Kim Sigler Here Last Thursday

RAINED OUT AT FAIR, HAD ENJOYABLE BANQUET THAT EVENING

Kim Sigler, candidate for governor, arrived in East Jordan, Thursday Sept. 5, at 3:30 p. m. He was scheduled to speak at the fair grounds, but it was just raining buckets-full, and it was impossible to get to the microphone which was across the race track. The rain let up and he got out of the car and met as many people as he could on the midway. At six o'clock he attended a banquet at the Jordan Inn. The dining room was filled to capacity. The southern fried chicken which was served by Mrs. Klimkiewicz was delicious and enjoyed by all. Mr. Sigler in his talk promised that if he is elected governor of our state, the crooks and grafters would be a thing of the past. At 8 o'clock he talked in Petoskey, and from there he returned to East Jordan and spent the night at the Jordan Inn. We, the people that heard him talk, feel that he will make one of the best governors the State of Michigan ever had.

If you want to vote this election you must be registered so why don't you drive or walk down to the City Hall and register, before it's too late. So far only 342 citizens have registered in the city. There are close to 800 eligible voters. We wouldn't want our neighbors to say that we are not patriotic by staying away from the polls, because we were not registered, so won't you please register?

RINGING IN THE WINNERS

The most daring and most profitable of racing rackets is the ringer — a good horse running disguised as a bad one. Dan Parker, noted sports writer, writing in The American Weekly with this Sunday's (September 15) issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, tells of one of the turf's most notorious racing coups. MARRIAGES

Danforth — Gibbard

Blanche Danforth and Leslie Gibbard, both of East Jordan, were married at the Free Methodist parsonage in Central Lake, Saturday evening, Sept. 7. Rev. Counterman performed the ceremony. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Dawson.

After a short trip to Sault Ste. Marie, they are at their home on State Street.

Morgan — Morgan

Katheryn Morgan and Edward Lee Morgan were united in marriage Saturday, Sept. 7, at the Methodist parsonage; Rev. H. G. Moore performed the ceremony.

They will reside in the Sena Farrell house on State Street.

Vance — Tennant

Beautiful in its simplicity was the candlelight, double ring ceremony in the Methodist church, East Jordan, Thursday, Sept. 5, at 3 o'clock, that united Miss Jane Ellen Vance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Vance, and Rev. Wirth G. Tennant of Traverse City, son of Rev. and Mrs. George Tennant of Bendon, in holy wedlock.

The service was read by Rev. George Tennant, father of the groom. Mr. Howard G. Moore presided at the piano, playing "To a Water Lily" by McDowell; "The Lords Prayer" by Malotte; "I Love You Truly" by Bond; and "Prayer Perfect" by Stegson. She also accompanied Mrs. Floyd George, sister of the groom, who sang "All For You" by Cadman and "At Dawning" by Brown.

As the strains of Lohengrin pealed out, the bridal party took their places before the altar decorated with baskets of white gladioli and candleabra with lighted tapers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a white crepe gown, with long sleeves and sweetheart neckline and long veil, which formed the train. She wore a string of pearls, a gift of the groom, and carried a white Bible with gardenias and streamers. Patricia Ann Vance, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid, wore a blue net frock and carried a bouquet of pink gladioli. Rev. Wilson M. Tennant assisted his brother as groomsmen. The guests were seated by Bryce C. Vance, Barton L. Vance, and Rev. Raymond Norton.

Mrs. Vance, mother of the bride, wore aqua crepe with a corsage of white gladioli. Mrs. Tennant, the groom's mother, chose a black dress and corsage of white phlox.

After the vows were taken, Mrs. George sang "Oh Perfect Love" as a prayer while the couple still knelt. Rev. and Mrs. Howard G. Moore completed the wedding party as master and mistress of ceremonies.

A reception was held at the farm home of the bride's parents. A beautiful three-tiered wedding cake, surrounded by garden flowers, formed the centerpiece of the table, with candlesticks and lighted tapers at either end. About one hundred and fifty guests were served by Mrs. Bryce C. Vance, Miss Mary Jean Tennant, Miss Louise J. Crawford, Mrs. Carlton Smith, Miss Barbara Jean Mathews, Mr. L. B. Karr and Bruce Robinson.

The young couple left on a months honeymoon. After Oct. 1st they will be at home to their friends at the Asbury Parsonage on Spruce St. in Traverse City. For going away, the bride wore a teal blue wool suit with black accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Guests were present from Bendon; Norwalk, Conn.; Holt, Paw Paw; Marion, Ind.; Detroit, Ludington; Boulder, Colo.; Lansing, Traverse City, Honor, Boyne City, Charlevoix, Central Lake, Ellsworth, Bellaire, Harbor Springs, Petoskey and Levering.

