Plans still in the works

Trailer park still needs state ok

EAST JORDAN - Whatever happened to the mobile home park that local developer Jim Petrie proposed to the city council in April?

The answer came at a council meeting last Thursday.

The park, which would be located on the north side of Deer Lake Road (State Street) at the eastern city limits, has been scaled down from 59 to 48 lots.

Even this plan is tentative, according to Wayne Boss, who represented Petrie and presented the plans last week.

The council gave its approval to the new plan, which has already been okayed by the District Health Department. The council's approval was needed before final approval can be sought from the state Commerce Department.

The trailer lots lie approximately 300 ft. north of Deer Lake Road. The park would have its own privately maintained 33 ft. road.

City Superintendent Herm Rasch recommended that the council approve the preliminary plans. He had inspected the site after a recent heavy rainfall and he felt the drainage was adequate to dispel previously voiced fears about insufficient drainage.

Tom Vanderwall was appointed to the city housing commission at the council meeting, and Dr. Mitch Carey was appointed city health officer.

John Rohe, partner of city attorney Roy Hayes, suggested to the council wording for a resolution authorizing city police to enforce traffic and parking violations on East Jordan Public School property.

The school board had already given permission for the police to enforce violations on school property and the council's action was needed to comply with state law. The council adopted the resolution.

A motion concerning permits for storage of inoperative cars was tabled, at the suggestion of Mayor Jim Meredith, to give the matter further study.

The council decided to send a letter of thanks to former councilman Harry Watson for his many years of public service. Watson has accepted an appointment to the county board of social services and state law forbids an elected official to hold such a position (See related story).

Meredith hopes to suggest an appointment to fill Watson's position at the next council meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 4.

Public servant Watson moves to county job

EAST JORDAN - Not even Harry Watson is sure of how long he's been involved in East Jordan city politics. "I think 13 or 14 years," the former mayor and recently resigned city councilman said.

Watson resigned from the city council effective Aug. 15 because he accepted an appointment to the Charlevoix County Board of Social Services. State law prohibits an elected official from holding two governmental positions.

During his city politicking days Watson was a prime mover behind sewer plant, airport and cemetery development.

In his new post Watson will be one of three members of the board of social services and will share in the decision making processes affecting the 1,456 county residents receiving assistance, in one or more forms, from the Department of Social Services.

Staffed by 25 state civil service employees and two county employees, the department handles more than $2 million dollars in federal funds in addition to $130,900 in local funding.

The money is earmarked for participants in seven medical aid programs, aid to dependent children, general assistance programs, children's protective services and wards of the state.

Watson's appointment will complete Vern Whiteford's term on the board. Whiteford resigned because of health reasons. The remainder of the three year term runs until 1980.

"I regretted having to leave the city council," said Watson. "I would have liked to do both."

"There seems to be a shortage of people to handle the non-lucrative civic positions," Watson said.

Big pig roast in UP planned for weekend

EAST JORDAN - About 300 East Jordan residents will again drive about 100 miles to roast a pig and hold a weekend-long party in a secluded spot in the Upper Peninsula.

It is called, simply, the Fourth Annual Pig Roast. It is held near the tiny village of Rexton on an 80-acre parcel of land owned by East Jordan residents Jack Zoulak and Don Peters.

Actually, the pig roast is a weekend campout for many families. A community soup pot and hot dogs are available on Saturday night.

The highlight of the weekend is, of course, the Sunday afternoon pig roast. You're asked to bring a dish to pass and to make a contribution for the pig.

Pig roast organizers list "campfires, softball, music, friends and neighbors, plenty of campsites, and lots of fun" as the other attractions for the weekend.

For further information or maps to the Fourth Annual Pig Roast, call Dick Clark at 536-2278. Rexton is located north of U.S. highway 2 between Epoufette and Naubinway. Signs with pigs on them point the way from the highway.

Funeral home open house set for Sunday

Funeral director, Tom Vanderwall will unveil his newly remodeled Vanderwall-Watson Funeral home during an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9.

Vanderwall bought the funeral home from Harry Watson on April 15 and the new owner has been working on the facility since that time. The interior has been completely redone, and a large chapel has been added to the rear of the building.

Assisting Vanderwall in operating the funeral home are his wife Janice, and his parents Elmer and Donna Vanderwall.

"The open house will give us a chance to meet people, as well as to show the community the improvements we have made to the funeral home," Vanderwall said.

CETA program teaches job skills

More than 100 Charlevoix County youth from economically disadvantaged homes have been learning job skills and good work habits in the Summer Youth Employment Program.

It's a Federal Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) program administered through the Char-Em Intermediate School District. Federally established guidelines based on family income and family size determine who is qualified for the program. Referrals from courts, social services agencies and schools provide candidates.

The Charlevoix County summer program has been, "very successful" according to youth counselor Michele Miller.

Non-profit private and public organizations are the employers for the youth in the program who are paid with federal funds. In Charlevoix County, libraries, recreation programs, cities, chambers of commerce and the county all have workers from the summer program.

"The goals of the program," Miller explained, "are to provide youth with an opportunity to develop good skills and work habits. It provides a good job reference and career exposure."

"We gave them (the participants) an interest survey to try to place them in career goal areas," Miller continued.

"The program also puts income into low-income families," she said.

The youth are paid $2.90 an hour with the exception of some supervisory positions. Each participant in the eight to 10-week program works between 24 to 40 hours a week. That pumps about $9,200 per week into the county.

The program isn't all on-the-job work, according to Miller.

"We also have an educational tutoring program," she explained. "A tutor went around the county tutoring one to one on multiplication, reading, writing and communicator skills."

Approximately a quarter of the 100-plus participants in the program received individual help this summer with their particular problem area.

The tutoring program is sponsored by the Traverse Bay Area Intermediate School District.

At the beginning of the summer each of the participants sat down with a staff member of the Northwest Michigan Human Services Program and developed an "individual employability plan." The plan outlined career goals, obstacles likely to arise in the course of trying to fulfill those goals, and steps needed to meet them.

In an employability workshop the participants learned interviewing skills, how to apply for a job and how to make a resume.

The youth employment program is largest during the summer but a scaled-down version runs during the year as well. The fall program concentrates on co-op students, and dropouts who need an alternate program for one-the-job training.

Miller, who was a participant in summer youth employment program herself, says the key to success in the program is supervision.

She and an assistant make periodic visits to the participants' work sites to keep posted on any developing problems. Miller says that although some of the participants aren't always highly employable, supervisors for the most part make a good effort to help the workers learn job skills.

The program is a learning, growing experience, according to Miller.

"I've hired kids back after they've been fired before," she said. "They grow in a year."

The fall program now being organized, said Miller, and anyone interested in participating should call Miller at the Char-Em Intermediate School District at 547-9947.

But it has to be done

Top union job not always rosey

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

If, as the philosopher says, we are all pebbles on the beach, then Rodger Ransom is one of those that are less crushable.

As president of the East Jordan Education Association, which is part of Michigan Education Association, this characteristic is in demand, along with a lively feeling for justice.

Admittedly it's a tough job to be the spokesman for the local teachers' union. "Not everybody loves what you're doing," Ransom says. "But it's a job that has to be done. Some people don't feel comfortable in the role -- I

Community ed sign-up

It's back to school time for adults as well as children. Representatives of East Jordan Community Education were recruiting students and asking for class ideas at a table set up outside Northwestern State Bank last week. Here, volunteer worker Karen Bennett discusses class offerings with Maurice Hartung. Community Education schedules will be mailed to area residents by the end of next week, and classes will start the week of Sept. 17. This week, by the way, has been declared Adult and Community Education Week by Governor William Milliken.

