Plans for downtown
Planning for East Jordan's downtown renovation project is well underway. Architect Nick White, at right, showed preliminary drawings to renovation committee members Carol Tighe and Duane Chappuis last week. White is incorporating two mini-parks, planters, benches, old-fashioned street lamps, a gazebo and other ideas into his drawings. He will have final plans ready for a renovation committee meeting at 7:30 Thursday, July 26, at City Hall.

Fire victims need clothes

EAST JORDAN - Clothing is needed for members of the Jim Barnes family, who were burned out of their home by a fire that started Sunday.

The fire started at approximately 6 p.m. and kept burning, on and off, until Tuesday, when only the walls remained.

Deputy Don Moore patrols the waters of Charlevoix County, making sure that state safety regulations are met. He says the most common infraction is failure to have enough life preservers on board. [Press photo by Dianne Murray.]

Patrolling the lakes for safety's sake

If you take a bit of advice from Ron Moore, you probably will never have your boating holidays made less pleasant by an unpleasant meeting with him.

Moore is one of the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department deputies who patrols the water in the summer. One of his main responsibilities is enforcing safety rules, rules which many boaters often break out of ignorance.

He says one of the most common violations is lack of life jackets. "You'd be surprised," he said. "A lot of the people we deal with are people up here on vacation, so they're out for a good time and don't want to monkey around with life jackets."

State law requires that there be a life preserver on board for every passenger.

Ski belts don't count, because in an accident a person wearing a ski belt could be knocked unconscious, roll over on his face and drown. Life preservers will prop up even an unconscious wearer in the water.

Why does a good swimmer need a life preserver, even in case of an accident? "When you have two broken arms, it's hard to swim no matter how good you are," Moore says. "And that can happen."

The Sheriff's Department has two full time and one part time deputies in the summer. They mainly patrol Lake Charlevoix and Walloon Lake, but occasionally visit smaller bodies of water such as Deer Lake and Lake Louise.

The patrol boats are equipped with marine radios, so a boater can talk directly to the Sheriff's department on channel 16.

Boaters must also have on board a horn or whistle, fire extinguisher, and proof of ownership. Unlike highway police, marine patrolmen can stop a boat without suspicion of illegal activity.

Another problem is lights. Some boaters don't realize it, but boats moored in the water between sunset and sunrise must display an anchor light, even if nobody is on board.

"That's so a boat that's moving can see the boat that's moored," Moore said.

The marine patrol does more than give tickets. "Search and rescue is a big part of our job," said Moore, who recently rescued two tourists whose canoes capsized near Young State Park.

"I can't say we saved their lives, since they had gotten pretty close to shore," he says. "But they had been in the water two hours and they sure were glad to see us."

For children between 12 and 16 the Charlevoix County Sheriff Patrol offers boating safety instruction classes.

The lessons are not learned in the water, but in the classroom. Ronald Moore, of the Marine Officer Department, said the children learn the laws of boating, rules of the road, first aid, and water emergency instruction.

The course includes six hours of classroom lessons, then a test is given. If the child receives a passing grade, he/she will be awarded a boating safety certificate.

The course is offered on Saturday mornings at the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department on 1000 Grant in Charlevoix. The lessons are also available through the schools during the school year. For more information contact Ronald Moore at 547-4481.

The sign says 'It's a glider'

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

You may be out picking berries and hear a long sigh, high overhead. If you don't look up, you will never know a white gull flew by, a man riding it.

Well, all right, it wasn't a gull; it was a glider, or sail plane, made of fiberglass. And the man flying it might have been Gordon Anderson. He comes up from Detroit with his wife Jill to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ostrander, who live near East Jordan. Towed behind their car is what looks like a large cocoon.

Jill has finally come up with a sign to cope with all the puzzled stares they get on the highway. The sign says, "It's a glider."

They take their "cocoon" over to East Jordan airport. There, they pull out and attach the 49½-ft. wings to the slender fuselage which is only 21 ft. long. The extra-long, thin wings are what create that gull-like look.

Gordon steps into the cockpit with the kind of precision that might be used for stepping into a narrow canoe. The seat is very reclined to add to the streamlining. So essential, in fact, that before getting in, Gordon tapes over the crack on each side where the wing is hooked into the fuselage.

A plexiglass roof fits over the cockpit with sliding windows for air, and also, says Gordon, for calling down to people on a golf course below to get out of the way of an emergency landing. This is only Anderson humor. He has had few emergencies since 1972 when he took up this special kind of flying.

"It's recreation," he says. "Is it expensive? Not so very." He explains: "You can join a club and the fee will pay for lessons. Then you can rent a plane. Less costly than a power plane."

Usually it is a power plane that tows the sail plane into the air, but a car can do it.

Jill says, "The problem is keeping the car on the ground! . . . I could hear the wheels spinning!"

A car only has to go 40 mph. to get the glider to rise. Tilting the plane up at an angle makes the plane speed up to 60 mph., which is fast enough to make it fly.

The plane tow is easiest, and it is city councilman Harry Watson who was towing Gordon up to about 2000 ft. last week. From there on, it is "solar power" alone, because winds are caused by sun power.

Gordon Anderson in the cockpit of his glider.

"There are three types of lift," Gordon explains. At the East Jordan airport he relies on thermals.

"We look for hawks circling. As the land is heated by the sun, there is a circular upthrust of air." If the air is moist, he adds, it will form a cumulus cloud up where the air turns cool.

"If you start getting low, you head for a cumulus cloud. You circle up underneath it." These clouds mark the columns of thermals for the sail plane pilot.

The second type of lift is a wind that is turned upward when it hits a ridge of hills. A pilot recently set a record by flying along ridges from Pennsylvania to Tennessee and back in one day -- 1500 miles!

The third type occurs when winds rise after hitting mountains and then bounce against the air on the other side.

A sail plane record altitude of 47,000 ft. was made on the wave rising from such a bounce, Gordon says.

Sail planes not only fly high, but faster than you might expect. "Sometimes small power planes will have a sail plane pass them at 100 mph.," George chuckles.

He explains the principles of pressure discovered by Bernoulli back in 1738 that make flight possible. It is fascinating -- and he makes it understandable because he teaches and does research professionally -- at Wayne State University. He has a doctor's degree in physiology and pharmacology.

Do women fly sail planes? "Oh yes. Quite a few are licensed. They have the advantage in competition of being maybe 80 pounds lighter."

Last week at Adrian, soaring competitions are being held. "That's a great sight," says Jill.

Does he wear a parachute. "Yes, but it's hardly necessary. . . . A sail plane comes down more gently than a parachute does."

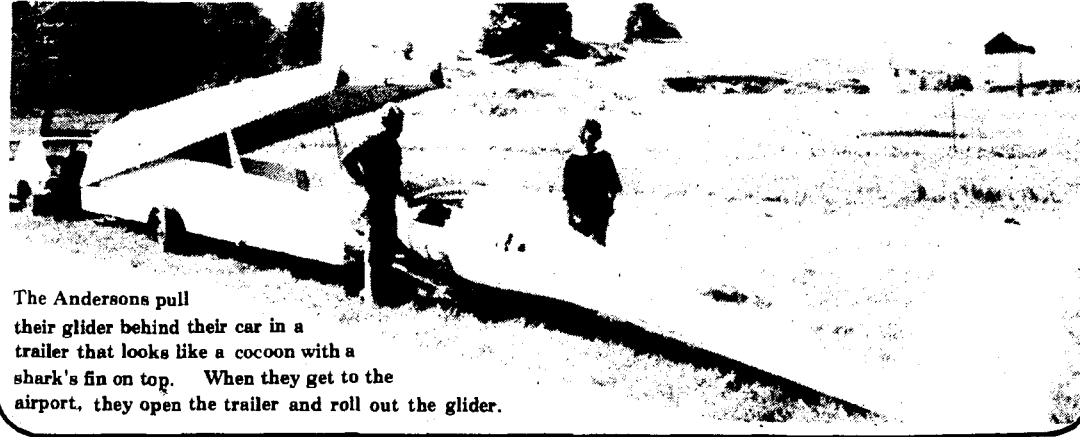

"I've landed-out several times," says Gordon. "You always try to land near a farmhouse for phoning."

