In the event of your death...

BY KATHY JOHNSON

We don't like to think about it, but death touches nearly everyone's life in the course of a year.

There were 111 deaths recorded in Charlevoix County last year. If you didn't know one of those 111 people, chances are that you knew someone in a neighboring county or a friend of a loved one from far away who has died recently.

Dealing with death can be difficult, depending on how well you knew the person who died. And a death in the immediate family can sometimes be traumatic—which is especially difficult when family members then must make decisions on arranging for a funeral.

What exactly must be done when a death occurs? Who takes care of what? How much does it cost when there is a death? Should there be a funeral? What is embalming? In fact, what is death?

The Press contacted Bob Winchester of Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix and Tom Vanderwall of Vanderwall Funeral Home in East Jordan to get their answers to these questions.

Death is dying. Not "passed away," "entered into rest," "taken by the angels," or "gone on a long trip."

Throughout life individuals are insulated from death by the sugar-coating of reality—someone has died. They no

"The funeral is for the living, not the dead. It gives the family a vehicle for the expression of grief. It helps in confronting the situation and sharing and expressing the family's loss"— longer will exist in our lives said Vanderwall.

In the last 50 years the insulation from death has been increased. Ninety percent of the deaths used to occur in the home. Today most occur in a hospital. On television we constantly see actors killed on one network and alive again on another and because of the mobility of our society many of us have family members die hundreds of miles away from us. All of these things insulate us from the reality of death.

Vanderwall explained that there are normal reactions that the family goes through during the loss of a loved one, and in the case of someone terminally ill, there are similar reactions they go through.

For the dying the reactions begin with denial—"Not me!" Next comes the anger and hostility—"Why me?" Then comes the bargaining—the attempts to make a deal with God. Depression is next, and Vanderwall explained that this is very important for the individual. Dying people should be allowed this depression since they are losing "all significant people in their lives, while we lose only one," Vanderwall said.

Last comes acceptance. The patient accepts his impending death. At this time the patient can be a great source of strength to the family. The patient may want to discuss his funeral, special gifts to family members, or explain certain business details. It is important for his comfort that this be allowed, said Vanderwall.

When a death is about to occur, the family will experience some of the same emotions and different ones. The family, and the medical staff, may avoid discussion of the impending death.

They may feel anger at the patient because he has presented them with a problem.

Frequently there is over-treatment or over-medication. The family wants to do something—so they may do too much. Then because the patient is withdrawn and depressed, the family may withdraw. Finally comes the confrontation.

The confrontation allows the dying member to become a part of the family again. "It's easier to accept death than to accept isolation, deception, fear and anxiety," said Vanderwall.

When the death occurs the family will usually go through the denial—"I don't believe it"—the hostility, then the guilt (all the things we should have or could have done), the depression, and finally the acceptance.

"Acceptance comes from confronting the death, not denying," said Vanderwall. "It is the ability to recall or remember the deceased without pain. The only way around grief is through it," Vanderwall said that sometimes it may take a year before acceptance is complete.

AFTER THE DEATH

Following the death the funeral director is notified by the family. He will come immediately to the hospital or home to pick up the deceased. When the funeral director returns to the funeral home the body is immediately embalmed unless other arrangements have been made.

Embalming is done for several reasons. An untreated dead body is subject to rapid decomposition, beginning almost immediately after death. By retarding this process, embalming makes it possible to have the body available for viewing (an important part of the death acceptance process for the family and friends. It also disinfects the body and protects those to whom the body will be exposed.

In the case of families where someone must travel several days to arrive for the funeral, embalming allows the body to be kept until their arrival. In Michigan embalming must occur unless the body is cremated or buried within 48 hours.

Embalming is also required if the death is due to certain communicable or infectious diseases or if the body is to be transported interstate in a common carrier. Some states require embalming for intrastate transportation beyond the place where the death occurred.

There are many decisions the family must make concerning the disposition of the body and the type of funeral desired. An obituary form must be filled out and the family will need information for that. They will need the deceased's Social Security number and discharge papers if the deceased was ever in the military.

The funeral director will assist the family in filing for any veteran's benefits or Social Security benefits to which they may be entitled. He will also need a full set of clothing, excluding the shoes, to dress the deceased. Jewelry can be removed later. If the deceased is a woman, the funeral director will ask

Funeral costs average $2,000 to $3,000 locally

One of the prime concerns for any family, has to be the expense involved in a funeral. Bob Winchester of Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix and Tom Vanderwall, of Vanderwall Funeral Home in East Jordan, both agreed that a funeral in this area averages between $2,000 and $3,000.

"Why so much?" is an immediate reaction for many people.

Here is a partial list of the professional services included in the cost: preparation and filing of death certificate, obtaining burial or cremation permit, embalming, consultation with family, arrangement of visitation period, attendants, burial service, the use of the funeral home facilities, use of the funeral home chapel and equipment, and motor equipment for removal of the body to the funeral home, a casket coach, and service vehicles.

The family must purchase a casket. If there is a burial they must purchase a burial vault and cemetery space. The opening and closing of the grave cost $60 in East Jordan.

Other charges will include certified copies of the death certificate, a pastor's honorarium, special music, flowers, grave markers, telephone charges for long distance calls, and in some newspapers there is a charge to carry the obituary ($50 to $75 in the Detroit or Grand Rapids area).

Those are just some of the expenses included in the "average" $2,000 or $3,000 funeral. And, of course, it can be more. It can also cost less. "We will turn away no one," said Vanderwall. "The family will determine the cost."

There are three different ways a funeral home may calculate their charges—itemized, functional, or unit pricing. In Michigan most funeral homes either have unit or functional pricing. Both Vanderwall and Winchester have the functional pricing. In the unit pricing a family is given an overall lump sum to include casket, facilities, professional services, telephone charges, etc.

In the functional pricing, the family is given separate prices for each function of the funeral home: funeral home services, merchandise (casket, vault, etc.) and cash advances (certified copies, clergy, newspaper, etc.) with functional pricing, the family usually has an opportunity to maintain more control over the cost by their selection of casket, vault, newspaper, charges, or special music.

For example, at the Vanderwall

Funeral Home each casket has a price card on it and the family is able to take that price and add it to the cost for professional services and see what the funeral is going to cost. The prices on caskets vary from a few hundred dollars to over a thousand. With the functional pricing they are able to control the cost of the funeral.

PRE-ARRANGED FUNERALS

It is also possible for a family or individual to prearrange their funeral. They may even want to pay in advance.

If payment for a funeral is made in advance, the money is placed in interest earning accounts at the bank which are "owned" by the individual and made payable to the funeral home upon their death.

Should they decide to change funeral directors or move away, they can contact the bank and have money returned to them or have the payee changed to a new funeral home.

Winchester and Vanderwall say they both have a number of prearranged funerals and it is a help to the families to know this has been taken care of.

