Sheriff George Lasater says several persons have been arrested and several more probably will be. He says some of the loot recovered had been sold; some given away; and some stashed in the homes of the suspected thieves. All of it was still in Charlevoix County. Among the merchandise are skis, jackets, ski boots, etc., from Boyne Mountain, and an aviation radio.

DNR abandons planting Atlantics in Boyne River

BOYNE CITY - After 5 years, the Atlantic salmon will no longer be planted in the Boyne River by the State Department of Natural Resources.

The DNR had planted 80,000 of the Atlantics in the first attempt to establish the prized sport fish in North America. Now the DNR will try the Little Manistee and the Pere Marquette Rivers instead. Officials are not yet sure whether tight restrictions on fishing in the river will be continued.

In an effort to protect the Atlantic salmon on their spawning runs, the DNR had restricted the river to fly fishing from June through September. All catches had to be released.

These restrictions were unpopular with many Boyne City fishermen, however, and some of them protested by gathering signatures on petitions, which they presented to State Sen. Bob Davis.

Boyne City resident Woody Hartlep organized the petition drive. "I don't want to ruin their program, but it will never happen in the Boyne River," he said.

"The stupid people in the DNR allowed too many dams to be built on the river, and that made it too warm. Since they did that, we do not have a brown trout or a speckled trout in the entire river. Seven years ago, we did. They've wrecked the river."

"The DNR should stop interfering with the lives of people in Boyne City. They have stopped all the kids from fishing in the river and now there's no place safe where they can fish."

The Atlantic salmon plantings were ended because the fish failed to reproduce. DNR officials had hoped they could make the program self-sustaining by taking eggs from the fish and rearing them in hatcheries.

But in 1974, the first year the adult fish made their spawning run, only male Atlantics were captured just below Kircher's Dam.

In 1975, females were taken, but all were sick. They had red spots or open sores on their sides and heads. The fish became lethargic and some died.

Spawn was taken from 12 of the fish, but after being fertilized in a hatchery, the eggs did not live.

In 1976, Atlantics were observed in the river, but did not make spawning runs upstream.

Apparently the Boyne River is too warm for the Atlantics, which are cold water fish. The summer of 1976 was also the driest in 21 years, making water levels in the river much lower than normal.

DNR fisheries biologist Steve Swan of Gaylord, who administered the salmon program here, is not sure whether the fishing restrictions in the river will be continued.

"I would guess the special regulations would be lifted," he said. But he pointed out that the Atlantics will be returning to the Boyne for 2 or 3 more years. "And if they lift the regulations, that will pretty much clean them out of the river."

Lloyd Frankenberger of the DNR's state fisheries department, said fisheries chief Dave Borgeson would make the decision about lifting the restrictions. But Borgeson is on vacation this week.

Frankenberger said he assumed, however, that the restrictions would continue.

"I would think we will still be looking closely at the returning runs to see how they do," he said, noting that a new strain of salmon would be making its first run this fall.

This strain, called gulspang, was imported from Sweden because it is a freshwater fish. Previous plants were salmon which lived in saltwater.

EJ school ok'd by a landslide

EAST JORDAN - After 10 years of trying, voters here overwhelmingly passed a bond issue last Thursday to build a new high school and to add on to the middle and elementary schools.

School Supt. Mel Rullman called it a "mental moonshot" for everyone associated with the school.

More than 40% of the school district's 3,184 registered voters turned out to pass the $3.1-million proposal by a margin of 951-319.

"Yeah," said Rullman, "I was very surprised at that margin. I was pretty sure it would pass, but I don't think anybody really guessed it would pass by that much."

"Well, I take that back," he said. "Bill Grauel came in after the vote was announced and said he thought it was going to be a 5 to 1 margin -- but he might have been kidding."

School board member Bruce Malpass was also elected. "I wonder when the last time that a bond issue for 7 mills passed by this much," he said.

Rullman spent much of the day after the election meeting with architect John Jensen of Mt. Pleasant. They discussed what could be done now to speed up the sale of bonds and the beginning of construction.

"We're going to try to push this thing right along," Rullman said. "We hope the Municipal Finance Commission can give us some type of priority in approving the sale of the bonds, rather than putting us on the bottom of the pile."

He said it could take 3 to 4 months to get approval to sell bonds.

"We want to get construction started as soon as possible," he said. "I hope this can be our last year on double sessions, but that means we have to get the walls up and the roof on before cold weather comes. Then they can work inside during the winter."

While school officials and citizens are waiting for approval to sell bonds, they'll be working on plans for the new high school building.

"I would guess," Rullman said, "that the board would appoint an advisory committee to make recommendations on the type of school we should have."

Such a committee would probably include teachers, citizens, administrators and board members, he said. The group would visit other recently constructed schools and tell the board what they like about each one.

"Anybody who has a particular idea or request for the new school, the board would like to have their suggestions, because they want a school that reflects what the people of East Jordan want," Rullman said.

School petitions due Monday

People who want to run for their local school boards must turn in a petition by 4 p.m. Monday in order to get their names included on the June 13 election ballots.

As of this Tuesday morning only 4 petitions had been turned in for 21 openings in the county. Others are reportedly circulating petitions, however.

To get your name on the ballot, you must turn in a petition with at least 20 signatures by Monday. Petitions are available in the superintendent's office of all area schools.

This year's election is especially important in Boyne City and East Jordan, because all 7 board positions will be up for election.

Elsewhere in the county, 2 positions will be up for election in both Charlevoix and Boyne Falls.

There are also 3 positions open on the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate school board. These petitions require 116 signatures, but they are not due until April 25.

All 7 spots on the Boyne City and East Jordan board will be up for grabs because the present board members were appointed, rather than elected, after the Twin Valley demerger was approved in January.

So that future elections will be staggered, the 7 board positions now available will be split into terms of one, 2, 3, and 4 years.

Each candidate must choose which term he will seek. The top 2 vote-getters will be elected among those seeking 2, 3, and 4 year terms, while the top single vote-getter will be elected among those seeking the one year term.

BOYNE CITY

Incumbent board member Shirley Crozier has filed for a 4-year term, while fellow board member Bill Chipman is seeking a 3-year term. Newcomer David Williamson has filed for a 3-year term.

Other incumbents are Howard Bray, Bob Reidel, Tom Neumann, Terry Carr and George Shiotelis. Reidel has said he is not running, Bray is undecided, and the others say they will run again.

The superintendent's office will be open from 9 to 4 this week, except on Good Friday, when it will be closed at noon.

