Improvements noted; High school accredited

EAST JORDAN - The University of Michigan has accredited East Jordan High School for 73 years but this fall the man doing the accreditation visit noticed some changes.

Dr. Alexander M. Nelson of the U of M Bureau of School Services, one of two high school accrediting services for the state of Michigan, said this fall, in contrast to last fall when he visited, students at the high school seemed much more orderly and disciplined.

Nelson had recommended probationary accreditation last year due to construction being completed on the new high school building. The facilities weren't complete and as a result the school wasn't up to the standards set by U of M.

The two accrediting units, U of M and the North Central Accrediting Agency, differ in the criteria needed to be accredited. North Central generally is the accrediting agency for larger schools while the U of M, with slightly more lax requirements, generally reviews smaller schools.

Factors considered in accreditation are such things as the size and qualifications of the counseling staff, the size and content of the library, classes offered by the school and size of the classes.

Being accredited means that minimum requirements have been met and are a mark of excellence of sorts for the school. Some colleges won't accept students from high schools that haven't been accredited.

East Jordan's accreditation was probationary during the years that the school was part of the Twin Valley school district. Half-day sessions were the primary reason for the probationary status at that time.

Nelson said now, particularly since the completion of the construction of the new school, East Jordan again meets minimum requirements for accreditation.

He goes even further than that. In a telephone interview with The Press, Nelson said he was impressed by the new school and the students.

"I saw a lot of things happening there that you associate with quality education," Nelson said from his Ann Arbor office.

"There are good human relations between teachers and students, teachers and teachers and teachers and administrators. I was impressed with the building trades program," Nelson continued.

"I was impressed with the English program. They're putting more emphasis on grammar. A few of the teachers were returning to sections on vocabulary."

The attitude of the student body was different from his 1978 visit too, Nelson noted.

"There was a definite improvement (in student behavior)," he said. "Particularly during noon hour which is always a good indicator of behavior. The students behaved like perfect ladies and gentlemen."

Some of the physical characteristics of the new school that impressed Nelson most were the wooded setting of the school and the proximity of the nature area.

"It's one of the better physical plants for a school its size," he noted.

"It's conducive to learning. It's clean, the kids are in the classrooms. Teachers are using teaching methods to fit the situations," Nelson explained.

$12,500 federal grant will fund park study

EAST JORDAN - The city will be receiving $12,500 from the Michigan Coastal Management Program, a federally funded project, to study what improvements are needed in the Tourist Park area.

The city hasn't yet received final notification that Congress has passed the legislation appropriating the money, city superintendent Herm Rasch said, but the Michigan Department of Natural Resources has sent the city a congratulatory letter on receiving the grant.

Larry Sullivan, a planner for the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission in Traverse City, said the grant was for site analysis and design of the park area.

"In the early stage the project is looking at the area, determining what the potential is," Sullivan said. "It has to be determined what improvements are necessary to agree with the public's view of what should be done."

Rasch said that the deadline for submitting bids for the site analysis and design study was Nov. 10. As of Monday six bids had been submitted.

The state sent the city a list of people qualified to do the study, Rasch said, and the bids submitted basically list the bidders' qualifications. After the person or firm is selected to do the study, Rasch explained, public hearings will begin to get input on what residents think should be done in the Tourist Park area.

Other grants are needed to follow through on recommendations made after the site analysis, Sullivan said. Possible sources of funding for projects are the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Soil Conservation Service or the Northwest Michigan Conservation and Development Council.

Money from the Land and Water Conservation Fund is to be used to provide access to recreational facilities. The money could be used for picnic tables, bar-b-que pits or a parking lot.

Resource Conservation and Development Council money is basically for shoreline stabilization, Sullivan said that while East Jordan doesn't have any major erosion problems in the Tourist Park area, there is a slight problem.

Because it is connected by navigable waters to the Great Lakes, East Jordan is eligible for a grant from the Michigan Coastal Management Program.

Sullivan thinks that the Land and Water Conservation fund is the most probable source for the funding for improvements to the Tourist Park.

All applications for grants, no matter which source the funding is being requested from, go through the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, Sullivan said.

"They screen the applications. They will consider them or throw them out, depending on the need for the money and if the grant request meets criteria," Sullivan said.

Sullivan said a tentative timetable has the study of the area being completed this spring.

Two new councilmen both get early start

BY JON DENISON

EAST JORDAN - The two new members of the city council both list serving the citizens of the city as the primary factor in their choosing to run for the council.

Ken Hagen and Al Joseph were elected to council seats from the third and second wards, respectively. Both of the new council members are married and each has three children.

Hagen, 37, has been serving on the council since September. He was appointed to fill retired council member Harry Watson's seat until the election Nov. 6.

Hagen beat fellow third ward resident Hazel Colburn in a write-in contest and will now fill the year left of Watson's term.

"I was happy about my victory," Hagen said. "I felt good that I was elected and I'm going to go from there. I don't have any big problems that I'd like to see solved or any major plans."

While Hagen doesn't have any particular projects that he'd like to see implemented immediately, he has been a vocal councilman in the short time that he's served.

Hagen raised questions about city superintendent Herm Rasch's involvement with the East Jordan Family Health Center construction. Hagen felt that Rasch had a potential conflict of interest concerning the project since Rasch drew up the plans for the center and he owns part of an engineering consulting firm.

Rasch denied any involvement with the firm doing the construction and said his time was donated to the health center.

Hagen also was one of the leaders in denying Glen's Market a sign variance for a sign at the new Glen's store on M-66.

Hagen and fellow council member Patricia Sweet voiced fears of the area becoming a billboard jungle. Hagen produced photographs of a large sign at the Mancelona Glen's store.

Council members in attendance, when able to see the size of the sign at the Mancelona store, turned down the request for a sign the same size to be erected in East Jordan.

Hagen grew up in rural Ohio and graduated from Dana College in Blair, Neb., before attending the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Columbus, Ohio.

The pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in East Jordan, when asked about the low voter turnout (316 of some 1,200 registered voters), said that it doesn't really concern him that much.

"It's a universal trend," he said. "I think the community trusts the council. If the council makes a decision that the citizens aren't happy with they'll make their voices heard."

"I think the council is doing what the citizens want. If not they know how to change that. People are either part of the problem or they're the solution," Hagen said.

Joseph, who defeated Gary Anderson in the second ward, will get an early start as a city councilman.

Joseph, 34, has been appointed by Mayor Jim Meredith to fill the remaining month and a half of Lorraine Gagnon's second ward seat. Gagnon had resigned because of poor health and Meredith waited to see who won last Tuesday's election before appointing Joseph to serve until Jan. 1 when the council terms voted on Tuesday night.

Joseph, who describes himself as "more or less an environmentalist" hopes to see some recycling projects started in East Jordan.

A member of the recreation committee, Joseph feels that the city's recreation program is a good one but wants it expanded.

The new second ward councilman is behind the downtown renovation project being sponsored by the chamber of commerce. "This town has looked rather drab and dreary compared to other towns in the area," Joseph said. "I feel it's time the businessmen get together and renovate."

Promotion of the area to tourists is area Joseph thinks should be left to the chamber. "I don't think the city should actively invite tourism. That's best left to the chamber."

The newest councilman says that the low voter turnout in last Tuesday's election concerns him, but Joseph doesn't have an answer of how to combat the apathy of the voters.

"Apathy? Yes. Indifference? Yes. Do people care about what politicians are doing? When it comes to their pocketbook," Joseph said. "It's a problem, almost an impossibility in some cases."

Health Center gets $1,000 from Glen's

The fund drive for the basement completion project at the East Jordan Family Health Center received another big boost last week when Glen's Market donated $1,000.

