WOMEN EAGERLY AWAIT THE HERALD'S NEW MOTION PICTURE COOKING SCHOOL

"STAR IN MY KITCHEN" HOME-MAKING FILM COMING TO TEMPLE THEATRE ON WED., THUR., FRI. SEPT. 28, 29, 30

It's the talk of the town! Women throughout the community are planning to attend the friendly class for home-makers, the Motion Picture Cooking School scheduled to open at the Temple Theatre on Wednesday, Sept. 28, at 2:30 p. m.

A welcome invitation to the wise is sufficient, and the only invitation needed for this novel cooking school is that extended to every woman by The Charlevoix County Herald. There is no charge to see any of the showings of "Star in My Kitchen."

Because this newspaper stands ready to sponsor all progressive developments, particularly when they affect the homes of the community, it is presenting this motion picture romance of home-making entirely free.

"If I could only see exactly how she mixes and handles her pie-crust." That comment has been heard from beginners and from more experienced cooks at many cooking schools. Craning necks and anxious eyes, trained on the stage from the sides and back of the demonstration hall, have failed to catch all of the important steps in pastry-making and other culinary arts. Only the early birds in the very front row have had a close-up of the stage in the past, and even they couldn't peer directly into the mixing bowl.

Now the wizardry of the camera has solved the problem, making it possible for every person in the Temple Theatre to share each fascinating stage of the planning, measuring, blending, and baking in practical, up-to-the minute kitchens.

Keeping pace with the baking, roasting and frying, a series of salads and frozen delicacies will parade in and out of the adaptable electric refrigerator, which will reveal its host of possibilities for simplifying labor and marketing, and contributing to good health and good food.

What to do with left-overs? How to take the gloom out of laundry day? How to save time, energy and temper in meal preparation? How to be attractive in spite of the daily rush? How to make the piecrust that men love to eat? How to give first-aid to fallen cakes?

It won't be necessary to ask the questions, for expert home specialists have anticipated these very problems. They know what bothers many an experienced housekeeper, because it is their job to know and to counsel helpfully.

Fun, novelty and entertainment are joined throughout the feature picture, for it is always fair weather when neighborly cooks get together. Home-making has a universal appeal, and every woman is eager to learn the newest news of her craft.

Cooking, romance, modern kitchens, and clever actors and actresses do not tell the complete story of this 1938-model cooking school. The picture is a whole laboratory of modern ideas and wise counsel, touching on latest developments in home equipment and accessories, including laundry methods, ways to prepare left-overs, beauty secrets, hints on saving time and labor, and fresh suggestions on how to entertain graciously, as well as how to be thrifty.

It won't be necessary to carry pad and pencil and try to scribble measurements in the darkened theatre,

Shirley Temple In New Picture At Temple

Four extra fine pictures are being announced by the Temple Theatre for the coming week with such film personages as Don Ameche, Jimmy Durante, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Edna May Oliver, George Murphy, Smith Ballew, and Shirley Temple, all appearing in the various casts.

Smith Ballew and Evelyn Daws start the week on Saturday in "Pan-anits Bad Man." Andy Clyde provides a comedy, and a color cartoon and news complete the bill.

Shirley Temple's grandest film-fare, "Little Miss Broadway", is a three day presentation starting Sunday. Packed with surprises and happy music and with the years best supporting cast — George Murphy, Jimmy Durante, Edna May Oliver, El Brendel, George Barbier — "Little Miss Broadway" is definitely a picture for your "must" list.

Family Nites, on Wednesday only, features Don Ameche, Binnie Barnes, Gregory Ratoff and John Carradine in "Gateway." Screen Snapshots, color cartoon and "Fighting Devil Dogs" complete the program.

Thursday and Friday provide a rollicking rodeo of rhythm as Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien and Priscilla Lane head the cast of "Cowboy From Brooklyn." Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Ronald Rogan and Johnnie Davis are also prominently featured.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank my friends and relatives for everything you have done, your words of kindness, sympathy, consultation and interest taken in Mrs. Gunther and myself, during our recent sorrow. May the Lord bless you for it.

E. Jordan Independents Take Second Victory Over Gaylord Team

Faced by the four-hit pitching of Colon Sommerville, the East Jordan Independent tallied its second victory of the season over the Gaylord Merchants, winning 5 to 2 there last Sunday afternoon.

Trailing 2 to 1 going into their half of the ninth, the Jordanites pushed across four runs to pull the game out of the fire. The Gaylord aggregation were able to score but twice, both markers coming in the opening frame, but from here on in they were easily humbled as Sommerville set them back on their heels with his fine pitching to win his third successive win for the locals.

Hayes with two hits in four trips to the plate led the locals at the plate for the day. C. Sommerville and E. Gee formed the winning battery, with Cook and Squires working for the losers.

The locals wind up their season Sunday at Grayling, after their play-off at the Fair this week Thursday and Friday.

Shooting Affair At Boyne City

JAMES DEXTER IN SERIOUS CONDITION AT A HOSPITAL

A charavari ended in tragedy at 1:30 a. m., Wednesday, Sept. 10, when Jesse Dexter, 38, of Boyne City was shot in the chest at close range with a 410 shot gun, as he and two other companions attempted to celebrate the reported marriage of Dexter's former wife, Elizabeth, and Ray Patrick, 44, a bartender in a tavern at Boyne City.

As Dexter approached the rear of the house at 316 East Pine St., a few steps ahead of his friends, a shot was fired from the woodshed of his wife's home. Hearing the noise, neighbors summoned police, who arrived a few minutes later. Dexter was taken to the hospital in a critical condition.

Occupants of the house were Dexter's former wife, her son Don, 16, and Patrick. County officials placed Patrick under custody at 6:30 Wednesday morning. He is being held at the county jail awaiting investigation.

According to Pros. Atty Bice the son, Donald, contends he fired the shot—not knowing it was his father, officers, however, are checking carefully on his story.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Policemen seem to have more social security than almost anybody else, if they behave themselves, and yet about 70 of them have committed suicide in New York in the last few years. Just why "a policeman's life is not a happy one" was not made clear by Gilbert and Sullivan, but members of the New York force are out to find out and do something about it.

Their new and unique "trouble clinic" has been investigating and prescribing. It lists eight reasons why policemen get in distress, and the list includes just eight brands of money trouble. The news today is that the department clinic has official sanction and is opening headquarters in the old World building.

Patrolman Joseph J. Burkard of the traffic squad, an energetic, resourceful self-starter, in the department 20 years, pioneers the new clinic, with the aid of a young patrolman who is a student of psychology at Columbia university.

They brought in Dr. Menas S. Gregory, famous psychiatrist, and Dr. Carmyn J. Lombardo, also widely known as a specialist in mental disturbance. The clinic already has handled 150 cases, some of them of extremely serious nature.

The clinic was established under the Patrolmen's Benevolent association, of which Mr. Burkard was elected president last year. It is said to have been his original idea, suggested by similar work by the American Legion, of which Mr. Burkard is a former New York county commander.

He has been a genial mixer in the department for many years, vice president of the glee club and long active in the affairs of the P. B. A.

A friend of this writer, gathering material for a book on New York, quoted to a young police lieutenant Inspector Williams' remark that "There is more law on the end of a policeman's night-stick than there is in a decision of the Supreme court."

"That's bunk, and it always was," said the lieutenant. "College men are joining both the police and fire departments. J. Edgar Hoover, and others, are helping to bring about a new conception of a policeman. The 'fat-foot' era is ending."

And then, said my friend, the lieutenant disclosed that he was a college graduate and engaged in an informal discussion of psychiatric training and methods in connection with police work. Would the cops have made their own psychological clinic in Inspector Williams' day?

THE late Texas Guinan gave George Raft a pair of gold-plated garters. They brought him luck and he still wears them. The sleek, slow-eyed young Italian, alumnus of New York's Hell's Kitchen, has taken success in his easy dancing stride—he's an ex-hooper—but, like other moving picture stars, he's beginning to look a gift-horse in the mouth.

He doesn't like his role in Paramount's "St. Louis Blues," and the company suspends him. It is one more instance of increasing esthetic sensitivity in movieland.

In and around Hell's Kitchen, he was a professional lightweight boxer, winning 25 fights, kayoed seven times. He was an outfielder for the Springfield (Mass.) minor league team for two seasons. He did well enough, but it was a sideline of impromptu hoofing and spoofing which paced him into the night clubs and the big Broadway shows.

He achieved a sinister, reptilian suggestion in his dancing which made him known fraternally up and down Broadway as "The Old Black-snake."