EAST JORDAN

Perhaps many potential board candidates were waiting for the results of last Thursday's building proposal, but no one has filed a petition for the East Jordan board yet.

The incumbents are Ann Hite, Mary Jason, Dick Noiro, Bruce Malpass, John Buick, Jack Zoulek and Elwyn Smith.

The superintendent's office, located at the corner of Mill and Bowen Streets, will be open all day Wednesday and from 9 to 12 on Friday. Supt. Mel Rullman says anyone who wants a petition can also call him at home.

BOYNE FALLS

Incumbents Erma Grobaski and Ralph Towne have both indicated they will not run for re-election.

One position is a 4-year term and the other is for 2 years. No petitions have been turned in yet. The school office will be open from 8 to 4 daily, but will close at noon on Good Friday.

CHARLEVOIX

Incumbent Max Novak has turned in the only petition. The other 4-year term up for election is now held by Bob Cook.

CHAR-EM

No petitions have yet been turned in, but they are not due for the intermediate district until April 25. Incumbents Clayton Healey, Maurice Taylor and William Grimm have all taken out petitions.

CB radios: used for more than "Smokey" reports

BY JIM BAUMANN

EAST JORDAN - The first people to find out the vote totals in last week's school election were those listening to Channel 1 on their CB radios.

In fact, the first people to find out about most "spot news" happenings are those tuned in to their CB's. Channel 1 is East Jordan's own exclusive news medium.

It's also a great way to get in on a "round robin" discussion of current events or to get help if you're stuck in a snowbank.

Area resident Skip Osborne was so enthused about all these good ways to use CB radio that he decided to offer a 4-week Community Education class on the subject.

You might even call Osborne a fanatic. Back in January, he sat by his CB for a few days and wrote down every "handle" he heard. His grand total came to 227. He even determined which ones came from the same "base," and found there were 77 bases.

Then Osborne, whose handle is Careless Navigator, typed up a list of all the names -- from Twinkletoes to Thunderbutt. He'll be glad to give you a copy.

Osborne is a great advocate of the usefulness of CB's.

He tells about "round robin" discussions where East Jordan area residents talk about all kinds of topical issues -- schools, Carter vs. Ford, the bottle bill.

"Technically, they're against the law, because the channel is being tied up for more than 5 minutes. But they're really good for getting the community involved," Osborne said.

"He thinks these round robin conversations help keep people from watching too much television and maybe even keeps them out of bars."

They are great for elderly people who can't get out of their houses, and CB's are an invaluable aid to farmers and stranded motorists.

"I think we almost put one wrecker out of business this winter," Osborne said. "One night we had 5 4-wheel drives and a jeep out to help a guy less than a minute after he got stuck."

In his class, Osborne talked about installation and operation of radios, FCC rules and regulations, but he emphasized courtesy and responsibility.

He figured that by getting the most avid CB'ers together to talk about courtesy, it would help avoid problems.

"Basically, good CB'ing catches on," Osborne said. "It should. But bad habits are picked up too."

What courtesy boils down to, he says, is that 2 people can't talk at the same time on a CB. Establishing rules for good manners can usually eliminate problems.

And when someone breaks the rules, "You can usually get a lot further with them by being polite, rather than being mean or sarcastic," Osborne emphasizes.

A basic rule of thumb is to limit conversations to 5 minutes at a time, so you don't tie up the channel. When someone asks for a break, let them use the channel -- it may be an emergency.

By brainstorming, the class came up with solutions to common problems like:

What if you know someone you want to talk to usually monitors a certain channel, but that channel is being used?

Solution: Say, "I'd like to break for a short message to so-and-so. Would you stand by?" Then ask so-and-so to go to another channel.

The class members talked about ways to handle other problems, such as drunks.

Drunks are a tough problem, Osborne said. "Their coordination is off. They talk with the mike off, and they can be obnoxious."

Here's how he once managed to get a drunk off the air: "I told him to go to channel 24 and I'd talk to him. That got rid of him for an hour, but it didn't work the second time." (Until January, all CB radios had only 21 channels.)

"I talk to 'em," said Mountain Man. "I find they generally don't last very long. Have 'em break for me if you get one."

Another problem is truckdrivers who broadcast that they're looking for a woman.

Turnkey, an East Jordan policeman, suggested: "Tell them to go straight up M-66 to Holy Island Road. Once they get in there with their semi, they'll never get out!"

Sometimes, children are a problem. Osborne's wife Panhandler told how 2 little ones were once on the channel for 2 1/2 hours. "I'd tell them that when someone breaks they should get off for awhile, but they'd go right on talking."

Several CB'ers told of hearing a 4-year-old falsely reporting a robbery on his family's CB. "That was scary for awhile," she said.

But most class members agreed that kids have a right to use CB's as long as they use proper etiquette.

"Some of them sound real good -- like a little truck driver," one woman laughed. "I just love to listen to this one little guy. He sounds like he's been doing it forever. The first time he said 'negatory,' I about fell out of my chair."

Osborne even offered some advice on buying a CB. "The average person buys wrong," he said. "He'll buy a mobile unit, probably because it's the cheapest."

"But most people around here have at the most a 10-minute drive to work, and that's the only time they can really use their toy."

"Then everybody gets out of work at the same time, and they're all trying to use their toys at the same time. A lot of it is just jibber-jabber -- 'Hi, how are ya, isn't this nice weather.' And you might sit and talk in your driveway for a few minutes before going in the house -- but then it just sits all night long."

Instead, Osborne recommends getting a desk-type base unit. "That way you can use it more, and the wife and kids can use it. And with a base unit, you can get a lot more power -- the key is the antenna."

By The Way

with Mike Ready

QUOTE ME - We journalists frequently are frustrated talking with people who constantly interject comments such as: "Well, off the record..." or "I'll tell you; but don't quote me on this..." or "Just between you and me..."

So it was refreshing this week to talk with Woody Hartlep, one of Boyne City's most renowned fishermen. He's upset about the DNR activities and restrictions on the Boyne River, and he doesn't care who knows exactly what he thinks.

"You can quote me on anything I said, because I'm an American," he told reporter Jim Baumann.

BETTER THAN MUSIC - Have you ever heard a sound that immediately transports you to another place?

Monday afternoon I called the Boyne City Public Library to ask Pat Lipaki how to spell the last name of Russian author Aleksandr Solzhenitzyn.

She set the phone down while she checked, and the only sound I heard was the deep tick-tock of the library's antique wall clock.

It really grabbed me. It was as if I were sitting alone at a table in the library.

