McGeorge to fill in for BCHS principal

BOYNE CITY - Biology teacher John McGeorge has been chosen to fill in for high school principal Rick Casper during the coming school year.

The school board hired McGeorge for $27,500 on a one-year contract Tuesday, a week after granting Casper a year's sabbatical to return to college. Casper will be finishing his doctorate degree in educational administration at Michigan State University.

School Supt. Rich Kelly said McGeorge was chosen to fill in for Casper because "students respect him, he has good discipline in his classroom, and he has a good rapport with the teaching staff."

McGeorge, 48, is a native of Boyne City and graduated from high school here in 1950.

He attended Spring Arbor Junior College for two years and went on to earn his bachelor's degree in biology from Central Michigan University in 1959.

After teaching in Harbor Springs for one year, McGeorge joined the Boyne City faculty in 1960 and has been here ever since.

In addition to teaching, he has coached junior varsity basketball and football nearly every year. For three years beginning in 1969, McGeorge was varsity basketball coach.

He and his wife Carol have three children: Mary Jo, a freshman at CMU; John, a high school sophomore; and Dan, an eighth grader. McGeorge's mother, Pauline Laisure, still lives in the area.

McGeorge said he will give up his JV coaching positions this year, although no replacements have been named.

Taking over his biology classes will be Don Lockman, a part-time teacher who will have his schedule increased to full-time.

New EJ football coach has winning tradition

EAST JORDAN - Gary "Buck" Cihak, who has worked his way up through the coaching ranks during the past eight years, was named varsity football coach by the school board Tuesday.

Cihak is a personnel and insurance administrator at the East Jordan Iron Works. He replaces Frank Holes as coach. Holes resigned a week ago to accept a position at Birch Run.

Cihak knows it won't be easy following in the footsteps of Holes, who won three conference titles and compiled a 24-2 record in three years.

But Cihak has been a successful coach too. He had a chance to watch Holes closely while serving as one of his two assistant coaches for the past two years.

Before that, Cihak coached the junior varsity football for three years, and middle school for three years. As JV coach, Cihak lost only one game in his last two seasons. He got the JV's started on the first half of a four-season victory streak that is still going after 29 games.

As might be expected, he won't tamper with success. Like Holes, Cihak expects to stress fundamentals, hard work and discipline.

"We'll keep the same offense that

Buck Cihak

Frank started here. It's the one that has paid off, and there's no sense in changing, other than to make adjustments for the personnel we have," he said.

East Jordan grid fans can expect another shot at a championship season this fall, mainly on the strength of their running backs.

Standouts Steve Graham, Bill Spence and Tom Peters were all starters on last year's team, but they will be the only returning starters this year, Cihak notes.

"We'll have an all new line and a new quarterback this year, so there will be a lot of open jobs when practice starts Monday." At first, practices will be held twice daily at 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

The football season starts Sept. 11 with a game at Roscommon. The first home game will be Sept. 18 against Houghton Lake.

Besides a lot of untested players, Cihak will have an all new coaching staff working with him. Assistant varsity coach will be Alan Peterson, 23, a former all-conference guard for the Red Devils.

Bob Rebec and Glenn Mayhew will be coaching the junior varsity. Both have coached at the middle school level.

Although the "coaching team" is new, the four new coaches all know each other well, because they work together at the Iron Works.

Cihak, 40, has lived all his life in East Jordan. He was a football letterman for four years in high school, playing center and linebacker.

The circus!

Cihak heads boosters, too

EAST JORDAN - Being a coach and a sports booster isn't easy in times of economic hardship—but Buck Cihak will be doing both jobs at the same time this fall.

The newly named varsity football coach has been president of the East Jordan Sports Boosters for the past year, and he intends to keep both positions this year.

The sports booster job is a tough one, especially when the local boosters have been bearing the entire financial burden of school sports programs since last December.

East Jordan is one of a growing number of school districts which have been forced to drop sports funding because voters haven't approved tax rate increases.

With an athletic department budget of $30,000 to $35,000, that means the boosters will have to raise about $9,000 over and above gate receipts this school year to finance the sports programs.

That money will be raised in a number of ways, including concession sales, donations, booster club memberships, and Glen's Market slips.

A new feature this year will be a sports participation fee, which will be, for example, $18 for football players and $30 for girls basketball players.