The donation raised the current drive total to $7,000. Center administrator Neal Colburn said "We certainly encourage anyone who'd like to make a contribution to the development project to do so. We're ready, willing and able to put the money to good use."

County may have bus system by 1980

BY DIANNE MURRAY

Charlevoix County has been approved for state funding for a public transportation system of seven buses.

If the grant contract is approved by the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, the bus program could start in July, 1980.

The state should submit the contract detailing funds and the county's role within a week and the commission is expected to vote on the matter at its next regular meeting Dec. 12.

The county board of commissioners learned of the grant approval from the State Bus Transit Division Oct. 31. Art Saworski, director of the County Commission on Aging, had gone before the commission in March with an application to apply for the grant.

Charlevoix County received the grant because Saworski "pushed hard for the grant and also because the county commission applied for the grant early" before a lot of other counties applied, he said.

The grant would fund the bus program fully for the first two years. The third year of the program, the maximum state share of the total cost is 75 percent.

Total cost for the first year of the program would be $197,540. The second year the cost would be $209,050. For these first two years, all funds would be paid for by the federal and state governments, Saworski said.

The third year, the total cost would be $213,000 with 75 percent of the money to sponsor the program coming from state funds. The remaining balance is $53,400. Federal funds would amount to about $40,000 with a balance of $13,350 being absorbed by the county.

Saworski said the county funds are usually made up by hiring CETA bus drivers, he said.

"Every time you go to the gas pump you pay two and one-half cents that goes toward public transportation," Saworski said. "I applied for the grant because I figured why not have the money coming back into the county?" Saworski said.

The county currently has two buses. These buses transport senior citizens and handicapped people only.

The new bus system would be for any person wanting bus transportation.

The county will be divided into three service zones centered around the three cities. Vehicles will be radio dispatched through a central dispatch

Buses will be dispatched to people calling in for a ride, or reservations can be made for special trips. Emphasis will be put on work trips.

Five new buses would be added to the two existing vehicles. Three of the new vehicles would be equipped with lifts to accommodate the handicapped. Each of the three city zones would have two vehicles and the other vehicle would be used for "inter-zonal" connections.

Antrim County has a similar bus program which has been working "real well," according to Marjorie Wilson, that county's transportation coordinator.

Antrim's county bus service started in January, 1977 with four buses, Wilson said, and has expanded to include nine buses. Wilson said she is hoping to have 11 buses by 1980.

"The energy crisis is one reason for the increase in people using public transportation," she said. "People are definitely riding the buses."

Approximately 4,200 people ride the buses each month, she said, and the number is increasing because a full-time mechanic has been hired to repair the buses and clean them up to making them more appealing.

Total cost for the Antrim bus system for one year is $194,000, Wilson said.

Wilson added that if the public transportation system were disbanded, voters would probably approve millage to keep the system going. "That's how well the program is liked," she added.

Projected ridership for the Charlevoix County program starts at 3,150 for the first month and climbs to a projected 7,880 riders after six months.

The service hours would be Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, bus runs would be made only if advance reservations were made.

The fares for a one way trip within the county would be: age 12 to 59, 60 cents; all other ages, 30 cents; all age handicapped, 30 cents; and infants, free.

For out of county rides, the rate for age 12 to 59 is $1; all other ages, 50 cents; and handicapped, 50 cents.

The Elderly and Handicapped bus service may be incorporated into a county-wide public transportation service. If the state grant is approved by the County Commission, a total of seven buses would run between Bay City, East Jordan and Charlevoix.

SURVEY QUESTION

What do you think the United States should do about the American hostages in Iran?

I really don't know. It's just a group of students. Can't our government outsmart them? Also why don't all of us Americans stay out of these other crazy countries.

Send the Shah back. What can they do? It's a "Damned-if-you-do and damned-if-you-don't" situation. No matter what the American government does, something is bound to go wrong somewhere.

I think we Americans should stop worrying about it, take the government's advice and play it cool so we don't damage the situation.

Send our military in there and get the people out.

I don't think the Americans should be protesting and carrying on like the Iranians. We look just as bad.

I think the government should demand them released or declare war on them.

No election challenge yet

BOYNE CITY - No one has yet challenged the handling of 187 absentee ballots in last week's city election, according to a state election official and city hall officials.

In a prepared statement read to the city commission Tuesday, City Manager Tim Clifton said that the city had "erroneously distributed the absentee ballots." This error was not committed intentionally, he added.

Misinterpretation of the state election law on the part of City Clerk Tom Garlock resulted in the "improper distribution of the absentee ballots," he said. The absentee ballots during the Front Street election were also handled improperly in the same manner, he said.

State law stipulates that: "A clerk, upon receipt of an application... shall forward by mail, postage prepaid, or shall deliver personally to each qualified applicant... the ballot."

Garlock had allowed city residents Violet and Louie Manglos to personally deliver the absentee ballots to elderly voters. The Mangloses turned in an estimated 170 of a total 187 absentee ballots cast in the Nov. 6 city election.

The 170 ballots represent more than 27 percent of the 626 votes cast in the election. Thelma Behling and Martin Paul won city commission seats at the election with 432 and 333 votes respectively.

Any qualified voter can challenge the election by contacting Circuit Court, state election specialist Howard McCowan said.

He has not heard of anyone contesting the election at all. And I doubt that anyone will," he added.

The only contact McCowan has had, he said, has been with the media and Garlock.

Kate Schafer, who placed third in the election with 130 votes said she will not contest the election.

"In view of the fact that the total number of absentee ballot votes would not make any difference in the outcome (of the election) and because the city administration has publicly acknowledged their wrongdoing and will insure that this will not happen again, I will not contest the election," she said.

Mike Handy, another candidate who unsuccessfully ran for a commission seat said he will not contest the election either. He would, however, like the city "to take steps to see that this does not happen" again at any future elections.

To insure that this improper handling of absentee ballots does not occur again, Clifton said all absentee voter ballots, henceforth, will be mailed to all eligible applicants.

In addition, "an instruction sheet will be attached to remind the voter that if they are assisted in voting, the person assisting must sign the statement on the exterior of the envelope indicating such," he said.

Clifton also said that "Any potential impropriety which might have occurred while the absentee ballots were in the possession of the voter are beyond the control of the city."

Mrs. Manglos told The Press last week that she and her husband had told most of the absentee voters they were supporting Behling and Paul as they brought them the ballots. But, she said, she made it clear that each voter should vote for the candidates of his choice.

Mr. and Mrs. Manglos said they were present as most of the voters marked their ballots.

Legislator open to secession idea

BY PAUL COX
Capitol Correspondent

LANSING - While they are not ready to jump on the State of Superior bandwagon, Charlevoix County's delegation to the Michigan Legislature is interested in the growing secession movement.

In fact, many around the Capitol have heard of Karl Waldner's petition drive. Officials from the Attorney General's office point out that no matter how many signatures Waldner can collect, the state Legislature would have to approve a plan to de-annex the northern portion of the state before the plan could go anywhere.

Rep. Steve Andrews said he might be willing to introduce the necessary legislation if Waldner can show he has enough support. The Wolverine Republican said he doesn't have enough information about the movement yet to judge its merits, but added if there is enough support he would help the people take their fight into the Legislature.

If the Legislature approved a secession, the issue would then face a vote of the affected residents of northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula. The attorney general's office says that from there the action would have to be approved by the U.S. Congress before the State of Superior could be created.

Similar secession drives have sprung up throughout Michigan history, but none have ever made it to the level of serious consideration by the Legislature.

Rep. Ralph Ostling said he "is open to the idea" but feels there hasn't been enough work on the new government's structure, so the current plan "is a shot in the dark."

