'Twas a Great Gala Event

THOUSANDS ENJOY SMELT JAMBOREE AT EAST JORDAN

With March the 20th now as a day of the past, local and visiting sportsmen can now look back on the greatest celebration ever held in the history of Smeltium. More than 3,000 persons were on hand to see Jack VanCoevering, Detroit outdoor sports writer, crowned King Jacob I of Smeltium succeeding Ike Hyams of Cincinnati. The coronation was given with all the pomp and ceremony given to such an event. Ike Hyams was on hand to present the crown to the new ruler. Rev. John Cermak, was Lord High Chamberlain with Merle Crowell as the Herald. King Jacob, clothed in beautiful robes, received the honor as the crowd cheered. Claude Pearsall and Sheriff Floyd Ikens were the kings guardsmen. The King's high court was composed of Dr. G. W. Bechtold, Dr. F. P. Ramsey and Joe Bugai of this city and Dr. W. R. Barney of Grand Rapids.

Early Saturday morning crowds began to gather on the street. At 1:00 o'clock a free excursion by train was run to Pine Ridge virgin white pine forest, with the compliments of the East Jordan Lumber Company. The afternoon entertainment began with the singing of old time songs by the Loper family of Central Lake. Clown acts began to form upon the street. Bill Kenny gave many clown acts, followed by the coming of the Lone Ranger (Ed. Ager) riding on an old plug (horse) singing a song. Boxing acts were then run off by Abe Cohn and recreational workers M. Cihak and C. Dennis. Four bouts were staged, one a rough and tumble affair which was greatly enjoyed.

Then who do you think appeared on the street? No, not the President, wrong again; Not the Governor, not Babe Ruth. Oh, you better give up—it was Newaygo Newt in person to run off his now highly publicized National Spitting Contest; with Joe Bugai, George Secord and Gayle Saxton, assisting as judges. Dr. Ramsey was on hand to see that it was fit to be held. He also brought some disinfectant along to prevent spread of germs. Among the contestants who entered were Ernie Head of Coley Lake; Earnest Higbee, Ed. Wood and Joe Weller of East Jordan, Kenneth Usher of Charlevoix and Dr. Barney of Grand Rapids, with several others too numerous to mention. A china cupid was awarded Ernie Head of Coley Lake as a token to the honor of being the best spitter in the U.S.A. A granite cupid was given Kenneth Usher of Charlevoix who was second. Dr. Barney of Grand Rapids, third place winner, received a small wash tub.

The lumbering scenes were then demonstrated with Harry Saxton in charge. Two large trucks were loaded, one with the chain gang and the other with the jammer. The chain gang was composed of Ed. Hosler and Ray Collins as loaders, George Jones as top loader and Ed. Kaley as teamster doing the cross hauling. The jammer gang was made up of Bert Bennett and Russell Bailey as hookers, George Bailey as top loader with Herb Sweet as teamster doing the cross hauling.

Dinty LaLonde, commander-in-chief, and Lyle Murray, his assistant, then brought his parade up Main St. The following is the order in which floats and participants appeared in the parade. Leading the parade was John Ter Wee with his East Jordan High School Band; Ernie Head, Kenneth Usher and Dr. Barney, respective winners of the Newaygo Newt Spitting Contest, carrying their trophies; two truck loads of logs driven by George Jones and Russell Bailey. Atop the first load was Phyllis Bulow, East Jordan Winter Sports Queen, with Ruth Clark, Shirley Bulow, Eva Dennis (Belle of the Blizzard) and Ruth Darbee in winter togs. Paul Bunyon (Ed Swoboda) and son (Charles Saxton) dipping smelt with appropriate-sized nets, Paul emptying in a keg. Indian (Andrew Alken) in full costume, on foot, carrying bow and arrows and giving war dance at intervals. A logging unit team with drag teams and skidding tongs. Float with men playing cards in the cook shanty, with a stove burning in the rear. A group of singing cowboys. The Loper family of Central Lake singing old time tunes. Indian in full costume on horseback. The Martins trailer of small children. Truck. Model T Ford with Amos and Andy with Lightning. Two on horseback. A float with camp and tent. Old time front wheel wagon. Four on horseback. Frank Addis and threshing crew with grain separator. Newaygo Newt on a float giving exhibitions of fancy spitting with his black cat Tobias at his feet. An old dilapidated Model T Ford with more clowns. A pony. Two clowns on foot. Two clowns trying to ride a bucking burro. Burro pulling old woman on cart. A pair of goats.

At 6:30 came the stag banquet attended by some 300 sportsmen. Newaygo Newt acting as toastmaster.

ATTY E. N. CLINK PASSES IN HIS 78th YEAR

Last Saturday morning East Jordan was called upon to mourn the death of Elisha N. Clink, who had been an outstanding citizen of Northern Michigan for over fifty-five years. Mr. Clink was born June 16, 1859 near Warwick in the Province of Ontario, Canada. When he was eight years of age his parents moved to Michigan and made this State their permanent home.

On March 28, 1880 he was married to Miss Alice Copeland, of Millington, Michigan. Mrs. Clink is a cousin of U. S. Senator Copeland of the State of New York. Three children gladdened their home: Archie, of Oakland, California; Lella M., of East Jordan; and Ray who died March 10, 1910.

In the fall of 1882 Mr. and Mrs. Clink moved to Boyne City where they lived for two years. In 1884 they came to East Jordan where they have since made their home.

Mr. Clink's first work in East Jordan was the establishment of the first newspaper published in the city, the East Jordan Enterprise. A disastrous fire cut short his career as a newspaper man. He then worked in stores and taught school until July 16, 1890 when he was admitted to the Bar as a lawyer accredited to practice in all the State Courts of Michigan. On September 11, 1903 he was admitted to practice law in all Federal Courts. At that time this was considered an unusual honor, attained only by lawyers of recognized outstanding ability.

Mr. Clink served two terms as Prosecuting for Charlevoix County, and he filled two terms as Postmaster of East Jordan. For a number of years he was senior partner of the law firm of Clink and Williams. The practice of this firm reached into almost every section of the State and Mr. Clink was known as the best trial lawyer north of Grand Rapids. At the time of his death Mr. Clink was senior member of the firm of Clink and Rueling.

Mr. Clink was a passionate lover of books. His law library, in respect both to quality and quantity, was listed among the selected best of the State. From its beginning Mr. Clink was an interested and valuable member of the City Library Board until his resignation, caused by failing health, a few weeks ago.

In the days of his health he took an active part and a keen interest in everything of a civic nature. He loved children and it was a delight to him to do everything in his power to make them happy. He was always considerate of the aged. He took a special interest in securing and safeguarding the interests of the veterans and their widows of the Civil War. He was a member of the fraternity of Knights of Pythias.

In the death of Mr. Clink East Jordan mourns the passing of an outstanding citizen who was an important factor in making East Jordan known throughout the State.

The funeral service was held at the residence Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. C. W. Sidebotham. Burial was at Sunset Hill.

Among those present from out of the city for the funeral were Archie Clink, the son from Oakland, California; and the following nephews and nieces: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Clink of Brown City, Mr. and Mrs. George Muir of Flint, Russell Clink of Flint, Bruce Clink of Detroit, Mrs. Florence Davis of Port Huron, Mrs. Jennie Duckert of Sandusky and Miss Lella Green of Brown City.

The County Court House at Charlevoix was closed for the funeral and the county officers attended in a body. Circuit Judge Farm C. Gilbert, of Traverse City, was also present to pay his respect to the memory of Mr. Clink.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and sincere appreciation to neighbors and friends for their kindness and sympathy shown in our recent bereavement, the death of our husband and father, and also for the beautiful flowers.

Mrs. Joe Moore
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Moore

King Jacob and several other noted sportsmen gave short talks. This was followed with a display of fireworks setting off the Charge of the Light Brigade. About 4000 dippers lining the banks of the Jordan. A Smelters Ball was held with a good crowd attending.

Through the sincere co-operation of all committees, the Smelt Jamboree this year was the greatest ever yet held. The commander-in-chief of the parade, Dinty LaLonde, wishes to thank Loyal Murray, Teddy Kotowich, and all those who helped for their untiring efforts and sincere co-operation in making the parade a success.

SCOUT MOVEMENT AIMS

Scout Troop No. 1 of East Jordan has just completed three years of its existence. Though not a long life, still the longest life of any scout troop in the history of East Jordan. The leaders are proud of this one thing. However it is felt that one of the drawbacks to a greater success has been the fact that the idea of scouting has not really been sold to the community. Therefore the leaders wish to explain a few of the aims and purposes of the scout movement with the hope that scouting will be better understood and appreciated in East Jordan.

Scouting is essentially a game that attempts to teach boys those worthwhile things which go to make up the character of a loyal United States citizen.

A scout troop is non-sectarian, but boys of all religions are invited to become members.

It is not a military organization. Some drill is taught in the program for the purpose of promoting neatness and better carriage and to facilitate the easy movement of the troop as a unit.

Other things that an advanced scout is required to know are as follows:—Swimming, first aid to the injured, thrift, some code of signals, cooking, map making, proper use of an axe or other wood-working tools, some floriculture, simple astronomy, and some means of distance measurement.

The leaders of East Jordan Troop No. 1 ask the co-operation of all those interested in the boys, to help at every opportunity to make scouting a success.

Farmers Interested In Muck Soils To Meet Wednesday, March 31

In order to be of service to the many farmers in this county who have areas of muck soil that is being used for crop production, an all day session will be held in the Boyne City Library on Wednesday, March 31, beginning promptly at 10:00 and continuing on through the afternoon.

A feature of the forenoon session will be the opportunity given farmers to bring in samples of muck soil to be tested for mineral content. Contrary to general opinion, all muck soil is not highly productive. Neither is muck soil always sweet. We urge you to bring in samples of all soil so that Mr. Harmer can advise what kind of fertilizer to use, how much, and how to apply it.

Shortly after 1:00 o'clock slides will be shown which will emphasize the various points that should be considered in the profitable use of muck soils. It will pay you big dividends to spend this day with Mr. Harmer if you are cropping muck land or have areas that you would like to farm.

This is the first time Mr. Harmer has met with the muck farmers and it is hoped that this type of land can be somewhat more profitably used.

Eugene Miles, 45 Passed Away At Lakeland, Florida

Eugene Quincy Miles, well-known citizen of this community, passed away at Lakeland, Fla., Thursday, March 18th.

Mr. Miles was in ill health for several years and it was for this reason they went to Florida in November. About a month ago he had an attack of influenza from which he seemed to be recovering. This affected his heart and he died very suddenly.

Mr. Miles was born in South Arm township, Charlevoix County, February 10, 1892. He grew to manhood in this region and served in Company I, 32nd Regiment, at Graveling. Owing to poor health he was given an honorable discharge. He was a member of East Jordan Lodge I. O. O. F.

On Jan. 12, 1918, he was united in marriage to Esteb Benson of Cadillac. Shortly afterwards they purchased a farm adjoining his father's, where they have since resided.

Surviving are his widow; his mother, Mrs. Heith Laird and a sister, Mrs. Clyde Strong, both of East Jordan; and a brother, Xelle Miles of Lansing.

The remains were brought to Ellsworth and funeral services held from the Dawson Funeral Home at that place, Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. James Leitch of East Jordan. Burial was at Sunset Hill, East Jordan.

Canning Factory Crops

PRODUCTION WILL BE DISCUSSED AT EAST JORDAN, APRIL 2.

Before we know it, spring will be here and the busiest time of the year for farmers. Considerable activity has been shown in contracting with canning factories for string beans, beets, carrots, etc.

As a result of many inquiries relative to the proper care and management of these crops, a meeting will be held in the East Jordan Community Hall Friday afternoon April 2 at 1:30 P.M. to present the latest information.

Mr. Mahoney, specialist from the Michigan State college, will be present to discuss in detail the best ways to obtain maximum results. Along other topics the subject of commercial fertilizers as well as cultural methods to use. All farmers who have contracted to grow products for the canning factory are urged to attend, as this will be the only opportunity to talk over your problems before the plots are sown.

Educational Meeting In Soil Conservation Program Announced

The 1937 Soil Conservation program is progressing as rapidly as the directions from Lansing are received. At the present time the matter of establishing bases has taken the entire time of the county and township committees. Within the next few days announcements will be sent out to each farmer showing the crop acres and the soil depleting base.