More money will be saved by having volunteers doing things such as taking tickets at games.

This type of thing can really get to be a family affair for a coach like Cihak.

He, his wife Barb, and son Mike spent last Saturday cleaning and painting the football lockerroom at Boswell Field. Cihak intends to make sure his players keep the place clean throughout the season, eliminating the need for paying a janitor.

His father, Spin Cihak, and a group of retired friends have volunteered their services for maintaining the football field through the upcoming season. There are dozens of people who will be doing those types of jobs to keep sports afloat during the coming year.

Eveline condo developer vows lawsuit

Monday's two to one vote in Eveline Township against rezoning for condominiums overturns the township board's vote to approve earlier this year.

It also signals a lawsuit against the township by developer Art Seaborne of Remax Properties, Inc. Seaborne's project of 72 condominiums was to be the first on Lake Charlevoix outside of any city limits.

Residents in the Hemingway Pointe area objected to starting a precedent for multi-family housing on the lake, preferring single-family homes with a 100 feet minimum on lot width.

Seaborne's standpoint is that a Michigan Supreme Court decision prevents any "exclusionary zoning." The township then, according to Seaborne, has to allow the R-3 zoning he requires.

"The vote," he contended, "was legal, but unfortunately the results were illegal."

Tuesday night the Eveline Township Board held its regular monthly meeting. Supervisor Dave Willson, noting that Seaborne had said he would sue if the vote went against him, said, "The people have spoken, and I have to represent those people."

"But," he added, "I can't see paying money to put up a fight in court."

Meantime Seaborne is putting up 12 single-family, detached condominiums set about 100 feet back from the shore. He says, however, he reserves "the right to make changes in the development to accommodate market conditions."

"I have no reservations," he said, on the outcome of the court case.

Township zoning administrator Hilderbrant calls it something of a test for the state.

Seaborne had planned his 130 acres with a wide green belt behind the condos. Only 10 percent of the land would be used for buildings, he said. But this and the prospect of maybe $100,000 in yearly taxes were not enough to persuade the 236 out of about 700 landowners in the township.

"It's a funny situation," said Dave Willson. "I just don't know what we'll do."

EJ needs board member

EAST JORDAN - There's an opening if you're interested in serving on the East Jordan Board of Education.

Board member Dan Nachazel has resigned from the board, other members learned Tuesday. Now the board must appoint someone to serve until the June, 1982 school election.

Interested persons should apply by writing a letter to Board President Mary Jason.

BC has landfill deadline

BOYNE CITY - Sept. 1 is the deadline for Boyne City's sanitary landfill:

According to an order received from the State Department of Natural Resources, dated July 29, the city must then cease operations at the landfill.

The city commission agreed Tuesday that City Manager Tim Clifton should reply to the letter. No further commitments were offered. The landfill will continue operations, as things stand.

Commissioner Martin Paul's suggestion that the city take water samples from wells adjacent to the landfill for analysis, was approved by the commission.

No federal aid; Lunch prices go up

BOYNE CITY - With federal reimbursement withdrawn Boyne City schools will no longer be able to offer free milk to hardship cases on the hot lunch program, and the subsidized hot lunch program itself was reduced.

With federal reimbursement going from 16.5 cents to 10.5 cents per student this year, and with the lunch program in the red by $2,000 last year, Superintendent Rich Kelly asked the school board at its meeting Tuesday night to approve higher lunch charges.

Elementary school lunches will cost students 75 cents, middle school and high school lunches will cost 90 cents, adult—$1.40, and the reduced lunch price will be 40 cents. Milk for everyone will be 15 cents. The cost to the school now averages 12.8 cents.

School will start Wednesday, Sept. 9 with teacher orientation on the 8th.

In a surprise announcement Kelly explained that the school will sell 48,000 gallons of fuel oil that will be pumped back out of storage at the Morgan-Shaw school building, where it has remained since the school closed in 1947.

A price of 68 cents per gallon was obtained for the fuel oil.

The requests of two teachers for child care leave for the first marking period were denied by the board on a 3-4 vote on the grounds that frequent teacher changes were unsound educationally. The board granted Nancy Belford and Christina Rice semester leaves instead.

Now that Boyne City schools are no longer on state aid, tuition for students from out of the district must be entirely assumed by the parents of those children, the board decided.

