Killed In Bad Auto Accident

MRS. EUGENE SUTTON MEETS DEATH LAST THURSDAY

Mrs. Eugene Sutton was almost instantly killed last Thursday afternoon in an auto accident. Mr. and Mrs. Sutton and son Carl had been to Traverse City and were returning home. When between Eastport and Central Lake on M-88, two cars were coming and the second car passed the first one and so close that Carl, who was driving, had to turn to the side of the road to avoid being hit. There was fresh clay on the road and it had been raining so was slippery. The car slipped over the bank against a tree, striking above the back seat where Mrs. Sutton was riding. She said a few words but died within five minutes. She was taken to the Undertaking Parlors at Central Lake and brought to her home Saturday morning.

Funeral Services were held from the Chestonia school house, Sunday, July 3, conducted by Elder Dudley. Mrs. Verne Whiteford and Mrs. H. C. McKinnon sang "Beautiful Valley of Eden" and "For You I Am Praying." Burial was in the Mt. Bliss Cemetery.

She was a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. She will be greatly missed in her home and community.

Valuation Not Increased

To dispel a rumor going the rounds, the Board of Supervisors — at their June meeting — equalized as assessed not alone East Jordan, but every township and city in Charlevoix County with the exception of the City of Charlevoix.

In East Jordan there has been some decrease in real estate, but personal property has increased since a year ago that brings the City's assessment at about the same figure as in 1937.

Central Lake Going AFTER And Not TO The Dogs

The Central Lake village council has published the following notice:— All dogs running loose after July 1 will be caught and shut up and will be shot two days after the owner has been notified. By order of Village Council.

Beginners Band Is Under Way

STUDENTS MUST GET HOUR'S PRACTICE EACH DAY TO MAKE BAND BY FALL

With nineteen seniors going out of the school band this year, the band has a set-back which will take considerable work by the remaining members and its director to bring it back to the standard our band as a rule can boast of.

However, the large beginners class of mostly all students with a good school record, promises a good addition to the regular band before next winter.

A class of twenty-seven started tooting their horns and it is hoped they toot enough so they can enter the band before winter.

The parents of these boys and girls may be reminded that unless they put in at least 60 minutes practice a day, their chances of getting in the band is very small. The members are:—

Cornets — Elwyn Eggert, Leland Hickox Selma Brown and Jack Brennan.

Flutes — Mary Ann Lenosky, Betty Hickox, May Pollitt.

Claret — Vera Staley, Bernice son. Ebinger finds. Installation at hand, Margarite Weldy, Robert Trojanek and Mary Jo Blaha.

Saxophones — Frederick Bechtold, Lillian Peterson, and Louise Stanek.

Mellophones — Jack Sommerville, Marian Strehl, Mary Jean Simmons.

Trombones — Dick Valencourt, Peggy Drew, Jean Dennis, Katherine Blossie, Henry Grutsch.

Many Important Improvements Made At The Temple Theatre

We have come to take the numerous Temple Theatre improvements more or less for granted and as a matter of course for this enterprise has developed into one of the most modern in the Northern Michigan theatrical field. However the innovations just completed are so striking we cannot refrain from commenting on their beauty and utility.

Two new attractions boards have been added to the marquee display which extend the animated display across the entire width of the front and we doubt if another theatre in the State, outside of metropolitan areas, has a more modern or striking display of color and light. Extensive changes in the lobby and foyer present an entirely new arrangement noteworthy for its tasteful and beautiful appearance: An Alexander Smith "Crestwood" carpet in rich browns, reds and tans of modernistic pattern covers the entire inside lobby and foyer terminating at a colorfully illuminated glass block standee rail at the rear of the seating area. The old box-office has been supplanted by a modern office entirely of delightfully grained and matched birch and sparkling plate glass edged in satin finished aluminum. The Clark Cabinet Co. are responsible for superb workmanship and construction of this item. Out-of-sight improvements include additions to many of the mechanical devices employed, adding to the realism of the visual and audible result on the screen.

East Jordan may well be proud of this fine theatre and it is our privilege to sincerely compliment Mr. and Mrs. Drew on the noteworthy progress of their enterprise.

Pre-School Clinic One of Largest Ever Held

The pre-school clinic, held at the City Building, Thursday, June 30, was one of the largest attended here in many years. The clinic was conducted by Dr. Dean of District Health Unit No. 3, assisted by Anna Lawrence, Mildred Quick, Edith Russell and Mrs. Lucille Harrison.

About forty children were examined, most of these being vaccinated for smallpox and immunized against diphtheria.

E. J. H. S. Class of '16 Hold Reunion At The Tourist Park

At the Tourist Park, Sunday, July the third, the E. J. H. S. Class of 1916 held a happy reunion. Seven of the original sixteen members with their families were present, namely: Eunice Carr Usher of Grand Rapids, Vera McMillan Vance of Casanova, Leonore Kenny Dicken of Boyne City, Sadie Metz Sundstedt and Elwyn Sundstedt of Flint, Olivet Bartlett Holley and Grace Malpass Galmore of East Jordan, Russell Barnett with wife Edith Cary Barnett and Walter Brinkman who were with the class through most of the grades, Dick Dicken of Boyne City, George Vance of Casanova, Ora Holley, Jack Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Whitfield, Mr. and Mrs. George Vance Sr., Mrs. Anna Carr, Mrs. Sundstedt, Mrs. Ella Johnson and Mrs. C. Hilliard were among those present — the latter two representing absent members of the class.

Bessie Johnson Greenman of Detroit arrived too late for the reunion but in time to meet with several members, for a delightful visit.

The only sad feature of the occasion was the remembrance of the recent death of Helen Ward Milstein, a much-loved member of the class.

The occasion was so well enjoyed that the class wishes to meet again next year, including this time the classes of '15 and '17, and hopes for a full attendance at that time.

Class of '10, E. J. H. S., Hold Reunion With Former Classmate

The Class of 1910 of the East Jordan High School held its second annual reunion Sunday night at the Birds' Nest in Charlevoix as guests of Frank Bird and Mary Gunsolus Bird.

The high light of the evening was the dinner, which turned out to be an eating contest, ending in a draw.

We were so happy to have Julia and her husband and sons with us, and we are hoping that every member will try to attend next year when we meet with the Deweys at their farm home near Bellaire. Mary Gunsolus was elected Secretary.

Ethel Crowell, Sec'y.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When Charles Maurras came out of the Sante prison last year, he was met by a committee of distinguished Frenchmen, who nominated him for the Nobel peace prize and said they would make him a member of the Academy. They have just fulfilled the latter promise, and M. Maurras becomes an immortal by a majority of one vote.

He had spent 250 days in jail on a charge of having urged the assassination of 140 members of the chamber of deputies who had voted for sanctions against Italy; also on a charge of inciting the French people to "sharpen up their kitchen knives" for use against certain proscribed politicians.

In the 250 days he had written five books, swelling his vast collection of books on biography, politics, economics, literary criticism, history and what not to probably well over 100. I talked to him once in the Cafe des Lilas, a fragile, deaf, bearded old man with a contentious, blazing mind which makes one think of a sizzling battery running an automobile without any engine.

In 1923, he was in jail for four months in a somewhat anti-climatic adventure for one who was to be regarded as an immortal. Three members of the chamber of deputies were kidnaped and fed castor oil—Mussolini is said to have got his broad prospectus of Fascism from Maurras—and the bald head of one of them was painted with violet ink and glue.

In 1925, M. Maurras was sentenced to two years in prison, the charge being that he had threatened to kill the minister of the interior. Among the causes of his incarceration in October, 1930, was conspiracy evidence in the assault on Premier Leon Blum, in which he was severely beaten, while attending the funeral of a friend.

His books and virulent editorials against democracy in the Royalist, paper, translated into many languages, are the fount of Fascist doctrine all over the world. His hatred of democracy is savage and vitriolic. He is witty, learned, brilliant and he has the most exhorting and corrosive vocabulary in France.

FOOTNOTE to the main text of the world discussion on Japan bombing babies is the interchange between Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and William J. Bingham (Bill the Plugger), Harvard athletic director.

Mr. Brundage says it has nothing to do with sports, and Mr. Bingham says it has—with sportsmanship, at any rate—and he withdraws from the committee and the 1940 games. The sports writers are becoming almost metaphysical in weighing and appraising the moral values of the argument. Bill the Plugger says, in effect, that he won't play with baby-killers.

He became Bill the Plugger by losing 19 races at Harvard and winning the twentieth. Thereafter, he was Harvard's crack miler.