SPEAKING OF ALEKSANDR - Gregg Smith won 10 cents from me by correctly spelling Solzhenitzyn. Jim Baumann missed by just one letter.

UNFOUNDED RUMOR - Word had spread in East Jordan that school Superintendent Mel Rullman was so happy with the passage of the building proposal that he called Karl Waldner to share the good news the minute he had received it.

Rumor had it that Waldner's response consisted of one syllable: "Pffftt!"

Rullman, however, says it's not true. He doesn't know how Karl reacted because he didn't call him.

LACKING PIGEONS - The old town clock may never work in its new location, suggests one of the men who helped set up the clock at the Northwestern State Bank, Boyne City.

The reason, he says, is that there are no pigeons at the bank, and he's never known a town clock to function properly without pigeons.

DISTANT PICK-UP - Despite the pleadings of her husband, Roger, Marian Jones of Boyne City couldn't stay awake any longer one night recently and finally went to bed.

Roger knew that their son, Dennis, was returning home for a few days leave from the Navy, but wanted Marian to be surprised.

After Marian had been in bed for a while, Roger woke her up to tell her he had just reached Dennis (DJ) on their CB radio.

"I told you sometimes you can get people real far away," Roger told his wife.

Marian heard Dennis' voice and excitedly spoke into the CB microphone: "DJ, where are you?"

Dennis answered that he was just outside the window looking in at her.

Different proposal

BOYNE CITY - Karl Waldner says that he'll try to get a building proposal on the June 13 ballot.

Michigan's school code allows for the addition of any issue "that can be lawfully voted upon by electors" if 5% of the registered voters in any school district file the proper petitions.

Although the code also requires the state board of education to approve any building proposal before it's placed on the ballot, Waldner says there's "nothing in the law that says we can't add a bonding proposal."

Waldner insists that if the petition project is started, "it will be by Citizens Information Service, not by Karl Waldner."

Council hears parking complaints

EAST JORDAN - Businessman Ed Tighe asked the city council Tuesday night to do something about the shortage of parking spaces in downtown East Jordan.

Tighe said one problem is that the posted 2-hour parking limit "is not being enforced at all." He suggested "good stiff penalties" be imposed on violators.

Mayor Jim Meredith said city police have tried to enforce the 2-hour limit, but with little success. "People just drive around the block, or park in another stall, or pay the $1 fine," he said.

"Did you ever think of getting parking meters?" Tighe asked.

"You just said a nasty, dirty work for East Jordan," said Councilman Harry Watson.

He said the city studied the possibility of installing parking meters a few years ago. "There are so few parking spaces in the city that the money we would take in on meters wouldn't even have paid for installing and maintaining them."

"The worst problem," Watson said, "is that a lot of people who own businesses park right in front of their stores."

Watson thinks the parking situation isn't really so bad, though. "If you're in Grand Rapids, you think nothing of parking your car and walking 6 blocks to a store. This is a small town. You can't walk 6 blocks in any direction without being out in the country."

City Supt. Dennis Stepke told Tighe that the planning and zoning commission is working on a master plan for the city which calls for about 35 off-street parking spaces in the central business district.

"We do recognize the problem, and we're trying to do something about it," he said.

Police committee chairman Frank Campbell said he would discuss the matter with Police Chief Joe Hammond.

Tourist Park rates hiked

EAST JORDAN - The city council approved substantial rate hikes for rent and utilities at the city-owned Tourist Park Tuesday.

Starting May 1, rent will be increased to $60 per lot. This represents 20 to 50% increase, over current rents, which vary from $40 to $50 per lot.

Utility rates were more than doubled to $30 per month. Old rates were $10 per month in the summer, and $15 in the winter for electricity, water and sewer service.

Winter storage fees for mobile homes will be increased from $15 per month to $30 per month.

Tourist Park committee chairman Gill Fox said the rates were increased so the park would pay its own expenses and so street and beach improvements can be made.

as proposed. (Details of the budget were printed in last week's Press.)

-Scheduled a public hearing for 7 p.m. Tuesday, April 19, to review plans for a proposed 24-unit apartment building. The project, called Jordan Hills Apartments, would be located on highway M-66 near Bridge Street. A developer from Lansing is asking that the property be rezoned from single-family residential to multi-family residential.

-Heard comments from 9 city residents during a public hearing on the city budget for the fiscal year which began April 1. The budget was later approved

G&W union contract expires; Vote planned

EAST JORDAN - The 350 union employees at Gulf and Western Stamping Company's East Jordan plant have scheduled a vote for Wednesday to decide whether they will accept a new 3-year contract.

The union's old contract expired last Thursday. Members of United Auto Workers Union Local 1503 voted to accept the contract by a slim margin last Friday, according to local president Glenda Jones of Central Lake.

But, she said, "There was a little dispute" after that vote was taken. "To make amends, we decided to vote again."

She would not comment on the nature of the dispute, but said she thought the contract would be accepted in the vote Wednesday.

Employees at the East Jordan plant have continued working in the meantime, however.

The 250 union members at Gulf and Western's sister plant in Mancelona voted to go on strike Friday by a 133-101 margin. No new contract talks have been scheduled.

The unions for the 2 plants hold their negotiating sessions together, but they vote separately.

However, if the East Jordan union approves its contract and the Mancelona union continues to strike, layoffs may eventually be forced in East Jordan.

The 2 plants are organized so that all stamping operations are done in the Mancelona plant, and assembly is done in East Jordan.

The plants make small parts such as parking brake controls and hood and door latches for the automotive industry.

It's our ball, Boyne; so let's carry it

Editor,
We would like to congratulate East Jordan on their successful school election... 3 to 1!

The voters should be especially congratulated for having the gumption and insight to follow up on their "improvement plan" right from demerger to construction!

It seems that from the time we began to think about settling in the Boyne City area, we heard much talk about the demerger of the Twin Valley District. When it actually passed, talk was positive. Voters were heard to say that, now, all school dollars would be used to fill the needs of their own local districts. East Jordan, your voters did just that!

On May 10, Boyne City will have its chance to complete its own "improvement plan". It has successfully launched the plan by approving the demerger bill with a 4 to 1 vote.

The building plan up for adoption in Boyne City will:

- Keep a promise, made in 1961, to build on to the high school;
- Relieve the "over-full" pressure on the present elementary school, prolonging the life of the building;
- House the middle school students in their own building. Eliminate the need for split shifts;
- And, most importantly, eliminate the need to return to the voters, after only 5 years, for more tax dollars when inflated money may buy less than it does presently.

