

The background may look complicated and it is. It's part of the new heating system for the new East Jordan High School. Diane Haggard, standing in front of this creation, is the lone female to help work with the plumbing systems for the new school.

A plum(ber) good job for girl

BY SANDRA VANSTEENKISTE

EAST JORDAN - When you are an only child and your father is in plumbing, that doesn't mean you have to follow in dad's footsteps, although this one did. And she's even a female!

Diane Haggard, 20, is the daughter of Bill Haggard of Haggard's Plumbing & Heating in Charlevoix. She said besides her father being in the plumbing and heating business, she just had a general interest in the profession.

"I like being active and working with my hands, seeing how things are run and how they work," Diane said. "And plumbing is within grasp."

She has been learning most of her skills from her father in their sheet metal shop that is part of the plumbing and heating store and, of course, from on-the-job training. This is her second summer that she's actually had any job experience. Presently she is working at the construction site for the new East Jordan High School. She has been doing odds and ends, wherever mostly needed, like putting in faucets or helping to install the heating system.

While working out at the high school, Diane has been the only female in an all male crew. Not that she has disliked it, she said.

"It's different at first," Diane said, "because the guys really don't know how to act. One problem is that they always want to help me, with any little things, especially when they see me carrying something heavy. But after awhile it gets hard because I find myself not doing things for myself."

A male co-worker commented that it was strange at first, too, having a female around. He said the guys were actually a little more courteous when she was around, cutting down on some of their normal "guy talk". But he admitted that she got a lot of whistles in the beginning.

Diane is interested in possibly getting involved in a four-year apprenticeship in sheet metals. In order to do this, one must register with the State of Michigan and work under a licensed plumber. Diane is the first female in the state to sign up for this apprenticeship.

In September, Diane will start her third year at Michigan State University in East Lansing. Currently she is involved in the pre-medical curriculum and is also looking at plumbing seriously. Upon her return to school she said she is going to check into a possible apprenticeship at MSU. She says Northwestern University offered such a program.

As for future career objectives, she has no definite plans. She said she is still looking into many things. At this point she has an open mind and is waiting to be influenced by one profession or another.

Children's ballet

Never too young to dance

BY SANDRA VANSTEENKISTE

EAST JORDAN - "Are you prepared to listen carefully?" a soft spoken voice asks. "Get the left foot up everybody; take your right hand all the way behind you, now up, up, up and down again." One little girl meekly adds in after the exercise, "Glad you weren't looking at me this time because, I did it wrong."

Conversation like this goes on all the time between Joan Karff and the children she teaches modern dance. Karff says it is "barefoot dancing and not as structured as classical ballet."

This modern dance class has been taking place out at Elm Point in East Jordan for the past five summers. It came about after area residents requested such a class.

But, according to Cyg Riley, director of Portside Arts Committee, "East Jordan residents asked for this type of class since nothing like it existed. But when it came time to sign up, words spoke louder than actions and there was a poor turnout." So therefore the class was offered to residents of nearby cities as well. The turnout increased.

The class is offered to adults as well as kids, both twice a week, Tuesdays and Thursdays. There are eight children ages 8 to 13 in the morning class and in the night, for adults, there are 10 persons. The purpose of dancing, as Karff sees it, is a means to stay physically fit. She says dancing is something that one must work at or else the body muscles tighten up.

"If you want to dance, you must do it full time, not sporadically," Karff says. Just like any other exercise, to be good and stay fit, you have to work at it every day, putting a lot of time into practicing. While in class, she has the kids do exercises to limber up their bodies. After routine exercises are over they do specific dance exercises so as to build up to certain performing skills.

Karff and her husband live during the summer at their home in Charlevoix on Matthews Lane. The rest of the year they reside in Houston, Texas where she teaches modern dance and choreography at Rice University.

With a mother in dance also, Karff has been involved in dancing most of her life. She grew up in Connecticut, commenced studies of dance in New York and continued her endeavors in Chicago.

Her husband is a rabbi and they have three children, all active in dance, too.

If you want to dance, you have to exercise. Here Joan Karff, in white leotards, leads her modern dance class in one of their many limbering up exercises.

Empty house burns

EAST JORDAN - An unoccupied home behind the Gulf and Western stamping plant was extensively damaged by fire at 1:30 a.m. Monday.

The home, located on McKenzie Street, is owned by Julie Vrondran.

An addition to the rear of the home was engulfed in flames when East Jordan firemen arrived, according to Fire Chief Dick Barnett.

The main portion of the home and its roof had also started burning, but firemen quickly extinguished the flames, Barnett said. They stayed on the scene for about 1½ hours.

Barnett said the fire was apparently caused by a short circuit in electrical wiring.

Liquor license stalled

EAST JORDAN - It looks like it may be quite a while before the Jordan Inn gets the liquor license it applied for over a year ago.

State liquor control commissioner Louis Jarboe estimated that the restaurant's application would be processed within the next five years. "The legislature authorizes us to give out 15 licenses a year," he explained. "And we've already given out all 15 for this year."

Even if a state bill permitting 20 licenses per year is passed, it is doubtful the Jordan Inn would be among the next five to receive a license, Jarboe added.

"We had 40 resort license applications in 1977, 40 in 1976 and 38 before that," he said. "We have to consider all priorities and look at the economic impact a restaurant would have on the area."

The Jordan Inn applied for a resort license because East Jordan, with its population of roughly 2,000, already has all the liquor licenses allowed (one per every 1,500 population). Businesses in resort communities can apply for extra licenses, however.

"We are just waiting," said Jordan Inn owner Christina Dobrowski. "Last winter during the slow time, it was very bad. Many customers expect that we'll have wine. So when they call for reservations I tell them right off we don't have a license. Some day, 'Oh, that makes a difference.' Others that don't know are disappointed when they're here. When I go out to eat, I prefer a place with wine, too." Some customers ask if they can bring their own wine or alcohol, but Dobrowski tells them no. "It's illegal," she says, "and we don't want to jeopardize our chances of getting a license."

The state liquor control commission recently asked the East Jordan City Council for its approval of the license. That did not mean, however, that the license was then granted.

"We had some people, who had heard it on the radio, walk in and think we had wine," Dobrowski said.

Getting city government approval is the first step in processing an application, a liquor commission spokesman said.

Mayor Jim Meredith says the East Jordan City Council gave quick and unanimous approval to the restaurant's request for a liquor license.

"It's up to the state now," he said. "If we had said no, that would have ended it. But with a business of that caliber, one of the finest restaurants in northern Michigan, if not the whole state, we felt it would be advantageous to go along with them."

"It's not every day you can get a real fine restaurant like that into town."

Senior center gets facelift

This room is the main meeting and dining area for the newly remodeled County Senior Center.

EAST JORDAN - The county's newly remodeled Senior Center was unveiled at an open house here last Wednesday.

About 250 people toured the center, and those who had not seen it for a few months were genuinely amazed at the facelift.

Besides fresh paint, new floors, new ceilings and new curtains, the center has some new rooms.

A former storage room has been converted to a kitchen, complete with stoves, refrigerator and freezer. Meals are now prepared here each weekday for the nutritional programs in Boyne City and Boyne Falls, as well as East Jordan.

The former small kitchen has been made into a stage for the main dining and meeting room.

Part of the building near the front door, which at one time was leased to a barber, has now been made into restrooms, a lounge area and a room for taking blood pressure and general health screening.

The building is leased to the county Commission on Aging by the city of East Jordan, and the city helped pay for the remodeling.

A federal grant paid $41,000 toward the project, while the city paid $14,000 and also put in the drywall, ceiling and sidewalks.

About $1,000 worth of tables and chairs for the center were paid for by the senior citizens who use them.

Senior Center Director Dorothy Pelton is thrilled with the new look. But, she says, what makes the center a good place to get together is really the people who go there.

Millage narrowly OK'd

EAST JORDAN - School officials breathed a sigh of relief Tuesday after voters narrowly approved school millage Monday by a 423-410 margin.

Superintendent Mel Rullman described the voter turnout as average and said he "learned a long time ago not to take anything for granted on millage elections."

"But I thought it would pass because I felt the people would want to see these nice new facilities be put to use."

He said the approval of 20.7 mills, a 1.8 mill increase, will "mean we can operate all the programs that were planned for the new building."

School officials said they needed additional millage to operate the new school, which will use more utilities and increase expenses in other areas.

Monday's millage approval means that the owner of a $20,000 piece of property will be paying an extra $10.80 per year in taxes, unless he is eligible for the Homestead Property Tax Credit.

Funeral for auto victim

EAST JORDAN - Funeral services were held Friday, August 11, for two-year-old Walter Goebel IV, who was killed Tuesday when he fell out of a car driven by his mother Marilyn, on Bridge Street near the Jordan Street intersection. The boy's father was Walter Goebel Jr.

