

School millage narrowly loses

EAST JORDAN - Board of education members and administrators were disappointed by the defeat of the 2.8 millage increase request Monday, but are still confident that it can pass in another vote.

The millage went down by a small margin, 317 no votes and 287 yes votes, which represents approximately half of the 1,140 registered voters.

The defeat will cause some difficulties for the board. "It makes it hard to plan," board member Jack Zoulek says. "We don't know if we'll have the millage we have to have to fill three or four teaching vacancies. I don't know what we'll do now."

"There weren't enough people coming out to vote," Middle school principal Doug Shields says. "It was a very quiet election. I'm confident that it will go next time."

Others, though they were surprised by the defeat, felt that it is a part of a taxpayer revolt in the wake of Proposition 13 in California, which restricts local government's ability to increase assessments in order to collect more money and puts property assessments back to 1975 levels.

"Millage defeats have not been a pattern for East Jordan," Superintendent Mel Rullman says. "If it is a taxpayer revolt I would hope that they would vote on that kind of thing this fall when a proposition to that effect would be in front of the public on a statewide basis."

"If a taxpayer is revolting and saying 'enough, we want a different way of financing schools,' then a way of doing that is voting for a revision instead of knocking down an individual school system."

"Our hands are tied, we can only finance it the way the legislature has provided."

Rullman says he is very disappointed by the defeat, because it is really needed and was a minimal amount. "I think it can still go, though," he says. Some board members felt it was the voters' misunderstanding of the proposal. "I don't think they understand that the operational millage has to be renewed each year," board member Mary Jason says. "I was confident that it would pass and thought that people were really pleased with the new high school. I thought they understood the needs."

She says the board pared down requests to a realistic level. "We had done our homework and were asking for just the increase we needed in terms of utilities and personnel."

Board member Jack Zoulek says it is going to cost more to operate a new school. "That is basically what we were asking for. We did a lot of trimming getting a budget we could live with," he says. "I would like to ask 300 voters to tell me why they voted no."

"My personal opinion is that we need that money to operate a good educational system," he says. "If somebody can tell me how we can operate for less and still educate the kids I would be interested in hearing it."

Jason says that all the board can do now is try to inform the public and try the request again. "People grumble about taxes in general," she says, "but property taxes are the most viable. They don't realize the tremendous tax that is built right into the price of products such as cigarettes and gas."

She says that East Jordan has been very supportive of the needs that the community has for itself. "I can't believe the community is saying, 'hey, you have this beautiful new facility and we're not going to give this minimal amount.' I have more faith in the people than that."

All of them agree that there will be another vote, but they are not sure when.

"We need the money to finish the new high school and put the programs we think people want in there," Rullman says. "What we will do now will be discussed by the board."

Sportsman's gets a clean-up

EAST JORDAN - Even though the turnout was somewhat disappointing, volunteer workers accomplished a great deal toward cleaning up Sportsman's Park Saturday, June 10.

Thirteen adults and five children showed up with rakes, chainsaws and shovels to begin the clean-up procedure recommended by the Department of Natural Resources. When the clean-up is finished, several local groups hope the city will be able to obtain funding for restoration of the park area.

At 3 p.m., the tired crew was served barbecued chicken, cole slaw, and potato chips sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce.

"We got quite a lot done even if we didn't have a good turnout," Sportsman's Club member Keith Dressel said. "The clean-up is going to be something that takes time. There is a lot of labor involved."

Most of the dead trees were cut down and the brush piled, but old fencing still needs to be taken down, brush burned and high grass cut before raking and final clean-up can begin.

Chamber of Commerce member Freda Winter said that clean-up days are being planned for every Saturday morning up to the fourth of July, so that it will be cleaned for the Centennial celebration.

Both the chamber and the Sportsman's Club would like bigger turn-outs for the community project. "We had expected at least 100 people to show up," Winter said. "We had 200 brochures out about the clean-up day, radio coverage on three stations and news coverage. I'm sure many people had to work that day. But the park has such possibilities, with a town this size, it's a shame we don't have more people who are concerned."

For everyone who comes to work, the chamber provides a chicken barbecue at the end of the day. Work begins at 10 a.m.

Open river, say fishermen

EAST JORDAN - Two local fishermen have been circulating petitions to reopen for fishing an area of the Jordan River, beginning at the bridge in East Jordan and upriver one mile to within 100 to 200 yards of a weir which was installed by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) last year.

"To close fishing from 100 to 200 yards downriver from the weir would have been all right," said Bud Swan, one of the men circulating the petition. "But they (the DNR) didn't stop at that. They closed it all the way to the bridge." This closes a large area of what many fishermen claim is a prime fishing area.

"No one has contacted me about any of this," said Steve Swan, DNR fishing biologist. "They're premature in going this route. I'm willing to talk about opening the lower river near the bridge because the fish don't concentrate there."

The weir was used last year to harvest chinook salmon that go upriver to spawn.

One of the major reasons fishing was prohibited up to the bridge is because of the high number of chinook backed up. "We backed up about 6,000 chinook salmon last year," Swan says. "It has been our observation that wherever you do this legitimate sports fishery is not really able to continue."

With that number of fish in the river, some of the fishermen will begin snagging fish and even go after fish with guns and knives, Swan says. The DNR calls this "salmon fever."

"It's a minority of the fishermen that do this, but it seems to be contagious," he says. "We just don't have the man power to control them. We would need at least a two or three uniformed conservation officer force to enforce sports fishing under those conditions."

Another problem with snagging chinook is that many brown trout and steelhead are snagged at the same time while on their way upriver to spawn. "They are a valuable resource in the river," Swan says. "Even a died-in-the-wool snagger will understand and support a ban of snagging brown and steelhead."

Most of the property below the weir is privately owned, according to Swan. The large number of fish attract many fishermen, which would also cause a mass trespassing problem.

The weir was put in place for two reasons, Swan says. The upper river was closed to fishing after the end of trout season on September 30. Even though the area was closed, some fishermen would "blatantly" go after the fish.

"It's such a remote area that if we allow salmon to run up there, the outlaws would come out of the woodwork," Swan says.

The Jordan is approximately 30 miles long. "You could have 200 conservation officers and it still wouldn't be enough to enforce the laws."

Another problem may be competition for space for spawning gravel in the river between young chinook and young brook and brown trout, since they all spawn in the fall. That possibility is currently being studied, he says.

Swan points out that he can only make recommendations to DNR officials in Lansing, who make the final decision. "But then if the fishermen don't like the decision, that would be the time to start a petition," he said.