This means a per capita cost of $1,800, up from about $400, for students from grades 1-12. Kindergarten will be $900. Special education students are figured on a cost-sharing basis.

EJ seeks administrator by Sept. 15

EAST JORDAN - With the departure of Frank Holes making a triple vacancy in the high school staff, Supt. Tom Rossler is looking for both an athletic director and community education director to take his place. Holes was also the high school football coach, but Buck Cibak was appointed to that position Tuesday.

Rossler said the athletic director chores would be handled temporarily by the administration. He hopes to fill out the staffing by Sept. 15 in some combination of the athletic director and community education director roles. The positions may be combined or split, depending on qualifications of the applicants.

Upon the recommendation by the street department through the city manager, the city annually purchases manufactured gravel for maintenance of shoulders and gravel roads throughout the city. Two bids were received for 500 yards:

Valley Excavating, Boyne Falls, $7/yd.

Ben Organek, Boyne Falls, $6/yd, minimum purchase, 3,000 yards.

The city administration recommends the purchase of 500 yards of manufactured gravel from Valley Excavating in the total amount of $3,500 to be spread among the applicable account codes within the major and local streets and requests authorization from the city commission to purchase same.

Moved by Behling, supported by Jessup, to grant permission for this purchase.

Roll call: All ayes. Motion carried.

Two estimates were received from firms to furnish the fire department with a deluge or monitor nozzle as follows:

West Shore Services, Inc., Alledale, MI, $1,284.00.

McCaleb, Inc., Muskegon Heights, MI, $1,309.46.

It is the recommendation of the city administration that the low bid by West Shore Services, Inc. in the amount of $1,284 be accepted and the city commission authorize the city manager to make this purchase. Funds were budgeted in Fiscal Year 1981/1982 Budget—Account Code 101-336-975.01—Capital Outlay—in the fire department.

Moved by Jessup, supported by Behling, to authorize City Manager Clifton to make this purchase.

Mr. Phil Armstrong, representing Great Lakes Energy Systems, was in attendance at the meeting to discuss in detail the Boyne City Wind Site Assessment Study. Great Lakes Energy Systems was retained by the City of Boyne City approximately one year ago to prepare a five-year Alternative Energy Technology Study of the City Hall and other city facilities. Among the recommendations was the installation of a wind turbine to provide electrical power to various city facilities. Subsequently, the city commission authorized Great Lakes Energy Systems to prepare a detailed Wind Site Assessment Study for the City of Boyne City.

The report basically concentrated on the erection of a 25 KW wind turbine at the summit of Avalanche Mountain Preserve to provide approximately 30 percent of the electrical needs of the Boyne City Water Department. Mr. Armstrong noted that federal financial assistance would not be forthcoming to assist in financing the project due to cuts proposed by President Reagan in the area of alternative energy technologies.

Discussion ensued with the city commission concerning costs and operation and maintenance of a wind turbine.

The city commission instructed the city manager to continue working with Great Lakes Energy Systems in reviewing wind turbine systems and their adaptation for use by the City of Boyne City.

City Manager Clifton noted that this item scheduled for discussion on the agenda was not in completed form for review by the city commission. Although the city attorney, and the city manager have met and reached general agreement concerning a schedule of evaluation criterion, the details of the report are still in the process of being compiled and formulated and verified. Consequently, the city commission agreed that the item be tabled until such time as the report is forwarded to the city commission by the city administration.

With the use of visual aids, i.e., graphs and maps, City Manager Clifton outlined for the city commission the major and local street system as it exists within the corporate limits of the City of Boyne City. Details were provided concerning the miles of city streets, funding of the street system, a schedule of services provided to the street system and comparison of the city street system with surrounding municipalities. The final portion of the presentation entailed discussion of the types and adequacy of the streets within the Boyne City system.

The city commission instructed the city manager to proceed with the classification of the street system and to report to the city commission at a later date when all of the comparative relative data has been acquired.

The city manager transmitted the Monthly Financial Report for the month ending June 30, 1981 and entertained questions from the city commission. The report was ordered filed by the city commission.

Moved by Moody, supported by Paul, that the meeting be adjourned at 9:30 p.m.