The bride is a graduate of the East Jordan High School and Traverse City School of Nursing and for the past three years has been employed there as an instructor.

The groom is a graduate of Taylor University, Evanston, Ill., and is pastor of Asbury and Fourteenth St. churches in Traverse City.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was feted at two showers; one given by the District Nurses Association at Traverse City and one given by the Mary Martha Group in the Methodist church parlors.

Northern Michigan Road Commissioners Meet at Manistee

The twenty-second Annual Meeting of the Northern Michigan Road Commissioners held this year in Manistee, Michigan, September 5th and 6th, found practically full attendance from the Counties of this section.

The problem of maintaining and constructing roads on an income of pre-war years with a continuous raise in labor and material costs was debated pro and con, with no settlement of the issue.

Samuel E. Rogers, Chairman of the Charlevoix County Road Commission as President of the NMRC presided. The commissioners were given a first hand report of the "Bikini Atomic Bomb Tests" by Hon. Albert J. Engel, Representative from Michigan in Congress and ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee. Representative Engel was present at both tests at Bikini and convinced his listeners of the terrible destruction of this type of weapon also told of the strange and peculiar effects of the bomb on the ships.

Hon. Charles M. Zeigler, Michigan State Highway Commissioner addressed the Commissioners at a banquet held Thursday evening in the Chippewa Hotel, explaining the Federal Aid to be received by Michigan for the next few years to improve the secondary roads of the State and how each County must match dollar for dollar with the government. This will work hardship on those counties whose funds are low from the effects of raising costs with revenues received only from Gasoline Tax and Weight Tax on the same basis as in pre-war years.

Talks were also heard from Col. Floyd E. Evans, Director Michigan Board of Aeronautics, Hon. Ben H. Petty Professor of Highway Engineering, Purdue University, and Mayor John S. Olson of Manistee. Pat Van Waggoner, Democrat Candidate for Governor was also present at the banquet.

The Commissioners passed resolutions advocating their approval of the adoption of Amendment No. 1 and their disapproval of Amendment No. 2 that will be placed before the voters at the fall election.

Those attending from Charlevoix County were, Commissioners S. E. Rogers and Angus Fohtman, and Superintendent of County Roads T. B. Reynolds and Ralph S. Hamilton, Clerk of the Board.

Farm Topics

CARE URGED IN FODDER FEEDING

Dairy farmers should avoid feeding corn fodder which has been treated with DDT to milk-producing cows. Samples of corn fodder, sprayed or dusted with DDT for corn borer control, have been analyzed by the agricultural chemistry department of Michigan State College. They were found to contain DDT in amounts varying from 3.7 to 38.6 parts per million.

While this seems like a small amount of DDT, chemists feel it is enough to contaminate milk if the fodder is given to dairy animals.

A legal tolerance of 7 parts per million has been established for apples and pears marketed. No tolerance however, has been established for dairy products and a trace of DDT in the milk may be enough to make it unfit for consumption.

DON'T STORE VEGETABLES TOO EARLY

It's well to consider storage of some garden surplus for winter eating, but Jack Rose, Michigan State college extension specialist in home gardening, warns against storing vegetables too early.

Whether in basement storage room or outdoor pit, cool weather is necessary for good results. Crops in storage give off some heat which must be replaced by cool air. One warm spell may cause the entire crop to be lost. Rose advises temperatures for most vegetables in storage from 34 to 48 degrees.

DON'T STOP TOO QUICKLY

Too many women made the mistake of quitting their canning too soon last summer. As a result they ran out of certain items such as canned tomatoes and peaches last spring about the same time their family grocer could get none. Then, they had to substitute for these two highly desired items of food.

Roberta Hershey, foods and nutrition specialist for the Michigan State College extension service, says the peaches and tomatoes are now in the market at a price which will prove advantageous to the housewife. She knows you're busy getting the youngsters ready for school, but she believes you will be thankful next spring if you can more of these two products now. Can all you can—that's a good policy to follow this year. Ed. Rebman, Co. Agr'l Agent.

USE OF AEROSOL BOMBS

In fighting flying insects in the home, a lot of folks haven't as yet learned how to use the new DDT aerosol bombs in the most efficient way.

Some do as some G.I.'s did when they first tried the aerosol bombs in the army. They wastefully let out too much of the insecticide at one time.

Ray Hutson, head of the department of entomology at Michigan State college says the process is simple. You can keep down flies and mosquitoes and other flying insects in an entire ordinary-sized room by simply walking to the middle of the room, holding up the aerosol bomb, and releasing the insecticidal fog from it for just two seconds. With a properly designed bomb, one that takes about twenty minutes to exhaust, and one that contains the right amount of pyrethrum and DDT, you can treat the room a couple of times a day all season with one aerosol bomb. That makes it an economical way to keep down insects.

