New Boyne zoning will confront change

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

BOYNE CITY - Change is inevitable, but newly proposed revisions in the city zoning ordinance will try to control change so the small town atmosphere is preserved, city officials say.

City residents are being alerted to the major revisions in the ordinance, which will have its first public hearing at 5 p.m. Monday, July 20, at City Hall.

The present ordinance was prepared in 1966. According to City Manager Tim Clifton, "it can't cope with today's demands." Clifton said it is typical for ordinances and land use plans to be updated after a period of time.

The changes proposed in the revised code, prepared by the planning commission, may directly affect some landholders in the city and will, of course, indirectly affect everyone. Clifton said if people want to make any changes before the ordinance is approved, they may review copies of the code at the city hall and bring their recommendations to the July 20 hearing.

"I really encourage people to attend the hearing," he said, noting that the planning commission, the city commission, and representatives from Johnson, Johnson, and Roy will be there.

The city consulted Johnson, Johnson, and Roy, an Ann Arbor planning consultant firm, last year for the city-wide land-use plan upon which the proposed ordinance is based.

Clifton described the revised ordinance as "a logical sequence of events, following the development of the land use plan."

He noted that the intent is "to keep it a small rural town. We don't want a lot of industry—don't want one thing out-balancing the other." He explained that it changes the character of a place to allow excessive growth in any one category—commercial, residential, industrial, and so on.

Part of the area, 40 acres now included in the airport, is to be zoned industrial. Clifton said the industries that would be suitable would be those that are relatively small and clean—service industries, for example, like Courter.

Larger industries, he explained, will not find the space or the facilities they need in town.

CITIES MUST CHANGE

"You can't put gates on the streets to stop increasing population....A city has to change," Clifton said, "otherwise it will atrophy and die." The idea of the zoning ordinance, he said, is to control change.

Don Toffolo, chairman of the planning commission, said, "The community is one of the few around here that has about 40 percent of its area still undeveloped."

The concern, he said, was that it develop properly for everybody's needs.

"The planning commission has been working a couple of years on ordinance revision," he said, "but we put it on hold till the Comprehensive Plan was finished."

On page 32 of the Comprehensive Plan it says, "Factors that affect where different land uses should be located include existing land use, natural features like slopes and soils, and the availability of utilities."

Toffolo said, "The zoning ordinance will protect the pattern."

One aspect of the pattern, it will be seen, is maintaining focus on the downtown as the significant business district.

To this Clifton added, "Nothing is precedent-setting. It is based on past court decisions and to what is common in similar ordinances."

One of the more recent court decisions that the ordinance takes account of is that mobile homes can be put on R-2 lots or anywhere residential. This does not obviate the usefulness of mobile home parks, however. The new code has added material on how mobile home sites or parks may be situated, Clifton said.

The new ordinance is longer, "but we've tried to make it more understandable," he said. It includes charts and diagrams for added clarity.

The biggest changes are in zoned areas and in category definitions. The state and federal governments have made new requirements that affect zoning. For example, they require flood zones to be indicated. Public lands, professional offices, mobile home parks, and planned residential zones have also been delineated.

ZONING CATEGORIES

The residential zones have been newly subdivided: R-1 is for single-family homes on land that is primarily undeveloped and unplatted though there may be houses already in the area. Properties in R-1 would be necessarily large to accommodate well and septic tank because no city water lines are present.

R-2 is for single-family homes in platted and mainly developed areas. R-3 is for single or multiple-family dwellings and may be designated in either developed or undeveloped areas.

In addition, the ordinance includes industrial zoning (I), general commercial district (GC), central business district (CBD), mobile homes park district (MH), planned residential district (PRD), professional office district (PO), and public lands (PL).

With more specific definitions, city clerk Tom Garlock said, people know specifically what actions are compatible.

For those who may be affected by redrawn zones, Clifton explained, "the zoning in itself does not in itself affect taxing."

The review and approval procedure for the ordinance will take it first to the July 20 hearing.

After the hearing, comments will be evaluated by the planning commission for one month. Then it would be in a position to recommend any changes.

It will be then brought up before two city commission meetings, possibly being adopted at the second meeting—Tuesday night, Nov. 10.

"A realistic deadline for actual enforcement," Clifton concluded, "would be January 1, 1982."

Six weeks in Israel exciting for EJ family

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

EAST JORDAN - Did it seem like a different world?

Susan Solomon, back from a six weeks' visit with relatives in Jerusalem, gave an enthusiastic "yes!" during a recent interview with The Press.

Part of the difference was to go from Michigan's cold spring weather to Israel's warm scene. And part was for the Solomons to leave their home deep in the woods to go to one of the liveliest cities in the world.

The coming and going of people in Jerusalem, still very aware of being part of the birth of the 33-year-old nation, Susan said, made for an exciting atmosphere.

Of course, there is, in addition, the awareness of the threat to Israel's existence in the military preparations of its Arab neighbors.

But Susan's interest was less in politics than in the progress of the country. She and her husband Stephen and little son Noah took numerous side trips.

To someone who may think of Israel as a stony, gray and white land Susan's answer is that Israel has forests of planted trees (not in rows, she added). It has high hills that in winter may be green from the rain or white with snow. It has the very blue waters of the Mediterranean, and even in hot, dry summertime, the deserts and the city are full of a beautiful golden light, she says.

Jerusalem was built out of stone taken from the countryside, and modern Jerusalem builders are expected to continue the tradition, so that the new blends with the old.

Susan Solomon

One of the favorite songs over there, Susan said, is called "Jerusalem, the Golden."

In the golden light shining on the mellow stone, Jerusalem, she said, was a golden city.