Rodger Ransom

both approaches are retained.

What about new ideas at East Jordan?

Ransom believes teachers should be encouraged to bring in new ideas. A little "financial commitment would help innovation," so teachers' exploration isn't just wasted.

He thinks audio-visual aids are helpful, "but they have to be well done," he emphasizes.

How important is high school math? Ransom handles the typical question: "When will we ever use this?" saying, "I try to point out that a lot of these scientific discoveries are based on abstract math principles. So math comes before science."

Rodger comes from Dearborn, but his family members were originally Traverse City people. Back a ways, they owned a grist mill with a water wheel, he says.

Now married, he and his wife Carole have a two-year-old daughter and are expecting another child soon.

Is his little girl going to be a mathematician? "Well, she likes to play with the calculator," he smiles.

The conversation funnels back to school. Rodger thinks observing other teachers at work is of value, though the only chance he has had for this is when he was on a team for the accreditation of another school.

And how about school board members visiting in the classes? "I, as an individual, am happy to have them. The only problem is they can't come often enough."

He thinks, giving the other way, "a teacher might be an asset on the school board."

The next time the school board meets, Ransom may not have to speak up for one of the teachers, but they know he will be there, representing them and also the views of the MEA. He represents, too, just as the school board does, the public concern for educating young people.

The City of Boyne City is probably the single biggest employer of Summer Youth Employment workers in Charlevoix County. Tom Kurzik of Boyne City has worked for the police department this summer keeping squad cars clean and doing the odd jobs.

WHAT TO DO WHEN A DEATH OCCURS OUT-OF-TOWN

If you're ever involved in arranging for a funeral for someone who dies out of town, you should contact us or another local funeral director who will then make arrangements with a highly qualified mortician wherever the death occurred. (We have many, many personal contacts all over the country through our membership in funeral service organizations.)

We'll take the necessary steps to prepare the body for immediate transportation back home. We will confer at long distance with you or other family members locally to plan for local funeral services. It is important, though, for you to remember to call us or another local funeral home FIRST. Especially under these circumstances, you need to avoid duplication of effort and fees.

If you wish further details on out-of-town arrangements, please contact us.

'Madness' reigns in Boyne City

Madness reigned in Boyne City from 7 to 10:30 last Thursday night, as downtown business people marked down prices, dressed up in crazy costumes and stayed open late for Moonlight Madness. Several hundred people shopped and listened to a band playing in the street. Organized by The Charlevoix County Press, it was the first event of its kind in Boyne. Judging from the reaction of both business people and shoppers, it will become an annual event. One business owner said she had more business during the 3½ hour promotion than she had during the entire previous weeks. Some of the store employees dressed in Moonlight garb are shown on this page. Clockwise, starting with the photo above, are Bunny Garlock of Jake's Shoe Shop, Bogema family at their pharmacy, a waitress at Rover's Return, and Paul Hanes at Gocha's.

4 H'ers preparing for Achievement Day

Charlevoix County 4-H Clubs are sponsoring a 4-H Fall Achievement Day on Monday, Sept. 3 at Whiting Park.

4-H members will be exhibiting projects they have been working on through the summer. Exhibits such as baking, outdoor meals, camping, vegetable gardening and many others will be displayed.

Animal projects including poultry, goats and others will also be present.

Exhibits will be open for public viewing from noon to 3 p.m. Those who are interested in learning more about 4-H are invited to visit with members, leaders and staff. There will be games and skits for public participation and viewing.

The park building will be open at 8 a.m. Projects must be in place at 9:30 a.m. and judging begins at 10.

There will be games for 4-H members during the judging and a potluck lunch at noon.

Youth who are interested in exhibiting a project should enroll for 4-H immediately at the Cooperative Extension Service office in Boyne City.

The 4-H program in Charlevoix County is a year round activity open to all county youth. Members need not live in rural areas. Parents and children who are interested in the program are especially invited.

For more information, contact Phyllis Sumner, 4-H program assistant, at 582-6232.

Jack Hough of East Jordan is one area resident who has discovered that solar heating is possible in a cold climate.

Could a windmill help provide electricity for Boyne City Hall? The city commission has agreed to investigate the possibility.

The blood ran to my hard head

Marshall Sayles

Bay Springs, Mich., March 7, 190000 -- I was not born cuddly. I was born hard shelled.

When the doctor picked me up to slap my rear-end he drew his hand back, a tear coming to his eye.

"What's wrong?" my mother asked. "This boy's hard shelled," the doctor said. "I stung my hand."

"Hard shelled? What does it mean?"

He said that if she didn't take special precautions I might grow up to become president or, worse yet, a newspaperman.

She rolled her eyes toward the ceiling, asking what she'd done to deserve such a fate. Honest, hard working poor people had run in our family for years. And now this.

"What am I going to do... you know, to kind of hold him back so he'll appear normal to the neighbors?"

"Well, there's a man over on the other side of Boyne Falls who mixes a certain potion for babies like this."

"Oh, good," she said. "Are you sure that will make him soft shelled?"

"Haven't you noticed how no Boyne Falls baby ever grew up to be president?"

"Oh, dear. My husband mentioned just the other day that there wasn't a lick of a certain potion in Boyne City. Oh, dear. A president, a newspaperman what AM I going to do?"

"You might put him in the closet when people come. At least it will keep him out of sight."

"Has anyone ever come out of a closet to become president?" my mother asked in growing confusion.

"I don't know," the doctor said. "Perhaps he will only become vice-president."

"Is that like being in a closet?"

"Very much so," the doctor said thoughtfully.

"How long are you going to hold him up by the feet like that?" she asked. "Everything seems to be running to his head."

"What shall I do with him?"

"Throw him down here on the bed. He's sure to become president or a newspaperman with everything running to his head like that."

The doctor dropped me. I did not bounce. Nor was I cuddly. Babies who grew up to be president or, worse yet, newspapermen, were not cuddly.

The doctor tried to console her. "Maybe when he's sixteen or so he'll run away from Boyne City and join the circus. That's something to look forward to."

"No, no," my mother said. "Why would he leave one circus to join another?"

"True, true," the doctor said. "I never thought of that."

"Oh, dear. Maybe he'll become a newspaperman. There's always a chance nobody will pay any attention to what he says."

"For the sake of Boyne City," the doctor said, gathering his tools off the floor, "let us pray you're right."

City provides leadership

Studying solar, wind power

We know the oil companies keep telling us that solar power and wind power will never amount to much, but The Press is still glad to see that the City of Boyne City is going to find out for itself.

Earlier this month, the city commission decided to spend $700 to employ a local firm to conduct an energy study of the City Hall building.

The study will determine if energy can be saved by using solar heating or wind power for electricity.

Great Lakes Energy Systems is conducting the study, and one staff member said the city might be able to save 25 to 75 percent on future energy bills if it invests in solar and wind energy equipment.

Editorial

The obvious benefit might be a savings of tax dollars for city residents.

But we think an even more important benefit would simply be the demonstration that solar and wind energy are cost-effective alternatives to nuclear, coal, oil and other more conventional forms of energy.

The advantage of solar and wind over other forms of energy, of course, is that we will never run out of sunlight and wind like we will run out of coal and oil.