Inasmuch as it's very near the first of April and all farmers are extremely anxious to secure all the facts, it is felt that it would be deeply appreciated if another series of meetings could be held to more or less review the program and to somewhat definitely inform you of what your base will be for this year. We are sure that it will be to your advantage to spend another half day with us and again go through the various features of the program, as we want every farmer to get what is possible.

The following schedule will announce the meeting for your community:—

Wednesday, March 24th:
9:30 a. m. Horton Bay I.O.O.F. Hall
1:30 p.m. Boyne River Grange Hall

Thursday, March 25th:
9:30 a.m. Marion Center Gr. Hall.
1:30 p.m. Hayes Town Hall.

Friday, March 26th:
9:30 a. m.—Eveline Town Hall.
1:30 p.m. Walloon Lake Com. Hall

Saturday, March 27th:
9:30 a. m. South Arm Town Hall.
1:30 p.m.—Wilson-Town Hall.

We are also glad to announce that the following two days after each of these meetings your community committee will be at the same location to go over your farm with you, and to help you arrange your farm plans so as to obtain the maximum payment. We strongly urge you to talk things over with your own community committee so that no one will miss securing payments because of wrong interpretations and lack of knowledge as to how the program works out. Remember once again that your community committee will devote two days' time in conferring with you at exactly the same place as the above schedule indicates.

Jersey Breeders To Hold District Conference At Charlevoix Court House

Breeders of Jersey cattle in this section of the State are cordially urged and invited to attend an all day meeting to be held in the Charlevoix Court House on Monday, March 29 beginning promptly at 10:30. At this time Mr. H. E. Dennison, field man for the American Jersey Cattle Club, will be in attendance and discuss a program for this year.

The efforts of Mr. Dennison have resulted in holding something like 5 Jersey Parish shows in Michigan that really have been outstanding successes. Each exhibitor must have good production records back of their stock before they can be shown. Each county in the district is eligible to make a display and to compete with other counties. The premiums are prorated back equally, based on the distance to the show. This new idea has been very favorably received by producers and is receiving considerable publicity.

We would like to have every breeder of Jersey cattle present so that new enthusiasm can be aroused in the development of a show this fall. Remember the date is Monday, March 29 and will continue from 10:00 o'clock on, at the Charlevoix Court House. Tell your Jersey friends and bring them with you.

Explosion Kills More Than 600 Children in Texas Rural School—Justice McReynolds' Rebuke to Critics of Supreme Court.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

THE east Texas oil field was the scene of the worst school disaster in history. The London Consolidated rural school, a few miles north of Henderson, was demolished by a tremendous gas explosion, and more than 600 children and their teachers were killed.

The horror that followed wrought such confusion that Gov. James V. Allred declared martial law in the vicinity of the school, and ordered National Guard troops to the scene. He previously had ordered all state highway patrolmen in the area to proceed there.

President Roosevelt, hearing at Warm Springs about the horrible disaster, was most distressed and urged the Red Cross "and all of the government agencies" to stand by and render every assistance possible. Albert Evans, flood disaster head in Little Rock, Ark., and his staff rushed to the stricken Texas town, and all communities within reach gave aid to the extent of their capacity.

The blast smashed to bits the main structure of the educational plant that was termed the largest rural school in America and the richest in the world.

About 740 children and 38 teachers were in the building at the time and nearly all who were not killed outright were injured. Of the latter it was believed many would not recover.

Fifty or more mothers of the young victims were attending a parent-teacher association meeting in the school gymnasium, a separate building, when the explosion came, sending the mangled bodies of their sons and daughters flying through the air. The women raced to the wrecked structure with screams of agony and tore at the ruins with their bare hands.

For a few minutes after the roof caved in, leaving jagged remnants of wall standing like the ruins of a medieval castle, flames shot out above the wreckage. But the building was of fireproof construction and the blaze, having almost nothing to feed upon, soon died out.

W. C. Shaw, superintendent of the school, whose son was one of those killed, had just left the building.

"I was standing about fifty feet away from the building when the explosion came," he said. "There wasn't much noise. The roof just lifted up, then the walls fell out and the roof fell in. It was all over in a minute, no less than that, half a minute. It's unbelievable."

Highway police, National Guardsmen and workers from all the nearby oil wells managed to restore some semblance of order at the scene, roping off the campus and systematically carrying on the task of getting out the bodies of the dead.

From the oil well machine shops were brought acetylene torches to burn away the steel girders while trucks hauled on heavy iron chains, pulling the debris away from the building.

The great force of the blast was taken as proof that the disaster was caused by the ignition of natural gas which was used to heat the school plant. Unable, because of all the confusion, to ascertain the cause of the explosion, it was theorized that someone attempted to light a heater which accidentally had been left turned on.

The "wet gas" used, which comes from oil wells on the school campus, is odorless and so would have given no warning.

EVIDENCE of good sportsmanship is to accept the outcome when one has had a chance to present a fair case to a fair tribunal, said Associate Justice James C. McReynolds of the Supreme court in an extemporaneous talk at a fraternity banquet in Washington.

It was the first time a member of the court had expressed his views on relationship of the court to the government since the President made his proposal for packing the tribunal, and opponents of that plan were encouraged to hope other of the justices might be induced to appear before the senate judiciary committee and tell what they think of it. Justice McReynolds, who is seventy-five years old, has voted against the New Deal fourteen times and for it twice.

Near the end of his talk the justice said: "I should like to be optimistic. I should like to tell you that the situation is rosy. I can't. But I like to believe in the courage of the American people, and I hope they may make a solution of which they may be proud."

Edward S. Corwin, professor of constitutional law at Princeton, was heard by the senate committee in support of the President's bill and he got along very nicely until Senator Burke, leader of the opposition, called his attention to a speech the professor made a year ago and a book he wrote 25 years ago, in both of which he expressed views quite different from those he seemingly now holds. Then Senator Tom Connally took a hand in the questioning:

"Now you say the court is biased. You want to add six new justices who will be-biased in the other direction, don't you?"

Professor Corwin evaded a direct answer for some time, but Senator Connally demanded to know whether he did not support the President's plan for this purpose.

"Well, that is one of the reasons," the witness said. The American Federation of Labor, like its opponent, the C. I. O., has favored the President's court plan, though rather mildly, but President William Green, when he appeared before the senate committee, was even less emphatic in his approval of it. He denied that the court as now constituted "has assumed dictatorial power or that its members have not the mental capacity or the necessary learning."

Senator Wheeler said he was under pressure from organized labor because of his position against the Roosevelt program, but he declared he would not change. He said Maj. George L. Berry, the President's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation and also head of labor's Non-partisan League, "has had a man traveling through Montana at government expense stirring up activity against me."

SENATORS indulged in an indignant debate concerning the sit-down strike and there were demands for a congressional investigation of this new weapon of labor.

Majority Leader Joe Robinson said: "Manifestly the sit-down strike is unlawful. It is not within the rights of any individual or group of individuals to seize or retain possession of property to the exclusion of the employer for the purpose of enforcing demands against the employer."

However, he added, it was difficult for the federal government to do anything in the matter until the Supreme court has passed on the validity of the Wagner-Connelly labor relations act.

Senator Johnson of California gave a "general warning" that the sit-down strike is the most ominous thing in our national life today, bad for the government and in the long run worse for labor.

The Democratic senate whip, Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, vehemently criticized sit-down tactics of labor and demanded investigation by congress. "Is the United States a government?" Lewis asked. "Every form of commerce is being torn apart under the name of controversy between employer and employee, leading to the danger of national riots."

SIT-DOWN strikers, ordered by Circuit Judge Allen Campbell of Detroit to evacuate the Chrysler plants, defied the court when the writ of injunction was served on them and declared they would remain "to the death." The sheriff said he had done his full duty until he received further instructions from the court and the judge was awaiting application from the Chrysler lawyers for writs of contempt.

Meanwhile Gov. Frank Murphy, who had hurried home from Florida, set up a committee to conciliate the many strikes in that area and to devise a legislative program to dispose of future labor disputes. Rev. Frederic Siedenburg, S. J., executive dean of the University of Detroit, was named chairman of the committee. It has twenty-three members drawn from representatives of civic, industrial, religious and labor institutions.

Since the committee was limited to four members for labor, Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, the union waging the city's outstanding strikes against Chrysler Corporation and Hudson Motors, rejected the governor's invitation to U. A. W. A. membership on the committee.

AMELIA EARHART left Oakland, Calif., in her "flying laboratory" for what promises to be the greatest adventure of her adventurous life—a 27,000 mile flight around the world, following generally the equator. Her first hop of 2,400 miles took her to Honolulu. With her in the Lockheed Electra twin motored plane were Capt. Harry Manning and Fred Noonan, navigators, who were to leave the plane at Hawaii, and Paul Mantz, Amelia's technical adviser, who was to continue with her to Darwin, northern Australia.

Justice McReynolds.

MARBINER S. ECCLES, chairman of the Federal Reserve board, started something when he issued a warning against the dangers in inflationary price rises, which are due, he says, chiefly to foreign armament demands, strikes and monopolistic practices by certain groups in both industry and organized labor. He argued for continuance of low interest rates but said the budget should be balanced and taxes on incomes and profits should be raised, if necessary, "to sustain the volume of relief and at the same time bring the budget into balance and permit the paying down of public debt as private debt expands."

The federal reserve system, said Mr. Eccles, "is powerless to maintain a stable economy unless other essential nonmonetary factors necessary to stability are brought into line either by private interests or by the government."

This statement, presumably made with the approval of Secretary Morgenthau and the knowledge of President Roosevelt, aroused a lot of talk in Washington and the administration leaders were discussing taxes and receipts. Generally they agreed that there will be no extensive tax change—merely a resolution in June extending for one year $400,000,000 in "nuisance" levies. It may be the Eccles warning will serve to curb the demands of various department heads and congressmen for more huge appropriations.

POPE PIUS in a long encyclical condemned communism as "the ruin of family and society" and called on Christian employers everywhere to combat it by recognizing "the inalienable rights of the working man." He accused the communists of having played upon the susceptibility of the working classes with promises of alleviation of "many undeniable abuses."

THAT controversy between Mayor La Guardia of New York and the German Nazis degenerated into a riot of abusiveness on both sides. German Ambassador Luther again asked and received an apology from Secretary Hull after La Guardia had called Reichsfuehrer Hitler "satisfaktionfahig"—a man without honor. And Mr. Hull politely expressed his weariness with the whole squabble. In Berlin Ambassador Dodd was telling Foreign Minister Neurath that the anti-American campaign in the German press should be stopped, and both those diplomats were pictured as ready to call it all off.

MADELINE LA-FERRIERE, a beautiful Parisienne, stirred up a pretty scandal when she shot and slightly wounded Count Charles de Chambrun, former French ambassador to Italy. The young woman asserted the count had caused her to lose the love of a "great Italian" man of state whose affections she had won in recent interviews. She has made many trips to Rome, where she was received in diplomatic society, and is known to have been granted several interviews by Premier Benito Mussolini. Paris papers did not mention Mussolini, but the London Daily Mirror did not hesitate to say that he was the "great Italian" involved.

REMINGTON RAND, INC., large manufacturer of office equipment, was accused by the federal labor-relations-board of violating the Wagner-Connelly act and of using "ruthless" methods in trying to break the strike of 8,000 workers in six of its plants. The corporation was ordered to cease alleged interference with union activities of its employees; to bargain collectively with a majority of its workers; to reinstate strikers without discrimination—and to withdraw support of so-called "company unions" in its Iliou, N. Y., and Middleton, Conn., plants.

WARSHIPS of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany coasted the naval patrol along the straits of Spain designed to isolate the civil war as provided for by the neutrality agreement entered into by 27 nations. The two latter nations are guarding the government coast and the two former the Fascist shore line. Ships going to Spain are required to halt at designated ports for inspection and agents of the international committee will either certify that no arms or volunteers are aboard, or will accompany the vessels to Spain.

THE Creusot works of the famous old Schneider armaments firm in France has been expropriated by the French government and formal possession will be taken by decree. Everything in the workshops and stores of the firm which has to do with the manufacture of arms—tools, machinery, and stocks—will be taken over.

