Improve your sleep

By Deb Hagen-Foley

According to the National Institutes of Health, the average adult sleeps less than seven hours per night. If you consistently get less than eight hours of sleep per night, you are probably sleep deprived.

You may be sleep deprived if: you need an alarm clock to wake up on time; you hit the snooze button or have a hard time getting out of bed in the morning; you feel sluggish in the afternoon or get sleepy in meetings or lectures. Do you feel the need to sleep in on weekends, nap to get through the day or fall asleep in the evening while watching television? Do you fall asleep within five minutes of going to bed? You are probably sleep deprived.

Sleep deprivation is a result of sleep that is of unacceptable quantity or quality. Older people are more likely to suffer from insomnia, which impairs the ability to fall asleep or stay asleep. According to the National Institutes of Health, 1 in 3 adults suffer from insomnia occasionally and 1 in 10 have chronic insomnia. Compounding the problem, older persons are also more likely to have medical conditions that cause pain, making it difficult to stay asleep or take medications that may impair sleep.

The sleep deprivation that results from insomnia can lead to depression and memory problems. Chronic sleep deprivation has been related to increased risk of diabetes, obesity and heart disease in addition to a greater likelihood for automobile accidents.

Here are some tips to improve your sleep quality and quantity.

Get ready for sleep before bedtime. Avoid caffeine in the afternoon if you want to sleep better at night. Keep regular wake and sleep times. Having set times for going to bed and waking up will help establish patterns and prepare the body for sleeping.

Have a pre-sleep ritual. Having a ritual to prepare you for bedtime helps the brain to gradually adopt a sleeping mode. If you have trouble falling asleep, review your current habits for how you may be sending signals to your brain to stay awake. Engage in relaxing, not stimulating activities. For example, a warm bath or warm beverage (non-caffeinated, of course), reading a book (nothing too exciting) rather than watching television or working on the computer. Shut down the electronics (computer and television screens) about 90 minutes before you plan on going to sleep. Spending 30 minutes preparing for sleep rather than using that time for working will lead to better nighttime sleep and more productive work the next

Exercise regularly. While exercising too close to bedtime may disrupt sleep, exercise in the morning or early evening can improve your sleep. Research finds that regular exercise is related to an improved ability to enter into deep sleep.

Avoid medications that cause drowsiness. This may seem counter-intuitive, but the secret to improving the quality of sleep is to adopt habits that encourage restful sleep. These medications may be helpful short-term, but they disrupt normal sleep patterns and often result in a "sleep-hangover," feeling drowsy the next day.

Don't use alcohol to get to sleep. Drinking before bedtime might help you fall asleep, but drinking alcohol close to bedtime will disrupt the quality of sleep. As alcohol is metabolized, it fragments sleep, leading to awakening during the night and feeling drowsy the next day.

Create an environment for sleep. Your bedroom should be dark, cool and quiet. Remove computers and the television from the bedroom - the light from these devices sends a message to the brain that it is daytime and disrupts the internal clock. Watching television when you awaken during the night can hurt your ability to sleep, not help you get back to sleep. The light from video screens suppresses the production of melatonin, the sleep-inducing hormone, making the problem worse.

If you do awaken during the night and are unable to get back to sleep within 20 minutes, get out of bed and move to another room to relax until you feel ready for sleep again. Staying in bed while struggling to fall asleep links the sleeplessness with the bedroom and sets you up for continued bouts of insomnia. Use the bedroom for sleeping (and sex) to make it easier for your brain to know that once in that environment, it is time for sleep.

Follow these tips to repay your sleep debt - the difference between the amount of sleep you need and the amount you have been getting. Plan on getting to bed earlier or staying in bed later until your sleep debt is repaid. The average adult needs 8 hours of sleep per night. If you are chronically sleep deprived, you may need as many as 10 hours sleep on consecutive nights until you are able to awake without an alarm clock and feel fully rested.

If following these tips doesn't improve your sleep, discuss your sleep problems with your doctor. Some people have chronic insomnia as a result of an underlying physiological condition. Allowing chronic insomnia to continue for six months or longer can result in numerous physical and psychological problems as mentioned previously. Your doctor may help you determine the cause of chronic insomnia so you can get the sleep your body needs.

Question & Answers About Selling Real Estate

A Timeline for Your Summer Move

Part 1 of 5

Your best bet for a move that goes smoothly is to plan for it.

If you're one of the millions of Americans who have picked the summer months to move into a new home, you might see stress in your future.

But if you're organized, you can minimize the impact moving has on your family. Moving.com has created a timeline with useful tips on how families on the move can quickly get prepared for a seamless transition to their next home.

Moving Timeline and Tips for Summer Moves

4 weeks from move date:

Get organized and start notifying the right people and companies that you'll be moving soon and give them a date to forward or terminate service. Start looking for licensed and professional moving companies, moving guides and relevant coupons.

Tip: If you're using a professional mover, get quotes from multiple moving companies to get the best deal that is right for you and your needs. Ask plenty of questions, like whether or not they give binding quotes and what kind of insurance is included. Be sure to talk with them about the different options available with full-service moves such as packing and unpacking services and providing boxes and packing supplies.

Tip: Important documents such as your child's school records may need to be accessible during your transition. Make sure to put these items aside and make copies of any records for yourself, in case you forget what box they're packed in.

Tip: Use the free Moving.com Address Changer service to save time and to ensure you've covered all the ground necessary to better ensure your move is seamless. Fill out change of address forms for creditors, doctors and personal providers. Schedule account closings for trash removal, gardeners, pest control, etc., and transfer utilities or other services that'll go with you.
