provide the things they paid for with pennies from gasoline taxes and motor license fees and then permitting much of that acquired to be immediately discounted at heavy rates.

This is a task for the people. When the people demand roadside control it can be had. And fortunately for Michigan she has the most compelling argument of all to use in the fight for necessary legislation, the argument of dollars and cents. In Michigan it can be proven to the most materialistic mind that beauty pays.

In the concluding chapter will be found a fair solution.

WE HAVE THE CREAM OF USED CAR VALUES

But we're selling them at SKIMMED-MILK PRICES

THE 1937 "swing to Ford" has brought the cream of the used car values to our used car displays — but even cream will "freeze" in cold weather. We don't want "frozen" used car assets on our hands until spring. We don't want to pay the cost of carrying them through the winter.

No, Sir!

We'd rather sell them now at lower prices and get liquid "cream" into our bank accounts.

SO —

We've brought used car prices down to the year's lowest levels! We're willing to pay you to buy now. We're offering our finest used cars, all makes and models, all better buys, renewed and guaranteed — at prices which represent a real winter bonus to smart used car buyers.

Prices reduced as much as $50.

Why put up with trouble, inconvenience and expense on your present car all winter? Why drive an increasingly inefficient car until it's lost its trade-in value?

WHY THROW AWAY THE USED CAR OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME?

Come in today. See the cars we're offering — see the price tags. Then drive away in a real bargain! Don't forget — Ford Dealers, and Ford Dealers only, offer R&G cars protected by the iron-bound R & G guarantee which says: Your money back if you're not absolutely satisfied.

MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

ONLY FORD DEALERS OFFER R & G VALUES

The only place you can buy a genuine R & G used car is at a Ford Dealer's. R & G means "renewed and guaranteed." Every R & G car is in splendid condition, and with the written Money-Back Guarantee over the dealer's signature, you can get back every penny you paid for it if you decide, within a reasonable period, that it isn't absolutely satisfactory. This is an extra value which costs you nothing. When you buy your used car, why not play safe? Go to a Ford Dealer's and invest your money in guaranteed value.

SHOP IN COMFORT AT YOUR FORD DEALER'S

Most Ford Dealers offer their truly outstanding used car bargains in undercover display space. Battery, water, gasoline and everything else needed are in the car to enable you to try it out the minute you see it.

4-H CLUB NEWS

92 CLUB LEADERS AND REPRESENTATIVES ATTEND CONFERENCE

The recent club leaders' training conference held in the dining room of the Charlevoix High School on Wednesday, February 10, proved to be the outstanding event of its kind held in the county.

This winter a large increase has taken place in 4-H club projects, which pretty largely indicated the development that 4-H club work makes possible. A very enjoyable banquet was served at 4:00 o'clock followed by introduction of guests and brief comments relative to the program by county agent Mellencamp. Then the group was divided into two smaller groups. One group being interested in the clothing project spent an hour and a half with Miss Lola Bell Green who presented material of constructive value to those participating. The second group met with Mr. O. F. Walker who devoted most of his time in a discussion of methods and types of finishing materials to use. He very capably demonstrated the various materials such as stains, shellac, varnishes and waxes that could be used. It was amazing to note the interest of the club leaders and representatives in making a success of their efforts.

The following schools in the county were represented at this conference: Tainter, Clarion, Deer Lake, East Jordan, Eveline Orchards, Ironton, Phelps, Norwood, Hilton, McGeagh, Marion Center, Horton Bay, Uindine, Hopyard, Murray, Bay Shore, North Bay, Lakeside, and Afton. Never before has such a fine group been enrolled in the various 4-H club projects, nor has so many communities organized to carry out program. It is particularly gratifying to note that there are 7 new communities with 4-H club projects that were not organized previously and that they rank with the best at the county in so far as their progress is concerned. Over 400 club members are actively working on their projects at the present time.

Michigan Sportsmen Being Gyped By An Old Racket

A new version of the old racket of "working my way through college," has taken away hundreds of dollars from Michigan sportsmen, according to the department of conservation.

A number of sportsmen's magazine "salesmen" have been circulating through the state selling subscriptions to hunters and fishermen giving the assumption that they are representing the department of conservation and that the money will help the state's conservation program. In several instances a conservation exhibit has been used as a lure to prospects.

A large number of sportsmen who purchased subscriptions and paid their money wrote indignantly to the conservation department wanting to know why they did not get their magazines. Publishers of two magazines represented by salesmen have requested persons buying such subscriptions to write directly to them giving the name of the salesman.

The Department of Conservation stated that it has not given its endorsement to any magazine. Subscriptions to its own publications are not solicited by agents.

FIFTY YEARS AGO the telephone in Michigan was a laboratory curiosity. Today it is the instrument of a tremendously valuable, widespread public service.