Why does he prefer sail planes? It takes only a second to come up with the answer, but it's probably not the whole answer.

He says, "You have to make a decision every minute."

Last week he flew back to Oakland County Airport from East Jordan. His charts showed what landmarks to look for, and what areas he must avoid, like military airfields and cities. "The only gas it will take is the amount needed to get him into the air. In four hours he floated home."

He calls it recreation, but as you watch the slender white bird go off into the sky, you think no other venture is quite so grand.

The Andersons pull their glider behind their car in a trailer that looks like a cocoon with a shark's fin on top. When they get to the airport, they open the trailer and roll out the glider.

New housing director named

EAST JORDAN - Local resident Shirley Smith has been hired to replace Margaret Sorenson as the executive director of the East Jordan Housing Commission.

Mrs. Sorenson recently resigned from the position to accept a supervisory job with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Mrs. Smith will work with members of the local housing commission to administer 28 HUD-financed housing units in East Jordan.

It is a part-time job with a salary of $4,280 per year. The salary is determined by HUD on the basis of how many local housing units are being supervised.

The HUD housing in East Jordan includes 20 apartment units for senior citizens at Lakeview Manor and eight single-family homes for low income people.

Mrs. Barnett was born and raised in East Jordan, the daughter of Russell and Edith Barnett, who still live in the area.

She moved to Lansing after graduating from high school, and it was there that she met her husband James, who was a native of the Upper Peninsula. They wed in 1952 and lived in Mt. Clemens until moving to East Jordan in 1967.

They now live on highway M-66 at the north edge of the city. Her husband works at East Jordan Tool and Die. Their two children are both married. Keith lives in East Jordan, and Theresa and her husband Nick Lilak are both serving in the U.S. Army in San Antonio, Tex.

I CAN SEE YOU ARE REMODELING.
WHAT ARE YOU DOING, AND WHEN WILL IT BE FINISHED?

Since I purchased the funeral home from Mr. Watson in April, an extensive remodeling project has been underway. It will be completed soon, and I will be having an open house sometime during August. I am very proud of the improvements we are making, and I hope everyone in the community will stop in to see our new look when we have our open house.

Most of our indoor remodeling is now complete. Every room has new carpeting, new furniture, new draperies, and a new coat of paint. For your comfort, we have added a smoking and coffee lounge upstairs. The biggest new addition is our Oak Chapel at the rear of the funeral home.

I have also reorganized some areas of the funeral home. The entrance to the funeral home has been moved to the south side of the building. For your convenience, we have extended our roof to create a covered walkway along this side of the building.

We have done the remodeling with a minimum amount of interference with the operation of our funeral home, and we thank you for bearing with us during this time. The ultimate result, of course, is that we will be able to serve the area better when the project is complete.

We will be announcing a date for our open house soon. I hope you will come to see our newly remodeled facilities. Since I am a new resident of the community, I am looking forward to meeting my new neighbors in the East Jordan area. I'd also like you to meet my wife and parents, who are working with me at the funeral home.

Water improves soon

BOYNE CITY - Residents along North Lake Street in Boyne City can expect an increase in water pressure and better water quality by the end of August.

The City Commission Friday night approved a bid by Bowers-Vaughn Construction for the water main extension project, part of the Capital Improvement Program, in the amount of $11,850.

Construction, which includes ripping out the old water system and replacing it with 350 feet of 8 inch water system mains, will start within 20 days of the council meeting and the work should be completed by Aug. 30. The new mains will be installed on Vogel Street between Lake and Park Streets.

Tim Clifton, city manager, said the new water mains will help increase both water pressure and the quality of water to people living off North Lake Street and especially benefit those who live in Lakeview mobile home park.

The new water mains will be larger and free up settlements left by the old water mains. The new water system installed will have a "looping" effect replacing the "dead-end" water system. The "dead-end" existing system causes low water pressure during periods of high usage.

"The dead-end (water system) can best be described like blowing in a tube," Clifton said. "The amount of pressure is less at the end of the tube than at the beginning."

With the looping system, the water will always be circulating and eliminate the low water pressure at the end of the lines," Clifton said.

Clifton said the new water system should eliminate the major problems that has led several residents of the mobile home to complain about their poor water system.

Engineers had estimated the cost of construction to be $8,368. Delta Construction, Inc. had bid a lower price for construction but they would not guarantee the quoted price unless they received both the water and sewage projects.

Therefore, the next lower bid by Bowers-Vaughn Construction was recommended for approval by Clifton. The commission unanimously passed the recommendation.

They faced some hard times but the Class of 1929 prevailed

BOYNE CITY - They've seen it all, and last week the Boyne City High School Class of 1929 got together to talk about it.

The reunion at Vic's Restaurant in Petoskey Saturday was just the second time the class has gotten together since its graduation 50 years ago.

Of course, many of them still see each other regularly. One class member, Will Healey, has a business on Lake Street and from the front you can sometimes see his fellow class member, Howard Fineout, ride by in the engine of the Boyne Valley Railroad. Another class member, Florida Kaden Bowman, has a shop on Water St.

But the class has spread out. Class president and valedictorian Harry Skornia is semi-retired in Florida and couldn't make it to the reunion. He has done as well as everyone expected, working for Voice of America radio in Europe and teaching at the University of Illinois.

"He was a genius," says Florida Kaden, another of the top students in the class.

How have the other class members done in life? "We all got along all right, which was an achievement in those days," says Mrs. Bowman.

1929 was a tough year to leave school because the stock market crash and the Great Depression were right around the corner. Even before the crash, economic conditions in the Boyne area were bad because the lumbering era had ended, taking away the town's biggest main industry.

"Nobody had much money," says Helen Juilerett, who organized the reunion. "We struggled through life," she said.

"It wasn't funny," said Florida Bowman. "The year I got out of college (1933) was the year the banks closed." She said that early in her life Boyne City was more prosperous because it had a tannery, a chemical plant, a furnace and five lumber mills.

"They all went out of business in a very short time, except the tannery," she said. "The lumber was gone."

Few went to college and most were happy to land any job possible. Howard Fineout joined the Civilian Conservation Corp, a federal jobs program during the Depression, and worked for $5 a month.

"Then they gave me a raise," Fineout laughs. "They put me in the Army for $21 a month."

The rest of the time I've mostly been trying to find Boyne Falls with the train," says the long-time engineer, who now works for the Boyne Valley Railroad.

Lois Brooks, the class salutatorian, says she didn't mind the Depression days too much because, "I fared better than some. If other people are in the same situation as you, you don't mind it so much. Everybody had just a little bit in those days."

She also had the good fortune of taking her money out of the bank shortly before it closed.

Mrs. Brooks said her father was a laborer at the tannery. "I decided I was going to get something I can turn into money faster than that," she said, so she went to business school in Grand Rapids. She later returned and worked as a secretary in Petoskey until she got married.

She then quit working for many years, but later put in 16 years as secretary for attorneys Guy Conkle and Harvey Varnum. During those years she got a close look at how much more complicated the world has become.

"There just is nothing simple anymore," she said. "People used to sell a home on the shake of the hand over the back fence."