"I would rather see Wayne County and Detroit secede," the Roscommon Republican joked.

He said there are no concrete figures available to show whether northern Michigan is getting a fair return on its tax dollars. He added that he sees some recent improvements in the situation including property tax reform, increased educational funding and better unemployment benefits.

These sentiments were echoed by Sen. Mitch Irwin. The Sault Ste. Marie Democrat said he is open to the secession idea but he needs more information before making a decision on the merits of Waldner's plan.

He said he is also seeking concrete figures to see if northern Michigan is getting a fair shake for the taxes it pays. Until then, he said, room exists within the present state government structure to work to improve state services to northern Michigan.

Beach study planned, site questioned

BOYNE CITY -- After discussion of whether it would "even be worthwhile" the city commission Tuesday night decided to do a study and site analysis for a beach.

The total cost for the study of the proposed beach behind the Little League baseball field in Veterans Memorial Park is $15,000. A grant from the Michigan Coastal Zone Management Program will assist in the study and the city will pay $3,800 with in-kind contributions.

The city had applied for this grant earlier to study a beach on the tannery property to be donated by Rick and Dave Smith. But, with the decision to not close Front Street, the beach site donation by the Smiths was withdrawn.

The city reapplied for the grant and was given the funds to study the site behind the ballpark.

Commissioners Katherine Jessup and Steve Moody, who voted no against the resolution, said the money would only be a "waste of taxpayer's money." Moody said he "knew for sure" that no beach could be developed on the proposed property and thus felt that any study would only be a waste of money.

Jessup added that with the city "doing so many other things" she would favor capital improvements such as industrial and commercial development or road improvements over the development of a beach which is not on a feasible site.

Fifteen years ago the Rotary Club put in a beach on the site but wave action washed it away, according to city manager Tim Clifton.

If a study determines that the beach site is feasible, the city would further look into the complete building project.

The total project cost is projected to be $153,000. The federal Land and Water Conservation Fund would supply $53,000 of the total cost. The other $100,000 would have to be local funds.

Clifton said that the adoption of the resolution to study the beach site in no way obligates the city to develop that land.

Artrain date, site chosen in BC

BOYNE CITY - The Artrain "museum on wheels" visit to Boyne City has tentatively been set for June 12 through 16, City Manager Tim Clifton has announced.

The site for the train will be north of the city parking lot on Park Street. Visitors will enter the train south of the Boyne City Co-op store.

The landscape surrounding the train will hopefully be decorated by the Boyne City Garden Club, said Carol McTaggart, a member of the Artrain steering committee.

Boyne was picked as one of 12 state communities to host the 1980 Michigan Artrain.

The six-car railroad train, has three exhibit cars in which works of art from the last 80 years will be displayed. Exhibits from local artists will give residents a chance to see area artists at work. The other three cars are used for storage and electrical equipment.

Although there is no rental to the city or admission to Artrain, expenses up to $3,000 are required for housing of Artrain staff and for electrical costs for operating the train.

Fund raising activities are being planned by the seven-member committee. Anyone interested in helping with fund raising activities or promotion of Artrain can contact Clifton at city hall.

Absentee ballots, campaigning don't mix

The handling of absentee ballots in last week's election of Boyne City commissioners was, to say the least, distressing.

Two city residents, Violet and Louie Manglos were allowed by City Clerk Tom Garlock to personally hand out absentee ballots to about 170 senior citizens. Mr. and Mrs. Manglos picked up the ballots, brought them to the voters and returned them to city hall.

This was, as The Press reported last week, improper. State election law stipulates that ballots must be mailed to absentee voters or given to them personally. Obviously this law is designed to prevent election fraud. If anyone were allowed to pick up ballots, especially in a big city where the clerk doesn't know everyone, it might be hard to determine who was actually doing the voting.

No one is accusing Mr. and Mrs. Manglos of stealing votes. The voters themselves had to sign the envelope in which the absentee ballots were returned, verifying that they did, indeed mark the ballot themselves. City Clerk Tom Garlock said each signature was checked with voter registration records to be sure that there were no forgeries.

Editorial

But the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Manglos were admittedly partial to two particular candidates (Thelma Behling and Martin Paul, the eventual winners) is what is so terribly disturbing.

Mr. and Mrs. Manglos admitted to The Press that they had actually told most of the absentee voters that they were supporting Behling and Paul. They say they also told them "to vote for whatever candidate you like."

This is what horrifies us. They immediately put themselves in an enviable position by doing the voter a favor - delivering his ballot to him. Then they tell the voter they are supporting two candidates.

With this introduction, and then being watched while you mark your ballot, who would you vote for? We'd guess a huge percentage of the absentee vote went to Behling and Paul.

In a way, it is fortunate that the total number of absentee ballots was not enough to change the outcome of the election. That saved the city the expense, inconvenience and embarrassment of holding another election.

It was close, though. A total of 202 absentee ballots were turned in, but 15 were marked improperly or invalidated for various reasons.

Martin Paul, who was elected by finishing second in the six-candidate race, had 203 votes more than the third place finisher, Kate Schafer. (Thelma Behling finished first and was also elected.)

If last Tuesday had been sunny, rather than cold and rainy, more voters probably would have gone to the polls, and the vote may have been much closer. (The Front Street election three months ago had 466 more people voting than last week's election.)

It is disturbing that city officials did not discover their own mistake. Two candidates and two comparatively "disinterested citizens" mentioned the absentee ballot irregularities to Press staff members. We called state election officials to see if any laws were being violated, and the election official we contacted immediately called Garlock.

Garlock, to his credit, readily admitted he made a mistake. He said the only reason he had allowed Mr. and Mrs. Manglos to personally deliver so many ballots is that it would save the city on postage.

The Nov. 6 election was not even the first in which the improper handling occurred. Mr. and Mrs. Manglos turned in about 200 absentee ballots for the Aug. 7 advisory election on the closing of Front Street.

City Manager Tim Clifton released a statement this week saying that he had reprimanded the city clerk and also noted that city commissioners had reprimanded Clifton. They assure us that it will not happen again. All future absentee ballots will be delivered by mail or given to voters personally by city officials.

Since the election result would not have been changed, there is a tendency to say the mis-handling of ballots really didn't make any difference.

It is significant, however, that city voters had their confidence in the American electoral process severely shaken. Somehow, the voting booth and the voting process have always been sacred. We take that for granted. People can tell us how to vote, but great precautions have been taken to give us our privacy when voting, to count every vote, and to prevent fraud.

Those great precautions are, in the end, what led to the bungling of about 170 absentee ballots in Boyne City. State election is by necessity very detailed in spelling out how elections are to be conducted.

In most elections, the absentee vote is a very small percentage of the total vote -- and if a procedural mistake were made in such a case, it would be easier to overlook it.

But when 170 absentee ballots in a town the size of Boyne City are taken out by one or two people, a mistake of this magnitude is inexcusable.

The sheer volume of absentee ballots, and the political nature of the persons circulating the ballots, it seems to us, would have prompted someone at City Hall to carefully review all sections of the state election code pertaining to absentee voting.

Doing my own crazed survey

America is survey crazy. Our people are answer happy. They are spouting opinions about everything from Jimmy Carter's death defying duel with a rabbit to why they use soap so.

Taking a page from the national surveyers' book, we decided to conduct our own indepth survey, zeroing in on Charlevoix county residents. We queried 486 men with serious questions concerning the frustrations gnawing at their daily lives. (We asked men because the women said they did not trust their opinions in our hands.)

In our survey concerning health of Charlevoix county males ages 18 through 46, only 22 percent admitted to having had warts during their child bearing years; 72 percent reported no warts, while six percent claimed not to have had any child bearing years.