One of the major problems of reopening fishing in the area of the bridge is where to draw the line. "Someone will always want to go beyond it," Swan says. "The water in town is deep enough that even if a big school of salmon came through they probably would not be bothered."

Eating is for fun, says Fat Clarence

EAST JORDAN - Eating should be fun. That's what Clarence and Gail Weaver, new owners of Ken's Anchorage Restaurant think.

The Anchorage was owned by Ken and Myra Crawford for the past eight years. "People should be able to enjoy going out to eat," Weaver says. To help that philosophy along, he is keeping prices down as much as possible. "Nobody wants to look at a big bill after eating out."

Even the menu is "fun." You can choose from the usual restaurant fare, summer salads, or one of the dishes listed under "Fat Clarence's Favorites," such as a hot dog smothered in onions. Or you can try his wife's special chicken salad, which has been popular since they opened June 3.

Even the name of the restaurant is being changed to go along with the fun theme. Bruce Jansen, a Boyne City artist, is working on a large sign which will read "Fat Clarence's Calorie Factory."

"Fat Clarence is just for fun, too," says Weaver, who is 6 foot 1 inch tall and weighs 150 pounds. Beginning June 24, the Calorie Factory will be open from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m., seven days a week and will feature a complete dinner menu. Weaver says he is trying to keep the top price down to $5.95. Eventually, he may offer a salad bar.

The Weaver's are presently living in Boyne City, where Mrs. Weaver is a secretary at Bendix. She plans to leave that position soon to work in the restaurant.

Weaver has a degree in business from Wayne State University, but is new to the restaurant business. "We've been putting in some long hours, but I hope to cut that down once I get used to it," he says. He had just come in the restaurant after catching a few winks in the car.

"The Crawfords have been a tremendous help," he says. "We couldn't have done it without them. They deserve a lot of credit."

The Crawfords have made no definite plans yet, but plan to travel this summer with their children.

School gets new millage date

BY HAZEL BLAIR
EAST JORDAN - The Board of Education Tuesday night set August 14 as a tentative date for a special millage election to again attempt to raise the 2.8 mill increase they feel necessary to operate the new high school next year.

Several board members said people had been apologizing for not voting in Monday's election, thinking the millage would pass.

Larry Chanda, a visitor at the meeting, said many employees at Gulf and Western, where he works, had voted against the proposed increase because they had understood there would not be a need for additional millage after the building program was approved last year.

Athletic Director Larry Gee said his father had heard similar comments at East Jordan Iron Works. Superintendent Mel Rullman said this was a misinterpretation of statements made at the time.

"It's most unfortunate," Chanda said. "If these people would have come to more meetings, they would have seen what the board was striving for."

Joel Evans and incumbent Leon Bartlett won seats on the Board of Education in Monday's election. Bartlett will serve a two-year term and Evans four years.

Bartlett received 457 votes while his only opponent, Rich Lord, got 127. Evans was uncontested.

In other action Tuesday, the board agreed to ban motorized vehicles from school property, with the exception of school parking lots and maintenance vehicles. This was done on the recommendation of Bill Grimm of the U.S. soil conservation department in an effort to prevent further erosion to the Brown Creek area between the schools.

Home economist here

BOYNE CITY - If you're interested in healthy eating habits, how to cook with honey or planning economical meals, Debbie Neidhamer would like to talk to you.

Neidhamer is Charlevoix County's newly appointed home economist, an employee of Michigan State University's cooperative extension program, a state-wide effort to share the university's agricultural and consumerism knowledge with state residents.

"We're kind of the home economics teacher for the county," says the 23-year-old Boyne City native. "But it's more than that. It's developing family-type programming that people will find useful. We're into everything from air conditioning to the most efficient ways of doing laundry."

The new home economist said her duties will be largely determined by the needs of county residents. "If three or four people in a neighborhood wanted to form a co-op to buy food cheaper, we'd help them organize it."

In the past, Charlevoix County has shared a home economist with Antrim and Emmet Counties. But Neidhamer said that she was hired because program officials felt Charlevoix County needed its own person.

"They hired me because they needed somebody here," she said. "Charlevoix County doesn't really know what cooperative extension is all about."

Working out of an office in the Boyne City Post Office, the new home economist has already started a nutrition education program at senior citizen lunch centers.

Neidhamer hopes to convince all age groups to make better use of the food they buy. "I know people who'll buy a chuck roast and charcoal broil it to death, when they should have braised it or cooked it like a pot roast," she said. "And then they'll get bummed out at the store because their meat doesn't taste right."

Although the program is funded by the Comprehensive Employment Training Act, (CETA), it is administered by the university, which makes its resources available to the public through the home economists.

"Debbie isn't doing these things," Neidhamer says, "Michigan State University is doing them. Debbie is the means by which it's coming to the county, but I'm not walking encyclopedia."

Those interested in finding out more about the program can contact Debbie Neidhamer at 582-6232.

Slim competition for county commission seats

CHARLEVOIX - Nobody challenged the incumbents in 12 out of 15 county commission seats as the deadline to file nominating petitions passed Tuesday, June 6.

Incumbent Ralph C. Richardson of District 5 (Eveline and Wilson Townships) will be opposed by Chad McDonald, a newcomer to the political ring, both on the Republican ballot; Martin L. Paul, a Democratic incumbent of District 10 in Boyne City will be opposed by Cass Toton, chairman of the Republican party in the County and Democratic incumbent Oscar Ward of District 14, Charlevoix's second ward, will be opposed by Marianne Thomure, whom he defeated in 1974.

The names of the candidates will appear on the ballot in the August 8 Primary Election.

Boyne fights fireworks

BOYNE CITY - Beginning June 29 it will be illegal for anyone under age 18 to buy or explode fireworks in the city.

The City Commission last night unanimously approved an ordinance designed to cut down on the amount of fireworks that have been in the area since a federal court ruling overturned Michigan's fireworks law, which prohibits all fireworks.

Boyne City's new ordinance also prohibits the use of fireworks between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.

The ordinance was drafted at the commission's request by City Attorney Harvey Varnum. Commissioner Joe Gierlach said he thought the no-fireworks hours should be longer. "Some people go to bed at 9 p.m., especially in the winter," Gierlach said.

But Varnum said an earlier hour limit would be hard for police to enforce. "If you make it much earlier you're going to have enforcement problems," he said. "You might have problems with it being considered an unreasonable law."

"It's not good to have a law on the books that you can't enforce."

Those convicted of breaking the new law will face misdemeanor charges and a possible $100 fine. The ordinance also requires stores selling fireworks to sell them over the counter, not from display racks where customers can grab them.