He was just looking on at the Brown Derby in Hollywood when a prowling director seized him as a "type" and ruthlessly sloughed him into fame and fortune. His 1937 earnings report was $202,666, topped only by Cooper and Baxter, among the male stars. He owns 45 suits of clothes and a piece of Henry Armstrong.

Light-Colored Paints

Good light-colored outside paints contain white lead, often mixed with smaller quantities of other pigments. Colored pigments are added to the white to produce tinted paints, or used without the white to produce dark paints. It is generally recognized that the dark paints give better service under the same weather and exposure conditions.

Weekly News Review Gigantic Military Bluff Game Focuses Attention on Europe By Joseph W. LaBine

Foreign

Seldom had the world seen such furious shadow boxing. In France, 100 motor busses burned up the roads, carrying troops to the frontier in a maneuver that made Frenchmen recall Gen. Joseph Simon Gallieni's taxicab roundup of 1914. Premier Edouard Daladier's cabinet, which a fortnight ago had shuddered at the idea of a longer work week, now condescended meekly. And Paris looked to England as a frightened child looks to its mother.

Back to London rushed German Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson. Back, too, rushed vacationing cabinet members. In the morning, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain walked his wife around St. James' park as if nothing had happened. But by afternoon his cabinet was immersed in gloom. Echoing puzzled Britain's thoughts, the isolationist Daily Mail cried: "The British public are disquieted... rumors of all sorts go round, but from official sources people hear nothing. It is time that the British public were frankly told what is happening."

Much would Mr. Chamberlain have paid to know what was happening. Cause of this international fussing was Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, who even then was doing some fussing of his own. Two days before, England's Sir John Simon had warned Germany to keep its hands off little Czechoslovakia, on pain of war with Great Britain. But Adolf Hitler answered this bluff with a new bluff, preparing to keep his 1,000,000 reserves under arms until mid-October. Flying from one frontier to the next, Dictator Hitler proudly surveyed the war machine that all Europe fears he will soon point at Czechoslovakia.

For more than a month, Britain's Viscount Runciman has struggled to arbitrate differences between Czechoslovakia and her 3,500,000 rebellious subjects, pro-Nazi Germans living in the Sudeten region which fronts Greater Germany. While Adolf Hitler's official newspapers whip up Nazi resentment against Czechoslovakia, Sudetens themselves have been doing their best to stir up trouble. Their leader, Konrad Henlein, has obeyed Herr Hitler by refusing all mediation efforts by Viscount Runciman or Czechoslovakia's government.

Since Germany would quite likely gobble up the Sudetens if given an opportunity, Great Britain has strongly protested Konrad Henlein's demand for autonomy. Last week, after sitting calmly through these protests, Sudetens pointed an admiring finger at England's autonomy arrangement with Ireland (Eire). While Viscount Runciman blushed, they asked why a similar arrangement could not be made between Czechoslovakia and themselves.

After a week's bluffing, the end was not yet in sight. For his part, Fuehrer Hitler bluffed that he wanted (1) complete autonomy for Sudetens; (2) repudiation of Czech alliances with France, Russia, Poland; (3) Czech non-aggression pact with Germany; (4) Czech customs union with Germany. Though Europe was jittering badly, the disinterested observer could count noses and find Adolf Hitler forlornly friendless. Lined against him were France, Britain, Russia, Czechoslovakia. Silent, but presumably favoring the Czechs, were Rumania, Jugo-Slavia. Even his best friend, Benito Mussolini, warned he would not intervene in the Sudeten squabble.

Politics

Last month, South Carolinians were treated to the unique political show that no other state can boast. Since law demands it, three Democrats running for U. S. senatorial nomination traveled together, stayed at the same hotels, denounced each other daily from the same platforms. These men were:

Ellison D. ("Cotton Ed") Smith, who has stayed a South Carolina senator 30 years by championing

SOUTH CAROLINA'S SMITH

Southern womanhood was vindicated, three stock issues—white supremacy, the price of cotton, Southern womanhood. Under Franklin Roosevelt's party leadership he has been an "80 per cent New Dealer," opposing wage-hour and government reorganization measures. For his lukewarm New Dealism, "Cotton Ed" Smith's defeat was asked last month by Franklin Roosevelt.

Gov. Olin D. Johnson, strapping, 41-year-old World war veteran, who had Franklin Roosevelt's blessing. His chief campaign argument was that "Cotton Ed" once remarked a man could live in South Carolina on 50 cents a day. Actually, Governor Johnson misconstrued his opponent's speech in the senate opposing the wage-hour bill. He really meant that South Carolinians could live cheaper than New Englanders.

State Senator Edgar Brown, once Governor Johnson's colleague in the state Democratic organization controlled by Highway Commissioner Ben Sawyer. Two days before the election, he withdrew and threw his support to Senator Smith.

After weathering this stormy battle as best they could, South Carolinians marched dutifully to the polls and sent "Cotton Ed" Smith back to the senate. That night, standing under a statue of Wade Hampton, the South Carolina governor who ended carpathing and Negro domination, Senator Smith donned his Red Shirts uniform (equivalent to the old Ku-Klux Klan) and intoned: "No man dares to come into South Carolina and try to dictate to the sons of those men who held high the hands of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Wade Hampton!"

● A haven for old folks, California periodically gives birth to pension ideas. Townsendism arose there, so did Upton Sinclair's E. P. I. C. (End Poverty in California). This year's pension plan came from Sheridan Downey, a San Francisco lawyer who would pay $30 each Thursday to every Californian who is jobless or over 50.

Downey pension would be paid in script, legal for taxes or goods. Pensioners would stamp their warrants every week with 2 per cent of their face value, purchasing stamps with real money. At each year's end, every $1 warrant would bear $1.04 in stamps. The state would redeem it for $1 from the stamp fund and retire it. On this platform, Sheridan Downey ran for Democratic senatorial nomination against 74-year-old William Gibbs McAdoo, incumbent.

Last July, Franklin Roosevelt spent three days with Senator McAdoo, asked Californians to re-elect him and censured Candidate Downey's campaign as "utopian."

Same day as South Carolina defeated Franklin Roosevelt's candidate (see above), Californians also exercised their franchise. All day they voted, and at Los Angeles the excitement rose to fever pitch. A short, sharp earthquake was felt. By midnight, the President heard about his second defeat of the day. Candidate Downey was nominated. Next day, California's Supreme court met to decide the legality of "$30 every Thursday."

Aviation

Once a captain in the Russian czar's guards, Alexander P. de Seversky came to the U. S. when he found himself an exile, established a name for himself designing speed planes. His latest ship: a low-wing, single-motored military pursuit plane which Aviatix Jacqueline Cochran hoped to fly in this year's Bendix races.

To test his new ship, Seversky flew from New York to Los Angeles in 10 hours, 3 minutes, 7 seconds, bettering by almost 1 1/2 hours the mark set in 1933 by Roscoe Turner.

Carrying a remarkable load of fuel in its wing-to-wing tanks, the ship can cruise 3,000 miles, would be a logical convoy for new U. S. "flying fortresses" that cruise 5,000 miles.

Miscellany

Fifteen years ago, in 1923, an earthquake killed 150,000 Japanese in Yokohama. Night before this year's anniversary, sentimental Yokahamans retired, planned to spend the next day in mourning. At midnight there was a high wind. At 2:45 a typhoon struck, collapsing houses, grounding steamers, flooding streets. Pushing on to Tokyo, the typhoon killed hundreds. Thus was an earthquake's anniversary observed.

China Aided by Huge Silver Purchases of U. S. Treasury

Survey Reports China in a Good Shape as Japan To Continue War.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Huge purchases of China's silver reserves by the U. S. treasury have been one of the prime factors in enabling China to maintain its resistance to the Japanese invasion, according to a survey of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

As a result the institute finds that China is in just as good shape financially for continuing the war as Japan, and possibly even better. Neither shows an indication of being near the point of financial exhaustion, although the institute believes China in the end will be forced to resort to inflation.

"No statements have ever been issued," the survey states, "to show how much silver has actually been taken over, but the silver deals between the U. S. treasury and Chinese authorities have been so comprehensive that little Chinese silver has been sold on the open market since transactions between the two governments were first initiated. The price paid the Chinese apparently has been higher than that prevailing in the open market."

Silver Sold to Treasury. The institute finds that since November, 1935, when China was forced off the silver standard owing to the United States' action in arbitrarily boosting the price of silver to 45 cents an ounce, the Chinese fiscal authorities have handled roughly 1,200,000,000 Chinese dollars.

At the United States price of 45 cents per ounce this makes a total of 430,000,000 U. S. dollars. Most of this, the institute says, has been sold to the U. S. treasury. Nearly all of this has presumably been shipped out of China, much of it coming directly to the United States, and the remainder being held either at Hongkong or London awaiting shipment to its eventual American destination when the moment is favorable.