Even when modern necessities must be added to buildings 500, 800, 1000 years old, she said, they are made as discretely as possible so as not to destroy the ancient character of buildings and streets still in use. Old cities, Susan learned, do not have your neat waffle pattern of streets, crossing each other at right angles, and creating blocks that you can walk around.

Instead they are irrevocably built up along the first winding paths of sheep, trailing about through the humps of land.

After the shepherds' tents came the houses, and finally one twists and turns today past the two- and three-story buildings in old Jerusalem, occasionally going up or down stairs or diving into tunnels.

Definitely foot traffic only. The things that surprised Susan most, however, were the little plastic pipes that went everywhere and the flowers in traffic islands, along curbs, and abounding in every possible garden space.

Jerusalem is a city of flowers. And the little black pipe makes it possible, she said. Water is piped all the dry summer long, and the pipe has little holes that permit water to drip out slowly. Next to every hole a seed is planted, a flower grows. Most often roses.

The pipe also makes its way through what were desert lands and the landscape has sudden areas of irrigated green. Israel has made itself agriculturally self-sufficient. It even exports food—and flowers.

Of course, the Solomons visited a kibbutz. They stayed over with friends who live in one that is long-established and rather wealthy.

This one had family housing for its 500 members—small dwellings where each family can be together. But all day, while parents work at some occupation of their choice in the kibbutz the children are cared for and have their schooling.

Each kibbutz, is a self-contained community with all ownership shared. Many are agricultural. This one, Susan said, had also a small foundry.

Were there language problems? With people immigrating from every part of the world, there was immense variety in faces, clothing, and cultures, Susan said. But English seemed to be the second language.

All street signs were in three languages, Hebrew, English, and Arab. Arab citizens have full rights except for army service.

Immigrants were welcomed, Susan said, with language lessons and, especially for those from remote spots, lessons on plumbing and other modern conveniences. Immigrants stay for six months in one of the welcoming centers. And then they are helped to find a job and given a tax break.

Israel has one of the world's worst inflation rates, but it is less painful than

Crazy race

The Boyne River Raft Race keeps getting bigger and crazier every Fourth of July. This year, 37 rafts entered and several hundred people crowded the riverbanks to watch the spectacle. Racers had to contend with spectators pouring buckets of water on them and firemen spraying water at them from the Park Street Bridge, but it was all for fun. ## Boyne's anniversary celebration continues with concert, art fair BOYNE CITY - Independence Day ceremonies may have ended with a bang at the fireworks display on the Fourth of July but the celebrations continue as Boyne marks its 125th anniversary.

The Boyne City Historical Commission and Society, the Chamber of Commerce and Senior Citizen Center have sponsored events and entertainment through Saturday, July 11, ranging from bluegrass to barefooting.

On Thursday, Odds N' Ends, a bluegrass musical group, will perform at 7 p.m. at the bandshell in Veterans Memorial Park. There will be no admission. The public is invited to participate in this out-of-doors performance with foot stompin' and hand clappin'.

Saturday's line-up, also in the park, includes an art festival, musical numbers and children's theatre. Activities get underway at noon with clown face paint by Rhonda Shaler, body painting led by Pauline Archambault, easel painting, giant canvas painting by Sue Breidenstein, barefoot prints by Marsha Towne and silk screening with Vivi Woodcock and Sue Cousineau.

Children's entertainment will begin at the bandshell with Mike and Steve Hammeling playing bluegrass music. At 2 p.m. Bill Casper, the lead in Little Traverse Civic Theatre's evening production of Oliver, will sing two selections from the musical.

The Boyne City drama club will follow with skits and at 2:30 p.m. the Boyne City elementary choir will sing.

Boyne City's Challenge Program for gifted students will present their original play which is based on the recently published history of Boyne City, Settlers to Sidewalks, by Bob Morgridge at 3 p.m. at the band shell.

Boyne City's first settlers, the John Miller Family, will be depicted and the historic town clock will be celebrated with song.

Participating in the historic scenes will be: Mary Beth Archambault, Lisa Curry, Kristie Drury, Mike DeSchryver, Jon Greetis, Julie Karkosak, Joel Smith and Mindy Stadt.

The town clock and Boyne City song featured in the play were written by Mike DeSchryver, Julie Karkosak and Mary Beth Archambault.

Jon Greetis will wind up the show with a piano piece, "The Entertainer."

In the event of rain, master of ceremonies John Bogema will host the show in the park pavilion.

New owner at Boyne City marina

BOYNE CITY - Jeb McIntyre, a new resident of the Boyne City area, has purchased the former Syfert's Marina on Lake Charlevoix and has opened the marina facility with a new name and extended hours.

"We've renamed the marina McIntyre Boatworks and it will be open seven days a week from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.," said McIntyre.

McIntyre, a long time vacationer in Boyne City, recently moved to this area from Rochester. Prior to acquiring the marina he worked as a management consultant and social worker.

Of the various improvements McIntyre expects to make during the next year he will immediately direct his ef-orts toward moving the gas pump to the permanent dock.

"We want to be able to accommodate larger crafts than were serviced in the past. By moving the gas pump we'll have an improved gas and docking facility."

Joe Fortune, service manager at Syfert's for the past five years, will continue in that capacity with McIntyre's. Other employees include Ed Young, Allan Towne and retail manager Julie Roberts.

Jerusalem

ours because everything else, Susan found, is indexed to the rate automatically.

Around Jerusalem are steep hills that were terraced for farming thousands of years ago. Susan said that although the terraces are still there, they are not much farmed now.

Everywhere there are traces of the really distant past.

She said, "Everyone there is an amateur archeologist." You plow a field a little deeper and turn up an "antiquity."

One visitor, who came to Israel with a mine detector last year, thought it would be fun to try to locate some old Roman coins still buried in the countryside.

Instead of coins, however, his detector went wild over what turned out to be a life-sized bronze statue of the Emperor Hadrian.