This development represents the practical working out of the vision of the telephone pioneers. Their crowed goal was — the best possible service at the lowest cost — consistent with financial safety. For half a century that policy has guided the telephone's destiny. It motivated every improvement and every expansion; it was behind all the many reductions in rates.

And that far-sighted policy applies just as strictly today as it did two generations ago.

Recalling the "Hero of Manila Bay"

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

IT WAS just 20 years ago that the word flashed over the wires from Washington, D. C., that a man named George Dewey had died there and immediately thousands of Americans recalled once more how that name had thrilled them one May morning back in 1898. For this man was the "Hero of Manila Bay" and his astounding victory in the far-off Philippines at the very beginning of the Spanish-American war had at once placed his name high in that galaxy of naval heroes which includes the names of John Paul Jones, Stephen Decatur, Oliver Hazard Perry and David Farragut.

This was the man for whom they had poured out a flood of adulation such as few other Americans had ever before received and few have known since.

They built a triumphal arch in his honor in New York city, they raised money to buy a house in Washington for him, and they presented him with a loving cup made from 70,000 dimes.

They made songs about him, such popular ballads as: "Twas on a dewy morning in the dewy month of May When a man named Dewey sailed into Manila bay."

They named their sons after him. (And if today you're introduced to a man whose first name is "Dewey," you're safe in guessing that he was born late in 1898 or early in 1899.)

And then these Americans who constitute The Public, which is consistent only in its inconsistency, proved once more its fickleness by turning against the man whose name they had flung against the stars. They didn't approve of his marrying again nor of his deeding his gift house to his young second wife. And when in response to what he understood was a popular demand, he announced his candidacy for the Presidency it was characterized as the "climax to a series of unfortunate mistakes," and the public that had once praised him now ridiculed him.

But this latter episode was forgotten when at sunset on January 16, 1917, he died. All the honors that man can give to a hero were his. There was a state funeral in the Capitol and burial in Arlington. The newspapers printed column upon column about his career and once more the name of the "Hero of Manila Bay" was on every American's lips.

It was thus for only a day or two. At that time Americans were facing the grim reality of their country's being drawn inevitably into the war then raging in Europe. Within three months after his burial in Arlington, America had gone in with the Allies, and under the shadow of this great conflict the war in which Dewey had won his fame grew more and more insignificant.

A Forgotten Hero.

Out of the World war came new heroes to be acclaimed and to the younger generation of Americans Admiral George Dewey became little more than a name in their school histories. And thus it has been for the last two decades.

But this year it will be heard again for America is preparing to celebrate the centennial of his birth. Vermont, and particularly its capital, Montpelier, where still leading back to Thomas Dewey, the first of that name, who came from England and landed at Boston in 1633. Among them was his great-grandfather, William Dewey, who was a Minute Man at the outbreak of the Revolution and later a corporal in the Continental army who served at Saratoga under General Gates.

William's son, Simeon, was born at Hebron, Conn., and died in Montpelier, Vt., at the age of ninety-three. Simeon Dewey made his impression on the life of Montpelier as justice of the peace and was one of the organizers of Dartmouth college who gave 50 acres of land for its use and support. Their son, Julius Y. Dewey, became a doctor.

John Barrett, biographer of Admiral Dewey, declares: "Dr. Julius Dewey explains the greatness of his son. He was great before him. He may not have won national fame, but his fellow citizens appreciated his sterling worth. He was an exceptional man. He was a rare development of the very best Vermont stock."

Graduated from Norwich college at the age of seventeen, young Dewey, even though there was no heritage of the sea in his ancestry, decided he wanted to go to the United States Naval academy at Annapolis and Dr. Dewey secured the appointment from Vermont for his son. At first, young Dewey's grades were not high but after a warning from both his stern father and his teachers he improved his scholarship and was graduated third in his class in 1858.

A Baptism of Fire.

In April, 1861, Midshipman Dewey was commissioned lieutenant and soon had his baptism of fire. For he was assigned to the steam frigate Mississippi in the West Coast squadron in the Gulf of Mexico which brought him under the command of David G. Farragut.

Dewey was on the Mississippi when it ran ashore at Fort Jackson, after losing its bearing in the smoke of battle. On swimming away from the ship, Lieut. Dewey, after the order to abandon her came, saved the life of a sailor from drowning at the risk of his own life and Captain Smith in his report spoke of his bravery and coolness.

When the Civil war ended Dewey was a lieutenant-commander, a high rank for a young man of twenty-eight. Next he was stationed at the navy yard in Portsmouth, N. H., and there he met and fell in love with Susie, the daughter of Gov. Ichabod Goodwin. They were married in 1867.

