FEEDING STARVING WORLD TOO BIG A JOB FOR US

WASHINGTON.—The food campaign is running into ever-deepening difficulties.

The sweeping publicity campaign to induce Americans to save for the hungry in the rest of the world ceased the moment the coal strike became serious, but only temporarily. There was no use considering food saving when a fuel tie-up and transportation curtailment threatened spoilage of indefinite proportions. But the tenor of the campaign had made everyone believe that the problem of alleviating world hunger was simply dependent upon a resolution by the American people to eat less.

Any objective investigation will prove these following greater facts to the contrary:

(A) No matter what our savings, we will not be able to give the world the bulk of foods we have promised.

(B) We have moved so late that we are not simply taking food from our tables, but have become involved in promises which will cause a fast and sharp decline in our own food production.

(C) For this year, and possibly two or three, we will get less meat, butter and cheese than in the war years of rationing. Our diets will be changed to cereals, vegetables and fruits which should be available in sufficient quantities to stave off hunger here.

The need of many sections of the world for food has now been established beyond question, although the earlier whooping-up campaign contained much hokum about non-existent needs. An army news resume currently quotes Brigadier General Fisher of our occupation forces as saying the German farms are the most prosperous in the world today. Another similar report of equal authority says there are no starving Bavarians. The British ministry has announced sufficient stores of food in that nation to meet rationing quotas in all lines, even butter and cheese which are practically non-existent in "white" markets here.

WHERE SHORTAGES ARE

The European shortages are largely in the Russian occupied areas, plus Italy, Greece and some parts of France. The two ships diverted from England by headman La Guardia of UNRRA, went to Russian occupied zones. Yet the need in actual hunger areas is real. So is it also on the other side of the world, in India, China and the Philippines.

To meet these needs we have entered upon a complete upsetting of our economy to the point of promoting further reduced production, particularly of livestock, all forms of animal foods, poultry, hogs, sheep, dairy and beef cattle. Our beef cattle population, which last year numbered 83 million, has run below 80 million and is going down fast. On a prewar ratio to population, we should have over 100 million beef cattle. The pig crop has been limited to 31 million, which is about three-fourths of what could be considered normal.

These curtailments were forced because wheat and corn feed stocks have been cut in order to send them to the rest of the world. In short, by sending feed abroad we can do no more than produce three-fourths our usual number of pigs. A government order denies chicken feed to any poultry raiser having more than 80 per cent of the number of chickens he had last year. This will force a 20 per cent reduction in poultry population. While there are no particular restrictions on beef cattle feed, it cannot be purchased, and unless the farmer has corn, oats and hay, he must sell his cattle. Similarly, the government is promoting the sale of hogs, at lighter weights than usual—which will decrease production further.

FUTURE FULL OF 'IFS'

Where we go from here is a problem of many "ifs." If we do not undertake a world food export program another year, we may restore normal livestock supplies in two or three years. Only poultry and pigs can be restored in less time, and pigs require about nine months. If we have a good crop, our own food situation will be no worse than related above, but the optimistic government expectations on the wheat crop are already running into doubt.

Officially they talk of more than a billion bushels, but the local moisture situation has indicated the winter wheat crop will not justify any such guess on the year as a whole.

You might ask why the government does not promote expansion of production. It got aroused about food a little too late for that. To feed the hungry abroad there is nothing to be done now except to curtail domestic consumption, and enter the country largely upon a fruit and vegetable diet for an indefinite period.

Rail Strike Sets Back Nation; Shape Big Navy for Security; Auto Prices Mount With Costs

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Despite undernourishment, these daughters of Chinese farmer in famine-ridden Hunan province pull implement in rice paddy. Japs killed their water buffalo and manpower has been depleted by war.

RAIL STRIKE: Cripples Nation

The greatest railroad strike in history laid a heavy hand on the nation from one end to the other, curbing traffic and stranding thousands, imperiling the food supply and further disrupting industry and the staggering reconversion program.

Though the government mobilized plane, water and truck traffic, and emergency crews ran some of the trains, the walkout of 225,000 members of the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Railway Trainmen over pay demands reduced normal traffic to a trickle. Freight shipments were reduced to minimum of essential commodities and only priority passengers were provided facilities.

The stranding of thousands of travelers throughout the nation afforded the first dramatic effect of the walkout. While many passengers frantically sought hotel accommodations and others curled up on benches in railroad terminals, many railroads permitted travelers to remain in cars on sidings.

In the midst of the paralysis, government conciliators strove mightily to end the walkout after the brotherhood leaders had rejected President Truman's compromise offer of 18½ cents an hour and suggestion for further discussion of work rules changes. In turning down the presidential proposal, union chieftains said that it was even less favorable than a fact-finding board's recommendations providing for a 16 cents an hour raise plus certain adjustments in work rules resulting in increased compensation.

The dramatic rail walkout overshadowed developments in the soft coal dispute in which the government strove to reach an agreement with the United Mine Worker Chieftain John L. Lewis for continued operation of the properties.

Following the precedent set in 1943 when the U. S. seized the mines to avert a prolonged stoppage, Secretary of the Interior Krug entered into negotiations with Lewis for a contract, consulting with the operators over terms to be offered. It was understood that the owners were assured of price increases to cover higher production costs resulting from concessions when properties were returned to them under the new contract.

The dispute over a health and welfare fund found the government favoring such a proposal under joint management rather than sole union control as originally demanded by Lewis.

