Local officials agree

Cutting CETA would hurt

BY KATHY JOHNSON

Local government officials in Charlevoix County say that proposed cuts in federal CETA funding could significantly affect the services they provide to area residents.

Most local officials interviewed think CETA programs are helpful and worthwhile, although it is often difficult to meet CETA requirements for hiring the people they would like to hire.

Under the new more conservative Congress and Reagan administration in Washington, it appears that CETA Title VI (Counter-cyclical Public Service Employment) will be done away with and that Title IID (Public Service Employment) will be somewhat pared down in size.

Since 1973, when CETA Comprehensive Employment and Training Act was started the area has been the recipient of federal funding through this act in the form of direct employees for public service organizations, on-the-job training.

This report deals most specifically with Title IID and Title VI with occasional mentions of other programs where pertinent.

Alton M. Shipstead, director of Northwest Michigan Manpower Consortium, which administers CETA in the 10 county area, including Charlevoix County, explained that Title VI would be ending by Oct. 1, 1981 and that Title IID would be greatly reduced. Title VII, which is only a year old, "will probably become the big one," Shipstead said.

Title VII is the private industry portion of CETA and Shipstead said he felt that the ending of the public service programs was as it should be—that private industry should be playing a larger part in the program. When private industry trains people, it trains for jobs they need filled and trainees can more readily move into the job market, he said.

Shipstead went on to say, "I'm going to have to lay off 500 people in the 10 county region out of the public service employment programs in the next 11 months." Talking to Shipstead about 10 days after the initial interview he indicated that the number had dropped, Boyer City Manager Tim Clifton started out as a CETA employee.

CETA work crews help

A way to beat high labor costs

BY TRISH WRIGHT

Non-profit organizations in the Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmet Counties are beating high labor costs as a result of contracting laborers from the CETA work service crews.

According to Art Seger, CETA work crew service supervisor of the three county area, the federally funded work may be contracted if the nature of the work neither profits an individual nor violates union contracts.

The intention of the 18-month work crew program is to make eligible unemployment recipients ready for unsubsidized employment. Approximately 60 crew leaders and workers who are economically disadvantaged and have been unemployed 15 out of the 20 weeks prior to their application for unemployment are now part of the work crews that the Boyne Falls CETA office administers.

"It is the responsibility of CETA supervisors to get people who are involved in the work crews prepared for work outside of the program. We teach, train and aid them in securing employ-because some people had already quit their CETA jobs.

He explained that if he didn't cut the CETA rolls in public service in this gradual manner, then he would have to shut down the entire program by March for lack of funding.

"They've gained some things... skills, confidence... they've accomplished something."

Currently there are some 1,044 persons employed in Titles II and VI in the region. By Oct. 1 all of those employed under Title VI will be gone and there should only be about 242 people left in Title II.

Shipstead said he viewed the prospects of the budget cuts proposed by Washington as positive actions. Saying that he had too much money this last year, Shipstead said he felt the cuts would make the program more manageable and would return it to its original intent. "The cutback will get us back to training," Shipstead said.

Helen Phillips, county coordinator in Charlevoix for Titles IID and VI, indicated that she felt the programs had been useful to the community. But, she added, "The intent of a lot of these government programs is good, but they have been abused so badly."

Asked how realistic she felt the training programs had been in actually training people for jobs, she said she felt that anyone on a CETA program had benefited. "They've gained some things...skills, confidence...they've accomplished something," Phillips said.

LOCAL VIEWS

Local officials all seemed to feel that CETA had benefited the area in many ways and most don't want to see the program cut back. Several did voice the opinion that there is always too much bureaucracy, so the cuts could be good, but they were concerned where these dollars saved by the government were going to go once they were "saved from CETA."

Several officials, none of whom wanted to be quoted, said that while CETA had done a great deal, there were times that because of the rules and regulations attached to the funding they were unable to hire the more qualified person for a job.

Sometimes that individual, while unemployed and needing a job, can not meet all the CETA requirements.

One of the more personal comments regarding the CETA programs came from the city manager of Boyne City, Tim Clifton. "I'm totally in favor of CETA and I think it is a mistake (to cut the programs). There's always been a federal manpower program and it's benefited quite a few people," he said.

Clifton went on to explain that his first job in city government was through CETA. He was hired through a CETA program by the city of Kalamazoo and then through the city was able to get his graduate school tuition reimbursed.

"Because of that, I'm here," Clifton said. "I know of a lot of cases like that."

Kate Schafer, executive director of the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce, said that without CETA "this year we wouldn't have accomplished as much. We were able to staff the chamber office six full days a week." In past years, the chamber could afford to keep its office open five mornings a week.

Schafer indicated that the current secretary at the chamber, Joy Rouleau, was a CETA employee. Schafer said that she was very hard working and capable. "I hope our chamber can expand to keep the secretary we have."

A CETA work crew also provided free labor for extensive building repairs to the chamber office this year.

At the Boyne City school office, Superintendent Rich Kelly said that Shelly Cobe, a Title IID employee, "is a tremendous help" as assistant community education director. Kelly said that they had benefited from CETA but that the problem this year was that because of the budget cutbacks and the cutting back of hours of some of the regular employees, "We weren't able to rehire teacher aides under CETA."

"CETA work was of great benefit to the township."

CETA rules prohibit the replacing of regular employees with CETA employees and because teachers' hours were cut back, CETA viewed the hiring of CETA teacher aides as a replacement.

In Walloon Lake Kay Bills, Melrose Township trustee, said she felt that CETA had been a great help in repairing an old fence, staining the township park bath house, and moving stones back along the shoreline at the park beach.

"CETA work was of great benefit to the township," Bills said. "We only paid for supplies. We couldn't have gotten it done as quickly," she went on to say.

Fern Morris, clerk-treasurer for the city of East Jordan, said, "We've had good luck with CETA." She went on to explain that three of the regular street crew members started under CETA and when their time was up, were kept on by the city.

Morris said the police department has a young lady working in the office. "She is doing a great job. If funds are available, we'll continue (her job)," Morris said.

