East Jordan girl experiences Hunt of a lifetime

Cheyenne Brown Selected for Buckmasters Life Hunt

ALABAMA — It was early January 2018, the second to last day of the hunt when a seven point buck along with some does came into range, Cheyenne Brown's guide asked her if she wanted to take a shot at the antlered deer and she declined, going on a feeling that something bigger and better was about to happen.

15 minutes passed and just as she suspected, something else happened to wander in. "I looked to my left and there was a giant 13 point walking in," Cheyenne said. "I'm starting to freak out (excited) because there really aren't any big deer like that around here (Northern Michigan)."

The group were situated in their deer blind, not set up for Cheyenne (who has cystic fibrosis) to take aim to her left, so they had to re-configure their seating arrangements quietly as the animal loomed a ways away. Once they all got situated, it was only a matter of seconds before she harvested the monster buck from 154 yards out with a clean shot.

This experience was made possible by Buckmasters. Founded in 1993, Buckmasters American Deer Foundation (BADF) Disabled Hunters Services was established in 1993 after a group decided the need for hunting opportunities among people with disabilities.

The group uses its combined resources to locate and organize opportunities for people with disabilities. As many hunts as possible are organized on public and private lands, as well as commercial outfitters. We also offer support at state and local levels through established Buckmasters chapters. These chapters raise funds and work together to meet the needs of challenged sportsmen in their communities.

"We watch Buckmasters on TV, and they do a life hunt every year, so we signed up, I got the call, saying they accepted me, so I was freaking out (excitement) and we drove down there and it was a lot of fun," Cheyenne recalled when asked about how this all came to be.

She noted that once they arrived in Alabama, they were introduced, outfitted and got right down business and headed for the woods. The Buckmasters group hosted 11 individuals, which included nine kids and two wounded warriors for the Life Hunt.

Each selected individual and received a complimentary package that included the hunt, merchandise, new jackets, pants, boots, goodie bags and autographed jerseys and other memorabilia from New York Yankee pitcher, David Robertson.

Cheyenne's dad, Jim noted that "Cheyenne and David became best buddies, they ate lunch and dinner together every day and somehow she managed to get an autographed baseball and glove from him as well."

Jim also raved about the hosts and how they went out of their way to make this experience something that none of the group would forget.

"They (Buckmasters) took care of our fuel, hotel, hunting clothing, all of our food, which was supplied by different groups each day."

He said the first day food was prepared by a Casino out of Mississippi and was excellent, Day two was sponsored by a Buckmasters chapter out of Louisiana and everything was cajun.

Day three was a Buckmasters group from Texas and everything was Texas BBQ, whereas the last day was a combined effort by all the groups.

"Just a fantastic group of people," Jim said. "They have over 900 volunteer hours over the three days, and everyone is so nice."

The property that the hunt takes place on is owned by the Jimmy Hinton family (approx. 12,500 acres) and they only allow 10 other hunters per year, in addition to the 11 Life Hunt participants and is by invitation only, and the free range property has over 8000 acres dedicated to the Life Hunt for these kids.

"They find out what disabilities the kids have, then build blinds to meet the kids needs," Jim added. "Everything is put up within a month of the hunt and all the structures are ground blinds."

"The people are absolutely phenomenal, Jackie Bushman is one of the nicest people you'll ever meet," he said. "Of course, Cheyenne had to be the last one in every hunt, (she's a hunter, she's not like the others) she didn't talk in the blind, the guides said she doesn't say anything, she sits there with her mouth shut, I don't know how that works."

“Then she found out that after she harvested her deer that down in Alabama, they could stand up and dance in those blinds and listen to music and it doesn’t even bother those deer. So she didn’t have to be quiet, but around here (Northern Michigan) that’s how we do it, we are quiet, we sit and we watch and wait.”

“There was one hunt that they didn’t have enough cameramen, and they asked me to do it,” Jim said. “But she wouldn’t let me go with her.”

When asked about the experience, Cheyenne replied; “It was pretty awesome.” She then rated her overall experience on scale of 1-10, giving it a 12.

“My brother James said I couldn’t come home unless I got something bigger than he has in the past,” Cheyenne noted. “As soon as we got back to the room, we sent him a message saying that I was coming home and sent him a photo of my deer.”

The buck Cheyenne harvested was estimated to be 7 ½ years old and scored at 164 inches.

Some of the sponsors for the event were: Buckmasters, Wildgame Innovations, Alabama Conservation Officers Core, Academy Sports, Realtree and the Hinton Family.