Opium Brings Revenue. The second source of unofficial revenue that is enabling Chiang Kai-shek to keep up his resistance is that of the opium growing provinces of China, the institute says.

Before the Japanese invasion, it was known these provinces were

WATER SKIER

Otto Lang, famed skier, executes a "dry landing" in the fast growing sport of water skiing at Coronado, Calif. Picture shows him just entering the "snow plow" stop. In a "dry landing" the skier lets the rope go and coasts into the dock without even getting wet. Trick is to judge the speed correctly. If the skier goes too fast, he'll crash the dock. If he goes too slowly, he won't reach it and will receive a ducking.

Slenderizing Afternoon Dress. You'll find this one of the most becoming and comfortable dresses you ever had, and it's just as smart as it can be! It has the new kind of skirt, smooth-hipped and almost straight. Inside tucks on the shoulders give you the fullness you need over the bust. The v-neck, cut deep and rather narrow, is always flattering to large women. Make it up, for right now, with the short sleeves, in chiffon, georgette or soft silk crepe. Later, make it with the smart, long bishop sleeves, in thin wool or sheer velvet.

More Conveniences Help Keep 'Em Down on Farm

WASHINGTON.—Now it is known what's been keeping 'em down on the farm in recent years. Census Director William L. Austin disclosed that a "sample survey" of 3,000 farms in 40 states showed that the level of living on the nation's farms has risen materially since 1930. It revealed that seven out of every ten farms had automobiles; six had radios; and four were lighted by electricity.

On three farms out of every nine, water was piped into the dwelling, and on two of these into a bathroom. Three out of eight farms had telephones, one out of three had tractors and one out of four had a motor truck.

Finding a Way

BETTY CARR turned her little purse upside down and ruefully counted its meager contents. The same old story! The end of the month and a balance of only one dollar and forty cents. There had never been as much as a two dollar balance in it for over a year. With all the time she had to spare, there didn't seem to be a single thing in the whole village of Sharon that she could do to make a little extra money.

Their long delayed visit to their western home, which she and John hadn't seen since their marriage, eight years ago, seemed as far away as ever. However, country roads were beautiful with Queen Anne lace just now. She and Buddy would take a walk to the drugstore at the end of the road and leisurely eat their ice cream in the little ice cream parlor over the river.

"Look, mother, look! Blackberries, thick as flies!" "Come away, come away—you're in the 'queer woman's' meadow," she whispered to her little son. And then they both started back when a hearty laugh reached them from behind the hedge and a woman stepped out—a large, masculine woman, with a full basket of berries.

Her eyes were laughing. She looked appreciatively at the little scene before her—at Buddy, standing defensively before his mother, looking the "queer woman" straight in the face. "If your lad likes blackberries, help yourself. 'I have plenty.'"

This was so pleasantly said that Buddy relaxed his guard and pulled his mother forward through the hedge. So this was what was behind that dense hedge that no eyes could penetrate! Trees and berries galore. And this was the "queer woman!" Betty looked curiously at her.

"I never saw so many berries all at once in my life," said Betty, when she had recovered her poise. "I sell 'em in the city," said the woman with satisfaction. "I have my regular customers. My only trouble is in gettin' pickers here. Want to help?" she asked practically. "Fifty cents an hour, steady. You and your lad could easily make three dollars an afternoon and get your own winter supply as well."

"Give us a pail," said Buddy suddenly, and they began right away, and worked up to the time for Betty to get John's supper. Before summer was over they had canned and sold all the fruit and vegetables on the "queer woman's" miniature farm.

"You're like I was at your age," observed the woman to Betty one day. "Husband and you working like mad and not a cent in the bank, I bet."

Betty's eyes snapped. "It won't always be—" she began, heatedly. "No. Something's bound to break right for a young fellow that plows his way through winter snows, to catch his train to the city at 7 o'clock cold winter mornings, for three years."

"You've noticed that?" asked Betty, with a catch in her voice. "Jed Turner's wife is tied up with rheumatism and he's lookin' for someone to do up their Albertas that have begun to fall. You go up there and help out. Swap part of your labor for eggs and poultry and you'll be all set for the winter."

"I've never told you a thing and you've thought out my whole problem for me," said Betty. "I've had to think and think hard all the days of my life," said the woman, "and I'm passing along the things I have learned. There is always a way out of your difficulties. Sometimes you have to work hard to find it, yet sometimes it lies within reach of your hand."

Betty went to Jed Turner's farm and did up their peaches, fed their chickens and put down their eggs. She wrote to her western home for her grandmother's recipe for rheumatism and rubbed it faithfully into Mrs. Turner's rheumatic knees until she was up and about again.

When the first snowstorm came and drifted high against the gate and Betty was getting John's breakfast a bit earlier to allow for the usual plow through the snow, she heard a noisy jangle, and there was Jed Turner on a home-made snow plow made of two beams and a cross section, driving his big bay through the swirling snow to her gate.

"The wife wants yer over this afternoon," he shouted. "I've cleared the way fer ye." "Drive on to the station, Jed," she called back, and Jed willingly did what he was told, and made the way clear for the men who later stepped out onto a clear road on their way to work.

Betty gazed after the retreating form of her husband walking briskly along towards the station. "How right she was," she reflected, looking through the dense hedge through which no eyes could penetrate. "There is always a way. Sometimes you have to search hard to find it—sometimes it is just within reach of your hand."

Cheap Pleasures

By RAMONA C. WOODBURY
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate,
WNU Service.

THE little ingenue stood in her dressing-room and gazed at the wonderful presents that her birthday had brought. There were orchids and roses from the management, a beautiful imported bag from the leading woman; the second woman had given her a lovely batik scarf, yards and yards long, glowing in color.

The orchestra boys had chipped in and purchased a big, golden treasure chest containing 10 pounds of world-famous chocolates and bonbons. The "heavy" man had bought six pairs of sheerest chiffon hose; the juvenile had remembered her favorite perfume; and the comedian had soberly presented her with a slender flat package which the little ingenue decided she would unwrap when the others left.

A pang of bewilderment and of disappointment struck her. It was a motto, a beautifully executed motto in a hand-carved silver frame. "A Daily Prayer" was the title. Judy read it through, uncomprehending. It was a nice enough prayer, she thought, as prayers go, but what on earth did she need of a daily prayer? At the last bell she stood the framed motto against the mirror of her dressing table. A line caught her eye.

"Deliver me from cheap pleasures." "That's a good line," thought Judy, appreciatively. "Deliver me from cheap pleasures." I like that. Between the first and second acts, Judy found Dickie Pearson in the wings, waiting for her.

"Lissen, darling," he said with his famous smile, "I've a bit of an edge on—but nobody knows it. I'm cel-celebratin' the birthday of a cel-celebrated actress. I'm goin' to throw a party after the show—biggest party you ever saw in your life. Up to my 'partment."

In her dressing room, Judy contemplated the coming party with some misgiving. She didn't want to be a piker. Heretofore, she had managed to squeeze out of their parties without offending anyone. The gift motto caught her eye. "Deliver me from cheap pleasures." Her alert mind embraced the significance of the message. "Oh, Lord, deliver me from cheap pleasures!" This time, it was a little prayer that issued, flower like, from the bottom of her heart.

Near the end of the third act, the comedian approached her, as she waited alone in the wings for her cue. His face, beneath his grease paint, was serious, as all good comedians' faces should be, and Hal was the best comedian on Broadway.

"Are you going to the party?" he asked. Judy nodded. "I wouldn't go if I were you." "Hal," said Judy, with a sudden burst of confidence, "I don't want to go at all, but I don't see how I can get out of it."

"That's easy," whispered Hal. "Act. Have a fainting fit—or a sudden attack of appendicitis or something." "Will you take care of me?" asked Judy. "You bet I will. You throw the fit and I'll do the rest."

"All right," chuckled Judy. "It's a go." Outside after the performance, Dickie Pearson waited in jubilant spirits. Suddenly the stage door opened, and out came the comedian, carrying a limp figure in his arms. The rest of the company followed, hushed.

"What's all the excitement?" demanded Dickie. "Judy fainted," explained the second woman. "She had a terrible pain in her side—I bet it's appendicitis." Dickie rushed to Hal's car. Judy lay limp and white on the rear seat. Liquid white had brought about a very realistic pallor.

"I'll drive her home, Hal," said Dickie officiously. "The devil you will," said Hal to himself. Aloud, "I don't think it would be best to disturb her again, Mr. Pearson. Judy feels terribly about the party and begs you to go ahead and have it. I'll call you up later, after the doctor sees her, and tell you how she is."