Coal and oil burning contributes to air pollution. We're also wary of increasing our dependence on nuclear power.

So it's good to see Boyne City at least studying the possibilities of using solar and wind energy.

Conceivably, it has the financial resources to be able to install alternative energy devices, and it is encouraging to see the city commission providing leadership in this area.

Every year, as energy prices continue to rise and as technology improves, a few more area residents install solar and wind powered heating and generating equipment.

With each new installation, more people will realize that wind and solar power may, indeed, make a significant contribution to our nation's energy needs.

TV's a money saver

Next week will mark the first anniversary of the day when our former columnist Hazel Colburn announced in print that she had "kicked the habit."

She had traded in her family's television set for a stereo record player. The headline proclaimed: "Free at last!"

I envy people who do difficult things that are healthy for the mind and body. (I'd love to be a jogger or a vegetarian but I don't have the will power.)

So I really admired Hazel for having the courage to toss out her TV.

I had read about families who had given up television. A few months ago, the Detroit Free Press even paid three or four families to give up the tube. Then they wrote about their withdrawal symptoms.

But Hazel was the first real person I knew who had actually quit watching a TV set that was still working.

To tell you the truth, I think Hazel wrote her column in a moment of weakness (or strength, I probably should say). When it appeared in print she was forced to follow through with her promise.

This sounds like television-watching is like some horrible drug addiction, but that's exactly the way Hazel wrote about it. The monkey on her back was soap opera addiction. It lasted from can't give our readers an update on The Great Television Purge, the burden has fallen on my shoulders.

I didn't last forever. As you might imagine, Hazel has a sensible rationalization, however: It was too expensive to give up her TV.

This may sound far-fetched to you, as it did to me at first.

Hazel and her husband, Neal were reading so many books, magazines and Sunday papers that they actually saved money by giving up reading and buying a new television.

They didn't just buy the television, though. If you're going to rekindle an addiction you might as well go all the way... and they did. They got cable TV service and the optional, pay-extra, commercial-free Home Box Office.

Actually, I think HBO was just what they were looking for -- a good excuse to buy a new TV. They claimed they really weren't buying it for conventional TV reasons. They just wanted HBO.

Besides, they missed Walter Cronkite. And of course Public Television was showing some nice cultural things that would be good to have the kids see.

But I'll bet if you call Hazel at 2:30 any weekday afternoon, she'll tell you what Iris has been up to.

Letter to the editor

With Community Education school is for all ages now

Editor,

A popular song way back in 1929 had a chorus that went: "You can't tell any more, if they are 16 or 64."

That about fits the school situation of nowadays. You find all ages taking advantage of "Community Education." I know. I'm 65 and I took Michigan history and creative writing last year and we had all ages in the classes.

Most classes are free for senior citizens. Central Lake, Ellsworth and East Jordan work together as a unit.

So come on, you folks, and get in on a good deal. Don't tell me that there isn't something you're interested in. If there isn't just call your undertaker and make arrangements.

If there is some subject you'd like to know more about, or if you have a hobby that you'd like to teach to someone else, just call your local school and they'll see that Jamie Baumann gets in touch with you. That's her job -- to find teachers for those wanting to learn and pupils for those wanting to teach.

So let's keep her busy. That's what she gets paid for and she is never happier than when she sees more interest in the classes she works so hard to organize.

And you "oldies" -- don't think that the kids will make fun of you! You've had experiences that they like to hear about. I found it more fun than when I was in school, and I'm sure you will too. Come one, folks. Line up at the registration desk and let's make this the greatest year ever in Community Education in these three communities. You'll be the ones that derive the benefit from it.

Being a "near crisis patient" for years I think I'll sign up for Brad Campbell's "Crisis in the Family" course -- that is if he thinks he can stand me around another year!

See you in class.

Generous donations from KC's, Essex

Almost $900 was collected in a three-day fund raising drive by the Boyne Valley Knights of Columbus. The proceeds were given to help disabled persons living at foster homes in Boyne City and Wallon Lake. The money goes towards food, recreation and entertainment for the tenants. Edward Matelski, council Grand Knights (left) and Stanley Fiel, chairman of the drive, present the checks to Leslie Crain, senior director care worker of the Boyne City Spring Ridge home.

Plant manager John DiMartino presents a $500 check for Rotary Park to City Manager Tim Clifton. It is the third year the Essex plant has donated money for improvements at the park. Clifton said the money will be used to add a parking lot behind Tompkins Field [B-Field].

'School's changing for the better'

EAST JORDAN - Curriculum offerings are changing, school is much more enjoyable since renovations have been made and kids are basically happy with the education they've received at East Jordan High School.
So say several East Jordan High School graduates and the high school counselor.

In talking with three former East Jordan students and counselor Carl Rothenberger, basic problems became evident. But for the most part the former students and Rothenberger agreed that for a small school East Jordan is doing a good job preparing its students for future life.

"I've always felt that most of our kids have something going for them," said Rothenberger, a veteran of 14 years in the East Jordan school system. "They're not just drifting. Some go to work, others to school, others into the service."

"I think they're (the students) basically prepared for college," said Rothenberger about East Jordan alumni who continue their education. "For a small school we do a good job."

MELISSA HITE, daughter of Jay and Ann Hite, is a 1979 graduate who is going on to college. She left for Adrian College in southern Michigan Saturday - excitedly but with a few reservations.

"I think I'm going to have to do more studying in college," Hite said last week. "They told us when I was down for orientation that we should plan on two hours of studying for each hour of class."

Hite was active in student government and athletics while in high school but she thinks that possibly some of her extra-curricular pursuits will have to be curtailed in college.

"High school was easy," said Hite, who earned a 3.5 grade point average in high school. "It's hard to say if I'm prepared."

Going to a small college is common for East Jordan graduates, according to Rothenberger.

"Most of our kids go to the smaller state schools," he said, citing Ferris State College in Big Rapids, Central Michigan University in Mt. Pleasant and North Central Michigan College in Petoskey as the choices of many college-bound East Jordan graduates.

Rothenberger isn't sure that coming from a small town is the only factor influencing the choice of smaller colleges, but he does feel it is one influence.

Hite doesn't anticipate any homesickness while at school. One reason for choosing Adrian, she said, was to become acquainted with another part of the state.

For every one graduate going to college, Rothenberger estimated, two grads opt for different direction.

ALAN KLINE, son of Frank and Gertrude Kline, a classmate of Hite's in the class of '79, is pursuing a job rather than further schooling.

Currently doing cement work for Walt Sayles' Masonry, Kline is thinking about entering the army in a year or so. A good student in automotive classes while in high school Kline thinks he'd like to parlay that skill into mechanic's work in the service.

"I got a good education at East Jordan," said Kline, "I didn't miss anything (scholastically)."

Kline worked with his father on his farm after school so he didn't have the opportunity to participate in activities or athletics. He would've liked to have been able to play football.

Kline liked the half-day system used at East Jordan prior to the completion of the new high school. "You had all afternoon to do what you wanted," he explained.

Rothenberger didn't share Kline's feelings about the split-day sessions. "I'm glad to be off split-days," Rothenberger said, "It (school) becomes more than a part-time thing."

The renovation of the elementary school and middle school coupled with the new high school speaks well for the future of the school system, feels Rothenberger. "We've made some strides," he said.

Curriculum offerings are shifting slightly, says Rothenberger.