The statue is in an Israel museum now. Nothing archeological can be taken out of the country.

Old and new mix entertainingly in Jerusalem. A TV set may be perched on a capital from an ancient Roman column. The capital-turned-table may have been bought at an Arab antiquities market. And the television may be tuned to an Arabic soap opera with subtitles in English!

Susan looked out her window at the quiet woods for a moment.

"It certainly is an exciting place—one where anyone can feel he (or she) can make a contribution and have it felt."

She said it just a little nostalgically.

Not sure why, but local man heads for Spain to run with wild bulls

G.T. Long of Horton Bay travels to Pamplona, Spain, every July to participate in a "different" kind of race.

While America was winding up its Fourth of July celebrations, Spain will be gearing up for an international festival of revelry and courage.

Horton Bay resident Greg T. Long, State Sen. Mitch Irwin's area representative is now attending the Festival of San Fermin beginning the second week of July.

The Festival of San Fermin in Pamplona, Spain, features daily bull fights and, perhaps the even more dangerous, bull runs through the streets.

The challenge of running ahead of the fighting bulls toward their final destination, the bull ring, has appealed to Long for reasons that even he cannot explain. The 1981 festival will be Long's third run with the bulls...and hopefully not his last.

Before leaving the security of Horton Bay for the frenzy of Pamplona, Long described the Festival of San Fermin for The Press and promised an update when (if?) he returns.

Pamplona - 81

In a few days I will be running down a narrow twisting street being chased by a herd of fighting Spanish bulls.

I will be in Pamplona, Spain during the Festival of San Fermin.

This unique festival which takes place every July was first brought to America's attention by Ernest Hemingway in his novel "The Sun Also Rises". Since then countless American adventurers have traveled to Pamplona to participate and observe the men who are chased by wild bulls. The festival lasts eight days and some say it's the wildest eight days on earth.

People come from every country. They come to dance, to drink, to listen to the music and have fun.

This is my third trip to Pamplona to run with the bulls. Every morning adventurous men are allowed to run in the streets in front of the bulls. In order to do this you must be a male, over the age of 18 and sober.

At exactly 8 a.m. six fighting bulls, each from a different ranch, will run a mile course through the center of town over hills and through narrow streets and sharp turns. The bulls that run in the morning fight the matadors in the bullring that same afternoon.

Six oxen lead the bulls. They are trained to know the course and their job is to keep the bulls moving in a pack. The theory being that the bulls will adhere to their natural herding instincts and follow the oxen thereby ignoring the runners.

This usually works, but can change if one of the bulls gets separated from the pack and loses its footing on the cobblestone streets.

It is then over 600 years of careful breeding for courage, strength and speed come into play. That same bull which trotted securely and peacefully in a pack turns into one of the most dangerous animals on earth, slashing out anything that moves.

The Spanish fighting bull can outrun a horse at 25 yards. A Spanish bull is as different from an American bull as a kitty cat is from a mountain lion.

Part of the course has barricades that can be used for emergencies. One barricade is for tourists to take photos and observe the run. The other is for the runners. There is approximately an eight foot space between the two barricades.

This area is patrolled by police and medical teams with stretchers. The police check potential runners to see that they meet running qualifications and they also keep the runners' barricade clear of tourists.

People get hurt daily, and occasionally someone gets killed, but never for lack of medical attention. The medical teams are skilled and efficient. However, I must admit that it is a bit unnerving when you climb through that barricade in the early morning and see those white stretchers waiting.

A runner can place himself anywhere on the course. A runner stationed towards the end of the course cannot see when the bulls have been released. Consequently a rocket is shot off to let the runners know that the corral gates have been opened.

A second rocket is shot when the bulls start running up the street. Finally a third rocket is shot when the bulls have completed the course and are safely in the bullring corrals at the end of the course.

The average run lasts four minutes. It can seem like four hours.

Supposedly the bull run started when some fair minded Spaniards decided to give the bulls a final shot at the people in the town before fighting the matadors in the afternoon.

The tradition remains strong. Most men wear a uniform which consists of a white shirt and pants, a red scarf and sash and tennis shoes. The runner carries a rolled up newspaper which is used as a "feeler."

When a runner is sprinting down the street and turns around to see where the bulls are he waves his paper in front of him to feel if there are any other runners directly in his path.

The bulls are not the only problem. A mass of runners in a narrow street, often on the verge of panic, can be just as dangerous as the bulls. They trip, fall, to have been trampled by both man and beast.

Why would anyone do such a thing? There are probably as many reasons as there are runners and I'm still trying to figure out why I run. The spirit of the festival seems to get into your blood. You feel things.

I will soon be rising at dawn after a restless sleep, put on my white shirt and pants, a red scarf and sash, tennis shoes and walk to my rented car. I'll be thinking over and over again that this is my vacation, and a guy can't get hurt on his vacation, can he?

Update

Close call

BOYNE CITY - Mark Bauer, of Eveline Township, was saved from a near drowning accident while swimming in Lake Charlevoix on Saturday, July 4. He remains in the intensive care unit at Little Traverse Hospital but is showing signs of progress. "There is some lung damage but his doctor is optimistic and hopefully he'll be able to stand up by Friday," said the 17 year old youth's father, Dr. Arnold Bauer.

Dennis Carlson, a neighbor, noticed Mark go underwater and pulled him from the lake. "At that point he had no vital signs," said Bauer. "Chris Carlson and I administered resuscitation and he was then taken to Little Traverse Hospital."

Her motion was amended twice by votes of four to three. The contention was that an unmanageable precedent would be set.

Sweet denied this, noting a very explicit contract would be drawn up in hiring Rasch's replacement.

The amended motion passed unanimously. It gave Rasch three weeks of his vacation pay and one month's severance pay which totalled close to $4000.