Boyne City has other laws that could stop the sale and explosion of fireworks, but the recent court decision made their enforcement a legal risk. Varnum feels the city's new law is on safe legal ground.

"I doubt very much that this will be challenged in court," Varnum said. "It does not prohibit the sale of fireworks to adults. If it did, I think we would end up in court."

Commission members who had felt frustrated by the court injunction expressed pleasure that the city has found a way to cut down on fireworks.

"It sounds really good," said Catherine Jessup. "I really appreciate it."

Joe Gierlach added, "I just hope it works."

Here's summer job help

The Charlevoix County Press is offering free classified ads to assist those seeking summer work.

It is often a time consuming task for seasonal job seekers, particularly students, to find vacationers, seasonal business people, or second homeowners who want to purchase their services.

The Press is giving them a hand and hopes these ads will help work seekers and summer employers find each other a little more easily.

The offer is available to anyone 21 years old or younger. Ads must not exceed three lines or about 15 words. The job seeker may call the office, mail in the ad, or visit the office.

The Press phone number is 582-6761 and offices are at 210 S. Lake St., Boyne City.

Can this idea

We thought Michigan's bottle battle had come to an end, but apparently some legislators can only respond to special interest's command to jump by asking, "how high?"

In 1976 the voters made their feelings on this matter quite clear when they overwhelmingly approved a measure banning nonreturnable bottles and cans for beer and soft drinks. This opinion was voiced in the face of intensive lobbying efforts by soft drink manufacturers and other vested interests who are bothered more by change than by a state littered with discarded cans and bottles.

Editorial

Now a Rep. Harry Gast of St. Joseph is spearheading a move to delay implementation of the bottle ban for another three years. He also would like to substitute something called a litter tax for the ban on nonreturnables.

We are hopeful the majority of the legislators give this idea a quick heave-ho. Sure, it might be a small inconvenience to return bottles for a deposit, but that's much less painful than stepping on a razorsharp flip top left on a beach by some inconsiderate drinker.

The law may also cause problems for grocery store owners who will have to find room to store large numbers of bottles until the manufacturers pick them up. But grocery stores depend on people to support them and in this scenic part of the state many of these people are visitors who spend money at grocery stores and other businesses.

The visitors come here because the surroundings are pretty. They don't want to see streets, forests and beaches lined with rusty cans and broken bottles. For that they could just as well stay in the big city.

But even if tourism wasn't a factor in favor of keeping our part of Michigan free from bottles, cans and other litter, self-pride would be reason enough. A community that is well kept up is a better community in which to live. Getting rid of unsightly empty cans and bottles isn't the entire solution, but it is a definite step in the right direction.

In addition to the practical problems an extension for nonreturnables would bring, there are some disturbing philosophical questions here as well. The new threat to the bottle bill comes from the House of Representatives, but apparently some members have forgotten what the word "represent" really means.

We send these well-paid people to Lansing to represent our interests, not the interests of the bottling and drink industries. When some of these representatives ignore the mandate of the 400,000 voters who signed petitions to get the bottle bill on the ballot, we have to wonder who is representing who down there.

Let's hope most of our elected officials will show us that our interests are in fact being represented by bottling up the proposed extension on nonreturnables as soon as possible.

Strange goings-on in EJ

Strange things are going on in East Jordan. Any man caught without a beard on the 4th of July will be thrown into jail. Why is it that the police never take a man by the arm and lead him to jail? How come he's always thrown into jail?

Marshall Sayles

Over the years, as a newspaperman, I've seen a number of men put into jail. Not once have I seen a policeman pick up a guy and heave him into a cell. If they did that he'd bounce around on the concrete until his civil rights were bruised all out of shape.

Another strange thing is going on in East Jordan. Young women are being advised to hurry up and have a baby right after July 1. If they can manage it, they'll be eligible for a prize. The contest does not apply to women having babies outside of the East Jordan school district. Those who do will not be able to join in the fun.

These strange things going on in East Jordan are in connection with the celebration of the area's 100th anniversary.

They say the community was settled in 1878, which is hard to believe. I moved there in 1952 and there were a lot of things that weren't settled. In fact, there are a number of residents still jawing about things that ought to be settled.

A fishing contest has been worked into the Centennial celebration. Any fish caught between 12 a.m. July 1 and 3 p.m. July 4 can be entered in the contest. Suckers will not be eligible. I was going to enter the contest, but that last restriction leaves me out.

A committee announcement calls for more help. They need workers to man the booths. What's wrong with calling for workers to women the booths?

It leaked out the other day that I had published a newspaper in East Jordan for 18 years; and now I'm being urged to put those frantic times down in black and white for the Press East Jordan Centennial edition.

I've been cautioned not to elaborate, but to tell the absolute truth about the things that went on in East Jordan during those 18 years.

I can't do that. Just thinking about it scares the hell out of me.

The cattle ate our clothes

This log cabin was an early home of the Murphy family in East Jordan. Archie Murphy has many memories of the city's early days.

Swan City memories

The cattle ate our clothes

I have lived on a hill west of East Jordan nearly 78 years and have a lifetime of memories of East Jordan and the surrounding community.

Earliest memories include schools days. My first seven years were in the west side school. Before I started it had been known as the South Arm school and included high school, but after being annexed by the E.J. school it became the West Side school with just eight grades and was later reduced to seven.

It was a frame building with four large rooms. Teachers names I remember were May Dooley, Ella Bennett, Lucy Menzie, Theodora Brewer and Catharine Winters. I have a picture taken about 1906 of grades 2, 3 and 4 of the West Side school. Vern Whiteford and I recently examined it and were able to identify everyone in it, after 72 years.

many honors from the fair and county and state achievement days. Financed by a luncheon booth at the county fair every youngster in the community could participate and did. There is no way to measure the benefits accruing to the youth of the community and to the parents who acted as leaders.

The 20th century has been a period of constant change but nothing has changed more than the pattern of farming in the community. In my youth, raising potatoes seemed to offer the best chance of financial gain. In the shipping season following the 1919 potato harvest there were 327 carloads of potatoes shipped from East Jordan. Today we have no railroad and I do not know of one commercial potato grower in the area.

GOODBYE, CREAMERY
By the late 1920's the production of farm separated cream to be churned into butter provided a stable source of farm income. In 1931 the Jordan Valley Cooperative Creamery was started to provide a market for that cream. It served for over 30 years and often made more than 2,000,000 pounds of butter per year. Changing patterns in the dairy industry made the creamery's original purpose obsolete and it passed into history.

Today, there is no butter manufactured here and I do not know of a single farmer who produces cream for sale. In the community in which I live there were 30 farms where the creamery's truck stopped to pick up cream. Today there are two which produce dairy products for sale as fluid milk.