In her own office, Morris explained that she had trained three different women, including one who is currently working. She went on to explain that when the first one completed her time on the job she was able to move her into building trades and he works well with people."

Pemberton is currently in charge of the remodeling work being done for the Crooked Tree Arts Council in Petoskey. Crew workers are rewiring, refurbishing and painting the Methodist Church in downtown Petoskey that has recently been purchased by Crooked Tree for use as its headquarters and a center for the arts.

Louise Herlocher, Crooked Tree Arts Council administrator, said, "The work crew is doing things that we didn't have the money to do. I think electricians are making $12 to $16 an hour and plumbers are asking about the same or more, so our savings is substantial."

Herlocher continued, "We had heard about the work service program before we even decided to bid out any work. We had requested four or five CETA workers for custodial and secretarial work but there is a freeze on that request now, since CETA is not hiring any more people. However, we are delighted to have the work crew. The

Then the city hired a second CETA person for the clerk-treasurer's office. When she was trained, she was able to move into the first position because that woman had been able to find a better position. Now the office has its third CETA employee and Morris is very positive about her.

In Charlevoix, City Manager James Brinker said, "The reduction will definitely hurt Charlevoix. Some things we want to get done, we can't."

Brinker went on to say that CETA had already done a lot for the city. "Youth employment we use quite a lot and it's been real good." He went on to explain that CETA work crews had also done a lot for Charlevoix.

In November a CETA work crew installed three sets of rustic steps to the beach in Charlevoix to help channel pedestrian traffic.

"We've had good luck with CETA."

Just one of the over 2,000 CETA employees in our 10 county region, Joy Rouleau helps keep the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce staffed six days a week.

State aid may help ease EJ school woes

EAST JORDAN - A favorable state aid formula may help ease the affects of a fourth millage defeat. School Supt. Mel Rullman reported to the school board Tuesday night.

Nevertheless, the board decided not to fund any winter or spring sports or extra-curricular activities. Booster organizations have promised to raise money to save most of these activities, however.

A ballot proposal for 2.8 mills was defeated 633-465 by voters on Monday, forcing the extra-curricular cuts. The cuts will save the district about $9,900.

Further cuts of up to seven teaching positions, amounting to $64,000, may be necessary at the beginning of the second semester in early February, Rullman said.

The superintendent said the state aid formula which is now near approval in the legislature "fortunately will be a little bit higher than we were anticipating earlier."

"Hopefully, the cuts won't have to be as severe, but it is still tentative," he said of the state aid formula. Rullman said the final state aid formula should be approved before Christmas, which would finally allow the district to have a solid figure on which to base its budget for the budget year which is already nearly half over.

Gary Cihak, a representative of the sports boosters, told the school board his group would be meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday in the high school cafeteria to discuss fundraising efforts needed to finance school sports this winter and spring.

He said that a number of people had already volunteered their services as for such things as coaches, umpiring and driving. Even so, he estimated the group would need to come up with at least $3,000.

In other action Tuesday, the school board approved contracts for secretaries, cooks, teacher aides, custodians and bus drivers. All contracts provide for seven percent salary increases.

Front St. up front for last time?

BOYNE CITY - A full auditorium Tuesday night heard the city commission approve a proposal for relocating a section of Front Street, debated over for the last three years.

Old Front Street will remain open until the new curve of the street is complete and dedicated to the city.

One last objection was heard as Marvin Loding, representing some of the city residents, registered a complaint about what he considered to be the undue haste with which the planning commission's recommendations were approved by the city.

He also asked The Harborage condominium developers to modify the curve to allow 300 more feet of shoreline travel on the road.

With the vote pending on what amounts to the gift of a new and improved road section to the city, Loding stressed he never was opposed to the condominium proposal itself.

Action was tabled on the closing of the alley running east of Lakewood Savings and Loan.

Although the planning commission had recommended closure, complaints, particularly from neighboring Northwestern State Bank, pressed the city to give consideration to asking Lakewood to make a land trade.

The proposal was for them to accept the present alley in exchange for the 16.5 feet they own on the other side of the alley.

Water rates will definitely rise with the commissioners' vote for a new rate package. The increase will make the water department self-supporting—as the law requires.

While individual water bills will increase, none will compare to The Harborage's $50,000 initial fee to participate in the city's water system.

CETA workers renovated the Chamber of Commerce building in September.

Boyer City cagers win easily

BOYNE CITY - The Ramblers basketball team evened its record at 1-1 Tuesday night with an easy win over Roger City.

Boyer City trounced Rogers City 72-26, thanks to a 39-9 advantage in the second half.

Senior Mike Toffolo came off the bench to score 16 points, 12 in the third quarter, to lead the Rambler scoring.

Toffolo's hot hand helped Boyne outscore the Hurons 23-2 in that period.

Toffolo's performance was "a very pleasant surprise," Coach Bob Taylor said, noting that the 6-2 forward hardly played last year.

"He worked hard all summer," said junior varsity coach John McGeorge. "Every time I went by his house, he was playing basketball in his yard."

Other leading scorers for Boyne were Brian Vroman with 13 points, Todd Rickard with 9, Mark Harris 8, and Larry Jarema and Shawn Aimesbury, both with 6.

Boyer's junior varsity had a cold fourth quarter and lost the preliminary game, 52-48. The JV's were outscored 17-8 in the final period. Brad Musser led the scoring with 19 points.

Parks get help from CETA crews major renovation of the building will hopefully be finished in May and we are very pleased with the work that the crew has done so far."

Charlevoix County's work crew leader, Steve Van Allsburg, is directing his crew's soil conservation efforts at Charlevoix's Lake Michigan Park. The Soil Conservation Service has described this water frontage as a critical treatment area and has supplied the blueprints for the soil preservation.

"We're getting work done that wouldn't be accomplished otherwise," said Seger. The city of Boyne City couldn't afford to hire out the seeding and repairing of washes on the face of Avalanche Mountain. And the Chamber of Commerce in Boyne City was able to repair their building because of our work crew program," added Seger.

According to Tim Clifton, city manager, the repair work that the CETA crew completed on Avalanche would not have been justifiable if city crews were to be taken off their regular maintenance jobs and put to work at Avalanche. "We estimated that it would take about three weeks of work to finish the job and when we computed what that would cost the city, we realized that the city couldn't afford it," said Clifton.