Art and books

BOYNE CITY - Library board member Lynn Hall described it this way—"As good as last year's—fantastic!" It's the student art show at the public library, going on this week through Monday, July 13.

"Hundreds of pictures—every kind," Hall said. "Weaving, plaques, posters, string art, clay, and stuffed paper fish hanging in the air."

The art work is from Boyne City school students from kindergarten through fifth grade, taught by Betty Adgate.

The library is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m., Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday.

Next special library event will be the used-book sale, scheduled to go with the downtown sidewalk sale, Friday and Saturday, July 17 and 18.

The library's sale will be in the library basement, and, of course, the library will be open those days. Books are still being accepted for the sale—children's books, paperbacks, antique books, reference books. "Bring them in!" says librarian Janet Waldner. And come take some out!

Developers, BVRR still negotiating

BY TRISH WRIGHT

BOYNE CITY - Steel prices are rising and that may finally make the Boyne Valley Railroad more attractive to bidders interested in salvaging the line.

But according to railroad board member Tom Workman the board still hopes to sell the BVRR to Lake Associates, condominium developers in the Boyne City and Walloon Lake area.

"We probably could realize $200,000 if we salvaged it but we've made a pretty firm commitment to Rick and Dave Smith (Lake Associates). And we're just about finished assessing the ties, steel and right-of-way," said Workman.

"Some people have been dragging their feet on getting their bids in but that may be because they know we really want to see the railroad continue as a tourist attraction and that's how the Smiths would operate it."

According to Workman, most evaluations for the sale have been completed except for a right-of-way on M-75, between the Boyne City airport and the Boyne Valley Township line, that has yet to be surveyed for tax description.

The BVRR was sold to a group of local people at an auction in 1976 and operated until 1979 as a tourist line. About 300 area residents have invested in the railroad by buying stock.

The track runs from Boyne Falls to the Boyne City waterfront area near the Smith's condominium complex, The Harborage, although the developers have no definite plans for running the train to The Harborage.

"We are still interested if we can agree on a viable and realistic price and plan. We'll be happy to work with the railroad board," said Dave Smith.

Paying Rasch

EAST JORDAN - Two special city council meetings have followed the special meeting on June 13 when Herm Rasch was given two weeks' notice on his job as East Jordan's city superintendent for reasons of personnel and public relations.

At the first special meeting Rasch asked for total sick leave and vacation leave accrual pay.

Council argued that the city didn't allow that much accrual. No particular regulations, apparently, had been spelled out when Rasch was hired.

At the second special meeting held on June 30, councilwoman Pat Sweet presented a resolution to pay Rasch what he had asked for—an amount of close to $8000—as the honorable way to settle it, she said.

She included in the resolution the council's appreciation for Rasch's work.

A step backward in E. Jordan

We think the East Jordan City Council may be over-reacting to an unpleasant experience with its former city superintendent.

It is bothersome that the council seems resolved to give Herman Rasch's successor less authority and responsibility than was given Rasch.

They even made it a point to advertise for a "superintendent of public works" rather than a "city superintendent," which was Rasch's title.

Editorial

To us, this seems to be a step backwards. The council felt it had to fire Rasch because of personality clashes, not because he over-stepped his authority in his job as superintendent. In fact, several of the council members who supported the motion to relieve him of his duties went out of their way to thank him for accomplishing a great deal for the city.

Ending Rasch's employment with the city was probably for the best. His relationship with the council had deteriorated to the point where it was best to end it. But personality clashes with one individual shouldn't be confused with the larger issue of having a strong city administrator. Just because Rasch didn't get along with the current council doesn't mean that a new person won't be able to.

Might not the message to the new superintendent be: "Do what you're told, but don't get too ambitious!"? (Ironically, Rasch's predecessor Dennis Stepke was replaced because that particular council wanted a stronger, more qualified person for the job.)

A few times in the past, we have expressed the observation that there seemed to be a leadership void at City Hall—not because the city administrators were incompetent, but because there has never really been one person "in charge."

The city superintendent, clerk-treasurer and police chief are each in charge of their own areas but they report to no one but the city council. This system can work reasonably well as long as everyone gets along with each other. But there is one who has the responsibility of looking at "the big picture" on a regular basis, of evaluating how City Hall and its various departments are working together.

And the council members can't really be expected to provide this daily management function. They have other full-time jobs to worry about, and they are paid almost nothing for looking out for the city. Yet the council continues to cling to its power. Special council meetings are called to discuss things like swimming lesson fees.

Other more important items like a consistent personnel policy for employees seem to fall through the cracks—until a problem arises. (Rasch himself did not know there was a policy on accumulating vacation pay, and two special meetings had to be held to iron out this matter at a cost of nearly $4,000. Both sides went away unhappy.)

We realize the city council has made a conscious decision that it wants a strong council form of government, and conversely, we are advocating the naming of a city manager. But in light of recent events, we think it would be wise to take a hard look at the situation and reconsider the decision to give the new superintendent less authority than Rasch was given.

The thinking might be that the council does not want a high paid hot-shot outsider coming in to run their city. In that case, why not consider giving Clerk-Treasurer Fern Morris more responsibility (and if it works out, a new title and more money)? She has shown herself to be a good administrator, able to get along with lots of personalities on lots of city councils, and she has continually tried to improve herself through further education.

Barely recovered from the 4th

Thoughts while recovering from eating too much Rotary Club chicken amid the 4th's ear-thrilling bang-bangs:

It was so hot the night before the 4th that I slept with nothing on. I was really embarrassed the next morning when a woman rapped on the door at eight o'clock. I was barely out of bed.

When Boyne City's latest history book was coming off the press a man said he was eagerly looking ahead to the good old days.