DR. ELIHU THOMPSON, one of the country's famous inventors, a contemporary and friend of Thomas A. Edison, died in Swampscott, Mass., at the age of eighty-four. His scientific discoveries and inventions were numerous, but he is perhaps best known as the discoverer of electric welding and the inventor of the centrifugal cream separator and the centrifuge, an instrument used in biological laboratories.

NEWS from MICHIGAN

Decatur—Defeated in two elections by his wife for the office of assessor, Emory Squier turned the tables and victorious by two votes in his third attempt recently. Election returns showed 97 votes for Squier, 96 for his wife.

Grant—Striking what is said to be a new record of continuous service in an elective public office, Hans Carlson started his thirty-third year as a member of the village council, Carlson, first elected in 1904, was returned without opposition in the recent village election.

Lansing—Arthur Arnston, a local resident, is seeking an unknown benefactor. It seems that he parked his automobile here recently, then returned to find a license sticker had been pasted on his windshield. Now, he has asked police to help him locate his mysterious "unseen friend" and return the license.

Hart—Your stuffed, two-headed calf may hold the stage as far as the rest of the world is concerned, but to local residents, it's just an also ran. Since February 8th, a three-legged calf has been hop-skip-and-jump around the Glen Shafer farm near here. The calf, a Durham, was born with two hind legs, but only one in front.

Grand Rapids—An amusing incident in this age of speed and precision was told here. It seems that the accident bureau at police headquarters received a letter recently which was en route for just two years and ten months, although mailed but a block away. H. F. Wheeler, of the accident and claim department in the city hall, dispatched the communication in May, 1934.

Flint—The recent establishment of a psychiatric clinic here promises to make Flint a test city to aid the state crime commission in determining and eradicating the causes of crime and mental diseases. The clinic will be conducted by Dr. O. R. Yoder, of the Michigan state hospital, whose plans include a monthly discussion of the problems of unadjusted children with school teachers and principals.

Owosso—Further honor to local-born Thomas E. Dewey, New York's special racket prosecutor, has been given in the shape of a gold medal, awarded to "the person considered to have made the outstanding contribution to the welfare of New York City during the past year." The medal was presented by the Hundred Year Club, composed of firms which have been in business in New York for a century or longer.

Olivet—Michigan's most novel "bird hospital" has been opened by Miss Laura Marshall of Olivet College, who has taken on the job of repairing all the "birds" damaged during the recent annual badminton tournament. The technique of this task calls for the fixing of broken feathers and then placing the shuttlecocks into an "incubator," a closed wooden box equipped with a water moistener, to keep the "birds" from withering.

Owosso—Motorists have complained that small boys have been lying down in front of cars, forcing vehicles to detour around their bodies. The novelty wore off recently and two of the boys decided on a new stunt. The boys lay down on the Grand Trunk railroad tracks, halted a fast passenger train. Running away as the train ground to an emergency stop, the boys had their orgy of fun curtailed by police who caught up, gave them a Dutch-uncle lecture, sent them home.

Kalamazoo—When and if the hands of time should turn back and heavy hirsute camouflages adorn the faces of Michigan men, John C. Hoekje may be the only man to supply the needed equipment. Stirred by the nostalgic memories of the days back in 1906 when he sported a luxuriant specimen, he has collected what is said to be the finest assortment of moustache cups in the state. Hoekje strikes a warning note to men as he says, "They aren't made any more as far as I can learn."

Ithaca—Appearing from nowhere, a big, black great dane has adopted the Elba township school district No. 8 as its home. The dog came to the school nearly two years ago, in a half-famished condition, with his worn paws showing evidences of long travel. The pupils fed the dog, brought him near to the fire. A model student, he listens quietly to the lessons from his fireside corner and apparently likes his new life. During the doldrums of summer vacation, he moves around renewing friendships.

Grand Rapids—This city saw its first one-man sit down strike recently in a local theater. Looking himself in the men's room, the striker complained in negotiations through the key hole that he didn't like the show and intended to stay where he was until his 35 cents admission was refunded. In a hurried conference, members of the staff decided not to compromise. Besides, critics had said the show was good. Finis was written when two policemen arrived, hauled the sit-downer out—vertical.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

Washington—Developments that have taken place and are taking place in the fight precipitated by President Roosevelt's plan to reform the Supreme court of the United States show some phases not hitherto evident in political fights. One of these, I believe, portends important changes in the political alignment in this country. I have reported to you in these columns many times evidences of a growing trend toward a new political alignment and I can say now that nothing which has taken place since Mr. Roosevelt took his New Deal into the White House has given such impetus to this coming realignment as his proposal that congress pass a law giving him authority to name six more justices for the highest court.

The information coming into Washington these days shows very plainly that the Roosevelt court packing proposal is calling forth opposition from both of the major political parties. In other words, the opposition to the President's move is probably nonpartisan to a greater extent than any issue before the American people in the last 50 years. It will be remembered that the late President Wilson's proposal that the United States enter the League of Nations falls within that period of time and while there was both Democratic and Republican opposition to Mr. Wilson's program, it can not be said to have extended among the rank and file of the Democratic party, then in power, to the extent that Mr. Roosevelt's court packing project has permeated the lists of Democratic voters.

I have endeavored to gain the views of many individuals respecting the prospects of a new political alignment but few of the men whose judgment is best politically are willing, to make a guess. A considerable number of them say frankly that they are unable to guess. On the other hand, however, there was general agreement that Mr. Roosevelt, by suddenly tossing his court program into the lap of congress, has given momentum to a movement that for some months appears to have been simply marking time. There are certain facts on this phase of the court battle that appear obvious. They are influential and important as well.

Take for example the fact that Mr. Roosevelt does not have the backing of the so-called solid South for his proposition. Now, the Democratic party for three-quarters of a century has maintained the South as a stronghold of its party. Indeed, in every presidential and congressional election, Republican politicians began calculating what the Democratic strength could be at the maximum by conceding 13 states to the Democrats. How different is the situation, now.

One can go through the lists of representatives in congress from the South and find them rather evenly divided. One will find among Mr. Roosevelt's opponents in this battle numerous senators and representatives who have supported him on every other item of legislation that he has recommended to congress. Now, however, the story is different.

Another interesting phase of the legislative situation is that the bulk of the true and constant liberals in the senate and the house have taken a stand against the proposition of increasing the Supreme court from nine to fifteen members. These two points do not represent all of the factors opposing the President's plan by any means, but I think it can be definitely said that if Mr. Roosevelt is defeated in his demand at this time, the two factors that I have named will have been the deciding influences. Having influences like those just mentioned expanding in their scope, portends, as I suggested above, a considerable shake-up in party affiliation of a lasting kind. I do not mean to say that all of the liberals who are opposing the plan and all of the Democrats who are opposing the court-packing will refrain from supporting Mr. Roosevelt on other issues in the future. I do mean to emphasize, however, that some of them will not return to the ranks of Roosevelt stalwarts.

Thus it becomes rather obvious, I think, that the conservative ranks in congress will be increased to the extent that some of the defections, caused by Mr. Roosevelt's court proposal, result in permanent adherence to other philosophies. So it seems to me that the future holds the probability of a sharp line of demarcation between radicals and conservatives. How they will be identified and what labels they may wear is immaterial. We are due to have a conservative party and a radical party in this country and its shape and character is being molded under the driving fire of the controversy precipitated by Mr.

Roosevelt's demands for six more Supreme court justices.

In a previous article I discussed the bitterness that has permeated the Supreme court controversy. This bitterness is growing and no one can tell how terrific it is going to be. Yet, while the political leaders make charges and countercharges, it seems to me to be almost pathetic that the nine judges of the Supreme court must sit quietly by and say nothing. They can not defend themselves against the criticisms leveled at them by President Roosevelt and his associates. I have searched the records as far as I have been able and I have yet to find where any justice of the Supreme court of the United States ever has expressed himself publicly on any occasion when the court was assailed. It is a rule that is strictly adhered to by the nine justices whom Mr. Roosevelt has described as "the nine old men." Therefore, we see them as the center of one of the greatest political battles in history, wholly unwilling to besmirch their dignity or their records by answering back.

The recent "fireside chat" by Mr. Roosevelt was replete with innuendoes and inferences that the members of the court are quite incapable of doing their job; that they are living in an age that is dead and, consequently, unable to see things as the rest of the country sees them today. Mr. Roosevelt's speech at the victory dinner of the Democrats was purely politics and his fireside chat in explanation of his court program was 90 per cent politics. But the Supreme court is not in politics. It strikes me as being almost a tragedy that these "nine old men" can not defend their honor and their record after a lifetime of service to the American people.

I do not take much stock in the many tirades that have filled the air and columns upon columns of newspaper space that the present justices are incapable of doing their job. There is so much untruth, so many unwarranted conclusions in those tirades that it amounts to a gigantic campaign that will mislead the people of the nation. Assuming that some of the justices are too old to do their job and assuming further that some of them may be too conservative to deal with present day problems, it yet seems to me to be an indisputable fact that there is nothing in life that can take the place of experience and the lessons thus learned.

While Mr. Roosevelt was taking a vacation in the warm sunshine of Georgia, the case in behalf of the Able Spokesmen court packing proposition was ably presented to the senate committee on the judiciary. His spokesmen were Attorney General Cummings and Assistant Attorney General Robert Jackson. They did their job well. They met some of the most vicious questions from committee members that I have ever heard and they met them with a smile. True, opponents of the program among those senators were not satisfied at all with the explanations advanced by the President's spokesmen. That fact, however, does not take away from the two witnesses the credit that is due them.

And thus for the first time we have what must be regarded as official arguments. I mean these arguments are to be distinguished from fireside chats and political speeches concerning the merits of the President's plan. Likewise, for the first time we have a frank admission that Mr. Roosevelt's purpose in asking congress to give him authority for appointing six additional judges is to give him men on that court who will see present day problems as the President sees them.

In view of Mr. Jackson's statements to the committee, we can look back upon some of the speeches made by New Deal spokesmen some months ago and can realize from them and present developments that Mr. Roosevelt had the general purpose of packing the court in mind for some months. This circumstance seems to explain also why the President and his advisors refused to accept the recommendation of Prof. Raymond Moley in 1934. At that time, Professor Moley, a member, if not the number one man, of the Brain Trust, urgently pressed for the New Dealers to go to the country with two constitutional amendments. He wanted the people of the country to understand that these amendments would permit enactment of certain types of laws. He thought that the congressional elections of 1934 was the time to present the questions to the voters. It must be said that Professor Moley's proposition was one of the fairest and soundest to be made. It is a method prescribed by the Constitution itself.

Where Blast Killed Hundreds of Children

General view of the New London Consolidated school, New London, Texas, after the explosion that wrecked the school and snuffed out the lives of hundreds of school children in the worst school tragedy in all history.

Dig and Cut Away Their Path to Dead

Rescue workers at scene soon after Texas school was blown up, engaged in hazardous task of bringing out the dead.

After Death Struck School in Texas

Amid crumbling masonry and steel, rescue workers and frantic parents hunt for bodies of children killed and mangled by explosion.

Many Times This Scene Was Repeated

Volunteer rescue workers bringing out the body of one of the victims of the school disaster.

Spectator Tells of Awful Blast

One spectator thus described the scene of the Texas school disaster: "In the middle of a ring of about 5,000 persons lay the remnants of the huge structure. The center portion had only a bare split wall at the rear still standing. The brick and stones were piled about 15 feet high in a quarry-like effect. From the ponderous oil trucks to the mass of debris covering the children were stretched stout cables. Sweating oil field 'roughnecks' turned errands of mercy—many seeking their own sons and daughters. "In the manner of stevedores, they lined up on the rock and passed debris hand-to-hand to a clearing. "Blood smeared an upturned brick. With a shout, the workers gathered available shovels and lights and stretchers were called. An arm, a head appeared—terribly crushed. In a few minutes it was on the stretcher, carried to a waiting ambulance and speeded to the nearest temporary morgue. "The scene was repeated over and over. Finally the worst of the shock was over and the men and families settled down to a quiet, organized effort to get out the bodies as quickly as possible—not actually in the hopes of life but to spare certain relatives would be spared the anguish of ignorance of their children's fate—which the rescuers knew too well."

Windsor's Finances.
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—By latest reports, the duke of Windsor must start life as a married man reduced to a personal estate of only about $600,000, plus guaranteed annual remittances amounting to but a beggarly $100,000 more.