Work crews vary their work according to the community or the needs of individual groups. The Norwood Township Hall has been painted and had its floors re-sanded.

Charlevoix's city hall was painted and cleaned by CETA workers. And the construction of a tennis court gazebo in Charlevoix and a pole building at Nowland Lake Park, near Ironton, was completed by the county CETA work service crew.

Modern invention: 'counselor-in-the-classroom'

Guidance counselors are a sort of modern invention. A good proportion of us (still around) went through school without benefit of one of these semi-mysterious beings.

But then, we went through school before the effects of TV and the atom bomb and maybe the new morality jolted our placid conformity.

All this was in the back of my mind as I thought about looking into the counselor-in-the-classroom idea James Crowell has developed in Boyne Falls.

I recalled also when teaching morality in school (today we call it "values") was tossed out. Can't really do it, they said, although then as now, they continued to place a great deal of reliance on the character of the teacher.

Next came Watergate, and once again we asked each other about morality in government and how about teaching ethics at law school? And what are we doing about it in public schools?

So Crowell began his 20-minute visits to classrooms in elementary school.

"I got the idea from (Principal) Carl Moser," Crowell says. He saw something similar being done at another school.

The purpose, as Crowell sees it, is to begin with the students on thinking about values and about self-worth.

What do they talk about? They answer questions like the one in the title of this article. They discuss cheating, not wanting your own way all the time, "not telling the truth."

Crowell phrased that last one carefully, because, he says, children often do not lie on purpose. They get mixed up with what they want to believe, or with repeating others incorrectly. So they do need help with the process of being truthful—and also with plain not lying!

Crowell says he and the children recently have been talking about the importance of school.

Each day he takes the topic to a different class, going from kindergarten through sixth grade. By the time he has come back to kindergarten, maybe 10 weeks later, he finds the children still remember what they talked about.

Of course, he says, the teachers reinforce the discussion at appropriate occasions saying things like, "Isn't that what you and Mr. Crowell were talking about?"

But the best reinforcement is the practice of values in the home. "Teachers are important, but no one replaces Mom and Dad from the standpoint of learning values," Crowell affirms. "The things that stick come from the home."

Still, Crowell's belief in making a point of these values, which may be home grown, must make them more a part of life when seen also from a school perspective.

This is the second year Crowell has been making his morning rounds. With his smiling voice he must get a good welcome. He says the children's attitudes have changed. For one thing, teachers report there is less cheating.

And the elementary school children now feel more at ease about going to Crowell if they have school problems. The seven-through-12 students already see him for testing, schedules, and so on, so these talks have widened his acquaintance with the younger students as well as made some ideas a little more concrete.

In order to become certified, guidance counselors have to take numerous courses in psychology. I asked Crowell how much he relied on psychology in handling these morning discussions.

He said he found some good ideas in the various schools of psychology, but that he also drew from the moral lessons in the Bible. Careful of the separation of church and state, he said, "I try to base my life on the Bible—although I don't go shooting people down in the classroom with Scripture!"

Guidance counseling may be a modern invention, but certainly in this case at least, it comes from 'way back!

Career planning at BCHS next week

During the week of Dec. 15 juniors and seniors at Boyne City High School will have an opportunity to participate in the ACT Career Planning Program.

This program is designed to help young adults make better decisions about their educational and career plans. Glenn Irwin, counselor at Boyne City High School, points out that national studies find 11th grade students rank "help with career planning" as their most important need.

Participating students complete the Career Planning Program questionnaire which measures the students' career-related interests, experiences, abilities, and plans. The information is developed into a report for each student. The reports are then reviewed with students in group and individual counseling sessions.

Mr. Irwin says the Career Planning Program is more than an assessment experience, but also a first step in each student's career journey.

Rick Casper, principal of the high school, says, "The aim of the school's guidance program is to assist all of these students, regardless of their objectives, with the process of learning about and exploring career opportunities."

DO WIDOWERS NEED HELP?

A respected minister we know quotes Scripture appropriately to make his point. Borrowing a page from his text, the following passage of Genesis comes to mind:

"It is not good that a man should be alone...."

So, too, after a man loses his life's mate, his dearly-loved companion, he should not be left alone. No, we do not mean that he should hastily re-marry. We mean that his friends should not forsake him because his status has changed; because he is now a widower.

In our couple-oriented society, the widower is disadvantaged by his singularity. Make him welcome as before. Share your hospitality with him as you did before. Go out of your way a little and seek his company, his conversation. Help make his grieving easier by sharing with him your presence and caring, as we know you do.

This "reaching out" by you will be important to him immediately after the funeral and for many months to come.

Drastic CETA cuts would hurt badly here

CETA, the federal public employment program, has been somewhat controversial since it began in 1973. Anytime there are large amounts of government dollars available, the allocation of those dollars can be a source of controversy.

Naturally, the decisions about where the money will go and how much will go to which states will be made by politicians who are subject to loyalties.

And the administration of large amounts of government dollars is often the source of problems. If programs aren't efficiently managed, a relatively small amount of the dollars will filter down through the bureaucracy to the unemployed people for whom the programs are intended.

But the idea behind CETA is a sound one. If the government is going to pay benefits to unemployed people, it makes sense to at least have those unemployed people perform a public service in exchange for the money they receive.

Even better, but much more difficult to actually achieve, is the idea of using a public employment program to train people. (The "T" in CETA stands for "training.") If unemployed people learn new job skills while the government is paying them, then they stand a better chance of getting a job (and keeping it) after their CETA funding runs out.

But CETA programs are now being eyed as something which would be easy to cut by the new Congress and President who will take office in January. They are a more conservative group than their predecessors, and they were elected by voters who were sending a definite "cut the fat" message to Washington.

Editorial

The fate of CETA programs may have already been sealed by the electorate, but we wonder if the electorate really had this type of cost-cutting in mind.

As our front page stories explain, most local government officials feel the elimination of CETA programs would have an adverse impact on local services.