Charlevoix County Medical examiner pronounced the boy dead at the scene.

CHIROPRACTORS SEEK RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS

The International Pain Control Institute in conjunction with New York Chiropractic College is presently engaged in what is the most extensive research program ever undertaken by the chiropractic profession. This research is directed toward determining the relationship between health problems and spinal misalignments and utilizes a screening process called Contour Analysis.

Volunteers are being sought for screening Contour Analysis enables taking a three-dimensional picture (called Moire photography) of the topography of the surface of the spine to detect spinal stress deviations. This analysis will be correlated with leg deficiency, patient symptomatology, and levels of spinal tenderness. An analysis of this type can reveal such things as normal and abnormal stress patterns, spinal curvature, muscle spasms, muscle imbalance, spinal distortions, and scoliosis.

There is no charge to participating volunteers, since the doctors are contributing their time, service, and facilities for the program. Final processing and evaluation will be done at the New York Chiropractic College.

Anyone wishing to be a volunteer may telephone participating doctors directly for information or an appointment.

Hookey gets harder

BOYNE CITY - High school students who like to play hockey will find the game harder this year. The Board of Education Monday approved stricter attendance guidelines proposed by Assistant Principal Rick Casper.

Under the new policy, every teacher will report the absence of students from every class to Casper's office. When the student returns to class, he must make up the work he has missed. If he doesn't, he has an "E" marked against him.

When a student gets five marks against him, Casper said, "I will inform the parent that the student is in danger of being dropped from the class." When a student gets 10 "E's," he's dropped from the class and must make it up later.

Under the new policy, the school will notify all parents whenever their children are absent, Casper said. Working parents would be notified by mail, he said.

The old policy allowed a student 10 unexcused absences from a class before he was dropped. No notes were needed to explain these absences. "Many students who are chronically absent look upon the 10 days as a gift because we didn't notify the parents," Casper said. "This new policy is much different."

"It will put pressure on the student to know that there is value in being there every day."

Casper said the new policy won't work unless faculty and parents cooperate. "Without the staff's cooperation no attendance policy works," he said. "And we need the support of the parents. If the parent doesn't care, it's a tough ballgame no matter what you do."

"One of the problems is that there are a large number of parents to whom it doesn't make any difference whether the child shows up or not. But now we will be doing everything in our power."

The revised student handbook, which contains the new attendance policy, also gives the school authority to keep a student after school if he is constantly late for classes. "Perhaps this will cut down on some of this foolishness," Casper said.

In other action, the school board approved a five cent hike in the price of school lunches. Elementary students will now pay 40 cents per lunch, while middle and high school students will pay 50 cents. The reduced lunch price will still be 10 cents and milk is still a nickel.

Kelly announced that registration for students new to the school district will be Thursday, August 24, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at whatever school the child will attend. Students who can't make that date should call during the week of August 28 to make an appointment to register. The phone numbers are: elementary, 582-6728; middle school, 582-9981; and high school, 582-6587.

East Jordan to buy new rescue truck

EAST JORDAN - The purchase of a new, four-wheel drive rescue truck for the fire department was approved last night by the City Council. The truck will cost $7,141. Fire department committee chairman George Shank said $3,641 is in the city budget for new equipment. The rest of the money will come from the city's general revenue funds.

Fire Chief Dick Barnett said the four-wheel drive will replace a two-wheel drive truck currently being used. He said the four-wheel vehicle would provide faster response time in bad weather conditions.

"In very poor conditions it may even enable us to respond where in the past we wouldn't even be able to get out," he said.

Barnett said the rescue truck carries equipment used for getting fire and accident victims out of dangerous situations in a hurry.

In other action, the council: --Approved a resolution allowing fishermen and boaters to use city parks between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. The old ordinance called for everyone to leave the park during those hours. --Instructed the city administration to investigate the possibility of a state police mini-station, consisting of three or four men, locating in the East Jordan area.

--Approved the removal of no parking signs on the east side of Second Street between Esterly and Williams for the months of April through November.

Correction

On last week's East Jordan front page, a headline said the school millage election was Tuesday. It was really Monday, as the story said. The Press regrets the error.

Despite assurances from Michigan Bell that their front yards would be properly reseeded with lawn grass, Mrs. Minnie Martin and the Cliff Frantz families on West Division St., Boyne City, have had to look out on this conglomeration of weeds that were seeded by the subcontractor who had the job of following up Bell Telephone's cable laying crew. The Frantz driveway also washed out after the cable layers had relaid the gravel.

Wise decisions by school boards

Both the East Jordan and Boyne City Boards of Education have made recent policy decisions that should benefit both school districts and therefore the entire community.

The East Jordan Board last week adopted a policy requiring all student athletes to maintain at least a C average in four classes to remain eligible for sports. In Boyne City, the board approved an administration recommendation for a stricter attendance policy. Both ideas have merit.

Most school districts, including Boyne and East Jordan, have been operating under the eligibility requirements of the Michigan High School Athletic Association, which call for students to pass 60 percent of their classes (four out of six, usually) to be eligible for sports. This seems very lax. It allows a student to have four D's and two F's and still be spending several hours a day practicing some sport.

The East Jordan school board has tightened its requirements and now insists that a student at least have a C average in four classes. This is still not extremely strict, allowing a student to possibly get two B's, two D's and two F's and still be able to play sports.

In addition, if a student can't fulfill these requirements, he still might be allowed to play if the Athletic Committee decides he is doing his best. That might sound like a loophole, but some youngsters just aren't academically oriented. If they weren't allowed to play sports, they might drop out of school.

East Jordan's new eligibility policy will give school officials the power to lean on students who aren't trying very hard. But it still protects those who are doing their best, even if that's not very good. Since the school has adopted a tougher standard than any of the schools it competes against, the Red Devils might have trouble keeping up with a team loaded with brawny but mentally weak athletes who wouldn't be eligible if they went to East Jordan.

This might cost the teams a few victories over the years, but so what? Winning at all costs is not what high school sports is supposed to be about, and East Jordan area residents should be happy to have a board more concerned about academics than athletic glory.

Editorial

Boyne City's good new idea, a stricter attendance policy, will make life tougher on those who try to skip school. The old policy allowed 10 unexcused class absences, which could encourage a student not to show up, since there was no formal reprimand for any of the first 10 absences.

Now parents will be notified every time a student isn't where he's supposed to be, and the students will have to make up the work they missed or eventually be dropped from class. This creates more paperwork for the faculty and the assistant principal, but the benefits are worth the efforts.

The stricter attendance policy will stress the importance of showing up for school. It will also help students academically, since they will be less likely to fall behind because of absences.

But as school officials said earlier this week, the new policy won't work if parents don't want to cooperate. Some parents might remember playing hockey themselves while in school, but the world is becoming a tougher place to live. What was good enough a generation ago might not make it now, and our children need all the preparation they can get while in school.

Two looks at rock concerts

Dear Parents,

As you probably know, they're having those rock music shows out at Castle Farms again this summer. The first one a couple weeks ago caused quite a mess, according to some people. So we went to the second show last Friday to see for ourselves what was going on.

Joe McElroy

You know these concerts are popular, but sometimes you feel rather suspicious of them, right? Drugs, sex, hearing loss, all of that. For sure, some rock concerts have turned into rowdy, even violent disasters. It all depends on how the show is run.

Not all the behavior at Friday's concert would win our youth a good conduct medal. There was drinking, some pot smoking and a few people who squealed their tires on the way home. Afterwards there was quite a mess to clean up. Multiply your kid's bedroom by 10,000 and you will have the picture.

I saw one or two young people who got really "wasted," which is usually a combination of too much to drink and a little bit to smoke. It's kind of the way you got that New Year's Eve when you didn't realize how strong the drinks were being mixed, except with this the hangover doesn't last quite as long.

With these sorts of problems, the obvious conclusion is that these concerts should be scrapped. Get the kids out of Castle Farms and back into the streets where they belong, right? Think about it a little. With 10,000 young people in any one place, you can expect a few problems. Ask any teacher or school principal. For every one who caused a problem, there were at least 100 who just came to have a good time and didn't bother anyone. This is a pretty good percentage.

The people running the Castle Farm concerts seem to have a handle on the situation. The parking situation has improved with more attendants and sheriff deputies on hand, and Sheriff Lassater said the traffic was cleared out an hour after the concert ended. There were plenty of security people provided by the promoters inside the farm grounds, leaving the sheriff deputies free to handle problems outside.

It might seem a little scary to have so many youngsters in one spot, listening to some wild rock band, but the fact is that they have to be somewhere. Castle Farms seems to be as good a spot as any.