Boyne City's proposed plan, which started with the demerger, can begin to be finalized with a positive vote this May. It's our ball, Boyne City, let's carry it. Fritz and Jackie Jordan

Isn't it a shame?

Editor,
Isn't it a shame to waste Boyne City public school district taxpayer/voter monies to insist on spending $6 million to duplicate existing classrooms?

A program to save, to create and remodel, and to equip what we already have would make more sense.

At less than one sixth the cost. It can be done June 13th.

When You're Ready

Francis T.

Mike Ready

Francis T. Ready, grandson of Irish immigrants, was born April 2, 1907, in a farmhouse in Carleton, about 30 miles southwest of Detroit. He was the third of 4 children born to Margaret Keegan Ready and William Ready.

In 1940, when he was 33, he married Lillian Becker in the log chapel at Notre Dame, the university from which he had taken a law degree in 1930.

They have had 4 sons: Thomas, John, Michael, and Timothy.

The elder 2 sons are lawyers, working with their father. The youngest is an anthropologist, pursuing a PhD from Michigan State. The third son is a journalist whose job includes the privilege of writing a column every week for a small-town newspaper 300 miles from his father's home.

Saturday, Francis T. celebrated his 70th birthday.

I'm not sure why, but 70 has always been a milestone in my mind. More than 65, or 80, or any other number, 70, to me, has always been the age at which a man turns old.

Seventy years is a long time. There's no getting around it. Most people don't live that long, even with today's medical magic.

Before I called to wish him happy birthday Saturday, I was afraid that dad would be depressed, pondering the loss of his youth. But he wasn't. He was celebrating.

He was joyous in his 70 years of excellent health; in his family; and in the life that he's living.

While he's always been positive, dad's never been one to sugar-coat life. He's taught all of us to face facts and be realistic.

Saturday, the facts were clear. To him, the reaching of the milestone was not something to bemoan. His 70 years were well worth celebrating.

Ever since I can remember, there have been 2 ways to look at just about everything: the gloomy way and dad's realistic way.

School could be a chore to be endured. But it also was a gateway to the excitement of knowledge.

Leaving home could be the loss of security. It could also be the beginning of independence.

Marriage could be the loss of independence. Yet it can also be the beginning of a new, richer, life.

A 70th birthday could be the loss of youth, and the end of summer. It can also be the celebration of life and the beginning of Autumn.

Dad has taught me that realism is not necessarily pessimism. You can face the facts and smile instead of frown. I hope I always remember that.

Why we chose elementary proposal

Editor,
We, the members of the board, have worked many long and hard hours to prepare a building proposal for voter approval. After many hours of discussion, it was felt that the only way to rid us of our problem of split days and overcrowding was to build. Instead of following the previous school boards' decisions, which all failed, it was decided to start fresh with new thought and rationale. What are our problems and how are they solved?

Many proposals were considered, and consequently were narrowed down to 3, which were submitted to the public through a telephone survey. As to a specific building program (high school, middle school or elementary school, other or none at all) the results were inconclusive. The board examined the proposals again in more details, and concluded that the elementary school proposal was the most sensible.

The board selected the elementary school proposal for the following reasons. The proposal:

1. Fits the needs of the community today, not yesterday.
2. Will fit the needs of all 3 schools and allows for adequate housing and future expansion. It expands the high school by additions to provide for more business education, a larger library, increased counseling area, a band room (the present one to become an arts room), additional shop space, and increased locker and storage facilities.

3. Places the smallest student body population in middle school, into the smallest building and site location. This will provide library, science rooms, art, home economics, music room, locker room facilities, a small shop addition and renovate the present elementary gymnasium.

4. Builds a new elementary school on a larger building site to accommodate the largest student population.

5. Separates students into 3 distinct schools; prevents overlapping and scheduling conflicts; allows 3 separate play, physical education and social education programs within the level of each school.

6. Allows for larger playground site for the elementary school.

7. Allows middle school to have its own gym, physical education program and locker room facilities.

8. Conserves energy by:

- a) closing in courtyard of high school, and decreases of the number of outside walls reducing heat loss.
- b) Eliminates all portables which have electric heat (most expensive form of energy today). All portables have 4 outside walls to heat. New building is designed to conform to new code to conserve energy and future costs.

9. Is the most practical building program for the least amount of the taxpayers dollars and houses the largest student body per dollar spent.

10. Eliminates split day sessions. These facts are presented to help you better understand the proposal.
Boyne City Board of Education
Tom Neumann, trustee

Now, no excuses

Editor,
The overwhelming support for a substantial building program shown by the East Jordan School District voters and taxpayers at Thursday's election was more than gratifying. Many people are going to have to tighten their belts and on occasion go without parts of their accustomed life style. They are to be commended and can all be very proud as many other communities now look upon them with envy.

As the post election jubilation goes on we cannot overlook the fact that now the voters in East Jordan have every right to expect an exemplary school system; one as good or better than anywhere in the north.

In exchange for their support they expect and demand a complete effort by school board members, administrators, teachers and students to guarantee results for the money being appropriated. Discipline, curriculum, maintenance, etc. all must be improved. Now there are no excuses.

Community involvement and concern for kids passed the bond issue - it is imperative that this continue so the end result can be achieved.
John Buick, President
East Jordan Board of Education

Thanks; we're proud

Editor,
The E.J.M.S. Student Council, on behalf of the student body thanks voters for their overwhelming approval of the school bond issue.

The new building will aid us greatly in our educational pursuits.

We are proud of our parents and friends for showing such respect and confidence in us. It is our goal to use the great advantage your sacrifices for us.

Student Council
East Jordan Middle School

I pledge to you . . .

Editor,
On the evening of March 31 something happened that changed the entire South Arm. The citizens of the East Jordan School District overwhelmingly supported the school building bonding issue by a 3 to 1 margin. As principal of your Middle School, I would like to express my deep appreciation for your support.

What has this event done to your school?

1. It has restored community faith to the staff.
2. It has united the student body to the staff and community.

3. It has renewed civic pride.
4. A new beginning of a new era of community enthusiasm.

At this time of jubilation, let us think anew, look anew and act anew as I pledge to you we will offer our young people the very best education possible.

For the first time, since its origin in 1974, we are going to have our very own building and we can hardly wait.
R.D. Shields
Middle School Principal

Terribly delighted

Editor,
We wish to thank voters for the tremendous educational opportunity they offered us as a result of Thursday's election. As members of the student body we can truly appreciate the support.

We are terribly delighted that you think enough of your offspring to grant them the facilities that were not available to students in the East Jordan community in years past.