Although they have seen the Depression, three wars and rapid changes in the world around them, the members of the Class of 1929 seemed generally satisfied with the way the world has treated them. If there is bitterness or disappointment, it doesn't show.

What method have they used to overcome their problems in life? As Mrs. Brooks said, "We just take it as it comes."

Postmaster Frank Jasinski says customers are welcome to come to him with their comments or complaints.

New postmaster for Boyne City

BOYNE CITY - Frank Jasinski, 40, has been named Boyne City postmaster. He started work here last week.

Jasinski, a Gaylord native, was chosen from among the 37 postal service employees who applied for the job. Before coming to Boyne, he worked in the Gaylord postal facility as supervisor of postal operations.

Postmaster positions were once political appointments, but that changed when the department was reorganized in 1970. A selection board chose Jasinski, a veteran of 18 years in the postal service who is paid $24,142 and will get a 7-10 percent raise for his new position. He will supervise 15 employees in the Boyne City office.

Jasinski said he and his wife, Myrna, and five children plan to move to the Boyne City area. The new postmaster says he has an "open door" policy, welcoming citizen comments and questions.

"I hope to be very responsive to customers' needs," he said.

Special soil issue

The 30th annual meeting of the Charlevoix Soil and Water Conservation District will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 25, at Whiting Park.

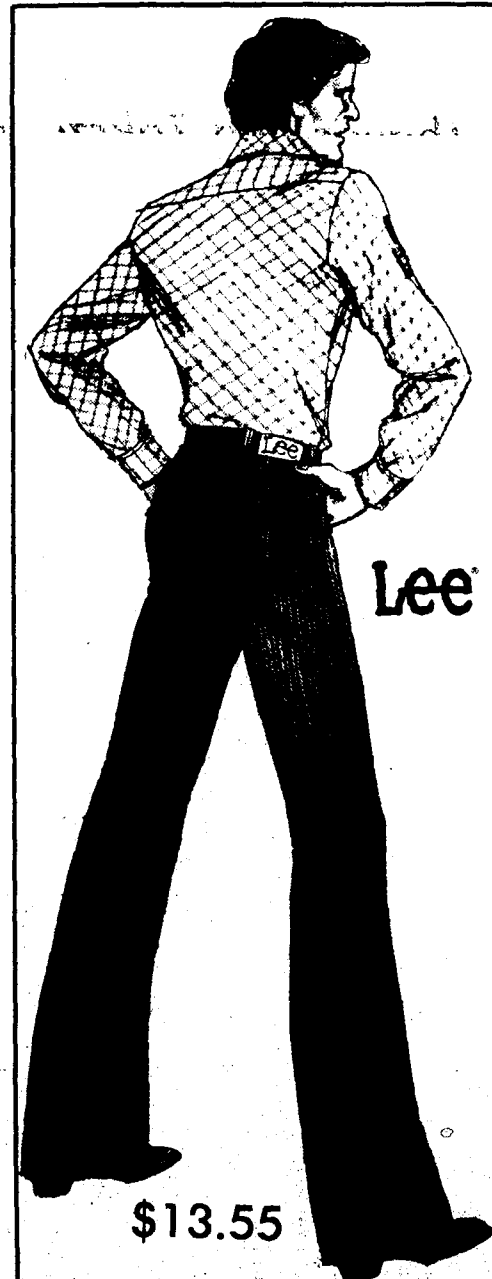

Most of the large landowners in the county have been invited, but district secretary Ed Rebmam said anyone who is interested in local conservation is welcome to attend.

Barbecued chicken will be served before the business meeting, and reservations for the dinner and meeting should be made ahead of time by calling the Cooperative Extension Office at 582-6232. There is no charge.

Business to be conducted at the meeting will include a review of the past year's projects, election of two directors, a treasurer's report, and a slide program by Bob Morgridge on the history of Boyne City.

The Conservation District directors will also award certificates to several local landowners who have practiced exemplary conservation techniques in the past year.

The annual report of the Conservation District will be published as a special section of The Charlevoix County Press and Charlevoix Courier next week.

Fit to be untied

Jimmy Carter laid it on the line Sunday, warning Americans that the joke is over in regards to use of energy. He encouraged conservation and discouraged long, unnecessary trips. He's already got his own White House staffers sweating away this summer by setting all thermostats on 80 degrees.

That's all well and good, especially the part about making high-priced bureaucrats sweat a little. But Carter missed the perfect opportunity to do something really constructive, a bold move that would save energy while making millions of people more comfortable.

Why didn't he by Presidential decree ban the summertime wearing of that quaint but functionally useless garment known as the necktie? The reason is simple: They make businessmen sweat, which makes them turn up the air conditioning, wasting energy, thrusting us ever deeper into our dependency on those lousy Arab oil moguls.

For years, I have been showing my patriotism by hardly ever wearing a tie. I should add that most Charlevoix-County businessmen exhibit the same sense of duty.

And it's not easy. Every Sunday in the Detroit Free Press we are assaulted with a column called "Executive Mystique," in which the author warns that any businessman who ever wears anything other than a dark pinstripe suit is doomed to failure. So it's tough to keep up our standards.

What we need is leadership. The necktie industry apparently has his government knuckled under, so the battle to free men from their nooses must be a local, grass roots effort.

Something must be done to give this movement momentum on a local level. Something drastic. Something seemingly impossible. So here it is: I hereby call upon Timothy J. Clifton, our Boyne City Manager, to quit wearing a tie to work!

Drastic? For sure. In Mr. Clifton's year here, he has steadfastly refused to join other local white collar workers in their constant battle against wearing white collars and those energy-wasting neckties. But how are we to keep from becoming demoralized without some support from the top?

Impossible? Maybe not. Through intensive investigative reporting effort, The Press can now disclose that Clifton was once seen in City Hall, during business hours, without a suit.

When questioned on why he was wearing a sweater and Levis, Clifton quickly dismissed the notion that he was "going native." It turns out he planned to work with the city water department later that day, and so had abandoned his usual professional attire in favor of "grubbies."

Our reporter, crushed, didn't have the heart to tell Clifton that his idea of "grubbies" looked like our idea of "dressed up."

Many people have reasons for dressing the way they do. Some young professionals might be mistaken for the boss's son if they dressed too casually. This is understandable. But now, when the country is faced with the pressing need to conserve energy, it is up to our local leaders to show us the way.

Here's to a comfortable, energy conscious summer of 1979.

How's that again?

I just paid $45 to learn that I have cataracts on both eyes in the front part of my head while my hindsight has suffered no impairment at all.

In addition, the doctor said one eye looked straight ahead and the other had a tendency to wander off to the right.

A wandering eye. That explained how I've been able to talk to a man

"Sixty or so?"
"You don't have to be so accurate," I said.

He began scribbling on a piece of paper. "Let me figure this. A man your age has eaten for four years and slept 20 years. You have probably driven a car 15 or 20 times around the world. Do you know how many years you've spent reading a newspaper in the bathroom? What do you expect at your..."

"Oh my gosh! No wonder I'm sick."
"What are all those big numbers you are writing on that paper," the Doctor asked.

"Oh, nothing," I said. "I was just trying to figure out something else. Never mind."

Marshall Sayles

while keeping track of the short skirts across the street -- one of the few men in Boyne City who can get a panoramic view of things without moving his head.

The doctor said my headaches and upset stomach were the result of seeing too much.

"These new glasses should bring your right eye in line with your left," he said. "You'll be able to read without looking out the window at the same time."

I wasn't sure that I wanted my eyes straightened, now that I had developed this knack of checking on the girls without looking at them.