Dear Kids,

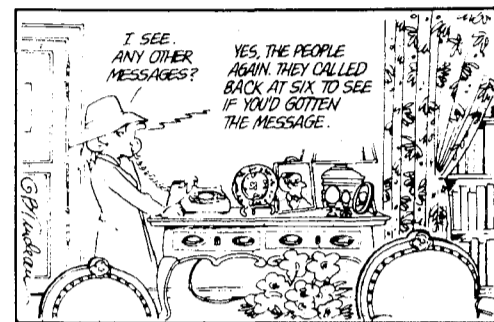

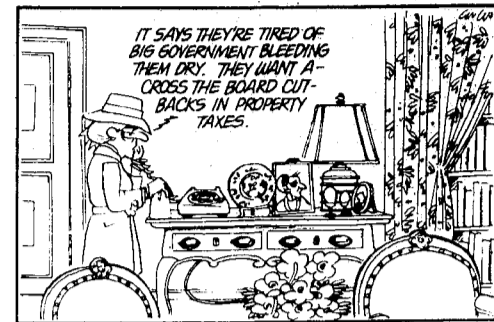

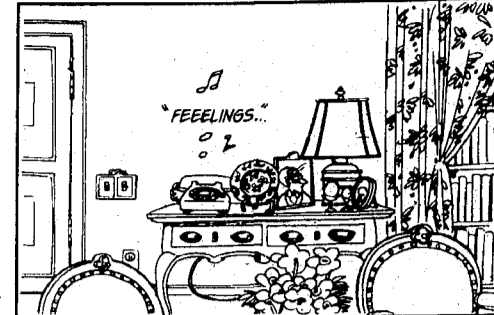

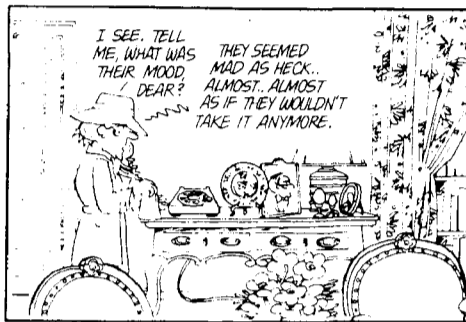

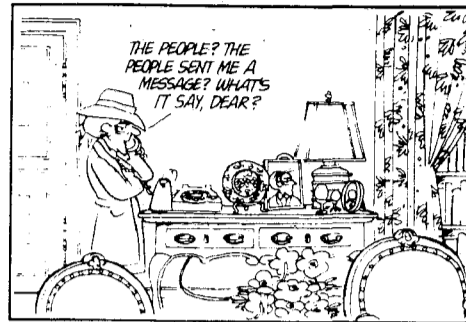

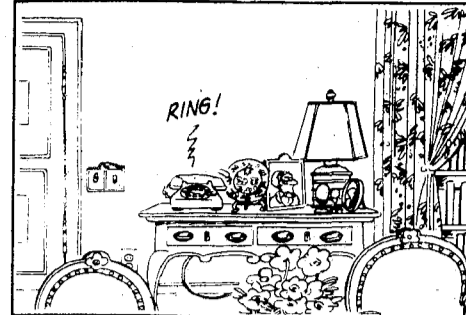

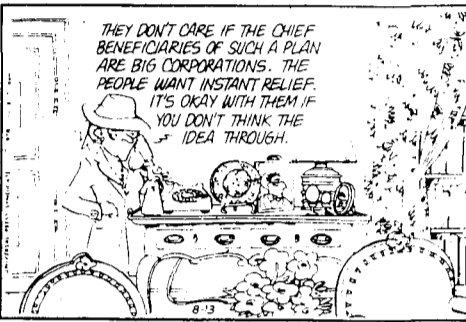

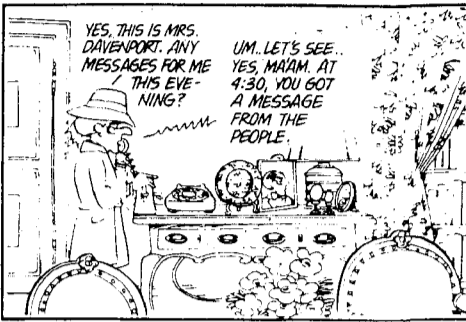

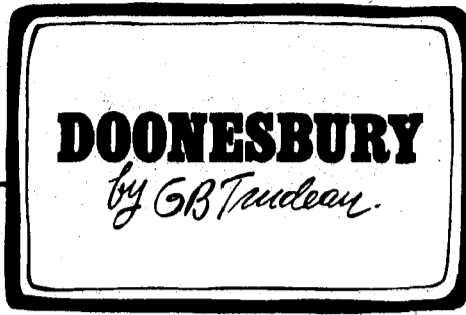

It might seem hard to believe when you think about how quiet our area gets during certain times of the year, but bigtime rock is alive and well in Charlevoix County. Two versions of this cultural phenomenon were on display at the Heart-Pablo Cruise concert.

Rock has its light and dark side, and the light, optimistic sounds of Pablo Cruise combined with perfect weather to get the evening off to a good start. Their upbeat harmonies and friendly on-stage personality can't help but put you in a good mood, and provided a stark contrast to the headliners.

Ann Wilson, the lead singer and mastermind behind Heart, doesn't smile much on stage, preferring to conserve her energies for gutwrenching vocals and intense stage mannerisms that power the band. The band played all its biggies, which is getting to be quite a list considering they've just hit it big the past few years.

Their live versions of "Magic Man," "Barracuda," and "Crazy On You," don't differ dramatically from the records, but Ann Wilson had enough star quality to have the audience eating out of the palm of her hand.

The band showed a degree of professionalism often lacking in rock groups by not sulking after the sound went out during their first encore. I was very surprised to see them come out again, but they did. They also didn't let the few idiots who threw ice cubes and cans onstage ruin the evening for the rest of the crowd. Why concert fans around here get off on this is beyond me. It's nothing but a good way to see a short concert. Would you stand on stage in front of 10,000 people and let them throw junk at you?

Did you realize?

This column contains facts that are different than any other facts now in use. I could not keep them down. They just sprang forth with a wild whoop demanding recognition.

Marshall Sayles

- For instance:
- There is no ski at Ski & Shore.
  - There is no coffee at the Coffee Mill.
  - There is no twin at Twin Valley Carpet.
  - There is no coal at Colwell & Company.
  - There is no fire at the Fire Department.
  - There's no Dilworth at the Dilworth.
  - There's no tanning at the Tannery.
  - There's no Horton at Horton Bay Store.
  - There is no Gregg at Gregg Publications.
  - There is no Kaden at Kaden's Emporium.
  - There is no grain at the Granary.
  - There is no soil at the Soil Conservation Service.
  - There's no Gocha at Gocha's Casuals.
  - There's no Essex at Boyne Essex.
  - There's no Campbell at Campbell Agency.
  - There's no Ben at the Ben Franklin Store.
  - There's no F.O. at F.O. Barden & Son.
- And, to bring this thing a little closer to home, there's no press at the Charlevoix County Press.
- (Note to the Editor: This column was carefully read and reread several times to be sure it made sense. Which goes along with my determination not to ask the public to do anything I'm not willing to do myself.)

Is this what they call planting a story?

I don't mind having guests over for dinner, but last week hospitality went too far.

I suppose it would be best to start at the beginning so this is what happened.

My son, Adrian, and I were shopping in Glen's Market when Adrian spied a Venus fly trap sitting next to a box of Boo Berry in the cereal section. Either the hungry little plant had the munchies or another mother had discovered it had been placed in the cart when she wasn't looking and deposited it before she got to the check out lane. I would like to believe it had the munchies.

Adrian and Darrin had wanted a Venus fly trap for several months, so being in one of those soft moods that mothers are known for, I bought the plant.

We brought him (the plant) home and the kids took off the clear plastic dome that covered him. He immediately opened his mouth, or whatever it's called, as if looking for a snack. The kids cheered.

Soon the rest of the neighborhood kids were standing in line at the door to view the new addition to the family. Darrin read the directions for care of the plant to each group that came in. . . too much handling of this plant could result in damage."

"What if we've already damaged him?" Darrin asked. "Look, he doesn't open up. We've killed him. He's dying!" His voice was frantic.

Hazel Blair

"He's not dying," I explained. "He's just in shock and nervous in his new surroundings. Give him a chance to get used to us and leave him alone for awhile."

Noting that the instructions said the plant requires several hours of sunlight a day, Darrin quickly found him (the plant) a sunny window. He sat next to him like a nervous parent.

"He's sick, Mom," Darrin said. "Look, he has little black spots all over him. What if it dies?"

"He's fine," I said. "It's just a little rash. He seems to be a very nervous plant." It's amazing how quickly a personality can be attached to a plant.

