Michigan Owes Cherry Fame To Old Settler

Largely because of the late Peter Bos, who came to Michigan from Holland in 1869, the Grand Traverse Bay district's sour cherry crop is nationally famous, says Wessel Smitter in The Reader's Digest for April with a harvest of about 90,000,000 pounds a year, the Bay district leads the nation in sour cherry production.

The Digest article recounts the early trials, hardships and ultimate success of Peter Bos and his family. Bos' experiments, involving every obtainable variety of cherry tree, were sparked by the chance remark of a neighbor in 1872.

After three bitterly hard years of unsuccessful attempts to grow field crops among the pine stumps of his 80 acres, Bos had seen his house destroyed by a forest fire and his corn and potatoes ruined by an early frost. One of Bos' neighbors, his entire crop killed by the same frost, said, "This land is good for nothing, except for growing trees."

Maybe that was so, Bos reflected, for he had never seen wild cherry trees to equal those which grew in the surrounding countryside.

The experiments were financed to the extent of $500 a year by a lumber company for which Bos had worked in the winters. He earned the balance of the needed cash by working with road crews. After a long series of disappointments, his experiments were finally successful when buds from a variety of commercial sour cherry were grafted to the root stock of the native wild cherry. In 1880 the young trees bore fruit. Bos distributed 800 trees, half his entire stock, among his friends.

By the turn of the century, the article says, Peter Bos owned a nursery and a fine orchard and was a major stockholder in the district's first cherry cannery.

Holds Needles on Christmas Trees

A newly developed plastic spray which holds needles on Christmas trees longer has been discovered and tested by Michigan State College research scientists. Dr. C. L. Hamner, right, shows V. R. Gardner, director of the MSC Agricultural Experiment Station, both sprayed and unsprayed trees. Both had been left in a room at 90 degree temperatures for a 15 day period. The tree on the right was sprayed with Goodrich Geon latex. The fine waterproof film prevented evaporation and left the tree forest-fresh after 15 days. Two other MSC horticulturists, Jack Gartner and F. L. O'Rourke worked with Hamner on the tests. The product is now being produced commercially and will probably be on the market in time for use next Christmas.

Dangerous Crop

In the hills of Idaho during prohibition many a small farmer, who'd never heard of Sir Oliver Lodge, eked out his income by materializing some highly interesting, if slightly illicit, spirits. Shortly after repeal, a group of farmers was conversing in a store in one of the communities where this risky business had not been unknown. A heated discussion was in progress as to whether or not any money could be made by farming in that vicinity. A newcomer joined the little gathering.

"Henry," someone asked, "you've made money farming in these parts, haven't you?"

"Well, yes," Henry replied cautiously, "I did make some. But I come close to being caught a couple of times."

Poor Teacher
Police Judge—Well, Sam, about your son stealing those chickens, I've decided to let him off this time, but why don't you show him the right way?

Sam — Ah done tried hard, Judge, but he goes and gets hisself caught anyhow.

Find Old Temples

Eleven heretofore unknown Mayan temples, regarded by scientists as comprising the most important American archeological event of recent years, have been discovered by an expedition sponsored by United Fruit company, authorized by the Mexican government and supervised by Carnegie institution of Washington.

These temples, believed to have been built between 495 and 672 A.D., were found in the ancient Mayan stronghold of Bonampak in the remote lower Mexican frontier region of Chiapas.

The discovery resulting from the Bonampak explorations provides a new key to understanding and appraising one of the greatest of Western hemisphere civilizations. The 11 temples, all of which are sufficiently well preserved for archeological appraisal, clearly indicate the magnificent architectural and cultural attainments of the early pre-Columbian American Indian empire, whose civilization compares favorably in many respects to the period of Greece's Golden Age.

Too Risky
Two nurse maids were wheeling their infant charges in the park, when one asked the other: "Are you going to the dance tomorrow night?"

"I'm afraid not," she replied.

"What!" exclaimed the other. "I thought you were so fond of dancing?"

"I'd love to go," explained the conscientious maid, "but to tell you the truth, I'm afraid to leave the baby with its mother!"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS
Finland Fears Reds Seek Control
As Stalin Calls for "Defense Pact";
Vandenberg Urges Speed on ERP

Released by WNU Features
EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.