"We've been working vocationally," he explained, "which is good. I'd like to keep a balance, though, for kids going on to college."

LINDA LEWIN, daughter of Richard and Lillian Lewin, a 1978 graduate, feels that the completion of the building project and the increased emphasis on vocational programs are going to help solve the problems the school had.

A secretary at Gregg Publications in Boyne City since May, Lewin thought that when she was in school some of the classes were weak, but since completion of the new high school have become better.

"There was a good curriculum in business," said Lewin, "Mrs. (Rennie) Pray was a real good teacher. She taught me a lot about business."

"I think I was well prepared at East Jordan," she said. "There are good teachers. They're hard."

Lewin and Rothenberger share the feeling that one of the big benefits of the new school and full days will be more for students to do.

"There's a lot more for kids to do with the new school," said Lewin. "A lot more is offered."

"You've got to keep them interested," said Rothenberger. "Kids are a bundle of energy, you've got to direct it."

None of the people interviewed felt that East Jordan had any more problems than the average high school, nor any that were unique to East Jordan.

Usual problems with drinking and marijuana exist, Rothenberger feels, but nothing of an epidemic proportion.

Graduates of East Jordan high have an advantage over many small school grades, Rothenberger said.

"East Jordan is quite industrial," he explained, "employment opportunities exist that aren't available in other towns."

Possibly as a result of this, he thinks, a good percentage of the graduates either stay in the area or come back after living elsewhere for a while.

"This area grows on you," he said.

No - Anyone smoking it is just as bad as the alcoholics. Neither one knows what they are doing.

No - I think it leads to hard drugs, and drugs are what is wrong with the world today.

No - Look what they did when they legalized alcohol. It has caused deaths and heart attacks, and if marijuana were legalized it would be even worse.

No - Smoking isn't good for you in the first place, no matter what it is.

Yes - It would probably be safer than what kids are getting on the streets now. Besides, it would be just like manufacturing cigarettes. Also, it would lower the unemployment rate by producing more jobs.

Yes - Why not! It would be much better weed and then we could grow our own.

No - It is destroying our young people's ambition to further their education and it makes them lazy.

No - I think it is communist controlled and this country could be taken over too easily if it were legalized - we'd all be too high to stop it.

No - If the American public spent as much time on the good and natural things in life instead of things to distort reality, they would realize this world isn't as bad as they think.

No - It is no good for anybody.

Yes - Being illegal doesn't seem to be stopping anyone from smoking it.

Yes - In fact, I just got done smoking one.

Great Lakes Energy Systems is the first store to start storefront renovations in the city redevelopment plan. Contractor Lee Ekstrom is doing the work.

Submit sketches to city in 2 weeks

Architect working on storefronts

BY DIANNE MURRAY
BOYNE CITY - "Great enthusiasm," is the way an architectural historian described the reaction he received from Boyne City merchants in attempting to come up with guidelines for downtown redevelopment.

Tom Holleman, from the Ann Arbor consulting firm of Johnson, Johnson and Roy, has been hired by the Chamber of Commerce to come up with sketches or what the downtown could look like. Holleman, in town early this week, talked to merchants and people on the street to get a feeling for Boyne City's needs.

Holleman's outline will provide possible suggestions for merchants but he stressed that it will not be one dominate theme which merchants would have to follow.

"The idea is to go back to the original look of the buildings," he said. The old fronts which are already on so many of the buildings, are just perfect for the kind of basic structure which we plan to go back to."

Holleman said he would like to have a sketch for one block of the downtown area back to the city in two to three weeks because so many businesses have shown an interest in remodeling and would like to start before winter.

Holleman chose the north side of Water Street from South Lake to Park Street because of the diversity of old and new buildings and because of the interest already shown by the merchants on the block.

Holleman's sketch of the Water Street block will only be a recommendation, and not specific guidelines which must be followed, he said.

City Manager Tim Clifton said the purpose of the city's overall development plan is to revitalize the downtown district and make it more attractive for shoppers. Merchants and the city hope to promote shopping in the town because of the new store fronts.

The two-part program offers tax breaks and possible low interest loans for commercial improvements.

Merchants have been reluctant to improve their property because it raises taxes. But those participating in the commercial redevelopment plan could receive a property valuation freeze for a maximum of 12 years.

Because many businessmen lack the upfront capital needed for extensive renovation, a bank loan at an interest rate of nine percent has been proposed by the city. Both First National and Northwestern State Bank were asked to participate. The rate of interest and amount of money loaned is still being negotiated by bank officials, the city and merchants.

So far about 15 merchants have indicated they might participate in the proposed downtown renovation project. They are: E & M Standard, Great Lakes Energy Systems, Kaden's Emporium, Gil Coon's Furniture, Schafer's, Bogema Pharmacy, Rover's Return Pub, Boyne River Inn, Boyne City Floral, F.O. Barden & Son Lumber, the Dilworth, Keith Dressel Realty, Ace Hardware, Tom Smith Insurance, the Railroad Roundhouse, and dentist Rob Polleys.

Businesses for sale; What lies ahead?

WALLOON LAKE - When property goes up for sale in an exclusive resort it's often advertised in a big way. The following ad appeared in July in the Wall Street Journal:

WALLOON LAKE - near Petoskey, waterfront property includes operating marina plus separate large party store. Vacant 2 story bldg. excellent for lakeside restaurant. Zoning, septic, no problem. Out of state owner will finance. Contact Michigan Business Brokers, 908 W. Front St., Traverse City, Michigan. [616] 946-0830.

The party store mentioned is the Village General Store, the marina is Walloon Landing and the vacant two-story building is the one between the marina and Master's Boats.

And, the zoning and septic? Some local officials say there could be problems with both, contrary to the Journal advertisement.

Andy Johnson, president of Michigan Business Brokers, said a buyer of the property could extend the second floor of the vacant two-story building over the marina to house a restaurant.

A septic system for the entire three business complex could be established near the marina, said Johnson.

Former Melrose Township supervisor and current Walloon businessman Roger Srigley doesn't think the septic system would be as easy as the "no problem" ad wording would lead one to believe.

"I don't think they have any land that perks," Srigley said.

"Perk" refers to a property's suitability for an on-site sewage disposal such as a septic tank.

Gordon W. Block, environmental sanitarian for the Charlevoix County Health Department, thinks that Srigley is probably right.

"We'd be willing to take a look at the proposal," said Block when asked about the possibility of the joint septic system for the three businesses. "But it's doubtful that the property would be suitable for on-site sewage disposal. If anyone's interested (in the property) they should check with us. We'd be glad to take a look at it."

Any expansion of the buildings toward the lake would require a variance of zoning ordinances, said Srigley, as would changes in available parking facilities.

Township supervisor Larry Fineout concurred with Srigley that variances would be needed for major construction or any non-conforming use of the property.

All of the properties offered in the ad are owned by Harvey Schach, a Downtown Walloon Village, future development could change the face of this small business district. A recent ad in the Wall Street Journal advertised three buildings on M-75 and a fourth building set off from the highway.

summer resident of Walloon Lake who lives in Cleveland the rest of the year. Mrs. Schach, when contacted by The Press this week, said business interests in Cleveland are making it hard for much attention to be spent on the Walloon properties.

"We've bought an old school in Cleveland," she explained. "We hope to get an art school to come in. You can only do so much at one time."

"We've developed the businesses (in Walloon) and hope to find someone to continue it," said Mrs. Schach.