Many parks, a Chamber of Commerce building, and an art center in our area have been greatly improved by CETA work crews. Firewood is being provided for low income families. Cities and schools hire secretaries, recreation directors, senior citizen directors, bus drivers, and numerous other workers.

Perhaps these positions are needed as badly in some other areas of the country, but Michigan's unemployment is the highest in the nation. It is now nearly 13 percent—the highest in 20 years. And unemployment in Charlevoix County usually runs higher than the state figure.

With jobless rates like these, a considerable amount of money will be paid in unemployment benefits anyway. It seems sensible to continue to offer unemployed people jobs in exchange for their benefit checks.

The popular thinking in Washington is that private sector employment can be increased by providing tax and development incentives for private industry. This will cause a "trickled-down" effect, eventually creating more private jobs, reducing the need for CETA-type jobs which are funded by tax money.

This is an attractive proposition, but how well it will work—and how quickly—is still a matter of speculation. In any event, there is no doubt that the jobs that trickle down to rural areas like Charlevoix County, where unemployment is extremely high, will be slower in coming and fewer in number.

For this reason, if there are cuts to be made, we think it would be wise to make them more gradually in economically depressed areas such as our own.

Letter to the editor

Complex school problems must be addressed in EJ

Editor, Whatever the outcome of the requested millage increase, there are other problems plaguing the East Jordan school district that must be examined and dealt with.

Community support has eroded, employee morale has plummeted to uncharted depths, and budget cuts have reduced educational programs to shambles.

The decline of the East Jordan school system didn't "just happen." Rather, it has been the direct result of human actions and reactions to changing events.

While poor economic conditions have hurt everyone, this alone does not explain the severity of the system's financial plight. This administration has consistently failed to show the planning and foresight that competent financial policy requires. Instead, there has been only confusion about budget amounts and uncertainty about the methods of dealing with rising operational costs.

As inept as this administration has proven itself in handling financial matters, it has fared even worse in its management function of dealing with school employees and with the public.

People who believe in the value of education have been frustrated and infuriated by the uncooperative attitude displayed by this administration.

People should not be made to feel that their questions are stupid or that their opinions are unimportant and unworthy of consideration—this type of insulting treatment has only created anger and resentment, and has done little to win support for the schools.

The abominable handling of the teacher contract negotiations has resulted in an almost total waste of time, effort and money, and has created bitter feelings that may never be entirely forgotten.

A school system differs significantly from a commercial business, and cannot be run the same way. Schools deal with people, not machine parts, and what may look good on paper does not always reflect the realities of human behavior.

A case in point: The decision to hold classes on the Friday after Thanksgiving. Days lost due to the strike must be made up, but to interrupt a traditional holiday weekend for one day of school shows a total disregard for the feelings of people who may have made other plans for their families.

Yet the board, for whatever motives and despite contradictory advice, chose to go ahead with a Friday schedule. The result was another waste of time, effort, and money—too few students attended for the day to count for state aid.

While these criticisms are not intended to direct malice toward individual members of the board or the superintendent's office—one can only sympathize with their plight—the regrettable failure to provide a quality educational system for East Jordan requires a change of personnel as quickly as possible.

If the people of the community are not satisfied with the way the school system is being run, they have not only the right but the responsibility to seek the necessary changes.

There must be new lines of communication established between participating groups. Secrecy and behind-closed-door policies have no place in an open school system.

The counter-productive "war" with the teachers has to end. A contract—containing binding arbitration and a salary scale both the teachers and the community can live with—must be negotiated as quickly as possible.

The teachers in turn must be willing to make the necessary concessions to bury the hatchet, forget the wrongs of the past and get on with the difficult task of educating children.

The formula for saving our schools should be: A new administration + participation + communication + cooperation + dedication = quality education.

The problems of the East Jordan schools are complex and many, but with the proper attitude and effort they can be overcome.

The recent formation of citizen advisory committees, like the KIDS group, and an active PTA is a most encouraging sign.

These are the people to whom we should look for the qualities of leadership and initiative that are so desperately needed on the board of education—individuals who have donated their time and efforts, and shown the interest and the will to get things done.

Physical resources may be limited, but there is no shortage of human potential. There are people in this community—parents, teachers, principals, and citizens who care—with the belief in the value of education, the talent, and the willingness to put forth the necessary effort to save our school system.

If there are enough of them, it can and will be done. Our schools deserve no less than our best.

The Boyne City High School gymnasium was filled to overflowing on Saturday when the Hobby-Craft show hosted 57 vendors with a wide variety of Christmas items, ornaments, and gift ideas for sale. While the Hobby-Craft show may have been the largest bazaar of the year, there are still other bazaars and events scheduled if you missed this one.

In the mood for holiday fun

Last weekend started out real busy. It was Dec. 6 and I had yet to purchase the first Christmas gift, and several of mine had to get to Texas. Prospects didn't look too good.

First I spent an hour and a half at the newspaper office finishing up some things that hadn't gotten completed the night before and then I had breakfast at The Depot with Kate Schafer.

Kate told me about the great turnout the night before at the lighting of the tree in Boyne City and all the many children that came out to see Santa. It put me a little more in the holiday mood to hear about the Christmas carols and the good time that everyone had.

From there I went up to the high school where the Hobby-Craft show was in full swing. Judy Johnson had one of those happy harassed looks and she explained that there were 57 different vendors out for the show and there must have been 10 times that many people in the gym.

The place was packed. Not just with people and vendors, but with a really wide selection of Christmas decorations and gift ideas. Centerpieces, dolls, afghans, wood carvings, pottery, needlepoint, ceramics, straw weavings, and a hundred other really clever items.

After spending my fair share there, I left humming, "It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas," and feeling not quite so left behind. As lunch was approaching and I was still in the need of bargains, from there I went to the United Methodist Church Bazaar. Another very nice turnout. I made the rounds of the items for sale, made my purchases, bought five tickets for a quilt drawing and sat down to rest my feet and enjoy lunch. Pork chop, squash, baked potato and cole slaw. Really good. And everyone was having a good time.