WHO'S NEXT?
Finland

Finland seemed to be resigned, saturated with the apathy that sometimes precedes extinction. It was a state of mind that had grown out of a reported request by Josef Stalin of Russia that Finland join up with the chain of Soviet defense pacts that now stretches across Europe.

To the Finns that request was nothing less than a prelude to the same kind of political control Russia had just imposed on Czechoslovakia. They feared their parliamentary freedoms would go by the boards in such a turn of events. But after losing two wars with Russia in less than 10 years, the Finns were able to do little except resign themselves to the Soviet pattern of conquest.

Finland's President Juho Paasikivi was said to be in favor of signing a Finnish-Russian friendship treaty as suggested by Stalin.

His viewpoint, distinguished by realism if nothing else, was this: To turn down the Soviet bid would aggravate Russian-Finnish relations to a dangerous degree. To accept it could mean Finland might get as favorable conditions as possible toward keeping national independence.

At the same time there was concern whether Stalin's request was dictated exclusively by the wish to safeguard Soviet territory, particularly Leningrad, or whether he had something else up his sleeve. So far there were no actual demands of any kind, such as that the Red army be allowed to occupy Finland in the case of war or the threat of war.

On the global scale it seemed apparent that Moscow's overtures to Finland, coming as they did after the seizure of Czechoslovakia, were another part of the Soviet retaliation to the U. S.-sponsored Marshall plan in Europe. The Russians were drawing up the final lines for the conflict and at the same time consolidating their position in eastern Europe.

MARSHALL PLAN:

"This act may well become a welcome beacon in the world's dark night. But if that beacon is to be lighted at all, it had better be lighted before it is too late."

With that exhortation and many other clamoring brass alarms did Sen. Arthur Vandenberg (Rep., Mich.) attempt to spur the senate into swift action on the Marshall plan as it opened debate on the 5.3-billion-dollar program to defeat communism in Europe.

The chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, one of the strongest backers of the Marshall plan, urged the senators to "light the beacon" of economic aid to Europe before "aggressive communism" begins knocking on the door of the New World.

"Help stop World War III before it starts," was the burden of Vandenberg's message.

Denouncing "treacherous Moscow propaganda that has 'charged us with iniquitous American imperialism,'" he emphasized that the 16 western European nations must be saved from economic chaos.

"This vast friendly segment of the earth must not collapse. The iron curtain must not come to the rims of the Atlantic by aggression or default."

But despite Vandenberg's hortatory, prospects of swift, full passage of the Marshall plan were by no means bright and shining. In this election year congressmen were being doggedly and ostentatiously conscious of how they spent taxpayers' and voters' money.

The house, meantime, was working on another version of a world aid plan, with the foreign affairs committee deciding to wrap foreign aid for Europe, China, Greece and Turkey into "a single package."

PROBE:
Atomic

All of a sudden there was a new atomic security investigation under way to stimulate the jaded interest of the American public.

In the limelight this time was Dr. Edward U. Condon, atomic scientist and head of the government's bureau of standards.

Describing Condon as "one of the weakest links in our atomic security," a house un-American activities subcommittee reported in good faith that he "knowingly or unknowingly entertained and associated" with alleged Russian spies.

To the charge that he was a "weakest link" Condon retorted: "This is gratifying information because I'm absolutely reliable and therefore we have

OPTIMIST:
New Weapons

Rear Adm. Ellis M. Zacharias, retired U. S. naval officer, came up with another bit of shattering news not calculated to ease the jitters of this already drawn and weary world.

Aggression Charted

These are the battle lines for the "cold war" in which the two opposing forces are democracy and communism. The battlefield is Europe, map of which conveys that "this is where we came in" feeling. It is reminiscent of the Hitler drive to the East, except for the fact that this time it is a Russian expansion westward that is changing the color of the map.

nothing to worry about. The country can relax."

And as far as consorting with Communist spies was concerned — "That's just too vague to talk about. I certainly didn't do it knowingly," he commented.

Nevertheless, two congressional committees leaped into action. Rep. J. Parnell Thomas (Rep., N. J.), under treatment in Walter Reed hospital for a stomach ailment, said he might call a bedside meeting of his full un-American activities committee in order to send the subcommittee report formally to President Truman.

And Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper (Rep., Iowa) called a session of the senate-house atomic energy committee to study the house group's report. The report itself was a package of straight-from-the-shoulder charges. It pointed out, among other things, that Condon had been appointed head of the bureau of standards in 1945 on the recommendation of Henry Wallace, the commerce secretary.

Discussing Communists, it said: "In this country they haven't gotten as far as they did in Czechoslovakia, but they got pretty far, because they got a man as vice-president of the U. S. and he is now their candidate for president, and he is the same man who recommended Dr. Condon as director of the bureau of standards."

PROFITABLE:
Steel

In response to a request by President Truman for a full investigation of steel price increases, federal trade commission and commerce department economists turned up with a story that was not destined to do the steel industry any good in the eyes of the price-whipped American public.

According to data assembled so far, the industry has been piling up profits at a rate unequalled in recent years and, in some cases, is running up net earnings almost double those of 1946.

The appraisal indicated that U. S. Steel, giant of the industry, was leading all companies with a net profit in 1947 of 126.7 million dollars—highest since 1929. Bethlehem Steel pushed up its net profit last year to 61 million dollars, about 10 million more than the previous year.

Other leading concerns either have doubled or more than doubled their 1946 profits.

Stimulus which got the steel profits investigation going was the recent $5-a-ton increase in the price of semi-finished steel—actually the fifth in a series of price boosts. During the first seven weeks of 1948, steel companies have jumped the price of pipe, nails, wire and structural construction steel.

Economists tended to view the steel price hike with alarm because they feared it would offset completely any beneficial deflationary trend which the commodity market drop might have set in motion.

HOMELESS:
DP Bill

Possibly in response to the growing humanitarian sentiment in the U. S. that something be done to relieve the plight of Europe's displaced persons, the senate judiciary committee approved a bill that would admit 100,000 DPs to the United States in the next two years.

The measure, now scheduled to be reported out to the senate for action, provides that homeless Europeans who are living in DP camps two and a half years after the end of the war will be admitted at the rate of 60,000 a year beginning next July 1 and ending June 30, 1950.

A three-member commission would be established to handle the program and to formulate regulations "for the purpose of obtaining the most general distribution and settlement of persons." At least 50 per cent of those admitted are to be employed in agriculture.

Sen Chapman Revercomb (Rep., W. Va.), chairman of the subcommittee that drafted the bill, said that this provision was intended to prevent the immigrants from settling in large groups in seaboard areas.

Those to be admitted would first be thoroughly investigated by a government agency.

CRACK DOWN:
Holy Land

It was time to get tough in the Holy Land, the British occupying army decided.

Far from showing any inclination toward peace, Palestine Jews and Arabs were carrying their civil war over the partition plan to even bloodier lengths than before.

Weapons and ammunition were being sold openly in the streets. Bombings grew in number and intensity. Open warfare was the virtual rule in Jerusalem. All this might be the natural result of the artificial division of a long-standing state, but the British army had had enough of it.

Force must be used impartially against both Jews and Arabs, Brig. C. P. Jones, commander of the British Jerusalem garrison, told his troops.

In a directive he said: "Prolonged firing between Arabs and Jews within Jerusalem makes life intolerable for its inhabitants. Such disturbances will not continue. Force will be used in incidents of this kind. The army will, if necessary, use weapons more powerful than those available to Arabs and Jews."

It was impossible to decide, the British announced, whether the Arabs or Jews were the aggressors.

RENUNCIATION:
Southern Style

Things were not getting any better for President Truman in the Southland.

Democratic leaders of two strongholds, South Carolina and Tennessee, brooding over the President's irritating civil rights program, turned thumbs down on him as the party's 1948 candidate.

At the same time the Mississippi Democratic committee voted to withdraw from the party's nominating convention in June unless it pledged itself to fight "anti-southern" laws, meaning the civil rights program.

Both South Carolina and Mississippi voted to collect political funds against the possibility of a presidential campaign separated from that of the national Democratic party.

Nipped by Tuck

Gov. William Tuck of Virginia received a flood of congratulatory telephone calls after he had made a speech denouncing President Truman's proposed civil rights program and asking Virginia voters to ban Truman. He requested joint session of the Virginia general assembly to keep Mr. Truman's name off the ballot next November and permit Virginia electors to choose another Democratic candidate.

What Do You Breathe?