FOREIGN POLICY: Bi-Partisan Backing

Minority leader of the senate foreign relations committee and chairman of the Republican senatorial conference, Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) pledged his support of Secretary of State Byrnes' campaign to win the peace by pushing for recognition of U. S. principles in treaty making.

While admitting the failure of the Paris conference of foreign ministers, Vandenberg, who attended as an adviser to the U. S. delegation, declared the proceedings had solidified American determination to write a peace "for keeps" based on justice and not vengeance. Though based upon the moralities of the Atlantic and San Francisco charters, the new foreign policy also recognized the practical necessities of postwar rehabilitation, he said.

Besides calling for the establishment of permanent governments to assure resumption of normal activities, Vandenberg said the U. S. aimed to settle the Germanic problem affecting all of continental Europe. While advocating maximum protection against future aggression, he condemned repressive demilitarization.

Touching upon the age-old problem of national minorities, Vandenberg declared that the new U. S. policy also favored their incorporation into their native countries or other suitable recognition to prevent them from becoming sources of conflict or expansion.

NAVY: Taking No Chances

Calling for a navy adequate to meet any emergency of the future, the house appropriations committee recommended congressional approval of naval expenditures of over 4½ billion dollars during the next fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, for fleet maintenance.

To be manned by 500,000 enlisted men and 58,000 officers, the postwar navy would include 4 battleships, 8 heavy cruisers, 21 light cruisers, 3 big aircraft carriers, 9 carriers, 10 escort carriers, 126 destroyers, 30 destroyer escorts and 80 submarines.

In addition, 2 battleships would be held in reserve along with 5 heavy cruisers, 5 light cruisers, 3 carriers, 1 light carrier, 22 destroyers and 4 destroyer escorts. A total of 632 other warships would be placed on the inactive list.

Besides regular personnel, the navy plans creation of an organized reserve of 55,000 men and 3,000 officers. Backing up the regular marine enlistment of 100,000 men and 7,000 officers would be a reserve of 80,000.

Recognizing the need for keeping abreast of latest scientific advances in postwar years, the committee provided 250 million dollars for combined research and developments in the 1947 fiscal period.

NEW CARS: Boost Prices

Reflecting administration policy of seeking to assure manufacturers of fair profit returns by granting increased prices to offset higher production costs, OPA authorized a boost of from 4 to 8 per cent in ceilings on new automobiles.

Principal factor determining OPA action was the $5 per ton increase in the cost of steel, allowed by the government to cover the industry's 18½ cent an hour wage boost. Higher costs of other materials and parts figured in the OPA grant, however, with Packard and Studebaker afforded relief for wage adjustments.

With OPA hinting of additional price boosts to come, the latest increases averaged about $75 per car, and ranged from $42 for Chevrolets to $167 for Lincolns. Because retailers' margins already have been trimmed 4½ per cent under prewar levels, the public will pay the latest price hike in full.

Production Lags

Even with the prompt ending of the coal strike and the absence of other difficulties such as labor troubles and shortages of supplies, the automobile industry will not be able to produce more than 60 per cent of the 1941 output of new cars during the entire period of 1948. Trade circles said.

FAMINE RELIEF: U. S. Share

Government expectations of shipping 400 million bushels of grain to needy areas during the year ending June 30 prompted the U. S.'s deputy member of the combined Allied food board to tell congress that "this country need not feel ashamed of the job that has been done" in aiding the distressed.

Indirectly slapping at foreign critics of the U. S. relief effort, D. A. Fitzgerald pointed out the extent of America's overseas contribution by revealing that this country will have a reserve of only eight-tenths of a bushel of wheat per person at the end of this crop season compared with Canada's three bushels, Argentina's two, and Australia's one and one-half.

In addition to shipments under the relief program, the U. S. has furnished 72 per cent of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation funds and 83 per cent of the wheat UNRRA has purchased, Fitzgerald said.

While the grain trade expected an extension of the government's bonus payment for delivery of wheat, department of agriculture officials declared there was no thought of carrying over the premium except in cases of farmers unable to make immediate shipment because of crowded elevators.

BIG BUSINESS: Ford Balance Sheet

The Ford Motor company fell from the ranks of billion dollar concerns in 1945 but still possessed over 800 million dollars in assets, a study of the firm's annual balance sheet filed with the Massachusetts tax commissioner showed.

In the absence of yearly Ford disclosures of sales and earnings, the Massachusetts report constitutes the only indication of the company's financial position. The Ford family holds the major bulk of the 3,452,900 shares of capital stock of $5 par value.

A breakdown of the Ford assets of $815,515,214 as of December 31, 1945, showed a cash account of $421,712,270, including notes, receivables, patent rights and trademarks; machinery and equipment valued at $168,267,325; real estate, $115,160,512; inventory, $101,926,042, and reserves, $22,720,090. Though under the one billion dollar mark of 1944, total assets increased approximately 125 million over 1939.

Mother Love Wins Out

Feeling that she would be unable to show her new-born baby to people because he was not "sweet and pretty," Mrs. Marjorie Ashe of Chicago, Ill., left the infant behind and vanished from Illinois Central hospital on the day she was to return home. After her broken-hearted husband, James, 27, took the gurgling 10-day-old child home, Mrs. Ashe was found wandering in a dazed condition in the Union depot in Burlington, Iowa. Quick to forgive, her husband flew to bring her back and after they embraced each other and enjoyed a good cry, he exclaimed: "Am I happy now? She's been sick, but she's all right now. And we both think we got the most beautiful baby in the world!"