To be sure, as the old saying is, two can live as cheaply as one if one of the two happens to be a goldfish or even a canary—but otherwise the notion hasn't worked out under modern conditions, wives these days being what wives are these days.

Still, they do say Mrs. Simpson is pretty handy with a skillet, which, on the cook's Thursdays off, ought to save getting in extra kitchen help; and what with there being no crown jewels to keep polished and installment houses just crying to help all young honeymooners out—you furnish the bird, we furnish the nest!—Well, by scrimping, the couple should get by, don't you think?

Washington Rumors.
HOW rumors do float about—especially in the neighborhood of Washington. Well, Washington always has been kind of a windy place.

First we hear a boom is to be started for Mrs. Roosevelt to succeed the President at the conclusion of his term. This is promptly denied and the question arises—how is that loyal soul, Uncle Jim Farley, going to stand the strain of waiting until Sistie Dahl gets old enough to run?

Uncontradicted as yet is the other report that the White House craves to revive the NRA, under another set of initials and—let us hope—with a better-looking Blue Eagle than that first one was.

"Sweeping" Inquiries.
AFTER every major disaster which conceivably was preventable, we have a "sweeping inquiry" or a "searching probe"—it depends on which phrase the reporters like best—to fix the blame. Rarely does anything come of this, but it must indeed be a great consolation to the widows and the orphans of the victims.

Seemingly, it never occurs to anyone to make the said investigation before the tragedy occurs, with a view of searching out defective mechanism or imperfect construction then.

We are a great people for shutting the stable door after the horse is gone—shutting it good and tight so the probers may have leisure for their probing.

Defying a Glacier.
IN ALASKA, the Revell family are defying Black Rapids glacier which, without seeming provocation and after remaining perfectly calm for several million years, suddenly started coming down upon them, rumbling and roaring and acting up generally as it advances. Its icy shout is only about a mile away from their roadhouse now, but they're still serving ye olde blue plate special—choice of jello or stewed prunes—as usual.

The Revells couldn't be New York people. In New York, everybody strives to move at least once every two years; whether there's reason for it or not. A lady flat dweller there likes the scriptural promise of a house of many mansions because it gives her such a warm glow to think of spending eternity shifting from one mansion to another, redecorating as she goes.

Crime and Punishment.
AT A recent trial in New York for a hideous murder, the lawyer for the killer—who, incidentally, had confessed—wound up his plea with this old and reliable and beautifully logical standby:

"Putting this man in the electric chair will never bring back the woman he slew—remember that, Gentlemen of the jury."

But putting a brutal killer in the electric chair will never bring him back either, which, after all, is the main idea, isn't it, Gentlemen of any rational jury?

Selecting Indian Chiefs
In some tribes, such as the Iroquois and some Pueblo tribes, certain chieftaincies were always selected from a particular clan. While there were hereditary chieftaincies among certain other groups, as a matter of practice such offices were usually elective. It is possible that the political system of the Iroquois influenced the democratic style of government of the United States. Probably the only example in North America of a power analogous to that of a despot was to be found among the Natchez and neighboring tribes of the lower Mississippi. In this instance submission to the will of the chief was for the most part voluntary and based on religion.

Walking Gracefully—

Learn to Move About With Youthful Step and Fine Poise

By Lydia Le Baron Walker
EVERY person would like to be graceful, and recoils from being considered awkward. This attribute of grace is held in such high esteem that children are frequently sent to dancing school just to acquire it although they she has some pedal affliction. Ungainly gaits may be the result of heedlessness, badly fitting shoes or stockings, actual maladies of the feet, or poor poise. Once you know what is the hindrance to graceful walking, you can set about the task of overcoming it, gracefully.

Some Hints.

Throw the shoulders back, hold the head high, watch where you are going without keeping your eyes glued to the ground. Do not ape the stride of men, for their long steps are awkward for women. Learn to flex the knees slightly, not enough to cause you to bob up and down, but just enough to provide that springiness which is an indication of the suppleness of youth.

A Suggestion to Remember.

Do not throw the torso first into one hip socket and then the other. This is ungainly and is said to increase the size of the hips. The hint of a "swinging gait" with its buoyancy is desirable but, when exaggerated, this becomes a rolling walk, which is to be avoided.

Couldn't Be Plainer

The identity of the young woman is withheld, but the memory of her answer lingers on with the examiner conducting a science course at an English school.

One of the requirements in the written exam was: "Define a bolt and nut and explain the difference, if any."

The girl wrote: "A bolt is a thing like stick of hard metal, such as iron, with a square bunch on one end and a lot of scratching wound around the other end. A nut is similar to the bolt only just the opposite, being a hole in a little chunk of iron sawed off short, with wrinkles around the inside of the hole."—Stray Stories.

may never become exceptionally fine or professional dancers. They are taught poise and rhythm of motion that gives them the ability to move about with ease of body and grace of action.

Ungainly Gaits.

Knowing all this, it is odd that youths of today frequently have ungainly walks. This is instanced in girls especially. Older folk regret it when they themselves do not walk gracefully, and so eventually the young girls will also.

Promenades in Foreign Lands.

The art of walking gracefully is a matter of especial attention in some countries. In Italy and many other foreign lands, the afternoon promenade is a function. Not to have a graceful gait is to mark one as awkward and conspicuous. The women from such countries are noted for their erect poise and fine carriage.

Acquiring Grace.

A graceful walk can be acquired by anyone who really wishes to be graceful on her feet, unless

Personal Health Lags Behind Community Health

The individual is by no means as efficient in running his own health department as the city service is in running the community health department.

There are a number of factors fit personal hygiene which must serve as guideposts to the individual who desires to run an efficient machine. The University of Michigan Health Service has outlined a number of such personal health factors which it thought of sufficient importance to call to the attention of entering students. These are regarded as essential factors of personal health.

The Health Service suggests that healthy, long lived ancestors should concern young people in mate selection. For this purpose it is important to exercise the intelligence as well as emotions when it comes to the question of mate selection.

Nutrition should always be generous, emphasis being put on the use of milk, leafy vegetables and fruits. For the best interest of the infant the mother should give the baby breast feeding as it is of very great importance and should never be neglected unless death or illness of the mother prevents. A daily bowel movement without the use of drugs or unnatural methods is desirable.

The individual should get vigorous, outdoor exercise daily, preferable in the sunshine. He should sleep about nine hours daily in a cool, ventilated room. Indoor conditions generally should provide a temperature of 68 degrees Fahrenheit and plenty of light.

Everyone should demand of himself a high standard of cleanliness—cleanliness of the skin, the hair, the nails and the clothes. Baths should be taken often but prolonged hot baths are objectionable. Individual towels and individual drinking cups will help prevent the spread of disease.

Frequent cleaning, dental inspection and a diet of milk, vegetables and fruit are the means necessary to regulate the condition of the teeth. Dead teeth are often dangerous and a person with a dead tooth in his mouth should have X-ray assurance that there is no infection. Milk, vegetables and fruit in the mother's diet before childbirth influence for the better the kind of teeth the child will have.

In case of sickness, the consideration of the other people justifies one's isolation as the excretions spread by careless coughing, sneezing and spitting can thus be controlled. As a preventive measure the discrete person is immunized against such diseases as diphtheria, scarlet fever, smallpox and typhoid.

The periodic health examination is the best check a person has on his health. Such an examination with careful attention to defects offers a most hopeful means of promoting and preserving health.

Key To Dairying In Wise Feeding

Eleven years of records on the cost of feeding cows summer and winter to produce 100 pounds of milk has convinced A. C. Baltzer, extension dairyman at Michigan State College, that a six months pasture program and a system of low cost winter feeding is a necessary background for dairy profits in Michigan.

As spring approaches the pasture program should be welcomed by efficient dairymen. Baltzer says "If the dairy cow shows a profit at all it will be most profitable during low cost pasturing."

Fall sown rye is an ideal May pasture. June finds the best pasture in June grass and sweet clover. July again finds June grass leading in popularity with alfalfa grazing started. August shows most farmers in a pasture program are getting milk production out of alfalfa, June grass and sudan grass. The latter was sowed in May on the rye that was pastured in May. In September, and even in October depending upon early frosts, alfalfa continues to offer cheap feed and now is being mixed with smooth brome grass.

Rotation of pastures has become a more efficient practice. Electric fences help outline temporary grazing areas. Some dairymen put the fresh cows in a pasture for several days, then let the rest of the herd follow in this pasture and finally finish off the pasture with the dry cows and young stock.

"Feeding roughly is half the cost of producing milk," says Baltzer. "Wise dairymen are beginning to think in terms of low price feed for 365 days of the year. Longer pasture is one phase. In winter the use of heavy alfalfa feeding supplemented with odorless steamed bone meal is being adopted. The cows will not make world records, but the dairyman will obtain economy of production."

DRESS YOUR AGE, WOMEN ADVISED

If there are any secrets about spring styles for 1937 they are solved in the general bit of advice to women, "styles are designed this year to fit the age." There are so many different styles this spring that it is possible for every woman to wear a suit that is different from that of a friend.

If you are young and slight, or mature but with a youthful figure, the smartly tailored suit with short jacket and nipped-in waist-line with slightly widened shoulders is the one suggested by Ethel G. Webb, associate professor in clothing at Michigan State College. The very short loose boxed jacket may be yours if you are young and slight in figure or if you are older but slight and have a lot of pep and can live up to this lively jacket.

"There is the wrist or finger tip jacket with a tuxedo collar which hangs loose and has a sleeve with some width at the hand. This might be said to be ageless. If collarless it is better worn by a younger person. This jacket may be worn with other dresses if there is no contrast in lining or trimming which makes it belong to the original dress alone.

A suit of this style may have a complete dress to accompany it as this is much more flattering to many figures than a blouse and skirt. A more mature person may better select one which has just the skirt, a blouse which is less tailored, and with the short peplum worn on the outside of the skirt. Some blouses are shown which come over the skirt just at the front like a man's vest with a belt across the back. The tuck in tailored blouses is youthful."

Three piece suits usually are tailored in a heavier fabric and seem suited to young rather than elderly persons. Especially if fur trimmed and with a monotone of a lighter weight fabric this type with a variety of blouses is a most satisfactory costume because of its adaptability to so many occasions and varied temperatures.

Woodlots Are Getting Attention

SOIL DEPLETION AND SOIL CONSERVING BASES BEING ESTABLISHED

While in some respects the progress in the 1937 Soil Conserving Program has not been as rapid as was anticipated, everything is being done as fast as approval arrives from Lansing headquarters. Already the establishment of Crop Farm Depletion bases are being made and will be announced as soon as completed. On Monday, March 15, Mr. Vern Spencer of the State Committee, conferred with the county committee in getting this phase of the program completed.

During the last two weeks, most of the activity has been devoted to the inspections of woodlots, for the purpose of obtaining soil building payments. It is very gratifying to note the great interest being manifested throughout the county in the improvement of farm woodlots varying in size from two or three acres up to thirty. Farmers should, in all cases, remember that soil conserving bases determine the amount of payments made, and one should not attempt to earn too large a proportion by improving woodlots in one year. The reason is every farmer should seed down sufficiently to produce the proper quantity of roughage, and the woodlot improvement program should be a long time program and not merely a one year means of obtaining maximum payments at the expense of other practices on the balance of the farm.

In all cases, before any attention can be devoted to woodlot improvement, it is necessary to officially apply for the inspection to the secretary of the county organization at Boyne City. In order to give farmers the opportunity of seeing a woodlot properly improved already four demonstration areas are being worked on. On the Harrison Smith farm located in Bay Township, four miles northeast of Horton's Bay, five acres have been completed by a crew of boys from Camp Wolverine, under the direction of L. B. Culver, Federal Forester. Later on, during the month, five acres in each of the following woodlots will receive the same attention in the same manner.

Sverke Ulvund East Jordan.
Frank Wangeman East Jordan.
Eveline Orchards East Jordan.
Boyne Falls School Forest

When these demonstrations have been completed, meeting will be held at two of them as a means of showing farmers what the woodlot looked like before and after the improvement program had been completed.

This information should be carefully noted by all farmers who expect to buy seed for their spring seedings. The notice from Washington is worded as follows: "Land will not be classified as soil conserving in the north central region which includes Michigan, if it is seeded to any imported seed (except Canadian) or unadapted domestic mixtures containing these seeds." This means that if any imported seed except from Canada or unadapted domestic seed is used, there will not be any soil building payment or soil conserving payment made. Therefore, be on the safe side and see your local dealer and talk it over with him, making sure your seed will be favorably approved for soil building payments.