At present, the aerosol bombs on the market differ rather widely, and unfortunately all of them are not so mologist have found that one type economical. For example, the ento-

BOWLING

The 1946-47 bowling season was ushered in Monday evening as the Merchants league squared off for their first round. It was a typical opening performance. There was good bowling and there was some spotty bowling but, all in all, it looks as if the teams are going to be pretty evenly matched, and will furnish plenty of excitement down to the finish. Monday's results were:—

Bader's Gas Station beat Clark's Homewreckers 3-1; Cal's took the Bank 3-1; Auto Owners 3, Sinclair's 1; Norm's Tavern 3, Post Office 1; Canning Co. won from the Recreation 3-1; and St. Joseph's and Ellsworth Electric split at 2 each.

Individual high score for the evening went to Pete Hammond with 216. Monk Chah took the high score with a 552 score. In this series Monk rolled two games of 210 and 201. Others who had games of 200 or better were Fr. Malinowski 213, Don Clark 204, Lew Kamrad 202, Milt. Meredith 201 and Spin Chah 200. Joe Wilkins drew attention last week when he bowled a practice game of 268.

Friday and Saturday evenings the R. G. Dun ladies team of Detroit were here for two matches. Friday evening they took the East Jordan ladies 2454 to 2167; the individual game score were Dun's 778, 802, 874. East Jordan 687, 710, 790. Saturday evening they took on Cal's men, the men coming out victorious 2681 to 2528. In this match, Sally Ice, subbing for Pat Jones who was unable to come with the team, was the lone star, as she put together games of 156, 201 and 194 for a 537 score. Incidentally, Pat Jones holds the distinction of rolling a 704 series in league competition, which stood her fourth in the nation for 1945-46. The men were just as well pleased that she was unable to come.

Sunday the girls took the Charlevoix men in a match.

A large crowd jammed the alleys to the doors for the games here both evenings and Barney is hoping to line up more attractions of the same calibre.

All interested in the Doghouse league should attend the meeting this Thursday evening, Sept. 12th. Barney is also listing two instruction classes for women on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 4:00.

bomb filled with a first-rate insecticide lets out the insecticidal fog so fast the bomb is completely exhausted after two minutes' use. That means more re-fills or more aerosol bombs each season.

Remember, the insecticidal fog does not need to directly contact the pest to get results. The residue left by the spray will do the trick. DDT may not show as immediate results as some old-fashioned fly sprays, but in ten minutes time it gets far more insects and the residue is effective for from weeks to months.

and be my Love
By PEGGY DERN WNU RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Martha confessed the story of how she had awakened to find Letty standing over her bed with the knife in hand. She and Tom had taken the knife away from Letty, and Martha had gone to the graveyard to bury it while Tom watched over his sick wife. "I hid it—where you found it?" A little later Letty suffered a hemorrhage. "She died early this morning," Bob Reynolds pressed her further. "I did it!" Martha screamed. "I killed her. I hated her. She spread stories about Tom and Miss MacTavish." Martha then went into detail of how she went to Alicia's house and waited for her chance, waited until Jim MacTavish left Alicia and then committed the murder.

CHAPTER XVI

"There's a short cut through the woods, and it isn't far. I got my sister to bed and to sleep. As I've already told you, Tom was out of the house. I found Mrs. Stevenson was not alone. I waited—"

"She wasn't alone?" Bob jerked her up sharply.
Miss Martha shook her head.
"Mr. MacTavish was with her," she said, and now Megan held her breath and her teeth were clenched. "He left a few minutes after I got there. They had been quarreling. I could only hear a word or two, but I could tell, just looking in at the window, that Mr. MacTavish was very angry and that Mrs. Stevenson was laughing at him."

Megan could see the picture as though she herself had stood outside that window, and it made her shudder. Yet here was the thing that had worried her father—an alibi. She drew a breath of sharp relief.

"I waited until he had gone," Miss Martha went on wearily. "Then I knocked and she opened the door. She was surprised to see me, and not very—pleasant. I tried to tell her why I had come, but she only laughed. She said that there must be a lot of truth in the stories about Tom and Miss MacTavish or he and I would not have been so alarmed—and she added that she knew that Letty was—out of her mind—and that she was a menace to the neighborhood. She said she intended to start a movement to have her—committed—" Her voice broke, and after a superhuman effort at control, she said thinly, "And so—I killed her."

It was once more Bob who broke the tense, breathless pause. He stilled sat on the corner of the desk, and he scrubbed out the glowing tip of his cigarette as he spoke, his eyes on the crushed cigarette in the old glass ashtray, his voice very quiet and gentle, "The truth is, Miss Evans, that you spoke to Mrs. Stevenson, and she answered you about as you have said. You did not kill her—but when you turned to leave the house, you were astounded to see your sister in the doorway behind you, and realized that she had followed you. And it was, in reality, your sister, not you, who killed Mrs. Stevenson."