While there, one lady offered to measure my waist for a penny an inch donation to some missionary work. I figured donating a couple dollars was preferable to having anyone know how big my waist was. If she had stood by the dining tables and offered to measure after I ate, she could have raised a whole lot more.

From the church bazaar I went to Jerry Burke's tree farm to get a Christmas tree. Then back to Boyne City to Schafer's to purchase a few more Christmas items and finally about 5 p.m., home to fall in a heap.

Then, just when I couldn't go a step further, the nicest thing happened. My neighbor came over with a lovely handmade cross-stitched quilt... beautiful, from the church bazaar. My ticket was the lucky one: The nicest ending to a day already designed to get me into that holiday feeling.

Now if you're wondering about my plans for this weekend and how you might be able to participate in this holiday hoedown, then here are a few suggestions of some places you might go:

The Charlevoix County Senior Citizens will hold a bazaar on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the East Jordan Senior Center. There'll be handmade crafts and gifts...and you can look for me there. Where there's a bazaar, there's a bargain.

Over at the Alpine Mall in Gaylord, the Women's Resource Center will be hosting a Christmas ornament and bake sale this Friday and Saturday. Also on Saturday, the Boyne City Christ Lutheran Church will have Cookie Land, another great idea. Cookie Land will be open from 10:30 until noon. If you're too tired to bake or just want to add a little variety to your own favorites, the Cookie Land should help.

Take some smelly cheese

A little something about Christmas.

With everyone saying that Christmas is just around the corner, I am reminded that when I was a boy I wanted what I never got and always got what I never wanted. I learned long ago that it is not true that he who wants gets—even though you start in November and work at behaving yourself right up until Christmas.

I went in to buy some Christmas cards off the rack. People kept bumping into me, reaching over my shoulder and wondering if Mother would like this one or that one. I swear that a man in the crowd felt in my coat for a cigarette. When I'd had enough of it, I took some limburger cheese out of my pocket and began eating it. This gave me the area to myself.

A tip of the Christmas hat to Jerry Fuller, the 1980 East Jordan Red Devil right guard who won a position on Michigan's "All State" Class C football team.

My father used to tell this back when Boyne City was so small a man could mount a horse on Water Street and be out of sight in five minutes.

Marshall Sayles

Look, my father had said to his religious friend on the street, do you believe faith can move mountains?

I certainly do.

Your faith must be very strong. Do you usually get what you pray for?

When I pray hard enough and long enough the Lord always comes to my rescue.

Do you have a $10 bill on you?

Yes, I've got one right here.

Give it to me. Thanks. Now, I'll keep this bill while you pray for another.

When we look at our tax bills, our water bills, our electric bills, our gas bills, the price of two-day-old bread and the skyrocketing cost of breathing, one feels that many of our residents did well to die early.

Upon occasion I fuss around with this column on Sunday, which causes some people to swell up so that their dignity hurts them under the arms. But I do it anyway, fingering the typewriter very softly so as not to break in upon the devotional spirit of the day.

If your head has not been in the sand you have noticed how women are coming to the fore—even being allowed to pick and choose and have their own bank account.

They are nailing down their rightful position in the scream of things. And many are chortling over the fact that the Bible is being edited so that it will read right.

I agree with the changes and am wondering if this year's Santa Claus will be a woman. If so, we may have to re-write the "Night before Christmas."

Let's see now...It was the night before Christmas when all through the house, nothing was stirring, not even a blouse. The chest rose high with a Ho, Ho, Ho... (Dear Reader: If you think I have the guts to keep this up, you're crazy.)

So who is John Galt and where is he?

John Galt, a capitalist personified, is the mysterious stranger that dominates Ayn Rand's book, "Atlas Shrugged." Ever since I made the herculean effort to read this text, I have been haunted by the phrase, "Who is John Galt?"

Most of the people to whom I posed this question either had not read the book or, alas, shrugged.

I tucked the musings of his whereabouts back into the corner of my mind where I keep intriguing ideologies. They are kept there until such time as I can either dismiss them because of impracticality or determine that they are truly over my head.

The succeeding Ayn Rand books that I read convinced me for a time that objectivism, the philosophy that stresses the reality of all that is known, was one with which I could live. However, as soon as I started to use a little grey matter, I realized that life is not all black and white.

Industrialists are not all the tall, thin and square jawed clones of Rand's characters. And they do not all exemplify the virtues of selfishness. The unemployed should not be characterized as moochers. And compromise and change can be as positive as society permits.

For example, Boyne City has a corporation which has as its primary goal, luring industry to the city and aiding existing businesses that would like to expand. The obvious result would be a more viable and stable economic condition for the area.

This non-profit group, called the Boyne City Economic Development Corporation, will issue tax free bonds for the financing that is necessary to bring industry and more jobs to town. There may well be an EDC for Charlevoix County as well. The incorporators are now in the initial stages of an EDC formation.

Those people involved with the economic development corporations are not self-serving. They have no more to gain by increased industrial activity than does anyone else in the county. And they are not insensitive to the growth hazards that can threaten natural beauty areas like northern Michigan.

Most of the EDC people with whom I have recently conversed think that one reason EDC applicants may want to relocate in Charlevoix County will be because of this area's recreation and charm. They add that the EDC will be selective and will not encourage spollers.

As for the unemployed, well, Rand loses again. It is unfair to lump them all together as she has done. The work service crews, under the auspices of the CETA program, are getting some work done for public agencies that cannot afford high labor costs.

A non-profit organization, the Crooked Tree Arts Council, qualified to have CETA helpers transform a church into a cultural center. I think the council got a little more than they even expected. The inventiveness and diligence of the crew leader and workers at the project is evident by the professional manner in which they work.

So, who is John Galt and where is he? I think he has improved his image and now lives and works among us.

Hungry for Hoosier cooking

Many times we connect certain foods with happy occasions, and that reminds me of corn meal mush. Once in awhile I get really hungry for it.

Mother always cooked a big Sunday dinner at noon after church, so we just had a light supper in the evening. In the summer time it was likely to be just bread and milk with some left-overs from dinner but during the winter months she sometimes made corn meal mush.

She poured the hot mush, and I mean hot, into our plates to cool. We added milk and brown sugar, delicious.

