FISHING

The Best Bass Fishing Lakes

By Amanda Monthei

For a summer morning, conditions really couldn't be more perfect for being on the water, which is flat and golden under the freshly risen sun. The temperature isn't overwhelmingly warm yet, like it will be in just a few hours as recreational boaters take to the water to relax and cool off. But before most are even awake, silhouettes of fishing boats and their crews dot the horizon, black against the bright rising sun.

Mornings like this are few and far between, much like the species these fisherman hope to get a sample of — out here before the campgrounds and cottages have a chance to wake up, trolling bays and drop offs for the ultimate up-north catch — smallmouth bass. Nesting in beds of seaweed below the glass-like surface, feeding on crayfish, small insects and the fry of other fish species, smallmouth make for a large and growing fishing industry in the northern region of the Lower Peninsula, and for good reason.

Among other area lakes landing in Bassmaster Magazine's top 100 bass fisheries in the country, Burt Lake was given 36th — the best position of any local inland lake. Grand Traverse Bay, however, took 9th to top the list for Michigan destinations.

"What matter is that climate and water temperature are in the bass range," Fisheries biologist Neal Godby, of the Northern Lake Huron Management unit. "It's really in their preference zone in these lakes, but what really sets them apart are water temperature and the gravel and sand swept shallow areas for spawning.

"Burt Lake has an abundance of those areas obviously, which is ideal for smallmouth habitat and spawning."

While other Michigan lakes may have more plentiful populations of smallmouth, Burt Lake is known more as a quality-over-quantity bass destination. Still, a good day on the water could afford 10-20 good sized — some pushing six pounds, even — smallmouth.

"We've heard nothing but good news about the smallmouth in there, you get quality fish and decent numbers as well," Godby said.

Nearby Mullett Lake, located just east of Burt Lake near Indian River, was ranked 46th in the same list. This was the first year Burt Lake was included on the list, despite its ongoing popularity amongst bass fisherman and tournament circuits. Still, for two lakes in a 10-mile radius to receive such a distinction just reinforces what most in the region already knew — Northern Michigan is somewhat of a bass Mecca in the Midwest.

"Bass fishing in recent years has increased in popularity and people are discovering the great bass fisheries and becoming more aware of them," Godby said. "But they've had good smallmouth for quite a while in there."

Godby and other biologists point to sharp drop-offs, weedy bays and sand/gravel shallows for Burt and Mullett Lake's large bass populations. Crayfish also make them ideal for hungry smallies.

Among other northern Michigan locations that made it on Bassmaster's top-100 list, Lake Charlevoix and Grand Traverse Bay each landed spots. As mentioned prior, Grand Traverse Bay took the 9th spot, finishing just behind Sturgeon Bay on the Wisconsin side of Lake Michigan. Lake Charlevoix took 82nd to round out northern Michigan's appearances on the list.

Drs. Oz and Roizen

Television's Dr. Oz and Cleveland Clinic's Dr. Roizen report on health, wellness and quality of life.

EFFECTIVE WAYS TO BEAT DIABETES

MICHAEL ROIZEN, M.D., AND MEHMET OZ, M.D.

Standard diabetes prevention advice (lose weight, exercise, eat better) is not getting through to – or even worse, is letting down – millions of North Americans! The proof is in shocking new statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention: 29 million Americans now have Type 2 diabetes, and 86 million more have prediabetes, a 10 percent jump in just two years.

That means more than 1 in every 11 Americans has Type 2 diabetes and is at increased risk for heart attack, strokes, vision loss, nerve damage, kidney failure, even amputation of toes, feet or legs, along with higher odds for depression, dental trouble, pregnancy complications and high vulnerability to the flu and pneumonia.

The 1 in 3 Americans with prediabetes face huge health risks, too: Having elevated blood sugar levels AT ALL ups the chance for a heart attack or stroke, cognitive problems, depression and sexual problems. Plus, within three years, 15 percent to 30 percent of people with prediabetes will develop full-blown Type 2.

In the 1970s, about 4 million Americans had Type 2 diabetes. While the number of those with Type 1 diabetes (caused by an autoimmune attack that stops the body's production of insulin) has grown slightly, the prevalence of Type 2 – caused by inactivity, being overweight, unhealthy food choices and perhaps a genetic predisposition – has soared. YOU can turn this epidemic around by taking steps that will make your diabetes-stopping habits stick. Here are four "betcha didn't think of these" obstacles that may be what's keeping you from effectively applying the standard advice of "move more, eat better, lose weight."