All afternoon Darrin kept a lonely vigil by the Venus fly trap's side, anxiously awaiting his (the plant's) recovery.

At five o'clock, I convinced him to come to the dinner table. The Venus fly trap was moved to the window behind him.

"He doesn't look well, Mom," Darrin said. "I'm worried. Bobby Balch and Aaron Brock helped catch flies for him to eat and he hasn't even touched them."

"Why don't you talk to him," Adrian suggested.

While Darrin talked quietly to the plant, assuring him that all was well with the world and that he had a home with us, Adrian giggled softly. Kids.

"We could feed him some of our hot dogs," Adrian said.

That's when the Venus fly trap joined us for dinner. We also had a friend over for dinner, so the table was getting a little crowded.

The dinner guest (not the plant) and I continued our discussion as the children tried to convince the Venus fly trap that hot dogs really are good for you, no matter what everyone says.

"Don't talk so loud," Darrin said to our guest, "you're making the Venus fly trap nervous and he won't eat. And if he doesn't eat, he'll get sick and die."

Our guest looked somewhat stunned and replied, "I will not be intimidated by a plant."

Later in the evening, Adrian sold out his share of the Venus fly trap for a deck of cards that Darrin no longer wanted.

"Boy, did I get the good end of that deal," Adrian said, smiling smugly.

"How can you think you got the better deal," Darrin asked in disbelief. "Life is precious. A lot more important than an old deck of cards."

Adrian shuffled through the deck thoughtfully. "Yea, but you can't play poker with a Venus fly trap."

PROCEEDINGS OF THE EAST JORDAN CITY COUNCIL
The East Jordan City Council met in what could be termed a Marathon session Tuesday evening August 1, 1978, at 6:00 p.m., all members present except Fox, and Mayor Meredith presiding. This 6:00 meeting had been called to hear plans presented by the Committee for Community Equal Rights regarding the Lake Patricia Dam site. Since it has been discovered that the land in question does not belong to the City of East Jordan but to the Industrial Development Corporation, there was no point in pursuing it further and the meeting was adjourned at about 6:30 p.m.
Another meeting was scheduled for 7:00 p.m. to hear Bob Westcott explain why he should not be cited for violation of the side yard section of the Zoning Ordinance. The meeting was called to order at 7:00 p.m. by Mayor Meredith with the same members present as at the 6:00 p.m. meeting. When Robert Westcott had not arrived at the meeting at 7:15 a motion was adopted to cite him for the violations as recommended by Planning & Zoning commission. That meeting adjourned at about 7:25 p.m.
At 7:30 p.m. the regular meeting of the East Jordan City Council was called to order by Mayor Meredith with all members except Fox present.
Minutes were approved, authorization was given to pay $28,278.60 in bills as presented and the necessary transfers made.
A resolution was adopted stating policy regarding assessment districts for street paving. When 40 percent or more of the proposed district is in favor of paving a heretofore unpaved street, a district shall be established with the property owners assessed 80 percent and the city absorbing the remaining 20 percent as council deems necessary.
Other action included authorizing the superintendent to put a new turbine on one well; replacing the big pump at the sewer plant with a smaller one; to advertise for bids for the Third Ward Comfort station and appurtenances. The budget was amended to add the $7,000 necessary for the matching funds for the Third Ward Park Grant.
A request for an invitation to the DNR to address the council was tabled. Two requests for side yard variances were approved subject to approval by Planning & Zoning in order to expedite building.
Reports were received from the Police Committee, Ambulance Administrator, a thank you note was received regarding the Watch for Children signs on Boyne Road and a letter was read from HUD stating that the city has not been selected to share in the Community Development Block Grant funds as requested. Mr. Westcott appeared, explaining that he had been "out front" at 7:00 p.m. but was told that the meeting wouldn't start until 7:30 so he left for half an hour. After much questions and answers, the action taken at the 7 p.m. meeting was rescinded and a meeting between Westcott and Planning & Zoning will be arranged.
The East Jordan Youth Group were granted "extended hours to midnight" for their dances but they must obtain the dance permit for each dance.
The committee for Community Equal Rights suggested the possibility that the present curfew at the launching site is illegal.
Bids for a four wheel drive truck for the fire department were received and referred to the fire committee for study and recommendation; bids received for asphalt paving were received and referred to the street committee with power to act and bids were received for the old police car and high bid of $756 by STR Corporation was accepted.
A copy of the official minutes of these meetings is available for perusal at the city clerk's office during regular working hours.

How to look sharp for school

BY SANDRA VANSTEENKISTE
As the fall season rapidly approaches, it's time once again for parents and their children, as well as school teachers and high schoolers, to begin thinking about back to school fashions and the way they can look their best.

For mothers concerned about their elementary school children and the wear and tear on their clothes, corduroy is still in and very popular. As Jack Phillips, manager of Penney's in Petoskey said, "Corduroys have never been out of style; in fact, this is our biggest year for corduroys in 10 years."

He adds that denims are still very strong, as those pants will probably never fade out of existence. Phillips said, "The look for winter this year for boys or men, and girls as well too, will be the uniform look." He describes this as the corduroy pants with flannel shirts, which he says are also big on the market. The plaid look in shirts will be especially popular too, he adds.

The popular look, according to Don Toffolo, owner of Kaden's in Boyne City, Charlevoix and Petoskey, for boys and even men will be the "casual but sporty type look."

"For a small town like Boyne City, there is that middle-of-the-road type clothing. You don't see much else other than a casual look," Toffolo said. "As you get into the bigger metropolitan areas, you see more dressier styles. But here in Boyne, the leisure suit is more in demand than in the larger cities, but the shipments aren't coming in."

Toffolo also said that corduroys are still in style, and anything made of corduroy sells well too. He said that ever since straight leg pants have been back in style, bell bottoms are still more popular.

Another popular look for boys or men, Toffolo said, is the "classic look," which he explains as the "conservative style, the button down collar, the ivy league look, more or less". Or the rugby look with a striped pattern and a solid color collar is also very popular.

Carol Tighe, owner of the EJ Shop in East Jordan, also said that her shop sells a lot of corduroys for the boys and even little girls. The EJ Shop is more oriented to the "normal look" which Tighe says is just ordinary sportswear. Her shop carries a lot of jeans and just sporty all around clothes, "not a lot of mod fashions."

As for the ladies out in the crowds, you may be aware that the skirt is more popular these days than just about anything else.

Carol Hanes, owner of Gocha's Casuals in Boyne City, said that the skirt is a favorable item high on the selling list, with a more fuller and layered look. Sweaters are also popular items around this area. The look in sweaters, Hanes said, is with big sleeves, loose fitting and a hand crocheted or loose knit look.

Turtleneck are once again in but this year the cowl neck is quickly fading, Hanes said. The denim look is still in and will probably continue, but she emphasizes that all girls want at least "a skirt in their wardrobe".

Boyne Sportswear in Boyne City is more or less oriented to the female college crowd and teachers. As owner Marion Meyer said, the shop is "for the more sophisticated but casual look."

Meyer said that the washable suede look is popular and that sweaters have taken on a "younger look", with prints and stripes being very fashionable. The vest look is also high in the fashion list with skirts matching. "Skirts," she said, "are bigger than ever this year," which she explains is good for business. Plaids are also high on the priority lists as fashionable wear.

Both Meyer and Hanes said that jewelry was big this year. The "in thing" in jewelry is the fine, fine chains.

Meyer said, "the fall jewelry this year was gold chains and little scarf pins, wood sets with matching pins and link chains and bracelets were very popular above all."

Hanes said that in her store "status bracelets are popular, which are fine little chains." The "nothing" chain as Hanes defines it is another type of fine chain that is, also very popular with the fashion crowd. "The earrings are bigger this year, with big hoops and big buttons."

Ed Behan's Inc. in Petoskey concentrates on women's wear. Marie Parlett, manager, said her shop was "very classic and not faddish, since the new thing was the classic look". Skirts, she said, are very in, especially wool.

She too said pullover sweaters were still popular and that the cowl neck "is on it's way out". Blouses are still in with a popular material being polyester and yet plaids, print or solid still very fashionable too. At Behan's, corduroys are not a big thing Parlett said.

She concluded that, "women these days are getting away from the individual hippie look and are looking to get more dressed up than they used to. They want to do their own thing and yet be a lady."

Nancy Adams, buyer for Kaden's said that dresses and skirts were popular this year but that "women will never give up pants because they're just too comfortable." Tunic tops, extra long, are going fast, she said and also the "grandfather" shirt which she explained as the very long shirt type that is usually worn loose or belted loosely.

Adams agreed the big sweaters are popular this year with soft material as best sellers, such as angora or mohair.