Through the years I had almost forgotten about corn meal mush until we moved to Indiana in the fifties. There, people were serving fried mush for many occasions.

The minister of our downtown Methodist Church in Indianapolis invited anyone who wished to have Thanksgiving dinner with his family at the parsonage. They were going to serve fried mush and give the price of a big turkey dinner to the needy.

One day we were traveling on U.S. 40 about halfway between Richmond and Indianapolis and stopped at a restaurant for dinner. The only item on their menu was fried mush and sausage. We loved it!

Cooking

Yesterday & Today

with Bea Smith

I loved the Indiana cooks. They made many things just a little different than I had been used to. They always put macaroni in chili and gave their children toast with white milk gravy for breakfast.

Everything tasted so good, and of course the most delicious, fresh, home-grown tomatoes were abundant all summer along with green corn.

CORN MEAL MUSH

To 3 1/2 cups of boiling water in a large heavy saucepan, add 1 teaspoon salt and 1 cup of corn meal mixed with 1 cup of cold water, then return to a boil stirring constantly. Cover and cook over very low heat for half an hour, stirring occasionally.

If you want fried mush, pour into a buttered loaf pan to set overnight or in the refrigerator several hours. Then slice and dip lightly in flour and fry in a very little bacon grease, butter or corn oil. Serve with syrup—maple syrup if you have it.

Good recipes for corn bread are always on the boxes of corn meal but here is a recipe for southern spoon bread that is really something else.

SPOON BREAD

1 quart milk
1 cup yellow corn meal
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 eggs

In double boiler or at low heat, heat the milk. Stir in corn meal, salt and cook, stirring until a thick mush.

Start oven at 400 degrees, remove from heat and add butter. In bowl beat eggs until well blended. Slowly stir into mush. Pour into well greased 1 1/2 quart casserole. Bake uncovered 50 to 55 minutes.

Serve at once with lots of butter as the bread for the meal.

League foes are next

Good signs from Red Devils

EAST JORDAN - Coach Bill Chase saw what he hopes are some good signs in his team's season opening victory last Friday. The Red Devils played good defense and showed a lot of hustle.

"The kids really played ball," Chase said. "We only shot 33 percent, but we hustled enough to make up for it."

"When we missed the shot, we got the rebound and put it in. Hustle is what won it for us."

Onaway was the victim by a 68-56 margin in a non-conference game. This Friday and next Tuesday, the Devils jump into Ski Valley League action against a pair of clubs which both won their opening games by one point last Friday.

East Jordan hosts Bellaire at home on Friday night. The Eagles edged Ellsworth 50-49 on a last second shot. Three Bellaire players scored in double figures—Eric Stillwell, Ron Olm and George Mason.

Next Tuesday, the Devils take to the road for the first time to face Pellston. The Hornets nipped Alanson, 56-55, as Ricky Swiss scored 15 points and had 14 rebounds.

Both opponents will no doubt be watching East Jordan's Del Ingalls quite closely. The 6-1 senior center poured in 32 points for the Devils against Onaway. He also led the team with 13 rebounds.

"Del was playing against a 6-3 center, and he did a really good job," Chase said. "He got most of his points inside."

Hitting from the outside was Mike Spence, a 6-0 senior forward who popped in 17 points. Guard Randy Morris added eight points and played an excellent defensive game, Chase said. Forward Todd Root also did a good job on defense.

Besides his team's hustle, Chase said he was glad to see the Devils keep their cool early in the second half when Onaway came back from five points behind to take a one point lead.

"They kept their poise and got the lead right back again," Chase said.

East Jordan's junior varsity lost to Onaway in the preliminary game, 55-41.

Tough road games await Ramblers

BOYNE CITY - The Ramblers will journey away from the friendly confines of their homecourt for their next two games against perennially tough Petoskey and St. Ignace.

It could be baptism by fire for first year coach Bob Taylor, who saw his troops lose a hard-fought 63-62 contest in their season opener at Grayling last Friday.

Taylor wishes he could have played an easy non-conference game to start the season and work out those first game jitters. But Grayling was a tough team, expected to be among the conference leaders.

"If they're a contender, we're not going to be bad," Taylor said, trying to see some good in the defeat.

"Before the game, I said we had a lot of ground to make up because all the other teams in the conference played together all summer. Well, I think we've closed the gap. We're tough."

"If you look at the statistics, we should have won the game," Taylor said. "We outrebounded them, we took more shots, we had fewer turnovers, but we shot really poor both from the field and from the line."

The most encouraging thing Taylor saw was the Ramblers' ability to come back.

"We were down by 11 points in the fourth quarter, but the guys never quit. Grayling got tired, but we didn't," Taylor said.

A couple of bad breaks in the closing moments didn't help the comeback effort, though. With nine seconds left in the game, Boyne trailed by one point and worked the ball to Brian Vroman in the corner for a final shot. Vroman, a standout junior transfer student, already had scored 27 points. But a Grayling player stripped the ball from Vroman.

Boyne still didn't give up, stealing the ball back. But John Tompkins had the ball stolen from him with five seconds left.

"I'm not complaining about the officiating," Taylor said, "but if the game had been on our court, one or both of those steals could have easily been called a foul. They could have gone either way."

Although Vroman scored 27 points, Taylor said the junior forward played an unselfish game. "He was almost too unselfish. We've got to get him to shoot more. I think he only took about 12 shots."

Other leading scorers for the Ramblers were John Tompkins and Jim Plachta with seven points, Shawn Aimesbury with six and Mike Toffolo with five.

A big plus for Boyne City in its upcoming road games will be the return of Larry Jarema, an all-conference player who missed the Grayling game with a sprained ankle.

Petoskey, Boyne's opponent on Friday night, opened its season with a 77-48 loss to state power River Rouge.

Top performers for the Northmen in that game were 6-1 Jim Wareck, who had 15 points, and 6-2 Mike Juday with 10.

Great Lakes squad wins BC men's league showdown

BOYNE CITY - Great Lakes Energy Systems took over sole possession of first place in the men's Independent Basketball League Sunday.