He started out plugging at the age of fourteen, leaving school to work in a mill and help support his five younger brothers and sisters. He saved $30, went to Exeter and worked his way through Exeter and Harvard.

He came out of the war a captain with appropriate decorations, did a turn in the banking business in Texas and became Harvard graduate supervisor and track coach in 1921. On the side, he is president of a concern which imports rubber goods.

IF GERARD B. LAMBERT builds a house, they're likely to find a center-board and a sky's yard on it. It's hard to see how he can get his mind off his yachting, but at any rate, he becomes special adviser to Stuart McDonald, federal housing administrator.

The gables and shaves of the multitudes built his chemical fortune at St. Louis. He was one of the original backers of Lindbergh and the originators of great advertising slogans.

WAGES FOR REAL WORK

President, Opposing Outright Dole, Still Looking for Solution of Unemployment Problem

Speediest ship in our navy, the destroyer McCull, was commissioned at the Mare Island navy yard in California. The McCull, first privately built navy vessel since 1921, has a specified speed of 38 1/2 knots, but in recent tests was reported to have averaged 42 knots. It carries four 5-inch guns and four quadruple torpedo tubes and is especially fitted for quick attacks on capital ships.

Spending Is a Stop-Gap

DECLARING the New Deal's objective is to give wages for real work and that he is opposed to the outright dole for bare existence, President Roosevelt said in a press conference that he is still looking for a permanent solution of the unemployment problem. He made it clear that he did not believe relief or public works afforded anything more than a stop-gap remedy for a little understood dislocation of the nation's economic and industrial life. In fact, he said, no country in the world has as yet worked out a method for dealing with the most acute unemployment situation in the history of the world.

He noted that public works expenditures had worked better in Sweden than in this country, because the Swedish government had been able in recent prosperous years to put on heavy taxes and pay off its borrowings. He said the Swedish method was being given close study. The President warned that the prosperity which vast outlays for rearmament appeared to have brought to European nations was unsound. When the munitions plants close down, he predicted, the nations of Europe will find themselves weaker in an economic sense than ever before. No nation, he argued, could spend its way back to prosperity by laying out vast sums in unproductive goods like weapons of war.

All federal spending agencies received instructions to launch the big spending push July 1, Mr. Roosevelt said. Funds will pour out through the Works Progress administration, the Public Works administration, the Civilian Conservation corps and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Aubrey Williams Scolded

AUBREY WILLIAMS, deputy WPA administrator, aroused the indignation of many citizens, especially of opponents of the administration, when he advised organized relief enrollees at a meeting in New York to keep the Roosevelt administration in power and to elect 100 per cent Roosevelt Democrats to office. He even incurred a mild rebuke from the senate committee created to investigate senatorial campaign fund expenditures and the use of public money to influence voters.

The committee pronounced Williams' speech "unfortunate" because of his position in the relief organization and uttered a warning against attempts by the spenders of the government's relief and pump priming billions to influence the votes of beneficiaries.

Williams sent a letter to the committee claiming there was no political intent in his speech and asserting he had been misquoted.

Farmers Out a Union

FIVE HUNDRED angry farmers invaded the Richland Co-operative creamery at Richland Center, Wis., to which they sell their milk, and drove out seven employees of a teamsters' union. They then forced the remaining employees to sign statements that they would not join a labor organization, and established a picket line to keep out union members and organizers. The demonstration was the climax of five months' resistance by the co-operative's directors, members and patrons against the organization of the plant by the American Federation of Labor teamsters' union. At the insistence of the national labor relations board, the creamery had just agreed to accept the union as a bargaining agent and not to oppose recognition further. N. S. Clark, Milwaukee regional director of the labor board, had agreed to withdraw charges of unfair labor practices against the company.

Indiana G.O.P. Picks Willis

RAYMOND E. WILLIS of Angola, Ind., a newspaper publisher and veteran political leader, was nominated for the senate by the state Republican convention in Indianapolis. Willis was named on the third ballot, defeating four rivals among whom was James E. Watson, former senator.

The nominee, who is sixty-two years old, has been the active editor and publisher of his weekly paper, the Angola Republican, since its establishment in 1898. He is president of the Steuben Publishing company, and, with another editor at its head, publishes the Angola Herald, a Democratic organ.

Fish Attacks Hamilton

HEATED discussion over immediate control of campaign funds among members of the Republican national executive committee, meeting in Washington, gave Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York an opportunity to renew his fight on National Chairman John Hamilton, whose removal he demanded.

With Hamilton out of power, Fish said, the Republicans would win 10 senate seats and 100 house seats. With Hamilton at the helm, he warned, Republican gains would be reduced by half.

Rep. Joe Martin of Massachusetts and Sen. John Townsend of Delaware, chairmen, respectively, of the house and senate G. O. P. campaign committees, have demanded allotment of funds from the national committee and exclusive control of their expenditure. Hamilton has resisted these demands.

Italy Checks Franco

VIRGINIO GAYDA, noted editor and spokesman for the Fascist regime in Italy, declared that Italy had advised Franco, leader of the Spanish insurgents, to use "moderation" in his efforts to prevent British and other foreign ships from bringing supplies to government Spain. Gayda said, however, that Italy approved the bombing of vessels carrying contraband, but disclaimed any Italian responsibility therefor.

Representations by the earl of Perth, British ambassador to Rome, had opened the way to an agreement to end the bombings. Mussolini was reported as ready to act only to spare Prime Minister Chamberlain from embarrassment. London dispatches said Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany had agreed to split the cost of withdrawing foreign troops from Spain. Russia refused to pay a full share of the expense, estimated at 10 million dollars.

Signs of Compromise

THERE are distinct indications of compromise and co-operation in the American picture, and hopes for restored prosperity are somewhat revived. The stock market has become unusually active, and private enterprise is awakening. Unfreezing of three billions in stored-up credit is expected to result from new banking regulations ordered by the President. Thousands of contracts for approved projects to cost almost $500,000,000 have been sent to all parts of the country by the Public Works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his latest radio address to the nation, said: "In simple frankness and in simple honesty, I need all the help I can get," and it seems that the people are ready to give that help if the administration will do its part.

Notable in the President's talk was the admission that mistakes have been made not only by his opponents and by industry and labor, but also by government leaders. He sharply attacked reactionaries in business, blaming them for much of the current depression.

Asserting his continued belief in individual enterprise and the profit motive, he criticized the recent congress for failing to enact his program for government reorganization and legislation to aid the financially depressed railroad industry. At the same time, however, he said the legislators "achieved more for the future good of the country than any congress between the end of the World war and the spring of 1933."

Wants Liberals Elected

MOST of the President's radio speech was frankly political. He declared himself the leader of the liberals and held that, as such, it was his privilege to intervene in state primary and election campaigns for the purpose of insuring the defeat of those whom he characterized as conservatives, the opponents of his policies.

This aroused the indignation of many Democratic statesmen like Senators Burke of Nebraska and King of Utah.

Senator King asserted the President should not use the great advantage he has in controlling the purse strings of the huge spending program. "People who have fought for the Democratic party for a great many years do not like interference in their state affairs by outsiders," he said. "I do not believe the President should meddle in the primary elections of the Democratic party or any other party."

General opinion was that Mr. Roosevelt had widened the split in the Democratic party and by his words had placed the stamp of his approval on the attempted "purge" directed by Corcoran, Cohen and others of his advisers.

For Naval Expansion

IMPETUS was given the naval expansion program with PWA allotments of $27,883,000 for the enlargement, extension and remodeling of existing plants and facilities of the navy department.

With orders for full speed ahead the navy department said that 113 projects, approved by Mr. Roosevelt, will be under way by August 15. Among the projects are power plant improvements, foundry building, high frequency radio station, fleet moorings, turret assembly facilities, improvements to ship building ways, structural assembly, electric and sheet metal shops, water storage, railroad tracks, noncommissioned officers' quarters, storage buildings and other improvements.

Mustn't Seize Hainan

THE British and French envoys in Tokyo warned Japan that any occupation of Hainan, Chinese island off the south coast of China, would be met by joint Franco-British action. The island, which lies near French and British trade routes, was bombed by Japanese flyers.

Germany is recalling the Germans who have been acting as advisers to the Chinese army, and diplomats believe Germany may now give active aid to Japan.

Swedes Celebrate

AMERICANS of Swedish descent by the thousand and many from Sweden gathered at Wilmington, Del., for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing in America of the first Swedes and Finns. From the old country came Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf with a large party, but he was confined to his suite on the liner Kungsholm by illness. His place was taken by his son, Prince Bertil.

