Thousands Greet Hero Who Looks Like a Boy Scout

Fighting Texan Won About Every Decoration for His Achievements.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—A freckled face kid, fresh from European battle fields, limped down the ramp from a C-54 transport at the air field here. There were about 20 G.I.s with him and he could have been their mascot. He was 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighed 134. He looked about 17. When he started down a long reception line of waiting notables he didn't give his name to a single member of the welcoming committee.

This was Lt. Audie Leon Murphy, who held just about every combat decoration in the book, including the Congressional Medal of Honor. This was the Murphy who made a lone stand against 250 German infantrymen and six German tanks; the kid who ran through a hail of machine gun fire and single handedly cleaned out prepared enemy positions; the 20-year-old youngster who came up the hard way to battle field-commission.

He Steals the Show.
This was Murphy, back on his native Texas soil, but he looked like an Eagle Scout. Texans gasped with surprise. There were 13 generals in the group that landed at the airport. Murphy stole the show. Delighted reporters pounced on him. In amazement they wrote down the long list of awards.

"I'd like to know every detail about how you won the Congressional Medal of Honor," a girl reporter said. Murphy's cool green eyes studied the girl. "There wasn't much to it," he said. Not much! It was a January morning of this year and the woods outside of Holtzwihr, France, were heavy and silent with bitter cold. There were 36 men, all that were left of a company of the 15th "Can Do" regiment of the 3rd division, 7th army. In command, succeeding the leader who had fallen the day before, was 2nd Lt. Murphy, who didn't drink or smoke and whose strongest cuss word was "gosh."

Valor had boosted him from the ranks. He had become a private first class in Africa, a corporal in Sicily, a sergeant and staff sergeant in Italy, a second lieutenant in southern France. Now company command was handed him by field telephone at 3 a. m. on a freezing morning.

Hours crawled by. The company, scheduled to attack, awaited ammunition. At 10 a. m. Murphy raised his field glasses and took a long look. His mouth went dry. The enemy, camouflaged in white sheets, was attacking over the hard packed snow with 250 infantrymen and six tanks. Murphy ordered his men out of the woods. Then he ran to his field telephone and called for artillery fire. Shells began bursting in the German ranks and Murphy dropped his telephone often to fire his rifle.

The Germans came on. An artilleryman yelled into a telephone. "How close are they to you?" "Just a minute," Murphy replied. "I'll let you speak to them." An American tank destroyer approached the young officer's position and a German 88 shell set it afire. Two men lay dead in the turret. The others bailed out and went back. That left Murphy alone with a rifle, a telephone, and a burning tank destroyer loaded with ammunition and gasoline and likely to blow sky high at any moment. In all, he killed or wounded 50 Germans with the machine guns.

The Nazi infantry was stopped. Without the infantry, the whole attack collapsed. Only then did Murphy drop wearily off the destroyer and limp back to his company. He refused treatment for his shrapnel wound, reorganized his company, and led it in an attack that routed the enemy.

"A Way of Living" "The Way of Life"

Woodrow Wilson, a great Democrat, stressed the harm that can be done legally, "within the law." The Democracy that was in Germany collapsed because of things that were "within the law."

Everyone who buys a loaf of bread is a taxpayer. A part of our taxes go to pay the bills occasioned by alcoholic beverages. Anyone who is convicted three times of selling alcoholic beverages to those under 21 is not even "within the law" if he sells to those over 21.

Our nation is facing a moral crisis worse than at the time of the repeal of prohibition. If, as a nation, we live merely "within the law", our Democracy is doomed.

THIS IS LENT. Why not attend some Church and partake of the Water of Life freely?

"They call Walter Reuther a 'screwball economist' in the newspaper editorials," snorted August Scholle, referring to Michigan newspaper editors. "Yet the same editors show a total disregard for consistency. They say that labor has grown up and should assume responsibility. How can we assume responsibility for full employment and yet limit ourselves in collective bargaining to wages, hours and working conditions?"

Scholle, the speaker, is the president of the Michigan State CIO Council. He is regional director of the CIO. He is Michigan director of the Political Action Committee, commonly called the "PAC."

His audience was a group of college professors and instructors. These men had invited representatives of management and labor to present their viewpoints. Two weeks before, the same audience had listened to John L. Lovett, manager of the Michigan Manufacturers' Association. Now they were getting labor's viewpoint, as seen by the CIO top command and reported by Scholle.

"This country must have higher purchasing power, if we are to offset the decline in government war orders," said Scholle. "During the war our national economy was 160 billion dollars, of which the government supplied about one-half in war orders."

"Now everyone agrees that we need full employment and full production. We had potentials for a big production from 1939 to 1941 in this country. Why didn't we get it? I cause of a lack of purchasing power. We must have higher purchasing power in 1946 if we are to offset the decline in federal war orders and if we are to purchase what we produce."

Scholle condemned the National Association of Manufacturers for recent newspaper advertisements urging removal of price controls as a means of attaining full employment and production. "Manufacturers want to make all the profits they made during the war," he added, "maintaining that industrial war profits increased '200 per cent while the wage of labor was restricted by the government. (Ed: Excess profits of manufacturers were taxed by the federal government and hence returned to the federal treasury.)"