Both funeral homes have a number of brochures and pamphlets available for anyone interested in more information.

72 lakefront condos near approval in Eveline

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

BOYNE CITY—People who live around Hemingway Point on Lake Charlevoix may have a giant new neighbor if Eveline Township supervisors approve the rezoning request.

Landmark Development Company of Petoskey wants 170 acres and 4,000 ft. of lake frontage rezoned to R-3 for condominiums—72 of them.

In terms of acreage and lake frontage, it will probably be the largest condominium project in the area, says Art Seaborne, general partner of the development.

Seaborne and other investors with him expect the completion of such a project would take five years.

But it is not yet definite. The project waits on zoning. Chairman of the township planning commission, Dr. Arnold Bauer, said the request goes from the commission to the Charlevoix County Planning Commission and then to the Eveline Township Board, April 2.

On March 3 a rezoning hearing was held and about 30 people attended—mostly neighbors. Concerns voiced included sewage and its possible effect on local wells, visibility on the lakefront, high density population and possible strains on government services, traffic, and most elusive of all, the loss of connection with the Hemingways.

Not only is Ernest Hemingway involved here, and his love for the area as it was, but also his uncle George Hemingway who up till 1920 had a tree farm on the land.

Seaborne responded to each of the concerns. He said the district health department had gone over the land thoroughly and had worked out with him an acceptable sewage plan, which is basically a collected septic system—"gravity drained to a central pump," Bauer reported.

Sewage would then be pumped up to a sandy high site. A well, used by five nearby cottage owners, is located near the boundary of the 170 acres. Seaborne states that arrangements would be made to maintain access for these people.

As for visibility on the 4,000 feet of waterfront, Seaborne said the structures would be "tucked-in" among the shoreline trees. Their cedar exterior siding would harmonize with the woods.

He went on to explain that 72 dwellings on 170 acres is relatively low density. According to township ordinances, the land could possibly be zoned for up to 170 units, he said.

The design for the project stresses preservation of the open land. Only 10 percent of the land would be used for buildings; the other 90 percent would "remain a greenbelt forever," Seaborne said, by means of a scenic easement restriction in the deed.

Because the condos would be used mainly for vacation purposes, the pressure on government services would be minimal, he said. Few children would be bussed to school; all roads on the property would be privately built and maintained. Two wells—municipal size—would be drilled to provide water.

No commercial activities would be allowed, not even the sale of gas and supplies at the proposed private marina.

The marina for 45 to 50 boats would have the effect of making it unnecessary to break up the shoreline with numerous docks, Seaborne said.

Marina approval would probably take the longest. According to Seaborne, if rezoning is granted, the proposal goes to the state Department of Natural Resources, where a decision would be forthcoming on the condos within about 60 days.

What about the Hemingways and Uncle George's trees, many of which were imported from far away countries? The trees will stay and be cared for, Seaborne said. They are in the 90 percent forever-saved area.

The old Hemingway barn will be rehabilitated, too.

And, although Seaborne would not go so far as to accede to a request to build some kind of memorial, he did announce the name of the cluster of condominiums would be Hemingway Pointe Club.

Seaborne said he and his wife plan to live there, but most condo owners would only come for summer sailing and winter skiing.

Since the average price around the nation for a condo is in the neighborhood of $100,000, the land would become a valuable addition to the tax rolls, he said.

Bauer indicated that the commission thought there were "more favorable than unfavorable" points to be considered.

One of the neighboring landholders said he realized "something must be done with the property someday—and that the proposed development is by far better than complete subdivision of the land." The general feeling is the proposal should be accepted.

Seaborne has built other condominiums, one in progress in Petoskey—called La Chaudiere. He notes condos don't necessarily increase neighborhood taxes.

He has already had four meetings with the township planning commission and, "Many of the recommendations they have given us have been incorporated in our planning," he said.

The structures will be two stories high, containing six units each, and each residence will be 2,000 square feet.

"I'm trying to accomplish a high quality project," said Seaborne, who has been in the area for seven years.

If and when the rezoning goes through and DNR approval is attained, Re/MAX Properties in Petoskey, with which Seaborne is associated, would handle sales.

BVRR sale near?

BOYNE CITY - The Boyne Valley Railroad board of directors will hold a special meeting for all stockholders at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, March 12, at the City Hall. Purpose of the meeting is to make a decision on the sale of all assets of the Boyne Valley Railroad.

According to board member Tom Workman, the sale of railroad right-of-way and cars may save the railroad. "Lake Associates, the group interested in purchasing the railroad, wants to keep the railroad operating in the same capacity as it had in the past," Workman said.

The old Boyne City Railroad was auctioned in May, 1976 and approximately 300 people now own shares in that railroad.

Lake Associates, headed by Rick and Dave Smith, are the developers of the condominium and marina project, The Harborage. "They have the capital necessary to make the railroad a viable tourist attraction," says Workman of the developers. "We just didn't have enough funds to keep it going."

Workman adds that the railroad board is in favor of the sale and invites the public to attend the meeting.

for her cosmetics and a photo to aid in arranging the hair.

The family will also need to select six pallbearers. Then questions of the funeral, dates, location, and costs can be discussed.

THE FUNERAL

Is the funeral really necessary?

In some larger cities, individuals may belong to a memorial society that will remove the body and dispose of it. You pay a fee to belong and when a death occurs, they "pick up and dispose."

Memorial societies are not needed," Vanderwall said, "because a funeral director can and will provide that same service." Vanderwall explained that he would counsel and explain the advantages of a funeral to a family, but that if they still wanted just a disposal he would do it.

Bob Winchester said, "I feel that the traditional funeral as we know it today has been developed through the needs of the people. It serves people emotionally and psychologically as a source of therapy."

The funeral is for the living, not the dead. It gives the family a vehicle for the expression of grief," said Vanderwall, "and it aids in confronting the situation and sharing and expressing their loss."

Vanderwall stressed that the funeral should fit the personal needs of the family and "the service should be personalized. It should be anything the family wants, within reason," he said.

Both Vanderwall and Winchester feel the open casket funeral is more valuable. "It does give people the opportunity to confirm the loss of the loved one," Winchester said.

It should be group centered, said Vanderwall. "Because life is not a private event. Death shouldn't be. Grief shared is grief diminished."

The funeral can be held at either the funeral home or a church. It depends on the individual preference.

Caskets can be of metal, fiber-board or wood. They can be of fine woods with rich finishes like maple or they may be of a simple nature, like pine. The family should select a casket that fits the person, Vanderwall said.

Music for the funeral can be classical, religious, or even up-beat. It should be what the family will be comfortable with. The family may request that flowers not be sent, but they should not dictate. There must be room in a funeral to satisfy the needs of the family and the friends of the deceased.

The family may choose to have the body cremated, but a visitation period to allow friends and family to say their last goodbyes and to visually confront the death should still be held, said Vanderwall.