The principal event of the opening ceremony was the presentation of a monument erected by Sweden on the landing site. The presentation was made by Prince Bertil and accepted by President Roosevelt. Then the President presented the monument to Gov. Richard McMullen for the state of Delaware.

After the monument ceremony there was a lawn party attended by Crown Princess Louise. The celebration was continued for four days in Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, parts of which states were embraced in the New Sweden founded in 1638 by a company of 150 Swedes and Finns sent to America by Gustafus Adolphus.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

WASHINGTON.—It is entirely possible that many people have failed to piece together several developments of national import lately, and may have missed the significance of an action of congress in its closing days. The two incidents to which I refer are the federal grand jury indictment at South Bend, Ind., of a number of automobile manufacturing executives and the action of congress in adoption of a resolution providing for a broad-gauge inquiry into big business. The two, when pieced together, spell a sensational drive against the "malefactors of great wealth."

The result? Well, let's examine the scheme, the pattern and the prospects. There was a period in 1930, it will be recalled, when business interests felt that President Roosevelt was preparing to follow a middle-of-the-road policy as far as government relations with business was concerned. During that period, there was a considerable improvement in general business. In that interim of time, as far as any observers could reach a conclusion, the President was relying on advice from many men in whom business had confidence. But there came a sudden end. Out of the clear sky, Mr. Roosevelt proposed reorganization of the Supreme court of the United States and the addition of six justices whom he could appoint at once. Through weeks of battle when it became apparent that one guess was as good as another whether the President would win, business men and women again became afraid. That was when the present depression began. It was also the time when Mr. Roosevelt turned away from his previous close advisers and began listening to the new brain trust which has come to be known as the "board of strategy."

As the depression became sharper and the numbers of unemployed increased with startling rapidity, the board of strategy sought means to offset the condition. The group also had to find a goat—which is always done when plans go awry. There followed then the vicious and intemperate attacks on "big business" by the trust-busting Robert H. Jackson, then favored at the White House as the next Democratic candidate for the New York governorship. Secretary Ickes also let loose his vocabulary and none can deny the interior secretary's capacity for speaking biting words. For weeks and weeks, we were treated to a barrage of words in which "big business" was pictured as beyond the pale of good citizenry and ought to be destroyed.

The trust-busting drive was not as successful in gaining public acclaim as had been hoped for. The truth is that it failed to get the country excited at all and the profit to the trust busters did not materialize as had been the case when "Teddy" Roosevelt was swinging a big stick of demagoguery in the same field of political endeavor. Indeed, this drive flopped at the start whereas the drive by the earlier Roosevelt was good politics for several years.

It was here, according to the best information available, that the tactics changed. The change in methods is the real reason for the story. Thus, it can be said that the trust-busting drive is still going on as strong as ever but it is going on in several fields without any apparent connection because the board of strategy has lost none of its determination to convince the nation that it is being ruined by those same malefactors of great wealth toward which Teddy Roosevelt waved his fist and bared his teeth.

Now, to put the pieces of the picture together. The first section comprises the indictment of the automobile moguls, Edsel Ford, Walter P. Chrysler, Alfred P. Sloan and William Knudsen, among some sixty-odd officials of Ford, Chrysler and General Motors and the companies affiliated with them in the financing of motor cars bought on the installment plan. They are charged with violation of the antitrust laws, although how anybody can believe the Ford interests ever could or would play ball with the other two, I have been unable to see. Anyway, big news stories were carried by the press services from South Bend, and the department of justice here had much "background" information which officials were delighted to hand to any inquiring reporter. They did this in order to co-operate with the press inasmuch as the story was so sensational and so vast in scope that none of us writers here could possibly be permitted to miss any phase of it.

The other phase of the continuing drive against "big business" takes the form of a great inquiry, thinly disguised as a general study of business practices. It is a somewhat unusual type of investigation and is to be managed in a very unusual manner. The committee that will do the job is made up of three senators and three representatives, and a representative from each of a number of executive departments and commissions. And the important fact in addition is that the $500,000 which the investigation will cost will be expended under the direction of President Roosevelt.

To bring it own to simple terms, when congress adopted the resolution for the inquiry, the board of strategy was able to turn on enough political steam to force adoption of an amendment placing the funds under the direction of the President, rather than under control of congress, as usually is done when congress participates in an investigation. That action means that investigators for the committee will be able to rely upon laws covering inquiries and searches made by the department of justice, the federal trade commission, the securities and exchange commission and the national labor relations board, among others. The combined powers will be all-comprehensive.

To explain further the full meaning of these broad powers, it is necessary to cite constitutional provisions prohibiting illegal search and seizure. The investigators for the committee must be able to dig deep into private records of any bank or corporation or individual if they are to accomplish fully the desire of the board of strategy for complete exposure of all the secrets of business. When they get all of those records, of course they can analyze them and place their own construction on the business practices. That is today, by inference and innuendo, hint or open charge, the investigators can smear anything or anybody—and the newspapers will spread the information. It being an official investigation, it will be followed closely by the press and, as usual, there will be little chance for the individuals to reply. When they are marked to be smeared, they will be smeared, whether justly or unjustly. It is a deplorable thing that our government stoops to that sort of thing but it has done so in a number of instances.

Now, as to the main objectives. Every indication is that the guiding hands in the projected investigation are determined to destroy two great masses of capital. I mean, they intend to break up the combination of men and money in two instances. The banking house of J. P. Morgan and company, and the huge industrial setup of the DuPonts are marked. Whether they like it or not, those two groups are to be made the goats of the depression of 1937-38, and those on the inside recognize that it is a fight to the finish. There will be other corporations, other individuals, whose business lives will be laid bare, but the Morgans and the DuPonts are the real targets. The board of strategy believes the Morgan bank and the DuPont interests are chiefly responsible for the refusal of business to yield on many of the crackpot ideas of the professors, and so it is inevitable those two groups will be cast as the villains.

There arises, next, the question whether such an investigation and such a prosecution as has been started at South Bend will do the country any good. One ought not prejudice. It may be that the motor magnates and their corporations are guilty as pups. It may be that the Morgans and the DuPonts and scores of others among families with great fortunes have set about to wreck the New Deal. But the question in my mind is: why has it not been discovered before? It seems to me that if there was so much corruption, so much improper influence being exercised and such illegal use of money power as is represented by those who were pushing the investigation, it should have been several years ago. Mr. Roosevelt has been in office five years and it appears strange that there was no effort to uncover these demons until the business of the country as a whole lost confidence in the policies of the national administration.

These developments have come along as the depression grew worse. They reach their climax of preparation at a time when another federal agency, the board of governors of the federal reserve system, says that the industrial depression in the United States now is the worst in the world. Neither England nor any other industrial country abroad has experienced a depression that has been as precipitous as the United States is experiencing, the board said in an official statement. The power is not given to me to determine the numerous and varied facts, but the processes of deduction eliminate many possible causes for our nation's condition—most of them, indeed, excepting governmental meddling and the harassing of business, big and little.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority
Explains What Is Meant by CORRECT NUTRITION

Describes How to Construct a Balanced Diet, So Essential to Maintain Optimal Health

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

TO SOME families, a summons to the dinner table means nothing more than a chance to satisfy hunger. To others, it represents an opportunity to gratify the palate, sometimes to the extent of overtaxing the digestive system. Neither of these extremes fulfills the true function of food, which is to provide adequately but not to excess, for growth, maintenance and repair of the body.

Food May Fail to Feed
You can satisfy hunger without providing correct nutrition. You can partake of delicious-tasting foods to the point of over-indulgence—without meeting bodily requirements.

The mere spending of money will not insure good nutrition, for extremely poor diets can be found in households where the income is large and the food budget is ample. What counts is learning to provide the right foods in the correct proportions. The return in health will be more than worth the investment of effort in acquiring this knowledge.

A Balanced Diet
Science has discovered what foods are necessary to help build top health and keep us 100 per cent fit. The amount of food required by a man for a day's work can be accurately determined. We know that a specific disease may be produced by one diet and cured by another; that growth can be influenced through changes in the quality of the dietary; that old age may be deferred by choosing the food with care.

We know that the body is a working machine which never stops but may slow down or get out of order unless the daily diet includes every element, every mineral, every vitamin needed to maintain health and avoid the deficiency diseases.

Seven Essentials
There are seven factors to be considered in planning a balanced diet. Protein for building body tissue and repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily. Carbohydrates to produce quick heat and energy. Fats—a more compact form of fuel, which are also essential in a satisfactory diet. Minerals which serve both as builders and regulators of body processes. The six vitamins, A, B, C, D, E and G, that also act as regulators and prevent a number of deficiency diseases. Water—which serves as a vehicle by which food is carried to the tissues. And cellulose or bulk—required for the normal functioning of the intestinal tract.