Cheyenne’s buck is being mounted by a taxidermist in Alabama, while another business in Louisiana did all the skinning and tanning of the hides, and the meat was to be processed and donated to needy families in Alabama, with everything being done by volunteers.

She will receive her mount in September of this year at the Buckmasters chapter in Iron Mountain, MI.

“Any kids that have a life limiting illness, the Buckmaster website has an application for the hunt.” Jim said. “This happened to be the Life Hunt, the Buckmasters chapters all over the county take approximately 500 kids a year on other hunting experiences. I would encourage anyone that has a kid with an illness to just fill out the application, what an incredible experience.”

The hunt is scheduled to air on TV in July. For more information on this incredible experience, please visit the Buckmasters website at: www.buckmasters.com

Northern Michigan Outdoors Troll 2: The Sensational and Slippery Sequel

Awhile back I published a piece highlighting a fun-filled and snowy Saturday spent experiencing pond hockey, ice fishing, and dog sledding in the Upper Peninsula. This second installment of a Lower Peninsula troll's adventures will focus on places further above the Mighty Mac. Those destinations included Michigan's largest waterfall and the Lake Superior shoreline.

I was travelling with friend Patty Gold who spends much of her year in New Mexico. So the U.P. is really unexplored territory for her and she was excited to experience it. Here are the highlights from our top two stops:

Tahquamenon Tales: We ventured to the Tahquamenon Falls area under a robin's egg blue sky and above freezing temperatures. Both the upper and lower falls are contained in the Tahquamenon Falls State Park. The lower falls are a lovely series of cascades viewed after a 20 minute hike. The trek to the upper falls is the easier of the two at about a third of a mile. The views of the upper falls were exceptional including lots of interesting ice formations. The 90-something step decent to the brink is well worth the cardiovascular workout. A bonus of the upper falls area is that it features a rustically decorated brewery, restaurant, and souvenir shops.

Most Michiganders know that the brownish hue to the Tahquamenon River is caused by tannic acid created by decomposing vegetation from the cedar, hemlock, and spruce forests in the drainage basin. Despite the brown color the river offers excellent angling for trout, small-mouth bass, and walleye.

Tahquamenon Falls State Park is located at 41382 West M-123 and boasts more than 40 miles of hiking trails, 24 miles of the Tahquamenon River, and 13 inland lakes in its nearly 20,000 acres of natural splendor. Visit www.michigandnr.com/parks or phone (906) 492-3415 for more info on your terrific Tahquamenon trip.

Ice Climbing Capades: Ever since reading about it last winter I've wanted to get up to the U.P. to do some ice climbing. That's using rock climbing gear and techniques to scale ice formations including many that are actually frozen waterfalls. The venues are in some of the most picturesque areas of the Upper Peninsula including Munising's Pictured Rocks National Lakeshore. The ice formations come in all shapes, sizes, and even colors and range from about 10 meters all the way up to over 70 meters. Yep, that's climbing up an ice face that's 3/4ths the length of a football field straight toward the heavens!

The ice formations have alluring and descriptive names like No Boundaries, Sweet Mother Moses, Giddy Up, and Hi Ho Silver. I ran into Chicago couple Lucy Nicol and Kevin Lintz while scaling No Boundaries. Lucy explained they have been

"hooked" on ice climbing since attending the festival last year. She said, "It's just a unique and incredibly beautiful way to experience the Pictured Rocks Lakeshore in the winter. I hope more people give it a try because there's something for everyone of all abilities up here!"

The Upper has become a go-to place for ice climbing enthusiasts. Every winter Munising hosts the quintessential ice climbing event in the Midwest called the Michigan Ice Fest. Courageous climbers from all over the world come to the festival to learn from each other and share the exhilarating experience.

I absolutely can't wait to attend the ice festival next year. The seminars have something to offer for beginners and experts alike. The best place to get current ice conditions, plan your climb, or hire a guide is Downwind Sports in Houghton or Marquette. Give them a jingle at (906) 226-7112 or visit downwindsports.com for a landslide of information on the exhilarating activity. They also have an excellent climbing guide with photos and dimensions of many notable formations.

To close out the day we stopped at The Jolly Inn on highway M-77 in a burg strangely named Germfask. The place had plenty to offer including a great burger, super songs on the juke box, colorful local characters, and the NCAA tourney on the telly (I decided not to travel back there to watch my Wolverines play because the game we watched was the Spartans perplexing loss on that unfortunate Sunday).