The greatest improvement in rural living in this community has been brought about by rural electrification made possible by Rural Electric Act and the organization of electric co-ops.

They have brought electric lights to replace the twilight of the kerosene lamp and power to replace the drudgery that has been a part of farm life since the beginning of mankind.

Electricity has brought most of the benefits of urban living to rural homes. This is reflected in the number of homes being built outside of cities.

HAZY DAYS
When I was a boy I could look out over East Jordan and see smoke coming from a dozen smoke stacks as industry fired up for another day of operation. Also smoke from hundreds of chimneys and stove pipes as housewives prepared breakfast for their families on wood burning stoves. Today there is only a little from the foundry and on weekends there is none to indicate which way the wind is blowing.
In its first one hundred East Jordan has seen a revolution in energy, industry, communication, transportation, travel, agriculture and housekeeping. At its bicentennial 100 years hence will that generation look back on as much change as we do? Perhaps. Who knows?
Archie M. Murphy

A night at the theater

It is said, "we are a part of everyone we meet", and I certainly feel that I am a part of East Jordan. There are so many memories, it is not easy to single one out.

When I was very young I was an avid reader, and books were the delight of my life. Among the books that I read were those written by Gene Stratton Porter. After reading "Freckles" and "A Girl of the Limberlost" I wrote to the author, telling her how beautiful her stories were and how I loved the characters. She answered my letter, telling me the world was full of wonderful people.

The memory of one night at the theater is still pleasant to recall. It so happened that "The Girl of the Limberlost" was made into a play, and it was coming to the East Jordan Theater. Excitement reigned. I wanted to see it more than anything in the world. That summer, around 1916, we were at a cottage some 2 1/2 miles north of East Jordan.

My father's store had burned in Deward with no insurance, so we were not in the best of circumstances. We didn't own a car. But my dad, knowing how badly I wanted to see the play, promised me we would walk to town and go to the theater. At last the day arrived. The sky grew cloudy, it looked like rain. Knowing that the rain would prevent us from going, I watched the clouds, praying that the sky would clear. Then at sunset hour the sky was a blaze of color, and I knew it wouldn't rain.

We set off for town after supper and walking was a breeze. We arrived at the theater a bit early. A large screen covered the stage. On the screen were colored squares of space advertising the places of business. I read them all - The Grocers, the Clothing Stores, the Ice Cream Parlor, the Druggist, the Jewelers, and the banks, one being the People's Bank where I later worked. Never had I seen such a big screen.

And now it was time for the play. The huge screen slowly rolled up and revealed the stage. The play began. The setting was the Limberlost. The Limberlost was a tract of timber in Indiana. The lumber from those trees was taken to the Grand Rapids Lumber Company.

Elnora Comstock was the heroine, and the girl of the Limberlost. She roamed the swamps and collected large moths. The beautiful Luna Moth and the equally lovely Yellow Emperor were two of the rarer ones, the luna moth being a delicate green with circles of ochrod. A young man from the city, the Bird Woman, the timber boss and many others completed the cast. The whole story unfolded on the stage. It was the first play I had ever seen.

That evening so long ago was a night to remember, an evening spent at the little theater in East Jordan. There have been many plays since, both here and abroad. But this first play was a beautiful memory perhaps partly because it included the memory of a father who understood the yearning of a young girl's heart.

Growing pains

Everybody seems to have a garden planted already. With food prices rising constantly, it's a very logical pastime.

Well, I'm not putting a garden in this year. Why? Because I can't afford it. The seeds are expensive, it's the rest of the stuff that goes with gardening that gets expensive, plus little unexpected mishaps that put the whole idea out of my reach financially.

The squash vines and hot pepper plants were overloaded. I spent more money on gas driving around trying to give them away than the whole garden was worth.

It wasn't until July that we discovered another fatal mistake. When the plants begin to shoot out of the ground, it's hard to tell them from the weeds. Our judgement had been poor, to say the least, and we were left with several rows of unsightly, unedible weeds of every description.

This year I'm going to wait for all the people who have made the same mistakes I have to come around trying to give the stuff away. I think it's cheaper.

Going down the tubes

BY GREGG SMITH
Lousy weather, mounting bills, no cash flow, and a dreary first quarter, are prime ingredients in the life of virtually every small business owner operating in a resort area like Northwestern Michigan.

So why cry in public? Because small businesses here, and everywhere in this great country of ours, are in trouble.

Inflation is making costs soar and profits dwindle. We're being buried in mounds of required state and federal paperwork that we don't have time to do ourselves, or the money to have done.

For some of us, unions have raised wages so high that we can't afford to hire more full time employees. And since the federal government has raised the minimum wage again, many have had to

A letter by Jim White in last week's Press contained a typographical mistake that may have given a wrong impression.

The first sentence should have read, "... my hat goes off to Sam Supernaw and the Cinema III Theatre for their cooperation with the Charlevoix Police Department by not showing X-rated movies."

The theater does not show X-rated movies. The Press regrets the error.

lay off part time employees. Meanwhile, labor giants like Meany and Fitzsimmons reap the benefits of 'delivering the vote' at election time, by jerking the strings of the puppet Carter gang. They stand at conventions and press conferences and shake their fists at pleas for wage hike restraints, urging their members to "go for more."

Legislation which was supposed to have helped small business is often times only helpful to government or big business. Remember Bill Milliken's and Bob Davises Single Business Tax? Or how about Carter's tax proposals?

It was recently pointed out that the Carter Administration's latest tax proposal will result in 1300 of the largest U.S. corporations receiving more than 75 percent of the administration's business tax reduction. The country's small firms will receive less than five percent.

So why get upset in this era of everybody for himself...?"

Because small business is vital to the American economy. They directly, or indirectly, provide a livelihood for more than 100 million Americans. They account for 43 percent of the Gross National Product, 48 percent of the Gross Business Product (excluding farms and government), and 55 percent of all private, non-farm employment.

But far more important, they're a testimony to the independent spirit that got this country started and has kept it going for the last 200 years.

If small business dies, we're all going down the tubes...

Lei C. Johnson, Community Relations Manager, Petoskey, reminds you:

There are things you can do to control the cost of your phone bill.

We are constantly searching for ways to help you economize on your phone service, but here are just a few ideas on how you can help yourself: Call when it's least expensive. For example, when you're calling long distance, dial direct and plan your calls for times when the rates are lowest. Budget Service that's really low budget! Look into the availability of Budget Service if you don't make a lot of phone calls every month. It's the least expensive one-or-two party phone service we offer.