"You have to put time in projects and you have to have time to relax too," she added.

The Schach's lack of time to devote to the businesses' development was pointed out by Johnson of the brokerage too, particularly in the marina business.

The prospectus for the marina includes the following:

"Possibilities: Present owner lives out of state and the lack of growth of the marina has been primarily due to this absentee ownership. . . ."

Johnson emphasized that development plans for the restaurant were definitely in the preliminary stage. He did say, however, that a possible tenant existed if renovations were completed.

The Press contacted the possible tenant Johnson mentioned. He is Stafford Smith, owner of Stafford's Bay View Inn in Petoskey and The Pier in Harbor Springs. But Smith said he hadn't given the idea of a restaurant in Walloon Village much thought in the last three years.

"We had looked at it about three years ago," said Smith. He said he decided against developing the restaurant because he thought the site was too small for his purposes.

Mrs. Schach said that she and her husband aren't being aggressive in the sale of the businesses. She said there are no serious buyers in contact with them at this time.

BOYNE CITY - Two city commission seats will be up for election in November, and anyone interested in running for office must turn in a nomination petition by Sept. 25.

The petitions will be available at the city clerk's office in City Hall beginning next week.

The terms of commissioners Thelma Behling and Joe Gierlach expire after the Nov. 6 election. Behling says she will run for re-election, but Gierlach is undecided.

Behling, who also serves on the Parks and Recreation Committee, said she is going to run because, "I am interested in seeing better things happen to Boyne City."

"By being active on the city commission, I try to represent all sides of the residents of Boyne City.

Gierlach, may not run for re-election if his band, Captain Fishhook and his All Night Crawlers, goes "on the road."

Two city commissioners, serving four year terms, will be elected at the Nov. 6 City General Election. To be eligible for the position, one must be 18 years of age, a registered voter, and a city resident for one year.

Downtown Boyne City was a crazy place to be last Thursday night. Gary Schafer (above, believe it or not!) was just one of many store owners and clerks dressed in mad outfits for Moonlight Madness. See page 3 for more pictures.

Supplement to the Charlevoix County Press

Letting everyone know she's not a 'fudgie' is Lori Kopecki, owner of the Fireside Inn, Charlevoix.

We ask locals and visitors

What's a fudgie?

BY DIANNE MURRAY

Who wears Bermuda shorts, an alligator shirt, buys out half the stores he's in and eats fudge like a mouse eats cheese?

If you guessed a 'fudgie' you're right. A 'fudgie' is an enduring term used by 'townies' to describe tourists. Some townies use the term to describe not only those who visit one day, or a week, but also to describe those who stay the summer.

There's some dispute about the summer residents because some say those who own property, and pay city, school and property taxes, should not be considered fudgies.

Fudgies help double Northern Michigan's summer population. Between 8,000 and 10,000 people visit Charlevoix County campsites, beaches and other recreational facilities in any given day. More than 8,100 seasonal residents own second homes in Charlevoix County.

A 1977 study by the Michigan Department of Commerce concluded that tourists spend $82 million a year in Charlevoix County. In the same study, the Commerce Department reported that 2,000 people per year are employed directly because of travel and tourism in the county. As we all know, most businesses hire additional help during the summer to control the summer rush that fudgies cause.

The term 'fudgie' originated on Mackinac Island. Harry Ryba, who is recognized as the Fudge King of the island said, a fudgie is someone "who jumps off the ferry, looks through the fort, goes through the park, and he's carrying a box of fudge the whole time."

Only one shop in Charlevoix County makes and sells fudge. Murdick's Famous Fudge, 230 Bridge St. in Charlevoix. The flavors are numerous: from plain chocolate to peanut butter. It's open from June to October - fudge season.

Owner Gary Murdick said not everyone who comes in to buy fudge is a fudgie, however.

Fudgies are liked and disliked. Merchants appreciate them for the money they bring into the community. Many locals dislike tourists because they believe tourists overrun 'their' home, ruining the beauty and tranquility of the area.

One store owner who did not want to be identified, said, "So many fudgies feel they run the town just because they have money. But really all they do is come to beautiful Northern Michigan and ruin it."

Murdick didn't agree. He said fudgies are like northern industry. "People complain about both fudgies and industry but without the money they bring into the community, we and a lot of other shops would fold," he said.

In our search to find the true fudgie, The Press asked people on the street if they are a fudgie.

Three shoppers visiting Charlevoix became defensive and said, "We're not fudgies because we did not come in our camper. Fudgies come in their camper."

Roswell Williams, shuffleboard attendant at East Park, said he has heard the term 'fudgie' but is not quite sure what it meant.

"Isn't it something like a hippie?" he asked. When told it is a tourist, Williams said, "Oh, you mean something like me going to Florida when the snow falls here?"

Paul Greenway, who lives near Benton Harbor, owns property on Lake Charlevoix. He thought the term 'fudgie' is used to describe a dance. When asked to imitate the dance, he said he was not sure how it went, and mumbled something about shoving fudge in your mouth.

Sue Mabee, of the Clothing Company, described a 'fudgie' as "someone who has a better tan than store owners. They always have that little white box (of fudge) in their hand, a camera slung around their neck, and are very friendly."

Most tourists are not familiar with the term 'fudgie.' Several people leaving Murdick's fudge shop, when asked if they are a 'fudgie' answered "yes" without knowing the definition.

"If it means someone who likes fudge, yes we're fudgies," said Mary Lynne Povinelli, of Silver Springs, Md. Mary and her husband Fred, and their four children were in Charlevoix for a day of shopping.

"The kids could smell the fudge when we drove into town. That's one of the first places we want to stop at. We're on our way there now," she said.

Primo Scodellaro, left, from Detroit, and Jerry Hoffman, from Birmingham, caught eating fudge in East Park, Charlevoix, did not know if they were 'fudgies.'

Margie Fortune, bartender at TJ's Tannery, in Boyne City, displayed her fudgie sign on an appropriate place, the cash register.

Marie Buday from Murdick's Famous Fudge, displays the 'tempter' which attracts fudgies and others.

WHERE THE GOOD TIMES JUST KEEP ROLLING ALONG

And the winner is...

The first annual cheapest draft beer poll

Where to go for a cold draft beer? That's a question asked by many people every day during the hot days of summer and, for that matter, the rest of the year as well.

Fun & Sun was curious about where the cheapest draft beer in Charlevoix County could be found. We investigated, and to make sure we wouldn't step on any toes we called the Michigan Liquor Control Commission to find out if a comparison survey on beer was legal. They assured us that, although beer advertising is not allowed, a survey would be on the up and up. So off we went.

Many factors enter into the comparison -- size of the draft, the kind of beer, entertainment costs, and some others that we might not have thought of. The prices listed here are for beer and we didn't try to pro-rate the expense of any additional benefits received, such as entertainment, popcorn, or atmosphere.

The winner was the Ironton Ferry Landing, at 50 cents for a 12 oz. draft.