East Jordan High School Student Council: Kelly Carpenter, president; Phyllis Hammond, treasurer; Melanie Turner, vice president; Donna Spence, secretary; Bob Snyder, advisor; Denise Ruhlman, Cindy Williamson, Jamie Burrows, Pam Dressel, Kim Barnett, Jerry Zoulek, Tom Zoulek.

As We See It . . .

Let's not cloud the issue

BY MIKE READY
I'm not worried about middle and high school kids using the same drinking fountains. I'm not convinced that it will lead to an epidemic of VD, as some people opposed to the construction of a middle school adjacent to the high school have suggested.

On the other hand, I'm not too concerned about students going into downtown businesses or (heavens) even into churches during their recesses, as people opposing use of the existing elementary school as a middle school suggest.

No new school is going to be built on the airport runway as some fear. And people who are concerned about the safety of children walking to and from school on M-75 should demand a new sidewalk from City Hall instead of worrying whether it's an elementary or a middle school student who gets hit by a car.

Personally, I'd like to see a new middle school, near, or even connecting to the Boyne City High School.

I'd also like a full size swimming pool, and an auditorium.

But none of these things are what we now have to consider in Boyne City. We have a board of education that should have, and did, consider all these things and much more. They came up with what they thought was the best possible proposal: a new elementary school. Now the question is simple: take it or leave it.

As school board veteran Bob Reidel says, some people will always want something different, no matter what they're offered.

The new elementary school proposal obviously is not everyone's first choice. But so what? It's construction should provide better education for students; better schedules for families; and a more appealing community for everyone living here or considering living here. And it does the job as cheaply as possible.

The building issue can be clouded forever if the community wills it. This proposal can go down like all predecessors and the next proposal, and the next, and the next. Each one of us can come up with good arguments against a new high school; against a new middle school; against a new elementary school; and against additions to existing buildings. We can argue over the location; the size and shape of the walls; and the middle name of the architect.

The results are the same; if enough people turn against any one of many arguable points, the proposal fails.

Let's not cloud this issue. The school board is giving us their best efforts. Look at the facts. Visit the classes. Do we need a new school or not? It's as simple as that.

Lunch meetings discourage public

BY JIM BAUMANN
The new open meetings law states that a public body must run its meetings in a way that will "encourage public expression and not discourage or prohibit it."

By continuing informal lunch meetings in restaurants, the Boyne City Commission is clearly violating both the letter and the intent of the law.

First of all, there should be no doubt that however "informal" these lunches are, they are definitely meetings. The new law says so.

It doesn't matter whether the commission is actually taking action. They are discussing public business, and there is a quorum present.

Attorney General Frank Kelley says that "A public body may not meet informally in advance of a public meeting to determine what will be decided formally at the public meeting."

This is exactly what the Boyne City Commission is doing.

And the way the informal lunch meetings are conducted, they do not in any way encourage public expression, as the law states they should.

The commission is discouraging public expression just by having these meetings in a restaurant.

First, an interested citizen would have to call city hall each week to find out where the meeting is being held. They jump around.

Second, an interested citizen would have to have a flexible job (or no job) to be able to go to an 11 a.m. meeting. (It's difficult for this newspaper to cover the meetings at this time, too. They are held on our weekly deadline day.

Third, a citizen would not only have to be interested, but also persistent, loud, and hungry to go to these meetings in a public restaurant.

What if the place is crowded and noisy? What if the visitor doesn't want to order food? What if a lot of people want to attend the meeting?

A restaurant is certainly not conducive to running a public meeting.

Some people would say: "What difference does it make, as long as the commission is doing a good job of running our city?"

I'd be the first to admit that it wouldn't make a big difference.

The city won't collapse if the commissioners continue discussing public business in private. And the number of townspeople going to meetings won't double if the commission suddenly starts having open meetings.

But the public image of city government would improve.

How can the commissioners expect townspeople to respect and obey their laws? The city itself is trying its darndest to circumvent a state law designed to open up the decision-making process.

The solution? If the commissioners feel they need more than one meeting a month to keep abreast of city business, then they should by all means schedule more meetings - - but at night in City Hall, not during the daytime in a restaurant.

Build a sidewalk to school

BY MIKE READY
For the first time since I began working in Boyne City nearly 6 years ago, I walked from the downtown area to the Boyne City High School this winter - - twice.

Like dozens of high school kids do every morning, I walked in the dark, close to the north shoulder of the road so I could see oncoming traffic.

The snowbanks were high, but there hadn't been any recent snowfalls. The streets weren't slippery. I was alone and was paying close attention to where I was walking.

It was still a shaky experience.

Most drivers buzzed along as if I didn't exist. The sight of my vulnerable body plodding along just a few feet away from their thousands of pounds of speeding steel didn't slow them down a bit.

"If one of these drivers fiddles with the radio, or a cigarette, or does anything else that could distract him for a few seconds, he could easily slip onto the shoulder of the road and send me to nirvana", I thought to myself.

I also thought about kids walking 2, 3, and 4 abreast on the same shoulder - - perhaps pushing and clowning as they walk.

I thought about narrower shoulders and icier roads in worse weather.

And I was sure that Boyne City ought to build, maintain, and plow a sidewalk to the school.

Voters may have turned the proposal down - - convincingly - - in a recent election.

But the building of a sidewalk should never have been put to a vote anyway. It should simply have been built.

At the risk of sounding like a proponent of despotism, I think the Boyne City Commission should simply realize the safety problem and solve it.

Shell out the $25,000, or whatever it takes. Thank the voters for their advice in the recent election, but act on their consciences instead, and build a sidewalk to the high school.

Hopefully, it may soon be needed by elementary school students as well.

These aren't the horse and buggy days. A pedestrian's greatest worry is no longer limited to stepping unwarily into a fresh pile of manure.

Cars and pedestrians can no longer share the same thoroughfare, particularly a busy one like M-75.

Some people argue that many students wouldn't use a sidewalk anyway. That may be. But it's no excuse for neglecting to provide the avenue of safety.

There have been many near accidents on that road. We shouldn't have to wait for one real accident to provide some basic safety.

Reading and buying books at the Boyne City Library

Solzhenitzyn, nyet; most read fiction

BY MIKE READY

BOYNE CITY - As Boyne City Public Librarian for the past 9 years, Janet Waldner probably is more familiar than anyone with the reading habits of local people. Together with assistant Pat Lipski, it's her job to decide which books to buy and which books to throw out of the 8,000 volume Boyne City Public Library.