Plan to have all your service installed in one visit. For instance, if you move, plan carefully so the installer doesn't have to make extra trips, for which you may have to pay additional charges. And while you're planning for new service, make sure it's going to be the kind most suited to your needs.

Sometimes, little tips can save you a surprising amount over the long haul. We'll keep trying to help you save.

Enforcement toughened

BY DALE PETROSKEY

LANSING - In the throes of the last of a four-year series of realignments ordered by Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Director Howard A. Tanner, the DNR is attempting to upgrade its newly-formed Bureau of Enforcement and increase its enforcement manpower.

Enforcement personnel in the DNR has remained surprisingly constant the past 25 years, despite a drastic increase in environmental protection laws passed by the legislature, especially in the 1970s.

The new bureau, called a "litigation bureau" by DNR officials, is the result of a special task force report recommendation made to Tanner in December, 1977, which suggested the DNR's enforcement and management divisions be separated.

Traditionally, Michigan's approximately 200 statewide conservation officers "in the field" have provided enforcement for the DNR.

In an interview with the Press last winter, retiring DNR officer Harley Burris said there are a few more conservation officers today than when he started with the DNR over 20 years ago.

About 243 DNR people have been transferred into the Bureau of Enforcement, according to its director, Charles Guenther, since the reorganization was finalized in February.

"There is unrest in the department because some people don't know whose supervision they'll be under tomorrow," Guenther said, "but that's no unusual." Admitting that his bureau does not have as many enforcement-related people as he would like, Guenther said he is faced with "a beginning staff problem, not a problem of understaffing."

"Whenever you re-arrange a part of an organization, you're going to have beginning staff problems," said Guenther, referring to his three-month-old bureau.

To help bolster the DNR's enforcement forces, the department has submitted a 1978-79 budget request for 11 new people to work in the Bureau of Enforcement and will request 11 additional people to work in the DNR's Environmental Law Division in the 1979-80 budget.

Of the 11 requested in the budget currently being scrutinized by the legislature five new persons are being requested for the Environmental Law Division, which acts as the state's prosecutor in environmental violation matters.

Though he admits that the enforcement manpower of the DNR is "pretty thin now," Guenther feels that the six requested conservation officers will lessen the load now placed on the state's 211 conservation officers.

"The CO's (conservation officers) we requested could spend 90 percent of their time in their specialty - water or air quality control, or whatever - and 10 percent of their time training other CO's," Guenther said.

Despite a dramatic increase in the state's environmental protection laws in the 1970s, just 11 officers have been added to the conservation officer force in the past 26 years.

In 1951, 200 conservation officers worked in both administrative and enforcement capacities for the DNR. Today, the DNR employs 211 conservation officers.

Because responsibilities of the conservation officers are increased today, they are required to take on a heavier load of enforcement cases and must make decisions about the importance of enforcing certain laws.

"A conservation officer today has different priorities than he did 25 years ago," Guenther said. "It used to be that July 4 weekend and Memorial Day weekend were when the CO's were out checking the fishermen to make sure they were obeying the fishing laws. Now, with all the new laws and the increase in the number of campers, we have to make a value judgment about what kinds of activities are important."

Guenther said it will likely take five years before the DNR's enforcement bureau is stocked with enough personnel to make it highly effective in enforcing environmental laws.

"I don't think the people of Michigan are losing," he said. "Of course, we're impatient that we can't go as fast as we'd like to."

The Environmental Enforcement Division, currently faced with over 100 cases for which to prepare evidence, is asking the legislature and governor for 16 new people to help prepare law suits against violators of environmental laws.

The number of cases being processed through the attorney general's office is up, according to Stewart Freeman, assistant-in-charge of Environmental Protection and Natural Resources in the Attorney General's office.

"The reason for the increased case load," Freeman said, "is not because more people are breaking environmental laws today. It's because those five people in the Environmental Enforcement Division are doing everything they can to identify problems that the staff has not addressed in the past."

Because the Environmental Enforcement Division is currently understaffed, they are forced to handle the emergency cases first, according to Jack Baile, director of the EED.

"We haven't seen any bad consequences yet," Baile says, referring to problems inherent in the understaffing of litigation people. "There are cases that are coming to trial now that need to be followed through. In the interim, there are some things that could go unintended. We could be faced with real problems if a backlog builds up."

Swim school ready

Carol Goodenough, Boyne City Swim School director, has announced plans for the 1978 season. The community chest sponsored program will again offer instruction on the Beginner, Advanced Beginner, Intermediate, Swimmers, Basic Rescue and Water Safety, Advanced Swimmers, and Advanced Lifesaving levels.

The popular "pre-swim school" program will again be offered and a Red Cross 50-mile fitness program will be initiated to replace the old "swim for fun and fitness" program.

Red Cross Water Safety instructors for the 1978 year, along with Carol, will be Steph Moody, Carl Aimesbury, and Patty Bauer. The program will be eight weeks long, from July 5 to August 25.

Students registering for classes must be at least seven years old or entering second grade. Students wishing basic rescue and water safety must be 11 years old and students wishing to take advanced lifesaving must be 15 years old.

Pre-swim school classes will be held in two, three week courses, meeting on Monday and Wednesday, and Tuesday and Thursday afternoons, from July 5 to July 25 and from July 31 to August 17. Children in pre-swim classes must be four years of age by September, 1978. The cost for the pre-swim program will be $10 for the first child in a session and $5 for other children of a family in the same session. If the child is enrolled in both sessions the fee for the second session will be $5.

Registration for all Boyne City Swim School classes, including the pre-swim school program, will be on June 29 in Memorial Park from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Health records will be sent home with all students at this time. They must be returned before the student may begin the 1978 Swim School year.

City picks new boss

BOYNE CITY - Newly appointed City Manager Timothy Clifton won the position over 150 candidates after making a strong impression on the city commissioners during his recent interview.

"He's so smart, it almost scares me," said Commissioner Steve Moody of Clifton, 26, presently an administrative assistant to the city manager of Kalamazoo. "He's smarter than me, that's for sure," Moody added.

But Moody and the other commissioners say their choice to succeed Ruth Neymark has other attributes as well. The commissioners had a difficult time deciding between Clifton and an assistant city manager from Lakeland, Florida, but made a decision Tuesday after cracking a few jokes about tossing a coin.

"The reason I go for Clifton is that I think he'll work his fanny off," Moody said.

The commission's motion to offer Clifton the job was unanimous, but both of the last two candidates had support until the end.

Catherine Jessup, who had been leaning towards the other candidate, said she changed her mind because, "One of the things we were looking for was high energy level and aggressiveness. I think Clifton fills this to a higher degree, although I think either one could do a good job for Boyne City."