Since "Saturday Night Fever" has taken over the disco scene, disco clothes are a must into the fashion world. Adams said that "disco pants" are popular, which are more or less regular jeans with bell bottoms and flashy belts to top it off. These, she said though, probably won't be coming out strongly until October. But now available are satin, full sleeve blouses that will look sharp with the upcoming "disco pants", she said.

As for the little girls, the style, Adams said, was the "Little house on the prairie look" with a long loose fitting dress in length. Although pants are still more practical for the little ones who sit on dirty floors.

By now most of you people should have a good idea of what will be worn and considered in fashion this fall. One last thing though that you might have all ready questioned that hasn't been mentioned - What is the in color to wear?

Surprisingly enough that answer came pretty unanimous from all area merchants. The most fashionable color this year and generally for all ages, is the mauve or berry colored look, along with the wine, rose or burgandy flavors. But the khaki color, a light yellowish brown, which has been in style, is still highly demanded. As a few merchants put it, "earth tones" which are involved in the brown family, such as yellows; camels and beiges are also very popular in the color world, of fashion. In general the dustier colors - such as greens and black and rusts are still prevailing colors too.

And lastly, to top off the outfits, are shoes.

Jake Janack, owner of Jake's Shoe Shop, says the popular shoes these days are the wedge sole with a casual look though. People from age two to 90 may find a style to their liking as he carries all styles. He said that there was no specific color that was popular.

Jack Phillips, manager at Penney's seemed to think that platforms were still in, although they aren't as high as they have been. The heavier look in a casual shoe is the style as Phillips sees it. The platforms are popular, he said, but the heels are much narrower on them, with a notched heel platform the most popular.

School will start soon

It's that time of year again. School will begin Wednesday, September 6 at 8:10 a.m. in Boyne City Middle School and 8:15 for elementary and high school. Registration is Thursday, August 24. School Superintendent Rich Kelly says school will open on time in all three buildings without split shifts despite Monday's millage defeat. East Jordan schools will also open

September 6 in all buildings. Classes will begin at 8:30 a.m. Final registration for high school students will be next Monday through Thursday at the old high school. (Note: The school newsletter said registration would be at the new high school.)

Boyne Falls will start school Tuesday, September 5. The exact starting time has not yet been determined.

Conroversy heats up following public meeting

BOYNE CITY - In the wake of a well-attended public meeting and prior to Wednesday, August 16 court hearing on the matter, Boyne City residents this week were presented with separate petitions both for and against the proposed closing of Front Street to make way for the development of 250 condominiums on the former tannery property.

The exact number of signatures on either petition was unknown Tuesday, but both groups planned to present their effort to Circuit Court Judge Martin Breighner Wednesday. Because the street is near Lake Charlevoix, the court must give approval before the Boyne City Commission can close the road.

Most of the project's opponents aren't objecting to the building of condominiums, but to the street's closing. "We are absolutely not against the condos being built," said Violet Manglos, one of the petition's sponsors. "We are against having that road closed. That's far, far too much traffic."

Mrs. Manglos, Carol Judkins and others who are circulating the petition against the road closing have hired a Charlevoix attorney, John Michaels, to represent their cause in court.

Rick Smith of Lake Associates, the would-be developers, says the project would be a financial flop if the road isn't closed. "The proposed development is unsalable with the road there," he said.

"People just don't want to buy expensive townhouses with a road separating them from the lake."

Mrs. Manglos suggested the construction of single family homes, similar to those being built along Marshall Road and other areas overlooking the lake from a distance. "They're not paying what we're paying for the tannery land," said Smith, whose group has a non-refundable $25,000 option on the property. That option expires October 6.

Smith said the two Detroit businessmen who presently own the commercially-zoned land want $575,000 for 55 acres. At the public meeting Thursday, August 10, Smith and his brother, Dave, and Jon Gerster said it took long negotiations to get the owners to come down to that price.

A crowd of approximately 130 persons jammed Top O'Michigan Electric Company's auditorium for the public hearing. Most of those who spoke opposed the project, especially the road closing.

"This is not an alley you're vacating, it's a well-used road," one person said. We have an unusual situation because of the water and the mountains. We can't just stick in more roads.

"I'm not concerned about giving up the road for the beauty, but for crowding the roads we have now."

The Smiths said Division and Second Streets would be improved if the condos are built, but many of those who spoke said they didn't think those streets would be able to handle the additional traffic.

The Smiths told the crowd they would abandon the project if they felt a majority of residents are opposed to it. "I guess we would abide by your wishes if you were against the project," Dave Smith said.

"Life is too short," his brother added. Several days after the meeting Rick Smith expressed "disappointment and frustration" at the results of the public meeting. "I've been keen on what this whole development could do for Boyne City," he said. "This could be one of the greatest examples of what the public and private sectors can achieve for a community."

"My disappointment comes from seeing that others don't share that little dream of mine. The disappointment is very acute.

"But I learned a long time ago that whenever you have public meetings you get a lot of people who are opposed."

Dave Smith, left, fields a question from a member of last week's public meeting audience. Smith and his brother, Rick, and Jon Gerster held the meeting to explain their plan to build condominiums on the tannery property. City Manager Tim Clifton, in dark suit, acted as moderator.

What now? School board meets public

BOYNE CITY - The Board of Education will hold a public hearing Thursday, August 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria to find out what the public wants it to do now that another millage election has been voted down.

Voters shot down both ballots on Monday's election. The first proposition, for 19.25 mills, lost 520-595. If it had passed, the school board would have had enough money to operate for the year, but had said most sports, vocational education in Petoskey and many extracurricular activities would be eliminated.

The second proposition, which called for an additional 1.35 mills on top of the first ballot's 19.25, would have allowed the schools to have a program similar to last year's, with the addition of a new vocational education teacher. That proposal was soundly beaten, 394-721. It had lost in June's election by almost a 2-1 margin.

The school board members said they needed the millage increase because of inflation and higher operating costs caused by opening the new school. Thursday's hearing is to get public opinion before they figure out their next move. "We want to get input from the public on why the millage went down and what should be done," said Superintendent Rich Kelly.

Asked what cuts will be made, Kelly said, "I don't know yet. No decisions have been reached."

Kelly said another election will be held. "There will have to be," he said, "we don't have any money." He said school will still open as scheduled on Wednesday, September 6, in all three buildings. The school system will operate on its eight allocated county mills until those limited funds run out.

Fritz Sutter, the board member who suggested Thursday's hearing, says he is at "wit's end. I don't know which way to go. We're going to have to have some input from the public."

"The people of Boyne City are saying, by the way they voted, that they don't want us to run the schools anymore; they want the state to come in and take over."

"What do they want? Do they want to fire half a dozen teachers, do they want curriculum changed, or football dropped, or what. We need to know."

DNR doesn't like landfill

WALLOON LAKE - For 38 years, Melrose Township residents have been disposing of their garbage at the township's 13-acre landfill near State Road. But now a relatively new law and pressure from the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has put the future of the landfill in doubt.

Township officials are afraid it will cost residents more money to get rid of their garbage if the landfill is closed. But DNR officials say local drinking water could become polluted if it remains open.

In 1965 the state legislature passed the Solid Waste Act, which imposed stricter guidelines on the operation of refuse disposal areas, according to Larry Thornton, regional supervisor of the DNR's Resource Recovery Division.

He said new standards specify how deep and how far from other property owners garbage must be buried. He added that the DNR has no scientific information on how the garbage at Melrose is being handled, and said this lack of information could lead to pollution problems, such as unhealthy chemicals seeping from the dump into the water table and then into the public drinking supply.

There has not been any evidence of such pollution so far, Thornton said, but, "We've always been dealing with these problems after the fact," he said. The new regulations are designed to prevent these problems ahead of time by forcing governmental units to improve their present waste disposal systems or find new ones.

"What it comes down to is, if the refuse isn't objectionable, why do people want it carted away from their homes in the first place?" Thornton said.

"I just don't feel that open dumps today are a good thing. It seems like we should have progressed past that."

Melrose Township Supervisor Harry Griffin says the former gravel pit used as a landfill since 1930 hasn't caused any problems yet, and he doesn't understand why the DNR is objecting to it. "I just don't get what they're trying to do," Griffin said. "We have cleaned up our area some. For a small township, we have it in pretty good shape."

Griffin said the garbage is all wrapped in plastic bags and covered every evening after the dump closes. But the DNR doesn't feel this is enough, saying seepage remains a potential problem. When told the trash is covered, Thornton said, "What does that mean? I even question whether they're doing that properly. You can't just cover it with dirt."

"I've advised them to try and seek other alternatives, such as a transfer facility or a door-to-door pickup," Thornton said.