When some older men speak of the good old days I have to laugh, for I know the truth. They weren't good, nor old—and they aren't talking about days but nights.

A while ago I forgot what I was doing and wrote something about Boyne City's 125th year history. Things were so hectic in getting out the paper's special historic edition they made a mistake and published my article. One reader said I wouldn't recognize the truth if it were waving a red flag in front of me. I have a certain dislike for those who put a finger on the seat of my problem.

East Jordan's Fourth of July parade marshal George Secord was asked by a Press reporter what his greatest accomplishment was since his retirement. George's prompt reply was, "Staying sober." That fouled up my funny-bone so much I had to laugh. And it reminded me of some retired men I know who have remained sober and become more of a nuisance than ever.

At our Boyne City High School class reunion at the Holiday Inn the night before the 4th, our table was discussing the economic difference between now and then. One man said things had finally gotten around to where he could have it either way. He can now stay home and turn up the thermostat in winter or go to Florida—same price.

Another was saying how his folks used to think that it was something of a sin for a man to have so much money he couldn't spend it all. Today it's a miracle.

Weekend big city visitors thought we had it made out here in the quiet boondocks. I told them that there's something that goes to my head living here in the summertime—ragweed.

I was talking to my wife the other day. You know how things are since the baseball strike.

Bring back the good old days

Just about every town has a historical society whose members get together for the purpose of discussing the good old days. Yellowed scraps of newspaper are the bylaws for the club and are revered for the memories they bring to mind.

A historical society is one of the least visible organizations in a community and yet it is one of the most vital. It perpetuates the lessons of our school days' history classes. Learning about the past is a step toward appreciating the present.

The Boyne City Historical Society has offered us a slice of the past during this historic celebration week that is authentic and creative.

Beard growing contests, costume contests, barbershop music and a children's theatre have all been organized by this civic minded group.

Spectators and participants in the events have been plenty. Whether you've grown a beard, sewn a bonnet or worn a button, the 125th Anniversary of Boyne City's founding will be memorable.

Many of those responsible for the success of the 125th were instrumental in creating the much celebrated centennial.

Loton Willson was chairman of the centennial 25 years ago and although he doesn't remember if the festivities were profitable he says he does remember having a lot of fun. Willson saved the 25-year-old souvenir coins and shared them with celebrants this year.

William Underhill, not only saved his whiskers for a quarter of a century but he wore the same "dress up" clothes in this year's July 4th parade that he donned in 1956.

Underhill deserves special mention for keeping The Press posted on all of the society's plans (and, incidentally, taking the time to identify the beardless lawbreaker pictured on last week's front page as Roy "Cannonball" Reinhardt of East Jordan.)

The Boyne City reared members of the Historical Society weren't alone in their enthusiasm. Gail Toffolo and Mary Greetis apparently delight in Boyne City memorabilia. Their efforts in operating the hospitality center, art festival and entertainment during anniversary week make them prized candidates for the sesquicentennial 25 years from now.

There are other members of the society whose input was invaluable. Boyne City will be indebted to their research, diligence and fond memories.

'I meant to do my work today..'

In the summertime you are supposed to get so much done—That's what you told yourself last winter.

There was the garden, and the deck you were going to build. And some painting. And you were going to bury the gas line and cut a supply of firewood.

And there you sit on the doorsteps. I wonder why they used to call a doorstep a stoop.

Did they used to have to stoop in order to go through a low doorway? Probably stoop was just some Viking pronunciation that got changed to "step."

In my case, though, it relates more closely to "stupor." I sit here in a lovely summer stupor. Slightly drunk with appreciation.

I just sit here watching while the wind changes the light in the woods so that it appears there is a dream social going on among the maples. I have a sense of their changing places as the light moves. I hear their ever-so-gracious conversations as the wind wanders hushing among the tree tops.

The orchestra today is vireo, bunting, oriole, and ovenbird.

As usual, the birds give each other turns to sing solo.

Butterflies, like little scraps of light, seem as appreciative as I do, attention wandering from one beautiful thing to another.

There are innumerable things to admire. The new needles on the white pine, planted last year; the natural garden of the meadow, so much better than my own garden because the meadow always has something in bloom, and the flowers are always so tastefully grouped, always so healthy.

The slender plant, tragopogon pratensis, known as goat's beard (one of those unbecoming names for beautiful wildflowers is a wild flower that grows both in the field and in my garden since it not only is a pretty flower, it is a pretty plant also, and has the good manners not to overwhelm my tame flowers.

When tragopogon goes to seed, it is like a super dandelion. It makes a round head of soft down bigger than your fist. As seeds loosen from the core, they sail on their down-parachutes clear over to the next field.

I've seen the children, whooping and squealing, running after them. They really know how to appreciate.

Sometimes people take the time to wonder which is better, to live as an appreciator or as a doer, perhaps being appreciated by others.

We have the critics and we also have the musicians they critique. We have the discriminating car buyers and also the manufacturers of cars.

So sometimes, so that I won't feel so disgracefully lazy, I tell myself appreciating is doing something, in a way, I'm Nature's critic.

After all, that's why we live here in northern Michigan—it is so appreciable. What good would it be to live here and not appreciate (both meanings included)!

Bolled down, to live is to appreciate. In vain, I tell this to my workaholic friends. They seem to believe the alternative to work is merely some frivolous amusement or expensive travel, or being bored.

Of course, getting educated is good for deeper appreciation. It does help.

But then I think of the children, chasing the flying tragopogon seeds.

WHOLESALE FORGER CATCHES MANY.

He Narrowly Escaped Capture But Makes Good His Disappearance.