Now remember that it is possible for farmers to really receive a good payment for doing the job well. For example: Payments may be made on the use of fertilizer, limestone, and of course, for the use of good seed. Here is one example showing what might be accomplished just on one acre, all of which should, more or less, guarantee good stand.

Cost of seed, 12 lbs. of (adapted) Alfalfa	$4.00 per acre.
Cost of fertilizer, 250 lbs. of 0-20-20	6.11
Cost of limestone, 2 tons at Petoskey plant	2.00
2 tons laid down at Boyne City	3.75
2 tons laid down at Boyne Falls	3.40 average
2 tons laid down at Charlevoix	3.80
Total cost would be	13.51
You will get back for soil building payments for a good stand of Alfalfa	$2.50
Use of fertilizer	2.80
Use of Limestone	2.50
Total	7.80
Total cost	13.51
Payment	7.80
Final Cost	5.71

This makes a final cost of $5.71 per acre. Why not use this type of program to increase your opportunities for securing a good stand of alfalfa.

B. C. Mellenkamp,
County Agr'l Agent.

Not A Political Office

The five hundred school men assembled in Lansing recently gave impetus to the suggestion of Dr. Eugene B. Elliott, Superintendent of Public Instruction, that his office be removed from politics and that the Superintendent be appointed by the State Board of Education. The school system is in no sense political and should not be subjected to political influence.

Much of the state's school program is a continuing one. Changes in the educational system cannot be made abruptly but often require several years. Frequently the public must be educated to the necessity for advanced or progressive policies and this may take a long period of time. The State Superintendent should not be prompted in the choice of educational policy by the fact that he must submit himself to the electorate every two years for their approval or rejection. If he is to be freed from all political connections and if he is to be permitted to do his work without fear of extraneous pressure, he should receive his office from a non political body and his tenure should cover a period of several years.

Dr. Elliott is giving splendid service as head of the state's educational department. He is not a politician and the thought of politics does not enter into the conduct of his office. He served with distinction in this department under Dr. Paul Voelker, his predecessor, who was a Democrat, and was appointed to the office by Gov. Fitzgerald because he was the most competent educator available for the place. Democrats and Republicans alike admit that he is doing a splendid job and it is unfortunate that a man of his ability should have to run for re-election on a party ticket this spring. But until the constitution is changed, this will be necessary.

For the good of the state's educational system Dr. Elliott should be re-elected so that the policies of his department may continue without interruption or change. While his name will appear on the Republican ballot, his reelection should not be determined by political considerations. It is time to take Michigan's educational system out of politics.

Muskegon Centennial Uncovers Many Old Time Lumber Brands

Michigan's roaring, brawling, lumbering days and the West's days of the cattle barons had at least one marked similarity the marking of their property with brands. The cattle men, however, seared their marks into the flesh of their animals, while the lumber barons had theirs stamped into the end of their logs with heavy hammers.

In 1842 the Michigan legislature passed a law, requiring that these brands be registered at the county court house in the county where the mill was located that was to make lumber of the logs. Between that time and the 1880's when Muskegon was the Lumber Queen of the World, thousands of brands were registered at the Muskegon county courthouse. These brands will be a big attraction at the Muskegon Centennial and Lumberjack Festival, July 17 to 31, 1937.

Some of these were simple brands, nothing more than the initials of the owners. Others were elaborate designs which told a story that has since been forgotten.

Strangest of these probably was the one of a gallows with a man hanging from it — Davies and Whitney brand. There's one — a pair of legs evidently belonging to a Russian doing the Komarinskijs — the Roskoff and A-her-ton brand.

Under the livestock division there was a bull's head, a horse's head Richard Miller's brand an owl, and a fish which, judged from the size of the dorsal fin, must have been meant to represent a Grayling — the McGraw & Montgomery brand.

Implementations of general use in the camps in those days took their place among the brands. There was the wheelbarrow brand, a hammer neatly boxed in a rectangle G. A. Blodgett's brand and a brace. Two keys, separated by a short vertical bar, was another of the unusual brands.

Human figures entered into the brands also. One depicted a rather plump woman, crudely drawn C. S. Montague brand. Another a lumberjack with a cant hook Street and Chatfield brand and still another unusual one was a foot.

There was the umbrella, an arm chair, a star enclosed in a circle and the whole thing boxed in a rectangle. A French company operating in the Muskegon valley woods utilized a graceful lyre as its symbol of ownership the Beaudry and Co. brand.

It is impossible today to decipher just what many of the others do represent. The logs were branded in the woods, at both ends. There the independent companies which had no mills of their own, had them sealed by representatives of the mill and sold them on the ground as the drive down the river began.

Changing of brands prevailed even in those days and just as the rustlers stole whole herds of cattle in the west, hi-jackers and unscrupulous river men stole logs. The methods of changing brands differed, however.

Hi-jackers would pull the logs from the river, saw off the branded ends of the logs, and rebrand them with their own mark, or the mark of the company for which they were working.

There were more subtle ways of operating, however. Old rivermen will tell you of unscrupulous operators who would sell their logs at sixteen feet, take their receipt and skid them off into the river. Some distance down stream they would have them taken from the river, have a foot cut off each end and re-stamped and scalped again as 14 foot logs. Frequently the process would be repeated & they would collect for almost three times the timber that came down the river.

There were, however, thousands of board feet of lumber honestly lost on the river, and in Muskegon Lake. Waterlogged giants that sunk to the bottom, or drifted into shallow water and were missed on the drives.

After the halcyon days the Muskegon Log Lifting Company was formed to salvage those derelicts of the lumber boom days and in order to have clear title to the logs bought the title to most of the brands for a song.

Functions of Your District Health Department

The broad objective of District Health Department No. 3 is to prevent disease and promote health. The services of all health departments in Michigan are entirely educational and preventive. Curative medicine is not practiced. In brief, your health department carries on the following activities:

1. Collects and analyzes information as to the health needs of the community and plans and carries on a program suited to that particular community.
2. Communicable Disease Control: Receives reports of communicable diseases and institutes prompt control measures to prevent epidemics. Investigates suspicious cases and contacts of cases and attempts to locate sources of infection. Consults with physicians upon request in cases where the diagnosis is doubtful. Investigates sources of venereal disease and work toward control.
3. Communicable Disease Prevention: Organizes campaigns to immunize infants, pre-school children against diphtheria and smallpox. Assists in discovering cases of tuberculosis by giving tuberculin tests and arranging for x-ray for positive reactors. Cooperates with physicians and the state and local tuberculosis associations in conducting clinics and hospitalizing patients.
4. Distributes biologic products (diphtheria antitoxin, smallpox vaccine, etc.) manufactured by the Michigan Department of Health for the prevention and control of communicable diseases.
5. Advocates periodic health examinations for all ages, and cooperates in securing correction of defects of infants, preschool and school children.
6. Co-operates with Crippled Children's Commission & other agencies in giving service to crippled, afflicted, blind, deaf, epileptic and feeble-minded children.
7. Supervises water supplies and methods of waste disposal and corrects insanitary conditions which affect the public health. All resorts and schools are inspected at least once a year.
8. Supervises milk supplies which includes regular monthly bacterial counts, butter fat and sediment tests taken on milk dealers by the Health Department technician. Inspects some food handling establishments.
9. In communication with Miss Evans of the Children's Fund of Michigan, extension classes are organized to aid the teachers in Health Education.
10. A year round Dental Program is carried on, the Dentist spending three months in each county doing dental corrections.
11. Every two years the Children's Fund Eye Doctor carries on complete visual examinations of pupils needing eye corrections and prescribing glasses for those in need of them are provided free of charge by the Children's Fund.
12. Prominent public speakers are obtained from various agencies such as the Michigan Department of Health and the Michigan Department of Agriculture to speak before the schools.
12. Child Care Classes and Mother's Classes are conducted in our District through the co-operation of the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Michigan Department of Health.
14. Promotes Hot Lunch project in the schools and method of obtaining surplus foods, when such are available.
15. In cooperation with the local County Welfare Departments, cod liver oil is purchased in quantity lots and dispensed at the direction of the Health Department.
16. In some counties Loan Closets are maintained which contain necessary equipment and materials for confinement in the home.
17. Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick classes taught periodically by staff nurses.

ers must likewise undergo years of arduous experience, and must prove their physical and mental competence and responsibility before being entrusted with a train—yet a train operates on tracks, and has no traffic congestion problems. Still, in most states, we allow anyone—whether he be competent or incompetent, careless or reckless, of good habits or bad—to drive a car on crowded arteries of travel, where the slightest error of judgment may cause a death!

It is an undeniable fact that a considerable percentage of the people now driving should either be denied that privilege or forced to undergo a period of training to make them abler, safer car operators. Some of these people are physically incapable of driving properly. Many more are mentally incapable, congenitally incompetent, or reckless. And the toll is 35,000 lives a year.

We will never solve the accident problem until we adopt drivers' licensing regulations that will keep the incompetent and reckless driver off the public roads. No man has a "right" to drive until he can show definitely that he is worthy of the "privilege" bestowed upon him.—Grand Rapids Chronicle.

Driving a Privilege — Not a Right

It is high time we realize that the operation of a motor car on the public highways is a privilege—not a right.

Every automobile is a potentially lethal weapon. Properly used, it is one of man's most desirable mechanical servants. Improperly used, it is a terrible menace to the lives, health and property of everyone in the area it travels.

Rigid training is necessary to obtain a license to pilot an airplane—yet the plane travels empty airways where, generally speaking, it cannot endanger others. Locomotive engine-

Ready — If Disaster Strikes

"The message must get through". Again this spirit guided the telephone companies and telephone people during the recent heavy floods. Again emergency found the Bell System prepared.

From warehouses and factories of the Western Electric Company... manufacturing and supply department of the Bell System... great quantities of telephone material were rushed to the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Wherever it was used, it was familiar to all workers, and scientifically correct. It was Bell System equipment!

And from wherever they gathered for the emergency... volunteer operators from Michigan assisting operators in Ohio; linemen from Illinois working shoulder to shoulder with crews from Tennessee... all workers spoke the common language of a job-thoroughly understood. In emergencies, when telephone service is hard to maintain, it is when that service is needed most. But the successful meeting of this and other emergencies cannot be laid entirely to the forethought, the engineering experience, or the manufacturing facilities of this unified telephone system. It results, also, from the devotion of every telephone man and woman to the job. Trained to meet the unexpected, it is all in the day's work to them. They stick to their tasks. "The message must get through".

Trout Fishing Season Opens April 24; Change Not Likely

The working man will have 20 Sundays and a holiday to spend on his favorite northern streams during the four and a half month trout fishing season which opens Saturday, April 24.

There will be more if the official observance of two holidays which fall on Sunday this year, is extended to Monday. Memorial day, May 30, and the Fourth of July, both come on a Sunday this year.

Although much dissatisfaction was evident last season over the opening date of trout fishing, there seems slight possibility of a change this spring. The season opens, as provided by law, on the last Saturday in April. Any changes would have to be made by the legislature and would have to be given immediate effect.

Should the season be changed back to May 1 or later, authorities point out, it doubtless would result in much confusion since the fishing law digests for 1937 specify April 24 as the opening date and many non residents have planned trips into Michigan for that date. A change also would create a law enforcement problem, since many doubtless would insist on opening the season April 24 according to the fishing digests.

Recognizing Ability

Corporations are very particular in the selection of men to fill managerial positions or head important departments. When those who are known to have the education, character and experience, have given satisfactory service to the corporation which employs them, they are not dismissed after a fixed period of time and replaced by others whose capacity to adequately fill these positions is not known. Men who have rendered effective service are retained and promoted and their successors in each capacity are selected with the utmost care.

This principle should apply in the April election when two judges of the supreme court are to be elected. The work of this great tribunal is not in any sense political.

The most responsible positions in Michigan government are those held by judges of our courts, especially the highest court in the state. When men of character, experience and ability are occupying these places they should not be dislodged on election day by others whose fitness for the bench is not known. There is nothing to be gained by a change in the membership of the supreme court this spring. And the people of the state may suffer a great loss by the election of untried men.