TEXAS HAIL: Extensive Damage

A record number of insurance claims piled up in Texas following recent violent hail and wind storms which swept through the state for 10 days and caused millions of dollars of damage to buildings and field crops.

With the National Board of Underwriters setting up a special office in San Antonio to handle the mounting claims, insurance loss in that city was set at about $2,500,000. Hail-stones hitting San Antonio ranged in size from golf balls to large stones, measuring 9 to 15 inches in circumference. Wind velocity was reported at 82 miles per hour.

Lumber yards averred that there was not enough stock on hand to repair the damaged roofs already reported. In Fredericksburg, roofs were so badly battered that 1,000 homes were made untenable. Crop damage in East Texas alone was estimated at $1,000,000.

EMPLOY VETS:

More than a hundred thousand World War II veterans have been added to war department civilian rolls throughout the nation and overseas since V-J Day and the figure is increasing at a rate of more than 15,000 per month. Including those hired before V-J Day, the total number of World War II veterans is around 185,000, a majority being former employees.

In the nine months since the end of hostilities, the number of veterans of World War II and other wars has jumped to 235,000.

FENCE POSTS

Here is a cheap method of treating fence posts which takes six hours time and will save you a lot of work and headaches later. That's right—there is an economical method of treating fence posts, bean poles, garden stakes, and the like, so as to make them last longer.

The method recommended by Michigan State college forestry department specialists consists of preparing a chemical solution of either chromated zinc chloride, zinc chloride or copper sulphate, in a wooden tub or wooden trough. Then you simply place freshly-cut saplings into the solution and let them stand in it for about six hours.

You can support the saplings by leaning them against a tree or the side of a building. MSC foresters also suggest you leave a few branches at the tops of the saplings to aid in drawing the chemical solution up the sap stream of the wood.

Best results can be obtained by giving the treatment on bright sunny days in the spring and summer when the sap flows the fastest. In fact, you can only treat hardwood from early spring to late summer. You can treat pines any time except during freezing weather.

In making the chemical solution, you can use the first-mentioned chemical to best advantage—that is, chromated zinc chloride. Despite the fact that it costs about twice as much as the other chemicals, it gives the maximum protection and does not corrode wire staples as much as copper sulphate or bluestone, as it is more commonly known.

One pound of either chemical, dissolved in a half gallon of water, will serve to treat one cubic foot of wood or a sapling four inches at the base and about 30 feet in height.

A word of warning concerning the use of any of these chemicals—they are very poisonous and should not be left around where children and livestock can get at them.

HUNGER AND PEACE

During the war, the battle cry on the farm front was "food will win the war and write the peace." But food is not there to write the peace, and it is squarely up to the American farmer to do his share in seeing that food becomes available, says R. J. Baldwin, director of Michigan State college's extension service.

The veteran director states that starvation can undermine the foundations of any semblance of democratic order and can lose the cause of peace that the farmer so greatly contributed to during the war. The most monstrous fact in the world today is famine. This truth is difficult to retain in our minds because we have enough, and starvation is so far away.

However, we have common interests with those people and there is more at stake than human suffering and loss of life. We must all work together. The cause of peace can be won with just a little food from each and every one. It is the obligation of the American farmer to do his part, Director Baldwin concluded.

STORE WOOLENS

The moths may be hungry, but wool clothing is still hard to find and expensive. Spring never fails to bring up questions about storing winter woolens to prevent moth damage while the garments are "out of circulation." Prof. E. I. McDaniel, Michigan State college entomologist, points out that the prevention is easy, but the cure is difficult—sometimes impossible.

Professor McDaniel outlines safe storage of woolens as follows:

1. Dry clean or wash woolens before storing. This removes all forms of moths present but does not protect against future infestation.

2. Garments may also be hung in the sun for several hours, if the colors are sunfast; then all seams, pockets, and other hiding places for moths should be brushed thoroughly. Pressing garments before storage is also a method of insuring the destruction of all moth life.

3. For storage, woolens should be put away in a trunk, box, or package that seals tightly. Into this container put about one-fourth pound of paradichlorobenzene (PDB) crystals or balls to every ten cubic feet of space. Then seal the container completely. Label it as to contents so that woolens can be located easily when needed.

Potato Gets Bad Reputation From Company it Keeps

It is not the spud, but the company it habitually keeps, that produces inflated waistlines. Coming to the defense of one of Michigan's most profitable crops, Miss Roberta Hershey, nutrition specialist for the Michigan State college extension service, says it is the generous helpings of gravy, butter, margarine that make the potato fattening.

"If a potato weighs 5 ounces, 4 ounces are water. The other ounce contains some protein of good quality, starch, iron and other beneficial minerals, some B vitamins and vitamin C. From a nutritional standpoint, a small serving of potatoes cooked with the skins on and consumed while hot, can replace a slice of bread," Miss Hershey points out.

A medium-sized potato provides about 100 calories—so does a thick slice of bread, a serving of green peas, sweet corn, or lima beans—or even a large apple. Potatoes are plentiful and we should use as many servings as possible to replace bread, Miss Hershey believes.

Potatoes are bulky and perishable and can't easily be shipped overseas to relieve the famine. Some are being dehydrated to reduce space requirements and shipped, but cereal grains are much easier and quicker prepared for overseas shipment.

Spike the spud scandal and eat potatoes—but remember it is the company spuds keep that gives them a reputation of being fattening.

