Emmet Co. Sportsman's Club To Hold Rally At Oden Fish Hatchery

"I went to the animal fair, the birds and beasts were there," could well be the song on the lips of thousands who will attend the Emmet County Sportsman's Club rally at Oden State Fish Hatchery next Sunday, July 31. From mud turtles to clay pigeons, the day will be turned over to wild life, as Mother, Father and the kids take part in the all-day program of trap shooting, bait and fly casting contests, coon dog trials, fly casting for live trout, bingo games, turtle races, archery events and various other games.

The rally will be distinctly a family affair. A basket picnic is planned, with Petoskey Lodge of Elks furnishing a lunch for those who come without.

Cash prizes are offered in the trap shoot and coon dog trials, and valuable merchandise will be awarded winners in the casting accuracy contests and other games.

The rally will last from 7:00 a. m. until dark, with awarding of the prizes at 5:00 p. m., according to Chalmers Curtis, Jr., president of the Sportsman's club. Exhibition and contest entries are being handled by Herman Kays of Petoskey, chairman of the rally. Women sportsmen as well as men, are invited to enter all events.

There will be conservation exhibits of game, fish and educational material; a display of archery equipment and exhibitions by an expert; a trap shooting demonstration by K. C. Shephardson, Kendallville, Ind., nationally known expert; a fish planting program; live bears, and numerous games for both adults and children.

A Johnson outboard motor and 14 foot, Century boat complete will be one of the prizes. The rally is open to everyone without charge. There will be plenty of free parking space.

Requests For Home Landscaping Outlines May Now Be Made

A recent letter from O. J. Gregg, Landscape Specialist, Michigan State College, states that all folks requesting his assistance in beautifying their home surroundings should immediately contact the county agent at Boyne City. Due to lack of traveling expenses and time required the initial drawings and photographs for the various cooperators will have to be sent in to the county office for checking and from these the number of days in each county will be determined.

It may also be stated that a farm has preference over town property in this connection. Not more than twelve plans may be made this year so it will be to your benefit to send your request in as soon as possible. Further, we must ask each co-operator to promise that he will attend a series of lessons given in this county this winter, that he will spend not less than twenty-five dollars for shrubs during a three year period to complete the plan, and that the work will be completed in not more than three years.

The services of Mr. Gregg are so much in demand that he cannot devote his time in counties where these agreements are not signed. In the past not over twenty-five per cent of the plans developed by Mr. Gregg have been carried out. This is an injustice to the project and it should be changed in the future. Let us hear from you if you want to have your home surroundings beautified.

Albert B. Clark, Pioneer Sunday School Worker, Passed Away Last Friday

Albert Benjamin Clark, 76, passed away at the home of his son, Joseph Clark, Friday, July 22. He suffered a cerebral hemorrhage some ten days ago and was confined to his bed since then.

Mr. Clark was born at Luther Mills, Penn., May 26, 1862, his parents being Stern M. and Rachael A. Clark. From 1880 to 1892 he resided at Toledo, Ohio. On Jan. 14, 1882, he was united in marriage to Anna Livingston in Ohio. They came to this region in 1892 where Mr. Clark followed the farming occupation. He was a member of the Pilgrim Holiness church and an ardent Sunday School worker for many years.

Mrs. Clark passed away Dec. 15, 1936. Deceased is survived by two sons of this city — Joseph and Walter Clark.

Funeral services were held from the Mennonite church (formerly Pilgrim Holiness church) Monday afternoon, July 25th, conducted by Rev. Weaver of Petoskey. Burial was at Sunset Hill.

4-H DAIRY MEMBERS PRACTICE JUDGING

Approximately twenty members of 4-H dairy clubs met at the farm home of the Ecklund Brothers last Thursday with Nevels Pearson, Assistant State Club Leader, and spent the afternoon in dairy judging. At Ecklund's farm a class of four Holsteins were judged and discussed. The next stop was at the Guernsey herd of Albert Elliott where emphasis was placed on judging of Guerneys. The last stop was at George Meggison's farm. He has one of the outstanding purebred Jersey herds of Michigan.

Mr. Pearson commented favorably on the ability of these young farmers in judging dairy animals. Some of the boys have now spent five or six years in club activity and, believe me, they know their cows.

From this group delegates will be selected to represent Charlevoix County at the Northern Michigan Club Encampment which takes place at Gaylord the week of August 8th.

Annual Meeting Co-op. Creamery

"JORDAN VALLEY" DAIRYMEN MEET HERE NEXT MONDAY

The officers of the Jordan Valley Co-operative Creamery are greatly pleased to announce that Professor Earl Weaver, head of the dairy department, Michigan State College, will be the main speaker at the annual meeting on Monday night, August first, at the East Jordan High School Auditorium. Professor Weaver will make his first trip in Northern Michigan for this occasion and will be delighted to meet with the dairymen in this section.

The creamery now has completed its seventh year and has made a remarkable success. Based on the higher prices paid farmers as a result of this Co-operative organization, it is estimated that over fifty thousand dollars more has been paid out than would have been the case without its existence. Approximately nine hundred thousand pounds of butter has been manufactured during the last fiscal year. It now has approximately seven hundred patrons.

Any dairymen interested in securing the greatest rates from their dairy business should not miss the opportunity of attending this annual meeting. Mr. Penfold, Manager, states that light refreshments will be contributed at the close of the meeting. Special numbers will also be included so that you will enjoy a most profitable evening. Come and hear Professor Weaver on Monday night, August first.

"Not at all," was the reply. "He's a retired alarm-clock manufacturer."

Coffee Cups Maintain Second Place In Petoskey Softball League

The local Coffee Cup softball aggregation still maintain second place in the Petoskey League softball standings 1½ games behind the League's leading Maus Store team, after breaking even during last week's competition.

On Monday evening "Spin" Cihak twirled his ninth victory against three losses this season as he set back the Zaiger Beverage outfit four to three. The Jordanites had a big inning in the fourth, pushing across three runs on successive hits by W. Cihak, Hayes and L. Sommerville. The opponents evened the count in the fifth only to lose out as P. Sommerville came across with the winning tally in the final half of the seventh.

M. Cihak and P. Sommerville worked for the winners with Feldman and A. Kenle forming the battery of the losers.

On Friday evening the Kaden Team of Boyne City, new entrants in the league, upset the dope as they managed to eke out a 5 to 4 triumph over the local machine. The local batsmen were able to get to W. Green for but three scattered blows, as he turned in a fine performance on the slab. Brown worked behind the plate for the rival city boys. H. Sommerville, M. Cihak, and P. Sommerville formed the losing battery.

Kanipe of the visitors dealt the damaging blow as he tripled off the right field fence with two men aboard in the fifth. Hayes, Kenny and P. Sommerville were the only Jordanites to hit the ball safely.

Locals Drop Fourth Straight Game In Rapid Confusion

The Grayling Merchants in scoring a four to three triumph over the Jordanites here last Sunday afternoon dished out the locals fourth straight loss. Leo Sommerville this time became the victim of the locals mis-fielding as he gave up but four hits while whiffing 19 men, in turning in one of the finest pitched games here in quite a while. Leading 2 to 0 going into the eighth, Grayling went to the front counting three unearned runs. The Jordanites knotted the count in their half of the eighth only to see the visitors pushed across the winning tally on a series of walks and another error, in the ninth.

L. Sommerville and Bowman worked for the Jordanites with Winterlee and Laskus toiling for the winners. Swafford returned to the locals playing in the outfield Sunday collecting two hits in four trips to share the leadership of the local offensive attack with E. Gee and H. Sommerville.

The Mancelona Independents will be on deck here this week end with the game commencing at 4:30 at the West Side Ball Park.

The Jordanites found little trouble with the Mancelona boys as they scored their third victory over them this season to sweep their three game schedule. Cihak clouted out a home-run with no one aboard in the sixth. St. Arno and Crowell formed the winning battery, with LaDere and Woodruff taking the setback. The locals play this week end in Boyne Falls where they will try to avenge an earlier season setback.

Ottawa Tribe In Annual Ceremony

PRESENT INDIAN NAMES TO TWO CATHOLIC SISTERS

(By Caroline Harrington)
Rain which anticipated his act at the Michigan Indian Defense Association Naming Ceremonial at Harbor Springs, last Sunday evening, July 24th, has advanced Clarence Gasco, 12 year old Ottawa brave, one more rung up the ladder of fame. Gasco is the tribe rainmaker. Last year a heavy downpour broke a persistent drought upon the conclusion of his dance, bringing him national recognition.

Mida for five years has sponsored this ceremonial annually, reviving Indian folk ways, songs, and dances in a realistic setting of tapes and campfire, after an interruption of tribal ritual for approximately 85 years.

The festivities were conducted in the open at Harbor Springs tourist park, and were climaxed by the presentation of Indian names to Sister Zachary and Sister Onesta of the Holy Childhood Mission in Harbor Springs. Consideration of personal characteristics prompted the Indians to grant Sister Zachary the title of Bi-ne-kwe, "The Partridge Lady," and Sister Onesta, Mi-mi-kwe, "The Dove Lady." Sister Zachary and Sister Onesta have served at the Holy Childhood Indian Mission School for more than 50 years. In bestowing upon these women their Indian names Chief Ettawageshik spoke of their unusual courage in coming into a "raw country among a people whose language was unknown to them, and who were standing upon the threshold of a new civilization."

During the festivities the formal ceremony of smoking the calumet, the scalp dance, the sun dance, the one-legged dance, the medicine pipe dance, and the challenge dance were faithfully reproduced in accordance with tradition to the accompaniment of tribal incantations and drums. Highlight of the program was Chief Ettawageshik's interpretation of the eagle dance. Pain and tribal regalia were worn by all dancers.

When rain fell just as the ceremonial commenced, and prior to the performance of the Rainmaker, Chief Ettawageshik said, "Our rainmaker must be practicing."

Film Companies Sued

UNDERTAKING to break up what the government alleges is a great moving picture monopoly, Attorney General Cummings started a civil anti-trust suit against 8 major motion picture producing companies, 25 subsidiary or associated companies and 132 officers or directors, in an effort to divorce production, distribution and exhibition phases of the cinema industry.

The suit was filed in the federal district court for the southern district of New York. Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard signed an order for the service of subpoenas on all the defendants, directing that each appear before the court in New York within 20 days after being served.

The government is seeking an equity decree, Thurman W. Arnold, assistant attorney general, announced, requiring the companies to divest themselves of ownership of theaters or of production and distribution facilities.

The suit named Paramount Pictures, Inc., Loew's Inc., Irving Trust company, New York, as trustee in bankruptcy for Radio-Keith-Orpheum corporation; Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Twentieth Century-Fox Film corporation; Columbia Pictures corporation; Universal corporation; and United Artists corporation.

Mr. Arnold said that allegedly monopolistic power exerted by the defendants has a "tendency to drive independent theaters out of business or to compel them to sell to the producer-owned theater chains on the latter's terms."

Asserting the companies control "about 65 per cent of all pictures produced from the selection of the story to the final showing at the theater," Mr. Arnold added:

"The actual control of the product is even greater than would appear from this figure, because from 80 to 90 per cent of the quality feature films upon which exhibitors are dependent for successful operation are produced or distributed by the eight major companies."