"This is the end of an era and the beginning of another era," said Joe Gierlach, mentioning that most of the upper levels of city government have been filled by new people in the past few years. "You're replacing them all with younger people with younger attitudes."

At Monday night's meeting, letters of resignation from City Assessor Forbes Tompkins and City Treasurer Ruth Newmark were read. Both are former city managers.

Mrs. Neymark wrote that she is moving to California to take care of her mother, who is in poor health. Forbes Tompkins said he can't continue because of a persistent respiratory problem.

Tompkins added, "They have a whole new commission and a new city manager. I just think it's time to wipe the slate clean."

The new city manager will be paid $17,500 and start work in a month. "I'm really looking forward to getting started," Clifton said. He plans to run the city using management techniques similar to those used in private corporations. "The city can be run efficiently," he said. "It should be run like a business."

"The size of the city doesn't matter. The same proper management techniques that work in Kalamazoo can be used in a smaller area."

Clifton, who is married to a school teacher and has no children, said he and his wife were attracted to Boyne City while vacationing in the area.

Holder of a masters degree in public administration from Western Michigan University, Clifton has worked in Kalamazoo City government since 1974.

He said he decided to make the job change because "We're pretty much landlocked down here. There's not much room for growth. Boyne City is just the opposite. It's got room to grow."

"It's important that the administration see to it that the growth is controlled. It would be a challenge to anyone in city management."

Tax revolt hits home

BOYNE CITY - Board of Education officials didn't express much surprise that Monday's millage request was voted down, but they were surprised by the fact that the vote wasn't even close.

"I'm very disappointed. I thought it would be closer," said a dejected Ed Snyder, the elementary school principal who now has to wonder how much money he will have to operate the new building his school is scheduled to move into in the fall.

It was Snyder who brought what Superintendent Rich Kelly called "not good news" to the Board of Education meeting after the millage was overwhelmingly defeated, 687 to 372. He and other school officials said they don't know yet whether they will seek the same millage, a 1.8 increase, in another election. They meet again Monday, May 19 and may reach a decision then.

Some board members thought many of the no votes on the millage might have been inspired by the recent approval in California of a proposal to sharply reduce property taxes.

"It's the taxpayer's revolt," said board member Tom Neumann. "People are sick of being taxed so much."

"I don't blame the people," said Board President Bill Chipman. "They're voting that way as a protest because it's the only way they have to protest."

"But they're only hurting the kids. We cut our millage right to the bone. Only one mill was to operate the new building. The rest was for inflation."

Tom Neumann said increased valuations have raised city and township taxes, which property owners don't have a chance to vote down. "The high increase in state equalized valuation killed everybody," Neumann said. "That was the straw that broke the camel's back."

Henry Cawthra, a long-time opponent of higher spending by the school district, agreed with board members that the millage rejection is part of a national trend.

"This is part of an overall national problem that's not going to go away soon," he said. "It's an extremely serious problem. These people sometimes have a tendency to lose sight of the forest because of all the trees."

Use of several new textbooks in the school system had been approved earlier Monday night. Tom Neumann, a member of the committee that recommended the changes, said, "Now we might not have money to buy those books. I don't know what we're going to do."

In other action at Monday's board meeting, the board approved a feasibility study to find out if the Morgan-Shaw school could be used for community education and administration offices. Superintendent Rich Kelly said a preliminary study indicated that the remodeling would cost $15-$20,000.

Kelly said most of that money could be raised from the sale of 11 portable units, which the board also approved Monday night. One portable will be kept for a nursery school being organized by a local group of young mothers.

Kelly said if Morgan-Shaw is remodeled the nursery school could go in the basement. Tom Neumann said renovating the building for office space would cost less than using it for classrooms because schools are under much stricter fire safety requirements.

Built in 1914, Morgan-Shaw was last used in June, 1974. If it was used for administration offices, Kelly said, the present administration building could be sold.

The board also gave Kelly permission to look for a second special education teacher for the high school. He said the present teacher has twice as many students as state law allows, leaving the school district open to a possible lawsuit.

Kelly said a college senior intern from Grand Valley State College in Grand Rapids might be hired to fill the position.

Something special

Falls seniors graduate

BOYNE FALLS - High school graduations are a yearly event, but at Boyne Falls last Thursday it was something special.

The 13 graduating seniors were joined in the ceremony by six members of the Boyne Falls Class of 1928, celebrating the 50th anniversary of their own high school graduation.

The graduates heard a rousing speech from Lewis Upton Sr., the salutatorian of the Class of 1928. He described his high school years as "a time when doctors still made house calls and we didn't have to worry about a drinking age because it was an age of prohibition."

Upton admitted that "the good old days" weren't exactly perfect. "If you've never had the experience of answering the call of nature in an outhouse when the temperature was below zero, you've missed the thrill of a lifetime," he laughed.

After giving the crowd some chuckles, Upton had more serious words. "I've tried to think of something that hasn't changed in 50 years, and I have found it. It is love."

"Happiness is the greatest goal you can achieve. Strive for happiness and love and all the rest will follow."

Theresa Theisen, Upton's counterpart from the present current graduating class, told the audience, "We have had the opportunity to glance down many roads. Commencement is just a beginning."

"The decisions we are about to make will have a lasting great effect on the rest of our lives. A positive outlook is essential."

The other student speaker was valedictorian Penny Follette. "This marks the beginning of a new and challenging life," she said. "The opportunities and ideas are there. All we have to do is put them to life."

"True success cannot be measured by accomplishments alone. Of much greater importance are the types of steps you take to get there."

The principal commencement speaker was Charlevoix County Prosecutor Roy Hayes, who had the difficult job of following the well-received Upton to the podium.

Offering his congratulations to the class, Hayes said, "It takes a lot to get here. It takes parental sacrifice. I feel you parents are graduating just the same as these young people on the stage."

Hayes echoed Penny Follette's words on the true meaning of success. "What you do shouldn't be measured in terms of money, but by what you become," he said.

Tim Skop won the citizenship award, while Tim LaCroix won the activities award and Tim Crego was named top athlete. Michele Wasylewski was the honor student.

In addition to Upton, other members of the Class of '28 on hand were Warren Locke, Carl Reinhardt, Arden Hausler, Violet Mosley and Gladys Upton, Lewis's wife. She wore the same dress she had worn to her first graduation 50 years earlier.

Graduating in the Class of 1978 were Tamyra Kondrat, Thomas Payton, Penny Follette, Theresa Theisen, Michele Wasylewski, Tim LaCroix, David Reynolds, Tim Skop, Eric Hausler, Bruce Giem, Tim Crego, Lori Leazier and Lea A. Leazier.