More than 700 persons die every year as a result of air pollution in Chicago alone, and a proportionately large number die from the same causes in other American industrial cities, says Dr. Clarence A. Mills of University of Cincinnati.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh
How to Keep 'Em Down On the Farm
The other day Pete Swanson's nephew, Bud, allowed as how he was fed up with farm and country life... and was going to the city where there was a lot more opportunity and excitement.
Some folks might have tried to stop him. But not Pete. He even advanced Bud carfare for the trip... figured that when he'd had a good look around, he'd come back where he belonged.
And what happened? After seven days of big-town bustle and excitement, Bud was back behind the wheel of a tractor, with color in his cheeks again. And he'd traded the night life of the city for a quiet glass of beer with Dad.
From where I sit, that's how it goes. Try to prevent some one from getting what he thinks he wants—and he'll go on wanting it. But give him his head, and he'll settle for the sensible thing—whether it's country life, or a temperate glass of beer!

FACTS to check Before you Insulate
1 — The best material you can use is one that actually reduces fire hazard. Because B-H black Rockwool is fire-proof—it retards the spread of fire, eliminates the flue action of empty stud spaces.
2 — A good insulation does not pack down after it is installed. Compressing a handful of B-H black Rockwool does not break down the fibers—its natural resilience is unaffected by temperature changes or time.
3 — A material that absorbs water loses its ability to insulate. B-H black Rockwool is water-repellent—will float even after being immersed.
4 — The ideal material is physically stable and chemically inert. Because B-H black Rockwool is made from mineral rock—it is odorless, will not attract vermin, remains unchanged through the years.
5 — Insulation is no better than the men who install it. When you buy B-H Home Insulation you get all the advantages of dealing with a thoroughly experienced local firm—backed by the facilities of a national manufacturer.

It was built for two stores.) Charles Barret returned to East Jordan from Detroit, Thursday, and will again locate here. Says he's "glad to get home" he doesn't like the city.

The announcement that the pastor would preach to the children drew a large company of them to the Methodist church Sunday morning. The Kingdom of God

Lesson for March 21, 1948

JESUS went back to his boyhood home in Nazareth, and on the Sabbath he went into the synagogue, "as was his custom."

They gave him the Book of Isaiah, from which he read a passage in the 61st chapter, adding, "This day is this Scripture fulfilled in your ears," Luke 4:21.

Jesus had come to let people know about God — to reveal the Father's perfect love for all men. He loved the Bible, and was constantly reading it, which in his day was the Old Testament only. And he loved the Sabbath day, which we now call the Lord's day. Beginning with his resurrection, the first day of the week has been observed as the Lord's day. And Jesus loved the appointed places of worship, and was always found in some synagogue on the Sabbath. Don't you wish you might have been in Nazareth that day when he stood up to read the Scripture?

WHAT HE CAME TO DO
JESUS, I repeat, came to reveal God to men, which is but another way of saying that he came to teach men about the Kingdom of God. Here we shall need to read Mark 4:26-29, and Romans 14:17.

"The Kingdom of God is as if a man should cast seed into the ground," said Jesus; and Paul, in Romans 14:17, says, "The Kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit."

Jesus, then, came to establish a kingdom within the hearts of men. It means the rule of God in human hearts. What he wills, we gladly do. It manifests itself in the daily life of the individual, in the home, in the school, in the church—everywhere.

"THY KINGDOM COME"
SO VITAL is this truth for the Christian that Jesus, in the pattern prayer, teaches us to say, "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as in heaven."

If we live in the atmosphere of this prayer, we shall embody daily the fruits of the coming Kingdom of God. If we really "seek first the Kingdom of God, and his righteousness," we lift the level of life wherever we stand and serve. This is precisely what Jesus did. "He went about doing good."

We help to answer the prayer, "Thy Kingdom come," when we do with all our might what our hands find to do—in the home, in the community, in the church.

KINGDOM OF GOD AMONG MEN
IT IS not enough to consider this truth in terms of some far-off dramatic event. It is a present force and factor in today's world.

One day the Pharisees asked Jesus when the Kingdom of God should come. He told them that it would not come with observation—that it is within the hearts of men.

What did he mean? I believe that he meant just this, that the Kingdom of God will and must manifest itself in the common affairs of everyday life. We may hinder its manifestation. We may retard its coming. On the other hand, we may make it manifest and hasten its spread to earth's remotest bounds.