Repatee is the big man's smart answer to your question. If it comes from a little man, you call it an insult.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Megan MacTavish and her father, with Annie, the servant, live on a small farm at the edge of Pleasant Grove. Their living is made from chickens and a few cows, for MacTavish has been a ne'er-do-well for years. Into Pleasant Grove came a woman who called herself Alicia Stevenson, and having inherited the old Brigham place she is now a neighbor of Megan's. Alicia is a woman of about forty years old, well dressed, and something of a mystery. A stranger comes to the MacTavish place to buy milk and butter and eggs, and announces himself as Tom Fallon, the new high school principal, now living in the Westbrook place. He states that his wife is an invalid.

CHAPTER II

Megan and Tom sat quietly on the big flat rocks, saying little, their eyes following the antics of the dogs and cats galloping around in circles on the Ridge. She thought she had never seen the pines look so beautiful.

He asked for permission to fill his pipe and light it, and tentatively offered her a cigarette.

"Thanks, no," Megan answered lightly. "It's a habit I've avoided—I don't think I'd care much for it, and it is expensive."

Obviously Tom understood the logic of that, and for a moment they were both silent, until he got his pipe going well.

Megan said after a moment when the silence threatened to become awkward, "How is Mrs. Fallon? Does the climate seem to agree with her, as you'd hoped?"

Tom's brown hand tightened about the bowl of his pipe until the knuckles stood up in little white mounds. He tore his eyes from the landscape and gave her a look that was hard and cold and bitter, so much so that she was startled by the sudden, inexplicable hostility.

"Mrs. Fallon is—doing as well as could be expected, under the circumstances," he told her. His voice was harsh, and the very sound of the words told her that he had repeated these words until they had ceased to have any meaning; yet he had never ceased to resent the necessity for them.

"I'm sorry if I seemed—inquisitive or rude," Megan told him frankly, her face hot with color, her head up. "I had no such intention. You have made no secret of the fact that your wife is an invalid. Naturally, in a small town like this, people are interested and anxious to be of service, if they may—"

"The only service anyone can do my wife—or myself—is to leave my wife alone," stated Tom, and Megan's eyes blazed at his tone.

She was on her feet now, and she said swiftly, her voice shaking with anger. "You may be quite sure that in the future, I, at least, shall be happy to do so!"

She turned blindly to walk back through the pines, but before she had gone half a dozen steps, Tom was on his feet, laying a hand on her arm, in swift, abject apology.

"Please wait—please, forgive me," he apologized humbly. "That was unforgivable of me! It's just that—well, the subject is—an extremely painful one—"

"I'm sincerely sorry that I mentioned it," she told him stiffly, her face still hot.

He looked down at her gravely, his hand still on her arm, restraining her as she would have walked away.

"You see, Miss MacTavish," he said at last, his voice raw with pain, "my wife's illness is—chiefly mental."

He set his teeth hard when he had spoken the last two words, and Megan looked up at him, puzzled.

"Mental? You mean she merely imagines she is ill? That she is a hypochondriac?" she asked, in all innocence.

Tom's face was white and rigid now, but his eyes were alive with pain.

"No," he said huskily. "I mean that my wife is—mentally ill—that she has the mind of a young child—that she is not—not normal!"

It was obvious that he had tried to say "insane" and had not been able to get the word past his stiff lips.

Megan was conscious of a moment of stunned, shocked horror. This man—chained to an insane wife! This man, whom everybody liked, with his fine mind and his keen sense of responsibility, and a woman who had the mind of a young child!

"Oh!" was all she could say, her tone shocked and rich with sympathy and touched with keen embarrassment that she must witness his moment of naked, burning revelation. "I'm—terribly sorry—"

Tom brushed aside the choked, inadequate words and said with a sort of forced quiet, "So you see why it has been necessary for us to—deny the well intentioned callers—"

"Of course," Megan told him unsteadily, sick with pity for him.

"She is—entirely harmless," he told her, but his face was wrenched with the pain and the shame of having to put that thought into words. "She is never left for a moment alone and she never leaves her bed. But if people here knew about her—mental condition—well, undoubtedly they would—well, feel that she should be locked away! Put in an institution—" The pain of the thought silenced his words for a moment, and after he had got himself somewhat under control he managed a smile at her that was little more than a grimace and said, "So now you know. What are you going to do?"

Megan flinched from the look and from the words. She looked at him with wide, distressed eyes.

"What's it got to do with me? I mean, why should I do anything?" she protested swiftly. "I'm terribly sorry—I didn't mean to pry into your affairs—"

"I know," Tom brushed the words away with a gesture of the hand that held his pipe. "But I think, somehow, I wanted you to know. After all, you are my nearest neighbor. We see each other often—it's inevitable you should wonder. I—hope you won't feel it necessary to—"

Megan's face flamed with hurt.

He looked down at her gravely, his hand still on her arm, restraining her as she would have walked away.

"You may be quite sure that I shall reveal your secret to no one—why should I? What right—or necessity—would I have?" she told him sharply.

Tom smiled at her, a white, faint smile that was somehow very tragic.

"I know you wouldn't. Forgive me, I'm clumsy and stupid, but not intentionally or wilfully so. Forgive me—for everything?"

Megan melted beneath the look in his eyes, and put her hand in his and let him draw her back to the flat stone, where she sat down once more. And as though the revelation of his tragic secret had cleared the air between them, as though they were friends now, they spoke of other things.