If there is to be a funeral and burial, the family will also need to select a burial vault. A vault is required by cemetery law and is to keep the grave from caving in. The vault contains the casket and is built to withstand the weight of the earth above it.

Both Vanderwall and Winchester carry protected type vaults which are made of concrete and designed to form a waterproof, airtight unit.

Long-range plans for long-lasting projects

We're glad to see the city of Boyne City embarking on a long-range program which will result in major improvements in the community.

We like the specific improvements being proposed, but it is the commitment to capital improvements that is most admirable.

Specifically, City Manager Tim Clifton is proposing that Boyne City spend between $100,000 and $135,000 per year on capital improvements. These improvements are things that would last a long time—like streets, sidewalks, water and sewer lines, and an industrial park.

A community must pay constant attention to these types of concerns or eventually it begins to look ragged.

The majority of any city budget goes for essential services that all communities need—like police and fire protection, ambulance service, snowplowing, landfill, parks, cemetery, library and administration. But most of this tax money is spent just to keep these services available on an on-going basis.

Editorial

You have little to show for your money a week after plowing a street, arresting a speeder or mowing the grass in a park.

That's why we like the idea of setting aside a certain portion of the budget—and a good-sized one at that—for long-lasting capital improvements.

Planning five years ahead of time is a sound idea. For one thing, the current improvement program is implementing recommendations made in the city's 20-year comprehensive plan that was finished last year.

Planning five years ahead of time is a sound idea. For one thing, the current improvement program is implementing recommendations made in the city's 20-year comprehensive plan that was finished last year. The city is clearly working towards specific goals.

After two years of spreading capital improvements around the town, the new five-year plan will concentrate on downtown improvements for the next two years.

At the risk of sounding like we want a new sidewalk in front of The Press office (it would be nice), we think the idea of improving the downtown with everyone's tax money is entirely defensible, important and downright exciting.

As the city manager points out, there are still some unpaved streets in town (Clifton lives on one, incidentally), but only a handful of people use those streets. Every resident of the city and nearly every visitor uses the streets and sidewalks downtown.

A downtown is important for a city's image. If it looks sharp, inviting and well maintained, the entire city will have that image.

The Chamber of Commerce and individual businesses are improving storefronts and together with the city improvements big strides are being made.

Someone who has been away from Boyne City ought to be pleasantly surprised if he comes back for a visit in 1983 or 84.

Hooray for the past and the future

In the recording of Boyne City's history let us not forget to mention what happened after lumbering played out. Boyne's population fell very quickly. Some likened it to those things that leave a sinking ship. Abandoned houses dotted the community. The flight was so sudden three blacksmiths awoke one morning to find themselves competing for business in a one horse town.

Last week's comments about life in Boyne City during the lumbering days caused some stir. That noise you heard was a couple of lumber barons turning over in their graves.

Right now most of us seem to be taking a nostalgic look into the past and an optimistic look into the future. I think that's because the present is so fouled up we can't handle it.

Marshall Sayles

After half a century of watching Boyne City's successes, its civic tug-of-wars, its brilliance and its stupidity, its good days and its bad days, and the thousand diverse ideas in the minds of residents, I've come to a conclusion: The intelligent many asks, "What in the world is wrong with Boyne City?" And the fool says, "I think I've got the answer."

President Reagan's philosophy seems to be: "Hold everything right there. No more spending."

It's doubtful that this directive will work in Boyne City.

Somehow I can't see the city commission popping jelly beans and forcing residents to be satisfied with things as they are.

Saturday. It was another milestone. The woman in me will not allow any mention of age. But I can say that as the calendar flipped in this life of football the referee blew his whistle to start the fourth quarter. It was thought by some that a night of hilarious tipping was in order.

Not so. My health, religion and pocketbook voted against it. As we oldsters get older that "gang of three" seems to tighten its authority. I have now reached the age when most men begin paying increased attention to the Lord—asking him to look upon their earlier exploits as a myth. (Like those days when I was more interested in repenting a sin than avoiding it.)

Oh, my gosh. I've shaken the grates until there aren't any ashes left.

Dealing with death—by avoiding it

Last Friday on television Benson's mother died and for the next 25 minutes the audience watched as Benson and his friends attempted to deal with her death and console the living.

It was a typical enough situation that many of us will face this year—and many will deal with it in some of the same ludicrous ways.

Benson dealt with it by not dealing with it. It was business as usual. That's that.

His friends each dealt with it differently. One of the women found herself with a frozen grin on her face everytime she saw Benson. One of the men said hurriedly, "Let me know if you need something," and then avoided him as if Benson were an IRS agent wanting to audit his return.

Some of us never seem to find the right words to express our sympathy for the loss of others and we're afraid they will cry and we will have to deal with that too.

Doctors and psychiatrists seem to agree that death is only dealt with by working through our grief at the loss of that loved one. It may occur quickly, depending on the attachment, or it could take up to a year in the case of a parent, child, or spouse. An acquaintance of mine has never successfully dealt with the death of her mother—which occurred many years ago. She is still angry with God for allowing her mother to die. Any of her friends who become seriously ill are removed from her life. They no longer exist. She doesn't visit them, send a card or discuss them.

By denying their existence she will never have to deal with their deaths. But eventually she will have to deal with death—or it with her.

Each of us must deal with death, probably many times. How we deal with it, and help others with it, can obviously affect our mental well being.

Never having had to deal with death on a close basis, I asked area funeral directors if they would help provide information via the newspaper to area residents on what happens when a death occurs.

One director declined, but I am most grateful to Tom Vanderwall and Bob Winchester for the time they spent with me and the information they shared. We spent six hours discussing death, funerals, the costs, open caskets, anatomical gifts, children and death, burial vaults, expressions of sympathy, embalming, and the mental acceptance of death.

Thanks to both gentlemen for their time and efforts. When that next death occurs, I know that I will be better prepared for the situation. Something as simple as a note or word of comfort, a chapel visit or the arrangements of a funeral are now within my ability.

Posing some questions for Rita J.

On Friday, March 6 the Detroit Free Press let Rita Jenrette dominate the front page of section C, commonly known as "the way we live." I wish I could apologize for the total number of column inches wasted. Most of us, whether we want to or not, know who Rita J. is and that she wears plunging necklines and rivals Nancy Reagan for press coverage.

But, who cares? I could probably be accused of giving her even more publicity by mentioning her name in this column. However, as a woman and a journalist I'm compelled to add my two cents worth.

Jenrette is not the only congressman's wife who has been in the dark about her husband's affairs. And, she is not the only woman whose husband has been convicted of political wrongdoing. But, to the best of my knowledge she is the only politician's wife that has posed for Playboy.

Jenrette claims to have brains to match her beauty. "I'm fairly well educated, I have a degree with honors from the University of Texas. I attended graduate school...that makes it seem I wouldn't be the kind of person posing for Playboy. And it probably was a mistake." You said it, Rita.