The car sped away, leaving Dickie, open-mouthed, upon the sidewalk. Two blocks further along Judy climbed over to the front seat. "Listen, man," she said, snuggling up to Hal, "why did you give me that motto?" "Because I thought you needed it," he said seriously. "And there's another thing you need, Judy. You need a husband to say 'No' when all these Johnnies invite you out to parties."

"Is this a proposal?" asked Judy. "It is. Will tomorrow morning be too early to suit you, dearest?" "Not a bit. And Hal—let's drive around until City Hall opens. I think I'm going to need you every minute to—deliver me from cheap pleasures." "You darling," smiled Hal, as he kissed her.

Nominate For STATE REPRESENTATIVE on The Republican Ticket

WHY???

In answer to the above question I submit to the Electors of the Charlevoix-Leelanau District a part of the OFFICIAL RECORD of our present representative taken from the House Journal to which you all have access.

(1) During the 1935 Session of the Legislature Representative Tibbits introduced a measure eliminating the office of State Highway Commissioner. As a result this District has suffered. Just one example: M66 was washed out near Loeb Farms. It remained unrepaired for over five months, when temporary repairs could have been made in 24 hours, and the road opened. Information booths all over the State were and are sending Tourists over other trunk lines.

(Just why this foolish action which was not even considered)

(2) During the same Session Representative Tibbits introduced a measure to raise the Governor's Salary to $15,000. (Why raise the Governor's Salary at a time when it was already necessary to have moratoriums to save our farms and homes?)

(3) January 12th., 1937, Representative Tibbits voted for the immediate consideration of a resolution which would have given each of the 100 Representatives and 32 Senators $10 a day extra for not to exceed 150 days. This would have cost the State $198,000. Representative Tibbits would have received an extra $1500. The measure failed to receive the required two-thirds vote and was referred to a committee. It was amended to $6 a day extra for not to exceed 120 days. On January 28th., 1937, Representative Tibbits voted for this amended measure, it passed and the resolution was sent to the Senate. It would have cost the State $100,000 and given Representative Tibbits an extra $720. Fortunately the Press of the State became aroused with the result that the Senate asked the Attorney General for an opinion on the measure. The Attorney General said "NO" IT IS ILLEGAL.

Representative Meyers from Cass County, a Physician and Surgeon, with reference to this measure said on the Floor of the House on February 25th, 1937 (House Journal, page 280) in part as follows:

"We have had quite a block here who couldn't think of anything for several weeks except the $6 a day or $10 a day. These same people, not all of them, who are so anxious for the $6 per day and who shed great tears about having to live in Lansing at a great expense, turn around and seize upon every excuse to prolong their stay in Lansing. They waited impatiently for the Attorney General's decision. They could hardly wait. They could have called in any ten year old School Boy, who could read the English language, who could have given them as fair and accurate a decision in fifteen minutes time."

(To anyone who desires I will be glad to furnish a copy of Representative Meyers complete speech.)

(4) Representative Tibbits voted for a fish bill, closing to fishing for certain months of the year, the Lakes of the County, including Lake Charlevoix and Round Lake (except for catching Mackinaw trout with a hook and line.) After this law had gone into effect a meeting of the fishermen of Charlevoix County was held in Charlevoix at which meeting about two hundred were present. At that meeting Representative Tibbits made the astounding statement that he had voted for the bill without having read it or knowing its contents, that several bills were being considered at the same time. IS THIS REPRESENTATION?

Sympathetic enforcements officers overlook this law, but it is there. Just what would you fishermen think about it if this law were enforced?

(5) Representative Tibbits introduced a bill to discover new means for the State to Obtain Revenue. A Hundred Million Dollars to spend, and they want more. Are we not taxed enough?

(6) A Bill was up for passage in the House of Representatives, which would have transferred our 57 State Parks from the non-partisan Conservation Department to the partisan State Highway Department. In other words to put our State Parks into politics. The House passed the Bill, but it was beaten by one vote in the Senate. The record shows REPRESENTATIVE TIBBITS present but not voting. (My contention is that Representative Tibbits was not there voting for himself. He was there to cast the vote of the Charlevoix-Leelanau District and should have voted his convictions.)

(7) These are only a few of the criticisms that are being made of Representative Tibbits' Record, criticisms that are being made by his personal friends. Many believe that any one of these mistakes should be sufficient reason for sending another to the Legislature.

A Public Officer's Record belongs to those he serves, and every Public Official should always be willing to have his acts scrutinized and criticized. The above record is from the House Journal.

An inspection of my record while a Member of the House of Representatives is invited. It will be found in the House Journal for the years 1921 and 1923.

I was born in Charlevoix County and have lived here all my life. Have practised law in Charlevoix County for 27 years, Commenced the practice of Law with J. E. Converse in Boyne City and lived in Boyne City for two years 1911 and 1912. Prosecuting Attorney for Charlevoix County for 8 years, resigned to enlist as a private soldier. Did not see oversea service, so claim no special consideration because of this service. Charter Member of Leslie T. Shapton Post 226 American Legion. Commander two years.

City Attorney of Charlevoix for five years. Member of the State Legislature for two terms from January 1st, 1921 to January 1st, 1925.

I believe that the experience gained through the years has qualified me to represent and serve you. I solicit your consideration and support.

Sincerely submitted,

ROLLIE L. LEWIS.

Garden Gossip

Edited by Caroline Harrington
Letters and questions on garden topics will be welcome. They will be published and discussed in this column.

Ho-hum, here it is almost the middle of September, and at our next Garden Club meeting (to be announced later) Mrs. Eva Votruba will tell us about "Putting the Garden to Sleep," — what to do to keep the snapdragons over for early blooming next summer, when to dig up the gladiolus and how best to preserve the bulbs, what to do for the tulips to insure good blooms, how to care for perennials and shrubs, etc.

It seems that the secret of winter protection is not to keep the plant roots from freezing, for the ground usually is frozen far below the roots. We try, rather, to prevent the harmful alternate freezing and thawing with weather changes. Good protection is offered by the dead tops of the plants themselves — they hold the snow blanket in place, and keep sleet and ice from the living plant tissue. Besides these, there are other secrets of winter protection which no one knows better than Mrs. Votruba, — witness, her garden bright with perennials from early spring until winter wind and snow makes outdoor gardening impossible.

Our trip of last week to the Charlevoix Nurseries was rewarding in more ways than one. The day, the companionship, the well-ordered gardens were delightful . . . and each of us came away with a bunch of bitersweet, a "hen and chicken," and a small potted cactus to boot, — further evidence of the generosity of Mr. Hemingway who conducted us on an instructive "walk-talk". His arboretum of evergreens was particularly interesting, giving us an opportunity to see the distinguishing characteristics of many, many varieties of cone bearing trees. Mr. Hemingway told us that the government furnished these trees to him at a very low cost, making but one stipulation, — that the trees from the arboretum may never be sold. Uncle Sam, it appears, would have us become better acquainted with trees.

FROM THE DIARY OF AN OB-SERVANT BYSTANDER

August 29th: There are a lot of goldfinches visiting our garden now, and I notice they are especially interested in cosmos seeds. They are such bright, cheerful little fellows, I hate to see them leave . . . but suppose it won't be long now.

August 31st: A high wind today, and we enjoyed watching Lake Michigan from the breakwater in Charlevoix. Some of the waves were very high and it was a swell place to get a shower bath.

Sept. 1st: Some reminders of fall we noticed in a long drive today — tall dusty golden-rod beside road, farmers cutting corn, the second cutting of alfalfa all harvested — and peaches and tomatoes for sale in booths by the highway.

Sept. 2nd: Garden Club was very interesting today. Mr. Hemingway showed us around his nursery which has such rare and beautiful shrubs — one could easily (and happily) spend a whole day there. Then the Taylor gardens at Sequanota were a riot of lovely colors with both annuals and perennials at their best, and all the flower beds and borders so perfectly planned.

At least three flowers I didn't have this summer are going to appear in my garden next summer, — giant hyacinth-flowered candytuft (to be planted with my salpiglossis), nemesis, in all its many hues, and old-fashioned verbenas. These I saw in the lovely gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor's summer home at Sequanota, the nemesis for the first time. I am regretting all the years I have not known this gay flower, so beautiful and so useful for cutting or for massed planting. It was an inspiring half hour that our Garden Club spent in these charming gardens, admiring the color effects obtained by thoughtful planning and careful planting.

Plants always remind me of children. Some apparently thrive on neglect, while others must be coaxed along, often with indifferent results. But do we love the husky children better?

These demonstrations and contests are being sponsored by the Michigan State College and the United States Department of Agriculture.