Mr. Arnold alleged that independent theaters are subject to numerous "oppressive" discriminations, such as block booking, high rentals and the imposition of preferred playing times.

First 'Death Clause' Case

ACTING under the utility holding company act, the federal securities commission began its first action to simplify a major utility holding company system.

Chairman William O. Douglas announced that a hearing would be held in Washington August 8 to determine what steps the $300,000,000 Utilities Power & Light corporation should take to limit operations "to a single integrated public utility system."

The commission will consider whether the company should be required to rid itself of interest in "any or all" of its 45 subsidiaries.

Douglas said the commission's action was being taken under section 11B of the holding company act—the so-called "death sentence" section.

Utilities Power & Light, with headquarters in Chicago, has subsidiaries in mid-western and north-eastern states. The company is being reorganized under section 77-B of the bankruptcy act.

Russia vs. Japan

SOVIET Russia and Japan, quarreling over a disputed territory at the junction of Manchukuo, Siberia and Korea, were openly threatening each other. Maxim Litvinov, Soviet foreign commissar, in conference with Japanese Ambassador Shigemitsu in Moscow, told the latter that Russian troops would not be withdrawn from the area in question, that the territory was a part of Siberia, and that Japan would be held responsible for the consequences if the present "calm" there is disturbed. The two statesmen used violent language and the situation was considered decidedly delicate.

Pick-a-back Flies Sea

MERCURY, the top part of the novel British pick-a-back seaplane, separated from Maia, the lower and heavier part, about a thousand feet above Foynes, Ireland, and then sped across the North Atlantic, making the crossing at moderate speed and without mishap. Passing over Botwood, Newfoundland, the pilot flew on 850 miles further to Montreal, alighting on the St. Lawrence. After refueling the plane completed its flight at New York.

The flying time from Foynes to Montreal was 20 hours and 20 minutes.

Madden Is Accused

J. WARREN MADDEN, chairman of the national labor relations board, was charged with secretly conferring in Washington last December with C. I. O. officials concerning the Weirton Steel company hearing at Steubenville, Ohio. The charges almost broke up a hearing of the board.

The three members of the board were considering the appeal of Clyde A. Armstrong, chief counsel for the steel company, who was barred from the Weirton hearing by Examiner Edward Grandison Smith.

Attorney E. F. Reed, acting for Armstrong, made these charges:

That C. I. O. Organizer Kenneth Coe, active in the Weirton hearing, went to Washington last December, conferred secretly with Madden, and then returned for another conference with Lee Pressman, chief counsel of the C. I. O.

That another C. I. O. follower, an armed constable, served subpoenas for the labor board, while requests by Weirton lawyers for subpoenas were ignored for weeks.

That Donald Wakefield Smith, junior member of the labor board, attended the Weirton hearing last November 18 and made disparaging remarks about Counsel Armstrong during the taking of evidence.

Strike Brings Martial Law

GOVERNOR KRASCHEL of Iowa declared martial law in Newton, home of the Maytag Washing Machine company, whose plant was kept closed by C. I. O. pickets despite efforts of nearly half the employees to return to work. National Guardsmen with armored cars and machine guns occupied the area but before they got there the two labor factions had a bloody street battle in which many were injured.

In North Chicago pickets of the Steel Workers' organizing committee, affiliated with C. I. O., who had been keeping employees from returning to a hardware plant in defiance of court orders, were routed by deputy sheriffs with tear gas. Ten of the pickets were found guilty of contempt of court.

Charles P. Howard Dies

CHARLES P. HOWARD, president of the International Typographical union and secretary of the C. I. O., died in his sleep at Colorado Springs, Colo. He was fifty-eight years old. Howard was defeated for re-election in a referendum last May by C. M. Baker of San Francisco and would have gone out of office September 1.

Owen Wister, author of "The Virginian" and other novels, died at his summer home in North Kingston, R. I., at the age of seventy-eight.

British Monarchs in Paris

KING GEORGE VI and Queen Elizabeth of England went to Paris for a state visit of four days, and this was regarded as a vitally important event politically. Apparently it was undertaken to let the dictator countries know that Great Britain and France would continue to stand firmly as allies.

Britain's foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax; the French premier, Edouard Daladier, and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet held political talks to discuss the world situation during the visit.

To demonstrate the strength France can lend the common cause with Great Britain, the French paraded 50,000 men and their latest war machines before George and President Lebrun. This military display outdid that put on in Rome for Hitler, and it was significant that places in the reviewing stand were reserved for the German and Italian military attaches. After the review the royal visitors were sumptuously entertained at the Palace of Versailles.

C. I. O. Proposes a Purge

MORE than 40 members of congress are marked for C. I. O. opposition in the fall elections by a blacklist formulated by John L. Lewis and given out by E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Non-Partisan league, the political agency of the Committee for Industrial Organization. Oliver said the opposition to those named was based chiefly on their stand on the wage-hour bill. He indicated it merely was a coincidence that almost without exception those marked for defeat also fought Mr. Roosevelt's government reorganization and Supreme court packing bills.

Among the Democratic rules committee members marked for opposition were Rep. E. E. Cox of Georgia, opponent of administration policies in the house; Rep. Howard W. Smith of Virginia, against whom James Roosevelt and Thomas G. (Tommy the Cork) Corcoran have put up a young radical, William E. Dodd Jr.; and Rep. Lawrence Lewis of Colorado, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee.

Included in the Lewis blacklist are Senators Tydings of Maryland, Adams of Colorado and Lonergan of Connecticut.

Wheat Allotment

H. R. TOLLEY, AAA administrator, announced a national wheat allotment for fall and spring planting of not more than 55,000,000 acres—the minimum allowable under the act.

The action, which came as the result of the 987,000,000-bushel yield forecast for this year on a seeded acreage of 80,000,000, came in the form of an order signed by M. L. Wilson, acting secretary of agriculture.

State allotments for 1939 compared with 1938 and 1928-'37 average acreage of wheat land in the major grain producing states include:

Pennsylvania, 772,659 acres, compared with 1,093,000 in 1928 and 1,039,076 for the 1928-'37 period; Oklahoma, 3,783,954; 5,959,000 and 5,088,684; Texas, 3,684,863; 5,315,000 and 4,955,426.

'Sneak' Flight Over Ocean

DOUGLAS P. CORRIGAN, a young airplane motor expert from California, couldn't get permission from the air commerce bureau to fly across the Atlantic, so he started off secretly from Floyd Bennett field, New York, and landed at Baldonnel, Ireland, 28 hours and 13 minutes later.

The remarkable feature of the flight was that it was made in a rickety old single-motored Curtiss Robin plane that was not equipped with navigation instruments, radio or the ordinary safety devices. Corrigan did not even carry a parachute.

Having neither flight permit, landing papers nor passport, Corrigan laughingly declared in Dublin that he had intended to fly back to California but set his magnetic compass wrong and flew in the opposite direction. His was the sixth west-east solo flight across the Atlantic. In the opposite direction only Mollison and Beryl Markham have been successful.

WASHINGTON.—A national debt of $41,500,000,000! What does it mean?

National Debt

I was staggered, as probably you were, the other day when the morning newspapers blazoned forth in black headlines—they should have been printed in red ink—that by next June 30 the American government will owe a total of $41,500,000,000. I knew from all of the spending that is going on these days that the national debt was going higher in the fiscal year that started with the opening of July; the debt had to increase because of the lavish use of money voted by congress under the lash of President Roosevelt. But when I saw the "revised estimates" officially issued by the bureau of the budget, somehow I was startled, amazed. The implications are so many that the magnitude of this debt simply has overwhelmed me.

New Hampshire	160,594,040
New Jersey	1,368,210,640
New Mexico	133,408,860
New York	4,089,141,550
North Carolina	1,092,651,410
North Dakota	222,239,390
Ohio	2,122,180,690

Wyoming	73,658,290

If one desires to be technical and wishes to include in the national debt all of the obligations which the federal treasury may have to pay, the figures I have given will mount very much higher. There are numerous agencies of the government that are empowered to borrow money on their own bonds—institutions like the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the Home Owners Loan corporation and the Commodity Credit corporation. It seems to me that when those agencies borrow money, the federal government becomes liable in event the federal agency is not able to pay, and the total of those loans appears to be in the neighborhood of $6,000,000,000. Since most people regard the federal government as having a contingent liability, there is some ground for including that total which would make the grand total of the national debt in excess of $47,000,000,000, and each state's share would be correspondingly higher.

What is the reason for this gigantic debt? Well, anyone ought to know that when an individual spends more than his income, he goes into debt. That is what this nation has been doing. I do not know how much longer it can continue to spend, to waste money in pump priming. It seems to me that the end will have to come very soon, or people will refuse to buy bonds issued by the treasury. The banks are loaded up with them now; loaded so much that Sen. Carter Glass, the veteran Virginia member of the senate, several times has said he feared what might happen if bond prices declined.

Fundamentally, there can be no doubt of the need to spend money to feed the destitute. On the other hand, can there be any justification at all for spending billion after billion in building post offices, national guard armories, etc., when there is none but borrowed money with which to do it? Every time an additional dollar is spent unnecessarily, the future taxes on you and me, our children and our children's children are pledged to the payment of the debt.

Pause to consider what it means. If we calculated the average interest on the debt at 3 per cent (which I believe to be fair), we find that if the nation pays off the current debt in 100 years, the taxes will have to be increased 33 per cent over 1938 in order to do it. If, as further example, the debt is to be paid off in 50 years, the current tax rates will have to be increased by 38 per cent over that entire period. Those statements assume that we will not increase the general cost of government over what it is now and that tax receipts will be as high or higher.

It is apparent that spending must stop, or our nation is going to be as much of a bum, even in our estimation, as the most lowly hobo who eats from a tin can and steals a ride on the rods of a freight car.

Each State's Share

Having calculated what each person has been obligated by his government to pay, I pursued the figuring further to discover what each state's share of this huge national debt is. The tabulation that appears herewith is the result. It gives the name of each state and that state's proportionate share of the $41,500,000,000. Your state records do not show the amounts as a direct debt; your state legislature did not vote the bonds which were sold in creating the debt, but the fact remains that if it became necessary for each person to pay his share, your state would pay the amount here set down.

Find Many Farmers Earn Income by Outside Labor

WASHINGTON.—About a third of the farmers of the United States have outside industrial and business income, it is indicated in a survey just released by the census bureau.

As a result of a study of 3,000 farms in selected counties in 40 states, according to William L. Austin, director of the census, many "new and surprising facts" along this line have been discovered.

"Among those which have hitherto not been called to the attention of the public," he said, "are the high proportion of farmers who have outside income, the relatively high average return for such farm operators—equal to about three-fourths of the average income from the farms themselves, and the difference between the incomes of those making farming their principle occupation and those whose principal occupation is banking, keeping store, professional service and the like."