Why do you forsake Charlevoix county and go south in the winter? Sixty-five percent refused to answer on the grounds that it might incriminate them. Thirty percent said they did not mind winters here at all, but were forced to get away from those who were always griping about it. Five percent were in the bathroom when we called.

Should sex be taught in Charlevoix county schools? The majority of men contacted, 61 percent, gave answers reflecting 1903 thinking; 30 percent hung up and called the school to enroll, while a surprising small number, only six percent, beat their chests, sounding like Tarzan.

Who do you think should guide the future of Charlevoix county? Sixty percent of the men contacted thought the county should remain in the closed fists of the Republicans, while 35 percent thought Democrats should rise and grab the entire bag. Five percent felt Charlevoix county should be recalled by the government.

How do you rate this award winning column written by a highly intelligent executive with three thumbs and a penchant for Preparation H? Of those contacted, 71 percent fell to criticizing the paper itself, saying there is never anything in it but reading and pictures. Twenty-nine percent said they refused to answer any question designed to give them a sick headache.

Do you want the entire business section of your city renovated to look like something it isn't? An overwhelming majority (63 percent) favored a renewal project, saying that it doesn't look enough like it ain't. Twenty-two percent didn't give a hoot since they were hooked on the thrill of squandering their money in Petoskey. Fifteen percent got off the subject. They felt that while the city had gotten rid of horses, it had left too many buggies.

Should women's liberation be enforced in Charlevoix county? Of the 486 men called, more than 500 answered. Tabulation of the results have been delayed due to the ensuing fist fights.

Letters to the editor

Boyne City store fix-up commendable

Editor,
I believe the owners and operators of the Great Lakes Energy Service should be highly complimented.

The builder they chose to do the restoration work on the exterior of their building certainly did a good job.

The planning and carrying out of the project resulted in an authentic, as well as aesthetic appearance which greatly adds to the attractiveness of the business district.

The contrast between the former appearance of this building and its present state of presentability is remarkable.

A sincere vote of thanks to all parties involved.

Sex education sounds logical to grandpa

Editor,
It seems like sex education would be a good subject to teach in school.

My opinion is based upon my own personal judgment, but I do not know how well or badly sex education is working elsewhere. As a parent I can recall many obstacles and sensitivities.

As an illustration -- I am a good swimmer but not a good instructor, while the children would rather play. So someone else taught them to swim. Of course, they will never swim as well as I do.

I cannot believe that anyone can or should remain totally unenlightened about sex. Misinformation and propaganda can be harmful, dangerous, and very costly.

Good information isn't immoral, just as good morals aren't ignorance. There is room in this world for more and better knowledge as well as morals. Why withhold either of them?

As I see it the church teaches morals about as well as the school teaches knowledge. Sex has another dimension -- that is, experience -- which may best be left to the individual.

A good philosopher once explained experience this way: "You can not tell someone who has never tasted a pineapple what it tastes like. He must taste it for himself."

If sex education is tried, and I think it should be, the effects can be observed and it need not "lock in." It can be discontinued.

Christmas goodies for legislators

BY PAUL COX
Capitol Correspondent

LANSING - As the Legislature finishes up doing out this year's tax dollars, the last appropriations bill traditionally contains the most suspect funding and causes one of the biggest political fights of the session.

The measure is officially titled the "grants and transfers bill," but around the Capitol it is known as the "Christmas Tree bill," because it is loaded with financial goodies for the districts of powerful legislators.

Once the state's essential programs are funded, lawmakers try to bring home the last few millions in the state coffers.

The bill originates in the House Appropriations Committee, and its members spent much of last week deciding whether to give the city of Pontiac $800,000 to help pay off its debt on the Pontiac Silverdome. While this funding may not seem like the kind of thing the state should be paying for, Rep. Charlie Harrison, D-Pontiac, has been pushing hard to bring this goodie back to his district.

When the bill was approved by the committee last week the Silverdome funding was included but that doesn't mean it is sewed up. Each year the bill faces fierce battles on the House and Senate floors and ends up being hashed out in a joint conference committee.

Even after that compromise, if the Legislature has over spent its budget, Gov. William G. Milliken usually trims the fat from the grants and transfers bill, and this year will be no exception, said Rep. Ralph Ostling.

The Roscommon Republican, who represents the western half of Charlevoix County, estimated that at least $100 million will be cut out of the bill which currently totals $811 million. It will be a long and complicated process that won't be completed until late December -- thus the Christmas Tree label.

Ostling, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said he voted to allow the Silverdome funding in exchange for keeping funding for Charlevoix County and northern Michigan in the bill. The key item he has been fighting for its funding for local governmental bodies and schools stemming from compensation for land acquired by the state last year, or "swamp tax."

Ostling said many local governments in northern Michigan are facing financial straits and the money is badly needed, so he compromised his position on the Silverdome.

He also pointed out that the bill currently contains money for area libraries and historical museums. Grants to the Great Lakes Commission and the Civil Air Patrol will help too.

Although freshman legislators traditionally don't have much influence on such controversial issues, Rep. Steve Andrews, R-Wolverine, and Sen. Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, said they will fight to keep whatever money is already slated to go to their areas in the bill.

Irwin pointed out that all appropriation bills require a two-thirds vote of both houses and that makes each vote more important.

The actual funding totals change rapidly as the measure travels through the Legislature so it won't be until Christmas that the extent of funding to Charlevoix County from the grants transfers bill will be known.

Pretty clever, NBC!

It had to happen sooner or later and the day is now upon us -- television has gone full circle in the re-run game and is now showing first-run programs late at night and the re-runs during prime-time.

It must be the principle that if you make something hard to obtain, the demand for it increases. The network moguls are applying this to the programming and, I'm sure, enjoying an end-product of large audiences.

Jon Denison

Saturday Night Live being condensed to a one-hour highlight, prime-time Wednesday night offering is what made me realize the sly trickery being practiced by Freddie Silverman and his counterparts at CBS and ABC.

The network started the program in a late night spot a few years ago to build a cult following. Some of the material on the show is a bit ratty to be sure; but that probably wasn't the primary reason for screening it late on Saturday nights.

No, I believe that this has all been a clever master plan designed to initiate the program with a small but devoted audience who would spread the word about the outrageous satire and offcolor comments comprising the episodes.

That has now been done and Silverman and his marketing personnel have decided America's populace is ready for a double dose of the looniness of the "Not Ready for Prime-Time Players" and the show's various guest hosts.

The whole family can watch the 10 p.m. Wednesday version. Major items of poor taste have been trimmed and the viewing hour is early enough to include the segment of TV land that retires after Johnny Williams with the News and Sports.

The doorway has obviously been opened now and it will only be a matter of time before ABC and CBS will first show their best new shows at 11:30 p.m. or midnight for a couple of years before introducing them in a prime-time slot.

TV addicts will have to re-arrange their viewing schedule to catch the late-night first runs. People will have to alter their work schedules in order to insure that they'll be able to stay up late to see the new series.

A generation of school children will grow up never having seen a first-run TV program, not being able to stay up late enough to see new shows.

Pretty clever, NBC.

In the dog-eat-dog world of the TV ratings race it takes innovative thinking to be on top. NBC, with Fast Freddie at the helm, looks like it's taking charge.

Ideas like re-running late night programs during prime-time can only help the peacock network in its quest for the number one ranking.

But can they solve social problems?

Engineers have designed our world

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the tenth in a series of 15 articles exploring "Connections: Technology and Change." This series was written for COURSES BY NEWSPAPER, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

A related television series, "Connections," is being shown on PBS Channel 6. The series will be broadcast at 8 p.m. on Sundays, 12:30 p.m. on Fridays, and 10:30 a.m. on Saturdays. Copyright © 1979 by the Regents of the University of California.