All growers, dealers, Smith Hughes teachers and Vocational Agriculture classes are urged to attend one of these demonstrations.

"Dale, how lovely!" Lee exclaimed, as she carefully opened the box and brought to view a mass of pink roses. "How did you know that my mother loves flowers better than anything else in the world?"

"I didn't," he smiled happily. "I just couldn't think of anything else good enough for her."

"You've no idea how she will appreciate it. I wish she were here now to thank you. You must excuse me a minute while I take care of them."

"I had the very dickens of a time finding a little something for you," Dale remarked when Lee returned to the living room. He held out a small flat parcel as he spoke. "Save it for tomorrow."

"Indeed I won't!" Lee's brown eyes were shining. "I never could wait until Christmas morning to look at my presents. Please . . ."

Her eager fingers were already working with the ribbon that bound the tissue-wrapped package. Then Lee was gazing in breathless delight at a small painting held in her two hands.

"Like it?"

"It's adorable. I'm afraid I don't know how to tell you. It's so beautiful," she adored softly.

Dale gave a relieved sigh. "Then I'm glad. I had just about given it up. Then I was browsing around over in the city and happened in a funny little restaurant down in the Village. Some artist had a number of pictures on display there and I saw that one. As soon as I looked at it, I knew it was you. Do you know what it made me think of?"

"Of course," Lee answered quickly. "Our trip to Staten Island. It's that same soft haze over the water. The same coloring—and that old house. I wish I knew how to thank you."

"Can't you think of a nice way?" was Dale's bold retort.

By way of answer, Lee laid the picture carefully on the table, crossed swiftly to Dale's chair, leaned down and touched his cheek lightly with her lips.

"There. You're thanked."

"Lee!"

Dale was still under the spell of that first little kiss when he reached the parsonage and found Pink in the kitchen staring moodily at a dressed turkey that reposed on the table.

"That's the fourth one of them things sent here today by the dominie's flock," the cook explained disgustedly. "The ice box is lousy with turks. Come on out on the porch a minute. I want to show you something."

The something proved to be a small Christmas tree concealed at the end of the refrigerator.

"It sort of had me bothered," Pink offered in some perplexity. "You know the dominie always insisted on your havin' a tree, same as he always draws the line against goin' out anywhere on Christmas. Of course you're pretty old for such dofunnies now, but I figured you mightn't be here another time and maybe he'd sort of expect it. What do you think?"

"Mighty thoughtful of you, Pink. I'll help you fix it, if you like."

"The dominie looks pretty good these days, don't you think?"

"Fine. Why?"

"I dunno. Look here, kid. I don't think it would hurt none to tell you he's been glad to have you stickin' so close to the house lately. Goin' places with him and everything. He thinks you're makin' a swell job of yourself. Pretty tough if you ever was to let him down."

When the tree was decorated it made a brave showing, its base heaped about with sundry parcels and packages. Jonathan Farwell gave a brief tribute to its beauty when he entered the parlor later, but Dale caught a sudden light in his father's dark eyes that made him understand that Pink had been right.

Dale's remembrance from Lee was a small wallet bearing his initials in gold letters. The memory of their ride to the island prompted the selection. Lee had not forgotten, either.

Rather to his surprise there was a second and bulkier parcel bearing the greeting card of Cassius Brady. The contents proved to be a dog-eared book, but a note within the leaves in the lawyer's crabbled handwriting furnished an explanation.

My Dear Dale:
When I was about your age, this old companion was one of my favorites. It seems to be out of print now, so I'm asking you to accept this disreputable copy with my best wishes. I hope you'll like O'Malley. You remind me of him after a fashion.
Faithfully,
C. B.

CHAPTER IX

A few days after Christmas, as Dale stood at one of the windows in the Locust Hill Trust Company depositing a modest check that had been a gift from his father, he was conscious of a touch on the arm. A man in the bank's uniform was at his elbow.

"Excuse me, Mr. Farwell. Will you please step into Mr. Marblestone's office? This way."

In some surprise, Dale followed the messenger to a private office at the far end of the ornate lobby. His surprise deepened when he saw Evelyn smiling from a chair near her father's desk. Marblestone greeted his caller with a genial salute.

"Hello, Dale. Draw up a chair. I've been intending to ask you in for a chat. Evelyn happened to see you when you came in." The banker cleared his throat impressively. "We'll get down to business. When are you leaving?"

"I think about as soon as I can get ready after New Year's."

"You're taking over some sort of a school job for the spring months, I believe you told me."

"Yes, sir."

"Um-m. You know, Dale, I've been thinking about you since we wish that he had not met Lee's father under the particular circumstances.

"Dale!" Evelyn exclaimed, when the big roadster was in motion. "You don't know how thrilled I am over the idea of your coming back here to stay. I think it's wonderful for you. I'll like it, too."

"It does sound wonderful. So wonderful that I hate to turn it down."

"Whatever do you mean?"

"It's decent of your father to give me time to think it over. But I know what the answer has to be. I can't do it."

"Surely you're joking, Dale."

Evelyn swung the roadster to a skillful halt at the curb in front of the parsonage. She shut off the motor and sat eyeing her passenger reproachfully.

"No," Dale observed thoughtfully, "I don't think I'm joking. I've put in four hard years preparing for my own job. I like my work. I feel sure that I can make good in it and I don't know the first thing about banking. There's another thing, Evelyn. I want to make my own start in life, first. That's why I know I'm going to decline your father's offer. I don't want to be carried. If you know what I mean."

"I don't know." There was a

Mrs. Brady stole a troubled glance at Lee. "Had you heard about it, dear?" she inquired gently.

"No, Mother." The brown eyes were watching the needle.

"Maybe it's a big secret," Brady observed. "Henry didn't say so, though. He had just been talking to Dale. As I went into the office, Dale was coming out. Evelyn was with him."

"Does that mean Dale will not go back to school?" Mrs. Brady asked.

"Not as I understand it. According to Henry, he's going to finish his work and come back here in the spring."

"I think I am rather sorry to hear that," Mrs. Brady said the words slowly.

"So am I," Brady admitted with a frown. "I wanted to see the boy go on with his own work. Always had an idea he might make some sort of reputation for himself."

"Kid! Snap out of that!"

Dale's head stirred restlessly on his pillow. A troublesome dream held him. Pink coming to his side, shaking him roughly and telling him he was late for school. His eyes blinked protestingly. Why was the light burning?

"Kid! Kid!"

It was Pink. A heavy bathrobe thrown over his green pajamas, hair standing grotesquely on end. Calling in a shrill insistent whisper.

"What the deuce is the matter?"

"Pipe down. You'll wake the dominie. Get down to the phone. That Brady guy wants you."

Dale groped his way through the lower hall to the telephone, located it and jerked the receiver to his ear. "Yes?" he called guardedly.

"This is Lee."

"Dale, I need you. Can you come over right away?"

"Sure. Want me to get word to anybody first?"

"No, no. Hurry! And bring your car."

Within five minutes Dale was backing the car from the garage. He had waited but long enough to don his shoes and trousers, supplementing his costume with his father's heavy ulster as he hurried from the house.

As he leaped up the steps of the Brady porch, the front door swung open. Lee, her face white and drawn with anxiety, stared at him pitifully. She seemed unable to speak.

"What's the trouble?" Dale demanded in a low voice. "Is it your mother?"

"Yes . . . I don't know. She and daddy went away this morning—" Lee broke off with a nervous sob. "Take it easy." Dale's hand caught her slim shoulder in a comforting clasp. "Try to tell me about it. Where did they go?"

"To Trenton. Oh, Dale! Take me there as quick as you can!" Lee freed herself to drag her coat from the hall tree with shaking hands. "Something has happened," she managed. "The police—they found our car. It was empty! Oh, you will take me!"

"Why, of course." Dale sensed the urgency of the situation without waiting for further explanation. Nor did Lee trust herself to speak until the Farwell sedan was slipping swiftly through the empty streets.

"It's so good of you, Dale. I'm all right now. I can think, with you here. You see, daddy left on a business trip and he thought the ride would be good for mother. She was to spend the day with some friends and they were going to drive home before dinner."

"It sort of had me bothered," Pink offered.

had that visit at your house. That profession of yours may be very interesting and all that. But you won't ever make much money at it. And I've got a good opening here for you . . . No, wait!" He gestured with his cigar as Dale started to speak.

"Let me tell you about it. I've often wished Evelyn were a boy, or that I had a son. But it's too late to do anything about that. What I mean is, I'd like to have somebody I could depend on around here. I'm beginning to need someone like that more and more. Mixed up in more things every year. You can understand. Whoever I take on will have a chance to get somewhere and to make some real money. See?"