In 1873 Dewey became the father of a son but it cost the life of the little boy's mother. Inconsolable over his loss, Dewey asked for a distant tour of duty so that he might forget his sor-involved that by the fall of 1897 war with Spain seemed imminent. Commodore Dewey was in Washington at the time and his request to take command of the Pacific fleet had just been granted. Shortly before leaving the capital he happened one day to meet one of the justices of the Supreme court on the street, who said to him: "Commodore, it looks as though the Spanish war were coming."

"It certainly does," was Dewey's answer. "I suppose," said the justice, "that the first battle will be fought at Havana."

"No," said the commodore, "it will be fought at Manila."

"What do you mean?" said the justice, to which Dewey replied:

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY

"If I have anything to do with, I shall sail over in the night and capture Manila before breakfast."

That there was another man who had the same idea is shown by the cablegram which Dewey received at Hongkong, China, on February 25, 1898 from the vigorous young assistant secretary of the navy named Theodore Roosevelt. It read: "In the event of war with Spain, you will capture or destroy the Spanish ships in those waters and operate in the Philippines." Dewey was ready and waiting for just some such message as that. Although war had not yet been formally declared, this gave him a free hand to fight the Spaniard when and where he found him.

So with hands playing "The Star Spangled Banner," Dewey's squadron put out to sea from Hong Kong and headed for Manila, where, on May 1, 1898, in one of the shortest naval engagements in history, he destroyed the Spanish fleet without having a single man killed or suffering serious injury to any of the American ships. Next the Spanish navy yard at Cavite fell and the power of Spain in the East was ended for all time.

The Nation Is Thrilled.

The news of the victory at Manila thrilled the nation as had no other event for many a year. Immediately there was a demand for prompt and official recognition of Dewey's feat. President McKinley appointed him an acting rear admiral and in a message to congress on May 9, 1898, recommended that the thanks of congress be given to the victor of Manila. Not only was this done but, in addition, congress voted that a handsome jeweled sword be presented to Dewey by the government.

When the new rear admiral came back to the United States in 1899 the sword was presented to him by the President at an impressive ceremony in front of the Capitol in the presence of a cheering throng of thousands of people. It bore the arms of Vermont and the United States, and had the initials "G. D." outlined in diamonds.

In March, 1899, Dewey was made Admiral of the Navy, the highest rank ever held by any American naval officer, Farragut and Porter having been admirals only. From March 29, 1900, to the time of his death Dewey was president of the general board of the navy and a familiar figure on the streets of Washington as one of its most beloved citizens—despite the temporary eclipse of his popularity following his marriage and the announcement of his candidacy for President.

A Beautiful Young Widow. Dewey's second wife was the daughter of Washington McLean, Cincinnati publisher, who had been not only a friend of Lincoln and Grant but of Jefferson Davis as well. She had married Gen. John B. Hazen, who had served in the Union army, while still very young and she was a still youthful and altogether charming widow when Dewey, who had met her in Washington years before, returned to his triumph in the capital. Before long the gossips were linking the names of the elderly naval hero and the young widow and predicting their marriage.

Partly because of a prejudice against Mrs. Hazen's religious affiliations, partly because of her social ambitions and partly because of a feeling that it was somehow undignified for the "Hero of Manila Bay" to marry a woman much younger than he was, the public disapproved of the match. Heedless of this disapproval Dewey went ahead and married Mrs. Hazen. The public might have forgiven him for thus deciding that his marriage was his, and not the public's, affair but when he decided to his wife the house in Washington which had been bought by popular subscription, popular resentment flamed high.

Then on the morning of April 4, 1900, the New York World printed an interview with Dewey in which he said in part: "If the American people want me for this high office (of President) I shall be only too willing to serve them. . . . Since studying this subject I am convinced that the office of President is not such a very difficult one to fill, his duties being mainly to execute the laws of Congress."

Dewey had been approached on the subject of being a candidate for President but had disclaimed any such ambition. However, a "Stop Bryan!" element in the Democratic party had persisted in promoting his candidacy. At last he had yielded to the temptation and made his ill-advised announcement which resulted in much ridicule being heaped upon his head.

However, the fickle public soon forgot, as it always does, that George Dewey had ever been anything less than the great hero it had once hailed back in 1898-99. His last years with his wife were idyllically happy until that day in January, 1917, when he contracted a cold. Put to bed by his doctor, he grew gradually worse, mostly with the illness which he humorously described as "anno domini."

It is said that as he lay half-conscious he began to fight over once more the battles of his life and, as though he were giving commands from the bridge of the Mississippi at New Orleans or the Olympia at Manila, his voice rang out with some of its old-time resonance until Death stilled it at last.