Buying and replacing books is not a once a year task, she says. It's something that's happening constantly.

Keeping within the bounds of a $1,000 new book budget, she says she's constantly looking at new books - even when she goes to the grocery stores. She regularly pursues the best-seller lists and the publishers' lists.

"We purchase books when the need arises," she says. "Some months, there's nothing worth buying. It seems like a lot of new ones come out in the spring."

Getting rid of old books also is a constant job, Ms. Waldner says.

"When we're checking to see if our books are in order, we're also looking for books that are moth-eaten - ones that no one has checked out in a long time."

That doesn't mean that all old books are replaced with new books. It doesn't even mean that all old books people aren't checking out are removed.

One of the more interesting works in the library, Ms. Waldner says, is an old set of history books written by Teddy Roosevelt.

"They're amazing," she says. "He just made them up. They're not true."

In deciding what to buy and what to junk, Ms. Waldner has many other things to consider.

She doesn't buy textbooks; she expects the school library to provide those. (And she thinks the school library should be open at least one night a week to provide the public with better access.)

She says she tries to meet the needs of the community.

"Each community is different in its needs," she says. "Non-fiction reading has been increasing fantastically here, especially what I call social science books - like 'Compulsion,' books that deal with psychology and the supernatural."

"I think a lot of it has to do with the fact that more adults are going back to school. They seem to want more serious, non-fiction reading."

Television also has a lot to do with reader interest in recent years, Ms. Waldner says.

"Now, publishers send us lists telling us when each book novel is going to appear on TV, so we'll be prepared," she says. "That book on Charles Manson, for example, could have sat in the library for ages until the TV story came out."

"Now that Nancy Drew and the Hardy Boys are on TV, we can't keep those books in anymore."

(She notes that she read Nancy Drew when she was a girl; yet new Nancy Drew books are still coming out. "There can't be just one author," she says. "It must be a corporate author.")

She says TV is responsible for creating the longest waiting list the library has ever had for any book. Eight are on the list waiting to read Alex Haley's "Roots."

Besides increasing interest in reading in general, the adult education classes trigger interest in several specific topics, she says.

Since the first class, the library's book on belly dancing has been in constant circulation. She says books on crafts, including weaving and macrame, have been "very, very big."

Interest in other books is seasonal. Books on mushrooms and gardening are being taken off the shelves now. "How-to" books on making decorations are hot items beginning at Thanksgiving.

"Mysteries and westerns get very big during extended periods of bad weather," she says.

Ms. Waldner says she looks through almost every book before buying it. And she reads many of them first, including all fiction books.

"But you don't have to look through everything to know what's in it," she says, like encyclopedias, for example.

"And if Pear Buck puts out a book, you don't look at it. You just buy it."

She says she also relies on others to help choose books.

"I pick other people's brains. I ask people who knit, crochet, or whatever, what they would recommend in the way of good beginners' books. I also go to history teachers and ask them to recommend good books that lay people can understand."

She suspects that the "how-to" books might be more popular in Boyne City than in many other Michigan libraries, "because of economic necessity."

"People here have to do more things for themselves," she says. "They can't afford to call in a serviceman for everything that goes wrong. Consequently, books that deal with things such as small motors - fixing snowmobiles, automobiles, and roto-tillers are very popular."

She says interest is high in "physical sports" books, particularly football and basketball.

"Surprisingly, there is little interest in books on swimming here," she adds.

"Travel books do not move here like they probably do in Birmingham," she says. Solzhenitzyn, nyet. Two third of our books are fiction. That's where our biggest turn-over is."

"For example, I think Jacqueline Suzanne is a poor writer, from a literary standpoint. But if people ask for her books, I get them."

She says she can't, legally, exercise any censorship in purchasing books. But she does use what she calls "common sense."

"We aren't buying witchcraft books anymore," she says. "As fast as we could get them in, they were getting ripped off. We had 2 copies of 'Joy of Sex' and they got ripped off right away too."

Because the Boyne City Public Library is limited in budget to about $1,000 per year for new books; and because it's limited in space to about 8,000 total volumes, it obviously cannot provide the vast selection of books available at libraries in larger cities.

But these books still are available to local residents through an exchange arrangement called the "state library".

"One man wanted to research the Dead Sea Scrolls," Ms. Waldner says. "We got those books for him to use. Another man from a gun club wanted to make an authentic Civil War uniform. We didn't have any books that go into the detail he wanted, but we were able to borrow books that do. For another man we got a medical book from the University of Michigan library."