Bob sighed. He ran his hands through his hair and stood up, white and tired, haggard almost, as though the long scene had been almost as much of an ordeal for him as for the broken, suddenly old woman before them.
"But how could you possibly know—" Megan demanded of Bob.
It was late in the afternoon of an extremely hectic day after all the loose ends and the final details of the tragic story had been cleared up. Miss Martha and Tom had departed on their sad errand of "taking Letty home" to lay beside the little son who had never lived.
Megan had asked Bob and Laurence to stay for supper and they had accepted gratefully. And now they were in the living room, with Jim listening and looking on, withdrawn and pale, but genial and pleasant when spoken to.

"I didn't know, of course," Bob answered frankly. "It was just that—well, call it a hunch, what you will. Only I kept hearing something in Miss Martha's words that didn't quite ring true. What she was saying would be completely sincere and convincing. Then something would creep into the story, nothing I could set my finger on, but it was there and I could sense it. Especially that very elaborate ruse of hiding the knife. If it had really been a knife out of the kitchen of her own home, she might have hidden it very carefully about the house. But to get herself up like a particularly terrifying ghost and go sneaking out into the night to hide it in the one place she felt sure would never be found—well, that had me puzzled."

"I thought of that, too, of course," Laurence contributed.
"Then when she began to talk about going to Mrs. Stevenson's—remember she mentioned the sport cut through the woods? Yet she had been at some pains to assure us that her sister's strength was not sufficient for her to walk to the Stevenson place. But if there was a short cut through the woods, and if her sister, in one of her periods of lucidity, had followed her and overheard her quarrel with the Stevenson woman, and the sister had been frightened, excited, as she most certainly would have been—do you see? The pattern is the sister doing the deed—not Miss Martha. I saw it suddenly, and—well, you know what happened."

Megan slipped away to offer her services to Annie in finishing up supper, but Annie said, "No'm, honey, I's got eve'ything undeck control—y'all go out and git yo'self a li'l bits o' fresh air, 'fo' suppeh."

And gratefully, Megan obeyed her.
It was already dusk, though not yet dark enough to obscure the vision. She crossed the backyard to a big old rough bench beneath a live oak tree and sat down, her head back, breathing deep of the crisp night air.

The night was very still, save for the faint shouts of children playing somewhere along the highway; behind her in the barn she heard the rustling of the cows as they settled themselves down for the night. The whole scene was quiet and calm and peaceful. So peaceful that it was hard to believe the horror and tragedy and terror that had gripped the place so short a time before.
She couldn't bear to think of Tom any more. She wouldn't let herself, and she was glad when she saw Laurence coming towards her across the dusky dooryard.

The glimmer of her light-colored frock through the dusk led him to her.

The glimmer of her light-colored frock through the dusk led him to her. He called her name uncertainly, and when she answered him he came on to her, something dark in his hands.
"Your scarf," he said. "Annie felt you might catch cold out here—she said supper would be ready in ten or fifteen minutes."

Megan started to rise, but he put his hand on her shoulder and pressed her back on the bench.
Megan relaxed a little. He lit a cigarette and they sat for a little companionably in silence.
"It's all like a terrible dream," she said huskily, and Laurence nodded.

"But you've waked up now, Megan, and sensible people don't brood over bad dreams or let them affect their future lives!" he reminded her almost sternly. "There is one thing out of the bad dream that you can remember, though—Fallon is free. After a decent interval of time—"

She shivered and said impulsively, "I don't feel I could ever bear to—see him again."
Laurence turned on her sharply, angrily.
"Now you're talking like a fool!" he told her violently. "Just because a man has gone through hell—and a hell that was no fault of his own—no woman with a decent instinct to her name can throw him aside!"

Megan caught her breath and looked at him in surprise.
"I didn't mean that—after all, aren't you taking rather a lot for granted?" she protested heatedly.
"Tom Fallon and I were—friends—"

"Tom Fallon was—and is—in love with you, and you know it," Laurence told her bluntly. "Even if I hadn't known it, the way he looked at you when he said good-by—and besides, have you forgotten that you told me yourself you were in love with him?"

"I—I guess I am," she admitted humbly.
"You guess you are!" Laurence was caustic.
"Well, what I meant was—I'm all mixed up and confused—it's been so horrible—" she stammered faintly.
"That's understandable—" Laurence conceded grudgingly. "But after a while, you'll pull yourself together and be able to see clearly—and in a year or so—"

Annie's voice from the kitchen door, that spilled an oblong of golden-amber light into the backyard, was the most welcome sound Megan had ever heard in all her life, and she rose so swiftly that Laurence's mouth tightened a little and his eyes were cold and hard as he followed her across the yard to the kitchen and into the dining room.