For the 975 farmers out of the 3,000 in the sample survey who reported non-farm income, Mr. Austin continued, a total of such income of $458,522 was reported, or an average of $473 per farm. About one-fourth of such farmers were found to receive less than $100 a year of such non-farm income.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Of wide public interest is the pressing problem of who's going to enjoin or restrain Joe Louis. It has seemed that all they could do would be to match him against a threesome—possibly Farr, Pastor and Baer. But now there is actually serious consideration of launching him against the huge, bulbous two-ton Tony Galento, the Orange, N. J., pub keeper who trains on beer and hot dogs. Tony has never been knocked down, but neither has a hippopotamus or a steam shovel.

Built like a couple of hogheads, he is a morass in which assailants get swamped, like Japan in China. He fights with his mouth open, as if he were catching flies, which is disconcerting to his opponent, as is his flailing, free-style, generally scrambled attack. His defense consists mainly in his absorbent qualities. They cut him to ribbons, but never cut him down.

He has had about 70 fights. Dumping Nathan Mann marked his heaviest scoring in the ring. He has flattened Al Etmore, Leroy Haynes, Charley Massey and quite a few not altogether negligible fighters, but, as yet, no maulers of championship specifications: For some of his fights he trained on applejack, but now says he has found beer is best.

In the little family gin mill and spaghetti palace, down by the railroad tracks, he shadow boxes for the customers and yells for a match with Louis. He says he would like to have it banded in the cellar, with $10,000 on the doorstep for the man who comes out. They have a two months' old baby, who, says his father, never will be a fighter or a barkeeper.

"Me—" says Tony—"they had to burn down the school to get me out of the fourth grade. I didn't know my strength and one of my spitballs knocked a teacher unconscious. I'll make this new guy behave and he'll grow up to be a professor or doctor."

Sir Patrick Hastings, counsel for Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow in her elaborate and complicated disagreement with her husband, is one of the most interesting front-page lawyers of London, usually a contender in any exciting international wrangle in which London's West End or New York's Park Avenue might be interested. He represented Mrs. Jean Sutherland in the slander suit which grew out of gossip about the Wallis Warfield Simpson divorce suit. It was he who got thumping big damages for Princess Youssouf, in the suit over the Metro-Goldwyn Rasputin picture. He won the fight for the Warner Brothers to keep Bette Davis from appearing without their consent.

In court, he has alluded to an episode when, hungry and footsore, he was turning his back on London, but was somehow flagged back again by an indulgent fate. He was trained as a mining engineer, fought in the Boer war and returned to London to precarious years in which he sparred for an opening. He was a journalist, a "leg man" around the grubbier of the police courts. In his attic lodgings, he studied law and was admitted to the bar—with nice going thereafter. He now has one of the largest professional incomes in England. He was knighted in 1923 and was attorney general in 1924.

He is widely and intimately known in social and literary circles, but draws no class lines in his professional work. One of his most spectacular cases was his defense of the Welsh miners in 1925. He moves into his middle sixties with no let-down in mind or person.

Sir Robert M. Hodgson is a shadowy but noteworthy figure in Europe's diplomatic underground, about whom a book, may some day be written. He is Britain's go-between in delicate negotiations with Generalissimo Franco of Spain about the bombing of British ships. When he is on a government mission, it is an indication that some subtle business is on. He had retired in 1936, but Neville Chamberlain called him back as a diplomatic pinch-hitter in this ship-bombing embarrassment. He is the son of an arch-deacon, of somewhat clerical mien, and was in the consular and diplomatic service for many years. From 1924 to 1927, he was British charge d'affairs at Moscow. He is usually working quietly off-stage, never in the spotlight.

King of the Pie-Eaters

With his hands tied behind him, LeRoy Cobb, age thirteen, of Gainesville, Ga., won with a crust to spare in a pie-eating contest that attracted lads from all over the countryside. LeRoy ate his lunch at the usual hour, but that didn't handicap him at all when it came to eating a meringue-covered chocolate pie in record time.

EMPLOYMENT GAINS

John D. Biggers, of Toledo, Ohio who directed President Roosevelt's unemployment census last January, believes better times are ahead for industry and employment. He cited the case of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass company, of which he is president, which has rehired 1,300 workers in the last three months. Biggers predicted a fall upturn.

More of Lace This Summer Than Ever

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AN UNPRECEDENTED vogue for lace is recorded this summer. No longer is lace considered from the luxury and esthetic viewpoint only. Lace has become a tremendously practical factor in the realm of apparel wearable for all occasions. Lace has come into its own in a big way, so much so that designers are thinking in terms of lace as they never thought before.

So lace-conscious have we become, women of keen judgment are acquiring entire wardrobes that are for the most part fashioned of lace. This is especially true with those who travel, for, put to the test, lace stands up under the stress and strain of packing and unpacking, in fact of serving for general wear as well as any other fabric. Of course, there are laces and laces and it behooves the woman who would be well-dressed to choose the right lace for the right occasion.

You can get laces that you can scarcely identify as lace, so fabric-like is their mesh. They tailor as perfectly as air and carry a sophisticated air about them. As for service, you'll be delighted with their practical wearableness. Then there are the handsome, washable cotton and linen laces that tailor so smartly in simple daytime dresses you will be wanting above all else at least one of these practical gowns. Perhaps we would be better expressing the idea to insist that you invest in several. They will carry you through most any social crisis.

So far we have been talking of lace from the practical standpoint. When it comes to reviewing the triumphs of lace from the esthetic side of the question we think the lovely evening ensemble to the right in the illustration tells the story more eloquently than any word-picture could do. This exquisite creation is of bottle green Chantilly lace, so delicately meshed it is like filmiest cobweb structure. A water green foundation with bands of crepe in rainbow colorings at the hem and bodice top of this slip reflect the spirit of joyous summer. The evening veil which has become a favorite headdress for formal occasion is of bottle green net with appliqued motifs of the lace.

A lace dinner and evening dress, such as is centered in the group, is almost indispensable in any woman's wardrobe. The short rounded bolero of matching lace, the full short sleeves as well as the easy fullness of the skirt are all features that make this dress distinctive and correct for both dinner and dancing. It comes in delectable colors in a new pattern of angel skin lace.

You will be wanting an afternoon dress of lace. A very apt model is shown to the left. Pale blue Chantilly lace fashions it. Its styling gives a particularly interesting interpretation of the draped bodice treatment that terminates in a wide molded corselet-girdle line. The hat is a Toya straw.

Lace costume suits, especially in jacket types, in navy, dusty pink, or various blues are outselling other sheer media this season. The jacket may go to extremes, varying from bolero to full length coat, but a jacket there must be with every dress for practical daytime wear. In many instances the lace jacket suit is enhanced with ribbon-bound edges. Frog fastenings made of tubular ribbon cording add a touch of distinction.

'ON THE SQUARE'

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Decidedly on the square is the formula that newer bags follow, and as to size many of them are enormous. Pictured is a bienen-davis bag on the tab of which are monogrammed miniature initials. Wide, flat handles and zipper top opening are added features to this bag which comes in tones of black, navy, rust, tan and black patent leather.

Suit of Hopsacking

A suit of yellow hopsacking is a flattering costume for a summer day. Its jacket may be fitted and belted or swing straight and free, but it must be short-sleeved. Add a blouse of white organdie or a vestee of printed lawn.

FASHION DECLARES FOR WHITE SUMMER

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

We grant that white is always a summer favorite, but this summer fashion is playing it up in a highly dramatic manner. Costumes are described in the fashion story as "white as snow" or of icy whiteness or white as fleecy summer clouds and so on. You appreciate the stupendous accent on white in fashionable gatherings where "white as a swan" capes and jackets; and boleros of marabou, fur or ostrich are the favored wraps, and where evening gowns float about in billowy masses of white net or chiffon or that which is late style—the pencil-slim draped dress of snow-white rayon jersey draped sculpture-like. Then there are the new white taffeta frocks, "beauties," that they are.

For day there are numberless man-tailored suits of sharkskin and other fascinating wash whites, while the afternoon dresses of white rayon jersey compete in endless parade.

White lingerie has come in and is the wanted kind at present. And as for accessory whites, footwear, gloves, bags and details too numerous to mention make their bow on the fashion stage in pure white.

Top a Print Frock With Silk Coat in Monotone

Well-dressed women find appeal in the new summer costumes that top the print frock with a silk coat in monotone that repeats the leading color of the print. For instance wear with a brown beige and rose print dress, either a jacket or full-length coat of brown silk crepe. Or a red-on-white silk print dress adds a bolero of red silk and there are red ribbon bow trims on the frock.

Grandmother's Prize Silk Patchwork Quilt

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT WAS a great day on an upstate New York farm more than a half century ago. The biggest pumpkins, the finest apples and the sleekest live stock were being loaded to take to the Fair. Grandmother announced that she was taking her silk crazy patchwork quilt.

All that winter the red ribbons and blue ribbons, won by prize

pumpkins and apples and farm animals adorned the mantel shelf. But Grandmother, placidly stitching away in her rocking chair, had tucked away in the pocket of her voluminous skirt, the only cash prize that anyone brought home from the Fair. Her crazy patch quilt is still a thing of beauty and a center of interest. It is perfectly at home in a modern living room today. Here is a corner of it and the leaflet offered herewith tells you how to make this kind of quilt and gives detailed instructions for dozens of stitches and combinations of stitches to be used for embroidering crazy patchwork.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, Sewing for the Home Decorator, covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts will be included free. For leaflet only send 5 cents in stamps to cover cost and mailing. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplains St., Chicago, Ill.

GARDEN GOSSIP
EDITED BY CAROLINE HARRINGTON
Letters and questions on garden topics will be welcome. They will be published and discussed in this column.

Dear Mrs. Harrington: Will you please mention the beautiful hollyhocks blooming in East Jordan and suggest in our Column that more people plant hollyhocks for next year? I believe it is not too late to put in seed, and wouldn't our town be something to boast about if we could have twice as many hollyhocks next year as we now have?

Another thing, — have you noticed that many weeds are being permitted to go to seed in fence corners, along alleys, and on vacant lots. Unless we do something about this, and do it quick, a lot of hard work will be to do all over again next spring. We should conserve our gains. The seeds of ragweed, pusley, pigweed, quack grass, dandelion, thistle, and all the other enemies of garden crops blow to adjacent yards, live over the winter in the ground, and grow to plague us another year.

Weeds are a community problem. For their successful eradication we must have cooperation among neighbors, and then . . . more cooperation in the three most reliable weed control methods, —

(1) preventing weeds from going to seed,
(2) preventing the introduction of fertilizer containing weed seed,
(3) preventing top growth of such weeds as quack grass, Canada thistle, etc. . . .

Every year at this time the weed menace seems to get out of hand, chiefly, perhaps because we become weary in well-doing, while weeds never lose their persistence. I am especially sorry to see great, thrifty ragweed plants growing along the highway, getting all set to shake their havoc-wreaking pollen out upon the wind to be spread over the entire county and beyond.

Hayfever victims must be more than discouraged when they come here seeking haven, only to be challenged by their ancient enemy, ragweed! Too bad there were not some commercial use for ragweed and quack grass and their ilk, — then these pests would soon disappear. But it seems their only use is to make trouble!