Boyne City has had a Napoleon of finance here this week who has been doing a wholesale business in passing forged checks. He got the "daugh", (sic) too, and got it easy until he ran up against a snag, but even then he skipped the tra-la-loo and left many merchants to mourn his dealings in frenzied finance. He worked his little game on all business places alike and did not confine his operation to any class of business...The next we hear of him is in Frank Kaden's store and asks to be shown a pair of pants. After selecting a pair he tenders a check for $24. Mr. Kaden scrutinized the check very carefully and said that was not Tim Heaton's signature. The stranger informs Mr. Kaden that Mr. Geo. Heaton had signed the check, as he, the father, was keeping books and attending to Tim's office business. Knowing this to be partly true the check was cashed.

Next he enters the meat market of A. Ingersoll and asks for some beef and gives in payment a check for $7 signed by T. A. Heaton. He got the meet (sic) and the balance of the $7 in money and goes to the alley back of the Odd Fellows Temple, where he threw the meat away.

Next he went into J.T. Boylan's hardware, and this came very near being his undoing, and may yet lead to his capture...When he went into the Boylan hardware store he had the shoes he had got at Marks' store, and when he made his hasty exit he didn't stop to take the shoes with him.

The tug-o-war was a big crowd-pleaser in Boyne City. Here, the Boyne City Fire Department team gets slowly dragged into the mud by the Police Department.

Tuggers thrill crowds

BOYNE CITY - The tug-of-war event on Saturday, July 4, was a struggle for might as seven teams tried to pull their opposition over a mud pit. Teams were made up of two men, two women and another member of either sex.

The Boyne City police department pulled victoriously against the city fire department. The United Methodist Church proved stronger than the First Presbyterian Church and the Boyne Country Party Store beat Ace Hardware. Northwestern State Bank lost to the Country Star as did the Boyne River Inn to T.J.'s Tannery Saloon.

Another Northwestern State Bank team lost to Boyne Auto Supply. And City Hall was the victor against The Charlevoix County Press, proving once again that "you can't fight City Hall."

one company's policies to offer you.

But your independent Auto-Owner's agent represents several companies. So if one's insurance isn't right in price or coverage, he'll tell you. He knows another one of his companies is.

Mock wedding on Brides Day at Grandvue

A mock wedding delighted residents and guests in the morning, with Kim Thorman as groom, Kathy Slack as bride, Nancy Umlor as maid of honor and Norm Conklin as best man.

Bride's gowns were modeled by staff members and friends and ranged from the early wedding veil of Mabel Addis, a patient, in 1925 to the spring wedding gown worn by Lynn Deming Andrick in 1981. Thirty-one gowns in all were on display.

Marian Sutliff and Helen Deming acted as commentators for the fashion show, and several guests viewed the gowns along with the patients.

Rotarians have new officers

EAST JORDAN - Rotary Club is off on its new year following the annual elections dinner held recently at the East Jordan Snowmobilers' Club.

The new president is Charles Mason; vice-president, Fred Malpass; treasurer, Cal Gotts; and secretary, Fred Edwards.

The club just conducted one of its two annual fund-raising events—the Fourth of July Barbecue. The other is the Christmas citrus fruits sale.

Outgoing president Don Yenni reported that the total efforts of the club this past year have culminated in a long list of awards, one of which was the $1000 to the Rotary Foundation for graduate exchange students all over the world, to promote international understanding.

Yenni said the 1500 students are "very, very carefully selected."

In addition, the club contributed $700 towards buying the library a microfiche reader. Another $800 went to a loan to Rick Nelson for a 4H steer project.

Other community projects received help totalling $4,000. Among those benefitted were the boxing club, the high school ski club, Little League, Christmas and Halloween parties, and campers going to Camp Daggett, including 10 handicapped children.

Rotary also contributes to the leprosy eradication effort supported by clubs internationally.

Yenni was also enthusiastic about their annual father and son banquet, attended this past year by 240 people.

Rotarians meet every Tuesday at 12:15 p.m. at the Presbyterian Church.

Summer Romance

Above: A Lake Michigan beach provides the perfect setting for Michelle Lowe of Warren and Dennis Chapman from Potoskey to start a new romance.

Right: Watson Price and Paula Avery think picnicking is a perfect way to spend a sunny afternoon.

Walking along the beach in the moonlight, sailing at sunset, picnicking on Avalanche Mountain, sunbathing at Elm Pointe, moonbathing at Deer Lake, snuggling by a fire at Bell's Bay—Romance is everywhere in Charlevoix County.

Romantic music can be found in several places, depending on what your definition of what romantic is. For romantic folk ballads, stop into Ryan's Public House in Boyne City around midnight as the place begins to mellow. Or see Clockwork Monday night downstairs in the Weathervane's Gristmill in Charlevoix.

Country and western fans should try the Walmill in Boyne City or the Tucker Inn near East Jordan.

If rock music is what turns you on, the Mogul Inn in Boyne City or the Flight Deck in Charlevoix are good places to try.

Dance to a versatile band at the Weathervane or to piano music at the Grey Gables in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix County even has its own "Loveboat," the Bay Queen, which is located in Charlevoix. Romantic dinners and dancing while viewing moonlit scenery around Lake Charlevoix is what the Bay Queen specializes in.

This week's Fun & Sun is devoted to romance in Charlevoix County. We've asked people what their favorite romantic places and things to do are. Where are good places to have an inexpensive romantic date?

While what is romantic to one person is not necessarily romantic to another person, everyone seemed to agree that the natural beauty of Charlevoix County makes the perfect setting for a summer romance.

Romance—different to different people

Moonlight walks, poetry books, wine, flowers and even bubbles are some of the responses Charlevoix County residents and visitors give when asked to tell what romance brings to mind.

"Romance is natural, and the natural beauty of this area is very romantic to me," said Doris Huckle of East Jordan. "Think of the water in the area and the beautiful hills in the Jordan Valley."