His body was first entombed temporarily in the mausoleum of Gen. Nelson A. Miles at Arlington, then moved, with military and naval honors, to another Arlington tomb which his widow had built. Later it was removed to the Bethlehem chapel at Mount St. Alban, Washington, and finally given its last resting place in the Washington cathedral—the American equivalent of a combined Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's. In these four entombments there is a strange analogy between the careers of Dewey and another American naval hero. For John Paul Jones was given three temporary burials before his body was finally laid to rest in the chapel crypt at Annapolis.

We've a Date to Sew!

OH GRACE, before you go—you're not in a hurry, are you—notice Mabel's slip.

Isn't that the one that you were telling the girls about at the Bid-Or-Bi club last week, Mabel?

Yes, it's my Sew-Your-Own and I'm real proud of it because it fits so smoothly. There's no bunchiness at the waistline or hips—it's fitted, you see—and yet there's lots of room around the bottom. And do you know how long it took me to make it—no self praise, but exactly two hours by the clock. I simply followed the pattern's instruction chart—as easy to do as to concoct a new dessert.

Tie, Buttons, Hat to Match. It would be grand for a tailored dress like mine, wouldn't it, Mabel?

Just the thing! Are you off to the Civic League luncheon at the Hall? Your dress made up beautifully in that aquamarine, Grace. I'm crazy about it. The yoke-and-sleeves-in-one idea is swell and the black tie and buttons to match your hat make you look like Mrs. Merriweather herself.

Now, now, cut the rave. You know that neat-but-not-gaudy is my motto. Bye, I'll see you in print.

So long . . . Anne, since you like my slip so much, I'll be glad to help you make one like it, if you want me to.

That's lovely of you, Mabel, but would that sort of thing be right for a "Stylish Stout" like me? You should hear George when I call myself a "Stylish Stout." He says I flatter myself.

That Slenderizing Effect.

Leave it to the men! This slip would be especially good for you, Anne, because it's fitted and, George or no George, you look stylish in that dress you're wearing—but you DON'T look stout. The panel in front breaks the skirt line, and the jabot and collar do wonders for the "Buz-zum." It would be grand made up in a flowered print for Spring, Anne.

That very idea occurred to me. Why don't we get together tomorrow afternoon and sew—are you game? Come to my house. I baked a batch of oatmeal cookies today.

It's a date, Anne, I'll be over in the morning as soon as the kids are off to school.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is resultant of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headaches, attacks of dizziness, swelling up night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feet tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a drastic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. What Irwin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Drift of Scotland.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.— So high an authority as the Associated Press gives out a dispatch stating that Scotland is drifting toward America at the rate of eight feet a year.

This would be an excuse for the unthoughtful to say that the Scots always had a reputation for being close and now are becoming still closer.

To me, though, the main question is whether Scotland is going to bring England along with her. Among themselves, at least, the Scots have always had the reputation of bringing England along through the centuries. And if you don't believe it ask Irwin S. Cobb any true Scot. He stands ready to offer supporting dates, names and statistics.

By the way, I've noticed one outstanding difference between the two greatest groups of the Celtic race. To an Irishman's face you can joke about Ireland and he remains calm. But poke fun at an individual Irishman and you are hunting for trouble—and probably will soon be hunting for a doctor. Inversely you may jibe a Scot and get away with it. But just say the least little thing in derision of his native land and you'd better start running.

So-Called Modern Art.

I GUESS I must belong to a most ancient species—indeed, an almost vanished species. It's true I'm not quite old enough to remember when they shot Indians where the city hall now stands and Peggy Hopkins Joyce was called Love Apples. But I do date back to where a painting was expected, remotely, at least, to resemble the object it purported to represent.

I lived through the early stages of the artistic revolt—primitives, ultramodernists, post-impressionists, cubists, dadaists and so on—without ever becoming reconciled to the prevalent idea that a canvas apparently depicting a bundle of laths coming undone was supposed to be a nude lady's portrait, or that a spirited rendition of a yellow cat having an epileptic fit in a mess of tomato-soup was an Italian sunset.

Lately I've seen examples of the latest school—the surrealist school. And if the practitioners of this form of beauty are artists, then I'm a kind-faced old Swiss watch mender. They're actually giving certain of these geniuses medals. What they ought to give 'em is something for their respective livers.

Uncle Sam the Spendthrift.

WELL, we were good fellows while we had it, weren't we? We destroyed our forests. Result: Up water courses.

We indulged in an orgy of so-called "reclamation" schemes to drain unneeded swamplands, thereby destroying the breeding grounds and the natural resting places of emigrating wild fowl so that the once vast flocks are gone, probably forever.

We wasted our heritage of wild game, formerly a great factor in food supply aside from being a source of healthful joy to gunners. We needlessly polluted our streams.