She continued to say in the Free Press interview that the only people who have not been kind to her have been female journalists, and that all her suffering will be worth it if she has helped just one congressman's wife or congresswomen. Help them what? I wonder what the results would be if a poll were taken of congresswomen that have been helped by Jenrette. Most assuredly, Barbara Jordan didn't need her kind of help. Neither did Bella Abzug or Shirley Chisholm.

The Charlevoix County Press won't be interviewing Jenrette and unfortunately, because of time and distance, we can't report the current activities of Barbara Jordan.

However, The Press will soon be examining the lives and careers of many outstanding women in Charlevoix County. We can't include all of the professional women in this county in our tabloid. There are just too many that are working as opposed to posing.

Starting from scratch without age levels

History books tell us mankind has lived through the Prehistoric Age, the Golden Age of Greece, the Dark Ages of Europe, and the Age of Enlightenment when our country was founded, and so on.

We are making history now, as then, and there's a name for this period. It should be the Age of Stratification.

The meaning of the word "stratification" is the arrangement of things in layers. In some places stratification may be seen where hills have been cut into for a new highway. The layers of white, black, gray, white, black, gray may look like an elaborate cake. But they are stone hard.

And so are the layers in our social behavior. Upper class-lower class has long been considered a most unfortunate form of stratification. But there's another that is scarcely considered, being thought quite beneficial—stratification by age.

Beginning about 1900, more fathers began to leave the home, the farm, the family store to go to work. Family members, instead of needing each other to make a living, began to live separated lives.

It developed until even housing and recreation were precisely specified by age levels.

A few decades ago, dances after high school basketball games were events in which all ages participated, children becoming socialized as they danced with their parents or older brothers and neighbors a whirl. Everyone danced with everyone. But not any more.

It isn't new that people prefer others of their own category, but never before have the categories become so set in concrete.

Schools have done it for centuries, of course, because it seems simpler. And don't children enjoy the feeling of progress, however undeserved, that they get from saying, "Now I am in fourth grade!"

Again and again we ask children how old they are as though age had some all-encompassing meaning.

Take a teacher-led group of children with an age range of, say, three to six. In such a group, three-year-olds can pop out with remarks or accomplishments occasionally that surpass what the six-year-olds may be doing.

We realize this can happen, but it is rarely noted because children outside the family are most often with others of their own age.

The point is, no one has proved the mind has any age. Maybe the differences are only in accumulated experience.

The sharing of experience, as it is way anywhere for all ages to flourish. It could be called the Silas Marner Syndrome, for the old man whose reason was saved by having to take care of a little child.

Altering the structure of schools won't change everything. But why should schools be an instrument in stratification?

So how about some modifications?

1. Home rooms made up of students of all ages and used as study halls where the older can help the younger. Used also as lunchrooms, with again a sharing of responsibility.

2. Excursions planned so that different ages go together, experiencing the event at various levels. Remember going to the zoo with your kids?

3. Every child appointed as a brother or sister in school to someone younger and at the same time to someone older. With attendant advantages.

4. Students permitted to move at their best pace through different subjects.

5. Room made for people to return to school after having dropped out.

6. Children starting an abbreviated form of school when they are ready, even though under five, and not starting school until they may be as old as eight years if they turn out not to be ready.

In a way, this is a description of the old country schoolhouse, and indeed it would work best if schools were kept small. Or at least divided up into sub-schools.

Letters to the editor

Children are losing in EJ school feud

Editor, A feud is going on in the East Jordan school system. This is something that should concern every citizen in the district. All too many of us do not understand the issue. We've only heard bits and pieces. We should all make a greater effort to understand the issues. Only through understanding will we ever be able to come to terms. Too often we stand by and let others decide our fate.

We have many questions. For instance, what's going to happen to our school? How valuable is our school system? How important are our children? Are our goals pointing more toward personal gain and recognition than toward a settlement?

We voted four board members back. When we voted for them we were saying: We believe in you. Believe you understand the issues better than any new member we might vote in. We believe you will put forth every effort to bring about discussions between the two sides.

We have hope that both sides will make a strong effort to find some common ground. Come to some sort of an agreement, so both sides can work together for the betterment of our children and our community.

This is not an issue of who is right and who is wrong, rather who stands to lose, and how much damage will be done. The teachers and board can deadlock until they all have to go out and dig ditches. Meanwhile our children are losing an education.

There will be no solutions until we come face to face across the board—until both sides sit down together and talk over what is most important and are able to relent on the less important issues.

We want top quality education as economically as possible, but the longer it takes us to come to terms the costlier it becomes. We should keep in mind whatever way this issue is settled will determine the way we handle future issues.

If we have already decided there are no solutions, if we are determined not to budge, if we cannot see beyond a pay check or our desire to prove a point then we've lost sight of the values this country was founded on.

We cannot choose sides. We must get behind the teachers and the board, and work together toward a common goal.

Barbara Olstrom
East Jordan

Progress in moderation

Editor, This letter is in response to your articles on "Ideas for a better community."

Arnold Bauer, D.D.S., says it best, however, and I would like to elaborate so that certain points are not lost on some folks.

As far as preserving the natural beauty of northern Michigan, the visitors are going to treat the communities no better than the residents do. When they see a community which is obviously well cared for, most of them will take care of that community.

If a community looks like a dump, most of them will treat it as such.

As to industry: Having been born and raised in the Detroit area, and having worked for one of the "Big Three Automakers," I think I can safely say we should be very happy we do not have big industry here.

There is a great deal of talent here which could be put to use in small industry producing necessary parts and labor for big industry elsewhere.

Progress is good and necessary. But like all good things, must be done with moderation to be done properly. I believe there is no standing still. We either progress or regress.

Where would we be if our Stone Age ancestors had decided not to progress further? Extinct! That's where!

Build buildings, build roads, change

C. Stone

Snowbirds hold annual picnic in 70° weather

The Boyne City-Florida picnic was held in Phillippi Park, Safety Harbor, Fla. on the shores of Old Tampa Bay. The weather was ideal with temperatures in the 70's for the 81 people attending.

After a prayer by Rev. Wyangarden, former Boyne City Presbyterian minister, the "snowbirds" flocked to the tables of excellent food. After a short meeting, they were entertained by Tom Carey, with his banjo and singing. Carey put on quite a show. After several hours of gabbing and reminiscing, each little group left with a "goodbye" and hopes of returning next year. The picnic was held Feb. 25.

Martha Dornburg recently underwent surgery requiring hospitalization at St. Mary's in Grand Rapids. Last week the address where friends could write her was given incorrectly. Those wishing to write or send cards, may do so c/o C. Martel, 41 Mill Street, Casnovia, Mi. 49318.