His mind was keen and alert; Megan read a great deal and used her mind to think with, and it was for both of them a pleasant experience to be able to talk of things that had nothing to do with Pleasant Grove. Megan liked her friends and her neighbors, but there were many times when she hungered for impersonal talk of matters far afield from Pleasant Grove, and she enjoyed this contact with a stimulating mind.

He walked with her to the barbed wire fence, when she saw that she must go because the evening was ending; he laughed a little, and obligingly held up the lower strand of barbed wire so she could crawl under it without snagging her skirt.

"There really should be a gate here," she told him, getting to her feet on the other side of the fence, laughing across the four strands of barbed wire at him. "But I'm like the man who was going to fix the leak in his roof, only he couldn't work while it was raining; and when it wasn't raining the roof didn't need mending. I somehow never get around to it!"

She whistled. The two dogs came bounding to her, and the four cats stepped daintily out of a great thicket of honeysuckle vines that sprawled at the corner of the fence. And as she walked back down the meadow path to the brook, she looked over her shoulder, and lifted her hand to him in a gay little gesture, as she saw him still standing there. He lifted his hat to her and bowed in a gay burlesque of a sweeping old-world gesture, and she went on, her heart a little lighter for him. She was terribly sorry for him, but she admired the gallantry with which he carried his burdens. And, looking across the fields toward the drab little five-room frame house that was the Westbrook place and that now held this pathetic woman, his wife, she felt the tears in her eyes. Poor man!—poor woman! She shivered a little and hurried as she went, as though to run away from thoughts that bit too deeply.

One of Pleasant Grove's favorite autumn diversions, when the harvest was in and the winter greens had been planted, and it was still too warm for "hawg-killin'," was quilting parties.

Through the scant leisure time of winter, most of Pleasant Grove's women pieced quilts, out of "scraps bags" and carefully hoarded bits of material; and then when the quilt top had been pieced and finished, the owner notified her friends that she was "putting up" a quilt and they were invited to come and help her quilt it.

A few days after her talk with Tom on the Ridge, Megan went over to Mrs. Stuart's, where there was a quilting. There were greetings, a breezy exchange of pleasantries, while Megan settled herself, brought her thimble out of her pocket, threaded her needle, and set to work.

There were perhaps a dozen women about the big frame, which was opened to its fullest width, the width and length of a double bed. Megan talked lightly and carelessly to her neighbor, the pretty little Whitaker girl whose sweetheart had just been reported injured in action in Italy and who was grateful for the chance to talk about him.

Suddenly Megan heard the name, "fessor Fallon" and looked up. Alicia Stevenson was watching her shrewdly, a little knowing look in her small, dark eyes that made Megan oddly and absurdly uneasy.

Mrs. Burns, who was president of the Parent-Teachers' association of the local school, was saying, "I think we're lucky to get a man like Professor Fallon here. The school board says his qualifications are excellent and his references are extremely good!"

Mrs. Stuart bit off a thread and patted her last stitches into place before threading the needle afresh.

"Sort of makes me wonder how come we could get a man like 'fessor Tom, in a little bitty place like this," she said, as she moistened the tip of the needle, trying to insert one through the other. "I don't reckon it's anything ag'n the man, though, if he wants to live in a little country town—"

"Maybe Megan could tell us more about that," said Alicia silkily.

"About what?" asked Megan, cravenly pretending not to understand.

"Why a man like Tom Fallon would be satisfied in a little hick town like Pleasant Grove," said Alicia, smiling. "After all, you know him so much better than any of the rest of us—"

"I sell him milk and butter and eggs, yes," Megan told her curtly. "I'd hardly say that made us old friends, though."

"But I thought during some of those long hours you've spent together on the Ridge, he might have told you something of himself," suggested Alicia, limpid-eyed, her voice soft as satin.

There was a startled gasp about the quilting frame, perhaps not so much a gasp, as a sense of movement that made Megan know they were all staring at her, startled, wondering—waiting.

Megan drew a long breath. "Just what do you mean by that?" she asked Alicia sharply.

Alicia's eyes were wide with surprise, but there was a trace of malice in their depths also.

"But, darling," she protested, her voice artificially gay and sweet, "what could I possibly mean except that I've seen you and the gallant professor on the Ridge—"

"Once, quite by accident, when I was out for a walk—" Megan began, but Alicia interrupted her with pretty concern and an apology that was worse than the most open accusation.

"Of course, I'm terribly sorry," Alicia interrupted. "Please don't say any more. I never dreamed—I mean I wouldn't have mentioned it for the world—" She was prettily confused, and Megan could feel the hint of tension, of curiosity, that crept about the room.

The women who had been her friends and neighbors all her life looked at her and then quickly away, very carefully not meeting her eyes, trying not to meet each other's eyes, elaborately pretending to be very casual.

"This is ridiculous!" said Megan hotly. "You're trying to make people believe that I've been—sneaking off to meet Mr. Fallon—"

"Why, darling!" protested Alicia, wide-eyed, hurt, though secretly enjoying, as she always did, this by no means unusual result of her malicious dropping of bits of information here and there. "I didn't say anything of the kind. All I said was that it was obvious that you knew the man better than any of the rest of us, and that you should therefore know better than we why he was willing to hide—I mean to bury himself in a little hick town like Pleasant Grove."

Mrs. Stuart eyed Alicia belligerently.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D. Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for June 9

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

TRAINING FOR SERVICE

LESSON TEXT — Mark 6:7-13; Luke 10:1-2; 14:25-27. MEMORY SELECTION — And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.—Matthew 10:38.