Close behind was the Walloon Junction Inn at 50 cents for a 10 oz. glass, and Chuck's in East Jordan at 60 cents for a 12 oz. mug. Others were right in the running but couldn't equal the Landing's bargain. The other prices and sizes follow:

BAR	SIZE	PRICE
Weatherlane (Char.)	10 oz.	$.85
Duffy's (Char.)	12 Oz.	1.00
Topsider (Char.)	?*	.60
Rainbow Bar (EJ)	9 oz.	.50
Ski Inn (BF)	9 oz.	.50
Boyne River Inn (BC)	12 oz.	.75
Dilworth (BC)	10 oz.	.75
Gallery (BC)	10 oz.	1.00
Mogul Inn (BC)	10 oz.	.60
TJ Tannery (BC)	12 oz.	1.00
Granary (BC)	12 oz.	1.00
Sportsman (BC)	9 oz.	.50
Rover's Return (BC)	9 oz.	.50

*They weren't sure of the size of the glass.

A real bargain for senior citizens -- 25 cents all the time!

The Ironton Ferry Landing, just off M-66 south of Charlevoix, is the winner of Fun & Sun's informal poll to find the cheapest draft beer in Charlevoix County.

Inside Greg Reinhardt's home, Phil Armstrong holds a rock which the chimney will be installed on top of. Armstrong said rocks are used because even after the fire in the stove has gone out, heat is given off by the rocks.

Alternative energy sources

BY DIANNE MURRAY

With winter fast approaching and cost of electricity and gas going up, many new home builders are looking for alternative energy sources to heat their home.

As one might expect, the owners of an "alternative energy" company would go all out when they built their homes. And that's just what Phil Armstrong and Greg (Tiny) Reinhardt are doing. They are part owners of Great Lakes Energy Systems at 109 Water St., Boyne City, and they are working near East Jordan. They started building a year ago and they plan to move into their finished homes next spring.

The initial cost of building an energy efficient home is 5 to 15 percent more than the cost of building a conventional home. However, the energy efficient home will pay back its initial cost in one to five years compared to the fuel cost of a conventional home in that same time period, Armstrong said. And after that, you'll have low or possibly no energy bills for the life of your home.

"Alternative sources of energy cost less than fossil, conventional fuels. In addition there is no cost for site-produced power (such as wind or solar energy). There is less cost for transmission of energy, no pollution cost of central coal-fired facilities and no waste control cost like there is with nuclear power," Armstrong said.

Another benefit for energy efficient home builders is a tax credit. State and federal combined energy tax credits amount to 55 percent of the first $2,000 spent for solar and wind equipment installation and 35 percent of the next $8,000. The maximum allowable credit is $3,900 on a system costing $10,000.

Armstrong said the total cost for materials for each of their homes is $8,000. That figure does not include the cost of their own labor or the cost of the land. Their homes are located on 10 acres of land about five miles southeast of East Jordan off M-32.

It is their first attempt at home construction. "Before this Tiny and I had never built anything bigger than a dog house," Armstrong said. Their background on energy efficient sources comes from interest in the subject and one year of working at Great Lakes Energy Systems.

Both builders will use wood, sun and wind for energy sources because they are renewable, Armstrong said.

The first step in building their homes is to economize space to a "comfortable minimum." The houses are not identical, but similar in size. The 24 by 30 ft. homes include a bedroom, kitchen, bathroom and living room.

The walls are made with 2 x 6 inch boards rather than 2 x 4 boards filled with fiberglass insulation, Armstrong said.

Most conventional homes leak heat where the ceiling and outside wall meet. To better insulate this area, Armstrong and Reinhardt have lowered their ceilings at a 45-degree angle where the ceiling and wall meet. Insulation can then be put in this triangular space.

They have computed that their homes will be about 67 percent better insulated than the average home. An average home with three inches of insulation in the walls has an "R-factor" of 15. (R-factor is a measurement of how well a home resists heat gain or loss.) When Reinhardt and Armstrong's homes are finished, the walls will have an R-factor of 25.

Another tip is to insulate all vulnerable spots which leak air easily. Crevices around windows and doors is one area where heat escapes. Armstrong suggested Foam-o-Fill as a good sealant.

Armstrong used recycled double strength glass windows which he bought used from a school.

The earth is one of the best natural insulators. Armstrong built his house with 36 inches of earth mounded up to the rear of the house and 18 inches on one side. Mounding earth against the side of the home is called "berming."

Neither home has any backup heat source. Armstrong and Reinhardt use wood to heat their homes. Their homes, surrounded by acres of trees on all sides, are in an excellent area for wood supply.

Armstrong said their small homes will need only about five acres each to give them a continuous supply of wood. An average size home would need about 10 acres, they said. When trees are cut, new ones will grow to replace them by the time the rest of the trees in the 5 or 10-acre lot are used.

Reinhardt and Armstrong will install a one wind system which will provide electricity for both homes. The initial cost of installing a wind system will be high, Armstrong said, but within four years, the amount of energy saved will have paid for the system.

"Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company wanted over $2,000 to run power lines back here. With that money we could pay for half of our wind system," Armstrong said.

Reinhardt and Armstrong will share the cost of the wind system, which will be about $4,000. They will also use low voltage appliances which will save more on energy. Energy efficient appliances is a fairly new market. Such things as an RCA 45-watt color television or a smaller refrigerator will save on energy.

Both homes use composting toilets, with a semi-attached privy. The toilets are commercial, store bought units with peat moss and bacterial agents to start the composting. The final product will be a soil fertilizer safe for garden use, Armstrong said.

Great Lakes Energy System does not recommend one particular manufacturer of energy efficient products. Anyone interested in building an energy efficient home can see them at Great Lakes even before seeing an architect, Armstrong said.

"We'll reduce the hype, clear out the dispute between manufacturers and the scores of books on energy efficient homes and find the appropriate way for a person to build an energy efficient home according to his individual needs," Armstrong said.

Above, Joe Spaulding and his wife Carol built their energy efficient home four years ago for them and their three children. Spaulding, a licensed builder, helped Armstrong and Reinhardt build their homes. Left, Phil Armstrong in front of Reinhardt's home.

Most conventional homes leak heat where the ceiling and outside wall meet. Phil Armstrong shows how he lowered his ceiling to a 45-degree angle to meet the wall and insulated the triangle space between them.

FINANCING
"HANDYMAN SPECIAL"

You have your eye on the purchase of a "handyman special". You can arrange the financing for the $40,000 price tag, but it will need about $8,000 in repairs. Where do you go from there?

A construction commitment loan is one way to finance immediate improvement on a home you are about to buy. Basically, you will ask for a loan on the future value of the home -- after improvements and repairs. In other words, a loan based on the future $48,000 value instead of the present $40,000 price tag. If the bank agrees to loan 75 percent loan, they will give you $30,000 (75 percent of the $40,000 sale price) for payment to the seller at the closing. It will hold the remaining $6,000 of your loan (75 percent of the $8,000 improvements) until the remodeling is done. Then it will be released to you for payment to your contractor. Thus the improvements on the house cost you only $2,000 out-of-pocket. You pay the remaining $6,000 worth of improvements over the life of the mortgage -- and at the same interest rate.

Condo owners meeting

CHARLEVOIX -- United Condominium Owners of Michigan will sponsor a condominium educational meeting at the Weathervane Terrace Motel, in Charlevoix, on Saturday, Sept. 8.

The meeting will run from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and all condominium board members or co-owners appointed as delegates to this meeting by their board of directors are welcome.

Developers, condominium service people and professionals may find this meeting profitable as well, organizers say.

The purpose of the meeting is to explore the special problems experienced by resort condominium associations and to inform the participants of the goals of United Condominium Owners of Michigan.

Robert M. Meisner, condominium attorney from Birmingham, will be a featured speaker and will respond to questions.