But Griffin said another DNR official told him the township should transfer its garbage to a licensed landfill in Kalkaska or Gaylord, which he says would be an unfair expense for local taxpayers. He said "very little" of the Melrose landfill has been used. "A lot of this stuff is based on what they need for landfills near the big cities," Griffin said. "I don't think ours is any health hazard."

The DNR has not taken any enforcement action against Melrose, but Thornton says, "We have advised them that we don't think it has potential for future use." He said the DNR would take formal legal action as a last result if Melrose doesn't improve their waste disposal system.

Griffin said the township board has asked a local engineer to study the situation, but have not yet received a recommendation. Thornton said he would like to meet with Melrose Township officials to discuss the problem, but is waiting for them to ask for a meeting.

"We're willing to meet with the township," he said. "I would anticipate they would want to do that."

"We're not picking on Melrose; this is going on in a lot of areas," he said. "A lot of the old dumps were started years ago before there were any solid waste statutes. We are in sort of a transition period."

Electric election results

BOYNE CITY - The three incumbents were re-elected to the Board of Directors of Top O'Michigan Rural Electric Company at the co-op's annual meeting Tuesday night at the Boyne Theatre.

Re-elected to three year terms were Dale Fox of Johannesburg, David Matchett of Charlevoix and John Tanner of Kalkaska.

Top O'Michigan provides electricity for all power customers who live in townships.

Martha Drake of Petoskey, an opponent of nuclear power, finished fourth in the voting.

Charlevoix man drowns

EVELINE TOWNSHIP - Despite the lifesaving attempts of bystanders and sheriff deputies, a 42-year-old Charlevoix man drowned in Nowland Lake Sunday, August 13.

Denver Jackson was swimming off a rubber raft at 4 p.m. when he apparently lost control and drowned, according to Sheriff George Lasater.

Three tourists assisted Deputies Mike Bascom and Dale Boehn as they tried to revive him for 20 minutes, Lasater said.

All five will receive special citations for their efforts from his department, he said.

Rosemary Karkosak, mother of four, and Julie Bradford, mother of two, are among the organizers of the new nursery school to open this fall.

New lawyer for Boyne

Richard May feels the rapid growth of Boyne City can support a fourth attorney in town.

BOYNE CITY - There's a new face on the local legal scene, that of Richard May, who opened a law practice Monday, August 14 in the professional building at the corner of Park and River Streets.

May, 32, becomes the city's fourth practicing attorney. The firm of Conkle, Varnum and McTaggart have three lawyers since Terry Carr has left, and Robert Klevorn has his own practice.

May says he first started thinking of leaving his position in the Ingham County Prosecutor's Office last winter. He applied for the County Prosecutor's position when Roy Hayes resigned, and was one of the three finalists for the job.

When Scott Beatty was chosen to succeed Hayes, May started looking at other job opportunities in the area. Guy Conkle had recently died and several Boyne residents told May they thought there was enough work for another attorney.

May says he left the Lansing area "to have a more individualized practice of the law, dealing with people's problems on a more personal basis."

"Those problems to them are very big. To provide a legal service to them will be more challenging and interesting."

May is also starting another new business, called Northern Michigan Investment Company. The company represents sellers who have sold property on land contracts.

May attended Wayne State Law School, graduating in 1973. He and his wife, Gail, have three young children. They have bought a home on Deer Lake Road.

Nursery dream comes true

BY KAY SEVERINSEN
BOYNE CITY - A lot of luck and hard work have paid-off for six Boyne City mothers who will open the town's only nursery school on October 1.

The women, Rosemary Karkosak, Julie Bradford, Ginger Jackson, Mary Greetis, Andrea Carr and Krista Crosby, formed the organizational board that has been meeting since February to iron out the problems.

"It's been a lot of work," said Bradford, the mother of two young children. "But we wanted more than a babysitting service, more than a day care. This will be a nursery school."

The mothers hope the children will learn school skills that will make kindergarten and elementary school easier, Karkosak said.

"Boyne City hasn't had a nursery school for a few years," she pointed out, "and teachers have told us they've noticed children now are less ready for school. They think it's play time."

Children also need to learn that school time is structured; that there is a time to listen, time to work, a time to play, Mrs. Karkosak added. They should learn to follow directions and get along with other children.

The Boyne City Nursery Center Board recently hired a teacher, Julie Seals, who will hire a teacher's aide. Mothers will be welcome to visit classes, but the nursery is not a co-op where all parents must donate time.

The school will operate Monday through Friday mornings and Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Four- and five-year-olds will come either Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, or Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Two- and-a-half to three-year olds will meet Tuesday and Thursday mornings. There is room for about 40 pupils. Cost is $2.25 per session.

"We really wanted to lower the cost; that is too high for some mothers," Karkosak said. "If the family is just above the poverty level, they can't afford it. We've checked about grants and CETA funds for the aide, but we haven't been able to get any money. We hope next year we'll get a grant and will be able to lower the fee. We want it available to everyone."

The board is soliciting sponsors, who would pay the fees for a child, she added. "We've gotten a couple so far."

Presently the school is operating on almost no cash, she said. "Some of us paid in advance so we'd have some money."

The board members would not have been able to set up the nursery school had not the Boyne City School District donated a portable unit.

"That's when we knew we would do it," Bradford said. "It hinged on that. We didn't have any other alternatives. We couldn't buy a building."

The board also was able to obtain equipment left from the former Jack and Jill Nursery. The new nursery board could not have afforded the tables, chairs, books, toys and other facilities had they not been donated, the women say.

"Our big problem now," said Karkosak, "is getting liability insurance. People don't like to insure nursery schools, so we're having trouble."

So far, the community has been very supportive, the women added.

"We met with the elementary school teachers and all they thought it was a very good idea," Karkosak said. "They've all offered to meet with our teacher and give her pointers. The school and Rich Kelly (Superintendent of Schools) have really been helpful, but we feel we're doing the school a service, too, because the children will be better prepared for class."

The board has been successful, she added, "because we ended up with a good working group of people. Everyone gets along so well, and all but one of us is a certified teacher. We've all worked with schools and education and everyone has so many good ideas. Nobody is afraid to work."

Those interested in enrolling their child, may call Bradford at 582-2264 or Karkosak at 582-7223.

At local art studios, you can watch craftsmen work

BY KAY SEVERINSEN

They don't put up gawdy red and yellow billboards along highways to northern Michigan.

They don't find busloads of tourists trampling down the doors to their workshops. And they don't sell many relatively inexpensive, easily commercialized items such as strawberry walnut fudge.

But in their own way, local artists and craftsmen are just as much a part of northern Michigan's unique attraction as the lakes and hills.

Summer is their busiest of seasons; this Saturday, local art fairs wind up with the Artist's and Craftsman Fair, beginning at 10 a.m. in Pennsylvania Park, Petoskey and the Bellaire Arts and Crafts Fair also Saturday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Richard Park, Bellaire.

But even if you miss the art fairs, you can still find many local artists throwing pots, soldering jewelry, shuttling looms and painting in their own studios, most of which are open to the public. Many local artists have won statewide acclaim for their works, and still other artists, who made their reputations "down below" have moved to northern Michigan where they find the natural setting more inspiring.

Fun and Sun visited the studios of several local artists featured in this issue.

There is barely enough room for a small child to run through what was once the living room of the Fulkerson's small house on Douglas Street in Boyne City.

First there is "Clair de Loom" Mike Fulkerson's first real loom. Then there's "Barbara," a huge, handsome, cherry wood loom strung with hundreds of fibers.

Beyond that, there are still more loom parts, a spinning wheel, racks and stacks and stacks of yarns and fibers.

But he's not yet really serious about weaving, Mike insists.

"This is the first year I've professed to be a professional and gone to art fairs, but I'm not into it for the money yet. To me, it's still just an ego thing. I get just as high when people ooh and ah over my stuff at fairs."

Fairs, he says, are just a way to become well known. "Weavers don't make much at fairs," he adds. "I would like to do this full time, but that's different than doing it for a living. If you do it for a living, you have to do what people want, and as an artist I like a little freedom."

So during the day, he services juke boxes and pinball machines for Bryan Brothers Music Company.

That leaves his evenings to weave, spin and experiment.

One such experiment makes visitors and fairgoers smile - his animal hair yarn.

He pulls several lumpy skeins from a basket. "Here, this is poodle hair. And this is St. Bernard, horsehair yarn, and sheepdog. And this stuff," he pulls out a soft brown skein, "is my own hair, spun with wool. I haven't figured out what to use it for yet."

Mostly, he weaves subtly colored fabrics for ponchos, purses, napkins and scarves and window hangings.

He had always made clothes for his wife and child, he says. And after he bought a table loom for his wife's Christmas present five years ago, he found himself spending more and more time weaving.