BY EUGENE S. FERGUSON

Engineers have a greater effect on the kind of world we live in than most of us recognize. Less than one American in a hundred is an engineer, but because they are decision-makers, engineers are far more influential than their numbers suggest.

Many engineers deny this influence, insisting that they merely carry out the instructions of others -- of politicians, for example. Yet in fact, engineers write a politician's shopping list by furnishing alternative solutions to particular problems -- solutions that require engineers to carry them out!

Most of us highly approve of the world our engineers have built for us. Yet some of us become angry and frustrated when technical systems often seem to demand that we adapt to the system's needs, rather than the other way around.

To understand why technical considerations in engineering projects tend to submerge social or human needs, we must examine the controlling principles, or imperatives, that shape the way engineers think. Engineering imperatives are often more powerful than the needs and wants of those who use what engineers design.

An engineer (1) strives for efficiency, (2) designs labor-saving systems, (3) tries to design the control of a system into it, so the user will have limited choices.

The engineer is also fascinated by his or her ability to disregard human scale, so he (4) favors the very large, the very powerful, and (in the electronic revolution) the very small.

Finally, because an engineering problem is inherently interesting, (5) it becomes an end in itself, rather than a means to satisfy a human need.

Let us consider these imperatives.

EFFICIENCY

(1) Efficiency comes easily to the technical mind, even though it is one of the slipperiest words in our language. High efficiency means high output for a given input. For example, if a quantity of fuel is the given input to an automobile engine, the power output from a diesel engine will be the highest; from a conventional gas engine one-third less; and from a gas-turbine engine, one-half that of the gasoline engine.

"Efficiency" as used in engineering also has a rhetorical meaning. It may mean "more powerful" or "better performance." When an engineer seeks efficiency, his ideal is flexible -- enabling him to think of a machine or system that performs the way he thinks best (high torque, satisfying roar, whatever) as "most efficient." Gas turbines have their advocates, and most engineers continue to choose gasoline engines over diesels.

LABOR-SAVING SYSTEMS

(2) Labor-saving systems are generally preferred by engineers, with no serious thought given to alternative possibilities. Thus, machines are being developed in agricultural experiment stations to eliminate workers, particularly in harvesting fruits and vegetables. The consequent drift of displaced farm workers to city slums is not seen by engineers as part of the problem.

Many engineers believe that labor-saving without limit is a positive and unquestionable good.

In 1916, for example, the president of A. O. Smith Corporation, a maker of automobile frames, sought to build a "plant that would run without men."

Bankers advised against spending money so costly and uncertain a goal, but company president L. R. Smith and his engineers worked doggedly to build an automated factory of unprecedented mechanical complexity.

Ten years and several million dollars later, Smith proudly unveiled a vast machine that turned out a thousand automobile frames per hour. It required so few men to tend it that the labor cost per frame was less than 25 cents! The plant was a marvel of the particular "efficiency" that obsessed Smith, which was to eliminate all workers.

BUILT-IN CONTROLS

(3) Control is an imperative that guides the design of systems such as an assembly line and the new Metro subway in Washington, D.C.

Engineers decide who will do what on an assembly line. Subdividing work into minute tasks that require mere dexterity and minimum training and skill goes back 200 years to the French pin-makers who supplied Adam Smith with his often-quoted example of the division of labor. Drawing the wire to proper size, straightening it, cutting it to length, forming the head -- each was assigned to a different worker.

The assembly line was brought to its logical extreme by Henry Ford in 1914. It took charge of both a worker's time and his sense of timing. The assembly line moved inexorably, dragging work along on a chain, and pacing the workers. Aside from doing as told (efficiency engineers called it "cooperation"), the worker had no opportunity to use choice or judgment.

Paradoxically, designing an assembly line provides an absorbing challenge to the engineer who decides how work will be subdivided. In so doing, he reduces to a minimum the mental effort required of people who spend their working lives on the line.

Washington's new Metro subway is operated by computerized controls, but Metro yielded to public pressure and put an attendant at the head end of each train. On a recent trip on the Metro, I noticed that the head of the train stopped automatically at the center of each station platform. After a delay, the human being in the front car regained control momentarily and inched the train forward to the proper position.

Difficulties with the metro train operations pale, however, before the nightmare of the fare-card system. A magnetically coded card is purchased from a machine, shoved into a slot to gain admittance and into another slot for departure from the station. The record of broken-down card dispensers and unresponsive turnstiles has forced management to admit that its fare-card system is its "Achilles' heel."

But rather than replace the system with responsive persons, the next move (in stereotyped phrases of management) is to redesign the system to make it "more efficient."

NONHUMAN SCALE

(4) The urge to transcend human scale is as old as engineering. Some famous structures whose builders were guided by this imperative include the Egyptian and Mexican pyramids, the enigmatic statues on Easter Island, and the Eiffel Tower.

Since 1957 and Sputnik, a new imperative has been added: Space vehicles requiring small, light, extremely complex instruments pushed engineers toward miniaturization of electronic computers and instruments. Small and large, the imperative of nonhuman scale is powerful.

ENDS AND MEANS

(5) Despite their frequent disclaimers of emotional involvement in the work they do, engineers are conscientious workers and can hardly escape the inherent interest of the problems with which they are concerned. Engineers' devotion to their work helps explain why so much engineering is so good, and changes and innovations so frequent and ingenious.

When an engineering project goes sour from a social standpoint, the trouble is often in the engineer's absorption in the technical aspects of the project and his forgetting or misjudging the human dimensions.

Yet it is precisely these human aspects that have become of concern. Instead of massive, centrally controlled systems, some of us are now calling for simpler solutions on a human scale. We want to see more solutions that fit the problems.

Social problems can have social solutions, which usually require discussion and compromise. Unless we insist on this, we can expect technological solutions to all problems because they are easiest to devise.

Turkey prices lower this year

Turkey prices this year should give holiday shoppers something to be thankful for. "Wholesale turkey prices are lower than they were a year ago," says Allan Rahn, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service poultry economist. "Depending on how retailers handle these lower prices, consumers should pay less also."

The primary reason for the lower prices is the record number of turkeys produced this year. Production is up 11 percent over last year to 158 million birds. This increased production has resulted in a 13 percent increase in frozen turkey stocks over last year.

Another factor which might be helping to keep turkey prices lower is record pork production this year, Rahn says. Pork and turkey are generally considered as interchangeable substitutes for higher priced beef. Therefore, attractive pork prices help to keep turkey prices down.

One factor that may tend to boost turkey prices is increased turkey consumption. Per capita consumption is up about 11 percent this year.

Rahn attributes the increase in consumption to two factors. It reflects the attractive protein value of turkey and the availability of many new turkey products, such as turkey hot dogs and lunch meats.

"It is difficult to predict all the ramifications of these factors, but holiday shoppers should be on the lookout for lower turkey prices than last year," Rahn says.

Thanksgiving events at schools

The East Jordan Public Schools' Indian Education Program is going to sponsor a cultural assembly Wednesday, Nov. 21 in the Middle School gymnasium at 1:15 p.m. The program will feature Arlene Naganashe and family, Ottawa Indians from Harbor Springs, doing traditional, ceremonial and fancy dances. The public is invited to attend the free performance.

The first grade classes of Jackie Wollenberg and Carol Powers at Boyne City Elementary School will be having a Thanksgiving feast Wednesday, Nov. 21 starting at 2 p.m. The classes are preparing for the event by making costumes to wear to the dinner.

Church services slated

The Boyne City Ministerial Association is planning a community-wide Thanksgiving Day service at 10 a.m. next Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church.