Great Lakes dealt Country Star Market its first loss, 84-80. The winners led 42-35 at halftime and stayed ahead by six to 10 points through most of the second half before Country Star closed the gap to two with 1:30 remaining.

Hal Price poured in 27 points to lead Great Lakes, and Kirk Kujawski added 14. Ken Gahn had 23 and Dave DeNise 22 for Country Star.

In other games, Schafer's and Boyne River Inn picked up their first victories of the season.

BRI edged Payton's Well Drilling 84-81, thanks to a balanced scoring attack. Kim Hocquard connected for 19 points and Rob Spencer, Keith Hausler and Kevin Griffin all had 13 points each. Leading Payton's were Terry Erber with 24 points and Tim Crego with 17.

Schafer's came back from a 42-41 halftime deficit to beat Boyne City Lanes/Northwestern State Bank, 93-86. Dean Hicks led the winners with 34 points, while Tim Hartwick added 13. For the losers, Jim Baumann had 25 points and Jeff Kruzel 21.

NEXT SUNDAY: Schafer's vs. BRI at 12:30 p.m.; Great Lakes vs. BC Lanes/Bank at 1:45; Payton's vs. Country Star at 3.

'Natural talent' from EJ wins girls' scoring title

EAST JORDAN - "She's a natural talent," says Coach Mike Bos of Coleen Thompson, who was named to the first team of the all-Ski Valley League squad last week.

Thompson, a 5-8 senior forward, was the leading scorer in the league this year, outscoring highly-touted Debbie Clare of Harbor Springs by two points in 14 conference games.

As Bos says, Coleen must be a "natural talent."

"I didn't practice that much at home," she says. "I always played with my older brothers Bob and David. They were practicing all the time, and they always kidded me about doing well without practicing that much."

She really just started playing basketball seriously in eighth grade. By tenth grade, it was becoming obvious that she was quite talented on the court.

Coleen was the leading scorer on East Jordan's junior varsity team that year and she was promoted to the varsity for the district tournament at the end of the season. In her only varsity game of the year, she was the leading scorer with 13 points in the tournament game.

This year as a senior she averaged 18 points and 15 rebounds a game.

"Coleen rebounds like a six-footer," says coach Bos. "She plays good defense, but offense is her strong point. Coleen was the girl we looked to if we needed two points. She has good moves and she goes to the basket extremely well."

Coleen Thompson

"We had several plays designed to get her close to the basket for an eight or 10 ft. shot," Bos said.

Thompson and teammate Yvonne Grant have been invited to a tryout at Central Michigan University on Jan. 25. Bos thinks both have a good chance to play basketball in college.

Grant was named to the all-conference honorable mention team, along with fellow East Jordan players Lyn Detlaff and Joelyn Ingalls.

Grant, a 5-11 senior, set a school record with 27 rebounds against Ellsworth this season, and Bos said she was probably the leading rebounder in the Ski Valley League this year.

David Williams, winner of the Boyne City Jaycees' buck contest, shows his prize winning deer. With nine points and a weight of 190 pounds, Williams' deer was the best in over 100 entries.

Buck contest winners named

Two local buck contests drew a total of over 162 entries with Bill Brooks of Boyne City winning $200 first place money in one contest and David Williams of Boyne Falls winning first place money of $100 in the other contest.

Brooks won the contest sponsored by the Boyne Country Party Store East and the Boyne Country Party Shop with a nine-point buck with a 17 1/2 inch spread. There were 62 entries in the contest.

Winning first place in the Boyne City Jaycees contest, Williams had a nine-point buck weighing 190 pounds. Second place in the Jaycee contest was won by Delwin Morris of East Jordan, and third by Jim Crawford of Boyne Falls. Over 100 people entered the Jaycee contest.

How N.O.W.* Brown Cow?

*(Negotiable Order of Withdrawal—Banker talk—actually a checking account that pays you interest)

$$ GRAZING IN THE GREEN GREEN CASH $$

'Tis true not every cow possesseth the requisite $300.00 for a Checking Account that actually pays interest. But for those that do...Lakewood S&L is the perfect pasture! NO BULL!! oops, sorry about that—but for $300.00 we'll even supply the bull. "We've plenty of that."

TRULY THE DAYS OF MILK & HONEY, FOR THOSE THAT HAVE GOT THE MONEY—$300 that is.

Seriously, you'll find many clever names for Interest-Checking Accounts, and lots of gimmicks. Like having a Savings Account along with the Interest-Checking Account, or using the average balance to determine charges to you.

But what is really the most important consideration in selecting a financial institution for your Interest-Checking Account? It is the minimum amount required to earn interest and avoid penalty fees.

Lakewood's $300.00 minimum balance is very low...possibly the lowest in Northern Michigan. We're extremely competitive, but we're also selective. If you don't have good credit, we simply don't want you. If you do have good credit, we have the best program in this area for you!

We can establish your account NOW or after Jan. 1, 1981. You do not have to fill in any coupons or see us today. Federal and state regulations prohibit these Interest-Checking Accounts from use until Jan. 1, 1981.

So, if you want to prearrange an account, we will be happy to see you NOW. If not, come in after the new year and we will fix you up, then. In either event, we have the best deal around.

Fit, grip and glide

A fun way to travel the snow

BY TRISH WRIGHT

The fluid movements of the cross-country skier suggest that this sport is one of relative ease and graceful glides.

However, even though these positions are enviable and imitative, don't be disappointed if you're not transformed into a svelte Scandinavian on skis overnight.

Exercise, equipment maintenance and proper techniques play very important roles in this Nordic style sport.

Julie Cordano, manager of Silent Sports North in Charlevoix, says that the camber, composition and width of a ski should be examined before a purchase is made.

A person's weight, height, skiing experience level and the type of terrain that will most often be skied are also determining factors for ski selection.

According to Cordano, the current buying trend is toward the newer fiberglass model as opposed to the more traditional wood ski because fiberglass offers better glide.

"However, there are some purists who wouldn't think of giving up their wood skis. Personally, I use both models," she adds.

There are several styles of both wooden and fiberglass cross-country skis. The backcountry or wilderness ski is for traveling in rugged terrain or untracked deep snow. This ski is wider for better flotation on the snow.