Both she and Bonnie Thomas of East Jordan agreed. Viewing Lake Charlevoix at sunset or in the moonlight is definitely very romantic.

Joni Zuchiatti of Boyne City felt that going away alone with her husband canoeing or camping was a very romantic thing to do.

Soaking up the sun rays on Walloon Lake Beach is what Linda Robinson and Jeff Hoffman of Petoskey thought was romantic.

Pauls Avery of Boyne City said local hot spots for high school students in Boyne City are Little Lena's Pizza, the Boyne Theatre, or the beach when they are on a date.

A romantic dinner for two? Preferred places ranged from seafood in the Pinter Room at the Pier, to candlelight and wine at home, or picnics in the John Seiler Park behind the bank in East Jordan.

Continuing her thoughts of water and moonlight, Bonnie Thomas thought the Bay Queen, Charlevoix's new dinner ship, would be a very romantic place to have dinner.

Romantic music meant different things to different people. Glenn Miller's "Moonlight Serenade" brings romantic thoughts to Doris Huckle; while Linda Robinson likes the Beatles.

Joni Zuchiatti prefers piano instrumentals and Bonnie Thomas definitely likes romantic songs that are tear-jerkers. Jeff Hoffman likes Bob Seger.

What gifts do people think are romantic? Most people preferred to be anonymous answering this question. Jewelry, poetry books, prose, handmade gifts, hand-picked posties, roses, wine, negligees and bubble bath were all considered romantic gifts.

Linda Robinson and Jeff Hoffman think basking in the sun on Walloon Lake Beach is a romantic way to spend an afternoon.

Romantic places to go

Want to have a romantic date, but you don't want to spend a lot of money? Here are some suggestions:

1. Have Edward's IGA in Charlevoix or JD and Company in Petoskey pack you a picnic basket. Take it to listen to one of the free concerts in the park offered at noon on Thursdays in Charlevoix or Fridays in Petoskey.
2. Eat Chinese food at the Depot Restaurant in Boyne City for only $5 per person on Wednesday and Thursday nights. Then stop at Rainy Day Lady for an ice cream cone for dessert.
3. Rent a canoe and paddle down the beautiful Jordan River.
4. If you have a sailboat, sail, or take the Ironon Ferry to the Landings on M-66 between East Jordan and Charlevoix, where you can get drinks and Mexican food at reasonable prices.

5. Hike in the Jordan Valley by Deadman's Hill. The view is spectacular. The trail is three miles long and located off of 131, south of Boyne Falls.
6. Spend an afternoon at Norwood Beach off U.S. 31, south of Charlevoix.
7. Build a campfire and spend a night camping at beautiful Bell's Bay campground on U.S. 31, south of Charlevoix. You can roast marshmallows and watch the sun set over Lake Michigan.
8. Feed the swans in East Jordan's

Tourist Park then go to Elm Pointe for a sunset swim.

9. Rent a paddleboat at Syfert's Marina in Boyne City or Swan Valley Marina in East Jordan and paddle around Lake Charlevoix soaking up the sunlight.

10. Go rollerskating at Water Wonderland in Petoskey. Saturday evenings there is a late session open from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. This gives grownups a chance to skate without the sixth graders skating circles around them.

11. Ride the midnight cruise on the Bay Queen on Saturday nights, leaving Charlevoix at 11 p.m. The cost is $5 per person plus drinks. There's dancing in the moonlight until 2 a.m.

Take your boat to the Landings between East Jordan and Charlevoix for Mexican food.

Good food on the Bay Queen

Picture yourself on board ship, the breeze blowing in your hair. The view of the shoreline is fantastic. He turns to you and says, "Darling you're getting ready to serve dinner." Romantic right? Right.

To each of us the words of love are different. In my family when someone says "Dinner is served" they are playing our song.

On board the Bay Queen, one of the newest of area restaurants and the only one on a ship, the atmosphere is definitely romantic—and fun. All the staff is "spit and polish" clean and the boat itself is furnished quite nicely.

But what about the food? That too is excellent. We (my husband, myself and some visiting friends) decided to try the luncheon cruise first. When you know in advance that the price is going to be $19.95 per person for the Monday through Thursday dinner cruise and $25 on Friday and Saturday, you want to taste test it first at lunch when prices are only $9.95.

Well, how many places do you know that where $9.95 you can get your choice of assorted sandwiches, pepper steak (it was really good,) a very nice salad bar which included pickled mushrooms, potato salad, tossed salad,

Dining Delights

By Kathy Johnson

Rigatoni, Swedish meatballs, pepper steak, ham with fruit sauce, chicken prepared a variety of ways, stuffed sole, seafood St. Jacques, and whitefish.

Each dinner meal will include five entrees to choose from, an all-you-can-eat shrimp cocktail, salad bar, a choice of two different hot potatoes, and a choice of two hot vegetables. Lee explained that he plans to have a poultry, pork, beef, and seafood item on all dinner meals.

French cut green beans, and so on—plus a very nice style show and an absolutely beautiful view of the shoreline in Round Lake and the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix?

"You can't beat this," said my friends. And you can't. The food is excellent, the wines (which are extra) are nice, the view, the service, the entire ambience is one complete lovely package.

Chef Rock J. Lee has spent 14 years preparing himself for the Bay Queen, with experience at Hilton Shanty Creek in Bellaire, Pinestead Reef in Traverse City, Crystal City in Washington, D.C., and Harley of Lansing. Eight of those 14 years were spent in his mother's kitchen where Rock worked with his mother and shared her expertise. At the ripe old age of 21 Rock J. Lee is more than competent.

One might expect the Bay Queen's food to be secondary, not outstanding. But reality is far different. And the selection. Lee uses all original recipes and he plans on serving a variety of entrees which will include items like

All meals are prepared at the Sea Hawk Delicatessen and then kept just the right temperature and taken to the Bay Queen. Everything comes out hot and fresh tasting.