Workers for God, and with God! Such is the high privilege of the men and women who respond to his call and who go out to witness for him.

On the one side, we have a world desperately in need of the gospel, perhaps more so than any generation in history. On the other hand, we have the gospel of the saving grace of God in Christ Jesus, the only solution to the problems of mankind, the perfect answer to man's need.

How shall these two be brought together? By sending out witnesses to tell the glad tidings of redemption and peace. Where shall we find these witnesses? In the church, for only the believer in Christ is qualified to tell others of his saving grace.

Our lesson, in telling of the Lord's calling and sending forth laborers into his harvest field, gives us much helpful instruction regarding service for the Lord. We learn that

I. God Provides for His Workers (Mark 6:7-10).

Jesus sent out his twelve disciples two by two, thus providing every worker with fellowship and help in hours of discouragement and trial. This also served to keep a man in balance so that he would not become self-willed and proud of his own achievements.

It was a wise provision. Perhaps the church should have observed it with more care, and thus have saved some good workers from going astray.

They were not to be cumbered with extra equipment, nor be concerned about their daily sustenance. The Lord would provide through the hospitality and generosity of his people.

Note that the expected hospitality was not to be allowed to hinder their work (cf. v. 10 with Luke 10:7). Many a preacher or evangelist has ruined a series of meetings by letting social life hinder prayer, soul-winning, or preparation for preaching.

II. God Gives Power to His Workers (Mark 6:7, 11-13).

He gave them authority over evil spirits, so that they could drive them out. He gave them power to heal; he gave them power to preach effectively.

The man who goes forth to speak for the Lord does not have to muster up his own puny powers or depend on the weak arm of some human helper. His resources are infinite and omnipotent. He speaks for the Almighty God. He has a message with saving power.

All too often the servants of the Lord are apologetic and hesitant in their ministry. They mistake weakness for meekness, and in their desire not to assert themselves, they fail to speak a ringing "Thus saith the Lord."

We need a revival of authoritative preaching, of that holy boldness which was not afraid to rebuke sin and any unwillingness to do the Lord's will (v. 11). We need a new emphasis on repentance (v. 12).

III. God Calls Helpers for His Workers (Luke 10:1, 2).

After the twelve were sent out, he called and commissioned the seventy. That blessed process has gone on ever since. How blessed it is that even in our day of unbelief and sin, hundreds of young men and women are going out to all the mission fields of the world to work with older and experienced missionaries.

Perhaps these words will be read by some young man or woman who has felt the promptings of the Spirit of God to go into his service. Step out by faith just now, and begin to prepare yourself for God's service. If the writer of these notes can be of help to you, do not hesitate to write to him. God is looking for more workers.

Do not overlook the important admonition in verse 2. The Lord is waiting for his people to pray for laborers for fields which stand white and ready for harvest.

IV. God Requires Self-Denial of His Workers (Luke 14:25-27).

The mighty works and the powerful words of Jesus made it impossible for people to ignore him. Multitudes followed him, but he, knowing the fickleness of the human heart, faced them with the real demands of discipleship.

The Lord was never concerned with mere numbers. He wanted followers whose hearts were right. The church has broken down its testimony in the world by its frantic desire for more members, great crowds, large church buildings, at the expense of compromise of testimony.

The requirement of the Lord is unmistakable. A man or woman who is to serve him must put him first. No worldly ambition or earthly friendship, no, not even the tender love of family, can come between the Lord and his servant. He is either Lord of all, or he is not Lord at all.

A Prancing Steed For That Small Boy

Authentic early American hobby horse head. Make a broomstick horse or a toddler bike. Use actual size pattern to cut and stencil. Also a guide for assembling.

An old broomstick, a piece of scrap lumber, a pattern that gives you actual-size outlines, and presto, you have a dashing, prancing horse.

If you are a little more ambitious, the same pattern gives actual-size pattern outlines for all parts of the toddler bike shown here. If you do not have a jig saw to cut the saddle and wheels, just saw to cut the material and take it to your nearest woodworker to be cut. He can cut the head in a few minutes too. The pattern shows every step in assembling and gives a complete list of materials for both toys.

"SUFFERED MISERY FOR YEARS..."

Now Regular, Thanks To Famous Cereal

Given up hope of relieving constipation without taking harsh drugs? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I would like to add my praise to KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. I suffered years of misery until I saw your ad about 5 years ago. Have been using ALL-BRAN regularly and have never had to use a laxative since." Thomas Barton, 2254 Sanson Street, Philadelphia 4, Pa.

You, too, may never need another harsh laxative for constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet, if you will eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, and drink plenty of water. Just try this for ten days. If not completely satisfied, send empty carton to Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan. You'll get double your money back.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is not a purgative, but a wholesome food made from the vital outer layers of wheat. Provides ever-so-gentle bulk, helpful to normal, easy laxation. Try it as a delicious cereal—and in muffins.

Atomic War Could Force Return to Primitive Life

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

Mid-June welcomes a gathering to Washington which will deal with a subject more important to you and me than anything I can think of.

The meeting is described as an "institute on the control of atomic energy." At about the same time, the United Nations Commission on Atomic Energy will be meeting too.

At the "institute" in Washington, authorities will explain just what effect atomic energy can have on your life if you are one of those who aren't going to be destroyed by it. I was going to say "one of the lucky ones," but you won't be lucky, if atomic warfare starts, even if you are among those whose lives are spared.