"That's awfully good of you, sir. But . . ."

"I know. I know. You're thinking that you've invested a lot of time and money in a profession and that you can't throw it away. You won't be. Scientific training never hurt a business man. Not these days. It's a good foundation. I'll bet you've learned to look into things closely, study them. You'd do the same thing to business propositions. After you had a little training here in the bank, I'll wager you'd be a hard fellow to put anything over on."

"It never has occurred to me to change my line of work," Dale admitted uncomfortably, conscious that Evelyn was watching him intently.

"Of course it hasn't. I wouldn't be interested in you if I thought you were shilly-shallying around at your age. And I'm not asking for any decision now. You go to your job and give it all you've got. Then come back in the spring and see me. And while you're making up your mind to say yes, don't forget this. In two years you'll be making more than you will after ten of fussing with rocks. You'll be somebody."

"That sounds very alluring," Dale managed. "I appreciate it, I'm sure." He rose to his feet.

"That's all right, my boy. Just you keep it under your hat and I'll be looking for you to report on the job about June. If I don't see you again before you leave—good luck!"

As Evelyn and Dale left the private office, they almost collided with Cash Brady. The lawyer lifted his hat to Evelyn and bestowed a good-natured smile on her companion in passing. Dale was conscious of a pleading note in Evelyn's voice. "I've been so happy thinking what it would mean to you. I never dreamed you would turn down such a chance."

"I'm sorry."

"Couldn't you try it, if—I asked you to?"

"That wouldn't be fair to your father. He asked me to think it over and I will. But I know now what the answer will have to be."

"By the way," Cassius Brady informed his family casually, as the three of them formed an after-dinner circle about the living room fire, "I heard a bit of news today. Our friend Dale is going to settle down in Locust Hill and become one of the leading citizens."

"Put down your paper and tell us what you are talking about."

Brady obliged cheerfully and commenced refilling his pipe.

"Henry Marblestone was telling me this morning when I was in his office. Said he was taking Dale into the bank to learn the ropes."

Lack of Vitamin B Causes Malnutrition in the Human Body, Animals and Poultry

Vitamin B is one of the vitamins which cannot be stored up in the body to be used later—it must be taken in daily quantities, and while many of our foods contain this vitamin, one of the most abundant sources is fresh vegetables from the garden, especially greens. Lima beans, it was recently discovered, contain large quantities of Vitamin B. The University of Illinois summarizes the story of Vitamin B thus:

Vitamin B is necessary for the maintenance of life and vigor at all ages. Lack of it promptly prevents growth, impairs the appetite, affects the organs of digestion and reproduction, and causes malnutrition, particularly of the nervous system. In the latter stages of this type of undernutrition, nerve inflammation and degeneration often develop, causing a partial or complete paralysis of the hind quarters of animals, and in poultry even more characteristic symptoms. In human nutrition a lack of Vitamin B will ultimately cause a disease known as beri beri, a disease common to Oriental people whose chief diet consists of polished rice. In animals a similar disease, known as neuritis or polyneuritis, results from lack of Vitamin B. The word polyneuritis is defined as "a disease of many nerves."

Vitamin B is known to be present in seeds but to be absent from refined cereals, like polished rice. Milk, eggs, and most vegetables supply it. In natural food the Vitamin B is said to be remarkably stable in the dry state. The loss to be expected during canning is less than for Vitamin C, but the Vitamin B content of a cooked product may be decreased by the use of soda or by discarding cooking water. Some concern has been expressed lest the Vitamin B content of the American diet be inadequate. The supposed deficiency is due to the increasing use of refined foods, sweets, and fats, all low in Vitamin B, for diets largely composed of such items may bring the total Vitamin B intake perilously low.

Lesson for September 11 SAUL: MORAL FAILURE

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 10:21-25; 15:20-23; 16:1-6. GOLDEN TEXT—To obey is better than sacrifice. I Samuel 15:22.

Moral failure is the direct result of disobedience to God. This follows from the fact that the moral order established in the universe was established by God. He, then, is the One who knows the right way. "God is always right, and when we are against God, we are always wrong. To walk a road leading away from God is to travel straight to ruin, and this is what Saul did" (Wilbur M. Smith).

The story of Saul's choice as king, his personal qualifications for leadership and his ultimate disgrace and death, is one that should give pause to every young man or woman who has been afflicted with present-day ideas that brilliance of mind, quickness of wit, and apparent worldly success, apart from obedient submission to God, are satisfactory ends in themselves. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" (Prov. 16:25).

I. "There Is None Like Him" (10:21-25).

Saul was chosen of God to be Israel's first king. God Himself had been their king, but they in their willful unbelief wanted to be like neighboring nations. And the choice of both God and the people fell on Saul, for there was "none like him among all the people."

Never has a man been privileged to enter more auspiciously upon high office. Physically he was well-equipped, head and shoulders above the people (10:23). Mentally he was fitted for leadership. He was humble (9:21). He was spiritually lifted (10:6-9). He had a tolerant and kindly spirit (11:13). He was a successful military leader (ch. 11).

For two years all went well, but then came the crisis which proved that all was not as it should be, when Saul presumptuously took the place of Samuel as priest and made an offering (13:9-13). This was later followed by his disobedience in sparing Agag.

II. "To Obey Is Better Than Sacrifice" (15:20-23).

God had commanded that there must be utter destruction of the Amalekites and their possessions—something like the burning of a disease-infested house—a wiping out of a king and people who were condemned of God. We may not fully understand this act of God, but if we know Him we will not doubt that it was in accordance with His infinite wisdom and love.

Saul chose to disobey, later contending that it was done because of the people, that sheep and oxen had been spared for a sacrifice to the Lord. Samuel cuts through his hypocrisy and declares that God wants obedience rather than sacrifice. This is a lesson that many who profess to follow the Lord have not learned.

"All the sacrifices and ceremonies of religion are to aid and promote obedience, not to be a substitute for it. Disobedience can never be made a virtue, even though attended by thousands of sacrifices" (Stanley). The church or the individual who denies or disregards the teaching of God's Word and attempts to make up for it by sacrifices and ceremonies—declares to the world that there has been a departure from true faith in God. Obedience is a virtue all too rare.

III. "The Battle Went Sore Against Saul" (31:3-6).

This quotation from verse 3 relates to a particular battle, but it may well be applied to the entire battle of Saul's life. Having once begun the downward path of presumption and disobedience, the descent became rapid.

The man to whom God had given a new heart and upon whom He had poured out His Spirit fell to such a low state that we find him in I Samuel 28 consulting a witch, a spiritistic medium, seeking opportunity to speak with Samuel, who had already gone to his reward.

Spiritism is an evil current in our day, and therefore it may be well to point out that while mediums do seem to have the power to simulate the dead, they bring this about through familiar spirits (I Sam. 28:7), that is through communication with evil spirits. The dead do not actually return, but they are represented by demonic agents. When the witch of Endor called on her familiar spirit, God intervened and actually brought Samuel from the dead to the great surprise of the witch. No Christian should ever have anything to do with Spiritism. If he does he indicates that his spiritual life is at very low ebb and that he is in real soul-danger.

The death of Saul writes a tragic end to a promising life, destroyed not so much by outside influences as by the moral decay within. The wise man said that as a man "thinketh in his heart so is he" (Prov. 23:7). It may not show today or tomorrow, but eventually the heart that is wrong leads to a life that is wrong. "Keep thy heart with all diligence: for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4:23).

Safe Hits, No Score

A baseball club can make six hits in a single inning without scoring a run. Here's how: The first batter up singles and is caught stretching it into a double. So does the second batter. The third, fourth and fifth batters each hit short singles, making five hits for the inning and filling the bases with two out. The next batsman hits one of the runners with a batted ball. He gets credit for a hit, but the runner is automatically retired. Thus you have six hits in one inning without a score.

SPAIN'S BARRIER

● The Pyrenees, where Romans once bathed, now boast thermal spas. Tens of thousands vacation yearly in these romantic mountains of southwest Europe.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Pyrenees form a barrier that political map makers could not ignore. All the way from the Mediterranean and the Atlantic their mighty ramparts notch the sky. Like a massive Chinese wall they set apart the Iberian peninsula from the rest of Europe. Upon their crests has been sketched the boundary between France and Spain.

Humid winds strike the French side, losing their moisture to irrigate green valleys and to soften the contours of the slopes by their forces of erosion. In Spain the mountain faces are more rugged and barren.

But the Pyrenees are more than a barrier. In many of the quiet glens the early Romans exploited curative baths. Now tens of thousands of visitors annually resort here to vacation in the mountains or take the cure at the numerous thermal spas. Thanks to the efforts of industrious French highway engineers, an excellent motor road, the Route des Pyrenees, traverses the entire length of the chain.