If there is a weak link in the Bay Queen meal it is the dessert. Soft-serve ice cream with a variety of toppings is all that is available. After a fine meal like Lee prepares it is real shame to top it off with just soft-serve ice cream.

Evening passengers are also treated to dancing with a live orchestra. There aren't many places you can get as much pleasure as on one of the Bay Queen cruises.

Just try the luncheon cruise and you'll agree that lunch is just for openers. With fine food and the nice clean service typified by our trip on the Bay Queen it should be a busy season. For reservations call 547-9032 or (toll-free, long distance) 1-800-632-5550.

There's dinner and dancing aboard the Bay Queen in Charlevoix seven days a week.

Spend a romantic evening dancing on the Bay Queen

From the nautical park created by potted gardenias, and slatted benches where people wait to get on the Bay Queen, to the top deck which provides either a lighted dance floor or a secluded area in which to drink, watch the stars and have a cozy tete a tete, the Bay Queen is the epitome of what a romantic evening should be.

The captain and his smartly dressed, handsome college crew greet the passengers as they board. The moment they are seated, a waiter offers them drinks.

Floral arrangements are on the tables and in the serving area. Tables are arranged to accommodate larger groups of eight or 10 or more intimate groups of two or four.

Couples on board are in the mood for a relaxing, romantic evening on the water where they can't be disturbed by telephones or doorbells.

They are not disappointed. The Bay Queen has been gaining in popularity since its maiden voyage on June 10 according to Ann Henricksen, publicity director for the Bay Queen.

"We have been very busy with out-of-town people from Okemos, Lansing, Ann Arbor, and so on. This is also where we have been concentrating our advertising," she said.

Ms. Henricksen felt that the rainy weather in June had hurt the cruise somewhat. She said, "On a sunny day, we have a lot of walk-on traffic."

She hoped that local people would support the Bay Queen also. "We want it to be a friendly atmosphere, so people will return."

"The Bay Queen is certainly romantic!" Ms. Henricksen said emphatically. "Out on the open deck with a glass of wine in my hand, I find it very peaceful."

On one cruise, the Bay Queen had a first anniversary couple, a second anniversary couple and a honeymoon couple, so other people think the Bay Queen is romantic also. She has even been chartered for a wedding in August.

Entertainment on the Bay Queen will be changing every couple of weeks. "On Friday and Saturday nights, we try to keep dance music for the entertainment," Henricksen said. "But I think harp music, would be perfect (and romantic) for Sunday brunch."

Henricksen tries to schedule music more for listening than dancing for the Sunday and early week cruises. She's thinking of contacting local musicians like Sean Ryan, and even Interlochen for musical entertainment.

"It's a unique experience," Henricksen said. "Anyone can go out to dinner, or out for a drink, but how many times can you do it on a cruise ship. People really do associate it with the 'Loveboat.'"

On board, the passengers make frequent remarks like, "This is the Loveboat, isn't it? Are you Julie? That must be Gopher, over there." They are in the mood for a romantic evening.

As the band starts to play, the couples trickle out to the dance floor from which they can look out on the moon, stars and water.

Some of the passengers have been at the Flight Deck or the Weathervane in Charlevoix, waiting for the 11:30 p.m. departure of the Bay Queen.

The midnight cruise seemed to them like a perfect way to end a Saturday night in Charlevoix.

Kelly Warner and Marsha Sell enjoy the moonlight and a drink on the deck of the Bay Queen.

Richard and Leslie Ferguson of Petoskey dance to the sound of the Dan McCormick Band on the Bay Queen.

Island is getting busier

BY DAVID GLADISH

The older we get, the busier we feel. I think one reason for this is that as you grow older the time gets going so much faster.

But on Beaver Island, at least if you are there on vacation, time seems to stand still. You might arrive on a crowded ferry boat, but before you've had two drinks at the bar and collected your automobile, you're hard put to find more than a dozen of the other passengers. They've disappeared.

They've been absorbed like a bucket of water in the sand, and the dock looks spacious, with only three or four people and a forklift unloading pallets of cement or somebody's furniture. The island seems quiet, and its—for the visitor.

For the resident it's the other way around. The vacationers keep islanders busy. That drink at the bar while you were waiting for your car to come off the boat was partly what kept somebody busy that day. So was that car—and the boat ride itself, for that matter. The bike you rent, the groceries you buy, the lot you look at, and the home you build on it—it's all work for island families.

And, like you and me, Beaver Island seems to get busier all the time.

There was a period when the vital industries of logging and fishing just petered out, and the population shrank from a thousand to two hundred.

Farms gave up, hay rakes and tractors sat rusting, with raspberry canes and little popples poking through their tie rods and tongues. Homes were abandoned, and roofs gradually caved in at the center like a shoe box somebody stepped on.

Ten years ago this began to change. A little fishing has come back. A little logging has come back. The resources had a rest and are stretching and yawning awake.

But most of all, construction came back. More and more people who perhaps came over to see the quaintness of an island that was frozen in the relics of Grandfather's day and slipping back into wilderness, stayed to enjoy the quiet.

And the more the people began coming to build resort homes, the more there were jobs for residents, who then could afford to build homes, too.

The island is beginning to prosper, but it is an interesting epitome of what happened throughout Michigan's North. Its lingering past—the crumbling log houses of old farmsteads, the ancient foundations of abandoned settlements, the iron cage of the island jail—treads on the heels of a present that got off to a delayed start.

Now there are 200 homes on the island, some in use seasonally, some all year, and over three hundred people are permanent residents.

The island is getting busier, and its time is going faster, if you live here. If you only visit, you'll find all you could want of time.