Stress pumps up blood sugar. Learn to chill. Stress increases your blood sugar by switching on your body's "fight or flight" response and by making you reach for foods that widen your waistline (a diabetes risk) and mute your body's ability to use blood sugar. You can tame tension by getting plenty of sleep, learning a relaxation technique that works for you (deep breathing, meditation, progressive muscle relaxation) and making time for friends and family.

Overcrowded days make healthy choices difficult. Do what you can.

Discouraged because you can't fit in a half-hour walk today? Don't be. Grab a 10-minute walk at lunchtime. No time to meditate before you rush off to a morning meeting? Use that 15-minute wait before your boss shows up to do a short, relaxing breathing exercise. Gotta feed the family fast before another hectic evening of activities and homework? Hit the supermarket salad bar instead of the fast-food drive-thru.

Unhealthy food choices follow you through your day. Make over your whole food environment.

Start at home by banishing the Five Food Felons – trans and saturated fats, added sugars and syrups and refined grains. Replace those villains (all of which mess with healthy blood sugar levels) with 100 percent whole grains; good fats found in nuts, avocados and olive and canola oils; fruit; vegetables, especially leafy greens; and salmon or ocean trout. These good foods contain fiber, mono- and polyunsaturated fats, vitamins, minerals and other nutrients that help regulate blood sugar and reduce the body-wide damage that diabetes and prediabetes can wreak.

Don't stop there. Pack healthy lunches for yourself and your kids. And keep healthy snacks on hand at work and in the car. We love baby carrots, a handful of nuts or a juicy piece of sun-ripened fruit, along with water or herbal tea.

Don't go it alone! Working with a diet and/or exercise buddy is a proven to help you get better results.

Sign up for diabetes education classes in your community. Got prediabetes? Check out the diabetes prevention programs (www.cdc.gov has lists) offered by YMCAs, hospitals, community centers and houses of worship.

Using the Glycemic Index to Treat Diabetes

By Deb Hagen-Foley

Limiting carbohydrates has been a popular approach to dieting. The carbohydrates in food raise blood sugar and increase hunger more quickly. Not all carbohydrates are created equal, however. The glycemic index (GI) ranks carbohydrates according to how quickly a 50-gram serving of the food raises blood sugar. Foods are ranked on a scale from 0 to 100. Foods with a higher GI are digested quickly and absorbed, leading to increased blood sugar levels. Lower GI foods are digested slowly and do not significantly impact blood sugar levels. Low GI diets are effective in improving glucose and lipid levels and reducing insulin levels and insulin resistance in persons with diabetes. Low GI foods help control appetite and delay hunger and can be effective in weight control.

At the highest end of the glycemic index, a ranking of 100 is given to the blood sugar impact of eating pure glucose. The glycemic load of other foods is established based on this benchmark. Most foods have a glycemic index range rather than a single score to reflect variations in foods and in how different people react to a specific food. The glycemic index range and average GI offer a guideline for how an average person might react to a single serving of a given food. Getting the glycemic load of a specific food on a specific person would require blood testing the person after they eat

High Glycemic Foods = 70+ (STOP - Try to Avoid)
Moderate Glycemic Foods = 55-69 (Use with Caution)
Low Glycemic Foods = 0-54 (GO - Ideal to Consume)

Emphasize foods low on the glycemic index scale to reduce blood sugar and delay hunger. PHOTO FROM: NATURAL HEALTH ADVISORY the food. The glycemic index is a guideline of the potential blood sugar impact of foods.

Select lower GI alternatives to high GI carbohydrates and include lower GI foods in meals to effectively use the glycemic index. For instance, by using wholegrain bread rather than white bread, the glycemic impact of a sandwich is reduced. Instead of serving white potatoes, with a glycemic index in the high 80's, add sweet potatoes (GI = 61) or chickpeas (GI=34). Kidney beans or baked beans are other lower GI alternatives. Many popular snacks are higher GI foods: donuts (GI=78), pretzels, rice cakes, crackers. Some types of fresh fruit can support a lower-GI lifestyle. An apple has a GI of around 35; pineapple is a higher GI choice at 66. Low fat yogurt, nuts and seeds will impact blood sugar less than cookies or candy.

The glycemic index can be incorporated in a plant-based diet. Fruits, vegetables, legumes and grains have a lower glycemic load and will have less impact on blood sugar and insulin than high GI foods. Many non-starchy vegetables have not been tested for glycemic index since these foods contain so little carbohydrate that they would need to be ingested in huge quantities to have 50 grams of carbohydrate for the test.