"You mentioned cataracts, Doctor," I said. "I thought that was an old person's disease."

"How old are you again?" he asked.

Speaking out

Do you have a question, complaint or comment about the government? The best thing to do about it is to contact your elected representatives. They do read your mail and pay attention to voter opinion. Here are the addresses of elected officials serving the Charlevoix County area:

GOVERNOR - William G. Milliken [R], Executive Office, Second Floor, State Capitol Building, Lansing, Mich., 48901.

U. S. SENATORS - Carl Levin [D], Donald Riegle [D]. In Detroit, both men may be reached by writing: Federal Building, 231 Lafayette Blvs., Detroit, Mich., 48226. In Washington D.C., both men may be reached by writing: Senate Office Building, Washington D. C. 20515.

U. S. CONGRESSMAN - Bob Davis [R], Box 189, 5056 Wah Wah Soo Drive, Gaylord, Mich., 49735, or 1223 Longworth Building, Washington D.C., 20515.

STATE SENATOR - Mitch Irwin [D], P.O. Box 429, 111 Bluewater Dr., Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., 49783, or Senate Chambers, State Capitol Building, Lansing, Mich., 48901.

STATE REPRESENTATIVES - 103rd District - Ralph Ostling [R], R-2, Box 475B, Roscommon, Mich., 48653; 106th District - Steve Andrews [R], P. O. Box 241, Gaylord, Mich., 49735. Both men may also be reached by writing: House of Representatives, State Capitol Building, Lansing, Mich. 48901.

Ostling's district includes the East Jordan and Charlevoix areas. Andrews' district includes the Boyne City, Walloon Lake and Boyne Falls areas.

When the Boyne City Commission found itself looking for a new city manager in the winter of 1978, the commissioners decided to do something different. When Ruth Neymark resigned, the commissioners decided to seek applications from all over the country. They got 150.

After weeks of hard work, the commissioners decided to hire Timothy Clifton, a 26-year-old assistant city manager from Kalamazoo. They were looking for a highly trained professional city manager.

Clifton has been on the job one year, and it is safe to say the commissioners have gotten exactly what they bargained for. It became obvious that times were going to change rapidly when, at Clifton's first weekly commission meeting, he handed out detailed agendas and addressed one of his new bosses as "Commissioner Behling," rather than "Thelma."

We think the experiment has been a success. In a time when government is becoming increasingly complicated, and when the city's idle land is being eyed for development, a different type of city leader is needed.

The commissioners made a good decision when they decided to look for a different type of city manager, and they picked the right person for the job. Some question his lack of extensive experience and occasional impatience, but Tim Clifton has done a fine job as city manager. The people of Boyne City, whether they realize it or not, are very fortunate to have him working for them.

Coming from downstate, Clifton came here knowing virtually nothing about the community or its people. At that time, we expressed our hopes that he would overcome this obstacle the only way possible, by being accessible to the public and the press.

He has done this in a number of ways. Our questions are answered directly, with a minimum of self-serving rhetoric. The commissioners and media are provided with agendas that include copies of the paperwork involved in each of the agenda items. This lets us see exactly what is really happening, not just the manager's version of it.

A city manager should be smart and well educated. Clifton's resume showed in a community of this size. With a manager like Clifton, who is both an idea man and a "doer," we don't need a full-time planner.

The City Commission, as is its role, realized this and opted instead to hire a planning firm to do a master plan for the city. They also turned down a proposed junk car ordinance, which they felt might cause more problems than it would solve.

Clifton assumed his job when the controversy over closing Front Street was beginning to heat up. Considering the emotionalism which has surrounded that issue, and the amount of criticism the city government has received, Clifton's relationship with the public has been good. He has been unfairly criticized for the city's support of closing Front Street, a decision he agrees with but which was made long before he came here.

When the commissioners were choosing a city manager, they were somewhat concerned about Clifton's relative lack of fiscal management experience. But the budget he and his staff prepared this year put those fears to rest.

The budget, instead of merely repeating previous departmental requests with some extra money requested for inflation, gives detailed explanations of where the dollars will be going. In a time of increasing voter unhappiness over taxes, the city is wise to have a detailed budget.

In the next year, Clifton will face even more challenges. The development of the tannery property will remain an issue, and the city will be initiating several new programs, such as the proposed downtown renovation. It will be an important year for the city, and we will need continued good work from our elected officials and appointed employees.

But we think we can count on that.

Editorial

he is well-educated, and anyone who has ever talked with him knows he is very bright.

A city manager should also be a hard worker and be able to get the most out of his employees. Boyne City has been blessed with hard working city employees, but they have found themselves involved in a wider variety of projects since they got a new boss.

The end result is little time to take it easy on the job. There is always more work around the corner. But no leader can ask his employees to work harder than he does himself, and Clifton has proven himself an extremely hard worker.

Nobody is perfect, however, and those who say that Clifton is often impatient, that "he wants to change everything all at once," have a point. When citizens ask questions at public meetings, they always deserve a calm, courteous reply, no matter how silly their concerns may seem. There has been at least one occasion when citizens asking questions have gotten sharp, curt replies. They don't deserve it.

Clifton has made other mistakes, such as his proposal to hire a full-time planner, something almost unheard of

Letters to the editor

Co-op changes needed

Editor,

The concerned members of the Top O'Michigan rural electric, formerly the recall petition committee, have decided to conclude their attempts to recall the Top O'Michigan board directors. As has been recently pointed out in local news articles, it is virtually impossible to assemble half the membership, or roughly 14,000 members, in any building in Northern Michigan.

We choose not to respond item by item to the May, 1979 company newsletter. The letter was obviously prepared by a professional public relations man, narrow and biased. It is very difficult for a minority group to fight the power of the company and compete with the sizeable expenditures of co-op (owner-members') monies. We were disappointed that it did not disclose any of the costs of the strike, or how they will impact on our rates.

When Ed May and Bruce Sanderson went before the board on June 23, 1979, and questioned board members about the costs of the strike, they were told that "current bookkeeping system could not give us any breakdown of the strike costs." We were refused an answer of how much was spent on the labor attorney, Michael Ward of Kalamazoo. We do know that another Michigan Co-op, Cloverland Electric in the Upper Peninsula, spent approximately $40,000-$60,000 for fees to Ward for about three weeks service, and the same lawyer was on our payroll from October to March here, approximately 24 weeks.

We are working to make changes in what we consider to be poor management of our cooperative, both in its resources and its services. We feel we can most constructively improve the management, service, and communications by getting elected to the board of directors in August, at the annual meeting.

Our platform consists of five points:
1) COMMUNICATIONS: We believe that elected directors have an implied responsibility to regularly report to and meet with member-owners. We think board meetings should be open to any interested member wishing to listen or be heard. We feel employees having many years of service with the cooperative are real assets and every attempt should be made to keep them and their skills.
2) BY-LAWS: We feel the by-laws should be remodeled or better replaced. They are currently based on the original, 1937 version. They should be written in understandable language and published in readable form. They should detail director responsibility to the membership.

3) ELECTION OF DIRECTORS: We recommend that the delegate system be considered for adoption by Top O'Michigan. Cloverland Electric uses this system very effectively. This system encourages more widespread participation.

4) ENERGY CONSERVATION: Our co-op should help its member-owners conserve electrical energy. This can be accomplished by: making available energy-saving ideas, offering energy audits and consultation services to interested homeowners, by adopting rate structures that create pocket book incentives to conserve energy, (not paying at a higher rate for using less electricity), by making low or no interest loans available to member-owners wishing to purchase energy efficient home appliances, insulation, solar hot water systems, solar space heating systems, and wind generators we know to be cost effective.