There is much being said about civil service for the hundreds of minor positions in the state government. Both parties are committed to the principle of the merit system in the selection of state employees. This is good as far as it goes. But if those occupying minor positions are to be selected and retained because of their ability and fitness for the places they occupy, how much more important it is to continue in office the two judges whose terms expire this year.

Justices Louis Fead and Walter H. North, who are candidates for reelection, have served on the supreme bench for about ten years. Before being elevated to this high tribunal, they served with distinction for a number of years as circuit judges in their respective districts. Both have been distinguished for their ability as jurists and their work has been instrumental in keeping the Michigan supreme court on an exceptionally high standard.

It is refreshing that there is a state-wide non-partisan movement to return Justices Fead and North to the supreme bench without regard to partisan considerations.

A little experience often upsets a lot of theory.

Household Questions

Sweet Prunes—A very delicious as well as unusual way of serving prunes for breakfast is to soak them in fruit juices. Whenever a jar of fruit is opened save the juices and put a few prunes in the jar. When they have become swollen they are ready to be eaten.

Keep the top on the milk bottle so the milk does not absorb ice box or refrigerator odors from other foods.

Rugs should be turned around every six months. Frequent turning causes them to wear evenly.

Agateware is easily chipped, so don't scrape out food that becomes stuck in it.

A little salt added to an egg before beating makes it light and easier to beat.

Cretonne slip covers will retain their color better if washed in bran water.

To make perfect muffins combine all dry ingredients, then add liquids quickly, stirring but not beating. Do not stir after ingredients are moistened. Fill muffin pans two-thirds full and if mixture looks lumpy it will smooth out during baking.

DR. JAMES W. BARTON

Talks About

Operations and the Heart.

ALTHOUGH deaths whilst under an anaesthetic are now very rare, every anaesthetist, surgeon and physician is alert and very watchful before, during, and after an operation.

It is to prevent accidents during the taking of an anaesthetic that the patient is usually admitted to hospital the previous day so that an examination of heart, blood pressure and urine can be made.

One of the dangers that is always in mind is that a patient may have heart disease which has always been considered a serious risk during the anaesthetic.

It is interesting therefore to read in Archives of Surgery, Chicago, of the study made by Drs. J. Hickman, H. L. Livingstone and M. E. Davies, Chicago. They followed during a period of two years the history of 336 patients with heart disease who had undergone operations.

Fair Surgical Risks.

Since there were only six deaths due to heart disease and two to lung disease that could be linked up in any way with the operation and anaesthetic in the 336 patients who underwent 345 operations (a death rate of about 2 per cent), it shows that, as a group, patients with heart disease are fairly good surgical risks.

Angina pectoris (the severe pain under the breast bone due, it is thought, to lack of oxygen in the blood going to the heart), coronary occlusion (when the blood vessel or vessels helping to bring blood to the heart muscle gets blocked), decompensation (when the heart muscle has not the power to pump the blood properly), hardening of the arteries, and thyroid poisoning (poisoning of the heart muscles by the excess amount of thyroid juice from the thyroid gland in the neck), are, in the order named, the most serious diseases of heart and blood vessels with which physicians have to deal.

These physicians state further: "Contrary to the belief of many medical writers, inhaling the anaesthetic, particularly ethylene-oxygen anaesthesia, is safe when a high percentage of oxygen is used and asphyxia (suffocating) or struggling is avoided. Ethylene-oxygen and local anaesthesia gave the most satisfactory results in the 336 cases above mentioned.

"The use of spinal ether or nitrous-oxygen anaesthesia increased the amount of complications which occurred after the operation."

Causes of Eczema.

Just why some individuals are bothered by eczema, asthma, hay fever, and others eating the same food, doing the same work, and living in the same climate are free from these ailments may seem hard to understand.

And yet if we just think for a moment we can readily see that as the cause of the irritation (pollen from plants, feathers, furs, foods, chemical substances), is always the same, the trouble must be in the individual, not in the substances.

Thus it is now agreed that there is something about the individual, something he has had handed down to him by his parents or something that he has acquired himself, that has so changed the cells or tissues of his body that they are sensitive to or can be changed somewhat, by any of the above irritants.

And it would seem that when the sensitiveness is not inherited some infection in the system from teeth, tonsils, or other parts, can develop or bring on this sensitiveness in an individual who has hitherto been free from eczema, asthma, and hay fever.

Dr. A. M. Memmesheimer, Berlin, reports that of 98 patients with eczema who were carefully observed and examined for the presence of focal infection (infection starting at some particular point as at teeth or tonsils) 82 had focal infections. The infection from bad teeth was found to be the most frequent, then in order came tonsils, the sinuses adjoining the nose, then the intestine and gall bladder and other parts.

This research worker states that of 76 cured patients in whom the infection had been found and removed, only ten had a relapse within a year, while of 15 in whom no focal infection had been found, six had a relapse. Of course the infection may have been present and not found by the examining physician.

The business of trying to find some point of infection in a patient afflicted with eczema may be very "wearisome" to both patient and physician. However, eczema is a persistent and distressing ailment, and getting rid of it is worth weeks or months of effort.

Remember, it is the cells of the skin or other parts of the body that are at fault, not the irritant, and if something (infection) is making these cells "sensitive" it is really common sense to try to find and remove it.

JOHN LARDNER

Explains the Black Art

It is even possible to make the ingenuus guilty in the end, provided you have plenty of nerve and a second, sweeter ingenuus up your sleeve.

By JOHN LARDNER

CRITICS have referred to me, as a close student of detective literature, one of them going so far as to say: "Lardner is the closest student of detective literature in the world. He never spent a dime in his life."

There's a mint of money to be made in mystery fiction these days. Look at Agatha Christie. Look at S. S. Van Dine. Look at Dorothy Sayers. Look at Rockefeller, who is the exception that proves the rule. And after looking at these parties for about five minutes (or ten, if you are astigmatic), try to realize that you, too, can be one of the 15,604 men, women, and kiddies who make an income of $1,000,000 or less per annum by writing detective stories.

The main thing is to keep up to date. Trends and fashions change swiftly in the detective-story racket. A few years ago you could hang the rap on the butler on page 312 and clues that pointed straight at the ingenuus in the first chapter. But plots have tightened up since then. Homicidal butlers are taboo. Dangling clues are not considered cricket. It is even possible to make the ingenuus guilty in the end, provided you have plenty of nerve and a second, sweeter ingenuus up your sleeve.

Another thing, the killer should not turn out on the last page of the book to be a total stranger. Time was when a bearded Kurd or a one-legged traveling salesman, perfectly new to the reader, could emerge at the finish and confess that he assassinated J. D. Bedrox, D. D. S., in the interest of painless dentistry. You can't get away with that now. The murderer has got to be somebody whom the reader suspected in chapters II, III, IV, and VIII, but forgot all about in chapters V, VI, VII, IX, and X.

Maybe I could make it easier for you tyros to earn a fortune if I gave you a short sample of the art, a sort of skeleton mystery story. All right, I will do so, and I will call it "The Skeleton Mystery Story." This title is a great hunch, closely akin to genius, because it gives you students a chance to write a whole series of books with rhyming titles, like, for instance, "The Gelatin Mystery Story," and—well, you get the idea. Good, eh?

Here's the Formula.

Now, first of all, you can have your choice of three detectives, as follows:

a. Silas Q. Peagreen, a Welsh sleuth, who plays wild Welsh airs on his flute or carves small statuary out of ice-cubes to assist concentration. Peagreen will not travel in anything but the sidecar of a motorcycle. He likes to read Dante, has a comical Samoan valet, and lives in a remodeled dog kennel.

b. Mary Ellen Smith, a tiny, fluffy-haired kindergartner tot who speaks with a lisp and has a peculiar knack for tracking down criminals, especially murderers. She is partial to rag dolls and chews tobacco. Somewhere in her career Mary Ellen picked up the art of ju-jitsu. She can send the toughest killer sprawling headlong.

c. Pete Mackerel, the stuttering detective, who never goes anywhere without his pet wolf, Lobo. Pete is seven feet tall, abnormally shy, and wears a pince-nez. He raises giant radishes for a hobby. Faints at the sight of blood.

With one of these three eccentric but lovable sleuths in mind, we can get on with the story. I am going to give you specimens of chapter

I, chapter VIII, and chapter X, because those (working proportionally, on the decimal system) are the important chapters in any mystery story. Viz. and to wit:

Chapter I (the crime).

No one seemed to know how it happened. The body lay there—a little grotesque, a little askew, a little dead—on the deep bearskin rug. The firelight threw weird flickers through the room, showing here a scattered pack of cards, there an ivory-handled dagger, there a pool of blood.

"H'm," mused Silas Q. Peagreen. "Diss iss very vunny."

He drew the flute from his pocket and played a few snatches of "March, Men of Harloch." Then he studied the people in the room—the footman, the beautiful bride, the old lawyer, the soap tycoon. He picked up a blood-stained card from the floor.

"The deuce of spades," said Peagreen, with a soft sigh.

Chapter I-b (the crime).

There was the body. There was the shiv, with its ivory handle, and there were the pasteboards, and there was the gore. Nobody seemed to give a d-n about it.

"Screwy layout," lisped little Mary Ellen Smith to herself. "I'm thuprithed to thee it."

She grinned absently at the soap tycoon and bit a slab of Old Hickory off the plug. She studied the cards on the floor.

"Five aches in one pack," growled the fluffy-haired tot to herself. "Thith mutht-be a clip joint."

Chapter I-c (the crime).

The body lay on the floor. Pete Mackerel studied it tensely. Then he smiled an apology at the beautiful bride as his pet wolf, Lobo, bit off her finger.

"S-s-some fun, eh, kid?" stammered Pete.

Suddenly he saw the blood on the floor and fainted dead away.

Chapter VIII-a (the hunch).

Silas Q. Peagreen put aside his flute after 13 hours of constant playing. He looked down from the window of his apartment and gazed idly at the other tenants moving out of the building.

"I got it," said Silas. "I must have been blind not to see it before. The cunning, cunning fiend."

Chapter VIII-b (the hunch).

Little Mary Ellen Smith put her last dollie to bed and chewed a hunk off the plug. A slow smile came over her pan.

"I muththa been a thap not to thee it thooner," she lisped. "Thith'll mean the hot thee for—"

Chapter VIII-c (the hunch).

Pete Mackerel stammered "D-d-down, Lobo!" as the trusty wolf bit off his arm. Then he fainted dead away—but not before smiling slowly, for he knew the answer at last.

Chapter X (unrhymed).

The killer backed into a corner and bared his teeth in a snarl.

"You got me," he said, "but you won't keep me"—and he popped a tablet into his mouth.

The others started to rush to his side, but the sleuth held them back with a quiet wave of the hand, saying:

(a) "It iss too late."

(b) "He'h done it. Tho long, thucker."

(c) "G-g-g-gracious sakes!"

And the old lawyer crumbled to the floor, giving a life for the life he took.

Barbershop Harmony

ABOUT 3,000 years ago, a court barber was trimming the beard of the famous King Archelaus.

"How shall I cut it, sire?" he asked.

"In silence," thundered the king.

The silence that then ensued is the last ever known to have occurred in a barber shop.

Barbering establishments of one kind or another have served as gossip centers from time immemorial. They once were far more important than they are today. Up until the time of the French revolution, barbers not only cut hair but pulled teeth and performed surgical operations as well. Many a man boasted that he could "breathe a vein" as well as he could mow a beard.

In fact, the barber's pole is a hangover from the days when the town barber was also its surgeon. The two spiral ribbons painted around the pole represent the bandages used to bind up the wounds of patients. In those days, barbers used the same instruments for shaving as for surgical work. Customers were asked whether they preferred to be shaved with a carving knife or a pen knife.

In addition to that, barbers during the middle ages often held shaving competitions. Old records say that Robert Hardie of England still holds the all-time quick-shaving mark. He once won a $2,500 bet by shaving six men in one minute and 29 seconds. He claimed to be able to shave one man, no matter how harsh his beard, in 12 seconds. He could also do the job blindfolded, with a carving knife, in 45 seconds.

Selling at Auction

THE auction sale seems to be as old as mankind. We know that it was used at least 4,000 years ago by the Babylonians as a means of securing wives for eligible young men.

According to an account handed down to us by Herodotus, the girls of a marriageable age were directed to go each year to the auction mart, where the young men also congregated. There they were sold by the public crier. The pretty girls were put up first and sold to the highest bidder.