For example, 20 cups of broccoli would be needed to reach 50 grams of carbohydrate. Many non-starchy vegetables can be eaten in unlimited quantities with little negative impact on blood sugar or insulin while increase a sense of fullness and eliminating hunger. Plant-based diets are an excellent option for persons with diabetes. If you have diabetes and are considering adopting a plant-based diet, ask your physician first. If your physician hesitates, ask that they do the research to discover the many sources, including insurance companies, recommending plant-based diets for persons with diabetes.

Power, efficiency and value are essential to maintaining powertrain leadership in today's new-vehicle market. Chrysler Group in 2015, Under the Hood: More Power, Greater Efficiency and Exceptional Value

Power, efficiency and value are essential to maintaining powertrain leadership in today's new-vehicle market. Chrysler Group checks all three boxes - with authority - for model-year 2015.

"From the dyno lab to the test track, we have been relentless," says Bob Lee, Vice President and Head of Engine, Powertrain and Electrified Propulsion Systems. "Our engineers don't just strive for excellence; they seek to redefine it by continually raising the bar."

This is evidenced by Chrysler Group's aggressive support for advanced powertrain development. It began as soon as the Company was established in 2009. Today, investment is approaching $2.5 billion - nearly half its total manufacturing outlay.

From model-year 2011 to the present, Chrysler Group has introduced 15 new transmissions, 18 new engines and the battery-electric drive system featured in the acclaimed Fiat 500e all-electric vehicle. The new supercharged 6.2-liter V-8 HEMI® Hellcat best symbolizes this march forward. Its 600-plus horsepower rating is unparalleled in the Company's matchless history of eight-cylinder prominence. The HEMI Hellcat, with 91 percent new content compared with the 392 HEMI, is the heart and soul of the 2015 Dodge Challenger SRT. It is, in a word, extreme.

But an extreme engine deserves an equally extreme transmission. Enter the newest member of Chrysler Group's celebrated TorqueFlite family of eight-speed automatic transmissions, the HP90. Its maximum engine-torque capacity is greater than any previously offered TorqueFlite. This is accomplished by adding pinion gears, one each in the 1st and 3rd gear sets, and five additional clutch disks, incorporated into 4 of the 5 clutch packs. Its ratio spread is an impressive 7.03.

"A wide ratio spread is one of the characteristics of all TorqueFlite transmissions," says Jeff Lux, Vice President and Head of Transmission Powertrain. "It enables superior fuel economy to benefit our customers and affords Chrysler Group a key competitive advantage."

The advanced-technology TorqueFlite eight-speed automatics - first of their kind ever made available to mainstream-brand customers - now are powering more than one million vehicles, worldwide. And their combined effect is staggering. Over their lifetimes, these vehicles are projected to save their owners more than 700 million gallons of fuel, compared with their predecessors that featured five- or six-speed automatics. That quantity of gasoline is worth approximately $2.5 billion at the pump, based on current fuel-price forecasts.

Model-year 2015 also marks the debut of two new applications of Engine Stop-Start (ESS) technology. Availability in the popular Jeep Cherokee is scheduled for third quarter. ESS arrives the following quarter in the all-new Chrysler 200. It will account for fuel-economy gains and CO2 reductions of up to three percent. The technology made its NAFTA-region debut in the Ram 1500 full-size pickup. ESS helps deliver a one-mpg city-cycle fuel-economy gain in the Ram, the most fuel-efficient truck in its segment.

Another milestone for model-year 2015 is the migration of Chrysler Group's innovative nine-speed automatic transmission to the all-new Chrysler 200 mid-size sedan, Jeep® Renegade small SUV and the Ram ProMaster City commercial van. With its unique 9.81 ratio spread, the nine-speed automatic delivers efficiency and refinement. In the all-new Chrysler 200, it contributes to a fuel-economy gain of up to 13 percent, compared with the model it replaces. Also new for model-year 2015, the Fiat 500L, 500 Turbo, Abarth and Abarth Cabrio will feature an available new six-speed automatic transmission.

A Timeline for Your Summer Move

Part 5 of 5

MOVING DAY AND BEYOND:

Take one last walk through and make sure nothing has been forgotten or overlooked. Also, make sure all doors and windows are locked and switches turned off, then you are on your way to your new house or apartment.

Tip: Go back to the photos you took when you began to pack up. Now you can show the movers or those helping you unpack exactly where everything goes with photos.

Tip: Unpack one room at a time according to basic needs starting with the kitchen and at least one bathroom...and don't forget to make a bed as early in the day as possible if you'll be sleeping in your home that evening! Remember, you don't have to unpack everything in one day, or even in one week.

Tip: After you've settled in a bit, introduce yourself to some neighbors, ask for advice on the best places to eat, grocery shop, etc. This way you will feel like part of the community and can get some great local tips.