The church is located at the corner of South Park and Pine Streets.

How Much Profit?

When you sell your home for a profit, Uncle Sam will expect a capital gains tax on the profit unless you buy another home costing more. But you can make this profit tax basis as small as feasible by adding legitimate expenses to the original cost and deducting expenses from the sale price.

You can add any buying costs, such as: title search, title insurance, lawyer's fee, appraisal fee, recording fees, property survey, credit report, bank lawyer's fee, processing charges and any "points" you may have had to pay. If you made any capital improvements -- finished attic or basement, new kitchen, added porch, patio or swimming pool you can add the cost of these to the original price.

You can deduct your selling cost from the price you received: Realtor's commission, lawyer's fees, advertising costs and fix-up expenses if they were made within 90 days prior to the sale. Now you deduct the lower selling price from the higher original cost figures and you arrive at the taxable profit.

TOURING OUR FUNERAL HOME CAN BE EDUCATIONAL

Would your religious, fraternal or civic group like to make a tour of our funeral home facilities? We believe your members would benefit through the discussions with us and each other. Many people have no knowledge of funeral costs or procedures prior to the time of need, so an education tour can be quite helpful to them.

Do you, for instance, know about funeral costs and procedures? Are you aware of the more-than-75 specific details to which we automatically attend? Have you wondered about the formal education and training which a licensed funeral director must have? Are you aware of the many informative books available now on "death-and-dying?"

A tour might satisfy your curiosity about these questions, and others. You'll see how we meet the needs of individual families with the professional expertise our community has come to expect.

If you or your group would be interested in a tour, please call for details.

Boyne City cubs win Olympics

The weather was damp and cold, but the boys' spirits were high. The boys were divided into different age groups, and each group had to do as many push ups and sit ups in a certain period as they could. They also had to run the 50 yard dash, throw a softball and broad jump.

In the eight year-old division, Herbie LaBeau of Den 4, came home with a second place medal.

In the nine year-old division, Michael DeSchryster of Den 5 came home with a first place medal. Michael also had the highest score over all the other Cubs and Webelos that attended.

In the 10-year-old division, Troy Bishop of the Webelos came home with fifth place.

Overall, second place went to Pack 55 of Harbor Springs, and third place was taken by Boyne Falls Pack 53.

The Cubs of Pack 49 also had a Fall Camporee in Cheboygan recently. Five Webelos camped out for the weekend with leader Ron Bishop and Scoutmaster Herb LeBeau. Despite the cold weather, the boys came home with third place.

Hockey rink for BC?

BOYNE CITY - Is there enough interest in hockey in Boyne City to warrant a city hockey rink? Mark Guitard of the Boyne Public Schools Community Education office, the Parks and Recreation Commission and city and school officials want to know.

Some interest has been shown in building a hockey rink near the high school. Before that happens, according to Guitard, it has to be proven that dependable volunteer help is available to build, flood and maintain such a facility.

Those interested in building a hockey rink in Boyne City should get in touch with Guitard at the Boyne City Community Education office by calling 582-6765.

EJ to honor grid teams

EAST JORDAN - University of Michigan recruiter and former Northern Michigan University Coach Pat Arsenault will be the guest speaker at a special dinner honoring East Jordan's football teams next week.

The potluck dinner and awards ceremony will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the high school. Players, family members, boosters and all fans are invited. Tom Sheridan will act as master of ceremonies.

The banquet is being sponsored by the athletic department to honor the varsity and junior varsity, both of which recently completed undefeated seasons.

Anyone interested in attending the banquet should call booster club secretary Marion Holes at 536-7910 by Monday.

Your fun guide

Indoor fun on dismal days

BY DIANNE MURRAY

Right now we're in between seasons. It's cold and damp and not much fun to spend time outside unless you're hunting or bringing in the shovel, clothesline or skateboard that has been sitting in the backyard for the last five months. Unfortunately, the fall color season is over and it's not quite time for winter. The snow is starting to fall and soon there will be so much that we won't know what to do with it. But for you ski buffs, your time has not quite come.

So what is there to do to fill these crummy weekends?

The Press informally surveyed some people to find out what they do in this lousy, gray weather to keep their spirits up.

Some sleep while others fly their homemade model airplanes in the house (because it's raining outside) and drive their mothers crazy. Read on and maybe you can find a new way to entertain yourself on these dismal days.

Dolores Williams of Boyne City finds this weather "terrific for canning and freezing apple sauce." Another task she likes to do around this time of the year is go into the woods and look for walnuts. While there, she also searches for dried flowers to make flower arrangements.

Jeanette Cornell and Mrs. Williams were enjoying coffee and pie in Mr. J's Restaurant in Boyne City when we asked what they do in "the off season." Both ladies said that since this weather keeps them inside they are starting to make their Christmas gifts already.

If you go into Schafer's store on Water Street in Boyne City, almost every department has ideas for what to do on crummy days.

Games galore including Tripoley; an electronic football strategy game called Pro Foto-Football; the marble game Stay Alive; not to mention the old-time favorite game Monopoly can fill hours of any day. These games are priced around $8, and can be found in department stores including Glen's Market in East Jordan and in Charlevoix Bridge Street Hardware and Dockside Pharmacy carry several games.

The day that you're wandering around the house trying to decide what you can do when nothing sounds good might be the good time to catch up on some reading.

Judy Balgenorth's solution to this type of weather is to head to Florida for the winter. When asked if she missed the winter months in Charlevoix County, Judy said, "No, not until Christmas and then I miss having a white Christmas." She tries to get someone to send down snow every year, she added with a laugh.

Christie Elzinga has a game room in her house where she and friends gather for indoors fun. The group plays records and cards, said Christie who is a senior at Boyne City High School.

The Ben Franklin store in downtown Boyne City offers a lot of craft ideas ranging from latch hook rugs to paint by number kits.

Ben Franklin, in Boyne City. Hite Drugs and Jordan Valley Drug in East Jordan, as well as Barb's Hallmark Harbor and the hardware stores in Charlevoix have Christmas cards on display already. If you lack nothing else to do, since this can be a tedious job, you can start on your Christmas card list, Judy Sumner an employee at Ben Franklin's suggests.

On the magazine rack you can find up-to-date articles on the world around you in publications such as National Teresa Bloomingdale who shares the perils and joys of raising ten children, located in the non-fiction section.

Ahhh, but you say you're a music buff and sound is what you're looking for? Well, the library has that too, from "Songs of the Depression," Jive at Five" and chamber music, to nursery rhymes.

Cable television not quite what you're looking for? The library has films available that can be ordered from Alpena for $1 plus postage. Why they even have the 16mm projector and screen you'll need too!

There are some very special children's programs happening. Every Tuesday in November there will be a story time for three to five-year olds from 10:15 to 10:45 a.m. in the library's Children Section. Parents are asked to stay and share this time with their children.

On Saturday, Dec. 8, there will be a children's Christmas Film Festival from 10:30 to 11:45 a.m. This program will be repeated that same afternoon from 1:30 to 2:45 p.m. All programs are free.

Have some extra time? Well, there's a vacancy on the library's board of trustees. Please contact the library if you are interested in the position.

Is singer Sean Ryan opening a bar in Boyne?

BOYNE CITY - Is folksinger Sean Ryan, a popular performer at Duffy's of Harbor Springs for the past five years, is going to be coming to the Boyne City area?

Could be. Ryan and Nolan T. Roe, former owner of The Outfitter clothing store in Petoskey, have filed a co-partnership with the Charlevoix County Clerk under the assumed name of Ryan's Public House. The address listed for the business is Old State Road, M-75, Melrose Township, which would be somewhere between Boyne City and Walloon Lake.