Danger in Omitting One Food Substance
The homemaker who fails to take every one of these factors into consideration is depriving her husband of the opportunity to develop his greatest efficiency. Moreover, she may be robbing her children of their birthright. During every day of childhood, the body is being built, and defects in body structure are likely to arise if the child is improperly nourished. It is then that disease and disability make their appearance as a result of faulty nutrition. How tragic to deprive the young body of substances so necessary to its well being.

How to Check Diet for Balance.
Perhaps you are like the homemakers who tell me that they do not know a protein from a carbohydrate. Or it may be that while you understand the difference, you do not know what quantities should be included in the diet each day.

To simplify your task of serving balanced menus at every meal, I have prepared a Homemaker's Chart for Checking Nutritional Balance. In convenient chart form, it shows what foods should be included in the diet every day and gives the standard amount for each food. There are also skeleton menus outlined by food classifications, which enable you to plan balanced menus for every meal by making a choice from each group of required foods. I urge every homemaker to write for this chart, and use it daily. Then you won't make such common mistakes as serving a dried legume as a vegetable at a meal in which meat is used, which tends to concentrate too much protein in one meal; or choosing a too-heavy dessert following a main course that is overly rich in carbohydrates.

60 Per Cent Carbohydrates
Carbohydrates should form at least 60 per cent of the supply of food fuel. Rarely are menus deficient in carbohydrates, because they are so widely distributed in such common foods as cereals, bread, potatoes, macaroni products, sweets, and sweet fruits and vegetables, such as oranges, grapes, apples and peas.

Fats should supply about 20 per cent of the caloric content of the diet. They are obtained from butter, margarine, cream, egg yolk, salad dressings, vegetable oils and the fat of meats.

A protein food should be provided at each meal. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, cheese, milk and most nuts supply complete protein. Cereals and legumes furnish incomplete protein which may be supplemented by the complete protein of milk.

The Protective Foods
It is essential that the diet should contain an abundance of minerals and vitamins which are furnished by the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Cellulose or bulk is obtained from fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals. Water comes from juicy fruits, succulent vegetables, milk and other beverages, as well as the water that is consumed as a beverage.

To provide adequate amounts of the seven food essentials at every meal—to avoid the mistake of serving too much of one type of food and too little of another—should be the worthy aim of every homemaker. You will find the task considerably easier if you send for the Homemaker's Chart. Tack it up in your kitchen or in the room where you plan your menus, and use it to check the nutritional balance of every meal you prepare.

If you faithfully follow the food program outlined in the chart, you will help to assure your family of correct nutrition. This is the most priceless gift you could bestow upon them. For nutrition is the architect that draws the plans of human destiny. In providing the right foods, you lay a firm foundation for health on which to rear a life of happiness and success.

GARDEN GOSSIP

EDITED BY CAROLINE HARRINGTON
Letters and questions on garden topics will be welcome. They will be published and discussed in this column.

Dear Garden Gossip Readers:
The day to which we looked forward so long is over. Our meeting in the rose garden of Dr. and Mrs. Bechtold is now only a memory but what a delightful memory, for the day was as perfect as we hoped for, — not a cloud in the sky and neither too warm nor too cool, the roses were beautiful to see (we had been holding our breath for fear they would come on too fast), and a large proportion of the Garden Club members were present, many of them with guests.

After the roses had been inspected and admired, Dr. Bechtold talked briefly about this well-loved flower with which he has had such unusual success, perhaps because he has been willing to devote to it so much time and study. He first touched on the history of the rose which had been cultivated for many centuries, even being mentioned in the history of days before Christ's time, then sketched for us an outline of the essentials of practical rose culture.

"The site of the rose garden should be sunny," said Dr. Bechtold, "and the soil should be rich and fairly heavy. Soil which dries out quickly or which does not hold its fertility will not grow the best roses. Trees or other plants too near your roses will rob them of the necessary amount of nourishment and sunshine. As evidence of this, Dr. Bechtold pointed out several rose bushes which have been dwarfed by a tree growing near the edge of his rose bed.

Although it is possible to successfully plant roses in the fall, Dr. Bechtold advises spring planting in our Michigan climate. The hole should be dug deep enough to cover the plant up past the graft, (or with the base of the branches even with the soil) and wide enough so that the roots may be spread out evenly.

Careful planting, which includes firming the soil about the roots and thoroughly watering them, should be followed by a rather severe pruning to stimulate a vigorous growth and early bloom. Five or six stalks are enough and these should be cut back to four or five inches from the ground.

Of all flowering plants, roses are the most voracious feeders, and need a great deal of fertilizer to make a good growth and to bloom freely. Dr. Bechtold has found well rotted barnyard manure the most satisfactory of all fertilizers. He also recommends frequent cultivation to discourage weeds and to introduce air into the soil and conserve moisture.

Against the winter cold a mulch of leaves is sufficient protection, through some losses are to be expected each year. Dr. Bechtold's roses suffered, though not seriously, from the more common rose afflictions, mildew attributed to long spells of humid weather or late evening watering with the hose, and, of course, the June 27th: A wren has a nest in our apple tree, and goes into violent hysterics if I walk near her while working in the garden. For a bird not much bigger than one's thumb, she can make a lot of noise.

June 28th: It seems to me one can spend an unlimited time weeding a garden. I no sooner get over it than it is time to start again.

June 29th: It is a fine time to drive around and see the country. So many flowers and gardens. The delphiniums seem unusually lovely everywhere this year.

aphids or plant lice. Just now he is experimenting with a spray which has proved effective against these pests if it is used regularly.

The Bechtold garden contains 50 or more named varieties of the Hybrid Tea rose. This rose which has a long line of distinguished ancestors was chosen by the doctor because it so well withstands our cold winters. It is particularly well known for its characteristic of continuous growth, and blooms more or less freely all season.

It would be impossible for me to choose a favorite from among the doctor's lovely roses. Each has its own individual grace and special appeal, each one seems to say, "Choose me." The gorgeous salmon colored Countess Vandall which won first prize at the Century of Progress Fair has also won first place with Mrs. Bechtold, though she says the velvety red Gruss an Teplitz, so dark as to be almost black, is a runner up. The doctor did not name his favorite if he has one but he calls his roses all by name, the popular Souvenir de Claudius Pernet, the red Francis Scott Key, the exquisite salmon-pink Betty Uprichard, the delicate pink Red-ance, and many more beside, not forgetting the glamorous Frau Karl Druschki which was exhibited by Mrs. Charles Crowell at the Garden Club's Delphinium Show.

After his talk, the doctor discussed questions asked by the club members, many of whom are growers of fine roses.

Tea was served on the lawn by Jean Bechtold and Betty Harrington. Mrs. Drew and Mrs. Harrington were hostesses of the day.

C. H.
Dear Mrs. Harrington:
It was very nice of the ladies to furnish such gorgeous bouquets for our little flower show last week. I wish we might sponsor a show every month and discuss the flower chosen.

I think every one will appreciate and know more about roses after seeing Dr. Bechtold's garden and hearing him talk.
Have you noticed how attractive the Pat Foote back lawn is, — that Harry Simmons has a new lawn and it is looking green and lovely, — that the Vern Whitefords are making sort of a rock garden at the front of their lawn? And don't you think that Jack Kenny deserves a lot of credit for trying to raise flowers and shrubs on the sandy lot near the Temple Theatre? I am sure the Garden Club has stimulated civic pride, and we hope it will continue to grow.

Chairman - Exhibit Committee
M. M. M.
What a grand idea! It certainly would be an inspiration to the Garden Club to see such a beautiful exhibit of bouquets at each of its meetings. I do hope that the Executive Committee will consider favorably your generous proposal.

Still, it does seem to me that to carry out such an idea would mean a great deal of work for your committee. Of course, we could show the flowers without special plans for their arrangement, — but I do think that the background and grouping you provided for our delphinium show added much to its attractiveness. I wonder if it would not be necessary for you to have additional help if the bouquet show were to be made a regular feature of Garden Club meetings.

And, by the way, for the benefit of those not present at the Delphinium Show, Mrs. Howard Porter's bouquet of delphiniums and snap dragons in U. of M. colors (the yellow and the blue) took first place for arrangement and Mrs. Walter Mower's of delphiniums and lilies took second place. 1st place for delphinium bloom was taken by Mrs. Howard Porter's bouquet of delphinium and syringa. The delphiniums in this bouquet, gorgeous, heavy stalks in many shades of blue, were from the garden of Mrs. Bert Hite.