The organization is a non-profit corporation which has within its membership condominium associations, co-owners, as well as developers and service-related organizations. Established in 1974, this volunteer group provides a forum for the exchange of information and experiences among condominium associations.

Walloon Lake

Kelbel's skills concentrated on teaching

WALLOON LAKE -- The great, near great and the average duffer have all reaped the benefits of his keen eye and sage advice during Ed Kelbel's 13 years as club pro at the Walloon Lake Country Club.

Tom Watson, leading money winner on the pro golf tour the last four years, learned his golf at the Walloon club while Kelbel was teaching there. He points out quickly that he wasn't Watson's chief instructor however. "I wish I could say I was," Kelbel smiled. "I did give him some lessons, though."

The bulk of his students haven't joined the pro tour, but he has turned out some good golfers since starting at Walloon in 1961.

"Jeff Low, George and John White, Tom Stuart -- they were all good golfers," Kelbel recalled. "They'd practice from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m."

That group was all playing the course about the same time as Watson, the early to mid 1960's, and their scores coupled with Kelbel's own probably haven't even been approached since.

The course record, 63, was set by Kelbel in 1963. A few days before that, he had shot a 64.

"The 64 was probably the best round of golf I've ever shot," Kelbel claimed. "I had four three-put greens, otherwise it probably could've been a 59."

He doesn't expect to lower his record because his drives are becoming shorter. "I won't get that here again unless they quit watering the greens," he laughed with a glance toward Don Barrett, club manager.

Kelbel has held or still holds course records at other clubs in Michigan as well. His 65 at Millam Park in Kalamazoo was one stroke better than Ben Hogan's best there. He recorded a 63 at the Harbor Pointe course near Harbor Springs in 1972 and he shot a sizzling 59 on the par 69 Indian Trails course in Grand Rapids.

His instructional skills are evident in his family. Three sons, Ed Jr., Mark and PJ are all good golfers, Kelbel said, although none of his three daughters play. Ed Jr. has enjoyed the most success. Medalist for the Class C and D state finals in 1976, he also captured the state Independent Insurance Agents' tournament earlier that year.

The senior Kelbel hasn't played in any tournaments since his college days at Aquinas in Grand Rapids. Following four years as the number one man on the team he got away from the competitive side of golf.

"I don't play much anymore," he said. "I mostly just teach."

The concentration on teaching is easy to see when Kelbel gives a lesson. He spots low shoulders, bad weight exchange, loose wrists, incorrect head placement, and corrects it.

Ed Kelbel has been spotting golfers' mistakes at the Walloon Lake Country Club on and off since 1961. A record setting golfer in his day, he now limits his golf to teaching. Club member Cindy Frenzel here receives some words of advice during a recent lesson at the club.

Kelbel finished a recent lesson by hitting six balls at the ninth flag by the country club. From 150 yards, the six shots all hit within 20 feet of the pin, kicked high in the air and rolled back towards the pin.

In his modest way Kelbel discounted the shots by saying "The greens are really beautiful now," as if the shots would've been terrible without the benefit of the soft surface.

Kelbel lives in Harbor Springs with his wife Mary Lou, three sons and daughters Julie, Susie and Molly. He teaches during the fall, winter and spring, too - but not golf. He switches his instructional skills to the classroom and teaches sixth grade reading for the Harbor Springs middle school.

Poetry winner is repeat selection

Judges in The Press Literary Contest repeated their decision of a year ago and selected Anne Kelly of Charlevoix as winner of the poetry division.

Kelly, whose poems "Pretty People" and "Paul" were judged to be the best of the poetry entries, is a writer who is still expanding her scope.

An award winning poet while an English major at Ohio Dominican College of Columbus, Kelly renewed her writing a few years ago when she and a friend started writing songs.

The wife of Boyne City School superintendent Rich Kelly, she channeled her efforts into a professional outlet when she started writing a weekly column for the Charlevoix Courier.

She plans to teach a creative writing workshop at the Boyne City Senior Center. Kelly has taken some news writing and photography classes herself recently.

"I'm just starting to try different things," explained Kelly.

Writing is a way of life for her, Kelly said. It's something that she's always found time for, no matter how busy her schedule.

She doesn't go so far as to set up a specific time each day for writing, but she generally does write daily.

"I'm driven to write," she said, "I write for relaxation but I feel compelled to do it."

The results of her compulsion rated high with our judges, for the second year in a row, and should give you enjoyment too.

PAUL

He brought me wild flowers
strawberries and mushrooms in spring laboring along with a cane through the little hills beyond our house
I wondered about the way he looked unshaven, unkept
old cigar half-chewed in his mouth smelling like the wood burner in his shack grime under his nails sadness under his eyes.

"Hey, Paul, tell us about Oscar the only brook trout who ever managed to outsmart you," we'd say to humor him
Then he'd smile and slowly regress into the melancholy dialogue of the world of old men who fished the streams and culverts ribbons through the woods around the lake
I poured him coffee in a mug cups and saucers rattle
when you're old and unsteady
Paul had pride left
I didn't want to take away the last.

I cut Paul's toenails last year about this time
I couldn't get through them
I couldn't get through to him
He didn't like it where he was His roommate was insane
everyone else in the house was feeble, mainly in the head, Paul said.
No, he hadn't gotten any Christmas cards at all he was glad ours was on the way
Yes, he wanted out
They killed the cat and kittens when he'd had to leave the shack and go
He'd really like to get into town
He'd really like to die, if you'd care to know.
But no one really cares to know.

--Anne Kelly

Anne Kelly of Charlevoix was the judge's choice for the second straight year as winner of the poetry section of The Press' literary contest. Mrs. Kelly is a mother of four and finds writing a relaxation, yet a compulsion for her.

Lots of poets!

There are lots of poets around Charlevoix County. The Press has discovered.

We were flooded with poetry entries in our second annual Literary Contest... but we received few entries in the other categories.

Only two entries each were received in the fiction and non-fiction categories. The contest judges felt this was too few to bestow a meaningful title of Literary Contest winner, and no prizes were awarded in either category.

Instead, the first prize for the poetry division was doubled, and winner Anne Kelly will receive a check for $50. Judge Tusco Heath was also quite impressed with the poetry of Gregory Bryan, and so The Press is awarding him an honorable mention prize of $25.

Several entries were received in the photography division of the contest, but they were all color prints or slides, which were not allowed according to the contest rules.

To stimulate more entries in the contest, next year The Press plans to print its Literary Supplement in the spring rather than in the summer. More student participation will be urged at that time.

THE CONCERT

Who is the king of rock tonight?
Who do we beckon with flickering flame and sweet incense?
The altar is laid
tribute to the alcolytes who have prepared the stage and now we anticipate the twilight mass.

The offertory procession
ass and palms
Jerusalem
the king will now sing
Laud him with cymbal and drum or hum or beat or sway
the tension, the heat, the beat we are moved by the king
the readings
the gospel
the truth
the song
we knew it all along it's how we feel that is real.

And in the crescendo of the moment there is a consecration of body and blood bodies spent and wine consumed and a communion
in which hearts are there in the chalice in the song
in the song that is ours
we are his.

We reflect
We genuflect over the evening's debris
the benediction of the moon on the trees
the colored lamps are snuffed Recessional.
--Anne Kelly

PRETTY PEOPLE

Look at all the pretty people in their oranges and greens
in pom poms and stripes
like so many flags waving in the snow.