Scholle's pro-labor statements may be accepted as "straws in the wind" of a viewpoint held by many unions. Their objective is maintenance of purchasing power through higher wages.

"High wages" do not mean war-time rates, either on an hourly or weekly basis, but the maintenance of war-time "take home" earnings; hence the CIO demand of 48 hours pay for 40 hours work which at overtime rates is equivalent to 12 hours of additional pay for each work-week. Increase the pay rate for a 40-hour work week by 30 per cent, and you would retain the worker's war-time purchasing power, so goes the CIO argument. It's very simple, or is it?

Unless wages are increased, another depression is inevitable, according to Scholle. The CIO viewpoint is that the manufacturer's profits can absorb a 30 per cent wage increase without shifting added labor cost to the consumer in the form of higher prices.

The position of management, of course, is just the reverse. Higher wages mean higher prices, and higher prices only reduce purchasing power.

Thus you arrive at a vicious cycle, the foundation for inflation.

We recently received a statistical table comparing 1945 earnings with 1939 earnings. On a dollar basis, the automobile worker in 1945 received $2,748 compared with $1,611. On a basis of 1939 purchasing power, however, the same automobile worker in 1945 could buy only $2,011 worth of merchandise and services. Assuming a 10 per cent rise in the 1946 cost of living, adjusted to federal taxes, the worker's 1946 purchasing power will be further reduced to $1,977 — only some $360 more than he received back in 1939!

Purchasing power cannot be measured by number of dollars.

Management insists that higher wages mean higher prices, thus reducing purchasing power. Labor insists higher purchasing power must be attained through higher wages, the additional wage being paid out of anticipated "high" profits.

Who is right?

Now it is simple as ABC that both management and labor cannot be right in these contentions which are direct opposites, like night to day.

It is also apparent that manufacturing industry is not responsible for our good times or our hard times.

Manufacturing represents less than 30 per cent of our national economy. The service industry (tourist, for example) and agriculture are equally important; together they far overshadow manufacturing.

Scholle overlooked this significant fact when he told the college professors: "Labor doesn't want to be pulled down to the level of the farmer."

Scholle was once a farmer, he said. The audience gasped at the speaker's brash ignorance of economics. His statement disturbed us greatly.

What is the answer then? As we see it, it is simply this. We must be our brother's keeper, if we are to prosper, if our profit capitalism is to survive, if we are to escape the nose of totalitarian government with its negations of personal liberties.

And that goes for everyone — employer and employee, rich and poor — in all types of life.

If we are to be our brother's keeper, we must understand our fellow men. Love must replace hate.

Here is the very essence of Democracy.

It also is the spirit of Christianity.

Father, Daughter Commit Suicide, Leap From Bridge

Child Obeys Parental Order In Blind Faith and Dives to Death.

SAN FRANCISCO. — Five-year-old Marilyn Demont, obeying in her childish faith a parental command to commit suicide, leaped unhesitatingly from the 220-foot high Golden Gate bridge, followed seconds later by her father, says the United Press.

The girl climbed the railing of the windswept span and without a look backward plunged head over heels into the swirling tides of San Francisco bay where they flow into the Pacific. It appeared she ended her young life voluntarily, without a protest or last-minute "Why?"

The father, 37-year-old August C. Demont, a mechanic, left a note explaining only that "I and my daughter committed suicide."

Two witnesses to the bizarre double suicide watched daughter and father jump in quick succession and saw the bodies a moment before they disappeared. Coastguardsmen said after a three-hour search that the bodies probably were carried out into the Pacific ocean by the changing tide.

Marilyn, who would have celebrated her sixth birthday in two weeks, stepped out of her father's car and ran quickly to the four-foot bridge railing near the south tower of the span, according to two painters, Jack Ricketts and Al Maloux.

Jumped voluntarily.

She paused briefly, crawled down to a girder and then jumped voluntarily, they told highway patrolmen.

The father walked about 30 feet farther along the bridge, poised himself on the railing and then dived headlong into the water.

On the seat of the car officers found a note which said simply: "This auto belongs to Mrs. A. C. Demont, 4356 26th street, San Francisco. I and my daughter have committed suicide." The note was signed "A. C. Demont."

Neither the note nor the distraught mother offered any explanation of the tragedy, or any reason why the child was persuaded to make the leap.

Psychologists, when told of the double leap, said it was most unusual for any individual, even as young as Marilyn, to voluntarily follow instructions which mean destruction.

Took Marilyn Along.

Demont's wife, Carolyn, said her husband had been injured several weeks ago while repairing an elevator, and had left their home at 8:30 a. m. to go to a doctor's office and receive a report on his condition.

He insisted on taking Marilyn with him, despite his wife's protests. Another daughter, Carol, 8, was home in bed with the measles.

Demont did not go to the doctor's office, and his wife apparently had a premonition of tragedy as he left.

When asked if she had expected such tragic news, she sobbed: "Oh, yes. I knew it, I knew it."

Mrs. Demont and her mother said the father "had been ill for some time." But fellow workmen where he had been employed for 16 years described him as "efficient, stable and well liked," and said he had recovered from his injury.