I wish there were time and space to describe all of the flowers for those who could not attend the show, the graceful and original arrangement of gallardias and delphiniums, of canterbury bells and delphiniums, of sweet William and delphiniums, of peonies and delphiniums. I was proud of the show. It made me feel that our Garden Club is going places!

The block on Second Street between Esterly and Williams always reminds me of a painting I used to admire in the Detroit Art Gallery. It was entitled, I think, "New England Village Street" and portrayed neat houses set amongst great trees which cast long sun-flecked shadows over smooth lawns. The artist must have found in New England just such a town as East Jordan.

Perhaps there is no satisfaction quite like that of making barren, sandy soil produce. Certainly Jack deserves our thanks, but his real reward will be in the pleasure of replacing ugliness with beauty.

Hilltop: When Professor Taft saw the Campbell trees he said without qualification that they had been killed by the kerosene put on them to kill army worms. He warned against the use of any such agent which is likely to penetrate the bark and kill the vital tissues through which the sap circulates. He also spoke of the danger to roots when the ground above them is disturbed or covered, as by sidewalks and pavements. Trees, too, the same as our lawns and flower gardens, appreciate watering and an occasional meal of fertilizer.

I had a fine mess of chard greens from Mr. Richard Lewis's garden last week, and his potatoes and corn are looking fine. Sweet peas which he planted for Mrs. Lewis are all budded and thrifflily climbing up their wire trellis. By the time this goes to press they will be in bloom and so will the rambler roses so much admired by this friend whose smile we miss these days.

Lansing — That federal pump-priming for national recovery is also going to be vote-priming for Governor Frank Murphy in Michigan this fall is rather generally conceded today at the capital city.

Even republican hopefuls are looking a bit wistful, if not downright envious, at the forthcoming gush of millions from Washington, D. C.

Yes, the mad scramble is on for gifts from the Great White Father. Michigan wants to get its share, as its taxes to the federal government have been more than double the funds it has obtained.

Governor Murphy proclaims that he is going to "sit down" on the White House step until Michigan gets all the millions it can grab.

As we pointed out in the column one month ago, the federal spending campaign for 1938 will be no small factor in the forthcoming election. Let's look at the latest developments.

U. S. Funds for Bridge

At Port Huron where he surveyed the Blue Waters international bridge for the first time, Governor Murphy announced that federal funds for a bridge at the Straits of Mackinac was practically assured, that President Roosevelt was "enthusiastic" and that steps would be taken at once to set up a new straits bridge authority including a "nationally-known engineer" as its advisor.

Among the pet dreams of the tourist leaders in Michigan is a bridge at the Straits.

If federal money could be obtained at once to make possible the bridge undertaking, the state administration would have a nice bright red feather in its hat. At present the resort business men all the way from Berrien county to Gogebic county are miffed at the governor's reform crusade which has halted a rich harvest of tourist nickels, dimes and quarters into slot machines.

Many a resort owner has paid his taxes and insurance with slot machine receipts contributed by outstate visitors. And, too, there is still grumbling over the professed inability of the four tourist associations to obtain an interview with the state executive at Lansing.

The Straits bridge offers an ideal truce.

Straits Traffic Mounts

Back of all the pre-campaign speech-making — for actually the fall campaign has not yet begun — is a growing realization in Michigan that the proposal for a Straits bridge is supported by some rather convincing facts.

Take the following eye-openers: During the 15 years of ferry operation by the state highway department, traffic has increased from 10,000 vehicles in 1910 to nearly 275,000 last year. In five years the ferry fleet has been doubled. At the present rate of growth Michigan's motor vehicle is due to double within the next 15 years; the number of motor vehicles on public highways is due to increase 40 per cent.

Aerial photographs taken one year ago of the July Fourth traffic jam at the Straits shows a continuous line of waiting cars nearly ten miles long!

Happy memories of Michigan as the leading vacation land may depend upon the peak load ferry service at the Straits. Yet, it is simply impractical to provide enough ferry boats to take care of holiday rushes.

Staggering Relief Load

George Granger, state relief administrator, raised some eyebrows the other day when he announced that approximately 75,000 of the 104,200 persons in Michigan now getting direct relief are unemployables.

No matter how times improve Michigan will have to care for 75,000 citizens who cannot work, Granger reminds.

The problem of unemployment relief is staggering enough, as many industrial centers find as they scrape treasuries for funds and implore aid from Lansing and Washington. Lansing itself has dipped into 1939 appropriations and special funds for $6,500,000 relief cash.

Taxpayers will hear more of the Michigan problem of unemployed and unemployables, as a referendum will be held in November on the state welfare act.

Deficit $13,800,000

One year ago the state legislature adjourned, leaving a $18,000,000 deficit in the governor's lap.

The generous law-makers, having done a little wealth distributing of their own, had the thoughtfulness to invest the governor with powers of a financial dictator. Harold Smith, budget director, was told to trim expenditures.

The other day the prospect of the deficit, in advance of an official announcement, was given at $13,800,000. Some progress has been made, it will be agreed, in reducing a deficit from $18,000,000 to $13,800,000.

and Oklahoma are the only two states port budget deficits at all. Oklahoma in '48 which are going further into the red. Only a half dozen states reports $21,450,000; New York, $10,200,000 as compared with $94,428,496 in 1933; California, $7,600,000. Surplus states include Pennsylvania with $92,695,000; Indiana, $24,000,000; Illinois $19,124,000; Minnesota, $1,250,000; Wisconsin, "pay-as-you-go"; and Ohio and Rhode Island where state laws require a balance.

Simultaneously with the spending program at Washington, you may expect to hear of an economy program at Lansing.

How far the economies will go is something else.

With relief of unemployed and unemployables and an increased state deficit running side by side at the 1938 half-way mark, the tax problem again surges to the front. After all, the next session of the state legislature is only six months off.

There was a desk by the south window, a desk that any antique dealer who knew his business would give much for. It looked to James' discerning eyes like something brought over from England ages ago. A beautiful antique. And sure enough, here was the photograph. No wonder his small namesake hadn't recognized him. This picture was taken when Nora went to college. Here was her husband, too—an enlargement made from a snapshot. Don was just starting for a climb, his rucksack slung over one shoulder.

Recalling the wheel-chair, James Lambert winced, and laying the picture down—as if it hurt him, lifted another. The children, of course. His grandchildren! A thrill of pride stirred in the old man's heart. Here was his namesake; an older boy; and baby Iris. A flower indeed! She seemed to resemble faintly that other Iris whom James had loved so dearly, that he could forgive the unforgivable, and still think of her with tenderness after all these years. He was glad that Nora had not forgotten her mother. When Ned's first daughter had arrived and he ventured to suggest the name of Iris, Corinne had been appalled. What! call her baby after a woman who had deserted one child and had another by her lover! James smiled tolerantly at this old memory. Best not go back to it. After all, Corinne was a good woman, a good housekeeper, and always invited him to Sunday dinner! If she were inclined to be uncharitable to the erring, well, time was already fixing that—and time and a boy she had spoiled with too much money and too little work.

He wondered, mildly amused at the idea, what Corinne would think of this big room. She would undoubtedly spot the packing boxes and the shabby chair. No such detail ever escaped her. And the family photographs! Her father-in-law could hear her say: "Photographs! Is it possible that Nora's not aware that photographs of that sort are taboo, save in a bedroom? Why, Father Lambert, it simply isn't done!"

The old man laughed softly at this vivid picture. Often enough he had felt annoyed at Corinne; but now she didn't seem to matter, not in the least. He believed there was something soothing about this room. It was so friendly, as if it bid you to be comfortable. One felt instinctively that those who lived here loved one another and were happy together. The shabby upholstery of the old chair—the worn hangings at the windows, were of no consequence. A healing sense of peace pervaded everything. This was a home. Ah! That was the explanation, James reflected. Stable or palace, this was a real home.

Suddenly his head lifted. His heart quickened. A door had opened—closed again softly. Light footsteps sounded—were coming nearer. He wanted to turn—must turn to face the door, but found he could not. And then a dear remembered voice broke in upon him:

"You wished to see me? I am Mrs. Mason. Jimsy says you are a friend of—Why, Father!"

It was then James turned—stretched out his arms . . .

He was holding her close, his little Nora. It took him back to that long-gone, tragic day when he had first held her, comforted her, and all unknowing comforted himself. A sense of that same comfort flowed through him now, healing the wound of those ten years without her. And though she wept, as she had wept that other time, all that her father found to say was: "Nora . . . Nora . . ."