Children staring into fondue pots
wishing for a hot dog
whining when they can't duckfoot march up the inclines but urged along by impatient mothers who remind them about how lucky they are to be having so much fun.

Middle-aged men wearing sideburns and thickening waists
sipping on skotch and sodas in the lounge while sun-tanned wives look over the art show on the mezzanine or page through sale items in the boutique.

Look at all the pretty people
dancing dances of the 50's to songs of the 70's Bridging the generation gap in one last attempt to be young and vital.

Look at all the pretty people involved in the politics of play. --Anne Kelly

MITTEN'S KITTENS

Miracle of nature
that four rat-like creatures from deep within yesterday's womb today suckle blindly at their mother's soft body treading purposefully against her furry belly making little peeps of kitten contentment.

And Mittens, yesterday's cat-child lays docile and at peace with total acceptance of her role.
She has put away for the time being flirting with the excitement found within brown paper bags and her pawings at moving strings and dangling chair tassels
for other things,
which summoned up within her feline psyche
are priorities today.

And tomorrow
for as snap-finger-quick as cat life is called to be that family will be lost to memory that huddles together so dependently upon its flannel bed
prepared for them as if today were the all-important moment in time and as if tomorrow
was not important at all.
--Anne Kelly

AUTUMN BEAUTY

O you who are seeking for beauty,
Turn your eyes to the east and the west.
You can find no spot that is fairer then this scene which God has blessed,

With hillside and valley of splendor,
trees scarlet and copper and gold:
By a kind loving Father in Heaven, created for man to behold.

Leaves of crimson and flame colored beauty, framing waters so calm and so still,
Reflecting the Grandeur of Autumn from neighboring trees and hills.

Gaze long on it's colors of brilliance of deepening shadows and light, Drink deep in thy heart of it's beauty fill thy soul for the long winters night.

AUGUST HEAT

This country road twists its old rope of a turn in a slow dance -- blurred and drunk with August heat.

The air burns down the furrows between the last soiled breaths before harvest, before the crisp wind tatters the green dress of the fields.

Dust floats in the warm ear of summer softer than a pulse -- a field of dried kisses shimmering like a halo stillburning from the lips of dew.

But how far did we go?
The road blooming great petaled flowers behing us as we hummed, the gravel coming up in our throats as our laughter whisked away in the false wind of the convertible speeding beyond the crossings. The dust resting finally on the weeks along the sides in the ditches, and above us the blue sky holding only the empty embrace of the last light.

Tell me, when did the laughing corn come humbly to its senses?
When will the smooth tar turn again to the loose gravel?
Why did the steely-belted tires of romance spring to their high-powered sunset ride towards oblivion?

For the scent of hay still lying on the floorboards?
The scrap of hair saved in a locket? Or is it the odor of her skin in the backseat that was strewn with the seeds of our love, where the sun burned its last hope between us?

Then for August, which drove us crazy with love and promises down the furthest stretch of dust searching for our own hot flesh, when all we wanted was the impossible ride, again into the cool of spring.

-Gregory Bryan

IN NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Forest glades are cooler, deeper,
Bobsled hills are faster, steeper,
Living just a little cheaper
In North Michigan.
Song birds' notes are clearer, sweeter,
Dairy farms are richer, neater,
A haven for the heavy eater
Is North Michigan.

To our lakes and streams galore
Come the tourists by the score
To play and fish, then play some more
In North Michigan.
Come to sail, to bathe and dine
Deeply breathe our "Ozone" fine,
It's a grand old state o' mine,
This North Michigan.

Come Autumn then with sombre face
The path to home they must retrace
They seem to really like this place,
This North Michigan.

THE ICE BREAKS UP ON MICHIGAN

Out on the pier
I stare into the grey meditation of clouds stalking the unseen shore.

This is at last the unbounding.
The ice breaking and drifting out the channel scattering hints of white sails along the horizon.

Even with no breeze,
in the dead calm, the cold stings water in the eyes. And the blurred white-caps that never break in the distance break in the imagination
like a china plate

Here they find what cities lack Can't be had with all their "jack"
Every year we see them back
In North Michigan.

Let the frigid North wind blow
Piling high the driven snow,
No place we really need to go
In North Michigan.
What if snow gets in your boot,
Here we just don't give a hoot.
In North Michigan.

Just what sport could be so nice
Packed with thrills at any price.
Perch or muskies through the ice,
In North Michigan.
So, what if employment fails,
We don't sit and chew our nails,
Ever taste those cottontails
In North Michigan?
-CLARENCE SIMEON WAY

dropped the slow distance from the sky
I see Monet's lilies -- perfectly unfocused patches of ice floating away in a still life.

I touch her whitest skin in the frozen moments that linger on the tip of the tongue more hidden than exposed
I have kissed them.

So why does the body lean hard into nothingness.
To listen? The long conversation of ripples as they breathe against the broken pieces,
the quiet leaving,
the subtle movement of time when the memory is first remembered.

-Gregory Bryan

TO HEAR MY BABIES CRY

The wise old man bowed down his head, then looked me in the eye,
"Those tests we run, the cancers won, my dear, prepare to die."
The whispered "No" began to grow, until it filled the air,
"Not me! You must mean someone else," prepare, prepare, PREPARE!
I scream, I fight, I hit, I run, the needle stings my skin,
I sleep awhile, then dream awhile, and then I cry again.
I choke and swallow hard, my voice must sound sincere,
"Oh no, my dears, oh no, your Mom won't die this year!
It sounded wrong, I practiced more, to tell a lie is Hell!
A secret now? A secret then? I cannot bear to tell.
I must pretend, I have to lie, the truth will not be told,
They will not know, at least not now, Mom never will grow old.
Half a life is half a life, the worst is not to die,
The saddest thing of all to me... to hear my babies cry.

-Gigi Antoine

MY HOME TOWN

Antiquated buildings,
mixed with the new.
All kinds of people,
and folk lore too.

Some came for logging,
but decided to stay.
Some came for the land,
and built homes right away.

The ethnics came hard working souls
Norwegians and Czechs,
Germans and Poles.

Logs came to town,
the sawmills run.
The boats came in.

including the Hum.

The town grew wild
On Saturday nights.
To burn steam,
men had their fights.

When the logging was done,
some drifted away.
Things settled down
like they are today.

Each one of the settlements,
adds to its charm.
Making our county,
friendly and warm.

COUNTRY AUTUMN

The trees are all laden
Blown heavy with leaves
The ducks are all nestled-
There's color on trees

At first, a few patches
They're beautiful, till-
You see painted forests
Perched, guarding the hills.

Harbor Springs

The village of Harbor Springs sits upon the harbor formed by Harbor Point, a peninsula one mile in length. The small bay gave the place its Indian name, We-Que-Ton-Sing.

Several writers and poets have tried to recapture the beauty of the picturesque village through art and writing, in an effort to explain the scenic landscape. Needless to say, their efforts were in vain.

According to Ottawa, Indian traditions, the Mush-quah-tas, a western Indian tribe, were the first inhabitants of the Little Traverse area. Ottawa and Chippewa Indians were also numerous at the time, and for many years the area was home for these groups.

The first Indian school was founded in 1827 by Father Pierre Dejean, the first resident priest. The first one was a log-structure, and 12 or 15 years later the present church was constructed.

Today, the authentic and legendary history of the area still endures. Research Courtesy of Dante Melotti Jr.