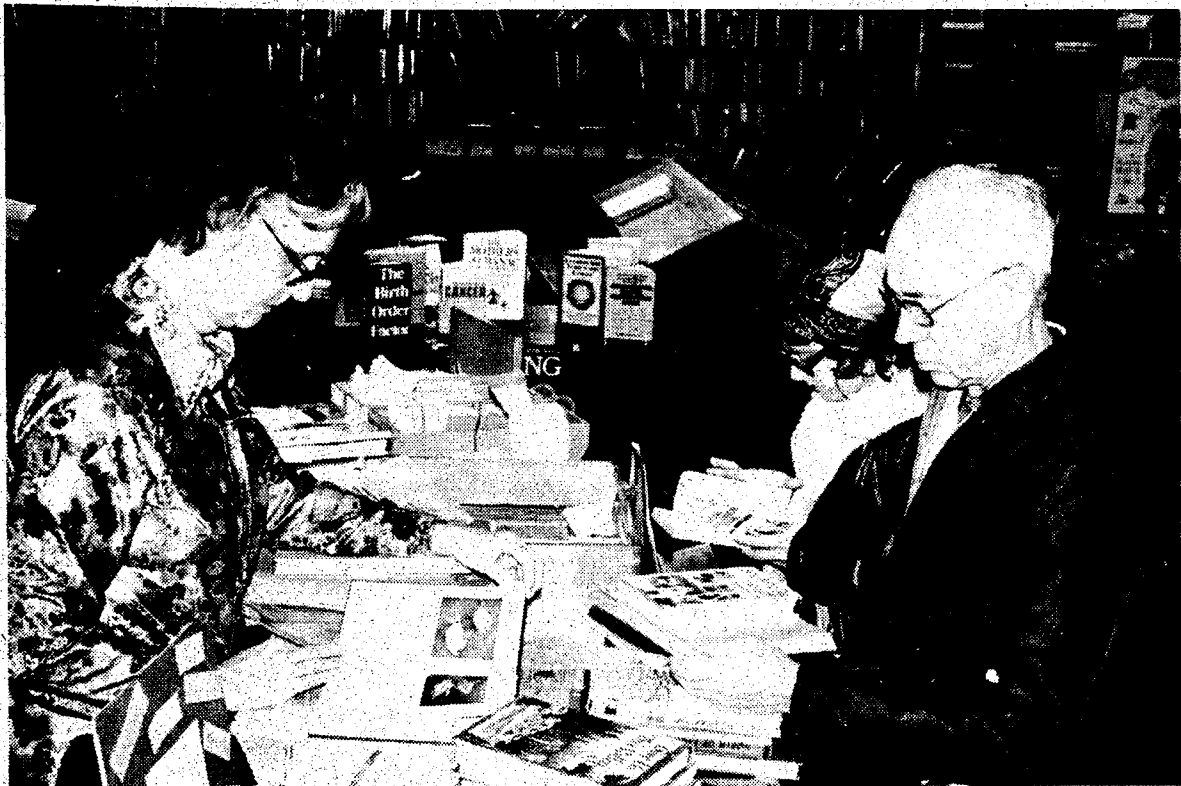

"These are books that we wouldn't buy because not enough people would use them. But now we have access to books in any library in the state."

Ms. Waldner indicates that she's rather proud that she bought the book "Roots" in December, long before it became popular.

"It's a game librarians play," she says, "trying to figure out what the best sellers will be before they actually are best sellers."

The most recent book she has purchased is called "Shanna". It's a historical romance written by Kathleen Woodiwiss.

"It's going to be a big one," predicts Ms. Waldner.

MANY GIFTS - Not all library books are purchased. Some are gifts. Last week this man donated what he described as "the tropical fish bible." "I got out of the tropical fish business some time ago," he told Boyne City Librarian Janet Waldner. "I thought you'd like this." Ms. Waldner says the library has been fortunate in that many people donate, particularly memorial books (new). They also have been given complete sets of older books, including a law library donated by Boyne City attorney Bob Klevorn.

The library

It's not a hi-brow place

Some people come into the library for research. Some come in looking for entertainment.

"And some come in just to get warm. What else is open in downtown Boyne City at night?" says librarian Janet Waldner.

Whatever the reason, an increasing number of people are checking out an increasing number of books from the Boyne City Public Library.

The one year total for book circulation in the Boyne City Public Library, ending March 1, 1973, was 11,780.

The total for the year ending March 1, 1975, was 12,451.

The yearly total as of March 1, 1977, was 14,325.

"I don't really know if more people are reading. But with the economic situation the way it is, I think more people are using the library rather than buying books," she suggests.

People of all ages come into the library daily, she says.

"We invite teachers to bring their classes to the library to teach kids how to use it," she says. "It's good for them and good for us."

The adult education program also is spurring interest. So is the right to read program. We have adults who are just learning to read coming in. Mothers come in with kids. I think we have a fantastic cross-section of people using this library. It's not a high-brow place."

Ms. Waldner says a great deal of a librarian's time should be spent helping people find what they want. She says many don't know how to look for books. And even those who do know, can often use help finding many things.

DISCIPLINE
Librarian Janet Waldner does not whisper. And she doesn't expect anyone else to. She does, however, demand that everyone in the library respect the rights of others.

"Sometimes I put kids out of here right and left," she says. "If I hear a kid swearing, I don't ask him to stop; I just say 'out.' I don't put up with it, and I've never had any bad problems with kids."

FLEXIBLE FINES
It's library policy that people with overdue books be assessed a 5 cents per day fine.

But, like most libraries, there are "grace periods" during which anyone can return a book without being fined. And there are other exceptions.

"I know kids who would get a beating if they had to pay a nickel fine," she says. "Obviously, in cases like that, I don't assess the fine. It's a flexible policy now. I'd like to do away with it all together. Some libraries have."

"As long as there are fines, there will be people who discover that they have overdue books, and big fines coming. They think 'my God', and they don't bring in the book."

"Well, we'd rather have the book."

How to encourage reading

"If parents want their children to read, they have to be readers themselves," says Boyne City Public Librarian Janet Waldner.

"If a child can see that you're interested in reading... If he comes up to you while you're reading a book, and you tell him to go away, you're busy... He's going to wonder what's so interesting. If he sees that you're interested in reading, he will be too."

Ms. Waldner says it's very unlikely that the children of non-reading parents will turn out to be readers. But it's not impossible. There are many things many people can do to encourage children to read.

The first is to read aloud to children. The younger they are, the better. Parents should do it at home; teachers should do it in school.

"I've noticed many times that when teachers are reading a chapter or 2 of a book to their students every day, there are always some kids who come in here to get the book. They can't wait."

She also suggests having kids read aloud.

"Parents should ask their children to read aloud to them," she says. "It's not only good for their reading; it gives them presence."

ANY READING BETTER THAN NO READING

Librarian Waldner has definite opinions on what's good and what's not so good in literature. But one of her main objectives, she says, is to promote reading.

"And any reading is better than no reading at all, in my opinion," she says. "Learning to read and to understand what you read is of primary importance. Once you can read, you can do a lot of things. If you can read a cook book, for instance, you can cook."

"I like kids to read a little bit of everything," she says. "Kids don't have to read only what adults say are 'good' books."

"If a kid, or an adult, will sit still just 15 minutes looking at a comic book, it sets a pattern of sitting - looking at words, and keeping his mind active. Maybe he'll never progress beyond that. But in most cases, readers naturally move on."

"I think you can turn people off by telling them what to read."

She says she doesn't think anyone can directly promote quality in reading, except by example, by providing a dictionary, and by making sure "good" books are available when people want to read them.

Ms. Waldner admits to some "guidance," on occasion.

"I'll have kids pick up books in the library that I don't think are suitable," she says. "They can be gory, violent, or include a lot of sex that won't mean anything to them. But even then, I won't come over and say 'no.' I try to lead them to other books, just using common sense."

"Your auto insurance should cover you even when you're not driving."

"It should cover you if you're hit by a motor vehicle."

"It should cover you while you're driving someone else's car."

"And cover your children while they're away at school."

"All without a limit on your yearly mileage. And all without costing you an arm and a leg for protection."

"That's why we recommend Auto-Owners Insurance to the people we serve."

Washington is considering some form of military draft including women as well as men. Would you favor this proposal?

Twenty five persons were called in a telephone survey with the above question asked. It's interesting to note that most of the yes votes came from young people whose life it could affect.