"You've been a long time coming, Daddy," she told him when at last she could find words; and looking down into her upturned face, James saw, a quick pang of regret stabbing his heart, all that those years had done to Leonora. Something he'd loved and hoped to see again was gone; yet meeting her tear-wet eyes, the old man knew that his daughter's girlhood beauty had not vanished. It had only changed—changed into something more to be desired—more beautiful . . .

"You've been a long time coming," she said again; and James responded:

"I've been a stubborn old idiot, my darling. When you stopped writing I told myself that you'd ceased to care—grown tired of a father who had failed you. And yet I worried, Nora—watched for your letters—hoped . . ."

She drew him to the old pew by the fire. Her hands, those hard, brown hands James scarcely recognized, trembled a little.

"How could I write?" she asked as they sat down together. "We needed help too badly—don't you see? You told me, Father—"

He stopped her with an impatient gesture that she remembered.

"Oh, you needn't repeat it! Were you really foolish enough to think I meant that threat? And how was I to know you needed help, dear, when you did not tell me? I didn't dream how things had gone with you, not for a minute."

"But the papers, Father!" Nora's eyes widened with surprise. "The story was there for all the world to read. I thought you'd come when you knew how Don was injured. I thought you'd forgive us. I lay in bed after our little girl was born—so frightfully worried about Don—too weak to go to him, and every time a bell would ring I'd think: 'Perhaps that's Father! He wouldn't leave me to face all this alone. He'll come. He'll see that Don has everything he needs. He will take care of us.' And—and you didn't come, Father. Not that it matters now you're here at last, but—"

"Listen," James interrupted, his voice shaking. "I was sick, dear child, down with pneumonia at the time of that catastrophe. I never read those papers, not one of them. It was no longer front-page stuff when I recovered. To be sure, Ned saw something that made him suspicious; but the name was misprinted and he didn't want to worry me about it then."

"You must forgive him, Nora. The boy was going through troubles of his own at that time, serious troubles. I dare say he forgot everything else. Don't blame him any more than you can help, dear. We all do the wrong thing at times. And once in a great while—thank God—we're given the opportunity to make amends. Last night, you see, Ned realized that I was troubled. I'd been crying when I went up to see her birthday gifts, crying because of you. For the first time in all these years, Nora, we talked about you; and in her own, kind, carefully respectful way, she showed me myself—told me the truth that I had long suspected.

"I went down at last, and sat on the old davenport where you and I so often threshed things out together, trying to think how I could find you, dear. And I should have found you, Nora, if you'd been at the North Pole! Then Ned came in. He had heard news of you—it doesn't matter how. He wanted to come himself but I refused to let him, I was so hungry for a sight of you! For you are my little girl, darling. Nothing has altered that, nor ever can. When I think what you've been through—Tell me," he broke off abruptly, "how did you manage? What kept you going? Who helped you when you needed help so desperately?"

Said Nora, a far-away look creeping into her eyes: "A woman in South Africa. Father. The sort of woman we're supposed to 'pass by on the other side.' It's too long a story to go into now, but she gave me a diamond. It was very beautiful—so beautiful that, though it was saving us, I wept a little when I gave it up!"

Nora paused thoughtfully a moment; then went on: "You see, Father, things were very bad indeed. All we had saved had gone into this home. There were only a few hundred dollars in the bank when we started West, but we weren't worrying. There was plenty to see me through my confinement, and more was promised. We had never felt so sure about the future—so light-hearted."

"And then—the avalanche! For weeks the doctors thought Don would not live. For months he could not leave the hospital. He lay on one of a long, long row of narrow beds—nothing to hear but sounds of sickness and clamor of city streets—nothing to see but four bare walls; and he so loves beauty! Only to think about it tore my heart in two. And the pain—grinding, unceasing, wearing away his splendid strength as water wears away the stones—upon a beach. I think all that he wanted then was to die, Father, to end the struggle; but remembering what I had to face alone, he kept on fighting."

"It was very terrible. I couldn't even run in to cheer him at odd times, for he was in a ward. I couldn't buy him a single flower. For the money was going—melting away so fast it frightened me; yet how could I leave the babies to earn more even if I had known some way to do it? Constance Venable, who would have shared her last crust with us, was far away. I had no one to turn to. I sold some of the trinkets you'd given me; but could not get half their real value and what they brought only staved off the inevitable for a little while."

"And then one night when I was counting the endless hours, it came to me like an inspiration that my diamond was worth money—real money. It saw us through. Dad—kept us going—brought us back home when Don was able to be moved. Such a joy to be where he can watch the sea and feel the wind on his face! Almost from the first minute he started gaining. He's writing again now—a book—but the work goes slowly. You see, there is still much pain; and his nerves aren't steady. But he tries so hard to get the better of them, Dad. He's so courageous . . ."

Her voice died down as if tears threatened again; and James said, his own voice husky with emotion: "See here, Nora. I realize that you can forgive me a great deal because you understand. You know that though I was too stubborn to admit it, I have always loved you—missed you unexpressably. But how will your husband regard me now? In his eyes I have betrayed a trust—let you bear burdens too heavy for your shoulders. Can he forgive too, or—"

"In just a moment," broke in

Nora softly, one hand thrown out in an expressive gesture, "I—I think we'll know."

James raised his eyes. The curtains at the door had parted, and standing before them, his hair blown back in the familiar way, stood Don, his boys beside him, his baby daughter clinging to one hand.

Even that first quick glance told much to Nora's father. He saw that the once straight shoulders sagged a little, as if the effort to stand erect was now too great. He saw that the wind-blown hair was white above the temples—the eyes seemed deeper set—the cheekbones higher. But he saw also that the lines on Don's thin, tanned face were born of suffering, not self-pity; and that his head still lifted buoyantly as of old.

Unconquered! The word, so singularly fitting, sprang into James Lambert's mind as he arose. Unconquered! That was Don Mason. Never again could office walls imprison him. He had got beyond them . . .

There was a silence; then Don said gently: "Well, sir?"

Only two words, but to the old man they were a challenge, and he met it generously. Though his eyes smiled, his voice was wholly serious.

"I lay down my sword. The enemy surrenders to the better man." And then Don laughed, a laugh that seemed to bring the clean, gay spirit of adventure into the room. Impulsively he started forward, but stopped, remembering; while James saw with quick compassion that one foot dragged.

"The enemy?" Don echoed. "I think not, sir." He glanced down, meeting the puzzled young faces that were lifted to him. "Children," he said, "attention! Salute your grandsire. The old King has come home!"

(THE END.)

Kissing Ladies' Hands Still One of the Customs of Many European Countries

Kissing ladies on the hand is still one of the customs of many European countries. But ladies' hands to be kissed abroad do not all follow the same rule. In some places it is customary to do that to the married and not to the unmarried or vice versa; it is hard to remember which, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In Austria and Rumania you do it to all, old and young. In Austria it is most important to kiss the hand at the end of a dance. Indeed in that hand-kissing land you hand-kiss when you are introduced to a lady and also when you leave and on many other occasions. On the street, however, in Bukharest, the salute is a raising of the hat to all men and women, not a mere English "tipping of the topper," but a wide flourish of the hat.

Hand-kissing, it has been said, deters some of our rough and ready he-men from visiting Europe, as its fine graciousness does not harmonize with our pioneer individualism and wives might misunderstand. But when a European gentleman confers this gracious act on an American woman she usually is delighted.

Customs strange, beautiful and old certainly are one of the strongest attractions of Europe. To meet people whose education and environment has been so different from our own is part of the joy of living.

Americans find titles in Europe equally amusing. In several countries, notably Germany and Scandinavian lands, plain "Mr." seems to have disappeared. Instead the natives attach a high-sounding word to one's name suggestive of what he does for a livelihood. In Austria the waiter in cafe after cafe may address you as "Herr Doktor" or as "Herr Baron."

First Color of French Flag

While it is not usual to associate red with the French monarchy, it was really the first color of the king's flag, called the oriflamme. It is only because red was also adopted by the English king that the French gave it up for blue. It was under the blue flag that Huguenots came to America first as loyal subjects of the king of France. However, the red flag was preserved on the galleys of the Mediterranean fleet where terrible suffering was endured by the unhappy men who could not understand the injustice of the king.

Lesson for July 10

CALEB: LIFE-TIME DEVOTION

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 14:6-16. GOLDEN TEXT—Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it.—Numbers 13:30. PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Caleb. JUNIOR TOPIC—Caleb the Brave. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Hero's Reward. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage for Difficult Tasks.