We have all heard a lot of dire prophecies about what the atom bomb can do, if it once gets on the loose. Also, what wonders atomic energy can perform in building a better world, if it is confined to peaceful and productive activity.

But by far the most impressive footnote on the subject came to me in the repeated words of a scientist speaking not scientifically, or for quotation, but very intimately of his own private thoughts, and his own personal plans.

He has lectured a great deal on the subject of atomic energy, and is one of those intimately concerned with its development. Suddenly, one day he realized that he had better make some personal plans to prepare for the future in this atomic age of which he had spoken so much. His work is near one of the several prime targets of any enemy bombs that would be dropped.

No Refuge From A Bomb

So he began to consider. Should he try to get transferred to some smaller institution, located in a little town? That, he considered, would not help much. He has a farm, but he is not a farmer. Should he move onto the farm immediately, learn as much as he could about farming, and plan to live there where he would be comparatively safe? The farm is far from any large city, tucked in the hills.

Then he started planning. He would have to learn a lot more than farming. He would have to learn to card wool, for instance; his wife would have to learn to spin, to weave, to make soap, to fabricate all the things you buy in stores.

He would have to lay in tools, and enough other supplies to last him the rest of his lifetime. Well, perhaps all that could be done. Then he wouldn't be safe. He would have to build barbed wire entanglements, and obtain machine guns and other weapons with which to defend himself . . . for with the refugees who escaped, starving, from the cities, the few who had food would be at the mercy of the hungry mobs.

If I had heard those statements from a lecture platform, or read them in a magazine, I might have passed them by as sensationalism. But the statements weren't in a magazine, or spoken from a platform. They were said over the luncheon table in the quiet corner of a club. The speaker wasn't trying to "sell" his ideas to anybody. He wasn't trying to persuade anybody to do anything, or to get publicity. He was thinking out loud about what he considered an acute personal problem.

In the end it left him baffled. There is no defense.

The only hope is to make the United Nations work.

I heard this story, and was moved by it. I was already pretty well stirred up, because I had just learned of what deep concern this question is to more than three thousand people who wrote me, asking for a pamphlet I had mentioned in one of my broadcasts.

That is an interesting story, too, that I want to pass on.

One day, I received a little pamphlet among the several bushels of handout material which is the grist of the publicity mills dumped on press and radio desks all over the country every day.

This pamphlet caught my eye and held it. It was a reprint from Look magazine entitled "Your Last Chance." You may have seen it. It moved me so much that I just couldn't help talking about it on the air, and offering to pay for the first 500 pamphlets requested, providing a stamp was enclosed.

I limited the requests to people in the following categories: insurance men, salesmen, real estate men, teachers, clergymen, mechanics, utilities workers, scientists and merchants.

I did this, first, because I wanted to limit the number of applicants, and second, because the article contained specific instructions as to what the people in the groups named could do to help prevent a cataclysmic war. I blandly overlooked the fact that somebody had to address envelopes, insert the pamphlets, mail them out.

Public Interested In Prevention

Requests began to arrive, so I called up the National Committee on Atomic Information which is near the Washington office of the Western Newspaper Union; ordered the pamphlets; and had the nerve to ask the committee to mail them out.

I didn't know it then, but it costs the committee, which is, of course, a non-profit organization and skimps along on a handful of small cash donations, four cents for the pamphlet, a cent and a half for the stamp, two cents to address the envelope, another cent to insert, seal and mail! Eight and a half cents, altogether. My generous gesture toward preserving civilization had turned out to be rather lame.

But that was only the beginning. An avalanche began to descend on me. At last count the requests reached over three thousand. The committee didn't know what to do. The letters came from such an intelligent and earnest set of people who were so anxious to do something that the committee hated to disappoint them.

Twice, I begged the public to hold off, but the committee is still filling the requests while its funds hold out, or more donations come in. Which is what happens when you get an atom by the tail.

Questions Popularity Of Rail Nationalization

Just after the bulletin came in over the news ticker in my office announcing that the government intended to take over the railroads, a railroad man happened to call me up about another matter.

I congratulated him on his new job with Uncle Sam. He wasn't very enthusiastic. He speculated on whether or not the men would go back to work if the government ordered them to do so. The miners, you recall, refused to obey government orders when the government took over the soft coal mines during the war.

"Everybody ought to go on strike in the country," he said. "If it gets bad enough, it may get better."

We mentioned the possibility of permanent government ownership of the railroads. My friend reminisced a little on the days when he was an employee of Uncle Sam once before, in World War I, when the government did (to its sorrow) take over the railways.

He said what happened then was that a man would come up to the ticket window and demand a drawing room. Sorry, there were no more drawing rooms. Well, do you know who you're working for, and who I am? I'm Senator Claghorn, and you'll (something-something)—well, get the passenger out of that drawing room, and put me in it!

My friend said he didn't think the people would like it if the government took over. Of course, we don't like the black-berth-market now, either. Time and again, every Pullman seat or berth will be reserved by the blackmarketeers. They hold them up to the last minute, and if they can't sell at a premium, they cancel, just before the train leaves, half empty. The Chesapeake and Ohio ran an advertisement recently, begging the public to refuse to pay the premium, and help get a regulation through which will provide for cancellation of reservations within a reasonable time.

As long as America has the heart to attend spelling bees and county "sings," we can't be quite as badly off as some of our neighbors seem to think.