5) STIMULATE LOCAL ECONOMY: We want the cooperative to thoroughly explore every means to reduce power consumption so we can avoid having to buy into expensive, centralized generating plants. We are opposed to being responsible for burying or storing radioactive wastes in Northern Michigan. We feel conservation efforts, coupled with solar systems for space heating and water heating, and wind electric systems will keep more money in Northern Michigan, and provide more jobs for our local tradespeople.

We think our present board has spent their time and our money white-washing and burying the problems instead of managing the best interests of the member-owners and employees. We offer an opportunity for you to make a good start towards changing the unproductive policies the present management insists on continuing, by attending and voting at the annual meeting on August 15, 1979, 8 p.m., at the Boyne City High School.

Literary judge seeks local talent

"A short story has to have tight construction and be centered around a main character who the writer never lets the reader stride from," says the short story judge for the Second Annual Charlevoix County Press Supplement.

Tusco Heath, who also judged last year's short stories entries, gave these helpful tips for those entering The Press' literary contest.

Short stories need good imagery. There has to be the right amount and use of metaphors and similes to get the reader interested and keep the story moving, Heath said.

Heath has a lot of experience with judging and correcting writing styles. This fall he will be starting his 10th year at North Central Michigan College where he teaches American literature, creative writing and English.

He received his master's degree in English from Montana State and worked for three years on his doctoral at Ball State University in Indiana.

Heath is quite familiar with Charlevoix County. He raises Arabian horses at his farm in Bay Shore where he lives with his wife and six children.

"Short stories are the second most difficult thing to write and poetry is the first," Heath said. "Even a novel is easier to write because you have more words to work with and a more indepth plot."

A writer must become his own best critic and butcher his work down until it is just the right amount of words in the right order, Heath said.

Heath has written several short stories but said his favorite writing has to be songs. He has published and recorded several songs, mostly country-folk music. His latest album, published three years ago, is titled, "Songs of Love and Bloodshed."

Tusco Heath is looking for good short stories.

Heath is looking forward to reading this year's entries for The Press literary contest and hopes many people will participate.

The judges for the literary categories are: Tusco Heath of Northern Central Michigan College, Michael Steinberg of Michigan State University and Lou Carlson of Western Michigan University. The photo judge will be Richard Jackson, a former professor of photography at Oakland Community College and Cranbrook Academy of the Art.

SURVEY QUESTION

What was your reaction when Skylab fell last week?

I wasn't really to uptight about it because I knew our government had to have some control over it.

I was really nervous about it because no one seemed to know if it was going to land in the sea or on a populated area.

It was really one of many things that will probably come before this old world is over with because of man's mistakes.

I was really relieved to hear that there were no injuries. It could have been a hundred thousand times worse.

At least it made world history. Our kids and grandkids will learn about it and we were here to live through it.

As far as I'm concerned, it's just another government goof-up.

Why don't people start worrying about what happens here on earth instead of spending millions of dollars on something that could have destroyed us?

It's a shame they didn't take more safety measures and none of this would have happened.

I didn't really care as long as it didn't land on me!

Well, now Australia's tourist industry will probably boom.

I wish a little piece of it would have landed in my yard. I'd be rich.

What's Skylab?

Clifton

credit to his 32 full-time and 11 part-time employees. "It's not the result of Tim Clifton, it's the result of the city commission and the employees," he said.

Despite the pressures and criticism, Clifton says he is happy in his work. "I love it," he says. "It's been even more challenging than I imagined, more variety of things to do. There are never, ever, two days that are exactly the same."

"This is like a dream come true. . . I've always wanted to be a city manager," he says. "And I like this area so much that I'm going to stay, even if I ever got canned as city manager. So I'll be around."

Clifton came on the job just as the Front Street controversy was becoming more serious. His role has been heavily criticized, but he claims he's still glad he had to face the issue immediately.

"It required me to dig in real quick and find out things about the town," he said. "And I was able to meet people right away who were going to be involved in city government."

He hopes that ill feelings surrounding the Front Street issue won't harm the city in other areas. "I'm really concerned about the way the tannery issue has divided the community," he said. "People have become so critical of government because of that issue."

"I hope the Front Street thing doesn't adversely affect the operation of the city in the future."

Clifton would rather talk about other projects, such as the city's master plan, for which he lobbied hard. He says it will enable the city to gain federal funding for future projects, such as a program to improve the quality of local housing.

He said it will also give the city a better idea of exactly what it has through projects such as diagramming the water system. "So there will be an explanation of how it works somewhere other than in (Water Department Director) Basil Moore's head."

What does the future hold for Clifton? Is Boyne City just a stepping stone in his career? "This job has changed my career goals," he says, adding that he hopes to have the same job five years from now.

"I hope to remain here," he says. "I just like the community."

Reluctant politicians fight to save street

First of a two-part series
BY JOE McELROY

BOYNE CITY - It's an unlikely collection of somewhat surprised civic activists.

The Aug. 7 showdown on the closing of Front Street will mark the end of a year-long struggle between those who want to "Save Front Street" and those who would rather see Lake Associates develop 270 condominiums on the tannery property, which is intersected by the street.

The developers say their proposal won't succeed with Front Street there, separating Lake Charlevoix from the site of most of the proposed condos. Their opponents say they don't oppose the project, but they don't think it is worth giving up one of the city's primary streets.

Rick and Dave Smith of Lake Associates first made their plans for the property public in March of 1978. For several months later, there was no apparent opposition to the project.

"We couldn't believe it at first, that they would close that road," says Carol Judkins of Elm Street. Nor would she and her husband, Larry, have believed that they would soon be in the thick of the biggest controversy to hit Boyne City since the demerger of the Twin Valley School system.

"I'm astounded," says Mrs. Judkins, now one of the leaders of the Save Front Street Committee. "Larry and I had no idea we were getting into a political controversy."

The other leading spokesman for the group has been Violet Manglos of Lake Shore Drive. Now retired, she and her husband, Louie, formerly owned a restaurant on Water Street, near what is now Mr. J's, owned by Larry and Carol Judkins.

The two women have been involved in other, less controversial local groups such as the Grandvue Auxiliary, the Parent/Teachers Organization and church groups. Mrs. Manglos is presently forming a Boyne City Garden Club. "I've never been in anything like this before," she said, "and I don't really like it."

"My only reason for being in it is that I think the road belongs to the people and it shouldn't be given away."

Mrs. Manglos says she feels newcomers to the area don't understand how important Front Street is to the community. "They don't appreciate the street and they don't appreciate the lake," she said.

"They like what they see, so they come up here, but then they start trying to change things," she said. "An awful lot of people come up now and stay a short while. It's a simple life up here."

Carol Judkins says the Save Front Street Committee began one day last year in the kitchen of Mr. J's. "I said she couldn't believe they were going to close the road," Mrs. Judkins said, "and we both said somebody should do something about it."

"We both looked at each other and said, 'hell, I'm certainly not going to be the one.' We didn't want to do it, but we decided somebody better get up and scream no, no, no."

And so the Save Front Street Committee was born. There is no official membership, but the leaders say at least 25 people show up for the meetings. Some of the other leaders include Dick Dixon, former city commissioner Marvin Loding and Garth and Jewell Bryan.

The group has hired an attorney, Jon Michael of Charlevoix, and has planned to challenge the street closing in the Circuit Court hearing required by state law. Last summer it collected over 1,000 signatures from area residents opposed to the road closing.

The importance of the long-awaited and often delayed court hearing has been lessened by the actions of a newer citizens group calling itself the Right To Vote Committee. The name is the same used by some people several years ago as they lobbied for a vote on the Twin Valley demerger.