Hannibal's Land

Your journey begins at Perpignan, sunrise gateway to the Pyrenees. The countryside basks in the bright sun beside the Mediterranean and is rich with vast vineyards. Hannibal, with his troops and his elephants, camped hereabouts after crossing the Pyrenees. Greek traders and the Romans found it a pleasant land.

Actually the Pyrenees highway starts at Cap Cerbere, so you motor down the coast past Elne, Argeles-sur-Mer, and Collioure. Elne demands a sentimental pause, for it is the ancient Iliberis. Constantine changed its name to Helena in memory of his mother.

High up on Cap Cerbere the traveler halts. You may look over into Spain, but you cannot go there. Because of strife in the south, the frontier is closed to all traffic. You mount the narrow highway which loops, twists, and zigzags in sharp hairpin turns over the hills.

From Villefranche-de-Confient to Mont Louis, both fortified by Vauban, fort builder for France in Louis XIV's reign, the road follows up the course of the Tet river. Beyond Olette the valley narrows into a precipitous gorge, with mighty boulders forming its gateway and ramparts. Deep below, in a wild ravine, the river brawls noisily over its rocky bed. Between here and Mont Louis two 270-yard-long railway bridges span the chasm.

Home in the Sky

Where the profound gap widens again, you catch fleeting glimpses of a village set high atop one of the rocky walls. It is more than a thousand-foot drop to the nearest bus stop, but what a front-window view the residents must have! In less than 12 miles here in the upper Tet the road spirals and mounts upward 3,000 feet, like an airplane seeking elevation. And the view that one gains approximates that from a cockpit.

On the downward slope toward the Arriege you pass the road spur that leads to Andorra, quaint survivor of the old Pyrenean republics, with its loyalties united both to France and Spain.

Although bleak at its beginning, the Arriege increases in prosperity as it descends and widens. Snowed rivers fret noisily through Axles-Thermes, but in the vicinity there are several hot sulphurous springs.

Foix really is off the Pyrenees route, but it is still deep in the hills and for centuries was the capital stronghold for the counts who ruled the district. Its venerable castle, standing boldly on a rocky hill rearing above the junction of the Arriege and the Arget, is a pleasing remnant of feudalism.

By good fortune you may arrive in the town on the chief day of its autumn fair. Merry-go-rounds, bump'ems and dodge'ems, catch-penny side shows, and every Coney Island attraction that young or old might wish fill the wide tree-canopied promenade.

—And So to Bed

Then lights flicker in the castle windows, smoke pours from the batlements, and the towers become red as flames leap higher. The castle is "burning" in a most realistic manner. As darkness settles over the walls holiday makers pile into flivvers, buses, and donkey carts.

Superbagneres is as gay in winter as it is cool in summer. On its slopes are bobbed runs, ski jumps and even a skating pond. From Gavarnie to Argeles-Gazost, and the side trip to the summer holiday center of Cauterets, the road weaves through gorges most of the way. Pau, although in the Bases (low) Pyrenees, seems on the plains. When the town was capital of the old province of Bearn, it was scintilant with court glory. Here in a room of the altered and restored castle, one can see the tortoise-shell cradle in which Henry IV slept as an infant, after, says legend, his mother sang Bearnais songs at his birth and his father rubbed his lips with garlic and made him taste the local Jurancon wine.

Red-White-Red

As you speed along the road, you see slate roofs turn to red tile. Walls flash white in the sunshine and the houses take on red balconies and red shutters. Churches acquire differently shaped towers and every village has its fronton, or wall, against which the game pelota is played. Farmers, driving oxcarts of bracken down from the hills, wear inevitable berets. You have entered the Land of the Basques.

On the road through Loughosoa, Ixassou, Cambo-les-Bains, Larressore, and other strangely named places you journey. The young boys, had they been American, would be playing sand-lot baseball. Being Basque, they bounce balls against the village frontons. For pelota is to the Basques what baseball is to Americans.

The game has several variations, some requiring a long field extending from the fronton. A soft rubber ball is used. In the play it is caught and returned to the opponent from a single bounce or directly by means of a long troughlike basket strapped to the hand.

HEALTH

● Diet held important in satisfactory cure of goiter trouble, specialist says.

—By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE are many cases of goiter where the physician is undecided as to operation. He knows that the patient could afford the time and money and would get results almost immediately, but there are other matters that must be considered.

In many cases X-ray treatment solves the problem notwithstanding that this often requires months of treatment. In some early or threatened cases, rest and iodine give encouraging results.

Some years ago when a patient became nervous, easily upset, irritable, and was losing weight, some high-ranking physicians put these patients to bed in a dark, quiet room and fed them as much food as they could get them to eat. The food was made as inviting as possible and the patient's likes and dislikes in food were carefully considered. Sometimes the results were gratifying and other times the patients were really worse than before.

This "forced feeding" with hard exercise has been used with good results in patients with early-mental symptoms. The food nourished and the exercise strengthened the body, the circulation of the blood was improved, and the quality of the blood itself was improved.

Importance of Diet. Now some physicians are trying out this treatment of giving large quantities of food to their early thyroid or goiter patients. These patients have the usual symptoms—rapid heart, nervousness, poor appetite and sleeplessness.

Dr. Israel Bram, Philadelphia, author of "Exophthalmic Goiter and Its Treatment," has this to say in Medical Record: "Diet is paramount in the treatment of exophthalmic goiter. The sufferer—usually very thin—must eat his way to health. All stimulants—tea, coffee, tobacco and alcohol—must be forbidden. Small amounts of meat may be given once a day. The average patient requires practically twice the amount of food that would be taken during health."

As much rest as possible should be taken but Doctor Bram points out that there are many of these patients who must continue working or starve.

Don't Get Excited Over Metabolism Test

When the heart beat is persistently rapid the first thought (if the heart itself be sound) is usually that the thyroid gland in the neck is manufacturing too much juice. As this juice speeds up the body processes, the heart rate is, of course, "speeded up."

To make sure that the thyroid gland is at fault and that a goiter, even if small, is present, the basal metabolism test is made. The patient is warned not to eat any food after his evening meal of the night before the test, and goes to the physician's office or to the hospital before breakfast the next morning. He lies down quietly with body and mind as much at ease as possible, breathes in oxygen and breathes out the "used" air (containing carbon dioxide) into a tube carrying it to the soda lime chamber where the amount of carbon dioxide can be measured later.

If too much oxygen is being used or too much carbon dioxide is being manufactured by the body processes while at rest, that is if the body processes are working at a rate of more than 15 per cent normal, goiter is considered to be present. Test Often Fails. This seems simple enough, but physicians know that if the patient is excited, perhaps afraid of the test because it may mean an operation, they cannot breathe slowly or naturally and the heart is faster because of this fear or worry. In addition, as the patient has not had any breakfast, he misses the "settling" or quieting effect of the food which would draw some blood down to the stomach from the "excited" brain.

For these and other reasons, if the first test shows more than 15 per cent, further metabolism tests are made.

It is only natural that with so much at stake—operation, anesthesia, stay in hospital, expense—patients are upset or excited at the first test, a few days' rest and reassurance by their physician and by the physician or nurse making the test, make more certain the true reading or measurement.

It should be remembered then that the basal metabolism rate must be persistently high when taken under favorable conditions (quietness of mind and body) before your physician and surgeon would consider operation or X-ray treatment necessary.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Enumerates the Nutritious Values of the BANANA

Explains How Our Most Satisfying Food Fruit Helps to Maintain Health at All Ages.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

BEFORE the discovery of the vitamins and before we knew as much regarding the body's mineral requirements, interest in food was centered around proteins, carbohydrates and fats. Fruits which in general supply little protein and fat, and widely varying amounts of carbohydrates, received scant consideration as a source of essential nutrients.

But with our steadily increasing knowledge of vitamins and of the importance to the body of a long list of essential mineral elements, fruits have assumed a commanding place in nutrition. And those who follow the primary rule of a well balanced diet and serve fruit twice daily have been rewarded with increased health and vigor.

In addition to their minerals and vitamins, fruits are valued because of their bulk or cellulose which helps to insure regular health habits.

The Most Economical Fruit

Many homemakers consider that fruits as a class are among the more expensive items included in the food budget.

But that statement is far too general and indicates a lack of information concerning the comparative nutritive values of the different kinds of fruit. For example, it has been said of the economical banana, that it gives more nutritive as well as money value than almost any other food.