I never attended enough spelling bees myself. But a radio commentator has an advantage—his audience can't tell whether he can spell the words he uses or not.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS . . . by Lynn Chambers

You Eat Well When You Roast With Care (See Recipes Below)

Flavorful Meats

There's not much choice of meat in the markets today, but if you are fortunate enough to get any at all, consider yourself supremely lucky. Just in case you've forgotten some of the fine points in preparing meat, I'm going to review some of the rules of good cooking today.

For years, we've been telling you about cooking meats at low temperatures. Rationing and the meat scarcity have probably shown you more dramatically than anything else how important low temperature cooking is to getting the most of the meat. There's less shrinkage and more juicy meat to your credit if you'll keep the oven at 325 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit when roasting.

Another point to bear in mind is that no browning is necessary before roasting cuts of meat. Don't worry about their not browning—they will get well browned even at moderate temperature.

If you are pot roasting, that is cooking meat with moisture and seasonings, you'll want to brown the meat after it's dredged with flour, but this is because the meat is cooked covered with liquid.

Here are some recipes for all types of meats which you may be able to find at least once a week these days. Cook and season carefully so that you will really be able to enjoy the meat to the fullest.

Barbecued Lamb Breast. (Serves 4)

- 2 pounds breast of lamb
- 1 medium onion
- 1/2 cup chili sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon red pepper
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 cup water

Cut lamb into pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Place in a hot skillet and let fatty sides brown. Mix chili sauce, red pepper, vinegar and pour over lamb. Slice onion and add to the mixture. Cover. Simmer 1 1/2 hours, then remove lid and let cook slowly for 20 minutes or until barbecue sauce is almost absorbed.

Pork Chops and Rice. (Serves 5 to 6)

- 6 pork chops
- 1/2 cup uncooked rice
- 2 1/2 cups strained tomatoes
- 3 tablespoons green pepper, chopped

Learn Meat Magic: If you want a super delicious leg of lamb, baste it with buttermilk while roasting. For lamb loaf, made with fresh meat, add 3/4 teaspoon caraway seed for flavor.

If you're shy on meat for meat loaf, make up part of the meat with diced American cheese. Delicious!

Pork chops baked with chili sauce or catsup mixed with prepared mustard make grand and tender eating.

If you want a bread saver stuffing for breast of veal, cook your noodles until tender and use them for stuffing. Marjoram or parsley makes a good seasoning for veal prepared in any way. Bake a slice of ham and baste with honey and orange juice for a real flavor treat. Mix Roquefort cheese with Worcestershire sauce and beat until fluffy. Spread on top of hamburgers just before broiling.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENUS

- *Summer Meat Loaf
- Potato Salad
- Wilted Lettuce
- Molded Fruit Salad
- Wheat Muffins
- Apricots
- Beverage
- Cookies

*Recipe given.

- 3 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons shortening
- Flour

Salt and pepper pork chops and dredge in flour. Melt shortening in skillet and brown chops on both sides. Mix together uncooked rice, tomatoes, salt, pepper, onion and green pepper and pour over chops. Place lid on skillet and cook slowly for one hour.

If you've been looking around for ways to use those leftover pieces of bread, then here's just the recipe for you. It uses both bread crumbs and oatmeal for the stuffing and is truly delicious.

Oatmeal Veal Birds. (Serves 6)

- 1 1/2 pounds veal steak, sliced thin
- 2 cups bread crumbs
- 1 cup raw oatmeal
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon sage
- 2 tablespoons bacon drippings
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/4 cut catsup

Cut the veal into six squares. Pound it, season with salt and pepper. Combine the other ingredients, except catsup, and place a little of the stuffing on each piece of veal. Roll and fasten with toothpicks. Brown in hot bacon drippings. Add 1 1/2 cups of water with the catsup to the meat and simmer for 45 to 60 minutes until meat is tender. Thicken gravy with a flour and water mixture just before serving.

*Summer Meat Loaf. (Serves 8)

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- 1/4 cup cold water
- 1 1/2 cups tomato juice
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 pound liverwurst
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup chopped green pepper
- 1 tablespoon minced onion
- 1/4 cup sliced stuffed olives

Soften gelatin in cold water. Add hot tomato juice and stir in sugar and salt, pepper and lemon juice. Allow the mixture to cool and thicken. Remove casing from liverwurst and mash. Add mayonnaise and mustard, green pepper, celery, onion and olives. Then fold the meat-vegetable mixture into the tomato juice and pour into a mold that has been rinsed with cold water. Allow to chill until set. Unmold on platter, garnish and serve.

South American Goulash. (Serves 5)

- 1/4 pound beef liver
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1 small clove garlic, if desired
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups uncooked noodles

Cut liver into one inch cubes and brown with onion and green pepper in hot shortening. Add tomatoes, celery, garlic and seasoning and cook slowly for 30 minutes. Mix flour with water and thicken the above mixture. In the meantime, cook noodles in boiling, salted water for 10 minutes. Drain. Serve goulash over hot noodles.

A party line also gives you a chance to be a GOOD NEIGHBOR!

By treating others on the line as they themselves would like to be treated, good party line neighbors help to improve their own service and that of all the people who share it.

A good party line neighbor thinks of it this way:

"Someone else on my line may be waiting to make a call, so I won't talk any longer than I have to.

"When the line is in use, I won't interrupt.

"And when I finish a call, I'll hang up carefully because one instrument off the hook puts all the telephones on the line out of service."