Ryan said this week that he was not able to divulge any more details. "We're hoping to start a business in the Boyne City area, but that's all I can say right now, because nothing is final yet."

Ryan said it would probably be after Jan. 1 before he knows whether the new venture will become a reality.

Deadline near for Waldner's 51st state

BY DIANNE MURRAY

BOYNE CITY - A Sunday deadline is fast approaching for local resident Karl Waldner's petition drive to split northern Michigan into a separate state.

Waldner says he won't know until the last minute whether he'll reach his goal of 31,000 signatures to put the issue on the ballot.

He says he now has about 20,000 signatures and he is optimistic that he'll reach his goal.

One of his leading supporters thinks the effort has failed. Jim Davison, publisher of the Oscoda County News in Mio, said last week "There's no way we're going to make it." He wasn't sure if signatures gathered this year can be used to put the issue on the ballot at some later time than their target date of early 1980.

The petitions would provide for a special election on "separation of the emerging State of Superior from the State of Michigan."

Waldner is well known in this area for his criticism and distrust of all forms of government, but this is his first major attempt to tackle state government.

The bearded, blue-eyed, 57-year-old with a crewcut hairstyle said his job as a "self-employed architectural consultant" allows him plenty of time for projects such as starting a new state.

Waldner's plan calls for splitting the state at Townline 16 -- the southern boundaries of Mason, Lake, Oscoda, Clare, Gladwin and Arenac Counties.

Waldner has not had much assistance from the United States Congress, the state Legislature or county and local governments in support of the independent state idea.

Waldner found opposition when he approached the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners with a petition to support the Independent State of Superior.

All 42 county commissions received petitions to sign for the independent

See page 3 for a story about what our state legislators think about the Independent State of Superior.

Karl Waldner

state. Only five approved of the idea, Waldner said, although he is optimistic that if he again went to the commissions for approval, more would support it.

Waldner said the idea for an independent state is a result of his "dissatisfaction with the inefficient way state government is run."

"The state government is a fragile organization and only a parasite to its people," he said.

The Independent State of Superior would "revive the concept of free people under a government which responds to its people rather than the people having to respond to it." State government is not sensitive to the special needs of the north, he said.

By going back to the "old town meeting" style of government, Waldner said local government would be in control of services, and the collection and spending of tax dollars.

"We would be able to support ourselves better after a separation than we are now because we won't have the state (government) on our backs and we can eliminate duplication of services," Waldner said.

"Our only problem is that the counties will have too much damn money and we'll have to justify spending it," he added.

Local governments always have large amounts of money in leftover contingency funds, compared to what state units of government have left over, Waldner said. Duplication of services on the county level are "robbing taxpayers blind," he said.

Using the State Police as an example, Waldner explained that this department could be eliminated without sacrificing services.

Each county's sheriff department would cover the highways within their jurisdiction, he said, and possibly private enterprises would "enter into the action." Private companies would not police the highways, but would help in assisting motorists.

Waldner said his "loose non-corporate structure" made up of six other northern residents, are striving to make the Independent State of Superior a reality.

The members of the organization include Jim Davison and Nelson Yoder of the Oscoda County News, Pat Kitzman from Ewen, Jenny Vallier from Rock, Neal Witsitt from Rogers City and Indian leader Art LeBlanc from Brimley.

After the signatures are gathered, they will be brought to the state board of canvassers in Lansing.

Waldner is hoping that the next step, which is voter approval of the separation, would take place in early 1980. After that, the constitutional delegates for the 51st state would be elected in the summer of 1980. A constitutional convention to ratify the separation of the state would take place in the fall of 1980, with voter approval of the constitution in early 1981.

In a letter to The Press from northern Michigan Congressman Bob Davis regarding the Independent State of Superior, Davis said he believes the north could "survive economically and every other way." Davis said there could be benefits derived from such independence but did not elaborate on what those would be.

Davis would like to see the issue of an independent north be discussed more.

Government

Rep. Steve Andrews came to Boyne Fall School Friday to talk to the high school government class. The class had visited the capital earlier in the week.

Summer school tax gains favor

BOYNE CITY - City residents may have to pay a portion of their school taxes in the summer along with city taxes if the city commission approves the idea.

The school board passed a resolution Monday night requesting that the city "seriously consider a summer tax collection." The change would mean the school would not have to borrow money as often.

The city commission has tabled the matter and will make a decision at its commission meeting on Dec. 11. The commission will allow the school taxes to be collected in the summer unless it receives "an overwhelming response from the public against such action," the commission decided at its Tuesday noon meeting.

Questionnaires were sent to city property owners with their 1978 summer tax bills asking if they favored paying a portion or all of their school taxes during the summer tax collection as opposed to the winter tax collection.

Over 2,000 questionnaires were mailed, but the city received only 359 responses. Because of the low response rate, the city called the results of the survey "inconclusive."

Of those who did respond, 68 percent favored a larger tax bill in the summer rather than winter.

Taxpayers currently pay only their city taxes in the summer and pay county and school taxes in the winter.

The school board resolution suggests that the city collect "50 percent of the school tax" in the summer or "100 percent of the allocated and debt retirement funds if the millage should fail." The other 50 percent of the school tax would be collected in the winter.

According to School Superintendent Rich Kelly, the district collects almost $700,000 from city residents in allocated, voted and debt retirement funds.

The school would want to collect half of the total tax or approximately $350,000. The debt retirement funds of approximately $40,000 would be set aside to pay for the debt on the building and are not used for school operation, Kelly said.

"That would leave us with $310,000 which would be put in the bank to collect interest and for the school to spend as needed," he said.

City Manager Tim Clifton and treasurer Herb Herriman attended Monday's school board meeting to listen to the board's discussion.

"Overall, a summer tax collection would benefit the school, taxpayers and would increase cooperation between the city commission and the school board," Clifton said.

Most city residents have more money in the summer than the winter due to the summer tourist industry, he said. The summer school tax collection would also benefit citizens in that they would not have to struggle with such high winter taxes along with high winter heating bills.

Kelly added that a summer school tax collection would more equally divide tax payments. Also the school might not have to borrow any money or at least less money and would not be "wasting money on interest," he said.

The school has already borrowed $299,000 and passed a resolution Monday allowing Kelly to petition for another $100,000 loan to cover the Dec. 28 and Jan. 11 payrolls.

So far the school has paid $12,000 in interest on the $299,000 loan.

The anticipated $310,000 that would be collected in summer taxes would almost cover what the schools have to borrow, Kelly said. "We would not have to borrow as much or as soon," he said and the school would save money.

Both city and school officials admit that the tax collection switch would "cause taxpayer confusion," and both said they would appreciate citizen input about the proposed tax collection change.

The taxpayer would pay his regular winter taxes this year but would have to anticipate a heavier summer tax load in 1980 if the city commission approves of the school summer tax collection.

A sample bill explaining what the tax change would mean to a city taxpayer and a letter explaining why the commission and the school board are considering such action will be sent home in a newsletter to parents.

Q. Nearly every night my back aches so badly that I can't sleep. Aspirin and other pain killers do not help at all. It's only after my husband gives me a back rub am I able to fall asleep. Why does my back ache every night?

A. If backache is frequent or of long duration, it is cause for deep concern and immediate action. In almost every instance back-ache is trouble. It means you may be suffering from one or more of these conditions: (1) muscle pain (2) pinched nerves (3) disease in another part of the body (4) disease of the spine.

No two cases are precisely alike, but names are given to backache pains according to location. For instance, pain down the leg is called sciatica; low back pain is usually referred to as lumbago or sacroiliac disease, and people often speak of neck pain as a crick in the neck.