I am more than glad to suggest the planting of hollyhocks. There is no garden flower more decorative, which thrives with less care, and what a priceless virtue its performance is!

Friends have promised me hollyhock seedlings to plant all along the north side of my garden. I should get them in within a month so that they will become well established before cold weather.

Many of my neighbors have planted hollyhocks effectively. From any window in my house I can catch a glimpse of these bright flowers. They are at home the United States over, but it is only a few centuries since the first plants were brought to this continent from China by sailors who admired them in their faraway home and carried them around the world to plant in New England gardens.

The books say that seeds should be planted as soon as ripe. I have had better success with volunteer seedlings than with seeds, no doubt because I do not know the correct way to plant the seeds.

I have found it impractical to move the mature plants. For one thing, they have extremely long, easily broken roots. Then, even if the plant does survive transplanting, usually the buds or blossoms die, and the plant is spoiled for a season.

Of course there is a disadvantage, too, in transplanting seedlings. I have hopefully planted what I thought not be relied on to come true either, — still, from white all through their marvelous color range to a red so deep that is almost black, all hollyhocks are beautiful, and we can scarcely have too many of them. Now is the time to plan for their blooming next summer, since seedlings do not blossom their first year.

So, — if those who have hollyhock seeds or seedlings to spare will share them with their less fortunate neighbors, or plant them in spots needing a cheerful note, East Jordan will enjoy the results for generations to come.

Dear Mrs. Harrington: I greatly enjoyed my visit to the Elk Rapids Garden Club flower show, and would like to share my experiences with our column readers:

This was the fourth annual community flower show for Elk Rapids, and was held at the town hall on July 20th and 21st. The exhibits were displayed on long uniform tables, covered with ivory colored paper and strewn with green cedar. Hand painted floral pictures lined the walls. These were used only for decorative purposes as they were not judged. Cedar boughs covered the windows.

A large display of house-plants, foliage and ferns, among which were beautiful gloxinia plants, was very outstanding.

In the harmonious arrangement class an unusual exhibit of seed balls resembling large dandelions (no one seemed to know what they were) in an old-fashioned black container won the blue ribbon. This entry was made by a man.

There was one large table of rose exhibits, judged for foliage, bloom, color and stem.

The miniature arrangements were displayed very effectively on what-nots.

An artistically arranged basket of shasta daisies in the basket arrangement section won the prize.

A container of hydrangea won the blue ribbon among the floor arrangement exhibits. Hollyhocks were displayed in umbrella stands and earthen ware containers. These effectively added color to the show.

To the right of the building was a garden with a background of evergreens. This contained a bird-bath (which, by the way, was raffled during the show) and garden furniture.

Entertainment was provided during the evening, and a cake sale was held during the show.

I am told that societies and parties are sponsored from time to time by the club, the proceeds being used for the maintenance of the city park and to hire labor for the various curb and border plantings.

Mrs. Hugo Will, the club president, and other club members were most gracious and helpful. The Elk Rapids Garden Club is to be highly complimented on its civic improvements and fine show.

Chairman — Civic Committee.

What an interesting report, and what stimulating suggestions. I am more than ever enthusiastic about our coming flower show. Thank you, Mrs. Chairman. When are you going to send us another report of East Jordan civic improvements? These reports have been very popular in our column, you know.

Please see the first page for an announcement of our next Garden Club meeting. Also of our annual flower show.

Dear Garden Gossip: This morning (Saturday) I counted the petunias in the window boxes on Main Street. There were over 50 blossoms in each of the boxes in front of the Company store, but those in front of Healey's and Dinty's Place are crowding them pretty hard. The box in front of Bartlett's is filled with sturdy plants which will surely produce a profusion of blossoms soon. Just Curious.

So the Company store has high score this week! I wonder what the coming week will bring forth. Please count blossoms again, "Just Curious." (Hint: Water and fertilizer is what it takes!)

It has been conservatively estimated by biologists that a single toad is worth $20 a season to the farmer or gardener. Every toad eats (if it can get them) four stomachfuls every 24 hours of cutworms, slugs, the larvae of gypsy moth, tent caterpillars, and other insects, the majority of which are mischievous in gardens. In three months one toad accounts for 10,000 insects. Probably the toad has no superior as an insect destroyer, but it is harmless to the garden or farm crops.

We might well follow the example of the French who collect toads and bring them into their gardens, provide them with board or stone shelters where they may escape from the heat of the sun.

The chief enemies of toads are hawks, crows, automobiles, and snakes, and, unfortunately, sometimes small boys who do not realize that toads are their friends. Have you a toad collaborating with you in your garden? "Nice work, if you can get it!"

A bouquet of fragrant nasturtiums and yellow daisies, picked "to keep them from going to seed," has just come to my desk. Thank you, kind donor. They are lovely.

Dear Garden Gossip:

May I compliment you on the part of Garden Gossip headed "From the Diary of an Observant Bystander?" I am saving it each week for a scrap book, and plan to have a real nature record for next summer. Garden Gossip is read by each member of my family, and has become as popular as the "funnies" of our daily paper. Please continue the good work and accept the thanks of an interested but unobserving

B. Y. Stander.

Like "pennies from heaven" are the compliments from Garden Gossip that come to my desk. The one who so faithfully sends me her dairy notes, no matter how busy she may be, will believe now that I am not "spoofing" her when I tell her how interesting and worthwhile her diary notes are.

TIT FOR TAT

The two men had been partners in business for more than fifty years. But now the partnership was about to be dissolved, for one of the two lay dying.

The sufferer called his friend to his bedside.

"I know I haven't much longer to live, old man," he said. "Before I go I've got a confession I must make. During our years of partnership I've swindled you out of thousands of pounds. Can you forgive me?"

"That's all right," said the other cheerfully. "Don't you worry about it, I poisoned you."

He Hit Him
Lawyer—Then you admit that you struck the plaintiff with malice aforethought?

Defendant (indignantly) — You can't mix me up like that. I've told you twice I hit him with a brick and on purpose. There wasn't no malice or nothin' of the kind about it—just a plain brick like any gentleman would use.

Jam for Nothing
A Scotsman was observed by a constable walking up and down a busy London street with a large piece of bread in his hand.

"What are you doing with that bread?" asked the policeman curiously.

"Well," replied the Scot, "I'm looking for the traffic jam."

Heard in Court
Magistrate—What is the man charged with?

Constable—He is a camera fiend of the worst kind, sir.

Magistrate—But he shouldn't have been arrested just because he has a mania for taking pictures.

Constable—It isn't that, sir—he takes the cameras!

ONE THAT DON'T COUNT
A man in an insane asylum sat fishing over a flower-bed. A visitor wishing to be friendly walked up and said, "How many have you caught today?"

"You're the ninth," replied the fisherman.

And the Broom

GARDEN GOSSIP
EDITED BY CAROLINE HARRINGTON
Letters and questions on garden topics will be welcome. They will be published and discussed in this column.

Dear Mrs. Harrington:
Will you please mention the beautiful hollyhocks blooming in East Jordan and suggest in our Column that more people plant hollyhocks for next year? I believe it is not too late to put in seed, and wouldn't our town be something to boast about if we could have twice as many hollyhocks next year as we now have?

Another thing, — have you noticed that many weeds are being permitted to go to seed in fence corners, along alleys, and on vacant lots. Unless we do something about this, and do it quick, a lot of hard work will be to do all over again next spring. We should conserve our gains. The seeds of ragweed, pusley, pigweed, quack grass, dandelion, thistle, and all the other enemies of garden crops blow to adjacent yards, live over the winter in the ground, and grow to plague us another year.

Weeds are a community problem. For their successful eradication we must have cooperation among neighbors, and then . . . more cooperation in the three most reliable weed control methods, —

- (1) preventing weeds from going to seed,
- (2) preventing the introduction of fertilizer containing weed seed.
- (3) preventing top growth of such weeds as quack grass, Canada thistle, etc.

Every year at this time the weed menace seems to get out of hand, chiefly, perhaps because we become weary in well-doing, while weeds never lose their persistence. I am especially sorry to see great, thrifty ragweed plants growing along the highway, getting all set to shake their havoc-wreaking pollen out upon the wind to be spread over the entire county and beyond.

Hayfever victims must be more than discouraged when they come here seeking haven, only to be challenged by their ancient enemy, ragweed! Too bad there were not some commercial use for ragweed and quack grass and their ilk, — then these pests would soon disappear. But it seems their only use is to make trouble!

I am more than glad to suggest the planting of hollyhocks. There is no garden flower more decorative, which thrives with less care, and what a priceless virtue its performance is!

Friends have promised me hollyhock seedlings to plant all along the north side of my garden. I should get them in within a month so that they will become well established before cold weather.

Many of my neighbors have planted hollyhocks effectively. From any window in my house I can catch a glimpse of these bright flowers. They are at home the United States over, but it is only a few centuries since the first plants were brought to this continent from China by sailors who admired them in their faraway home and carried them around the world to plant in New England gardens.

The books say that seeds should be planted as soon as ripe. I have had better success with volunteer seedlings than with seeds, no doubt because I do not know the correct way to plant the seeds.

I have found it impractical to move the mature plants. For one thing, they have extremely long, easily broken roots. Then, even if the plant does survive transplanting, usually the buds or blossoms die, and the plant is spoiled for a season.

Of course there is a disadvantage, too, in transplanting seedlings. I have hopefully planted what I thought not be relied on to come true either, — still, from white all through their marvelous color range to a red so deep that is almost black, all hollyhocks are beautiful, and we can scarcely have too many of them. Now is the time to plan for their blooming next summer, since seedlings do not blossom their first year.

So, — if those who have hollyhock seeds or seedlings to spare will share them with their less fortunate neighbors, or plant them in spots needing a cheerful note, East Jordan will enjoy the results for generations to come.

Dear Mrs. Harrington:
I greatly enjoyed my visit to the Elk Rapids Garden Club flower show, and would like to share my experiences with our column readers:

This was the fourth annual community flower show for Elk Rapids, and was held at the town hall on July 20th and 21st. The exhibits were displayed on long uniform tables, covered with ivory colored paper and strewn with green cedar. Hand painted floral pictures lined the walls. These were used only for decorative purposes as they were not judged. Cedar boughs covered the windows.

A large display of house-plants, foliage and ferns, among which were beautiful gloxinia plants, was very outstanding.

In the harmonious arrangement class an unusual exhibit of seed balls resembling large dandelions (no one seemed to know what they were) in an old-fashioned black container won the blue ribbon. This entry was made by a man.

There was one large table of rose exhibits, judged for foliage, bloom, color and stem.

The miniature arrangements were displayed very effectively on what-nots.

An artistically arranged basket of shasta daisies in the basket arrangement section won the prize.

A container of hydrangea won the blue ribbon among the floor arrangement exhibits. Hollyhocks were displayed in umbrella stands and earthen ware containers. These effectively added color to the show.

To the right of the building was a garden with a background of evergreens. This contained a bird-bath (which, by the way, was judged during the show) and garden furniture.

Entertainment was provided during the evening, and a cake sale was held during the show.