Healthily tired at the end of the day, sleeping soundly at night, Megan discovered, as week followed week, that the memory of those dark, evil days when Alicia Stevenson's malicious tongue had wagged so freely, was growing fainter.

And she realized that Pleasant Grove, as a community, was also recovering from the darkness when Alicia's tongue had set old friends to eyeing each other with more or less veiled suspicion. Other farm families were finding release from dark memories in the ever new, yet age-old miracle of the dark earth, the tiny seeds, the new, tender green sprouts that meant life and hope and the future.

She was touched and grateful to Jim for his honest, if bungling attempts to help her. She tried not to let him know that his hands were clumsy with the delicate, fragile plants that he tried to pack. She knew he was bored, and that he resented the hard, back-breaking labor that it takes to run a farm effectively.

He came back from Meadersville late one afternoon, his eyes shining with excitement, obviously with news that he considered of great importance.

It was already dusk, and the darkness had driven Megan in from the fields. She had shed her earth-stained dungarees, had a shower and was dressed for supper, busy in the kitchen helping Annie with the last duties of getting the meal on the table, when Jim came hurrying in.

"The most marvelous thing has happened, Meggie—I've been offered a splendid opportunity!"
"Tell me," said Megan, eager and interested, loving him for the understanding she had acquired of him since his moment of self-revelation after Alicia's death.

"Well, you know the county newspaper in Meadersville? The Sentinel?" demanded Jim, as eager and excited as a boy. "Dick Morgan publishes it. Well, Dick's been drafted and he wants me to take over until he comes back!"

He beamed at her happily and Megan said quickly, "It is wonderful, Dad—but well, you've never had any newspaper experience—do you think—"

Jim looked a little sulky.
"Oh, I know that, but after all, Dick feels that I have other qualifications," he pointed out. "And Mrs. Morgan will stay on as business manager and write the woman's page and all that. What I'll have to do is write the editorials, and what news I can pick up. Mostly, right now, it comes from a wire service, because about the only two things people are interested in are the war and politics. And there's a fellow in Washington who acts as correspondent for a lot of county newspapers, Dick's paper among them. And Dick's got three weeks before he reports for induction and he feels that in that length of time he can get me settled in, help me to learn the ropes and all that. Of course, the salary is really laughable—but I get a share of the profits and all that."

"It is wonderful, Dad, and of course you can do it!" Megan assured him, sincerely. "I'm terribly proud of you."

Jim looked at her oddly and then he asked, almost curiously:
"Are you, Megan? Funny—I can't remember when anybody ever said they were proud of me."

Megan felt a little quick mist of tears in her eyes, but she knew this was no time for the display of pity that she felt for his humility—his tacit admission that he had always hungered for appreciation, even while he had admitted to himself that he deserved no such appreciation.

"But of course I'm proud of you, Dad—now you'll get to make use of all that study and research you have done these last few years!" she told him happily. "I'll bet there isn't another man in the whole county who has read as much, or studied as much, of current events as you have."

Then he said hesitantly, "Of course, Meggie, I know I promised to help you with the farm this year—but I hate to turn down a chance like this. A chance to—well, to be somebody important, and to have people listen to my views."

"Now don't you worry about the farm, or me," Megan assured him firmly.
Jim beamed at her happily, obviously relieved. He would ride to and from Meadersville each day with three men from Pleasant Grove who "commuted" to Meadersville offices. The paper came off the press every Friday. It might be necessary for him to stay over in town Thursday night, but the hotel wasn't bad and he could stay there. He had his plans made.

Megan, listening to him while she did the mending that always occupied her sizable work basket, thought that he seemed younger and more vividly alive than he had been in a long time, and was deeply and selfishly glad that he had found a job that he felt was worthy of his ability.

Pesky Flour Beetle

Known to Ancients

The most troublesome enemy of flour is the confused flour beetle. It is a tiny, reddish-brown, flattened insect, known since the time of the Egyptians, and found throughout the world. Serious pest for flour manufacturers and millers as well as homemakers: It feeds on all kinds of flour, stale bread, crackers, and many other foodstuffs. Ironically enough, in perfecting vitamin-enriched flour, man has at the same time provided the flour beetle with healthier food, for entomologists have discovered that the flour beetle can raise larger families on enriched flour than on ordinary flour. Flour beetles often develop in some overlooked package of food-stuff, and in a short time spread to other foods. Or they are often brought into the house from the store in packaged goods that have been damaged or are old.

To control the flour beetle, it is wise to inspect packaged foods frequently, and not have too many small packages of little-used flours and cereals to invite insects. Avoid spilling flour where it can accumulate in cracks in the shelving. Flour bin drawers or compartments should be examined frequently. Remove the bin, if possible, to be sure no flour is underneath.