But we're a resourceful race; give us credit for that. Now, through speed madness and drunken driving, we're preying merrily on human life. It's getting so that the citizen who insists on dying a natural death, instead of waiting for some mad wag of a road-hog to mow him down, can be regarded only as a spoilsport.

Cruelty to Wild Life.

SOMETIMES women are almost as inconsistent as men—which is a frightful indictment to bring against any sex.

As a boy, I remember being severely lectured by a lady for robbing birds' nests—a lady whose nodding hat was crowned with at least four stuffed meadowlarks.

A few years ago, I saw women prominent in humane movements and good deeds, like that woman of the Scriptures—who was called Dorcas—saw these women wearing the smuggled and forbidden argettes of the snowy heron, even though they must have known that each pitiable feathered wisp meant a cruel murder and a brood of fledglings left to starve. I still see these argettes being worn—against the law of the land and the greater law of common humanity.

And only lately, at a meeting to forward the prevention of cruelty to dumb beasts, I saw women swathed in their earlobes in furs of mink and otter. Seemingly they had forgotten that the animals whose pelts they wore had died in steel traps by slow degrees of infinite torture. Or maybe they didn't care.

The Rogues' Gallery JULIAN STREET and a Job He Once Had

"Welcome home, sir," I said as I entered.

By JULIAN STREET

I USED to believe that the politicians were unjust in attacking the big corporations; also I used to fall for the idea that executives of these big companies were men of great ability; but after my brief experience with the telegraph company I know better.

I got my job with the telegraph company through J. W. Pennigrew, Vice-President in Charge of Holiday and Anniversary Form Messages. Mr. Pennigrew is Madge's uncle and he said he was hiring me partly so that when I earned some money Madge and I could marry and partly because he liked some verses I had written for the CCC paper.

He said there was room for improvement in the form messages put out by the company to help people with their Christmas, New Year, birthday and other holiday telegrams.

"We desire to increase this class of business," he told me. "With your talent for rhyme you should be able to put more life into our holiday messages. You are to compose new messages to fit every circumstance and every shade of taste. I shall be away for several weeks and I expect you to have a lot of new material to show me on my return."

Julian Goes to Work.

St. Valentine's Day was close at hand, Washington's Birthday would soon follow, and meanwhile the American people were having birthdays at the rate of 328,937 per day, or 2,302,559 per week. Mr. Pennigrew would not be back for a fortnight.

I determined to act. Having shown my productions to Madge who confirmed my high opinion of them, I sent them to the printer with an order for a million booklets to be published at once and rushed to the company's many offices throughout the land. Thus Mr. Pennigrew, when he returned, would not have to read my manuscript and would find the whole job done.

That he would suitably reward me I did not doubt. On the day of his arrival I saw to it that one of my new booklets was placed conspicuously upon his desk, and I was not surprised when, soon after he came in, I was summoned to his private office.

"Welcome home, sir," I said as I entered. Apparently he did not hear. He was fingering the pages of my booklet and I stood there for some moments before he looked up.

"As a matter of curiosity," he said, "I should like to ask if you are pleased with these productions." "I am proud of them, Mr. Pennigrew, and I may add that—"

Spirit of Christmas.

"Don't add anything," he interrupted. "That would be too much. Just answer a few questions. For example tell me what is your idea about this Christmas message Number seven."

The message he mentioned read as follows: If I were to send you a Christmas check I know that you'd be in a huff; no matter how large the amount might be.

You'd think it wasn't enough. It seems, then, less costly to rouse your ire By sending this cheap little Christmas wire.

"That, sir," I explained, "is designed for complaining relatives." "And what are your views about Number eleven?" he pursued. "It is designed," I told him, "to be sent by sons and daughters whose widowed fathers are getting too lively."

I read the verse aloud: "Merry Christmas, dear Father, But please to remember It's a horrible mess To mate June and December. Though a bright little blond May be lively and funny It's a hundred to one that She's after your money."

Rhymes With Delicious.

Without comment Mr. Pennigrew turned to another page and read aloud one of my brief birthday formulas:

"I send you my best birthday wishes Along with love and many kisses." "Wishes and 'kisses,'" he murmured. "Would you call that a proper rhyme?"

"Oh, yes, sir. In the manner of Ogden Nash. You'll find similar Nash rhymes in my messages of condolence Numbers 84 and 85. Number 84 begins: "I deeply mourn your Uncle Carroll Who drank his whiskey by the barroll, And when the cask was—" "Stop!" Mr. Pennigrew cried. "I've read it!" "I like Number 85 even better, sir."

"I deeply mourn your Uncle Abbott Who, though he had the liquor habit, Was e'er a man of perfect meekness Except when mastered by his weakness."

Better and Better.