This system was really not quite as bad as it sounds. Many a young man who could not afford to purchase a pretty girl was bribed to marry an ugly one, and the purchase money obtained for the beauties was distributed among the homely ones, according to their degree of homeliness. So many an ambitious young man picked up a small fortune with which he could establish his own business as well as a home.

Another feature of these primitive auctions was that the father could not choose the man who was to buy his daughter. It was strictly an open market. The girls in their turn were also safeguarded by requiring the purchasers to marry them on the spot. But after the sale, if the young lady did not turn out to his liking, the law provided that the customer could return her and get his money back.

As Good as Mother's Biscuits

KING HENRY II, of France, was making a tour through the provinces one year with his court. Ordinarily a gluttonous eater, Henry's appetite had been very poor lately, and he desired a new dish to tickle his jaded palate. So he ordered the village baker to concoct for him a cake that was not only delicious but unknown to the rest of the world.

That put the poor baker squarely on the spot. If he failed, the king, who had a violent temper, might throw him in jail or even order his head chopped off. If he succeeded, on the other hand, he would probably be handsomely rewarded. He repaired himself to his kitchen and went furiously to work. He mixed flour, sugar, and milk in every conceivable way he knew, but the harder he tried, the worse the mixture tasted. In despair, he finally threw down his ladles and went over to the nearest saloon to drown his sorrows.

In his absence, his apprentice returned to the bake house from an errand, and found the dough on the mixing table. The master, who had become lost among his wine glasses, did not return, and the boy, moulding the dough would spoil, moulded them into little cakes and popped them into the oven.

He was just taking them out of the oven when his boss came reeling back into the bakery.

"What the—have you done with my dough?" he stormed.

"I made them into little cakes, and baked them twice," (bis-cuits) said the lad. They turned out to be delicious. The king was greatly pleased, and in a short time the bis-cuit became the national cake of France, as it still is today.

Woodpeckers are surgeons; with their strong, sharp beaks they cut down to the haunts of mischief-makers in the wood and extract them with barbed tongues. But there are other, smaller birds that haunt tree trunks in winter—chickadee, brown creeper, and nuthatch—whose beaks are not stout enough for the woodpecker's drastic technique. These birds simply search crevices and cranies in the bark, prying and digging out insects and small cocoons that may be hibernating there. They are skin specialists—cosmeticians.—Science Service.

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for the enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing gas, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adierika. Adierika contains Sulfate, castor oil and certain ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adierika's DOUBLE ACTION gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old poisonous waste matter that may have caused GAS pains, sour stomach, headaches and sleepless nights for months.

Adierika relieves stomach GAS at once and usually removes bowel congestion in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adierika one-half hour before breakfast, or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed. At all Leading Druggists.

SYNOPSIS

Victoria Herrendeen, a vivacious little girl, had been too young to feel the shock that came when her father, Keith Herrendeen, lost his fortune. A gentle, unobtrusive soul, he is now employed as an obscure chemist in San Francisco, at a meager salary. His wife, Magda, cannot adjust herself to the change. She is a beautiful woman, fond of pleasure and a magnet for men's attention. Magda and Victoria have been down at a summer resort and Keith joins them for the week-end. Magda leaves for a bridge party, excusing herself for being such a "runaway." Later that night Victoria is grief-stricken when she hears her parents quarreling. The Herrendeens return to their small San Francisco apartment. Keith does not approve of Magda's mad social life and they quarrel frequently. Magda receives flowers and a diamond from Ferdie Manners, a wealthy man from Argentina whom she had met less than a week before. Manners arrives a few hours later. Magda shows him a valuable Chinese shawl that has been in the Herrendeen family for many years. Vic is shocked when she learns her mother had contemplated selling it. Magda tells Manners a dealer had offered her $300 for the shawl. Magda takes Victoria to Nevada to visit a woman friend who has a daughter named Catherine. There she tells her she is going to get a divorce. Victoria soon is in boarding school with her friend Catherine. Magda marries Manners and they spend two years in Argentina.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Victoria spent a somewhat bewildered yet happy Easter vacation there, exploring all the garden paths and all the big rooms.

She came back to California at another Easter time, eighteen years old, and ready to graduate with her class. Her mother met her in New York, and they made the transcontinental trip together.

Ten weeks later Victoria's handsome bags were packed again, and she went down to the Chalmers place for the summer.

The beautiful Chalmers house was open to summer breezes and filled with summer flowers; the Chinese butler, discreet in his purple and blue silks, motioned her upstairs. Another Oriental took her bags; her mother's maid, who had crossed the continent with them a few weeks before, met her at the top of the stairs. Vic asked to see her mother. Magda was in her magnificent bedroom, a large airy apartment flanked by an enormous bath, by a complete dressing room, by an awninged upper balcony.

Victoria found her mother stretched on a couch by a window; she was not reading the magazine she held, and her eyes were absent and reddened a little from recent tears. At the sight of the girl she began to cry again, and they clasped each other closely.

"My darling, you're home at last! If you knew—if you knew how I've wanted you!" Magda sobbed. She instantly regained control of herself and smiled with trembling lips, straightening the collar of Victoria's blouse as the girl knelt beside her. "Was it all wonderful?" she said. "It was perfect. And at the end we all cried because we weren't all going to be back in September!" Victoria laughed. "But, Mother dearest, you're not well!"

"I've been feeling—wretchedly. Something," Mrs. Manners said hesitantly—"something rather horrid happened last night, and Ferdie was arrested." Her eyes filled again, she straightened the collar again. "It was all rather horrid, and it'll all be forgotten this time next week," she said cheerfully. "So let's not talk about it!"

"Arrested?" Victoria echoed, aghast. "Why—what happened?" "There was an accident. I don't know just what happened," Magda said, her eyes watering. "It was all so horrible. He had been drinking, of course, and he was driving May Fines home—they were both in the car asleep, right near where the smash was."

"Who were?" "If it had been anyone but May!" Magda sighed. "However, they say the poor fellow'll get well, and Ferdie can stand the damages. He was all smashed up, the man they weren't all killed. But if he'd been with anyone but May!"

"Who's she?" "Oh, she's a cheap little idiot I used to know years ago—May Smith; she married Tony Feeney and divorced him and spent a few weeks in Paris, so now she's 'Madame Fines,' and she can hardly remember an English word."

"And does Ferdie like her?" Magda looked at her daughter furtively, answered mildly. "Rather. And of course she's making passes at Ferdie."

"Oh?" Vicky said. It was the old atmosphere again. "Or rather, at the Manners money, which is very stupid for me," Magda ended the subject cheerfully. "Stupid, that's what it is, for Ferdie'd never look at anyone like May! And now tell me more about today—did you say Grace Peacock was there?" "She's Margery King's mother." "I know she is, and I know she went all over Europe trying to get a priest to marry her to Joe Peacock, and couldn't."

"Margery's nice," Vicky said slowly. "And you're adorable, only you have those Herrendeen eyes that you must remember to keep open," Magda said lovingly. "Did you get yourself some lovely things in Paris?"

"Some. Not expensive. But I got one—yes, I have two or three you'll love."

"Have you had it waved, Vich?"

"My hair? No, that's just brushing and setting."

Convent-bred, and with an instinctive distaste for Ferdie and for Ferdie's world, yet she knew that she must either meet him halfway with flattery and flirtatiousness, submit to kisses and embraces, concede him confidences—and little harmless intimacies, or he would not like her at all. On the very first evening Magda told him good-naturedly that he must stop carrying on with her daughter.

The idle days began to go by. Victoria wondered what she was to do with the endless line of them that stretched ahead. For a week she enjoyed the new life lazily; then quite suddenly the whole thing began to pall.

Magda had her own beautiful suite of rooms; Ferdie had his. They lived entirely separated lives; sometimes they saw each other during the course of the day, and sometimes not. Quite often they dined at the same house, but the dinners were large, and Ferdie went to them before Magda did, explaining perhaps to a servant that he was meeting some friend first at the club for preliminary cocktails, and Magda always went late, in great state, in her beautiful car with her own driver. So that even then they had no moment together.

CHAPTER III

Her mother was not happy. Gallant and smiling, keeping a brave front to the world, Magda's soul was trying to feed itself on husks. What she told Victoria of the last few years was a story of disillusionment and loneliness, in a setting of luxury, travel, extravagance.

Biarritz had been dull, London dull, Paris dreadful, Rosarios down in Buenos Aires, where Ferdie's Spanish mother and Spanish sisters lived, had been insufferable. "Perhaps I oughtn't to tell you this, Vicky. But the beginning of it all going wrong was of course that there were always other women. His wife was only to wear the jewels and be introduced to all the business friends, big German and Spanish cattle men, scores of them! The wife is a figurehead after the first year. If she has sons, and keeps the peace with his family, and forgives him everything, the man is pleased with her. If she gets temperamental, tries to assert herself, he is annoyed. But he goes his own way just the same."

Victoria looked thoughtful, her fine dark brows drawn together. "You oughtn't to stay here."

"Where," Magda asked simply, "ought we go?"

The summer idled itself into autumn, and Victoria and Magda went down to the shore again. This time they had the smartest cottage at the lodge, and the beautiful Mrs. Manners was much admitted and entertained. Mr. Manners, she explained to everyone, with a flash of white teeth, was fishing for steelhead up in the Klamath. Every hostess told Victoria's mother that she had a "wonderful man" for her as a dinner or bridge partner, but Victoria noticed that Magda found none of them really wonderful.

In October Ferdie went off on somebody's yacht for six weeks. He seemed a little guilty about it and gave Victoria a large check "to waste in New York." Later she suspected that his twinges of conscience were because the yachting trip that he had mentioned as involving only "a few fellows" actually included the owner's wife, another woman, and the ubiquitous May. Magda did not know that, or Victoria believed—and hoped she did not.

They came back to California in December, and Ferdie came back for Christmas. Little was said of the feminine element on the yachting trip, and the three spent the holidays in a splendid suite in the Fairmont hotel up at the top of the hill with the green iron balconies of their breakfast room hanging over the fascinating jumble of masts and stacks and long pier roofs on the Embarcadero. Ferdie now said that he thought he must go back to Rosarios for a few months. He thought Magda would be a great fool to go. It would be hot traveling; and she hated the place anyway.

An unusually long period of affection and placation resulted in April in Magda's decision to go with Ferdie to South America.

Victoria told her mother she was going to stay in California. Well—because Catherine and Mrs. Brock were going up to the lake again, and wanted her. Well—and because she really would like it—like it better. She might come down to Rosarios later, all by herself. But— but really she would like it better this way, now.

Magda was gently hurt, puzzled. Ferdie smiled, but Vicky knew that he was furious. She held her ground, good-natured and affectionate, but not to be moved. In the end they left without her, and Vicky and Catherine went up to the lake.

A week later, when she and Catherine were sitting down on the lake shore one day, Victoria told her the reason:

"Catherine, cross your heart and hope to die if you ever tell anyone this!"

"I do," said Catherine solemnly, suiting the action to the word.

"It was he," Victoria said.

"Who? Your stepfather?"

"My stepfather nothing!" Vicky echoed, repudiating the relationship.

"He—Catherine, if you ever tell anyone this I'll never speak to you again!—he followed me into the sitting room one night—we'd all just come home from a movie—and kissed me and crushed me against him."

Victoria was at the dock, in the fine soft November fog, to see the big ship come in; the Empress of Panama was on time; at exactly one minute before eleven o'clock she drew up alongside, and all the excitement of landing began.

Then mother and daughter were in each other's arms, and Victoria was laughing.

"And how's Ferdie?"

"Ferdie—" Mrs. Manners glance returned from the luggage and fixed itself upon Victoria. "Ferdie is just the same—as ever."

"And when does he get here? Or does he go to Paris? You were so vague!"

"No, here. When the Loughborough's yacht does, whenever that is," Mrs. Manners said, in the same tone of pleasant indifference. "And now, is a car here, and did you reserve my rooms?" she demanded gaily, as the customs formalities were concluded and she could pick the Pekinese from Victoria's arms again and accompany her along the pier. "Don't tell me it's going to be freezing like this."

"It's been actually hot, until today. This is just fog," Victoria explained.