The East Jordan Ladies Bridge Tournament continues to roll right along with the following teams having the top 10 scores as of Feb. 28: Evelyn Gidley and Marge Smith, 31,320; Betty Rison and Jane Prebble, 29,050; Linda Snyder and Jean Peters, 25,950; Deanna Hurwitz and Barb Alderton, 25,760; Leva Cole and Ruth Vincent, 25,130; Fran Grauel and Ruth Chanda, 24,950; Ruth Bell and Ruth Gee, 24,670; Norma Thorsen and Cyg Riley, 24,430; Phyllis Malpass and Helen Dudek, 23,190; Pat Pat Ruhlman and Marie Shepard, 22,930.

There's a story behind that hook shot

If you were one of the several hundred Boyne City fans watching the Ramblers beat Elk Rapids in the district finals Friday, you may have noticed Mark Zinck.

He's the Boyne player who took a half-court hook shot with about a minute left in the game.

There's a story behind that hook shot. No, Zinck didn't think he was taking a last second shot. And he didn't get in trouble with the coach for being a hot dog.

In fact, Coach Bob Taylor had instructed him to take the hook shot, fully expecting Zinck to make it. After all, he had swished one through the hoop in a game at Gaylord a couple of weeks ago. (Taylor has it on videotape to prove it.)

After the Elk Rapids game, Taylor asked Zinck (also known as Dr. Hook) why he missed the shot.

"I was too close," Zinck said, "and I was trying not to get called for traveling."

Here written for the high school newspaper by Zinck himself, is the story behind Dr. Hook.

BY MARK ZINCK

I first started shooting hook shots when I was nine years old. I would go to what is now the middle school playground to shoot basic shots.

Since I was alone, I got bored quite quickly. That is when I would experiment with different shots. This went on for some time, and the hook shot soon became my favorite.

By the time I was 10, I was able to hit hooks from about 25 feet. Of course this does not mean every shot I took went in or even that it came close. However, my intermittent successes led me to practice the hook shot more and more. One day I decided to try it in a game.

It was a fifth grade intramural game, the type in which one class plays another. My memory fails me as to the score, but I do remember the shot—and what happened afterwards.

I yelled for the ball and got it. I was beyond the top of the key, but I shot anyway. No, it didn't go in and no, it didn't bounce off the rim. The ball hit the backboard and bounced back onto the court.

Once that quarter ended, we huddled up around Miss Moody, gym teacher and our coach. She grabbed me and said "What is that one-hand-over-the-head stuff? What kind of shot is that?"

I didn't think of it at the time, but I could have answered. "It's a hook shot!"

Since that experience I never shot a hook shot in front of my coach, whoever it was. Oh I still shot them, but more as a hobby than anything else. I didn't want the coach mad at me. That was until the day of Feb. 9, 1981, which was a Monday. (Actually, it was the day before that Coach Taylor had first told me to shoot a hook, but I never got it off.)

We were practicing against the junior varsity, having a regular scrimmage. We had played quite a bit, and I was standing on the sideline watching. Coach Taylor decided to make a substitution, and before I went in, he again told me to shoot a hook shot.

Coach Taylor is different in this respect. He told me he wanted me to shoot the hook to break the monotony of practice. I don't think he realized that I have been shooting hook shots for eight of my 17 years. But when he told me to shoot it, I didn't argue.

I went in but I didn't get the ball for a while. When I got it, I was about 40 to 45 feet from the basket. I shot. It banked off the backboard and swished through the hoop. I think the coach about died.

How could he have been expecting what had happened? When the surprise wore off, he told me to shoot another one. So when I got the ball it was about the same distance, only on the other side of the court, I shot again. It again banked off the backboard, but bounced off the rim and onto the court.

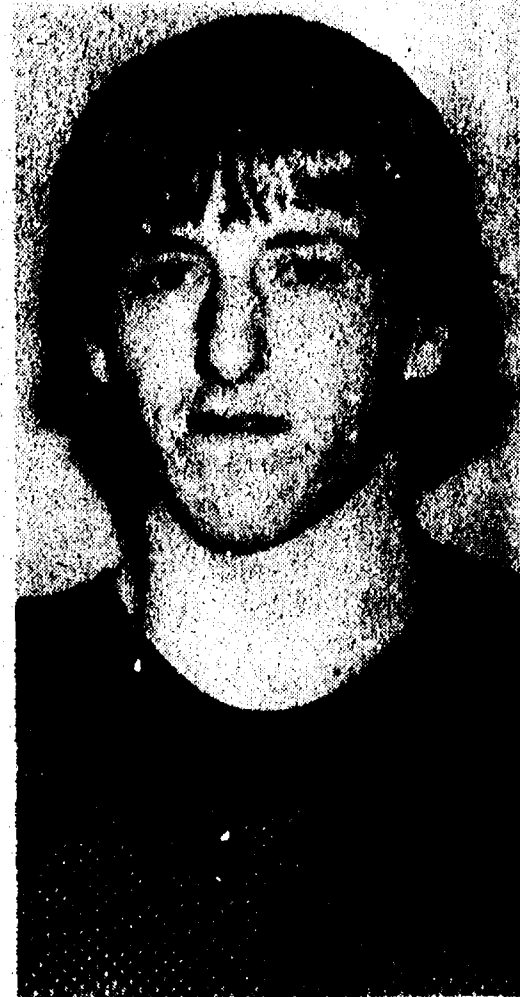

It didn't matter. The coach had seen enough and had a surprise for me the next game, which was on Friday the 13th.

We were beating Gaylord by about 16 points with one minute left in the game when I heard the coach yelling "HOOK, ZINCK, HOOK." I pulled down a rebound and dribbled out to about 45 feet. I then shot.

Bullseye! The ball barely hit the net as it went through, and through my concentration came the sound of a loud cheer. The crowd loved the shot.

However, I heard another sound not so friendly. I turned and there stood the referee blowing a whistle and spinning his hands in front of him. Traveling! I had take too many steps.

It hurt, but not deeply. For now I knew my hook shot had been revealed.

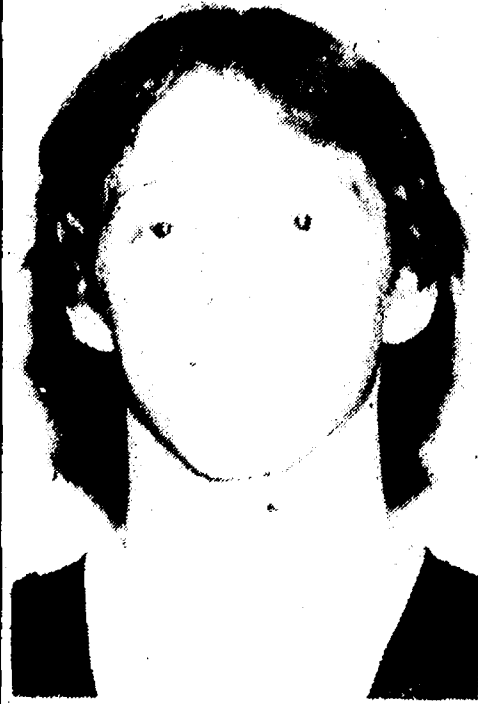

Dr. Hook (Mark Zinck)

All three win district basketball titles

It has probably never happened before, and it probably won't happen again.