Study Concludes Eastern Europe Over-Populated

There were before the war 44 million too many people on the land in eastern and southern Europe, according to a study of those areas recently published under the auspices of the economic and financial department of the League of Nations.

A comparison of levels of agricultural production throughout Europe in the late interwar period provides the basis for the estimated surplus rural population. Written by Prof. Wilbert E. Moore of Princeton university's office of population research, the study makes a comprehensive survey of the economic and population problems in the least developed parts of Europe. He concludes that, although the techniques of agricultural production could be substantially improved in peasant farming, this improvement would offer no possibility of raising the income of eastern European peasants to that of farmers in western Europe. Only a wide program of economic, including industrial, development could bring substantial relief. The surplus rural population must be provided with other productive employment if even moderate income levels are to be achieved.

Professor Moore considers that the prospects for industrialization are only moderately good, and generally not favorable to heavy industry. Resources, labor, and limited domestic capital are available for light industry, however, if political and social conditions can be stabilized.

Thanks A Million

We deeply appreciate the business, the good will and the friendships given us while operating the QUALITY FOOD MARKET Especially during the war years, when things were sort of tough for everyone. Guess it was too tough for folks of our age. Really, folks, we're going to miss you a heap. So, after a few month's rest, we may be back on the Street. We heartily commend to you the new owners of the Quality Food Market, Messrs Cole and Boswell, and if you give them the cooperation you gave us, when they get old and feeble, they'll say, as we do now, East Jordan folks are the best on earth.

Very Sincerely
Ethel ann Earl Clark

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JESUS AND COVETOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:17; Proverbs 11:23, 24; Luke 12:13-21.

MEMORY SELECTION—He that trusteth in his riches shall fall; but the righteous shall flourish as a branch.—Proverbs 11:28.

The Ten Commandments, the study of which we conclude today (the remaining lessons of the quarter deal with other laws), have been revealed to us as being characterized by their brevity, their comprehensive touch with all of life, and fidelity to the right. But they are also unique and different from all other laws in that they reach into the inner recesses of a man's heart, a realm where only God can judge and act.

This last commandment (against covetousness) emphasizes that point, for it does not expressly require or forbid any act, but deals with the motive of man's action. Man can judge another man's acts, but he cannot judge his motives, desires or thoughts. God must do that.

But man can, by the grace of God, control his motives; and hence we have this commandment and its interpretation.

I. Covetousness — What It Is (Exod. 20:17).

To covet does not mean just to desire, but to have an unrestrained desire for that which we ought not to have or which by right belongs to another.

It shows itself in our day in a more general way — an inordinate desire for possessions in general. There too man loses himself. It may be a surprise to many to learn that coveting, or desiring what belongs to another, is a sin. It has become one of the "respectable sins" accepted in the best circles and practiced by many church people.

As a matter of fact, this sin underlies all the other sins against which the commandments speak. He who has a love for money and an evil desire to have his neighbor's possessions will hate, lie, steal, cheat, kill. In fact, as Dr. G. Campbell Morgan says, "The whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth commandment."

II. Covetousness — What It Does (Prov. 11:23, 24; Luke 12:13-21).

1. It Makes a Man Stingy (Prov. 11:23, 24). The righteous man seeks that which is good and he knows nothing of the close-fisted stinginess which withholds from God and man. Sometimes to economize is to lose, and to be liberal is to gain—especially in the things of God.

God gives liberally (James 1:5), and the man who knows God scatters not only his money, but his riches of mind and service for God's glory.

In sad contrast is the man who keeps his possessions for himself and reaps only the barrenness of soul and leanness of life.

2. It Makes a Man Envious (Luke 12:13-17). Noting the ability of Jesus in dealing with others, this man thought to divert the Lord from his real ministry to the souls of men to the settling of social problems—all because he was greedy.

Some church leaders think that is our business now — to preach and promote a social gospel. They had better reread verse 14.

3. It Makes a Man Selfish (Luke 12:16, 17). The one who was known to his friends as the "rich man" (v. 16) was known to God as a "fool" (v. 20), because having more than he could use he hoarded it for himself. One wonders what he had to say for himself when that very night he was called into the presence of God to give an account of his stewardship (v. 20). If you are similarly situated and have the same attitude, what will you say in that day?

4. It Makes a Man Proud (Luke 12:18). All around him were the hungry. He needed no barns, for there were the empty hands of the needy; but money had made him hard and proud. He would build bigger barns, perhaps the biggest in that community. People would marvel at his prosperity and he would live long to enjoy it.

But it did not work out that way, for, alas, it is true of covetousness that—

5. It Makes a Man Foolish (Luke 12:19-21). The man who reckons without God is sure to come to grief. Leaving him out of one's thinking and planning invites disaster.