Where else can you be a railroad owner for $10

Editor,
Have you seen people walking around Boyne City wearing "Go Buy Rail" buttons? Are you curious? Did you know that last year, in their first season, the White Pine Line carried 10,000 passengers? Did you know that freight service is a viable possibility? Would you like to become a part of the Boyne Valley Railroad?

The directors are looking for investors from the community so that this will be a community project, bringing increased business to the area. The sale of stock will provide funds for future improvements, as well as day-to-day operating costs, and they are looking ahead toward expansion. Dividends to stockholders is not the primary goal at this time, although it is the long range objective. Annual audits and reports will be published to stockholders.

If this has piqued your curiosity, you can contact any member of the board of directors, all of whom are willing to talk to people personally at any time. Or you can come to the Depot Restaurant any Saturday afternoon between 2 and 6 p.m., where a prospectus can be obtained from one of the directors.

SPECIAL AWARD - The Boyne Area Chamber of Commerce gave special recognition to Gregg Smith at its annual dinner dance at Boyne Mountain Lodge last Thursday. Smith was president of the Chamber for 2 years and helped organize the Boyne City Treeification Committee.

Boyne City Chamber of Commerce Dinner

IN APPRECIATION - Master of Ceremonies Ron Erkfitz presents Secretary Gloria Anderson a plaque expressing the Chamber's appreciation for her work.

Down The Mainstream

Send it to me

Marshall Sayles

A man who looked honest enough, but talked like a politician, just informed me that the government is going to send me $50; and from an administration for which I did not vote.

In America they send me $50. In Russia they would have shot me.

The announcement caused no little confusion in this family. Shall we spend the $50 in East Jordan or Boyne City? Or perhaps fiddle it away on a couple of pounds of coffee?

Many people are wondering what to do with that $50. Pay this bill, pay that bill, put it into the bank under an assumed name, or mayhap rise to toast our father who art in Washington at the nearest pub?

Being a person with a long history of public service, I've worked out a way to relieve the agonizing mental stress of those wondering what to do with that $50. It's simple. Send it to me. Purchase a 13 cent stamp, borrow an old envelope and mail it to me. Do it before midnight so you won't forget.

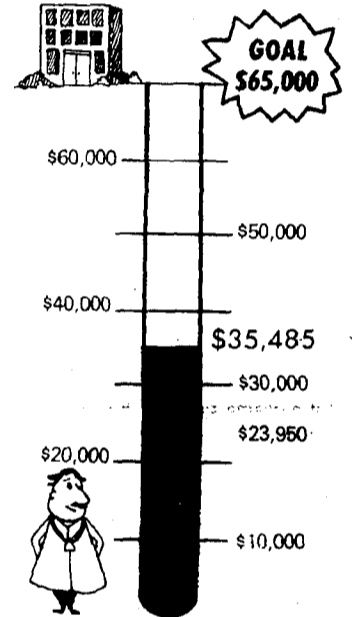

This will not only relieve the agony of indecision for thousands of people, but it will also put the post office back into business again.

No one can say that I do not have the public interest at heart.

BELLY DANCER Micki Smith made a surprise appearance at the Chamber dinner. After dancing some Middle Eastern folk dances, she got some volunteers from the audience to try a few steps.

Glen's Save-Share

This is one example of a non-profit group making use of the Save-Share Program to help raise funds. There are many more groups using it too and there will be a picture of one each week in this paper.

Glen's wants everyone in East Jordan to know about Save-Share and hopes more groups will use it to raise funds.

All a group has to do is register with the Store Manager or Asst. Manager and begin saving the green cash register tapes. Glen's will pay 1 percent of the total qualified amount of all tapes brought in to any registered group; and not just once, but each time a group brings in $25.00 worth of slips or more.

Women start league

BOYNE CITY - A group of women met last week and organized a new women's church softball league. The season will begin Monday, June 20, and all games will be played at Rotary Park and the Free Methodist Church. Any churches who would like to enter a team, or any individuals who would like to play are urged to call Pat Upton at 582-6235.

The league is planning a clinic to help players improve their playing techniques. A date will be announced later. The church league is also planning a bake sale at the Northwestern State Bank on May 6 to raise money for a well at Rotary Park. All contributions would be appreciated.

NEW OWNERS of Hugh's Lounge have renamed it the Now and Then Lounge. The owners are, from left, Dave, Doris and Don Smith, formerly of Clarkston.

Hugh's is sold

Now it's 'Now and Then Lounge'

BOYNE CITY - Don Smith, his wife Doris and son Dave have purchased Hugh's Lounge, which they have renamed the Now and Then Lounge, on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road.

The new owners have recently moved here from Clarkston. Don and Dave will run the lounge, while Doris will handle the book work.

Prior to coming here, Don worked as a sales supervisor for Budweiser beer, Dave was a student and bartender, and Doris worked in a bank.

The Smiths plan to experiment with different types of entertainment. Don played saxophone and was the leader of a 17-piece band in the Pontiac area before moving here.

"I'm kind of music-oriented, and I'd like to get more entertainment and more of a variety of entertainment," Don said. The Now and Then Lounge may feature one type of music during the week and another type of music on the weekend, he said.

"We've got a whole lot of ideas bouncing around in our heads right now. We'll just have to try some things and see how the public reacts."

"This place isn't designed for real loud music. I'd like to have music you can talk over - something that is appealing to a broad age group," Don said.

For now, hours of the lounge will stay the same -- from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m., 7 days a week.

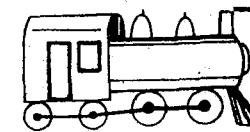

Prosecutor to speak at Forum

He also worked as an assistant to the Wayne County prosecutor from 1967-69, handling more than 100 felony trials.

Hayes is a 1965 graduate of Detroit School of Law. He received his bachelor's degree from the University of Notre Dame.

League plans barn dance for Rotary Park benefit

BOYNE CITY - The women's slow-pitch softball league will be sponsoring an old-fashioned barn dance and auction on Friday, April 22.

Money raised from the dance and auction will be given to the city to be used for digging a well at Rotary Park.

The well is needed to water the 2 softball fields at the park, and it would also be used for a proposed hockey rink.

The barn dance will feature the music of The Barnyard 4, beginning at 8:30 p.m. at the Boyne City American Legion Hall.

A square dance caller will also be on hand. Everyone is urged to wear old farm clothes. Admission is $1.

Jim Brannon is volunteering his services for an auction on the same night.

Softball league members, along with members of the men's church league and men's softball league, will be canvassing the community for donations to the auction. All financial proceeds from the auction will also be used for the Rotary Park well.