Crozier, Towne win

BOYNE CITY - Ray Towne and Shirley Crozier easily won seats on the Board of Education Monday. Towne was elected to a one-year term and Crozier to a four-year term.

They will replace Howard Bray and Bob Reidel, who filled out the unexpired term of former board President Terry Carr.

Towne received 484 votes, while Crozier got 462. In the one year race, Helen Bergmann received 264 votes, Dave Williamson 142 and Kathleen Toomey 120.

Harold Harris was the runner-up for a four-year term with 343 votes, while Robert Schmoltdt received 180.

New boss for Walloon Yacht Club

In gearing up for this summer's activities, the Walloon Yacht Club will have a new manager beginning June 18.

David Laund, freshly graduated from the University of Michigan, will take over the managing duties for the club.

Laund will run the racing activities (the first official race will be July 1) and also handle the sailing instruction classes the club is offering.

There will be three two-week sessions on sailing offered July 10, July 26, and August 14. For more information on these classes and their cost, contact Laund through Si's Marine, 535-2461.

Laund will also have all the information you need on the Walloon Club's racing schedule, which officially begins the first part of July.

The commodore for the Walloon Yacht Club, Henry Cawthra, says the club will offer four different classes of racing this summer. Those will be Highlanders, Snipes, 17 Square Meters, and Open class racing.

Cawthra says "anyone can enter the open class races, you don't have to be a member of the Walloon Yacht Club, and there is no entry fee." The Walloon Yacht Club dates back to the early 1900's, and today Cawthra says the club is interested in getting new members.

"This club is the center of one-design racing (boats that are similar)" Cawthra said. The advantage to this type of racing he says is "the first boat to cross the finish

Yacht championships

Two Boyne City men will be competing when the North American One Ton National Championship yacht series begins June 21 in Little Traverse Bay.

Warren Todter and his yacht, "The Shadow," and Gary Osterbeck on "Revenge" are entered in the series which runs until June 30.

There are 21 yachts officially entered in the series, including three from New Zealand. They are "Mr. Jumps," "Scalawag," and "Wild Turkey."

David Irish, considered one of the stronger local entries, says the New Zealand yachts will not have any advantage over the other entries, but, "they will be very competitive yachts."

wins." Other types of racing, including the club's Open class category do not always guarantee that the first boat to cross the finish wins. For more information on the Walloon Yacht Club, call Si's.

Irish won the June 3-4 overnight race from Charlevoix to Boyne City and back, which served as a tune-up for the One Ton series. Osterbeck finished second in the overnight race, which was sponsored by the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

The One Ton schedule begins June 21 with measurements and inshore inspection of the yachts. The first races will start June 22 and 23 on Little Traverse Bay. These will be the Olympic or 'inshore course' races, and will cover 24.7 miles. A third Olympic race is set for June 26.

A medium distance race of 136 miles around the Beaver Island area will begin June 24. The long distance race of 281 miles will be held in the Northern half of Lake Michigan, and begins on June 27.

Welcome to Fun & Sun!

It's summertime and the living is easy. School's out, warm weather's in, and thousands of people are on their way up to enjoy a northern Michigan summer.

What does the tourist trade do for Charlevoix County? Well, according to the manager of the Village Store in Walloon Lake, Andrew Robinson, "We wouldn't be here if it weren't for the summer."

Robinson says the tourists carry local businesses through the long winters, and "Nobody would be here if it weren't for them."

"If you just look around, it's obvious why they're here," Robinson says. He says the beautiful weather and the many things to do are the big attraction to northern Michigan.

In essence this is what Fun & Sun is all about. Charlevoix County and its surrounding areas in the summer. We will cover the many things to do as well as the beautiful weather (if not create it.)

Inside each Fun & Sun is a section called Out and About. We feel this is a complete guide to what's happening. You will find all necessary information on every area restaurant, where the entertainment is, information about sport and recreational activity, as well as a calendar keeping you up to date on local happenings.

Each week there is also a "Best Bets" article, which tells some of the key 'best bets' that you won't want to miss.

Finally, each issue of Fun & Sun will carry a theme that will thoroughly cover one aspect of summer activity, be it boating, hiking, eating, fishing or other relating topics. Fun & Sun is for year-round locals and tourists alike, and we hope you enjoy your summer as much as we will enjoy covering it.

'Where else can a 67-year-old man get a job?'

BY MARK PUTNAM

Who has the loudest whistle in Charlevoix County? Why it must be the engineer on the Boyne Valley Railroad, Howard Fineout.

Fineout has been working on the railroad in Boyne City since 1955, and has lived here all 67 years of his life. He is one of the many area residents who spend their summers catering to the interests of visitors.

"You meet a lot of people on here from all countries in the world," Fineout said.

This summer Fineout will be meeting more people, as the railroad again is offering rides between Boyne City and Boyne Falls.

From June 26 until September 4, the railroad will have daily trips leaving Boyne City at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m., and departing Boyne Falls at noon, 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

A round trip for adults is $3.50, with children five to eleven years of age getting on for $2.

Children four years or younger can ride free, and there is also a special family rate for round trips. Two adults and two children can ride the train for $7.50. Until June 26, the train will run only on weekends, with the same time schedule in effect. After daily service ends, weekend trips will still be offered from September 9 until October 22.

The trip from Boyne City to Boyne Falls takes about 30 minutes and covers some beautiful countryside. There is a refreshment stand in Boyne Falls, and you can get plenty of refreshment and food at the Depot Restaurant, where the train stops in Boyne City, or at other area establishments.

Although it is a safe train ride, Fineout says, "You have to keep your eyes open for broken rails, something on the rails... anything that can throw you off."

The train has been off the track twice in the last three years, with most of its problems coming from severe weather.

Fineout says "There's always some kind of a problem. Grass (that grows too high), a little bit of moisture raises hell with you. Can't go anywhere."

He continued, "When it's raining hard, you have just as good traction as when it's dry. But when you get a little dew or moisture on the track..."

Other problems a train engineer has to look out for are rocks, stones, nuts, bolts or other debris which Fineout says, "If you get enough, it'll throw you off the track."

The train travels about 15 miles per hour, and is powered by two 200-horsepower engines that run on diesel fuel. "When it gets 95 degrees and you're sitting between those two diesels, it gets hot," said Van Green, brakeman on the Boyne Railroad.

Not only does it get hot, but noise inside the engine gets loud from both the whistle and the letting off of air compression.

All aboard! Boyne Valley Railroad engineer, Howard Fineout, gets ready for another Boyne City to Boyne Falls run. The railroad begins daily service June 26.