How? By yielding ourselves to the rule and reign of God in every relationship of life. In race relations, in social service, in relief to the afflicted, in united effort for peace, in better housing, in better recreational facilities, in educational opportunities for all. The Kingdom of God is not an impractical theory, but a working principle, even as the leaven works in the loaf.

WHEN WILL IT COME?
THE Kingdom of God will come when redeemed hearts everywhere enthroned God in their whole attitude and purpose. Then, and not until then.

Will it come? This is a stubborn question. From our viewpoint, it may seem doubtful; but Jesus declares that it will come. "I have overcome the world," he declares.

The one question for you and for me, What part shall I have in the coming of the Kingdom of God upon the earth? We each decide by our willingness or unwillingness to follow him.

Observe good faith and justice toward all nations; cultivate peace and harmony with all. — George Washington's Farewell Address.

SHORT STORY
The Runaway Boy
By SHIRLEY RAY

SOMEONE was coming down the stairs. The still and darkened house seemed to amplify each soft footfall to Rhoda who hoped the sound of her own breathing would not give her away.

Now the steps, still guarded and cautious, were in the hall, and then only a few feet from where she stood. There was the sound of a hand on the doorknob and the door swung open. A small form slid past her. The door closed again and the sudden return of darkness stirred Rhoda into action. She grasped the knob and flung the door open.

"Where are you going, Jimmy?" she asked sharply.

The small boy stared at her from the bottom step. He lowered his eyes and scraped the toe of his shoe in the soft dirt.

"Going away," he mumbled.

"Come sit down, Jimmy," she said. "We may as well have a good-bye talk."

Jimmy sat next to her, his bundle in his lap.

"Now," said Rhoda, "where are you going?"

"Going to hitchhike to the city." His eyes met Rhoda's for the first time. "Pinky Duggan hitchhikes all over," he informed her.

"Pinky Duggan?" she repeated.

"You know Pinky's mother," Jimmy said.

"Oh, yes, I know," Rhoda replied.

"Pinky lives in the city. He goes to the movies every night," Jimmy continued. "In this old town we have only one movie."

RHODA was thinking of saying exactly the same thing to Jimmy's father that Jimmy was now saying to her.

"There's nothing to do in this small town, Jim. We don't even have a choice of two movies."

His voice filled with enthusiasm, Jimmy went on.

"There are tall buildings and big electric signs that go on and off and double-deck buses and everything in the city."

"I tell you, Jim, this poky town drives me crazy. I'm used to the city. I like the bright lights and the traffic and the noise!"

"Pinky says only jerks live in a town like this," Jimmy declared.

"I can feel the boys' sticks out all over me. I saw Kay Duggan today—we used to work together in the city—and I realized what a bumpkin I am."

Rhoda sighed. "Yes, Jimmy, the city is nice." She felt helpless. She was this boy's mother. She should know what to say, what to do. But she was at a loss for words.

There was a long silence.

"Mom, Pop doesn't let me do anything."

"Jim, I'm not old. I want to go places, do things, get out of this rut."

Jimmy reached into his pocket and brought forth two shiny cubes.

"I tell you, Jim, this poky town drives me crazy."

"Look, Mom. Pinky swapped 'em for my Boy Scout knife."

Overdoing It
A DOWAGER, after a lifetime of sin, decided to join the church. When the deacons plunged her into the icy river the first time she gasped, "I believe." After the second dunking she chattered, "I believe." A third time, gasping for air, she sputtered again, "I believe." One of the elders asked her eagerly, "What do you believe, sister?"

She gave him a murderous look and declared, "I believe you rascals are trying to drown me."

BORING DEEP!
Dentist—That's strange. Here's a tooth that's never been filed and yet I find bits of gold on my drill.

Patient—I knew it . . . you've worked your way back to my collar button.

Appreciated Now
When the preacher's knock on the door of the modest little shanty brought a woman attired in heavy mourning, the good man solicitously inquired: "Is your husband dead, sister?"

"Oh, no, sir, he ain't dead," was the reply.

"Then, why are you in mourning, sister?" the preacher asked.

"Well, sir," explained the woman, "it's like this: My present husband has been naggin' and botherin' me so much that I went back into mourning for my first husband."