Harold Johnson and his grandson Shawn Bailey look over Harold's garden full of award-winning gladiolus.

Boyne City retiree grows award-winning gladiolus

BY GERI SANTEK

BOYNE CITY - For every one of us who has ever coaxed a flower out of the ground, there is a Harold Johnson, gladiolus gardener extraordinaire.

The retired school teacher calls it a hobby but it is an endeavor that is bringing him awards and acknowledgement from gladiolus growers around the country.

Johnson and his wife Priscilla have lived in their Lake Shore Drive home here since 1976. He retired here after teaching industrial education for 38 years, mostly at Midland High School.

Johnson has been honored twice with the All-American gladiolus award presented by All-America Gladiolus Selection, Inc., a branch of the North American Gladiolus Council.

"Majorette", his delicate orange hybrid, was the 1981 selection. His latest winner is a purple glad named "Funny Face" which will be introduced in 1982.

The specially selected All-America hybrids are purchased from the winners and then raised professionally until the growers have several hundred thousand bulbs. The bulbs are then advertised in catalogs put together by commercial gladiolus growers.

For his efforts Johnson receives royalties on each bulb sold. "It doesn't amount to much—a few hundred dollars," he said. However the first All-America winner in the early sixties made over $10,000 on his winning glad.

"That looked like a real deal so everyone got in the act but it didn't pan out," he adds. "It's more prestige than money."

In addition to the gladiolus competition, there are conventions and trial gardens sponsored by the North American Gladiolus Council, the umbrella organization for the numerous gladiolus societies scattered across the U.S., Canada, and over 15 foreign countries including New Zealand, Russia, and Czechoslovakia.

In addition to raising his award winning gladiolus, Johnson is president of the Glad Council.

More than just an organization of gardeners, the North American Gladiolus Council is a watchdog that maintains rules and regulations, from an international code which identifies glads by their color number, to numbered classes denoting size.

For instance, if the bottom floret from a stalk of glads measures less than 2 1/4 inches, it is in the 100's class. A floret over 5 1/4 inches would be in the 500's—with all other sizes coming in between.

When he's not reaping awards or overseeing the Glad Council, Harold Johnson works in his garden, tending his flowers and waiting for the next special hybrid to come along.

Hybridizing involves the transfer of pollen, whether by man or nature. If it is successful, seed pods will develop at the base of the floret.

This pod contains hundreds of seeds and literally thousands of genetic possibilities. "That's the good thing about it, you get colors you wouldn't expect," he said.

The seeds produce seedlings which in turn yield one bulb. Not until its third season will the gladiolus bloom, with each bulb developing two stalks which will separate to become two bulbs.

Around the base are bulblets, smaller bulbs which are exactly like the parent plant. Mother Nature's way of aiding in quick proliferation.

From the blooms that develop, the gardener can choose the promising one that is worth cultivating. "Out of 1,000 seedlings, you might only have one that is fit to be introduced."

Color variations of the gladiolus range from pure white to deep red with all the colors in between including green.

The award-winning "Funny Face" is lavender with a purple middle or "blotch" and yellow inner edges fading to white. The offspring of Funny Face have varied from deep purple to red to rich mahogany.

While growing hybrid gladiolus may seem like a pell-mell operation, Johnson says it is possible to keep track of parentage under a controlled situation.

Johnson seems matter-of-fact about the skill that brings him national awards and recognition from the professional growers.

"It's an interesting hobby, although it doesn't make any money and it's one heckuva lot of work!"

Two new teachers in BF

BOYNE FALLS - Two new teachers start this fall in the Boyne Falls school system.

One is Craig Mulder, who will be teaching social studies. Mulder majored in group social studies and minored in economics at Central Michigan University, earning a bachelor of science degree.

He comes here from Lowell. This will be his first teaching position.

Kevin Richard is the second new teacher. Also a graduate of Central Michigan University, Richard majored in chemistry, physics, and math. He has a minor in physical education.

Principal Joel Donaldson said Richard will teach chemistry and math, and perhaps later in the year, a course on computer science, a subject he has additional hours in.

Richard comes here from a two-year stint teaching at Mt. Pleasant Sacred Heart School.

The wives of both men are certified elementary school teachers, qualified in special education. In the Mulders' case their wedding was just this past Saturday.