"We need to know more about good men who are occasionally great, and less about great men who are occasionally good," says the Lesson Commentary, in pointing out that Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does not say much, but in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:6, 30; 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for today.

The background for our study of today, and in fact an integral part of the lesson itself, is the story of Caleb's courageous stand with Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. He was then a comparatively young man, but demonstrated by his every word and deed that he had from his youth learned to know and obey God.

I. Perfect Obedience (vv. 6-8).

"I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. In saying it he was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to such a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need know only one thing—God's will, and then in faith to go and do it. It is a life beautiful in its transparent simplicity and powerful in the strength of God Himself.

II. Promised Inheritance (v. 9).

"Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed, but down through this period of wilderness wanderings and the conflict in subduing Canaan the promise had lived in Caleb's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which lighten the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill them.

III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10, 11).

"The Lord hath kept me alive . . . and I am . . . strong." Here was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeable sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians," but even apart from that let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with God in holy living may count on Him for the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental, but extremely important, lesson, we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently sinned against Him and against His faithful servants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing to themselves and to the church by encouraging and using them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15).

"If . . . the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God. It is significant that while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15).

The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land in this year of our Lord 1938. Corruption—social and political—raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them. There are giants "within us"—greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Blakie). Are we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Caleb—able. In His name we may take up a slogan of today, "Let's do something about it!" and really do it, for His glory.

Quick, Easy Stitches For Summer Frocks

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A BIT of hand embroidery for the collar and sleeves of a little girl's dress is always the smartest trimming. Quickly made stitches and interesting colors may be combined to give unusual effects.

The dress shown here is pale blue chambray. The collar and sleeves are edged with blanket stitch in a deeper blue as shown at A. Between each blanket stitch a tiny loop stitch is made in white and three larger white loop stitches at the top of every second blanket stitch as shown at B. When used on a fabric of this weight the embroidery should be rather coarse to show up well. All six strands of a six strand embroidery cotton may be used or No. 5 pearl cotton. For a dress of fine sheer material such as dimity or organdie use finer embroidery thread. Other attractive color combinations are pink material with deep rose and French blue embroidery, yellow with brown and orange or green with yellow and white. For a printed fabric, repeat two of the strongest tones in the printed design or use white collar and cuffs embroidered in the background color of the print and one of the brighter tones.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, Sewing for the Home Decorator, covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; 48 pages of fascinating directions. Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts, with 36 stitches illustrated, will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Consent Lost Upon John In His Great Anxiety

John felt that he could never ask Pamela to be his wife.

True, he loved her as he had never loved anyone else before, but then she was an angel, while he had many little weaknesses of which no angel would ever approve.

Pamela, on the other hand, spent her time thinking that it was high time John spoke up!

One night he came to the point. "Pamela, Pamela," he urged, "will you marry me?"

"You bet," she replied briskly.

"I know, darling," he answered, ashamed. "But if you'll only say, 'Yes,' I'll promise never to back another horse!"

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Doan's E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves, and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste. Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disease may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

LUMBER!

Though America's logging industry has been on the downgrade several years because of heavy imports, this spring one of the largest timber log drives ever run in New England took place near Machias, Maine. Over 4,000,000 feet of lumber—pine, hemlock and spruce—was floated down the river to the Whitfield mill 45 miles south. Lumberjacks work hard all winter but the drivers have more adventure during the drive when they must balance themselves on swirling logs, pry open jams and sleep in a different "home" every night. They wear caulk shoes with spikes.

There's little waste time or waste space in the camp's kitchen where Cook Leonard Elwell prepares 240 meals a day, moves 35 miles down the river and sets up his equipment again. To supply 60 men participating in the last drive he cooked 500 doughnuts, 500 sugar cookies, 200 biscuits, 16 loaves of bread, boiled four hams and cooked 50 pounds of beef, all on the above stove. And it was plenty good, if the young driver at the right knows what he's smiling about!

They eat four meals a day, these drivers, and when the day is over they sit around the campfire and chat about one of America's most colorful industries, logging, a business that demands hardy men who like outdoor life and isolation. Gone forever is the heyday of America's logging industry with its Paul Bunyan and blue oxen, but the colorful picture of north woods life will live forever in song and story.

HOW TO WRECK A VILLAGE

PIE-A-POT and Long Lodge, Cree chieftains, audacious warriors and veterans of many a scrap with other tribes, ruled their villages with an iron hand. They were happy, prosperous and had very little trouble. Shortly after the coming of the "red coated pony soldiers of the Great White Mother," the Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge tribes of Crees had been given a splendid reservation with timber and game and fish in abundance. There they had settled down peacefully.

And then one day, to the astonishment of all concerned, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge ordered their tribesmen to pull stakes, for the two tribes were going for a ramble across the country without having any particular destination in view. The handful of white settlers became a bit alarmed, but their alarm subsided when they observed the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were orderly.

In time the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges came across a large party of white men digging up the ground and also laying thin strips of iron or steel across the flat prairie. "What is all this?" inquired the majestic Pie-a-Pot. "Oh . . . just building a railroad," replied one of the workmen. The Crees moved on into the west and when they were about a mile or so past the end of steel the two chiefs ordered the tribes to pitch camp.

Slowly but surely the end of steel crept closer and closer toward the Cree encampment and it was later discovered that the camp was situated on the right of way of the railroad. As the end of steel moved closer and closer, engineers and foremen parleyed with Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge, entreating them to move either to the right or left, off the right of way, so that the work could go on without unnecessary delays. The chiefs stood firm, and in time refused to parley further with the engineers in charge.

Then, one fine morning Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were visited by two red-coated horsemen, a sergeant and constable of the Northwest Mounted Police. The argument was soon going again, and matters reached such a stage that the sergeant informed them that they had better move or he would do the moving for them. Pie-a-Pot let out a ninety horse-power howl, and soon the sergeant and constable were surrounded by hundreds of howling, painted Crees out for blood and scalps and the complete destruction of the white invaders. During a lull in the melee, the sergeant took out his watch and told Pie-a-Pot that he would give him exactly 15 minutes to move off that railroad right-of-way. Instantly there was another demonstration of anger and truculence, and the two Men of the Mounted sat their saddles as best they could in the milling mob. As the last tick of the fifteenth minute passed into eternity, the sergeant of the Northwest Mounted Police dismounted right into the midst of that bloodthirsty mob. He forced his way through it and walked right over to Pie-a-Pot's teepee and kicked the keypole down. While squaws and children howled and screamed under the collapsed teepee, the sergeant walked to the next teepee and kicked the keypole of that one down. From one to the other that lone sergeant strode, kicking keypoles down until every teepee was flat. Young bucks and so-called "braves" followed close on his heels, pushing against him, making faces at him, cursing him, and doing all they could to annoy or frighten him, but the sergeant just kept right on going until all teepees were flat, and in spite of their proximity, not one Cree had dared to strike a blow at the courageous sergeant. With everything flattened, the sergeant mounted his horse and gave his last order.

"Orlight . . . bustle abah! a bit . . . On the move . . . shove orf abah! your blurry business, wotever it is," all of which was his cockney way of saying "Git goin'." Meanwhile, Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge were so angry they were stumped for words. Never had they seen such audacity. One lone man, wearing a red coat, had literally wrecked their village. It is highly probable, moreover, that Pie-a-Pot and Long Lodge realized that if the other men of the Mounted were anything like this sergeant, perhaps the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges had better not get into any more arguments with them. These red coats were bad medicine. At any rate, as the chieftains saw the hopelessness of further resistance, they muttered a few words to nearby tribesmen, and within two hours the Pie-a-Pots and Long Lodges were heading for their reservation. En route Pie-a-Pot chanced to remember that if he didn't behave himself the Great White Mother would stop sending supplies of food and flour and clothing and that little bit of treaty money now and then. "Oh well, what a day it's been, anyway," he might have said, as he arrived at the reservation.

New Fabrics of Sheer Loveliness

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A FAVORITE theme this summer is the sheer loveliness of diaphanous, airy-fairy transparent fabrics, either cotton or silk. The new sheers are simply enchanting and they are the sought-for kind to make up into gowns for picturesque garden party wear or for dancing under star-spangled skies or when dining at fashionable roof-garden gatherings where beauty and romance keep rendezvous.