I am told that societies and parties are sponsored from time to time by the club, the proceeds being used for the maintenance of the city park and to hire labor for the various curb and border plantings.

Mrs. Hugo Will, the club president, and other club members were most gracious and helpful. The Elk Rapids Garden Club is to be highly complimented on its civic improvements and fine show.

Chairman — Civic Committee.

What an interesting report, and what stimulating suggestions. I am more than ever enthusiastic about our coming flower show. Thank you, Mrs. Chairman. When are you going to send us another report of East Jordan civic improvements? These reports have been very popular in our column, you know.

Please see the first page for an announcement of our next Garden Club meeting. Also of our annual flower show.

Dear Garden Gossip:

This morning (Saturday) I counted the petunias in the window boxes on Main Street. There were over 50 blossoms in each of the boxes in front of the Company store, — but those in front of Healey's and Dinty's Place are crowding them pretty hard. The box in front of Bartlett's is filled with sturdy plants which will surely produce a profusion of blossoms soon. Just Curious.

So the Company store has high score this week! I wonder what the coming week will bring forth. Please count blossoms again, "Just Curious." (Hint: Water and fertilizer is what it takes!)

It has been conservatively estimated by biologists that a single toad is worth $20 a season to the farmer or gardener. Every toad eats (if it can get them) four stomachfuls every 24 hours of cutworms, slugs, the larvae of gypsy moth, tent caterpillars, and other insects, the majority of which are mischievous in gardens. In three months one toad accounts for 10,000 insects. Probably the toad has no superior as an insect destroyer, but it is harmless to the garden or farm crops.

We might well follow the example of the French who collect toads and bring them into their gardens, provide them with board or stone shelters where they may escape from the heat of the sun.

The chief enemies of toads are hawks, crows, automobiles, and snakes, and, unfortunately, sometimes small boys who do not realize that toads are their friends. Have you a toad collaborating with you in your garden? "Nice work, if you can get it!"

A bouquet of fragrant nasturtiums and yellow daisies, picked "to keep them from going to seed," has just come to my desk. Thank you, kind donor. They are lovely.

Dear Garden Gossip:

May I compliment you on the part of Garden Gossip headed "From the Diary of an Observant Bystander?" I am saving it each week for a scrap book, and plan to have a real nature record for next summer. Garden Gossip is read by each member of my family, and has become as popular as the "funnies" of our daily paper. Please continue the good work and accept the thanks of an interested but unobserving

B. Y. Stander.

Like "pennies from heaven" are the compliments for Garden Gossip that come to my desk. The one who so faithfully sends me her dairy notes, no matter how busy she may be, will believe now that I am not "spoofing" her when I tell her how interesting and worthwhile her diary notes are.

More of Lace This Summer Than Ever

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AN UNPRECEDENTED vogue for lace is recorded this summer. No longer is lace considered from the luxury and esthetic viewpoint only. Lace has become a tremendously practical factor in the realm of apparel wearable for all occasions. Lace has come into its own in a big way, so much so that designers are thinking in terms of lace as they never thought before.

So lace-conscious have we become, women of keen judgment are acquiring entire wardrobes that are for the most part fashioned of lace. This is especially true with those who travel, for, put to the test, lace stands up under the stress and strain of packing and unpacking, in fact of serving for general wear as well as any other fabric. Of course, there are laces and laces and it behooves the woman who would be well-dressed to choose the right lace for the right occasion.

You can get laces that you can scarcely identify as lace, so fabric-like is their mesh. They tailor as perfectly as cloth and carry a sophisticated air about them. As for service, you'll be delighted with their practical wearableness. Then there are the handsome, washable cotton and linen laces that tailor so smartly in simple daytime dresses you will be wanting above all else at least one of these practical gowns. Perhaps we would be better expressing the idea to insist that you invest in several. They will carry you through most any social crisis.

So far we have been talking of lace from the practical standpoint. When it comes to reviewing the triumphs of lace from the esthetic side of the question we think the lovely evening ensemble to the right in the illustration tells the story more eloquently than any word-picture could do. This exquisite creation is of bottle green Chantilly lace, so delicately meshed it is like filmiest cobweb structure. A water green foundation with bands of crepe in rainbow colorings at the hem and bodice top of this slip reflect the spirit of joyous summer. The evening veil which has become a favorite headdress for formal occasion is of bottle green net with appliqued motifs of the lace.

A lace dinner and evening dress, such as is centered in the group, is almost indispensable in any woman's wardrobe. The short rounded bolero of matching lace, the full short sleeves as well as the easy fullness of the skirt are all features that make this dress distinctive and correct for both dinner and dancing. It comes in delectable colors in a new pattern of angel skin lace.

You will be wanting an afternoon dress of lace. A very apt model is shown to the left. Pale blue Chantilly lace fashions it. Its styling gives a particularly interesting interpretation of the draped bodice treatment that terminates in a wide molded corselet-girdle line. The hat is a Toya straw.

Lace costume suits, especially in jacket types, in navy, dusty pink, or various blues are outselling other sheer media this season. The jacket may go to extremes, varying from bolero to full length coat, but a jacket there must be with every dress for practical daytime wear. In many instances the lace jacket suit is enhanced with ribbon-bound edges. Frog-fastenings made of tubular ribbon cording add a touch of distinction.

'ON THE SQUARE'

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Decidedly on the square is the formula that newer bags follow, and as to size many of them are enormous. Pictured is a bienen-davis bag on the tab of which are monogram miniature initials. Wide, flat handles and zipper top opening are added features to this bag which comes in tones of black, navy, rust, tan and black patent leather.

Suit of Hopsacking

A suit of yellow hopsacking is a flattering costume for a summer day. Its jacket may be fitted and belted or swing straight and free, but it must be short-sleeved. Add a blouse of white organdie or a vest of printed lawn.

FASHION DECLARES FOR WHITE SUMMER

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

We grant that white is always a summer favorite, but this summer fashion is playing it up in a highly dramatic manner. Costumes are described in the fashion story as "white as snow" or of icy whiteness or white as fleecy summer clouds and so on. You appreciate the stupendous accent on white in fashionable gatherings where "white as a swan" capes and jackets; and boleros of marabou, fur or ostrich are the favored wraps, and where evening gowns float about in billowy masses of white net or chiffon or that which is late style—the pencil-slim draped dress of snow-white rayon jersey draped sculpture-like. Then there are the new white tafeta frocks, "beauties," that they are.

For day there are numberless man-tailored suits of sharkskin and other fascinating wash whites, while the afternoon dresses of white rayon compete in endless parade.

White lingerie has come in and is the wanted kind at present. And as for accessory whites, footwear, gloves, bags and details too numerous to mention make their bow on the fashion stage in pure white.

Top a Print Frock With Silk Coat in Monotone

Well-dressed women find appeal in the new summer costumes that top the print frock with a silk coat in monotone that repeats the leading color of the print. For instance wear with a brown beige and rose print dress, either a jacket or full-length coat of brown silk crepe. Or a red-on-white silk print dress adds a bolero of red silk and there are red ribbon bow trims on the frock.

Grandmother's Prize Silk Patchwork Quilt

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

IT WAS a great day on an upstate New York farm more than a half century ago. The biggest pumpkins, the finest apples and the sleekest live stock were being loaded to take to the Fair. Grandmother announced that she was taking her silk crazy patchwork quilt.

All that winter the red ribbons and blue ribbons, won by prize

pumpkins and apples and farm animals adorned the mantel shelf. But Grandmother, placidly stitching away in her rocking chair, had tucked away in the pocket of her voluminous skirt, the only cash prize that anyone brought home from the Fair. Her crazy patch quilt is still a thing of beauty and a center of interest. It is perfectly at home in a modern living room today. Here is a corner of it and the leaflet offered herewith tells you how to make this kind of quilt and gives detailed instructions for dozens of stitches and combinations of stitches to be used for embroidering crazy patchwork.

NOTE: If you wish to use these weekly articles for reference paste them in a scrapbook, as they are not included in either Sewing Book No. 1 or 2. Book 1, Sewing for the Home Decorator, covers curtains, slipcovers, dressing tables; Book 2 illustrates 90 embroidery stitches with numerous applications; doll clothes and gift items. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book desired. If you order both books, leaflet on making crazy quilts will be included free. GARDEN GOSSIP

EDITED BY CAROLINE HARRINGTON
Letters and questions on garden topics will be welcome.
They will be published and discussed in this column.

Dear Mrs. Harrington:

Will you please mention the beautiful hollyhocks blooming in East Jordan and suggest in our Column that more people plant hollyhocks for next year? I believe it is not too late to put in seed, and wouldn't our town be something to boast about if we could have twice as many hollyhocks next year as we now have?

Another thing, — have you noticed that many weeds are being permitted to go to seed in fence corners, along alleys, and on vacant lots. Unless we do something about this, and do it quick, a lot of hard work will be to do all over again next spring. We should conserve our gains. The seeds of ragweed, pusley, pigweed, quack grass, dandelion, thistle, and all the other enemies of garden crops blow to adjacent yards, live over the winter in the ground, and grow to plague us another year.

Weeds are a community problem. For their successful eradication we must have cooperation among neighbors, and then . . . more cooperation in the three most reliable weed control methods, —

- (1) preventing weeds from going to seed,
- (2) preventing the introduction of fertilizer containing weed seed.
- (3) preventing top growth of such weeds as quack grass, Canada thistle, etc.

Every year at this time the weed menace seems to get out of hand, chiefly, perhaps because we become weary in well-doing, while weeds never lose their persistence. I am especially sorry to see great, thrifty ragweed plants growing along the highway, getting all set to shake their havoc-wreaking pollen out upon the wind to be spread over the entire county and beyond.

Hayfever victims must be more than discouraged when they come here seeking haven, only to be challenged by their ancient enemy, ragweed! Too bad there were not some commercial use for ragweed and quack grass and their ilk, — then these pests would soon disappear. But it seems their only use is to make trouble!

I am more than glad to suggest the planting of hollyhocks. There is no garden flower more decorative, which thrives with less care, and what a priceless virtue its performance is!

Friends have promised me hollyhock seedlings to plant all along the north side of my garden. I should get them in within a month so that they will become well established before cold weather.

Many of my neighbors have planted hollyhocks effectively. From any window in my house I can catch a glimpse of these bright flowers. They are at home the United States over, but it is only a few centuries since the first plants were brought to this continent from China by sailors who admired them in their faraway home and carried them around the world to plant in New England gardens.

The books say that seeds should be planted as soon as ripe. I have had better success with volunteer seedlings than with seeds, no doubt because I do not know the correct way to plant the seeds.

I have found it impractical to move the mature plants. For one thing, they have extremely long, easily broken roots. Then, even if the plant does survive transplanting, usually the buds or blossoms die, and the plant is spoiled for a season.

Of course there is a disadvantage, too, in transplanting seedlings. I have hopefully planted what I thought

FROM THE DIARY OF AN OBSERVANT BYSTANDER

July 18th: Bees are gathering a rich harvest just now, with sweet clover and milkweed in full bloom. A bee man told us today that these two blossoms are the bees' favorite "pasture," but that they will leave milkweed for sweet clover.