God called, and he who had thought to go on for years in selfish pleasure, found that he must go and leave it all. Worse yet, he had to face the judgment of God upon his eternal soul.

Do not fail to note that there is a way to lay up treasures in heaven — by a "close walk with Christ, coming to appreciate and cultivate the joys of the spirit," and so using one's possessions that they count for the glory of God. Even gold can be so invested for God as to send it on to eternity. What an opportunity!

Bedsprad With a Permanent Valance

A BED with a valance to the floor has a well-dressed appearance that is lacking when a short spread is used. A plain valance like this repeating a color in the room would be just as attractive used with an old fashioned quilt for a spread; or with a crocheted or plain spread. Five and one-half yards of any 36-inch material split lengthwise right down the center does it.

This bedsprad is from Home-Making BOOK NO. 4 which also contains illustrated directions for more than thirty other things to make for the home. Readers may get a copy of BOOK 4 for 15 cents by sending request to:

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. Big kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—all to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

BACK when Dinah Shore was getting started in radio she was on Station WNEW in New York, and the men who worked with her then still pay tribute to her; "She was such a perfectly swell kid," they say, "that we all wanted to do everything we could to help her along." That was when she first came up from Nashville, Tenn., after graduating from Vanderbilt and doing some radio work. Dinah's still a swell kid; she doesn't brush off autograph seekers no matter how badly she's rushed for time, or how tired she is. She's been doing a stint at New York's Paramount theater, and her new radio program, with Peter Lind Hayes, starts September 18 over CBS from Hollywood.

Motion picture actors usually call their own homes when the script requires that they dial a number; some dial a favorite restaurant or club. Bing Crosby dials a golf club where he and Bob Hope frequently play. But Radio Theater Producer Keighley has a long list of non-existent numbers for use on the air; some people, when a radio actor calls a number, just have to rush to the phone and call it. Addresses are just as bad; Keighley has a list of those, too, in New York, London, Paris, and other big cities. But—they're all vacant lots!

"A Miracle Can Happen" is going to have an all-star cast that's really all-star. Producers Benedict Bogeaus and Burgess Meredith, who are making it for United Artists, recently added Fred MacMurray to a list including Henry Fonda, James Stewart, Charles Laughton and Paulette Goddard; by the time you read this they'll have announced some other feminine stars.

Cathy O'Donnell is worried because she can't cry for the movie cameras—has to be helped out with glycerine tears. Working with Gladys George and seven-year-old Marlene Aames in "The Best Years of Our Lives," she watched while they easily burst into tears, and could have wept herself with discouragement. Her only consolation was the fact that Myrna Loy and Teresa Wright, also starring in the film and top-notch actresses both, had to rely on glycerine too.

Betsy Blair, Gene Kelly's wife, plays the ingenue lead in the Rosalind Russell-Melvyn Douglas "My Empty Heart," her first picture. She was playing on Broadway in Saroyan's play, "The Beautiful People," when she and Gene were married. At that time Gene was 17. When he joined the navy, she retired to take care of their daughter, Kerry, who's three now, old enough to let Betsy resume her career.

J. Arthur Rank's $6,000,000 "Caesar and Cleopatra" was being held over in some 25 key cities before it hit New York, rolling up top grosses everywhere. United Artists' home office says the two illuminated signs erected in Times Square to announce it are the largest ever used to advertise a Broadway screen production—one is 160 by 24 feet.

Mary Small says the trend in popular music is definitely toward the sweeter side, and she should know, as she shares top-singing honors with Harry Babbitt on the "By Popular Demand" show, Thursday nights on Mutual, which plays the times most requested of band-leaders and singers in cafes and ballrooms; the selections are wired in and the most popular ones land on the program.

ODDS AND ENDS—At the Pasadena preview of "Suddenly It's Spring" males in the audience whistled so loud a Paul ette Goddard, shown wearing a black negligee, that nobody could hear the actors in the picture doing the same thing. . . Charles Townbridge got the role of Katharine Hepburn's father in "Sea of Grass." . . Lowell Thomas keeps CBS production men on the edge of their seats; in 16 years he's never been late to a broadcast, but he rarely arrives with more than 30 seconds to spare. . . Peter Lawford sings for the first time on the screen in "It Happened in Brooklyn"; warbles "Whose Baby Are You?" with Frank Sinatra.

Widest Street

The widest street in the world is Avenue 9 de Julio, now under construction in Buenos Aires. This avenue, which will eventually reach clear across the city, is 600 feet wide, or twice the width of the Champs Elysees in Paris.

If the proposed sales tax amendment had been in effect during the past fiscal year, the State of Michigan would have incurred an operating deficit of $35,000,000.