Two of the leaders, Richard Dubin and Willard Chipman, were also active in the Twin Valley political battle.

Dubin has acted as the group's primary spokesman and refuses to say who else is in his group, which he says has approximately 15 members.

"There are some retirees and there are some young, vigorous people," he said. "There are some businessmen who don't want to get involved in the newspaper because they're afraid of losing business."

Dubin, 58, is a retired landscape designer who now operates an adult foster care home along with his wife, Elinor. Chipman, the owner of a plumbing and heating company, is now president of the Boyne City School Board.

The Dubins have lived in Boyne City for many years but just recently returned to town from Central Lake. It was Dubin's group that forced an election on closing Front Street by threatening to circulate a petition calling for a city charter amendment.

That amendment would have forced all major street closings to be decided by public elections instead of the commission. Faced with the possibility of numerous street closing elections, the commissioners approved a vote on Front Street.

Why did Dubin get involved? "I had a whole bunch of delegations come and see me," says Dubin, who said he wants to "try to get people talking to one another again."

"I really like to work behind the scenes, but it doesn't work out that way. I usually have to surface."

Some members of the Save Front Street Committee helped circulate Dubin's first petition, which called for an ordinance mandating public votes on street closings. Told such an ordinance would violate the charter, his group came up with a second petition, this one for a charter amendment.

Although they have helped each other, the two groups have different ideas on how the street closing should be stopped. "They're two separate organizations," Dubin said. "We won't go to court as far as fighting Front Street."

Carol Judkins says, "I wasn't that hot about a vote. I wanted to beat them in court."

Everyone involved agrees they are looking forward to seeing the issue settled, whether by a vote or in court. If voters approve the street closing, it still must be approved in court and again by the city commission.

If the voters don't approve the street closing, the matter will be closed. The court hearing will probably be cancelled and the developers will work on alternate proposals which leave the street in place.

Will the Front Street controversy by the breeding ground for a crop of perennial civic activists? At least one of those involved, Carol Judkins, says she has found, "There's too much game playing in politics. I'll never get involved in anything like this again. It's too much time away from my family."

Next week: A look at Dave and Rick Smith, the men behind Lake Associates.

Sidewalk sale here

BOYNE CITY - It's time for Sidewalk Sale Days.

Sponsored by the Retail Board of the Boyne Area Chamber of Commerce, the sidewalk sale will be Friday and Saturday, July 20-21.

In addition to sales at most downtown stores, several special activities are planned. The most unusual might be a dog show Friday at 2, 4 and 7 p.m. featuring a canine theatrical troupe known as the Cold Nose Five.

The dogs perform a number of amazing tricks. Have you ever seen a dog do somersaults, or walk a tightrope? The Cold Nose Five does somersaults and walks tightropes.

The performance, sponsored by Kaden's and Gocha's, will be held on the corner of Water and Park Streets.

Other activities are: A Mountain Dew Chugging Contest Friday and Saturday at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m. First prize is $15, while the runnerup gets $10 and the third place winner gets $5.

An egg toss will be held at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, while a bake sale will continue both days. A moonwalk game will also be available.

Front Street showdown

THE ISSUE - Should .52 miles of Front Street between Second and Division Streets be closed to make way for 270 condominiums proposed by Lake Associates?

The opponents say their project won't succeed unless Front Street is closed. Their opponents say they favor the project but object to the road being closed.

THE OPPONENTS - The developers, Lake Associates, are headed up by Rick and Dave Smith of Walloon Lake, who also developed Wildwood On Walloon, a smaller condominium project.

The opponents are made up of two groups: The Save Front Street Committee and the Right To Vote Committee. The first group has been fighting the street closing for a year; The Right To Vote group takes no official stance on whether the road should be closed, although their leaders don't approve of it. The group says its only interest is having a public vote on the issue.

THE DECISION MAKERS - Approximately 2,500 voters who live within the Boyne City limits. Registration for the election is closed.

DECISION DAY - Tuesday, August 7. The election will be in the Boyne City Hall auditorium.

ABSENTEE BALLOTS - Available now at Boyne City Hall. Deadline for returning absentee ballots is Friday, August 3.

Clifton's first year

BY JOE McELROY

BOYNE CITY - Some call him the "boy wonder."

Others call him, "that college kid, still wet behind the ears."

Very few who are interested in city government are without an opinion on him.

Tim Clifton roared into Boyne City a year ago this week with glowing recommendations, a closet full of three piece suits and a mandate from the City Commission that named him City Manager to give Boyne City a different kind of leadership.

Nobody denies he's done just that. In the past year, Clifton has exposed the city to new concepts such as city-wide master planning and downtown redevelopment. In contrast with his predecessors, Clifton views local government as a force for change and improvement in a community, and has shown this belief through a series of new programs.

Consider the downtown redevelopment program, a city initiative to encourage business remodeling through tax breaks and low interest loans from local banks. "I probably wouldn't have done that," says Forbes Tompkins, who served as city manager for 12 years, retiring in 1977.

"I feel that if a fellow wants to put a new front on his store, he could do it himself," says Tompkins.

"But I realize times are different and they need a guy with different ideas. I think he's going to be a dandy," Tompkins says of Clifton.

Tompkins set less ambitious, more basic goals for the city, but is widely credited with stabilizing city finances while in office. "I know he (Clifton) is much freer with money than I was," Tompkins says, "but if you get good return for your money, it's all right."

Tompkins and City Commissioner Catherine Jessup credit Clifton with providing stronger leadership, which they felt had been lacking since Tompkins resigned. "The city was drifting," Tompkins said. "Tim came in, picked up the reins and got in charge."

the commission in November and the time he came in July, we were making administrative decisions," Jessup said. "That is not the commission's function. Our function is to set policy."

But how strong should leadership be? How fast should the city move? The most persistent criticism of Clifton has been that he's too aggressive, too impatient, too sure of himself and not willing enough to consider opposing views.

Mayor Keith Fitzpatrick says Clifton has done a "super" job, but concedes, "Yes, he could be a little too aggressive. But it's hard for some people to make changes, or to accept changes."

Much of the criticism directed towards Clifton has been related to the proposed closing of Front Street, the biggest controversy to hit Boyne City during Clifton's first year here.

"He's a brilliant man," says Dick Dubin, the leader of a group that has forced a public vote on closing Front Street to make way for a proposed condominium project. "But he needs to have his brilliance tempered with wisdom," Dubin says.

Clifton took no official position on the issue until the City Commission approved a preliminary motion to close the street, but many felt he supported the project after he helped the developers answer questions at a crowded public hearing last summer.

"I think he has the potential, but I think he needs some more years under his belt," says Carol Judkins, a leader of the Save Front Street Committee, a group of citizens that has been fighting the street closing for a year.

"I wish he'd been more responsive to the people's feelings and rights on the Front Street controversy," she said.

"It takes a while to get to know a town," she says. "I hope he will listen to all the people, not just the city commissioners."

"I accept that criticism," Clifton says. "The point I have to work on the most is my relationship with the public."

Clifton says he hopes "to make people realize that my interests are the same as their's, to work for the best interests of the people of Boyne City." "Just because I've only lived here one year doesn't mean I care less for Boyne City than anyone else."

"I hope to listen more to what people have to say and give more reasons why we do the things we do."

But Clifton is proud of what he has done so far, although he is quick to give

"Ladybug II," BVRR's new engine, passing over the Boyne River enroute to Boyne Falls is one of the many pretty sights on the train ride.

All aboard with the BVRR!

All aboard! Grab your engineer's hat and whistle and come take a scenic train ride of breathtaking views and spectacular pines.