July 19th: It is really surprising what one can do with a small vegetable garden. On our little backyard plot we have all the peas, chard, lettuce, string beans, beets and carrots we can use, and some for the neighbors. Later there will be tomatoes, corn, green peppers and squash, we hope.

July 20th: On our excursions around the country we notice how well even the gardens which are not watered are doing. Such nice rains as we have had this season grow tall hollyhocks as well as corn.

July 21st: There is a very retiring little flower in our garden which we can hardly see during the day, but at night it blossoms and is very fragrant. A friend tells us it is "Night-scented stock."

July 22nd: We pulled up our earliest pea vines today, and are wondering what to do with the big gap left in the garden.

was the child of a cream-yellow hollyhock, only to have it grow up a pink one, — lovely, to be sure, but disappointing when I had planned for a different color contrast.

I understand that the seeds cannot be relied on to come true either, — still, from white all through their marvelous color range to a red so deep that is almost black, all hollyhocks are beautiful, and we can scarcely have too many of them. Now is the time to plan for their blooming next summer, since seedlings do not blossom their first year.

J. So, — if those who have hollyhock seeds or seedlings to spare will share them with their less fortunate neighbors, or plant them in spots needing a cheerful note, East Jordan will enjoy the results for generations to come.

Dear Mrs. Harrington:

I greatly enjoyed my visit to the Elk Rapids Garden Club flower show, and would like to share my experiences with our column readers:

This was the fourth annual community flower show for Elk Rapids, and was held at the town hall on July 20th and 21st. The exhibits were displayed on long uniform tables, covered with ivory colored paper and strewn with green cedar. Hand painted floral pictures lined the walls. These were used only for decorative purposes as they were not judged. Cedar boughs covered the windows.

A large display of house-plants, foliage and ferns, among which were beautiful gloxinia plants, was very outstanding.

In the harmonious arrangement class an unusual exhibit of seed balls resembling large dandelions (no one seemed to know what they were) in an old-fashioned black container won the blue ribbon. This entry was made by a man.

There was one large table of rose exhibits, judged for foliage, bloom, color and stem.

The miniature arrangements were displayed very effectively on what-nots.

An artistically arranged basket of shasta daisies in the basket arrangement section won the prize.

A container of hydrangea won the blue ribbon among the floor arrangement exhibits. Hollyhocks were displayed in umbrella stands and earthen ware containers. These effectively added color to the show.

To the right of the building was a garden with a background of evergreens. This contained a bird-bath (which, by the way, was ruffled during the show) and garden furniture.

Entertainment was provided during the evening, and a cake sale was held during the show.

I am told that socials and parties are sponsored from time to time by the club, the proceeds being used for the maintenance of the city park and to hire labor for the various curb and border plantings.

Mrs. Hugo Will, the club president, and other club members were most gracious and helpful. The Elk Rapids Garden Club is to be highly complimented on its civic improvements and fine show.

Chairman — Civic Committee.

What an interesting report, and what stimulating suggestions. I am more than ever enthusiastic about our coming flower show. Thank you, Mrs. Chairman. When are you going to send us another report of East Jordan civic improvements? These reports have been very popular in our column, you know.

Please see the first page for an announcement of our next Garden Club meeting. Also of our annual flower show.

Dear Garden Gossip:

This morning (Saturday) I counted the petunias in the window boxes on Main Street. There were over 50 blossoms in each of the boxes in front of the Company store, but those in front of Healey's and Dinty's Place are crowding them pretty hard. The box in front of Bartlett's is filled with sturdy plants which will surely produce a profusion of blossoms soon. Just Curious.

So the Company store has high score this week! I wonder what the coming week will bring forth. Please count blossoms again, "Just Curious." (Hint: Water and fertilizer is what it takes!)

It has been conservatively estimated by biologists that a single toad is worth $20 a season to the farmer or gardener. Every toad eats (if it can get them) four stomachfuls every 24 hours of cutworms, slugs, the larvae of gypsy moth, tent caterpillars, and other insects, the majority of which are mischievous in gardens. In three months one toad accounts for 10,000 insects. Probably the toad has no superior as an insect destroyer, but it is harmless to the garden or farm crops.

We might well follow the example of the French who collect toads and bring them into their gardens, provide them with board or stone shelters where they may escape from the heat of the sun.

The chief enemies of toads are hawks, crows, automobiles, and snakes, and, unfortunately, sometimes small boys who do not realize that toads are their friends. Have you a toad collaborating with you in your garden? "Nice work, if you can get it!"

A bouquet of fragrant nasturtiums and yellow daisies, picked "to keep them from going to seed," has just come to my desk. Thank you, kind doner. They are lovely.

Dear Garden Gossip:

May I compliment you on the part of Garden Gossip headed "From the Diary of an Observant Bystander?" I am saving it each week for a scrap book, and plan to have a real nature record for next summer. Garden Gossip is read by each member of my family, and has become as popular as the "funnies" of our daily paper. Please continue the good work and accept the thanks of an interested but unoberserving

B. Y. Stander.

Like "pennies from heaven" are the compliments for Garden Gossip that come to my desk. The one who so faithfully sends me her dairy notes, no matter how busy she may be, will believe now that I am not "spoofing" her when I tell her how interesting and worthwhile her diary notes are.

TIT FOR TAT

The two men had been partners in business for more than fifty years. But now the partnership was about to be dissolved, for one of the two lay dying. The sufferer called his friend to his bedside. "I know I haven't much longer to live, old man," he said. "Before I go I've got a confession I must make. During our years of partnership I've swindled you out of thousands of pounds. Can you forgive me?" "That's all right," said the other cheerfully. "Don't you worry about it, I poisoned you."

He Hit Him

Lawyer—Then you admit that you struck the plaintiff with malice aforethought? Defendant (indignantly) — You can't mix me up like that. I've told you twice I hit him with a brick and on purpose. There wasn't no mallets or nothin' of the kind about it—just a plain brick like any gentleman would use.

Jam for Nothing

A Scotsman was observed by a constable walking up and down a busy London street with a large piece of bread in his hand. "What are you doing with that bread?" asked the policeman curiously. "Well," replied the Scot, "I'm looking for the traffic jam."

"Today I can feel the spring vibrating through every nerve!" "Well, that one on your side is all out of whack!"

And the Broom

"You say you cannot get along with your husband. People must learn to bear and forbear. Did you ever try heaping coals of fire on his head?" "No, I don't know as I ever did. But I've tried hot water."

TINNED OR CANNED

Super-Clever

Madge—My husband is a clever man, to say the least. Marge—Your husband would have to be more than clever, darling, to say no more than that.

Proof

"I heard a new one the other day; I wonder if I've told it to you?" "Is it funny?" "Yes." "Then I haven't."

SYNOPSIS

The congregation of the Old White Church in Locust Hill turns out in full force to look over the new preacher, Dr. Jonathan Farwell, and there is much speculation among the communicants as to what sort of man he will be. Cassius Brady, treasurer of the church, had recommended Dr. Farwell for the post after hearing his baccalaureate sermon at the graduation of Dale Farwell, his son, who is a geologist. Brady's daughter Lenora interests Dale, who lives alone with his father. Dr. Farwell meets the members of his congregation personally, accepts their tributes, but refuses to be impressed by the banker's family, the Marblestones, whose daughter Evelyn obviously sets her cap for Dale. Meanwhile the women of the town are curious about the mystery of the Farwells' womanless housekeeping.

It remained for Abbie Brown to try to seek information on this score. With her characteristic energy, she marched briskly up to the front door of the parsonage bearing a pan covered with a white cloth. No sooner had she rung the bell than she chided herself with a want of foresight in not presenting herself at the kitchen entrance. Still, that might have looked rather "funny," was her consoling thought as she heard approaching steps in the hall.

Jonathan Farwell answered the summons.

"Oh, good morning, Doctor! I've brought you something."

"Please come in, Miss Brown."

"I guess you'll think I've got a nerve," was Abbie's bright comment when the doctor relieved her of the proffered pan and ushered her into the parlor. "It's something I know every man loves, and I'm sure you don't make them yourself! This is the coziest room!"

Miss Abbie's glance traveled swiftly and hopefully about the parlor as the minister deposited the pan on the center table.

"Fancy, Doctor! I'm such a rattletrap when I get going. I never once thought to tell you what I brought. Doughnuts!"

"How thoughtful!"

"Yes. Mother was baking this morning. She's really quite famous here in town for her doughnuts. They're not greasy like so many. And I said: 'I'm going to take some over to Doctor Farwell and his son. I know they'll adore them.' She was shocked. But my brother Tom used to love doughnuts. When he was living at home with us, before he was married, that is, he was forever . . ."

"Please thank Mrs. Brown for the two of us. They look delicious."

It was about this same time that Albert Hickman, Locust Hill's popular milk dealer, was mystified at the sudden interest along his route in the daily deliveries of his product at the parsonage. It developed that Mr. Hickman was in the habit of leaving two quarts of "Grade A" at the Farwells', but always deposited the bottles on a table within the kitchen porch. He reminded persistent inquirers that his arrival was timed with the dawn, or thereabouts. Hence the table arrangement.

So there was little help from that quarter.

If the town's housewives ever permitted their imaginations to tour the second floor of the parsonage, most of them were too modest to give voice to such speculation. As a matter of fact, they would have found this portion of the dwelling more revealing than they hoped.

Doctor Farwell had selected the large "spare room" for his own use.

A broad table, with books and papers scattered untidily about the base of a green-shaded lamp, stood in front of the tower windows. One entire wall was given over to ranks of crowded bookshelves. A double bed and dresser had places in the background, but the general atmosphere was that of a workroom. Its appearance suggested that sleep was a matter of secondary importance to the occupant.

A bath, used jointly, separated the minister's quarters from his son's.

Dale's room was sparsely furnished, severe as the cell of a monk, with painted floor and curtainless windows. A narrow iron bed in one corner, maple chiffonier and wood-bottomed chair accounted for the major comforts. A table with neat piles of textbooks and writing materials. A possible explanation for so Spartan a simplicity was a punching bag affixed to a side wall. Under the apparatus a pair of Indian clubs stood at soldierly attention. Two pairs of boxing gloves were suspended on a hook.

There was but a single effort at adornment.

Within a niche formed by the chimney was a shelf. Over it a framed photograph, the full-length portrait of a young woman. There was wistful beauty in the girlish face. The wide appealing eyes were so like Dale's own that even a casual inspection would have identified the picture as an early one of Mrs. Farwell. The trailing gown with its high collar and long sleeves belonged to a past mode. A wedding dress, presumably.

On the under margin of the print was a single word. It was done in a child's painstaking lettering.

ELAINE

An old-fashioned brass candlestick stood at either end of the shelf. The arrangement suggested a shrine.

CHAPTER III

"You get all the mail today," Dale announced, coming into the kitchen where Doctor Farwell sat at the table pouring himself a cup of coffee. "It looks interesting."

As he spoke, he laid a heavy white envelope near his father's hand. It was addressed in a woman's handwriting, fashionably angular and bold.