Three high school basketball teams from Charlevoix County won three separate district tournaments over the weekend.

That's not bad, considering there are only four high schools in the county!

On Friday night, Boyne Falls beat Inland Lakes 64-60 to win its first district title since 1969. Boyne City also won Friday, crushing Elk Rapids 92-46.

Then on Saturday, East Jordan completed the Charlevoix County sweep with a thrilling 47-45 victory over Central Lake. It was the Devils' first district championship since 1966.

(The only county team that didn't win a tournament was Charlevoix. They Rayders had been upset by Elk Rapids on March 2.)

We thought it was exciting enough to put out an old-fashioned "Extra, extra, read all about it" issue on Monday morning.

We could hardly wait until our regular press time of Wednesday, so we called our printer and arranged a special press run at 7 a.m. Monday.

Our staff had to work much of the weekend to bring this special issue to you, but we think it was worth it. After all, our 100th birthday is Wednesday, March 11, and we're in the mood for doing special things.

We hope you enjoy this special edition. And you can still get your regular weekly copy of The Press at the usual time on Wednesday afternoon.

Now...let's get out and support those teams! On Wednesday, Boyne City plays Roscommon in the Class C Regional at Gaylord, while Boyne Falls meets Eben in Class D at Cheboygan.

East Jordan plays Maple City Glen Lake Thursday night in the Class D Regional at Roscommon.

If you can't make it to the games, radio station WWRM-FM (107 on the dial) is tentatively planning to broadcast all of these games live.

Running Ramblers to face slowdown team in regional

BOYNE CITY - After averaging 91 points a game in the district tournament, the Ramblers may have a problem playing run-and-gun in the regional.

Their opponent in Gaylord Wednesday night is Roscommon, a slower-paced, physical team.

Boyne City Coach Bob Taylor said Roscommon beat Grayling, 64-54, in the Houghton Lake district Saturday.

Roscommon's victory was considered an upset, since Grayling's 16-4 record was tops in that district. Taylor said Roscommon's record is only about .500 this season, but they have won about 8 of their last 10 games, he said.

"Roscommon played slowdown, and that hurt Grayling, because Grayling couldn't get their running game going," Taylor said.

That could be bad news for Boyne City, since the Ramblers are also a running team.

Slowdown games have hurt the Ramblers, Taylor acknowledged. "Physical teams have been a problem for us. We're more of a finesse team. We like the refs to have quick whistles."

"We want to make the game into a track meet. We've got to establish the tempo of the game and get a good lead."

Roscommon is a fairly tall team, with 6-4 Dwight Mead and 6-2 Bill Waterman, both seniors, playing around the basket. Jeff Lance, a 6-3 junior, came off the bench to score well against Grayling.

Leading scorer in the game for Roscommon was Craig Townsend, a 5-10 sophomore forward. "He was tough. They got the ball to him in the clutch and he made his free throws at the end," Taylor said.

Todd Fuller is the playmaker guard, and Dana Johoske is the other guard for Roscommon.

If Boyne City beats Roscommon Wednesday, they'll have their hands full in the regional finals. Their probable opponent would be defending state champion Reed City, which is ranked in the top five this year.

March Madness can get hectic, and Taylor hopes he can keep his squad at "that magic level" of mental readiness for the regional.

"They can't get too high or too low. They should be excited, but not nervous or it's going to hurt their performance."

The Ramblers certainly had their spirits at the right level in the district finale Friday at Charlevoix. They whipped Elk Rapids, 92-46.

The Elks had improved since playing Boyne City earlier in the season, upsetting Charlevoix in the tourney opener. Boyne had beaten Elk Rapids 80-48 in their first meeting but had no trouble getting psyched up for the district title game.

"We came in with the right attitude," Taylor said. "The seniors realize that if they lose one it's over, and they were playing hungry."

The Ramblers jumped out to a 20-point lead by the middle of the second quarter and didn't let up the rest of the way.

Senior guard Larry Jarema had the hottest hand, canning 14 field goals for 28 points, his best output of the season. He also had seven assists.

Junior John Tompkins also had one of his best games, scoring 19 points and grabbing 13 rebounds.

Leading scorer Brian Vroman, who found himself double-teamed most of the night, had 16 points, 11 rebounds and six assists.

Surprise! Loggers win district crown for first time since 1969

BOYNE FALLS - John Hausler made the last four points of the game to lead the Loggers to their first district championship in 12 years Friday night.

The Loggers edged Inland Lakes 64-60 in the title game at Vanderbilt. It was their second four-point victory of the tourney, as they had beaten the host team 57-53 last Wednesday.

Now Boyne Falls advances to the Cheboygan regional, meeting Eben, an unheralded squad from the Upper Peninsula, at Cheboygan at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

"I don't know anything about Eben," said Logger Coach Dale Reinhardt. "But I don't think that will hurt us. A few times this season, I've tried special defenses after scouting teams and I think it confuses the kids. We'll just play our normal defense and do our best."

The Loggers are also unheralded—to put it mildly. Their district tourney title was a surprise to many people—and even with two tournament victories their record is now only 7-13.

After breaking a 43-game losing streak early in the season, Boyne Falls has improved steadily. They have won five of their last nine games.

"I was really pleased," said a beaming Coach Dale Reinhardt after the game. "It was especially great for the seniors...something to reward them for sticking it out this long."

Ironically, the last time Boyne Falls had a chance to win the district was in 1977—the last season Reinhardt coached before taking three years off. And the opponent was the same: Inland Lakes, which had a 19-2 record, while the Loggers had an 18-3 mark going into the game.

After building up a 48-39 lead by the end of the third quarter Friday, Boyne Falls almost let this title slip away. Inland Lakes closed the gap to 60-58.

But Hausler, who had scored only two points at that point, connected on a jump shot to put the Loggers ahead by four. Inland Lakes scored again to narrow the margin to 62-60, but Hausler was fouled with four seconds left. He sank both free throws to guarantee the victory.

Although free throws won the game, they almost spelled doom for Boyne Falls. The Loggers missed all seven charity tosses they attempted in the first half and finished the night making only 10 of 24.

Inland Lakes, on the other hand, hit 18 of 24 free throws to keep the game close.

A 53-26 rebounding edge worked to the Loggers' advantage, however, as did 48 percent field goal shooting.

"The whole team played well," Reinhardt said. "Tim Smith was his usual tough self, and Norm Mahanke had a great second half, which we really needed."