But that's all part of the job. Besides, as Fineout asks, "Where else can a 67-year-old man get a job?"

Fineout has a personality that could be compared to a crusty version of Johnny Carson: On one trip to Boyne Falls, the brakeman mentioned they were squishing a lot of caterpillars that were on the track. Fineout just turned and said, "I bet they won't have the guts to try that again."

When riding the train, you cannot be assured of a quiet trip. Last summer, the staff at tennis pro Rod Laver's camp at Boyne Falls, tried to rob the train. They fired tennis balls through a mechanical serving machine, but could not stop the train, (although they did break a window.)

The railroad was built in 1893 as a logging spur between Boyne Falls and the lumber mills at Boyne City.

The Boyne City, Gaylord and Alpena

Railroad Companies acquired property in 1905, with Boyne City taking over sole ownership in 1935.

Most of Boyne City's business was with Howe's Tannery, which closed down in 1969. (Fineout said "The Tannery was the largest tannery in the world.")

Hollis Baker bought the railroad in 1970, and the Boyne City Railroad then was used as a museum and scenic-historic passenger train in the summer of '72 and '73.

On the verge of public auction in the middle of May, 1976, a group of local investors saved the train by purchasing it, and keeping it in town.

As Howard Fineout says, "Isn't every place you can take a kid to get a train ride anymore?"

And because of the efforts of Tom Workman and other investors, Boyne City still has a railroad to enjoy.

Here's what's cooking

Summer cooking specials

WITH GINGER JACKSON
Summer is here... time for fun & sun: With it comes outdoor cooking, eating and picnics. For the summer, we're going to concentrate on appropriate foods for warm weather.

Some of the things we'll write about will be fresh fruits and vegetables in season, salads, fish and seafoods, Bar-B-Ques, cold soups and beverages, desserts and cooking while boating or camping, to name a few.

This week... some new ways to prepare an old standard hamburger.

This recipe is great for big parties and can be prepared the day before.

Lois Booth's
GRILLED INDIVIDUAL MEATLOAVES
(serves 8)

MIX TOGETHER THE FOLLOWING:

2 pounds of ground beef
2 eggs
½ cup cracker crumbs
one third cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup milk
½ cup ketchup
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

Form meat mixture into 8 individual loaves and place each one on a square of heavy aluminum foil (enough so each one can be wrapped up and sealed).

Then make the following sauce:

In a large skillet melt ¼ pound (1 stick) or butter or margarine. Sauté ½ cup chopped onion in it for 5 minutes. Then add:
½ cup ketchup
¼ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon chili powder
3 tablespoons worchester sauce
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika

a dash of tobacco.
Cook another 5 minutes stirring to mix well. Then spoon the sauce over each meatloaf, place an onion slice on top of each one and seal the foil tightly, making sure the seam and ends are on top. This way no juice is lost while cooking.

TO COOK:

Place the foil wrapped meatloaves on a rack 3 inches from the hot coals on the grill. Cook for about 10 minutes on each side. Test one periodically, because if you overcook them they will dry out!

Here's an economical version of "surf and turf".

BEEF AND SHRIMP BURGERS
(serves 6)

MIX TOGETHER:
1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped cooked shrimp salt and pepper to taste minced garlic to taste (optional)
¼ teaspoon horseradish

Form the mixture into patties and grill over charcoal. Cook as you would regular hamburgers, but don't over cook!

A variation of this would be to base them as they cook with this sauce...

¼ cup sherry
¼ cup soy sauce
4 tablespoons of sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon

Either way, these burgers are good if you serve them on toasted English muffins!

And a few ways to jazz up your burgers.
-Add chopped pecans (which have been tossed in melted butter) to your ground beef. About ½ cup pecans to 1 pound of ground beef. To season, add ¼ teaspoon lemon-pepper seasoning, and ½ cup worchester sauce. Form into patties and grill.

-In the middle of each hamburger patty, put a generous spoonful of blue cheese or a slice of your favorite cheese. To do this, make 2 very thin patties, put cheese on top of one of them and then place the other patty on top (like a sandwich). Squeeze the edges together so they won't come apart while cooking.

-After you've cooked your hamburgers, top them with chopped ripe olives which have been warmed in melted butter. Or the olives can be mixed in with the ground beef before cooking.

Success

It might not be 'Jaws' but it's a start. Ramie Leist, 11, of Boyne City displays one of his first catches of the summer. Now that school is out, Ramie will be able to go after those really big ones.

Blackflies a pain

There is nothing like being in the woods this time of year, but unfortunately, the blackfly, which can just about drive man and beasts nuts, can spoil the fun.

May is the prime time for the emergence for this small, black or grey fly, sometimes called a buffalo gnat. The black fly has a stout, humpbacked body, broad wings and short legs; and it will stick around until July.

Black flies feed on the blood of wild and domestic animals, including birds, and in some parts of Michigan they are vicious human pests. There is little precise information concerning their flight range but most species in Michigan can fly several miles from their breeding sites in streams and rivers.

While they bite only during daylight, they have the devious ability to crawl in hair, nostrils and ears or crawl through openings in clothing to feed.

"The bite is irritating and produces a wheal (flat, burning area on the skin) which may cause severe swelling," says

Richard Merritt, Michigan State University entomologist. "If an individual is particularly sensitive, the reaction may lead to medical care or hospitalization," he adds.

About the best protection is using insect repellents containing diethyltoluamide (DEET) and tight-fitting clothing. Merritt, the Michigan representative of the North East Regional Blackfly Biology and Control Project, says currently available pesticides are virtually ineffective.

Not all species of blackflies bite, Merritt says, and only female blackflies suck blood. A blackfly may require a blood meal before her eggs can mature.

Most blackfly larvae are filter feeders meaning that they possess fan-like projections around the mouth that catch drifting particles and transfer them into the mouth. Merritt says this filter-feeding behavior has prompted research of an insecticide that would kill blackflies in the larval stage.

But the major drawback is that the current would carry the toxic particles downstream where other aquatic forms could feed on them and be killed. So biological control is being researched.

"The biggest problem in studying blackflies is that it's hard to establish a self-perpetuating colony in the laboratory," Merritt says.

He adds that it has been very difficult to obtain host feeding, mating and oviposition under laboratory conditions.

It is also difficult to identify all of the species present in a given area. In the larval stages, many species look alike. In some species, positive identification can only be made by observing the chromosomes, Merritt explains.

Among the biological control possibilities is the introduction of parasites into blackfly breeding waters that would kill enough of the developing larvae to reduce the blackfly population to tolerable levels.