The minister tore the letter open, glanced through the contents with each time by Marblestone's dislike of losing an auditor. He did discover, however, that Lenora had taken her mother on a brief motor trip that included a stay with relatives. They would be coming home shortly.

At the conclusion of the meal, Marblestone suggested an adjournment to his library on the second floor. Dale was never to know whether the banker considered him mature enough to be included in the manly session, for Evelyn had plans of her own.

"Come on, Dale. Out in the sun room," she suggested, slipping her hand within his arm.

"May I offer you one of these?" Cassius inquired of the minister as they followed their host into a room with a beamed ceiling and a huge fireplace at one end. The walls were lined with books. Brady had taken several cigars from his pocket

"Oh, no. I didn't mean that. Of course not. I was referring to general success in the community. There are social affairs, for instance. It takes a woman, after all . . ."

Brady flashed a quick glance at the banker. There was the suggestion of a warning in the gray eyes behind their shining lenses. Why the devil couldn't Henry see that he was broaching an untimely topic? But Marblestone was speaking again.

"Well, it's always seemed to me that a man in your position would find himself rather on a spot, as the saying goes. Under pretty close watch and—well, fair game for a lot of unattached females." He chuckled at his expression of the idea, as he leaned forward and deposited his cigar ash in a heavy bronze tray that rested on a corner of the library table.

"I am afraid I am not in a position to say, from experience," was the deliberate answer.

"Then I can tell you one thing, Doctor," Marblestone resumed good-humoredly. "You have the good women here guessing in one respect. It worries them to have you and your boy keeping bachelors' hall. That's a new one on them."

Brady had been studying the glowing end of his cigar abstractedly.

"Your advice strikes me as being sound, Henry," he observed quietly.

"My advice? What about?"

"My attending church." Brady straightened in his chair. It was high time for someone to take the conversation out of the banker's hands.

In the meantime, Dale was making the acquaintance of Miss Marblestone in the sun room.

"You know, Dale," she began languidly, leaning back among the cushions of the willow settee to which she promptly had guided her guest, "it's quite an event when a new young man comes to this town. You don't mind if I call you Dale, do you?"

"I wish you would. All my friends do," the boy answered politely.

"Well, it is stupid to be so formal. And we are going to be friends, too. You'll find some cigarettes in the box on the stand. I'll have one, if you don't object. Now tell me all about yourself," she demanded, after Dale had obliged with a lighted match. "Do you like being a minister's son?"

"I'm bearing up," he smiled. "I've never been anything else."

"I want to know about your past. All the dark secrets."

"Very simple, Miss Marblestone"

"Evelyn," she corrected, with a slight lift of her brows.

"Right. Well, I've been in school and in school—and in school. Most of my vacations have been spent in holding down jobs. Since I was big enough. That's my recent history."

"But we heard you were graduated last spring," Evelyn said in surprise.

"I was, by dint of great luck. Then I spent this summer on a survey. I have a chance to go back to the U for the second semester. Have a sort of a job there in the department. I may run out there sooner and get in some studying. After I get father safely settled." He smiled.

"Now I am disappointed. We thought you would be here."

"Unfortunately, I have to work. I have visions of becoming a geologist. There are a lot of rocks in the world that need somebody's care. I'm going to try to break one good rock every day."

an expressionless face, then held it out to his son.

Dear Doctor Farwell:

Mother has asked me to invite you and your son to our home for Sunday dinner. I have delayed the note purposely, so that you will not have the opportunity to refuse us again. Please do accept. We will find you after morning services. Just a family dinner, of course.

Hastily but sincerely,

Evelyn Marblestone.

"I've seen her rolling around in a big roadster. Are we accepting?" Dale wanted to know.

"I presume we shall have to."

Farwell dismissed the subject by opening the morning paper.

Henry Marblestone's genial expansiveness was in full flower as he waited for his chief guest to receive a subdued chorus of acclaim after the morning service. And with reason. The ushers had been obliged to fill the aisles with chairs and the banker appropriated a share of the credit.

"We've another guest today—a friend of yours," he remarked to Doctor Farwell as the two men, followed by Dale, walked to the church door. "Cash Brady. You met him out West."

"Surely. I did not know that he was in the city."

"Back yesterday. Another widower," the banker suggested with his usual freedom. "His wife's in poor health. Off on a little trip with the girl. Great fellow, Cash. Best prosecutor we've ever had. Keen as they come, close-mouthed as a clam. He's about the only man in Locust Hill I ever tell my business to."

Brady was standing by the Marblestone limousine listening to his hostess and her daughter when the others came up. He stepped forward at once to greet the Farwells and bid them a delayed welcome to the church and community. Then came Dale's turn to be introduced to the occupants of the car.

When Marblestone stowed his guests to his daughter's satisfaction, he took his own place beside the chauffeur and conversed steadily and loudly over one shoulder.

Dinner proved to be a long drawn out affair, served with little attempt at formality. Marblestone carved and orated in generous fashion from the head of the board, demanding frequent confirmation of his many opinions from the older men.

Evelyn, dressed again in green, gave bored attention to the masculine talk, occasionally giving Dale a smiling glance from across the table intended to signify that she considered the situation hopeless. That young man found the meal something of an ordeal, marooned as he was between his hostess and Cassius Brady. Dale attempted several times to converse with his lawyer, but his hopes were dashed et and was extending them tentatively.

"Thank you, no," Farwell returned with a quiet smile. "I smoke only in my study. I am a pipe addict."

Marblestone lifted the cover of an ornate humidifier and selected a cigar for himself.

"I've no objection to your smoking your own cigars, Cash," he grumbled, "but I can't go 'em. If you think you can stand a good smoke, help yourself to one of these." He lighted his own as he spoke, with little smacking noises of his lips. "I say, Cash, you'll have to reform along another line, too."

"How's that?"

"Going to church. Seeing for yourself where the funds get to. You're cheating yourself, now that the Doctor's here. Real sermon this morning—two-fisted stuff. We had to hang out the SRO sign."

"So I heard."

"Say, Doctor . . ." Marblestone spoke abruptly. "I should think you'd find it a slight disadvantage for a man in your profession to—not to be married."

"Why?" Farwell turned to his host. His white face was impassive.

"Oh, you know. It's more or less a popular notion that a preacher's wife has a lot to do with his getting on."

"As a preacher, you mean? I always have been in the habit of preparing my sermons unaided." There was no indication of resentment in the words.

Child Welfare Expert Finds New-Born Babies' Aptitudes Cannot Be Measured

Dr. Nancy Bayley Reid, research assistant in the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of California, went from hospital to hospital in Berkeley, Calif., measuring the intelligence of new-born babies. Thirty girls and thirty-one boys not more than three days old were the special objects of her attention. It turned out that there is no telling within a few days after birth whether a baby will be an intellectual or just humdrum mortal.

Dr. Reid found that intelligence cannot be measured until nerve and muscular co-ordination are sufficiently developed to make possible the responses which mark intelligence. There is nothing but to wait until a baby has grown sufficiently, observes a writer in the New York Times.

Dr. Reid did find, however, that the most intelligent parents had the most intelligent three-year-olds. Yet these same bright youngsters at the age of seven months were intellectually more sluggish than the offspring of less intelligent parents. This does not necessarily prove that intelligence is inherited. In fact it may indicate the importance of environment in developing intelligence.

Dr. Reid seems to favor the heredity theory. At any rate, she believes that bright three-year-olds need a longer period of development for their complex mentalities than do the children of duller parents and that it is easier to predict a baby's intelligence by estimating that of its father and mother than by making actual measurements on the baby.

Dr. Reid's study is one of the most important made in years by psychologists. It received an award from the American Educational Research Association.

Fighting Crickets in China

The fighting crickets of China often have individual trainers who make them strong and pugnacious, through special diets, before their matches. An insect that wins a number of these battles-to-the-death is awarded the title of Grand Marshal, says Collier's Weekly, and his name is recorded in the historical records of the sport.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for July 31

SAMSON: STRENGTH AND WEAKNESS

LESSON TEXT—Judges 14:5, 6; 15:11-14; 16:15-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.—Ephesians 6:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Wasted His Strength.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Strong Was Samson?

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Who Is Strong?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Physical Strength and Moral Weakness.

There is no more tragic individual among the sons of men than the one who entered upon life with every promise of success, who has lived for a time in favor with God and with man, and then because of moral failure is set aside by God, shunned by man, and ends life as a disappointment and a failure. "And yet such disastrous climaxes of what should have been great and victorious careers lie all about us, and nowhere with such frequency and inexcusableness as among those whom God has called to preach, evangelize, and teach His Word. The saddest tragedy in all the world is a man who once knew the power of the Holy Spirit and who now walks the streets of some great city or is buried in the cottage of an unknown countryside, without power, without work, without joy, without the leading of the Lord. He knows a weariness that labor never gives, for he wakens every morning more tired and weary than when he went to sleep the night before" (Wilbur M. Smith).

The life story of Samson brings us the picture of God's patient and gracious dealing with such a failure, reveals the inexorable law of cause and effect in the moral realm as well as the certainty that the wages of sin not repented of and forsaken is death.

I. Physical Strength and Favor With God (15:5, 6).

Samson had the distinction (given to only one other Old Testament character) of having his birth announced beforehand. He was to be a Nazirite and was to "begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Philistine"—a commission which sin kept him from ever finishing. God gave him the marvelous heritage of a strong and healthy body as well as His own blessing upon him for carrying out the Lord's work. The fact that he is named among the heroes of faith in Hebrews indicates that he did have faith in God. Yet his life was a failure.

Samson would have been a great favorite in this athletic age. Let those who worship the body and glorify physical prowess take note that such strength is not sufficient to guarantee success in life, and may indeed be a source of temptation which may lead to spiritual and moral downfall.—Those who live for the flesh "shall of the flesh reap corruption" (Gal. 6:8).

II. Moral Weakness and Spiritual Decay (15:11-14).

The portion of the lesson selected for our consideration from Judges 15 gives only an act of prowess on the part of Samson, but the reader will recognize it as one of the many deeds of Samson done as an expression of his uncontrolled sensual nature. Read the entire chapter and it will be evident that here is a man who, while occasionally responding to God's leading, is on the downward path of moral and spiritual decadence.

Scripture is absolutely honest in relating the facts as they are—and here it is not at all an attractive picture. It never is, although the world tries to make it appear to be. A learned audience of university people laughed with evident appreciation at the statement of a professor that "vice is always more interesting than virtue," little realizing that they thus bore testimony to their own attitude toward sin. If the liquor advertisements were honest enough to picture the agony of a drunkard dying of delirium tremens they would present the real truth, but they would sell no "booze."

III. Failure, Darkness, and Death (16:15-21).

Delilah finally betrayed the foolish Samson who apparently had become so sure of himself that he dared to venture anything. The man who was to be strong for God is now in prison, shorn of his strength, blinded by his enemies, and finally he kills himself even as he slays his enemies (18:23-31). Thus he threw away the life that had become to him but a burden and a disgrace.

"Thus he who began never completed his work. The column was broken in the middle. The story ends with a comma and a dash, blistered over by a tear. For the light is turned into darkness, and how great is the darkness" (J. M. Lang).