"This," he says, patting Barbara on her trestle, "was a big step for me. I just bought it in November. You have to get to the point where you lose your false modesty and say 'my stuff is as good as that'. You have to have a certain confidence in yourself."

Mike Fulkerson's studio, "Clair de Loom," is located at 608 Douglas, Boyne City. Visitors welcome evenings. Call first: 582-6135.

She welds tiny strips of sterling silver. He converts metal kegs into woodburning stoves. She tells stories with copper etchings. He fishes for trout in their backyard.

Somehow, Linda and Jerry Beers-

Aydlott manage to scrape out a living as artists.

A visitor to their sunny studio just outside East Jordan finds the place in happy bedlam. The babysitter is leaving with their 10-month-old son. Jerry is showing visitor his stove creations and Linda is discussing her jewelry with another visitor.

"We're so busy right now getting ready for an art show this weekend, (Charlevoix)" says Linda. "Our summers are booked solid by Memorial Day, because fairs screen you way in advance."

She and Jerry make most of their money in the summer months by traveling every weekend to a different art fair, each time toting along their peak-roofed display booth.

"We're getting so tired of traveling around," she says. "We keep thinking there's got to be a better way to earn a living. But there's always the inner hope of being discovered and suddenly everyone flocks to you saying, 'I can't live without your jewelry.'"

She laughs, as she does frequently. It really doesn't matter about being discovered, as long as they live in a near "paradise," as she calls it.

"I lived in Detroit four years and everything there is so negative. Here everything is positive."

On their land near the East Jordan City Airport, they have a barn full of egg-laying chickens, a wild strawberry patch and a stream full of hungry trout.

Every little bit helps when your gross annual income is $10,000 and almost two thirds of that goes for supplies, Linda says.

Money. That subject launches them both happily into their favorite pet peeve: lack of government support for artisans.

"In Europe, artists are subsidized," Linda says. "Here they have their thumbs on top of us. It's so frustrating for American artists."

But in spite of their frustrations, she and her husband still manage to find the time and creativity to make beautiful things. Most of the jewelry is done with finely soldered wires woven or twisted into filigree or intricate design. Jerry also makes carved metal belt buckles when he's not making stoves.

The entrance to their workshop is lined with velvet cases atwinkle with gold, silver, brass, opals and garnets, not to mention framed color photos by Jerry of Michigan scenes, flowers and wildlife.

"I like to tell stories with my things," explains Linda. She points to a necklace.

"See this stone, I thought it looked like wheat. So these dangly things have a farmer, the sun and the rain, because that's what makes wheat grow. Mostly, though, we have to work at making things that sell. That's the only way to make it as an artist."

The Aydlots welcome visitors to their studio, "Body Embellishments," weekdays. Located five miles south of East Jordan. Take M-66 to Webster Road, Webster Road to stop sign, right to first house. Call first: 536-2704.

It didn't work out as they planned.

When Richard and Nancy Cunningham first came to Boyne City 10 years ago, Richard thought he would build himself a little studio and become a full time artist.

"I realized I missed teaching so much I had to go back to it," Richard says. He had taught in Flint; now he teaches art at East Jordan High School.

But he still has a studio behind his home. Much of his spare time is spent there, throwing and firing pots. Nancy develops their own unique glazes. He has some wholesale outlets and attends some art fairs, but doesn't depend on pottery for income.

"It's not easy," he says. "You have to have a comfortable knowledge of business and you can't make very many mistakes. But you have to sell something because otherwise you have a lot of things sitting around."

His students, he says, call him Captain Art, and envision him in a Superman-type cape and mask, calling for "Truth, Justice and Aesthetic Expression."

Pottery is more than functional, he expounds. "Most of us have a philosophic basis for our work, something about authenticity and expressiveness. I think of myself as a unique person; we are all unique. And art is an attempt to share your unique view of the world. A lot of artists don't feel their art is complete until it's shared. That's why they go to art fairs."

Misty Morning Trading Company, 113 Groveland, Boyne City, is open 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Whenever Hazel Blair is mentioned

other artists nod their heads knowingly. "She's very good," they'll say, "but she doesn't know it."

One of her paintings, "The Clown," won third place in People's Choice at the Portside Art Fair last week.

But unlike other local artists who have public studios, Blair works at home in private.

"I don't think I could paint with someone watching me," she says. "I saw people doing it at the fair but I couldn't do it. Painting is like being in your own little bubble."

"I've done almost nothing for a whole year," she says. "And people would ask what I had done recently and I felt bad, because there was nothing to show. So I quit my job and I'm trying to paint all the time. But it's a little hard disciplining. I used to paint several hours at a time."

Her oils and pen and inks are inspired by almost anything, she says: Michigan scenery, old photographs, dreams. "I'm really fascinated by faces. You can show a lot with a face or a hand."

Some paintings go smoothly, she adds, while others are disappointments from the start.

"I have a whole basement full of failures. And some of the good ones you get attached to, until someone is standing there with money for them. The first year was the hardest to sell, and then you get used to it."

Traffic screeches to a halt sometimes

when Chuck Koucky and Nancy Riggs

Koucky fire up their rare outdoor wood-burning kiln.

"It shoots flames out the sides and up the top," says Chuck, explaining the 20-foot tall home-built kiln. The Koucky's found they could save thousands of dollars by building it themselves.

In fact, the two artists do nearly everything themselves to save money. They raise chickens, bees, (pigs sometimes) tap maple trees, and grow vegetables.

And somehow, still manage to fill their large, airy studio, The Crockery, with Chuck's pottery and Nancy's weavings.

"This has been a dream I've always had," says Nancy. "I'd studied art in college but I switched to art history because I didn't think I could make a living at art. And I'd always wanted to raise animals. Now I have everything."

In addition to the studio, the two go to some art fairs and also have several consignment shops and wholesale outlets that bring in money.

"But we're working for a local market," says Chuck. "People you meet at shows aren't coming back for Christmas and birthdays. But we have people who come here every summer. Our location on a highway helps a lot, too."

But Chuck's pottery is popular, other artists say and his work ranges from chunky, sculptured pots to dainty oil lamps.

"I'm not a production potter, though," he insists. "I've never made more than 30 or 40 of any one thing. That's not really production."

Nancy is not into production either, she says, but then, few artists are. "I want to make things that people can use over and over again. I can't make a coat like Sears Roebuck, but I don't want to. Weaving isn't as salable an item, and sometimes I don't do too well at shows. It can be very discouraging. But I really have fun doing it."

"I had a dream about this piece," she says, pointing out a rainbow striped wall hanging. "And the judge couldn't decide if he liked it. So I grabbed it away and said, 'I don't care if you like it or not, I do.' I kind of hope it never sells."

The Crockery is two miles south of the Ironton Ferry on M-66. Usually open 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Call 536-7289.

When the sun streams through the stained glass pictures and planters that line the windows, the Misty Morning Trading Company looks like a crystalline candy store.

Beyond the large display room with its hundreds of colorful, leaded windows, skylights, mirrors and wall hangings all lit from behind to show off their colors, there is more.

At the Boyne City stained glass factory, visitors can watch stained glass being cut, leaded and formed into works of art by stained glass artists. Everything is designed and made in the shop.

Misty Morning was started four years ago because, says current owner Keith Breker. "It was hard to pack stained glass things to take to art fairs. And glass never had good sales."

Now business is slow by steady, he says and in addition to retail sales, also offers Saturday afternoon classes in cutting stained glass.

"Most people can get pretty good in a couple of months," he says.

Craftsmen, patrons bring art to the community

Mike Fulkerson of Boyne City says Artists North gave him the encouragement he needed to enter his weavings in local art fairs. Now he's helping the group start a directory of all local, visual and performing artists. (Fun photo by Kay Severinsen).

It's hard to figure out whether or not there are actually a lot of artists and craftsmen in Charlevoix County, or if they are just easy to find.

"I think it's because we're just well organized," says Nancy Cunningham, publicity chairman for Artists North.

"No," says Cyg Riley, one of the founders of the Crooked Tree Arts Council and the East Jordan Portside Art and Historical Society. "There are more artists up here. We've drawn them; they come here for the fairs (Portside Art Fair, Charlevoix Art Fair and others). Once they get up here, look around you, that's why they stay."

Whatever the reason, the artists in this county are organized. There's the three-year-old, largely social Artists North; the six-year-old Crooked Tree, which sponsors both visual and performing arts, the newly formed Petoskey Area Fibers Guild, with its monthly demonstrations and the East Jordan Portside Art and Historical Society.

This year Portside brought Joan Karff, a ballet teacher from Houston, Texas, who is now teaching a three-week course in East Jordan.

"We've always had professional artists and teachers," says Mrs. Riley. "We built our reputation on it."