Mr. Pennigrew was staring at me strangely. "Have any members of your family been—well, let us say peculiar?" he inquired.

"Father struck me as a little bit that way," I said. "How was his peculiarity manifested?"

"He didn't want me to write verse, sir." "Ah," murmured Mr. Pennigrew, "I should have liked to know your father. And now, as to yourself. Have you ever had trouble with your head?"

"Yes, sir. My hair comes out. I have tried all kinds of hair tonic but I haven't—"

"Have you ever thought of trying a horse pistol? This Valentine message, Number 244. I don't comprehend it at all. Perhaps you can explain what you were driving at?" And he read aloud:

"Ah, Valentine, when e'er I breathe thy name, The tender sweetness of it leaves me awed; And yet I breathe it o'er and o'er again.

In lover's accents low: Thy name is Mud."

"That is a typographical error, sir," I said. "The name should of course be Maud, not Mud. I don't think it matters, though. People will realize that it ought to rhyme with 'awed' and will see what was intended, especially as there is no such name as Mud."

"That's where you're wrong!" he bellowed. "Your name is Mud, see?" He seized a pile of papers from his desk and flung them at me. "Get out of my sight! Get out of this office!"

"Mr. Pennigrew," I declared with dignity, "I resign."

Being Afraid of the Dark

By Audrey C. Hayden

AS FAR back as I can remember I never was afraid of the dark. When I became a mother, I believed that there was no reason why any child should be afraid, and that if fear were never suggested in connection with darkness, it wouldn't occur to the child to be afraid. Darkness is a natural phenomenon, I reasoned, and one of which babies are not afraid.

Applying this theory, all went well with my own little girl, until something unfortunate happened. Either someone complimented my little three-year-old on her bravery, shown in going up to bed alone, or someone told an alarming story, or someone—well, no matter I don't know how it happened. This I do know: Jane began to say she was afraid of the dark—that frogs would get her.

Believe Fear Is Expected.

Now I really believe that most cases of fear of the dark on the part of children have no deep-rooted reason. When there is such a reason, if it can be found, of course very careful consideration should be given to reconditioning. But most children fear the dark because they have somehow imbibed the idea that it is rather expected of them—that if they are not afraid they are very brave, but if they are afraid it is nothing to be wondered at. The child having acquired the fear, there are two popular methods for exercising it. One is to attempt to get back to the original cause and explain that away; the second to overcome it by setting up artificial bravery.

I tried to reason with Jane, and showed her pictures of frogs to let her see how small they are, and also made a lot of "brave talk" about "a great big girl like you." But my efforts had no effect. Jane just cried and clung to my dress, and pulled me along with her to bed or the bathroom. She wasn't brave and wasn't going to be talked into it.

It seemed best to accede quietly. I took her to the bathroom and to bed for two or three weeks, and I did it as a matter of course. I made it a point, also, to walk from room to room without a light as soon as she was in bed. After going downstairs I would come up on an imaginary errand, and walk about again in the darkness. On several occasions, a little before bedtime, we took walks together, and sometimes we went down cellar in the dark, but always without any mention of its being dark.

When she spoke of frogs I said yes, I could see them too—that it was fun to be able to imagine things, wasn't it? And the best part was that since they weren't real, you could stop imagining them whenever you wanted to. Darkness Is Ordinary Condition.

Then one day I felt very ill and spent the day lying on the couch. When night came and Jane wanted to go to the bathroom I called her over and said, "Now, Jane, Mother is sick, so you will have to go alone." And she said, "Yes." "It will be dark in there, do you understand? And I cannot come in if you call me to turn on the light," I explained. She thought a minute and then said, "All right." When bedtime came, I undressed her and sent her up to bed alone, and then casually sent another member of the family up on an errand. Jane had the idea, though, that I was sending her alone to bed, and that the company and the light were merely incidental.

The next night I went to the bathroom, ostensibly to get something, making it appear accidental that I went when Jane was there. Then I sent her off to bed alone, casually. The next night I sent her to the bathroom and to bed in the dark without comment, and it has been a regular occurrence ever since. Did we get at the root of the trouble? That's hard to say since I never found out the beginning of the fear, but we made the dark into a very ordinary, matter-of-fact condition. —National Kindergarten Ass'n.

Constitution of the Student League

1. There shall be a student league composed of all high school students who make written applications for membership. Active members may vote and be eligible for office. An active member shall be defined as a student whose dues (.10 a semester) shall be reported on the records of the treasurer as paid.

2. There shall be a student council consisting of president, vice president, secretary and a representative from each class, elected for one semester from the league at large (eighth grade excluded). This council, sitting in conference with the faculty advisor chosen by its own members shall represent the league in all matters concerning the rights and duties of students.