Such is the judgment of Fred C. Striffler, Michigan Budget Director. The deficit would have occurred during boom-time inflation. It would have resulted only if the state had continued to maintain duly authorized public services as determined by the state legislature. Actually, it is likely that drastic economies would have been instituted by a badly-worried governor and state administrative officials who shun red-ink as they do higher taxes.

Insane people could be denied admission into state hospitals, for example. Welfare payments could be slashed, if possible. Other money-saving measures could be resorted to in an effort to pull the deficit down.

It is Striffler's responsibility to anticipate expenditures and to keep them in balance with respect to anticipated revenues.

His recommendations are submitted to the governor and to finance committees of the house and senate in the state legislature. The above deficit estimate is an approximation only at the present, because complete information is not available. The past fiscal year closed June 30, 1946. However, it is fairly safe to count on Striffler's estimate as being within 10 to 15 percent of the final figure.

Striffler has informed state department heads that budget-making will be delayed until after November 5. If the sales tax amendment is carried on November 5, new budgets must be slashed right and left, he warned.

John D. Morrison, State Auditor General, is pessimistic about the possibility of averting new taxes, if the voters authorize the sales tax amendment whereby an equivalent of 60 percent of the revenue automatically goes to the public schools by constitutional mandate.

As he sees it, the legislature would be forced to do one of two things: One, curtail severely the state's present public services for health, welfare, colleges, and so on.

These services were authorized by the legislature in response to demands of the people back home. The shoe's apt to fit many people, and a resultant storm of protest could be expected, he believes.

Two, new or additional taxes must be levied by the legislature to avert an operating deficit and to cover actual operating expenses. The latter would be likely.

After going into a huddle with other administrative officials, Morrison is of the opinion that the State would be compelled in a year, when sales tax revenues had declined, to pay a larger amount to the public schools than the schools would normally get. The proposed amendment is worded in a way to make mandatory the payment of revenues to schools in proportion to that amount paid in the past fiscal year (1945-46) PLUS the added diversion of one-half of one cent as computed according to the annual school census.

While State Treasurer D. Hale Brake could not be reached by this writer for comment, it is understood that he is also cool to the tax diversion plan and is likely to be vocal about it prior to November 5.

Two nominees for governor have not expressed themselves one way or the other — at least they had not done so when this column was written.

State Senator Don VanderWerp, chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative John Espie, chairman of the house ways and means committee, are known to be firmly opposed to the tax amendment. They have warned associates that the amendment would be undesirable in the interest of good government and that new taxes would be inevitable if it were to be approved.

From the above evidence — the budget director, the auditor general, the reported coolness of the state treasurer and the recorded opposition of the two legislative finance committee chairmen — you may guess readily what Governor Harry F. Kelly's conclusion is going to be.

At the right time the governor is going to issue a blast against the amendment in no uncertain language. In fact, he will probably denounce it roundly.

Throughout his four years of state service, Governor Kelly has been intensely devoted to the progress of the State of Michigan as the over-all governing authority with definite responsibilities for definite public services.

He has been aggressive in fighting for what he considers to be the people's priority of needs. He staunchly opposed attempts of the big city mayors to grab a slice of the state funds. Anyone who has followed Harry Kelly can safely bank on his recommendation to vote no on the tax amendment.

The Michigan Education Association may be counted on also to present convincing arguments as to why the new amendment would avert a "collapse" of the public schools, a prospect that appears to be again on the horizon.

We referred last week to the comparative low salaries paid to school teachers, the increasing difficulty of getting enough new teachers to fill needs, the obsolescence of many school buildings and other factors in the postwar picture.

The sales tax amendment would be a bonanza to many rural schools. Some schools would receive more funds than they actually need for present-day services. Thus there is a temptation for some rural voters to modernize their rural schools at the expense of people living elsewhere.

Public schools now receive $60,000,000 in state aid. Under the new amendment, they would get approximately $100,000,000 a year, based on last year's tax collections. This is a substantial boost. It is our hunch that the MEA decided to back the amendment as a bargaining lever to get more state aid in 1947, even if the amendment is lost on November 5. Any way you look at it, the teachers have little to lose, a lot to gain.

"OTHER things I buy have gone sky-high... but Greyhound fares are still the SAME"

Greyhound fares are as low as in Pre-War Days!

IT'S TRUE! That upward spiral of price rise hasn't so much as budged Greyhound fares. They have remained normal—just as low as before-the-war days. This is more remarkable too, since costs and maintenance of operating bus lines have risen sharply all along the line.

How does Greyhound do it? Well—it's no trade secret. The backbone of Greyhound Lines formula for success is more and better service to more people. Expansion and augmented service... thorough maintenance and efficient operation of equipment have all combined to hold the line on bus fares.

Your travel dollar really buys more today than ever before in bus line transportation. And when Greyhound's orders for new buses are filled, your dollar will buy even more in comfort, convenience and better bus service.