In addition to the route from Boyne City to Boyne Falls the Boyne Valley Railroad White Pine Line has added a run between Boyne Falls and Petoskey. The train will unload in downtown Petoskey within walking distance of the Gaslight district, known for its quaint shops and unique gifts.

The railroad, presently owned by Dennis Caughey and Tom Workman, was originally called the Boyne City Railroad Co. and hauled lumber and tannery goods from Boyne City to Boyne Falls starting in the 1890's.

The Boyne City Railroad almost vanished when it ran into financial trouble in 1976. Through a great community effort, the railroad was purchased and saved from being sold piece by piece at the auction block held in Boyne City.

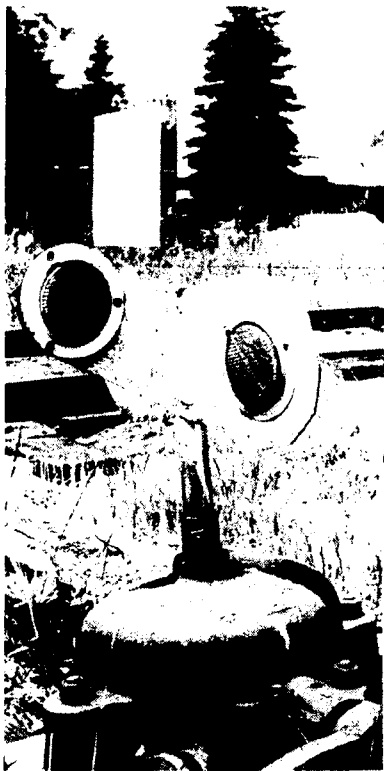

On June 25, 1977, The Boyne Valley Railroad White Pine Line, as it was renamed, started its summer schedule with a run from Boyne City to Boyne Falls. The railroad is now starting its fourth season with a new general manager, new engine and a new run from Boyne Falls to Petoskey.

For ticket information and time schedules for all runs, see inside. Also inside read about the crusty old engineer, Howard Fineout, who can't help but be loved. You'll also read about the reason you should ride the rails. This unique railroad offers a fun time for tourists who like to try something different and out of the ordinary tourist attractions.

Make sure you check our Out & About schedule of events in Northern Michigan. Out & About is your complete comprehensive guide of what to do in your community.

All you shutterbugs and writers, don't forget to send in your entries for the Second Annual Charlevoix County Press Literary Supplement. The deadline for the entries which must pertain to Charlevoix County's "Hemingway Country," is August 12. Anyone interested should contact The Press for contest guidelines.

Train rides from Boyne City Petoskey, here we come

BY DIANNE MURRAY

It's taken a long time coming, but it's finally here. The dream of a Boyne Valley Railroad run from Boyne City to Petoskey is finally a reality.

Starting July 27, just in time for the Petoskey sidewalk sales, the BVRR White Pine Line will make its debut run to Petoskey. There will be two round trips from Boyne City to Petoskey, stopping in Boyne Falls along the way, allowing people to board at all three places.

Boyne area merchants have mixed emotions about the good the added run will mean. Some are worried that the added run to Petoskey could mean taking away the tourists and Boyne shoppers to Petoskey. Others feel any additional runs the BVRR has will mean additional people into Boyne City and in the long run, more business for them.

Mac McNicol, owner of Boyne River Inn in Boyne City and president of the Boyne Area Chamber of Commerce, said anything the railroad does to bring people to Boyne City will be good for the community.

"The railroad is a tourist industry and the more people it brings in, the better it will do for this community," he said.

He added that he thought the run would benefit the merchants of Petoskey more than those from Boyne City because "people from Petoskey are not going to come this way. But Boyne City people will definitely go to Petoskey since the opportunity will be so much more convenient."

Mel and Marion Meyer, owners of the Boyne Sportwear, said anything which means a step forward for the Boyne City area and which will help expand and bring people in is good for the community. The Meyers have a store in Boyne City on Water Street and one in Petoskey on Mitchell Street.

"I'm happy to have the railroad in town. It is something unusual and little towns need something like that," Mrs. Meyer said. The only complaint she had was that the hour layover in Boyne City for Petoskey shoppers was not long enough. "Shoppers need at least one and a half hours to find their way around town and buy things," she said.

Jim Gries, manager of Fox's Ben Franklin Variety Store, 126 Water St., Boyne City, said the run from Boyne City to Petoskey will make it too convenient for people from Boyne City to go to Petoskey. "It might help (Boyne City) merchants some to have people come here, but it will help Petoskey merchants more," he said.

Don Toffolo, part-owner of Kaden's clothing store, with one location in Boyne City and another in Petoskey, said he thinks the train ride between Boyne City and Petoskey will definitely help both area merchants.

"Even when the train brought people in from Boyne Falls, it helped all kinds of merchants, from those who own the Dairy Queen, to the hardware owners and the owners of clothing stores like ours. The train runs bring additional dollars into the community and create more money for Boyne City merchants."

Tom Thurston, general manager of the BVRR, said the run from Boyne City to Petoskey was made possible because the state bought the tracks between the two points from the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad. Michigan Northern Railroad Co. has leased the 16 miles of tracks from Boyne City to Petoskey and are leasing the tracks to the BVRR.

In 1977 Penn Central demanded a $5 million liability insurance policy which the BVRR could not afford. Penn Central went bankrupt soon after and Michigan Northern Railroad put in their bid and won the right to lease the tracks.

For the Boyne City-Petoskey run, the BVRR will use an engine owned by Michigan Northern. Michigan Northern's insurance will also cover the BVRR which Thurston said made the whole run possible.

Three Michigan Northern railroad crew members will be running the train. An engineer, brakeman and supervisor from Northern Michigan will be used.

Thurston said he is happy that most merchants from Boyne City and Petoskey are behind the additional railroad run, and said much support has come from both Chambers of Commerce.

"When the auctions in 1976 were going on, the idea of saving the railroad was a community event. As part of the railroad, this is our way of saying thanks for all the past support. We like to think that we're paying the merchants back by bringing in additional shoppers for them," he said.

Two other runs aside from the July 27 run are tentatively scheduled for August 11 and August 28. Round ticket fares will be $8 for adults and $4.50 for children between 5 and 12. One-way tickets are available also.

See the time schedule box on this page for arrival and departure times or contact the Boyne Valley Railroad on 112 S. Park in downtown Boyne City at 582-2232.

A 20-minute layover in Boyne Falls gives passengers a chance to look over the train engine and get refreshments at the depot ice cream shop.

Joseph Tuncap, of Petoskey, balances on the tracks in Boyne Falls while waiting for the return trip to Boyne City.

"The train ride is for the kids," parents say but don't let them fool you. Here some younger ones get a helping hand from their parents to see the sights better.

The BVRTT, ride for all ages

It doesn't matter if you're 2 or 82-years old, or if you've ridden dozens of trains in your lifetime, the Boyne Valley Railroad ride from Boyne City to Boyne Falls is the most scenic ride around.

Many of the passengers said their reason for riding the rails was because of their younger children. But when you see the kids preoccupied with each other or a bug on the seat and the parents are the ones jumping to their feet to get a better view of a scene, you begin to wonder who took who on the train ride.

Pat and Lou Fleming of Wayne said a recent train ride was their third annual trip. "We do it every summer as a tradition because we all really enjoy the train," Lou said. The Flemings and their four children put pennies on the track and go back later in the day to pick up "the smashed, flat pennies. It's legal, you know, to do that," Bill said.

Kevin and Jennifer Blades' grandmother, Wanda Dziadzio, said the reason they were on the train was because she got talked into the adventure.

"But the train ride is so much fun that I don't mind. I'm really glad they suggested something like this," Mrs. Dziadzio said.