Because of her work on both Crooked

Tree and Portside, the Emmet-Charlevoix area has seen symphonies, operas, ballets, exhibits and artists in residence for many years.

"You should have seen this place 22 years ago when we moved up here," she says. "There were four community concerts a year and usually they were during bad weather so you couldn't always go. That was it. Now, we really have a lot going on."

The society recently sponsored its 16th annual art fair at Elm Point, drawing more than 2,000 visitors to view the works of 100 artists.

All fair entrants are screened months beforehand, Mrs. Riley says. "It's great, people are always bringing pots and paintings and things by the house to be checked. "When you're involved in art, you're always looking for something totally new. This year at the art fair we had rosemaking, an old Norwegian folk art with intricate designs."

The rosemaking was done by a Wisconsin artist, but many of the artists at the fair are local members of Artists

North. In addition to being a social and demonstration club, that group also publishes a brochure of 19 studios open to the public. Members are also planning a book of area art works, which will also contain historical facts and photographs donated by East Jordan photography store owner Doris Huckle.

And, the group is preparing a directory of Antrim, Emmet and Charlevoix County's visual and performing artists.

"We're planning the directory because artists don't know each other," says Artists North member Mike Fulkerson, a Boyne City weaver. "Suppose an architect wants a woven sculpture. He doesn't know where we are. It's amazing how many people around here are doing something. There are a lot of actors doing dinner theater; a lot of very good musicians. Hopefully, people won't be shy about calling us."

The directory will be published at no cost to those listed. Those interested can call Fulkerson during the evenings at 582-6135.

Here's what's cooking

Oceans of ways to make a delish fish dish

WITH GINGER JACKSON
Let's face it, we Americans eat too much red meat and not enough fish! Perhaps it's because it's either fried to a crisp or broiled and almost always overcooked and tasteless when served in a restaurant.

Fish is an excellent source of protein, has fewer calories than meat, and is loaded with iron, minerals and vitamins. In actuality, it should be served at least three times a week.

In this area we're lucky to have an abundance of fresh fish year around, so why not take advantage and treat your family to a delicious fish dinner at home. Here are a few basic facts about fish. . . . Fish spoils very rapidly, so if you've just caught one, clean it immediately and pack it in ice or refrigerate it.

If you're buying fresh fish in a market, the flesh should be firm to the touch (don't be afraid to ask for a closer inspection), the skin should be moist, the gills pink to red in color, and the eyes bright and clear. There should not be a strong unpleasant odor.

If you're not going to cook your fish within 24 hours, freeze in an air tight wrapper or bag until ready to use. Frozen lean fish (such as pan fish) will keep 4-6 months, but "fatty" fish (such as salmon) will only keep frozen for 6-12 weeks.

It is not necessary to thaw frozen fish before cooking, but if you must, place it in a loosened wrapper in the refrigerator for 24 hours.

To judge the amount of fish you will need, allow half a pound per person for fillets or steaks and one pound per person if preparing the whole fish (head and tail on).

Fish should NEVER be overcooked! Fish is done when it "flakes" easily with a fork. A good way to calculate how long to cook fish is to measure it at the thickest point (whether pieces or whole). For each inch, cook it a total of ten minutes. For frozen fish, cook it a total of twenty minutes per inch.

BAKED STUFFED PIKE (or White fish)

- 1 whole Pike, scaled, cleaned and rinsed (about 3 pounds)
- 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 1 cup finely crushed bread crumbs
- 1 cup cooked rice
- 2 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1 cup chopped cooked spinach

DIRECTIONS:
Pat the fish dry with paper towels. Rub the cavity with the salt. Mix the eggs, spinach and rice together and stuff into cavity. Sew it closed (can be done with a large sewing needle and doubled white thread). Next, melt the butter in a large casserole, browning it, and then place the fish in it. Baste the fish on both sides, pat bread crumbs on the top side and place uncovered in a 400 degree oven. After about 10 minutes, pour a small amount of boiling water into the casserole. Continue to bake it, and when it has turned a nice golden brown, baste it with a little dry white wine (optional) added to the stock. The fish should be done in about 30 minutes. Test with a fork. Remove thread and serve whole on a platter, decorated with lemon wedges and parsley.

FISH CHOWDER (serves 6)

- INGREDIENTS:
- 1 pound fish fillets, skinned and cut into 1 inch pieces
  - 2 tablespoons chopped bacon or salt pork
  - ½ cup chopped onion
  - 1 cup diced potatoes
  - ¾ teaspoon salt
  - pepper to taste
  - 2 cups boiling water or chicken stock
  - 2 cups milk or half and half
  - Chopped parsley
  - Butter

DIRECTIONS:
In a large pot, fry the bacon or salt pork until brown. Add onions and saute until tender. Add the potatoes, salt, pepper, fish, and water (or stock). Cover and simmer about 15 minutes until potatoes are tender. Add the milk and stir until heated. Serve with parsley sprinkled on top and float a slab of butter for each serving.

PARMESAN FISH BAKE (serves 6)

- 2 pounds fish fillets, skinned and cut into serving size squares

- 1 cup sour cream or plain yogurt
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese (or mild cheddar can be used)
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon grated onion
- ½ teaspoon salt
- Paprika
- Chopped parsley
- Butter

DIRECTIONS:
Rub the butter on the bottom of a shallow baking dish. Place the fillets in a single layer on the bottom. Combine all the remaining ingredients except paprika and spread the mixture over the fish. Sprinkle with paprika and bake in a 350 degree oven about 15 minutes or until the fish flakes easily with a fork. Serve immediately.

EASY SMOKED FISH

For this recipe, any small fish such as trout, perch, bass, etc., can be used.

- 6 small whole pan dressed fish, marinated in salt water (1 cup salt per gallon of water) for 30 minutes
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 6 slices of bacon, lightly cooked
- 1 cup coarsely crumbled dry bread crumbs
- ¼ cup butter or margarine
- ¼ cup chopped onions
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 2½ ounces canned mushrooms.
- ¼ cup chopped parsley

DIRECTIONS:

Wash the marinated fish in cold water and pat dry. Sprinkle cavity with salt and pepper. Saute onion and celery in the melted butter until tender. Add mushrooms, bread crumbs and parsley and mix well. Stuff each fish loosely and sew up. Place a slice of bacon on each fish.

TO SMOKE:
Before preparing fish light charcoal in your outdoor grill. Soak some hardwood chips in water (can be purchased at most hardware or camping supply stores). Allow the charcoal to burn until it is glowing, and then smother with dampened wood chips. Place the fish on a well greased griddle on top of the grill. Cover the grill with a lid (the top of a roasting pan can be used) and cook the fish for about one hour or until it flakes with a fork when tested. Remove the thread and serve immediately.

CHINESE FRIED FISH (serves 3-4)

2 pounds fish, either small whole ones or large fillets

- 2 tablespoons oil (peanut oil is best)
- 1 clove of garlic

COMBINE IN A BOWL:

- 1 tablespoon grated fresh ginger or 1 teaspoon dry powdered ginger
- 2 chopped green onions
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 tablespoon sherry
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons water

DIRECTIONS:
Wash and pat the fish dry. Heat the oil in a large skillet or a Wok (a large Chinese cooking pan). Slish the garlic around and when hot, add the fish. Fry until brown, 5 minutes on each side. Remove fish and keep warm on a platter. Discard the garlic. Add the sauce mixture to the skillet and stir until it comes to a boil. Pour the sauce over the fish and serve immediately.

TROUT WITH ALMONDS (serves 4)

- 4 fresh trout, small whole ones
- 4 tablespoons vegetable oil
- juice of half a lemon
- ½ cup blanched sliced almonds
- Parsley sprigs

DIRECTIONS:
Wash and dry the fish. Roll in seasoned flour and set aside. Heat 3 tablespoons of butter and oil in a large frying pan. When hot, add the fish and fry over low heat (about 5 minutes on each side) until golden brown. Remove fish and place on a warm platter. Sprinkle fish with lemon juice. Add almonds and remaining butter to pan and fry until golden, stirring often. Spoon over trout and serve immediately, garnished with parsley sprigs.

Since there is so much to write about fish, in the fall, during salmon season, I will be writing a column about cooking salmon. Shell fish will also be included in a future column.

Going to pot

Chuck Koucky demonstrates the fine art of using a potter's wheel at his studio, The Crockery, south of Ironton. The hard part is centering the clay, he says. Fun photo by Kay Severinsen.

More craftsmen

If you're still with us, by this time you might think that Charlevoix County has gone to pot, or is all strung up or . . . well we could go on, but suffice it to say, you ain't seen nothing yet.

There are many other artists in and around Charlevoix. For convenience's sake, this list includes primarily those with workshops open to the public in Charlevoix County.