We emphasize that seldom is there one reason and one reason alone for backache. That is why it is imperative that you consult your chiropractic physician, a specialist of the spine and nerves, when backache occurs.

Ramblers face tough Cheboygan

BOYNE CITY - The junior varsity girls basketball team dropped its third game of the season to the St. Ignace JVs Friday. This Friday the squad faces one of the other teams to have handed them a loss this year, Cheboygan.

"We had a very disorganized first quarter, despite three timeouts," coach Pat Upton said of Friday's loss.

The host Saints jumped to a 19-6 lead in the initial period, then played evenly the rest of the game.

Lauri Redmer led the junior Ramblers with 15 points. Upton cited freshman Julie Paquette as doing a good job coming off of the bench.

The loss dropped Boyne to 7-3 in the conference, 12-3 overall.

Last Tuesday the Ramblers did better, beating Petoskey 41-38. Boyne trailed the entire game going ahead in the last minute and a half.

A successful stall iced the win for the Ramblers.

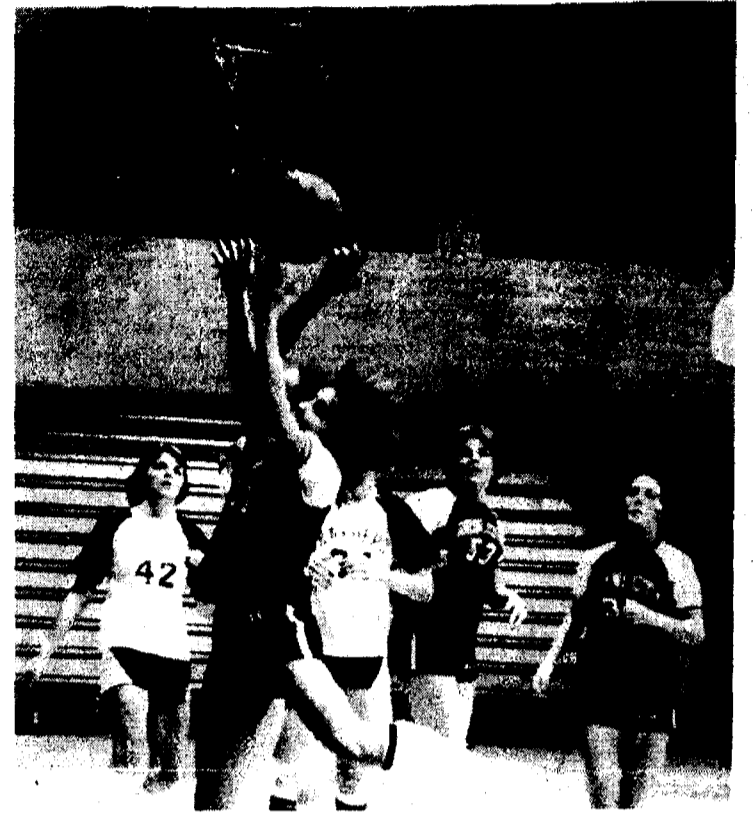

"The girls never gave up," Upton said. "Everyone really played hard. Our free throws really helped."

Boyne converted 11 of 19 attempts from the free throw line. Michelle Russell was the top scorer for Boyne City with 18 points. Redmer was the leading rebounder.

The junior varsity was playing for the first time without leading rebounder and scorer Lori Paquette. Paquette was moved up to the varsity squad.

Upton expects a good game with the Chiefs this Friday.

"Cheboygan will be a tough game. We lost by nine to them down here," Upton said. "They have a terrific team."

Penny Grunow fights for a rebound during a recent Boyne City game while teammates Cindi Scott (53) and Nancy Lentz (35) look on. Grunow and her fellow Ramblers were over-powered by Michigan-Huron Shores conference leader St. Ignace last Friday by a 72-39 score. They'll try to get back on the right track against Cheboygan Friday.

Boyne JVs drop third, revenge game Friday

BOYNE CITY - The Rambler girls basketball team went to St. Ignace optimistic about its game with the Michigan-Huron Shores league-leading Saints but a 72-39 dashed any hopes of an upset.

An aggressive St. Ignace team dominated all facets of the game holding the high-powered Rambler offense to one of its lowest point totals of the year.

Only Linda Sarasin was able to score in double figures for the usually well-balanced Ramblers. Sarasin had 12 points in the loss.

"They're very good, aggressive," coach Steph Moody said of St. Ignace. "We had one of those nights where we couldn't do anything right."

"They out-shot, out-rebounded and out-defended us," she said. "Penny (Grunow) got in foul trouble and we couldn't put the ball in the hoop."

Earlier in the week the Ramblers fared better against a tall Petoskey team, winning 67-44. Becky Aimesbury had 17 points. Grunow had 16 and Sarasin added 14 in the win.

"We played a super game," Moody said. "We were really on."

"We were pressing well, forcing them to turn the ball over," Moody continued. "We were really doing a good job."

The two games left Boyne with a 6-5 conference record, 9-6 overall.

The trip to Cheboygan Friday will be a revenge match for the Ramblers.

"We didn't play well the first time (against Cheboygan)," Moody said.

"They're a good team. I'm expecting a good, tough game. We're after them."

Devils to host Boyne, season draws to close

EAST JORDAN - The girls varsity basketball team split a pair of games last week as it gears up for the last three games of the season. East Jordan fought back from a small half time deficit to beat Pellston 50-41 then couldn't get a consistent scoring effort in a 59-40 loss to Bellaire.

The Red Devils have games with Boyne City the next two Mondays and in between face a young but talented Ellsworth squad.

Brenda Gee led the Devils' offensive effort against Pellston with 23 points. Yvonne Grant with 10 points and Kim Helland with nine were the other leading Devil scorers.

"Good defense played an important part in the game," East Jordan coach Mike Bos said of the Pellston win. East Jordan outscored Pellston 13-8 in the third quarter and 14-8 in the fourth to post the come-from-behind win.

Only four Red Devils scored against Bellaire. Gee had 16 points while Colleen Thompson made 13 of 15 free throws in scoring 17 points.

"We missed a lot of tip-ins, rebound shots and short shots," Bos said.

Bos is looking forward to the next three games.

"They should be interesting games," he said. "Ellsworth has a young team but they've been winning, they're around .500."

"Boyne City has real quick guards. We'll have to convert from offense to defense quickly," he explained.

"We're going to have to control the tempo of the game against Boyne City. We should do well on the boards because of our height advantage."

The win and the loss put the Red Devils at 3-11 for the season overall, 2-10 in conference play.

This Monday's game with Boyne City is a home game, the following Monday's game is at Boyne City.

Loggers gearing up for last three games

BOYNE FALLS - The varsity girls basketball team fell to Wolverine 49-43 last Tuesday to drop to 3-12 on the season. The junior varsity team fared better, winning 31-16.

Theresa Stark led the Logger varsity in scoring with 18 points. Kathy Bauman added nine and Carol Carson scored eight.

Logger JV coach Joel Donaldson said the loss was one of the varsity squad's better offensive showings. "They showed a lot of offensive punch," Donaldson said.

Almost everyone on the junior varsity team scored in Tuesday's win at Wolverine. Sandy Payton had nine points to lead the team. Pat Frankowiak and Melody Wilson each had seven points and Sharon Frankowiak added six.

"Maureen Harmon took command of the offense," Donaldson said, citing her outstanding passing as a key to the win.

Scoring in the junior varsity game was unusual. Wolverine scored ten points in the first half and held Boyne Falls scoreless. The Loggers turned the tables the rest of the game outscoring Wolverine 31-6 the last three quarters.

"Mary Foster did a good job of leading the defense," Donaldson said.

Both the varsity and junior varsity will close the season with contests at Alba Tuesday.