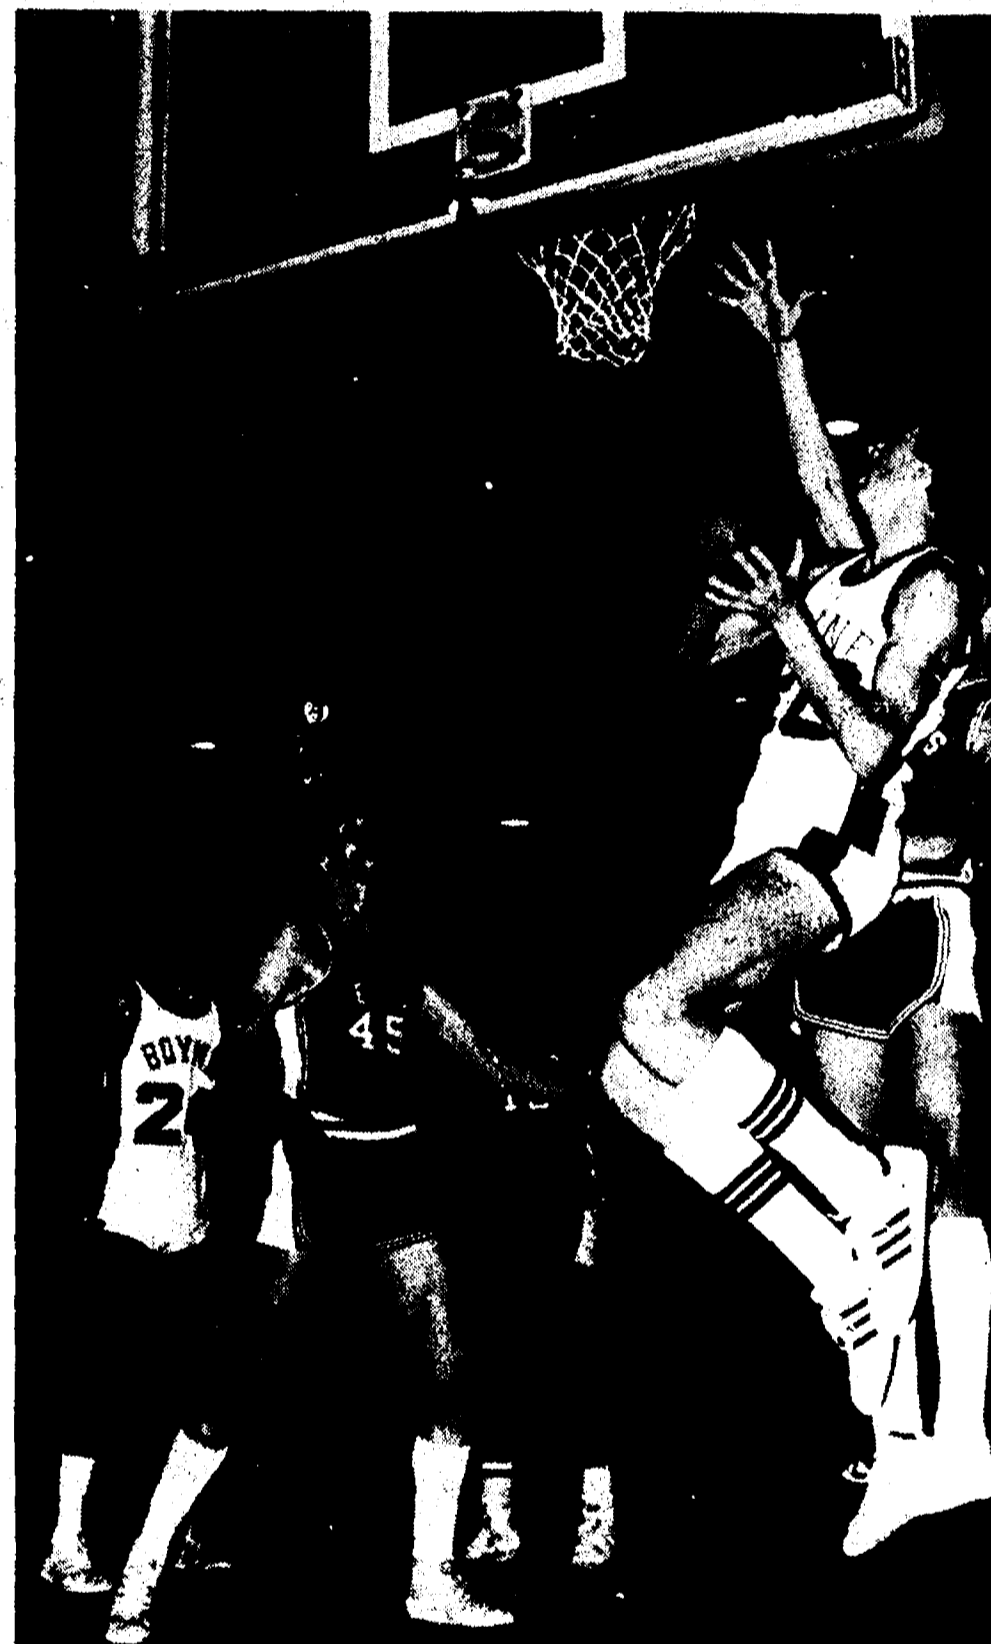

Smith, a 6-4 sophomore, accounted for 21 points and 21 rebounds. Mahanke, a 5-11 junior, had 12 points in the second half and 14 overall—plus eight rebounds.

Junior Bruce Crouterfield came off the bench to get 13 points and seven rebounds, and senior Jim Spencer had 15 rebounds.

Coach played on last title team

Devils end district dry spell, face Glen Lake in regional

EAST JORDAN - The Red Devils last won a district basketball tournament when Bill Chase was on the team in 1966.

Now, 15 years later, with Chase in his first year as East Jordan's head coach, they have finally ended the long dry spell.

East Jordan came from behind Saturday to nip Central Lake 47-45, as Randy Morris sank two free throws with four seconds left to play.

Thursday night they'll be going after their first regional title in 20 years.

The Devils, now 17-5, will try to avenge a 71-57 loss to Maple City Glen Lake at 7 p.m. in Roscommon. The Lakers have an 18-2 record and are ranked eighth in the state among Class D teams.

Chase thinks his squad can play better than when they lost to Glen Lake in December. The Devils were ice cold in that game, falling behind by 20 points in the first half.

"We weren't hitting our shots, and we weren't getting back on the fast break," Chase said. "Our guys really want to play them again. If we get off to a good start, I think we'll do well."

The Devils got off to a slow start against Central Lake, in the district, scoring only four points in the first quarter—but the Lancers could get only eight.

East Jordan pulled out to a 19-18 halftime lead, extended it to 30-21 midway through the third period, but then let the Lancers score the next 10 points.