A LONG WALK
Mother (proudly watching her 2-year-old) — He's been walking like that for almost a year.

Bored visitor—You don't say so! Can't you make him sit down?

A Slight Change
A young widow commissioned a monument cutter to inscribe on her husband's tombstone: "My Sorrow Is More Than I Can Bear."

Before the work was finished, the widow married again, and the cutter asked if she still wanted the inscription.

"Yes," she said, "but just add the word 'Alone.'"

Handy Gadgets
"I want something for a young lady—a birthday gift," said the young man. "What would you suggest?"

"Well," said the clerk, "how about some book-ends?"

"Splendid!" was the enthusiastic reply. "Give me half a dozen of your best ends—that's usually the only part she reads!"

Light Helps
The farmer was berating his hired hand for using a lantern to call on his best girl.

"What a waste," he stormed. "When I was courtin' I never carried no lantern. I went in the dark."

"Yes, I know," snapped the hired man. "And look what you got."

Logical Deduction
Checking the cash register tape for a new salesgirl, the cashier of a department store was puzzled by the unusually large number of "no sale" recordings. He asked her about it. "Well," she explained, "every time I had a customer to whom I didn't make a sale I pushed that 'no sale' button. Isn't that what it's for?"

Wrong Answer
"Dear," asked the little woman, "is my hat on straight?"

"Yes, yes," her husband replied impatiently, "it's absolutely straight. Now do hurry; we're late already."

"I'm sorry," the little woman rejoined, "but I'll have to go back, then. This isn't the sort of hat that is supposed to be worn straight!"

Should the governor of Michigan have new and additional powers over departments, commissions and bureaus?

Is the governor, as has been recently charged, merely a "glorified clerk"?

Vernon J. Brown of Mason, former lieutenant governor, auditor general and state legislator, does not think so. During his 40 years of public service, half of which was as either a legislator or a state official, Mr. Brown served along with eight different governors in succession.

"There are two distinct theories of government," observes Mr. Brown. "They are in direct opposition one to the other, and one must choose between them."

"First, and the one on which the American way is founded, is government based on the theory that the closer it is kept to the people the better. This implies strong local units and a division of authority and responsibilities so that the manifold duties of administration may be divided among as many capable administrators as may be required. In a state so diversified as Michigan, no individual can hope to attend to everything and no person should be expected to undertake to do so. Neither should he be entrusted with so great responsibilities."

"The opposite theory in government is found at its highest development where Hitlers and Mussolini and Stalins are produced. Under such a government all authority is centered at the top where every decision is made. Everything below must bend either the knee or the neck. There are those in this country who evidently yearn for the power and the obeisance that go along with this last described type of government."

"It is noted that there are certain public officials in Michigan who do not like the Michigan way. They like neither the laws nor the restrictions imposed upon them."

"Most of the restrictions complained of have been imposed and put into effect since the days of Alex Groesbeck. There are some left who will recall the primary campaign of 1926 when the Groesbeck autocracy was the prime issue. Evidently the people of that day had become tired of Groesbeck bossing. In any event they chose Fred W. Green in preference. And beginning then and continuing until this day there has been a trend in Michigan resulting in sorting out first one function and then another for independent administration, free of interference by the governor and free from partisan politics.

The first notable example was the establishment of the department of conservation which long had been a political football. The revenue department, the mental hospital group, veterans affairs and several others have followed. Even before this there was the independent highway, the colleges and the university and several lesser boards and commissions.

"It is true that in Michigan the governor has not the power and authority he once had nor has he as much as the governors of some of the other states now have. But this by no means is accidental. It has come about because of a public demand."

"Nevertheless from my observation over the years I have known of an instance where any commission, bureau, board or other agency has snapped its fingers at the governor or ignored his wish—except when to do so would have been against good public policy. I have known of instances I can recall, time proved they were correct and not the governor."

"There is a division of authority in Michigan. None will deny that. Making up the list of all the good citizens of Michigan now serving on some eighty-odd such boards appear the names of more than half a thousand and good citizens. But let us remember that most of them are serving the people without reward or pay and that each is a man or woman of good repute in his own locality. Moreover each has been selected for his intimate knowledge in the especial field served by his particular group. The public receives many thousands of dollars of free service from these board and commission members."