3. The council shall be authorized to appoint such committees as may be agreed upon by the league in conference with the faculty.

4. There shall be a meeting of the league once each month, conducted by the president.

5. Each election shall be preceded by written nominations for several officers, not less than two days in advance of the actual election. No meeting is required for these nominations but the results should be left in charge of the faculty advisor.

6. Amendments to these rules of order may be effected by a two-thirds vote of the whole council (sitting in conference with the advisor.)

WHEN IN NEED OF ANYTHING IN MY LINE, CALL IN AND SEE ME.

There a young-romantic looking fellow in the tenth grade. Who has blond hair blue eyes, is rather tall and light complexioned.

He is always seen at every dance, providing any Boyne City girls will be there. He always says he likes Boyne but its doubtful about the city.

His hobbies are dancing and driving. It has been said that at one time or another he smashed up a perfectly good car.

He lives inside the city limits and does not walk far to school.

Watch next week's column for the name.

NATURE STUDY NOTES

Last week the fourth grade had the pleasure of watching a pair of Evening Grosbecks on the corner of the high school building. The Grosbecks stayed there quite awhile and the pupils studied them very carefully.

They also have a "wasps" nest on their nature study table.

The pupils have finished their health charts and have received their Health Pins.

SENIORS BEGIN WORK ON PLAY

The cast has already has been selected for the Senior Play, "Through The Keyhole." This, as the name implies, is a sparkling modern comedy with an abundance of clever dialogues. It was presented by the Dramatic Society of the University of Minnesota with the following criticisms: "The play was a marvelous success from the standpoint of response on the part of the audience, and financial returns. The audience responded with 216 laughs during the performance, and gate receipts surpassed those of any play we have presented."

It will be staged at the high school auditorium Friday, March 19. Keep this date in mind and watch for further announcements later.

EDITORIAL

"Students Want Better Assemblies"

Why is it that most of the students in East Jordan no longer get the thrill out of the assemblies that they did when they were beginners in the larger upper building, or would just as soon take their subjects as to have an hour omitted for an assembly?

The assemblies are always the same old way, it seems.

It's a bore to have a pep meeting with no pep, and after all, it is the duty of everyone to try to help put some into it. The trouble seems to be partly due to the fact that most of the students who are not "tops" in their classes feel their particular efforts and appearances are not necessary or desired to any supreme degree.

Don't misunderstand, the students want assemblies, but better ones.

The faculty and student body should cooperate in a desire to put on bigger and better programs, and when this has been accomplished all stick together and make the biggest and better the biggest and best.

Two of these assemblies of this year's group are worthy of particular attention, not particularly because of their subject matter, but for the manner in which they were presented.

Mr. Cross represents the type of assembly the students like for entertainment, and Mr. Fry of Traverse City gave the most interesting talk on the subject of drinking and smoking ever heard in this high school if the students' own decision counts for anything.

The students would like more assemblies with a greater degree of knowledge, entertainment, and pep.

SENIORS WHO'S WHO

Francis Cain

On April 25, 1919 a girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. William John Cain whom they named Francis Billie. At that time they lived in Nashwauke, Minnesota. She has attended many schools in her 12 years. She attended schools in Minnesota until she was a fourth grader, then she moved to Michigan. She went to the Boyne City school until she was in the 8th grade and from then on in East Jordan. Her favorite subjects are English and History. The ones she dislikes most are Latin and Mathematics. Her favorite sports are hiking, camping out, and fishing.

Lorena Brintnall

Lorena Josephine Brintnall was born in East Jordan, May 19, 1919. She started school in 1926. When she was in the fourth grade she attended school in Mancelona.

She was been in the orchestra five years, and she was in the glee club one year.

She is fond of orchestra, debating, and of Arthur.

She has been very interested in the 4H Club. She has been a member for five years, and she has shown some remarkable work in that line.

She hopes to attend the M. S. C. after graduation, which everyone hopes she will be able to do.

A NEW ORCHESTRA

The high school was somewhat surprised last Friday when Mr. Roberts introduced to the student body an electric phonograph. It seems that the school is planning on buying one to use in the place of an orchestra at the dances.

The Juniors made good use of it at the dance after the Charlevoix game and for once they really made a little money, at least, they couldn't go in the hole.

AN INTERESTING PROJECT

The Sixth Grade has an art Board, and on it, it has a big valentine. Each important man whose birthday is this month gets his name on the Valentine. On the Art Board are pictures of these men.

They have received some first hand information on the floods. Paul Wilken, accompanied by his parents, was at Cincinnati during the floods. Paul told the class of some of his thrilling experiences there.

This grade has formed itself into a Presidential Club with Gerald Green as president and Elizabeth Penfold as secretary. They also appointed committees to choose a motto, colors, yell, and also a program committee. They are also going to write a song and the music is to be chosen by the committee.