Gowns designed to grace summer-time scenes are fashioned of wispy chiffons either printed or monotone, or of organdies crisp, sheer and intriguing, or of dainty silk marquisette which is an especial favorite. Then there are the soft fine cotton voiles in pretty colors and as for lace every summer wardrobe is expected to include at least one party frock made of it. As a matter of fact lace is playing a stellar role this summer. The lace that captures the heart of enthusiasts is a delicate-as-cobweb type the patternings of which is a mere tracery. Gowns of this fetching lace have all-around pleated skirts, since it yields beautifully to this treatment. To dine and dance in ingenue frocks of simple cottons made up formally is considered quite the swank thing to do. The thrilling note in regard to this season's organdies is that so many new types have been added to the list.

The crinkled organdies either plain or printed sell at sight. They make up charmingly and are easily tubbed, require little or no pressing to keep them crisp and sprightly as new. For week-end trips they are ideal as they do not crush in packing. You will be delighted with the new lace-printed Swiss chiffon organdies. The entrancing frock centered with outspread skirt in the foreground gives an idea of how effectively the lace-stripe organdie makes up. The charming and picturesque Winterhalter vogue is reflected in the styling of this very tiny-waisted and full-skirted dinner-and-dancing gown (a winsome garden-party frock, too) in one of the fashionable printed Swiss chiffon organdies. A very fine lace patterning in white stands out clearly against a deep navy blue background. There is a full-cut underskirt of white organdie to make the frock stand out almost on ballet skirt lines. The diminutive bolero jacket worn over the drop-shoulder bodice is finished with little ruffles of val lace laid on over the lace print.

The material that fashions the frock to the left is peach silk mousseline. It is prettily styled with vertical ruche-ruffling of self-fabric outlining the skirt gores, the puffed sleeves and there are ruffles about the neck.

Hyacinth blue lace with touches of cerise lace is used for the graceful gown centered in the picture. It was introduced at the Miami fashion show and is one of those pleasing types that carry on into new triumphs for summer party wear. One of its charms is that the lace indicates stripes and striped effects lead in the mode.

The printed chiffon frock to the left gives a delightful interpretation of the slim silhouette for summer. The patterning is spaced tulips in blue, red, green and black on a sheer white background. The gathered bodice suggests the Directoire. Contrasting shades of green and blue silk make the girdle and sash which forms a train. Flower bracelets are worn with it and an enormous poppy on the head instead of a hat, which goes to show the intriguing and unique ways in which flowers now play their important role in costume ensembling.

TWISTED DRAPES ARE NEW STYLE FEATURE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS
Designers are performing all sorts of interesting tricks with twisted drapes and as time goes on the idea is taking on added interest.

When you see a dress or blouse the drapes of which tie themselves into fanciful knots or twist into clever intricacies be assured that the garment is a "last word" fashion. Be on the lookout for these intertwined, inter-coiled effects and choose your new frocks accordingly.

This type of styling invites the use of color contrasts. For instance, the bodice top of a navy dress may have drapes coming from the shoulder, say in the new fuchsia shade, the same coiled, twisted and perhaps knotted across the bustline with infinite grace. Or the dress may be in monotone, the artful, twisted designfulness being the only trimming feature. White crepe frocks, with twists done in crepes of vivid contrast or carried out in pastel tones are top-notch fashion this summer.

A new feature in styling is the all-over shirred bodice with skirt of the material simply tailored. The all-over shirred jacket is likewise a fashion highlight. Chiffon and sheer marquisette yield to this treatment most charmingly.

Paquin Favorite

A favorite Paquin model for evening is the long skirt of bias cut topped by a marquisette blouse—the entire thing in white, black or pale rose.

Tailored Dinner Dress

The tailored dinner or evening dress remains a heavy favorite.

HANDSOME SUIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

One handsome suit like the mode pictured, in your wardrobe and your problem is solved as to looking smartly attired for any occasion. Contrast stitching is a swan accent to the interesting detail of this well-tailored town and country suit in fine lightweight wool shetland. Note the scalloped pockets that repeat the decorative stitching that enhances the seams in the skirt.

Baseball Notes

Former E. J. Ball Player Hands Old Team-mates A Drubbing

The Boyne City Independent baseball team, after dropping two previous engagements this season to the local nine, took the upper hand at Charlevoix the Fourth as they handed the Jordanites their second successive defeat, winning 5 to 3, behind the four hit pitching of Howard Whiteford, who formerly played in the outfield for the Jordanites some three or four seasons back.

So effective was the twirling of Whiteford that for the first seven innings not one local batsman was able to hit the ball safely. Johns broke the ice in the eighth with a fluke single into left field.

Boyne won the game in the sixth as they pushed across all of their five runs as a result of four hits and a half-dozen errors. Johns worked on the mound for the Jordanites, giving up but seven hits while whiffing 13 batsmen, Bowman doing the receiving for the locals. Whiteford and Snider worked for the winners, the former sending 17 local batsmen to the bench by the strikeout route.

The locals play at Mancelona, Sunday, as they take on a newly organized, well balanced, Mancy outfit. Johns will again work on the hill for the Jordanites.

One-third of Telephone Revenue Goes Out For Taxes

Total tax bills of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company for 1937 amounted to $5,066,000, an increase of 14 1/2 per cent, or $637,000, over the previous year, it was revealed at Lansing Thursday, June 30, by Frank L. Hall, the company's tax attorney, when he handed a check for $1,413,954.90 to State Auditor General George T. Gundry. The check represented one-half of the $2,827,909.80 the Michigan Bell will pay into the state primary school fund, the other half to be paid before November 1.

The Michigan Bell Company's 1937 tax bill is divided as follows: To the State of Michigan, property tax, $2,828,000; other taxes to the state, $255,000; to the Federal Government, $1,948,000; to others, principally municipalities, on property that is not at present used in operation of the telephone business, $85,000.

The Company's state property taxes constitute the largest payment by any public utility into the primary school fund, from which it will be returned to the 83-counties of the state in proportion to their school population, thus going directly into local school channels.

This tax bill amounted to $8.02 per telephone. The net operating revenue from one-third of the company's 631,814 telephones was required to meet the bill. The taxes amounted to $556.00 per employee; were equal to 40 per cent of the operating payroll; and accounted for more than 16 per cent of the company's total expenses.

Under the Michigan law, telephone companies, and telegraph railway, express and car-loaning companies pay taxes to the state, in lieu of local taxes, on property and plant used and useful in conducting their businesses, such taxes being placed in the primary school fund.

Coffee Cups Swamp Traverse City Meltons By 11 to 2

The local Coffee Cup softball team going out of league competition won an impressive 11 to 2 decision over the Meltons of Traverse City, there last Sunday evening.

M. Cihak worked six innings for the Jordanites, giving up but 5 hits and allowing but two unearned runs, both the result of errors by the local infield. H. Sommerville hurled the final inning retiring the side in order. P. Sommerville worked behind the plate for the Jordanites. After the first two frames the Jordanites went on a batting spurge to score in every one of the remaining innings. The locals picked up a total of 13 hits, L. Sommerville getting three for four, one of which was a home run with Hegerberg on board in the fifth.

the Mancelona boys team here last Sunday afternoon. The Bellaire game, a softball affair, saw L. Cihak give up but one lone hit and an unearned run, R. Saxton did the catching with Sexton and York working for the losers. St. Arno hit a homerun with no one on in the sixth inning.

After taking a three to nothing lead for the first five innings, the locals became erratic as Mancelona took the lead by three runs with a six run rally in the sixth. The local boys staged a final two inning rally, which ended in victory. St. Arno and Antoine formed the winning battery with LaDere and Epperson working for the losers.

The local youngsters take on a double header at the Fair Grounds Sunday where they will play the Peninsula Grange at 1:00 and Gaylord at 3:30.

Now YOU CAN BUY A Firestone

Sum Dipped Tire 760

FOR AS LITTLE AS $7.00

FIRESTONE cuts the cost of Tire Safety just at the time when you need a new set of tires. At this time of the year you should replace tires that are worn and smooth for greatest safety during the summer driving season. Tires may look alike on the outside—but inside they are different. The name FIRESTONE on a tire is your assurance of extra safety and long mileage because only Firestone Tires are built with these patented and exclusive construction features:

Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process by which every fiber of every cord in every ply is saturated with liquid rubber, counteracts tire-destroying internal friction and heat which ordinarily cause blowouts. Nine extra pounds of rubber are added to every 100 pounds of cord.

Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread, another patented Firestone construction feature, protect against punctures.

Scientifically - Designed Non-Skid Tread made of tough slow-wearing rubber, assures safer stops and longer non-skid mileage.

Now that Firestone gives you all of these safety and economy features at these low prices, you cannot afford to take chances with unsafe tires this summer. Come in today and join the Firestone Save-A-Life Campaign by equipping your car with a set of new Firestone Convoy Tires—the safest tires that money can buy at these low prices.