Judy Galbraith, who was celebrating her son's third birthday by taking him on the train ride said she was looking for a different way to celebrate Matthew's third birthday and thought the train ride would be nice. Judy was joined by her younger daughter, Amy, Adam, nine months old, and Onalie Snell, their grandmother on the train ride.

Roy and Anita DeBuer said they were on the train because their youngest son, Steven, four years old, "is so hung up on trains. Trains are his thing so we decided to ride one for his sake," Roy said.

The route from Boyne City to Boyne Falls takes you southeasterly through the Boyne River Valley and the Sugarbush Tunnel, which is a natural tunnel of hardwood trees where the leaves grow together overhead. It also runs past two ghost lumber towns, Doyle and Cushman, which in the late 1800's were productive lumbering sites. A flagman slows the train in sight of Boyne Mountain where tennis players and guests turn and wave to the passengers riding by on the train. The trip takes about 45 minutes to cover the 7.2 miles of track stretching between Boyne City and Boyne Falls.

A 20-minute break is scheduled in Boyne Falls before the return trip to Boyne City. Passengers can get off and buy refreshments at the parlour in the station or children occupy themselves by balancing on the tracks or placing their pennies strategically on rails to guarantee they'll get smashed.

The BVRTT engine, the "Lady Bug II," is a 1943 General Electric 45-ton diesel electric powered engine. There are three open and three closed passenger cars and a caboose which are hauled by the engineer, Howard Finecut.

Several of the passenger cars have been recently painted and Tom Thurston, general manager of the BVRTT, said the engine is also being painted. "As the summer goes on we'll be spreading more paint around including painting signs on the cars and painting the steps leading to the train," he said.

Three daily round trips between Boyne City and Boyne Falls are made Wednesday through Sunday. It leaves Boyne City at 11, 1, and 3 p.m. Tickets can also be purchased in Boyne Falls, when the train leaves on its return trips at 12, 2, and 4 p.m.

Round trip tickets are $3.50 for adults and $2 for children 5 to 12. Children 4 and under can ride free. Special family rates, round trip, are available for $9. One-way tickets are also available.

Any group can charter the train for a special trip. Charter runs are made on Monday and Tuesday or can be specially arranged upon request. Call 582-2232 to make your charter reservations.

Howard Fineout, engineer and RR buff

Howard Fineout, BVRR's 17 year veteran engineer.

BY HOLLY SPENCE

What is it that brings a once retired 17 year railroad veteran, Howard Fineout, back to pull the throttles of Ladybug II, the Boyne Valley Railroad's newest and freshly painted 42 ton diesel engine?

Could it be an attachment to that 7.2 miles of weaving track leading through the scenic countryside of the Boyne Valley? Maybe his ears acquaint the bellowing blasts of the engine's horn to memories of days past as a railroad man. Whatever his reasons, Howard Fineout is a railroad buff in the truest sense of the word.

"I've met people from all over the world on this job," said Fineout, when confronted with an unexplainable "why?" "Last summer I made the Boyne City to Boyne Falls run four times a day for 100 days. That's 400 times and I think I've almost figured out where Boyne Falls is."

At the prime age of 69, Howard takes pride in his clean engineering record and is cautious for the safety of his passengers. As the engine approached Lake Street he chuckled at the intersections ability to "raise your blood pressure." "Can you imagine what a 42 ton engine could do to one of those cars?"

Herb Watkins, 24, accompanies Howard as breakman on this summer's now three run a day trips. A railroad enthusiast who enjoys his job, Herb hopes to someday run the train. When asked of his intentions for any future plan as engineer Herb replied, "I can run it but Howard has the hands for the throttle."

For now Herb is happy to lean over the front rail, take in his native scenery and warn the chief engineer of any possible obstacles.

Among the many historical landmarks pointed out along the rail, a favorite that Howard grins over is "Old Maid's Nipple." This familiar hillside on the southeastern outskirts of Boyne City is legendary of the old Boyne City lumberjacks and the spirit they've left behind.

A mystical albino doe, ivory white and sprinkled with a few markings of brown is another of Howard's most eagerly sought attractions. "Quite a curious time when that deer chased the train down the tracks," he says.

Resides being chief engineer of the Boyne Valley Railroad Howard Fineout's number one pleasure comes from his fishing pole and a fresh water stream or lake to drop his line. Easy to please, Howard is a man of simple pleasure and easy living.

Born and raised in a Bay Township farmhouse, a close neighbor to the well known Hemingway family, Howard has fond memories of his homeland and carries on to help insure it's future.

Among historical documents and pictures of the newly revived Boyne Valley Railroad a most fascinating and original bit of information is to be found not only in the old Boyne City built caboose but right up front. Manning the throttles and willing to take the time of day, Howard Fineout is still riding the track.

THE WOOD STOVE FOR ALL REASONS

Opening your oven door is an impractical and expensive way to heat your home. It's just as impractical to use your fireplace for cooking. With a Frontier wood stove you can do both. The Frontier not only has two broad cooking surfaces, but it can also hold a fire all night for efficient home heating. Its internal baffle system and draft mechanisms make it economical and easy to operate.

The Frontier is also beautiful. Its fuel-saving design is so beautifully simple and efficient that it has a twelve-point patent. Each Frontier is made by hand and guaranteed as long as you own it.

The Frontier, a practical cookstove, an efficient heat source and a beautiful addition to any living space. Frontier: The wood stove for all reasons.

Summer, busy time for mail

Who would know better the changes that summer to winter brings to Walloon Lake Village than the postmaster?

Bill Pawlak, postmaster for Walloon Lake for over 12 years, said the summer months to him mean old faces returning and lots and lots of extra mail. "Everyone has to come in here at one time or another and I try to associate their name with their face so I'll remember them next time they come in."

After a few weeks, Pawlak said he doesn't even have to look at the lockbox name or number, he just remembers who is who and where the mail goes.

The post office, on 4048 S. State Street, receives mail delivery each morning to fill its lockboxes. There is no house delivery. All mail comes into the post office and is put in lockboxes. In the winter time there are about 180 box holders. The number of box holders increases to about 380 in the summer.

"The best service in the world" is how Walloon Lake's postmaster described the mail service.

"The difference is not only in the amount of mail that is received or passes through this office, but there are also differences in the type of mail and people that frequent the postoffice," he said.

During the peak season of summer, July and August, a part-time mail clerk comes in to help with the increased mail load.

To illustrate the difference between the amount of mail received in the summer months as compared to the winter months, Pawlak said in the winter it usually takes only 35 to 40 minutes to sort out the mail.

"But in the summer it takes at least three hours to sort the mail," he said.

Even in the winter with most of the lockboxes not in use, a lot of summer people keep getting huge amounts of mail addressed to their Walloon Lake post office number. "It's not unusual to spend one and a half to two hours to hand address each letter with the person's forwarding address," Pawlak said.

Pawlak said his office does everything possible to make sure the mail gets to the people. It's not very often the letter and the person don't make contact, he said.

Like everything else, the gas crunch has affected the mail status, but in an unusual way. It could be that people are more reluctant to travel and pay the price of gas, Pawlak said, but postal receipts are running 10 to 15 percent over last year.

Pawlak lives three blocks from work and walks to work each day. Like the saying goes, he said, "Through blizzards, sleet and cold weather I walk to work. The only time I drive is when it's raining."

After Labor Day, there is a drastic drop in the quantity of mail coming through his office. When the people leave for the summer, so does the extra amounts of mail. "I try not to think about how slow it gets after then. I like the summer months better," he said.

Even though everyone complains about the U.S. Government postal service, the Walloon Lake postmaster said he considers the postal service "the best service in the world."