Moonlight Madness planned

BOYNE CITY - Moonlight Madness will reign again next Thursday night, Aug. 20, in Boyne City.

The Chamber of Commerce Retail Board is again sponsoring the event, which includes music, madness and bargains in the moonlight. Stores will close at their regular hours and will reopen with moonlight specials from 7 to 10 p.m.

A folk and bluegrass group, Odds and Ends, will be providing music in the street, as the 100 block of Water Street will be closed to traffic.

'Banker with a heart' to retire

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

BOYNE CITY - Angela Skrocki is retiring after 32 1/2 years with Northwestern State Bank.

With appropriate banker precision, she had hoped to retire last week, "because that would have made it exactly 32 1/2 years," she said with a smile.

But the important thing is that she is retiring from the highest office held by a woman at the bank. Since June 1976, she has been assistant vice-president, assistant vice-president.

Her last day will be Friday, Aug. 14. There will be a farewell party—an open house at the bank in her honor all day long. Everyone is invited.

Skrocki is quick to attribute her success to the example her parents set. Compassion, she said, she learned from her mother.

"Strength, I think, I get from my father."

She is proud of her parents who came here from Italy—her mother as a child, her father at the beginning of manhood, starting with nothing, achieving success.

Looking back at her own success, Skrocki shakes her head. She hadn't planned to work 32 1/2 years. "But I really liked the idea of working in a bank," she said, pointing out the importance of a bank, the level of its responsibility.

"I wasn't goal-oriented," she said. "I would tell young people now, 'Set goals. Figure out where you want to go.'"

But even without that kind of goal-setting, she followed standards she set for herself.

"I've worked this job as if it were my own business," she explained. "Not being wasteful—or short with customers."

Angie Skrocki

And as for her relationship with customers, Skrocki is famous at the bank as a "problem-solver." No matter what position she has held, the job description is accompanied with the phrase, "and problem solver." She understands the problems of people from the people's side.

Even as assistant vice-president, she continued her contact with the bank's customers who have problems. She is sincerely a banker with a heart.

She began at Northwestern in 1949 after graduating from Detroit Institute. She is a native of Detroit, but she and her family moved here in 1944 and she attended high school in Boyne City.

She worked in all departments of the bank: loans, teller, bookkeeping. In 1970 she was made assistant cashier.

"I didn't ask for my positions," she said, thinking back.

With one of those smiles that seems to come from down inside, she tried to explain her career point of view.

"I believe in positive thinking—a positive mental attitude." She described the fact that everyone has choices when things take a bad turn—Her choice has been to keep going.

Everyone who knows Skrocki, knows she had cancer, went through, and kept going.

She continued the point. "A positive mental attitude means being happy at your job. You shouldn't keep your job if you can't be happy. You spend most of your life on your job!"

Then she added, "Being happy is good for you—good for your health. And good for the people who have to work with you. I have loved my job."

Beyond these basics, Skrocki advises, "Get as much education as you can." One of the advantages the bank now offers is the chance to take courses at nearby community colleges.

Is a career important for a woman? Skrocki has no question in her mind about that.

"You are a different kind of person with a career. More knowledgeable. You are not in your own little world. You meet more of a variety of people."

She leaned back and concluded thoughtfully, "I feel God wanted us to do everything we could with what we have. I don't feel I could have shared what I have if I'd just stayed at home."

Skrocki is retiring to be able to spend more time with her family and friends. "I will be able to visit people I haven't had time to visit, and will do some travelling."

She is married to Chester Skrocki. They live on Marshall Street in the city. "I never want to leave Boyne City," she said.

Her sister, Maryanne Watkins, also of Boyne City, is a teacher at East Jordan High School. Another sister, Diane Terrell, lives in Traverse City.

Looking, as everyone agrees, like a woman in her thirties, Angela Skrocki may dig up some new challenges now...More community service...who knows...

"I'm certainly going to be sad to miss the contact with the customers that I feel are my friends, and of all the employees I've worked with so closely. They are my family. I will miss them."

With Skrocki it is goodbye, but it is also tomorrow.

Anti-condo sentiment grows

Monday's decisive vote against a new condominium project in Eveline Township apparently signals more evidence of the increasing feeling against, not only condos, but new development and new people in the area.