Maid, dog, parrot, bags, they got into a large waiting car at the Embarcadero, Mrs. Manners talking, as is the custom of returned travelers, of the amusing steward on the boat, the races at Havana, of everything unimportant and inconsequential. They were driven rapidly up the steep hills to the big hotel; everything going with the smoothness of custom; Victoria's mother had been arriving and departing in just this manner ever since her second marriage five years earlier.

Soon Victoria and her mother settled at luncheon beside the fire.

"Well, this is fun!" said Magda then. "And now we can talk. You look so well, Vic, and you're really handsome. Really you are! What have you been doing with yourself, tell me everything, you got my wires?"

"You're the one with the news," she said smilingly. "Nothing has happened here. Miss Butler put me on night duty last night—only the second time, and I'm dead! I had breakfast at the hospital at seven, and had to clean up three bathrooms, and stopped on my way downtown to leave my bag here."

"The hospital!" Magda echoed aghast, not hearing the rest. "You've been ill!"

Victoria's smile was reassuring. Her color was beginning to come back now, as she fell with vigor upon a three-inch steak, and there was revived light in her eyes.

"I'm in with Catherine," she explained. "Student nurses."

Mrs. Manners sat back and regarded her with puzzled eyes.

"Mummy, you're such fun—it's such fun to be talking to you again, and it's the best food I ever tasted! But darling," Victoria pleaded, "I had to do something. I couldn't just take a room somewhere and wait for you. You were with Ferdie way down in South America, and I was absolutely on the loose."

"But you were with Anna and Catherine."

"Aunt Anna got a most flattering offer from a school in Cleveland. We couldn't go with her, and Kitty was going to be a nurse. So I went along to the hospital with her."

Lesson for March 28

JOHN'S RECOLLECTION OF THE RISEN LORD.

LESSON TEXT—John 20:19-29; 21:20-24. GOLDEN TEXT—And when I saw him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not; I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death. Rev. 1:7,18. PRIMARY TOPIC—Our Living Lord. JUNIOR TOPIC—Eating Breakfast With Jesus. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Saw Jesus After His Resurrection? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Resurrection a Glorious Fact.

"The best authenticated fact in all history"—that is what competent historians have called the resurrection of Christ. One of America's greatest legal authorities used it as an illustration of how properly to prove a fact in court. If anyone comes to this lesson with doubts about the bodily resurrection of our Lord, let him give himself to a study of the evidence. He will find it overwhelmingly satisfying and complete.

That is as it should be, for the resurrection is vital to the completeness of man's redemption. Had Jesus died and remained in the grave, his claims would have been nullified; we should indeed have been "of all men most miserable" (I Cor. 15:19). But Paul goes on in triumphant faith, "Now is Christ risen from the dead." We have a resurrection faith, a living Saviour.

Our lesson brings before us our Lord in his post-resurrection appearance to his disciples, and a subsequent conversation with Peter. These verses fittingly tie up the resurrection of Christ with the life and service of his followers. Those who serve the risen Christ have an inward peace and an outward authority and power. Their convictions are based on the best of evidence and carry them forward to a life of personal responsibility and service.

I. Peace (20:19-21). Peace of Soul is absolutely essential to useful and satisfied living. Only as we are "steadfast, immovable," can we be "abounding in the work of the Lord" (I Cor. 15:58). Steady at the center, active at the circumference.

II. Authority (vv. 21-23). Commissioned and sent by the Son of God, clothed with Holy Spirit power, the Church of God has his authority. While some have read too much into verse 23, others have read out of it the real authority that God has given.

III. Conviction (vv. 24-29). Thomas made the serious error of being absent from the gathering of the disciples when the Lord Jesus stood in their midst. Let those who commonly absent themselves from the place and hour of worship take heed lest they miss a blessing, and coming later add nothing to the spiritual life of the church, but rather become troublers and doubters. But God graciously turns the doubt of Thomas into a means of blessing to all of us who since then have read of his experience. Thomas was an honest doubter. God is always ready to meet such with satisfactory proof. The trouble is that there are so many in the world who use professed doubts to cover a life of sin.

Doubt may come to any man. In itself it is no sin. But to cherish it and hold to it in unbelief—that is a different matter. One wise spiritual leader rightly counseled his people, "Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts. Never make the mistake of doubting your beliefs or believing your doubts."

When Thomas saw the Lord, doubt rapidly changed to strong personal conviction and abandonment of himself to his Lord and Saviour.

IV. Responsibility (21:20-24). This incident took place at a later appearance of Jesus to a smaller group of the disciples. The irrepressible Peter has, as usual, a question to ask, "What shall this man do?" It is a right thing to be concerned about the welfare of others, to see to it that they live right and do right. But there is in our relationship to God a primary personal responsibility, our own lives. The writer of the Song of Solomon (1:8) spoke a profound and deep-cutting word when he said, "They made me keeper of the vineyards; but my own vineyard have I not kept." Perhaps Jesus is saying to me, or to you, the solemn words that he spoke to Peter, "What is that to thee? follow thou me."

Personal responsibility should be one of the most resultful factors in the making of manhood, as in the finding of salvation.

AND the girl holding the curtains back, just looking on, might be joining the fun except for her misconception that "party" clothes are hard to sew. She made the neat sweet house model she's wearing with no trouble at all—but—

And Here's the Story. "Marge, did you really make your pretty dress all yourself? It looks so elaborate; I'd be afraid to cut into chiffon like that for fear I'd ruin it."

"Be yourself, Rose. It doesn't take a bit more skill to make my dress than yours. The pattern explains everything. You can't go wrong. I get a double kick out of making a party frock—I feel important sewing it and elegant wearing it. I couldn't begin to have so many party clothes if I didn't belong to 'The Sew-Your-Own!'"

"No, Auntie Rose, of course not. I've another one just like it that Grandma made for me. It's red and it has blue bands around it. I'm going to wear it to school tomorrow."

"Well, I see where I've got to get some silks and crepe, pluck up my nerve, and have clothes like other people. I wanted to join the Jolly Twelve but I just felt I didn't have anything to wear. Now I've decided to join 'The Sewing Circle' and make a real-fashion debut, come Spring!"

The following year he attended the second grade at Freedom, Alberta for a month, and later came to Michigan where his family went to Flint, and then to East Jordan where he has lived the last five years.

Ralph is about medium height with brown eyes, and brown hair. He is a shy, quiet sort of person, but easy to get along with.

During his high school career he has gone out for some sports. In the year 1935-1936 he played on the football team, and in 1936 he won a "J". The same year he also went out for track, and received a ribbon in class "C" which met at Mancelona, and went to Cadillac both years, and ran the mile the first year and the half mile the second year.

The subject that he likes best in Chemistry and says he dislikes English very much. (what boy doesn't.) After graduation he plans to stay home for awhile, and later on go to a trade school.

Eva Marie Dennis

On April 30, 1919 Eva was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dennis at East Jordan. Eva is a good looking senior, weighing 118 pounds, and is 5-ft-4 inches tall. She has dark brown eyes and light brown hair.

She started to school here and continued to the 4th Grade when she went to Lansing to Cedar Street School. She came back in the 5th Grade and has been one of the most popular girls throughout her school career.

She was president of the Jr. Class of 1936, and you saw her in the Jr. Play last year. She is a member of the Commerce Club this year.

In all the newspapers last winter you saw her as "the one and only Belle of the Blizzard." She reigned over the Blizzard Ball, the dances, and the Smelt Parade.

Her favorite subject is typing and her hobbies are dancing and swimming and Wade (ing).

We asked her what she planned to do after graduation, she says "stay at home", but whose home, perhaps hers. At least we have our opinions.

Senior Class Meeting

A Senior Class meeting was held Tuesday the sixth hour. The meeting was held to discuss the Student League. The President of the class read the League Constitution. Mr. Headfield came into the meeting and answered all the questions that were asked about the League. All of the Seniors were invited to join.

Commerce Echoes!

Commercial students are busy with their "Commerce Echoes" which are now coming off the press.

Each year the typing students do this project to teach them to cut stenils and make copies on the mimeograph.

To begin this work each student has to design a cover, and then the best one is chosen.

The honor of making the best cover goes to Ruth Darbee this year.

The book contains poems (a few are made up by students), articles concerning commerce, news of students in the Commercial Department, and some jokes.

They all have to make enough pages of their work for the rest of the students.

As La Vera Trumpour says, "They all get one free for twelve cents."

Observations

The treasures of all the classes are busy collecting money for the annuals.

The Senior cast has finally come back to classes but how they hate it. Stub Bowman is absent from school this week, guess he's visiting the smelt, which he does yearly.

The Juniors, we hear, are thinking about having a box social. (Let's all go)

Why is it that the boys are falling asleep during school hours? Are the smelt keeping them awake at night.

"Killer" Simmons is giving dancing lessons to the Sophomore parties.

Come on girls, Bill Bennett has his car out of the garage.

Can anyone forget Mr. Walcutt's favorite saying, "Get out pencil and paper for a test", and Mr. Jankovick's, "Clear the halls."

Is everyone missing Benny Clark and Willard Howe? How about it, girls?

Canners Take This One From Elk Rapids By A 53 - 28 Score

The fast-stepping local Independent Canner basketball quintet hung up its 15th win in 19 starts as they turned on the pressure Tuesday night, March 15th, romping all over the Elk Rapids Cardinals there 53 to 28. Fresh from their victory march in the Kalkaska tournament, the locals easily handed the bewildered Elk Rapids five its worst defeat suffered this year. Spike Russell, lanky 6 foot, 4 inch center, within the first three minutes of play had caged 5 field goals to give the locals an early commanding lead. The local defensive attack suffered a letdown, due probably to the long local lead for the Elk Rapids boy caged several unnecessary goals which might easily have been stopped. Handicapped by the absence of Hegerberg and Jankovick, forward and guard respectively, the locals doubted if they would be able to win without the services of these capable men. With the start of the game the locals began tossing in goals from all angles, mounting this sizable score with comparative ease.

Capt. M. Cihak and G. Saxton led the Canner scoring barrage with 14 points; Russell was a close second with 13; Derverney was high for the Cardinals with 11.

East Jordan Cannors Lose To Roscommon At Grayling Tournament

The local Independent Canner quintet, in conquest of another tournament championship, bowed to the Roscommon Ramblers 36 to 25 at Grayling, Thursday, Mar. 12. The locals playing a very poor brand of basketball were easy prey for the taller Roscommonites. Loose defense; work and inaccurate basket shooting spelled defeat for the locals. Their basket shooting was terrible, time after time they would break loose and with no one near them, miss easy shots from under the hoop. Capt. M. Cihak was the only local able to find the hoop, caging 14 points to lead his team-mates. The defeat, the fifth of the season, against fifteen victories, goes to show that a team must be functioning to a man to win a ball game. Starting for the Cannors, Capt. M. Cihak and Arne Hegerberg were at forwards, lanky Spike Russell at center, with Donald LaPeer and Gayle Saxton at the guard positions. Without the services of Harry Jankovick, tall guard, who plays an important part in the local offensive attack, the locals seemed wild, making many bad passes. Renkin and Ruthledge were high men for the winners with 12 points each.

Early Birds Lay Profitable Eggs

It's going to be the early bird or baby chick this year that is going to lay the most profitable eggs, if a look at egg prices, egg storage figures and dressed poultry storages and prices offers any reliable indications.

Questions about what to do and what not to do are pouring into the office of C. G. Card, poultry husbandman at Michigan State College. Card has no magic deck with which to read the future. But he is certain of one prediction. If poultrymen make profits in 1937 they will make them with pullets capable of laying eggs during the months of comparatively high prices, the three months of October, November and December.

High feed prices and lowering egg prices have cut possible egg profits in recent weeks. Storage holdings of dressed poultry are higher than usual and prices are low for fresh dressed and storage poultry. These factors have helped start the letters and questions flowing toward Card's office.

"Pullets must be six months old to be profitable producers. Egg prices usually are best during the last three months of the year. For a pullet to be six months old, it must be hatched not later than in April. It takes three weeks at least for hatcheries to set eggs and fill orders, so the deadline for making orders is just about now."

Reports of the federal and state crop reporting service in Lansing offer additional light on the poultry puzzle. On January 15 this year it required eight and a third dozen eggs to purchase 100 pounds of poultry ration. Twelve months before that 4.97 dozen eggs would have purchased the same feed, while on Jan. 15, 1933, only 2.21 dozen eggs would have bought the same feed.