ROYALTY REIGNS

Again the class of '38' has sponsored another stirring event. This time they have given a coronation and dance in honor of East Jordan's Winter Queen, Miss Phyllis Bulow.

Wednesday evening, February 17th at 8:30 those who wished to come to the high school gym, which was transformed into a winter lodge, and saw the Queen's coronation and enjoyed the evening dancing to the music of Weststaff's Orchestra.

Nothing like this had ever been done before and the Juniors worked hard to make it a success. Those on the decorating committee were Fred Lewis, Martie Clark, Bud Porter, Clare Wade. On the advertising committee were Kathryn Kitsman, Rebecca Bowman, and Shirley Bulow.

On the refreshment committee were Jeanne Stroebel, Anna Jean Sherman. The admission was .35 and a couple .60.

COMMERCIAL NEWS

The first year shorthand students are working on their O.G.A. certificates that are going to be sent into the Gregg Company to be judged for shorthand penmanship.

The first year Typing students are doing fine, some of the students typing 30-35 words per minute with few errors.

The following are the students that type 30-35 words per minute:
Artie Houtman Clifford Gibbard
Francis Lenoskey Doris Weldy
Dorothy Bosworth

The second year shorthand and typing students are to start their office experience next week under direction of Miss Staley. The Commercial Party was Monday.

OBSERVATIONS

This weather!
Was the band concert too much for you, Mr. Terwee? Or was a cold the reason why we didn't have band practice the next day?

Most pupils (and teachers too) are glad we don't have state inspectors every day.

Mr. Roberts and his one man orchestra really aren't bad.

The French class missed Miss Kjellander when she was ill last week.

It seems unnatural to have all the pencil sharpeners in working order.

Why doesn't someone lend Louise and Bob a pair of boxing gloves so they can fight and get it over with?

The violin program (sponsored by the Methodist Church Choir) proved to be well worth listening to. All pieces were played from memory.

What! No Pep Meeting before the last home game of the season!

Will these Latin students ever stop writing in their books?

The Ball sponsored by the Junior Class proved to be some event.

What a Sociology test, Mr. Roberts!

The Seniors are still wondering about their pictures.

VALENTINE DAYS ARE HERE

Three girls of the fourth and fifth grades made their valentine box. (The other elementary grades made valentine boxes too.)

They are making maps of the United States. In these maps they are putting the capitals and states. When these are finished they are going to make maps and place the rivers and mountains on them.

The pupils are having a race, trying to see who can bring the most flood pictures. Lyle Wilson has 105 pictures and Mary Simmons has 96.

"Murder at the Milan", another Scotland Yard thriller by E. Phillips Oppenheim appears in This Week, the colorgraveure magazine with next Sunday's Detroit News. Don't fail to read it.

Infant Mortality In District No. 3 By Cause And Age

During the past year there occurred in District Health Department No. 3, composed of the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, 52 deaths in the "under one" infant age group. One half of this number was under one month of age, indicating that infant mortality is highest at this age of life. Premature birth took 17 babies and oddly enough the same number died prematurely in 1935. Pneumonia ranked second with 10 infant deaths comparing with the same number in 1935. Other causes were comparatively the same as the previous year.

Col. 1, under one month.
Col. 2, one to 12 months
Col. 3, total.

Cause	1	2	3
Premature Birth	15	2	17
Pneumonia	1	9	10
Congenital Malformations	3	1	4
Other Diseases of Infancy	3	0	3
Diarrhea & Enteritis	1	2	3
Congenital Debility	1	2	3
Diseases of Thymus Gland	2	0	2
Influenza	0	2	2
Peritonitis	0	1	1
Measles	0	1	1
Cause Ill-Specified	0	1	1
Accidental	0	1	1
Apoplexy	0	1	1
Meningitis	0	1	1
Convulsions	0	1	1
Heart Disease	0	1	1

Totals 26 26 52

The mortality rate is comparatively lower this year than in 1934 and 1935 but higher than it was in 1932 and 1933. The rate for 1936 was 55.5; in 1932 it was 49.3; in 1933 it was 50.8; in 1934 it was 59.6; and in 1935 it was 57.1. These rates are based on 1,000 live births.

Prenatal care of the expectant mother bears great influence on the infant mortality of a community. By encouraging and urging the mother to visit her family physician early and regularly she not only safeguards her own health but that of the infant. Also the encouragement of breast feeding of the new-born baby aids the little one to gain strength rapidly and thus combat any illnesses that tend to attack the younger age groups.

Your County Nurse and the District Health Department at Charlevoix have a variety of helpful pamphlets on the care of the infant and will gladly supply you on request.