Now Power Can Defeat God

Be not afraid of sudden fear, neither of the desolation of the wicked, when it cometh. For the Lord shall be thy confidence, and shall keep thy foot from being taken.—Prov. 3:25, 26.

GIRLS WON'T STAY HOME!

MODERN women are invading man's traditional occupations, and if you don't believe it look at these pictures. Above are two Miami, Fla., misses, Virginia Crawford who officiates at a gas pump and Mitzie Strothers, a barberette, who is never short of customers.

Mrs. Juanita Lewis spurns relief to earn her livelihood as a shoeshine girl in New York. Her husband, an unemployed tunnel worker, made the shoeshine stand and Mrs. Lewis says she likes the work because she's "her own boss." Women's emancipation from the kitchen began about the time feminine suffrage was granted. The revolt has grown until a few weeks ago a prominent authoress suggested that men have "made such a muddle" of things that they should be left home to do the dishes!

Women even go in for striking, rioting and picketing. This picture was made during a battle outside a New York pencil factory where several women were injured and others landed in the patrol wagon, bound for jail. Girls won't stay home!

Men of the Mounted

by Captain G. Elliott-Nightingale
Copyright, WNU

REDCOATS GUARDED TRAIL OF '98

VOLUMES have been written on what happened here and there during the Klondyke gold stampede, but very little has been said about the handful of Men of the Mounted who brought law and order and decency to many an outlaw camp. The first steps along the historically famous "Trail of '98" were taken two years before, in 1896, when Carmack's discovery just about electrified the whole world, and when thousands of men, and a few hundred women began converging upon the Yukon from all corners of the earth. Eighteen months after the Carmack discovery the population of Skagway had been increased by more than 30,000 newcomers, gold-seekers taking a breathing spell there before heading north into the Yukon goldfields.

The majority of the newcomers were Americans, and whatever they might have been before they hit Skagway, they cast off all desire for law and order. The decent law-abiding element, being in the minority, laid low, outfitted their two or four-man expeditions, and munched silently away toward the Yukon, while the outlaw element hung around Skagway, living on their wits.

From Skagway, the rallying point, the stampede, tugging and carrying their outfits, headed for Lake Bennett where they built their boats and pushed off to the north and into the Lewes river that flowed north through the rugged but rich Yukon goldfields. That is, they pushed north provided the two or three Men of the Mounted stationed on the sixtieth line of latitude were satisfied that the stampede were properly outfitted, had sufficient food, and were not criminals or outlaws or bad characters. During the early days of the rush, the American stampedeers kicked up quite a row because they were asked to pay customs and duties at Line 60 and they demanded to know what the Mounted were doing there, on American territory. Although the one hundred and forty-first parallel had not yet been decided upon as the dividing line between American Alaska, and British Canada, the Yukon territory, nevertheless, had been under the British or Canadian flag and government for some time. Most of the stampedeers really thought they were heading for their own American Alaska, and it was quite a startling discovery for them to find the Northwest Mounted Police on guard on what the stampedeers thought was American territory. When the vanguard of the '98 heira were stopped by the Redcoats, there was, of course, considerable argument, a bit of nose punching, and a few shots exchanged. As the crowd grew larger, indignation meetings were inaugurated at which it was voted that the only way out was to tie the Northwest Mounted Police into a bundle and throw it into the lake or some roaring river. One group of foreign-speaking Americans (?) staged a bloody riot, then voted to gather the redcoats, place them aboard a barge or raft, and anchor said barge or raft in the middle of the lake. One Yank climbed to the top of his outfit and called for a thousand men to help him wipe the Mounted off the face of the earth forever. But, he shouted in vain, for in that mob were scalawags and cutthroats and criminals who, while they did as they pleased in Skagway, were now willing to impress the Redcoats that they were decent, law-abiding miners eminently qualified to take their places beside law-abiding Canadians. Reason was again enthroned as these wily lawbreakers did everything possible to appear to the best advantage to the half dozen men of the Northwest Mounted Police who, during all the rumpus and riot, had stuck to their post on the sixtieth line just a few yards away, watching and listening, and realizing, no doubt, that the several thousand stampedeers could soon eliminate half a dozen redcoats if they ever set out to do it.

But, they never set out to do it. Those who came to destroy remained to childishly beg the Men of the Mounted to pass them through into the gold-filled Yukon territory. The human jackals and rascals that had terrorized Skagway, now turned into soft-spoken, well-mannered, sensible and very obedient children as they stood by to be examined by the Mounted. Thus it happens that thousands of bad characters who claim that they were in the Klondyke gold rush really never took one step past the half dozen redcoats that held the Chilcoot and White passes. Half a dozen against thousands. Truly the Redcoats were the Daniels in the lions' den in the Klondyke gold rush of 1898.

Long Run for Fire Department One of the longest "runs" of fire apparatus on record occurred in February, 1904, when the New York fire department rushed nine engine companies and one hook-and-ladder company, on flatcars, to the great fire in Baltimore, a distance of 180 miles.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Cheese--Prince of Proteins

Noted Food Authority Tells Why You Should Eat More of the Food That Is So Rich in Protective Elements.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York City.

FOR many years, men with an inventive turn of mind have dreamed of creating a product that would concentrate all the important food elements in a small tablet or capsule. They have been inspired by a desire to simplify meal preparation without sacrificing nutritive values.

No one has ever succeeded in making a synthetic food that would both satisfy hunger and properly nourish the body. But all the while, the researchers have overlooked the magnificent possibilities of cheese, one of the most concentrated, nourishing, satisfying and versatile of foods.

Cheese--The Body Builder

Cheese is the most concentrated source of protein known. Moreover, the protein is of such high type that if it were the only body-building food in the diet, given in sufficient quantities, it would be adequate not only to maintain life, but to support normal growth.

One-half pound of American Cheddar cheese will supply all the protein required by an adult for an entire day.

Cheese--The Energy Food

In addition to its rich store of protein, cheese is also a fine source of energy.

A cube of Cheddar cheese one-and-one-eighth inches square provides 100 calories or the equivalent in energy value of the lean meat of one lamb chop or one medium-sized potato. One-half pound of Cheddar cheese furnishes 1,000 calories, about half the daily requirement of an adult leading a sedentary life.

Cheese for Mineral Salts

Because milk is rich in minerals, it follows that cheese, which is made from milk, contains these precious substances in highly concentrated form. It is an excellent source of calcium, the mineral which is responsible for building strong bones and sound teeth, and for keeping the heart beating normally. A one-and-one-fourth inch cube of American Cheddar cheese contains as much calcium as an 8-ounce glass of milk.

The individual who does not care for milk as a beverage can easily obtain the necessary calcium from cheese. But it is practically impossible to get adequate amounts of this mineral without either milk or cheese.

In rennet cheese, phosphorus, as well as calcium, is present in the same proportions as in milk, but is much more highly concentrated. As in milk, these minerals are in a form that is most nearly perfect for easy assimilation. Rennet-curd cheese is always high in sulphur and fairly high in iron. Furthermore, the iron is in the most readily-assimilated form.

Cheese and Vitamins

Cheese is a splendid source of vitamin A, which promotes growth and increases resistance to disease. It is especially important for eye health and is necessary to prevent the affliction known as night blindness. The amount of vitamin A varies with the type of cheese, but both American Cheddar and Parmesan cheese are extremely rich in this substance, and cream cheese is an outstanding source. Vitamins B and G are also found in whole milk cheese.

With this wealth of food values, one would expect to find cheese appearing on the menu in some form every day. But though the annual production of cheese in the United States exceeds 700,000,000 pounds, it should be much greater. The annual per capita consumption is only 5½ pounds—a woefully small figure when we consider the wide benefits that would result from its greater use.

The failure of American homemakers to use cheese in the amounts that they should is, I believe, due to three factors: first, a lack of knowledge concerning its splendid food values; second, a belief in the old superstition that cheese is not easy to digest; and third, failure to take advantage of the many ways in which it can be served.

Digestibility of Cheese

The foregoing outline of its many food values should give a new conception of its place in the diet. As to its digestibility, studies by the United States Department of Agriculture have entirely disproved the fallacy that it is not completely digestible.

It was found that on an average about 95 per cent of the protein and over 95 per cent of the fat of cheese were digested and absorbed. The various kinds of cheese tested were found to compare favorably in digestibility with the food of an average mixed diet. It was also demonstrated experimentally "that there was practically no difference between cheese and meat with respect to ease of digestion, at least in such quantities as are commonly eaten."

There was also a notion that because it is so high in food value, cheese should only be eaten in small quantities. But scientific tests have proven that cheese may be eaten by normal individuals in large quantities, as the principal source of protein, with entirely beneficial effects upon health.

Place of Cheese in the Diet

There is a case on record of a young man who lived for two years on a daily diet consisting of one-half pound of cheese, a one-pound loaf of whole wheat bread and two pounds of fruit. While this limited diet might prove monotonous to some people, it is possible to utilize cheese as the easiest method of providing important food value, varying the diet, and simplifying meal preparation. For there are more than 200 distinctive varieties of cheese listed by the department of agriculture, ranging from the smooth, delicately flavored cream cheese, which may be given to very young children, to the sharp tangy cheese which is especially popular with men. Fortunately, almost every type can be purchased in packaged form, in sizes that are convenient for large and small families, making it possible to enjoy a wide variety.

Cheese can be used as a main dish; in salads or sandwiches; as a sauce for vegetables; as a dessert. It is desirable at the same time to serve bulky foods, such as fruits and vegetables. Cheese may also be combined advantageously with carbohydrate foods. This is because the balanced diet requires more carbohydrates than protein. And cheese is essentially a protein food, interchangeable with meats and fish.

Gay Prints for Home Frocks

ONE is for young figures, one for mature. Both of these dresses are smart and new in fashion, and both are pretty enough to wear when company comes, as well as for working round the house. Each has a convenient pocket. These designs are delightfully easy to make.

If You Wear Misses' Sizes. Make yourself the charming, full-skirted dirndl-type frock with shirring at the waistline, on the shoulders, and on the nice big pocket. Everything about it is very young and attractive—especially the snug basque top, square neckline and tie belt. We suggest gay print, with ricrac to match.

If You Wear Women's Sizes. Then you'll want the slenderizing dress, built on classic shirt-waist lines, with a plain, slim-hipped skirt. Fullness beneath smooth shoulder pieces gives it correct fit over the bust. Notice there is a slight blouse at the waistline, for freedom of action. That narrow roll collar, finishing the V-neck, is becoming to full faces. This, too, will be pretty in any tubfast cotton that you like, trimmed with ricrac.

The Patterns. 1567 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material; 9 yards of ricrac to trim; 1½ yards ribbon for tie belt.

1529 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material; 2½ yards of ricrac to trim.

Success in Sewing. Success in sewing, like success in any other field, depends upon how you approach the task in hand. To help you turn out clothes professional looking in every detail, we have a book which plainly sets forth the simple rules of home dressmaking. The beginner will find every step in making a dress clearly outlined and illustrated within its covers. For the experienced sewer there are many helpful hints and suggestions for sewing short cuts.