The tour racing ski is designed for the recreational skier who wants to participate in fun races.

A general touring ski is aimed for the person who will ski in parks, on golf courses, farmland or other skier's tracks.

Skiing on prepared tracks or groomed trails warrants the light touring ski. This ski allows for long trips to be accomplished with minimal energy expenditure.

The camber or flex of a ski is the bow-shaped center, which is designed to spread weight over the surface for maximum snow grip and glide. Softer flex skis are preferred for those who ski less forcibly on the snow.

To determine the size of the ski that will be right for you, raise one arm straight up in the air.

The pair of skis that come closest to hitting the wrist of your up raised arm will generally be the right size for you.

However, if you are particularly light you may want a shorter ski. A ski that is too long will be harder to control. And if a ski is too short you may not attain much speed.

Cross-country poles are longer than those used in downhill skiing. Raise one arm straight out from the body.

The pair of poles that fit comfortably under your arm will be right for you.

Once a particular ski is decided upon, the next step is to seal the bottom surface of the fiberglass ski with wax for moisture protection.

"If you are using a no-wax ski, then you should use wax or paraffin only on the portion of the ski where there is no pattern. Wax the glide areas, not the grip or patterned portion," Cordano explains.

"Set your iron on a silk or wool heat setting, turn it upside down and hold the wax against the iron so that as it melts it will dribble down on to the ski. With a scraper, remove the excess wax and then buff up the waxed surface with a piece of cork," says Cordano.

"This process should be done once or twice a season, depending on the amount of use."

"If a good ski has been chosen then pine tar should be used as a sealer that will impregnate the surface," says Cordano. Pine tar should be melted on the bottom of the ski with a small butane torch or an iron. This is a better method than painting on the pine tar. No more than 18 inches should be done at one time. Once the entire surface of the ski is covered and the tar no longer bubbles, wipe off the excess.

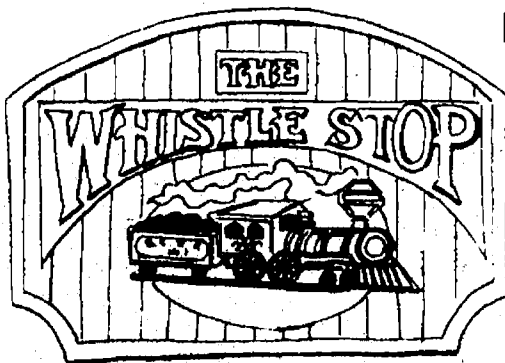

Now you have a wood ski that is conditioned and sealed against moisture and is ready for a hard wax application. The hard wax is applied in the same manner as used for a fiberglass ski. Coat the entire surface of the wood and fiberglass ski with hard wax unless you have a non-wax fiberglass ski.

To achieve the maximum amount of glide action over the snow a kicker or temperature wax is needed. This wax should be crayoned on the kicker area of the ski and then smoothed out with cork.

"Remember that you can put a warm wax over a colder wax when the temperature outside changes. But, never put a colder wax over a warm wax," she warns. Colder weather requires a harder wax. And though there are several brands of waxes, it is advantageous to stay with one particular brand.

REALISM IN PRICING

Be realistic when you put a price on your home. It can make the difference between a quick sale and weeks or even months of waiting. We have a saying in the real estate business, a slogan that real estate brokers and salespeople keep in mind all the time: "A home priced right is a home half sold."

Many factors enter into the pricing of a home. Besides the obvious physical attributes—size type, number of rooms, lot, etc., there's always the matter of location and that elusive, but all-important concept called "the market."

The market can either favor the buyer or the seller. A demand for homes caused by, say industrial expansion, can make it a seller's market. If mortgage money becomes scarce or if the number of homes for sale is excessive, the market may favor the buyer. The key to fair home pricing is to constantly monitor and analyze the market. We do this on a day-to-day basis to make sure the price on your home is the right one—the SELLING one!

Traversing the flatlands

The diagonal stride is the technique used to travel across the flat. It is similar to walking with the end result being glide. A common error is to lift the foot and place it forward as in walking. This decreases glide and puts the skier in too upright a position. Instead the foot should be swung forward like a pendulum. As it comes forward all the weight is transferred to that ski as it glides. Look for an extended leg to the rear and a straight leg coming forward. The well bent knee is the telltale sign that the foot is being lifted.

Achieve success on the uphill

To improve your uphill skiing, just put "your best foot forward." Concentrate on thrusting the gliding ski far ahead of you so that your foot is ahead of your knee as in the photo. This helps keep your kick under you, not in back of you where it may cause you to slip.

Thrusting your foot forward will help you achieve success on the uphill.

Curl your toes and dig them into the snow when using the diagonal stride to ski uphill. This exercise should help you to move most of your weight over your front ski where it is needed to set the ski and help your wax or non-wax surface grip the snow. If your weight remains equally balanced over both skis, you will slip backward down the hill.

It is a simple idea, but it works well. Curl your toes, dig them in and ski uphill with no trouble.

Cross-country is in Drive-in churches, banks, movies and restaurants all have one thing in common. You drive out. But, now there is a new "in" that you may not want to leave. It's called the ski-in.

This cross-country ski program has recently been developed by the staff of Silent Sports North, a cross country ski shop in Charlevoix, with the co-operation of Stewart and Susan Boal of Windmill Farms.

The ski-ins will be held at Windmill Farms, on the Boyne City Road, and will begin Thursday, Dec. 18. Ski-ins are scheduled for every Thursday through the winter and will include weekend skiing.

In addition to the 20 miles of marked and groom trails, graded for beginners to expert, there will be clinics, night skiing, warming huts and cross country ski lessons offered. There is a $2 trail fee, and rental equipment is available.

Trails will be open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursdays and Saturdays and will be lighted at night.

A cross country ski instructor will be present at the trails on Thursdays for lessons. Ski instructors Barbara Steele, Julie Cordano, Nanette Loennechen and Kjell Johanson will be offering group or private lessons.

Group lessons will be $7 per person and private lessons will be priced at $14 per hour. Anyone interested in lessons should call 547-6821 for further information.