"No such system should be disturbed merely to satisfy the ego of one person or his demand for more power. Governors come and governors go, but government must carry on and that is why most of the boards and commissions of which the present governor now complains were created."

TURKEY AND POULTRY GROWERS TO MEET:

The turkey and poultry growers of Charlevoix County will meet next Tuesday afternoon, March 23, at 2:00 P.M. in the Auditorium of the City Hall at Charlevoix. Dr. Reed and Dr. Stafest from Michigan State College, Ernest McCarthy from Michigan Farm Bureau, will handle the meeting. Dr. Reed will talk on problems of growing and raising turkeys and poultry, Dr. Stafest will discuss diseases in the poultry enterprise, Mr. McCarthy will talk on marketing, in regard to the proposed Poultry Marketing Plant to be set up at Charlevoix. All turkey and poultry growers are asked to attend this meeting.

HOLSTEIN COW PRODUCES 60 POUNDS OF FAT:

Elias Sommerville owned the three year old Holstein cow that was tops during February for fat production in the Charlevoix-Antrim Dairy Herd Improvement Association. This cow produced 60.4 pounds of fat on twice a day milking.

Lee Cook, Supervisor, announced that during February he tested 22 herds with a total of 267 cows, including 74 dry cows. The average test was 3.97 per cent an average production of 513 pounds of milk and 20.4 pounds butterfat for the month for all cows. The average returns per $1.00 feed cost were $1.95. The average feed cost per pound of butterfat was .54 and per cwt. of milk was $2.19.

ARTIFICIAL BREEDERS ASSOCIATION EXPANDS:

Four new members joined the Boyne City Artificial Breeders Association last month. These were: Harry Fall, Harry Hayes and son, Lawrence Elzinga, and Charles Healey. During the month Curtis Nicloy reported a total of 51 services were made. The new microscope has arrived which will help to improve the quality of services.

RAT KILLING IS BIG JOB:

Maybe you think that spreading a little poison bait now and then or setting a few traps takes care of rat control on your farm. That's far from the truth, however. Simply destroying a few rats here and there doesn't begin to solve the problem. Campaigns to destroy rats are important but should be followed up by other rat destroying measures.

Extension specialists at Michigan State College say that any program, to be successful, must include these four major points:

1. Destruction of rats.
2. Elimination of rat hiding places.
3. Elimination of their food supply.
4. Ratproofing of buildings.

Check the details of rat control on your farm—does it include these features?

Most Cancer Can Be Cured Says Public Health Dept.

"Half the lives cancer takes in Michigan each year could be saved if facts regarding its diagnosis and treatment, known at this time, were put to full use," Dr. J.K. Altland, Commissioner, Michigan Department of Health, said today in announcing an intensified cancer education campaign for April, National Cancer Month.

Dr. Altland said that the Michigan Department of Health, the Michigan State Medical Society, and the Michigan Cancer Society are cooperating in an effort to dispel the misinformation and the attitudes of hopeless fear and shame which have done much to hinder effective cancer control.

He calls upon every community organization and club to avail itself of speakers, films, exhibits, and literature regarding cancer through the medical societies, health departments and the cancer societies in order to give true facts to Michigan's people.

"We know now that if it is found early enough, most cancer can be cured, but cancer remains the second cause of death in Michigan and in the nation, and no age, race or locality is free of the disease."

"We must educate our people to have annual physical examinations for the disease even though no symptom is apparent, and to have additional examinations of suspicious symptoms appear."

"Early diagnosis and treatment is the medical profession's major weapon. X-ray, radium and surgery are the accepted treatments," Dr. Altland said.

Cancer, the Commissioner pointed out, is one of the earliest diseases known to man. Its presence was recorded in hieroglyphics inscribed in rock three or four thousand years before Christ, and each medical writer of importance since that time has written of it in light of the knowledge, or lack of it, of his time. Much of the information the average person has today is the result of 5,000 years of fallacy and misinformation handed down from generation to generation. Each new scientific fact discovered refutes certain of the old beliefs. The misinformation must be corrected and the true facts given, if cancer control efforts are to succeed.

The Michigan Department of Health has prepared two new pamphlets, "What You Need to Know About Cancer" and "Cancer in Michigan" which are available in any quantity without charge upon request made to the local health department or the Michigan Department of Health, Lansing 4, Michigan.