Fruits, in general, are frequently divided into two classes; they are known as flavor fruits when they contain 80 per cent or more of water and as food fruits when the water content is less than 80 per cent. Bananas are a food fruit of the first order!

Ripe bananas are rich in carbohydrates and furnish the body with splendid energy values, with a minimum tax on the digestive system.

Double Fuel Value

When fully ripened, this fruit provides quick energy because a certain amount of its sugars are almost immediately absorbed by the body. On the other hand, several hours must elapse before the remaining sugars are completely assimilated. Thus, eating bananas provides a continuous supply of energy for a considerable period. They not only help to promote rapid recovery from fatigue but also furnish a continuing supply of energy which keeps one from becoming hungry again too soon after a meal.

The edible portion of one average-sized banana weighs about 3½ ounces and provides 100 calories. It takes almost the same weight of white potato to yield the same number of calories.

Bananas a Protective Food

Bananas take an important position among the protective foods, because they are a good source of four vitamins, A, B, C and G, and contain a total of 11 minerals. They leave an alkaline-ash following digestion.

Fully ripened bananas are easily digested and are mildly laxative.

Valuable in Child's Diet

Bananas deserve a prominent place in the child's diet from infancy to maturity. Some baby specialists prescribe mashed and strained ripe bananas as one of the first solid foods to be introduced in the infant's diet. The ripe banana is considered to be especially valuable at the time when sugar is withdrawn from the formula and the baby is given whole milk for the first time. The calories in the bananas take the place of the calories previously received from the sugar, and thus weight gains are steadily maintained.

Help Children Gain Weight

Because of their high caloric value, plus their content of minerals and vitamins, bananas may well be used regularly throughout childhood.

Bananas and milk make an excellent food combination because the milk supplements the fruit with protein, fat, minerals and vitamins. This combination is often used as a supplementary lunch for underweight children, and carefully conducted studies have indicated its usefulness in helping youngsters to gain weight.

Almost all children like the taste of bananas and they do not seem to tire of this bland and pleasing fruit. And though the banana is regarded as a solid food, it can, if desired, be mashed and whipped into liquid form and combined with milk to make a healthful and nourishing beverage.

Ideal for the Elderly

If elderly individuals are to maintain top health, fruits should be given a prominent place in their diet. But many fruits are avoided by individuals past middle age, either because their acid taste is displeasing or because they present difficulties in mastication. Ripe bananas, however, practically melt in the mouth. Being easily digested, they are a fortunate choice for elderly persons, providing necessary energy

OVERWEIGHT. Spoils Your Looks Impairs Efficiency

... And it may seriously affect your health. If you are over 30, and weigh more than the normal weight for your height at the age of 30, the chances are that you would benefit greatly by a rational program of weight reduction.

You are invited to write to C. Houston Goudiss for his scientific Reducing Bulletin, which outlines the safe, certain and comfortable method of weight reduction by counting calories. It includes balanced reducing menus and a chart showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods.

With it, you can easily compute the caloric value of every meal you eat.

Just write to C. Houston Goudiss, 6 East 39th St., New York City—a post card will do—and ask for the Reducing Bulletin.

values with a minimum of digestive effort.

Most Versatile Fruit

Bananas are always in season and are usually most inexpensive. It is desirable, of course, that only fully ripened bananas be eaten raw. That is because their constituents vary with the degree of ripeness.

Bananas are picked when they are green and hard, and the carbohydrate content is almost entirely starch. As they ripen, the starch is converted into easily digested sugars.

In fully ripened bananas—those in which brown flecks appear on the yellow skins—the starch has almost entirely disappeared and the flavor has been developed to its highest point. The all-yellow banana is also ripe enough for eating and it is likewise firm enough for cooking. Partially ripe bananas—those which are yellow with a green tip—may be cooked and served as a vegetable or as dessert.

Considering their availability, ease of digestion, high food value and economy, bananas deserve to be classed as one of the staple foods in every well planned dietary.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. R. McK.—When peas and beans cause discomfort, owing to their tendency to form gas, they can frequently be eaten without distress in pureed form.

Miss M. L. A.—Both sweet and white potatoes contain vitamins A, B and C; but sweet potatoes are a much better source of vitamin A than white potatoes.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A LETTER comes telling the story of a clever girl designed for her dressing table. The problem was to make them fit spaces of unusual size. Her room color scheme was blue and white and a design of white embroidered snow crystals on cool blue linen was what she wanted.

Here is the way she achieved a charming result.

The linen was cut the desired size and narrow hems creased with a warm iron. The hems were then backstitched in white from the right side with three strands of six-strand mercerized embroidery cotton. She wanted the arrangement of the snow crystals to be helter-skelter—just as they would fall; so she took a handful of coins and tossed them onto the linen. She drew around each coin where it fell.

Still using three strands of the white cotton she took four stitches across the marked circle and then brought the needle out in the center, as shown here in step 2, ready to take a tiny stitch to bind the

For Our Children

Let us do the most we can to make the home a place where the children shall grow helpful, natural, happier, toward the noblest manhood and womanhood. Let us remember that it is the little things that make up the atmosphere. The kind word to the child, the little fault finding, the little nagging—it is just these little tiny things that makes the comfort or discomfort of the home.

To The Voters of Charlevoix County
In offering myself as a candidate for congress in this district, I early recognized a lack of interest and a political confusion among the voters. I have for the past six months waged a clean, vigorous campaign and I feel that I have contributed to a re-awakening of interest in the sound principles of American government under which our nation has made progress. I have tried earnestly to sell myself to the voters and have endeavored to advance the principles of harmony, unity of purpose and solidarity of effort in our entire district. I recognize no line of division at the Straits of Mackinac. I hope the voters will select me to carry on the campaign after the primaries, but if not, I pledge my personal effort and support to the candidate of their choice.

Junior Ball Team
Win Double Header
Here Last Sunday

The East Jordan Junior baseball team further added to its laurels, winning a double header at the fairgrounds last Sunday afternoon. They scored a 6 to 5 triumph over Marion Center in the opener and went on to win the nightcap 7 to 3 over Ironton. Both games were seven inning affairs. Trailing 5 to 2 going into the final frame of the opening contest the Jordanites came through with a 4-run barrage to win out. Kulpa, former Charlevoix high school pitcher, and Smith worked for the losers. R. Saxton and Crowell formed the winning battery. F. Antoine led the locals with 3 hits in 4 trips to the plate, also scoring half of the locals total of six runs. In the nightcap the Jordanites picked up where they left off as they easily mastered the Ironton team, when Edward Stanek cinched the victory with a long homerun with two aboard in the fifth. R. Saxton turned in his second winning pitching performance setting the visitors down with four hits. Crowell worked behind the plate for the winners with Thomson and Chapin forming the losing battery. Holley led the locals 7 hit attack in the second game. The Juniors wind up their season this week as they are scheduled to play Atwood Thursday afternoon at the Fairgrounds.

RE-ELECT
C. Meredith Bice
Prosecuting Attorney
REPUBLICAN TICKET
A RECORD OF
94 1/2% Convictions

During my time in office there have been 521 prosecutions in Circuit and Justice Courts with 493 convictions or a record of 94 1/2%. Of the 521 prosecutions there were but 11 acquittals, some of these being in cases where issuance of warrant was not authorized by me. 6 cases were settled and dismissed on payment of costs, 6 nolle prossed with consent of Court at request of complainant, 5 discharged on examination for insufficient evidence. Of the foregoing number 62 were Circuit Court Criminal Cases with 55 convictions, 3 acquittals, 2 nolle prossed with the consent of the Court at request of complainant, 1 settled and dismissed on payment of costs, and 1 dismissed by the Court as defendant convicted of same transactions in another county.

The availability for immediate consultation by all county officers, peace officers, and especially for rural citizens doing business at the Court House makes imperative the daily maintenance of this office at the county seat.

A home owner, a taxpayer — if re-elected I pledge the same efficient, economical and competent handling of this important office as in the past. Your vote and influence will be appreciated at the September 13th Primary.

Respectfully,
C. M. BICE,
Prosecuting Attorney.

REPUBLICAN TICKET

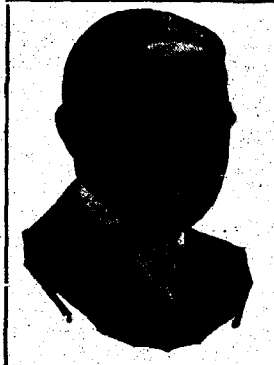

I believe that the experience and knowledge I have gained during the past three terms of the State Legislature will be of real value to our county when the legislature again meets. There are many difficult problems to be solved and real issues to be met that will require a lot of plain common sense and old fashioned honesty.

Your support in the coming election will certainly be appreciated.