Tom Peters made the last four points of the quarter—including a shot from past half-court at the buzzer, to give East Jordan a 34-31 lead heading into the final period.

Central Lake scored the first eight points of the quarter to take a 39-34 lead with 5:40 left. With 2:44 remaining, the Lancers still led 43-40.

Then Red Devil center Del Ingalls made a free throw at 2:33, a three-point play at 1:30 and another free throw with 41 seconds left to give East Jordan a 45-40 advantage.

Mike Spence and Todd Root both missed chances to put the game away with one-and-one free throws in the next 30 seconds, but Morris made two free throws with four seconds left for a 47-43 lead. A last second Lancer basket made the final score 47-45.

Defense won the game for the Devils, as East Jordan shot only 29 percent from the field (18 for 61) and 43 percent from the free throw line (9 for 21).

"We know we really don't have a strong offense," Chase said. "I tell the guys we have to make our offense with our defense."

The Red Devils' full-court press caused numerous Central Lake turnovers and kept East Jordan in the game, despite the fact that they weren't shooting well.

The Lancers double-teamed Ingalls and held him to 12 points, well below his 20 point average. "But Del really came through in the clutch," Chase said, noting that Ingalls had five points in the final 2½ minutes. Ingalls also led the rebounding with 12.

Morris, the playmaker guard, got into foul trouble early in the game, but junior Tom Peters came off the bench to hit seven points. Mike Brennan also played well in a reserve role, getting five points and five rebounds.

Root scored nine points and grabbed seven rebounds, while Spence had 10 rebounds and four points.

'Tis time for drinking of the green, green beer

BY KATHY JOHNSON

Sure 'n it's time for the wearing of the green. 'Tis the time when the little folk are out and about and time for the drink 't will make you think you were tipsy before you even get the glass up—green beer.

Starting this Friday Irishmen throughout the area will begin their annual St. Patrick's day celebrations and they won't be through until the wee hours of Wednesday morning.

At Ryan's Public House on Old State Road off M-75 North there'll be green beer and Irish tunes to fill the heart. A family happy hour will be held on Friday and Saturday from 5 to 7 p.m. and then entertainment with owner Sean Ryan starts at 9 p.m.

But Ryan, who was born and raised in Ireland, will really have his main Irish celebration on Tuesday, St. Patrick's Day. The entertainment will start at 2 p.m. "We'll be 100 percent Irish all day," says Ryan, "even if I have to sing country songs with an Irish brogue."

At another Irish Pub in Boyne City, Irishman Terry Toomey is planning a four-day Irish fest starting on Saturday. Between 4:30 and 6:30 p.m. daily the Tannery Saloon and the Granary Restaurant will feature the "Irish Bubble"—buy the first drink at the regular price and the next one is just 25 cents.

On the menu will be lamb, veal or (what else) Irish stew. There will be Gaelic Shamrocks (a special house drink), green beer, party hats and favors along with entertainment by Bob Read.

For those who want to put all their Irish activities into one day, Duffy's in Charlevoix will help you spend St. Patrick's day in style. The Epsilon Band will provide the entertainment beginning at 8 p.m. and there will be corned beef and cabbage, green beer and Irish coffee. Leprechauns and fantasy will round out the evening at Duffy's.

There you have it. Some fine choices for an Irish evening—or two or three or four. So pin on the shamrocks and get ready for the green beer. It's time to tell your Irish tales and search for the pot of gold.

New fangled radio serials

Radio drama returns to public broadcasting this month as two new serials begin this month on WIAA 88.3 FM.

Science fiction lovers will find the air waves filled with messages from outer space as "Star Wars" and "The Hitch-Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy" start their runs.

"Star Wars," a 13-part radio adaptation will start Thursday, March 12, at 7:30 p.m. on WIAA. "Star Wars" will feature two of the stars from the original motion picture cast, Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker) and Anthony Daniels (CP30) will recreate for radio their original parts.

Talking about the radio series Hamill said "It's an opportunity for me to work in a medium that has been denied me simply because of my age."

Other cast members include Bernard Behrens (Ben Kenobi), John Considine (Tion), Keene Curtis (Grand Moff Tarkin), Stephen Elliott (Prestor), Perry King (Hans Solo), Brock Peters (Darth Vader), and Ann Sachs (Princess Leia Organa).

Music for the series will be the original music composed by John Williams and the equally impressive Academy Award winning sound effects will also be used.

"The Hitch-Hiker's Guide to the Galaxy," the most popular radio drama ever broadcast by the BBC, offered its first episode on March 7. You can still get on board for the next 11 episodes this Saturday morning at 9:30 a.m. as they poke fun at contemporary social values and science fiction.

While enjoying this version of science fiction humor for radio you will have an inside look at how Earth was unexpectedly destroyed to make way for a galactic freeway and how to see the Universe on less than 30 Altarian dollars a day.

During March on The Spider's Web at 7 p.m., listeners will enjoy "The Magic Orange Tree" on March 12 and "Beauty and the Beast" on March 13. March 16 through 20 "Hand-Me-Down-Heroes" will be presented on the Spider's Web and A.A. Milne's "Winnie the Pooh" will be broadcast March 23 through 31.

Other regular features include All Things Considered, Sunday through Friday at 5 p.m.; National Press Club every Thursday at 1 p.m.; and Jazz Alive on Saturday evenings at 11 p.m.

St. Patrick who?

Tuesday, March 17, is St. Patrick's Day. But who was St. Patrick?

St. Patrick was born in Britain. At the age of 16 he was captured by Irish raiders (even then the English and the Irish couldn't get along) and sold as a slave in Ireland.

St. Patrick tended sheep for six years as a slave, became a Christian, escaped, and after traveling 200 miles to the coast, taking a three day voyage and wandering for 28 days in a desert, he was reunited with his family.

For many years his thoughts and dreams were haunted by thoughts of Ireland and the people. He eventually returned to the Irish countryside in 432 to preach the gospel. He was imprisoned, humiliated and criticized but he remained true to his faith carrying his beliefs to his grave.

St. Patrick is credited with chasing the snakes from Ireland and converting the Irish druids to Catholicism. Each year March 17 is set aside to honor this gentle man, and the wearing of the green (a shamrock) is in his honor. Happy St. Patrick's Day.

Come to our party!

One hundred years of newspapering deserves a special day, one reserved for showing the tricks and trades of our particular enterprise. The Press invites you to share in its centennial celebration Wednesday, March 11.

The Charlevoix County Press office at 106 S. Lake St., Boyne City, will be open all day to provide you with an opportunity to meet the staff, acquaint yourself with our advertising and news procedures and to visit our production department.

The giant birthday cake in our window is only a sampling of what we have inside. Cake, punch and coffee will be served all day. And, to make your visit more interesting, copies of some of the oldest Boyne City newspapers will be displayed.