We saw some evidence of the anti-condo and anti-growth feelings two years ago as local residents forced an election on the question of closing Front Street in Boyne City to make more room for the

Editorial

Harborage condominiums. That situation was more complex, however, since zoning on the land in question already allowed development.

The Eveline Township situation is different because it required rezoning for a relatively large (72 units) complex in a rural area. It's a more clear-cut question of, "Do we want development or don't we?" The citizens clearly said no.

But of course, there is also the question of the property owner's rights. Developer Art Seaborn of Petoskey plans to appeal the decision in court and he is confident he will win. It will be an interesting case to watch, whether or not it ends up in court.

A letter to township voters circulated by opponents to the condo project says the higher density of a condominium project is their primary objection.

When viewed in terms of the 130-acre parcel on which the 72 Hemingway Pointe condos are proposed, the density is not high. But the opponents point out that the lakefront itself would be crowded with more housing units than would be allowed under single-family residential zoning.

The township ordinance specifies a minimum 100 ft. lot width on lakeshore homes, which would allow only 40 homes on the 4,000 ft. Hemingway Pointe shoreline.

Hopefully some reasonable compromise can be reached. The developer points out that he could build many more than 40 homes if he fully developed his 130 acres, so he feels he has already compromised by scaling down his project to 72 condo units.

Both sides have defensible points. The opponents want to preserve the rural atmosphere of their township, while the developer points to the tax advantages and says that, "It could be much worse."

It's certainly a hard one to call. While the final resolution may not please anybody, the one bright spot in all of this is the trend that citizens are becoming more involved and concerned about local affairs, and developers are being forced to carefully consider local feelings before they can proceed with their projects. Public scrutiny isn't always bad.

We need a pail of solutions

I wish I could dump my problems into a computer and catch a pail of solutions. Wouldn't that be nice?

Everyone has problems that refuse to wither on the vine. And no matter how old you are.

Just the other day I was chiding my 65-year-old friend: "Look, John," I said, "You've lived all these years and you haven't begun to eliminate your problems."

He was a public figure who had kept several gnawing secrets to himself. "If I were to talk about my problems," he said, "the rafters would ring all over town. I can't do that. Boyne City has enough rafters ringing as it is."

Not only do I and my friend have problems, but Boyne City itself is fraught with dusty old situations that have no intention of being settled. It's true. The city's long-standing, hard-core problems seem to have always been so; and it's mighty difficult to settle anything with a hard-core that's always been so.

Even newspapers have problems. If it isn't the advertising department, it's the editorial staff and, if not that, the circulation corner. If there's an odd day when all seems settled, a man stomps into the office yelling, "You spelled my name wrong. What ails you people, anyway?"

Marshall Sayles

That's when everyone looks questioningly at everyone else. I know from experience that there's nothing so upsetting as a newspaperman who doesn't know what ails him.

But back to my own miseries. My main problem bothered me so much I took it out and studied it. I even poked it with a forefinger, trying to make it behave. Nothing worked.

So I shipped it off to Ann Landers, the nation's babysitter. All she did was pull out her standard mimeographed letter: "Go see a counselor." What an answer! I know counselors who are seeing counselors.

Every once in a while my problem runs off and hides; and just when I'm feeling as though I'm standing knee deep in the promised land, another life-shaking problem takes its place. I can't count the times I have left the doors unlocked at night hoping the boggie man would get me.

Perhaps the city should buy a huge computer so we could all dump our problems into it and catch that nice pail of solutions I mentioned upstairs in this column. It's an electronic answer to peace in the head and peace in the streets where it belongs.

Now, don't laugh. Remember how we grabbed a handful of wires, a screwdriver and a pair of pliers and went to the moon?

I'm terribly sorry, these thoughts are so serious I cannot force myself to continue.

They don't have to be victims

Myriad community events and neighborhood news items are inserted into the newspaper each week. They are usually reported accurately except for an occasional typographical error. And although it rarely changes the meaning of the message, the editor of social news copy will sometimes substitute a word or two for the sake of brevity.

Several weeks ago, while endeavoring to edit and publish as much social news as possible, I totally misinterpreted the message of a local organization.

A non-profit community health support group, Coping With Cancer?, sent an announcement to The Press regarding its next meeting and urging people with cancer to attend it. By rewriting the copy I urged cancer "victims" to attend.

The copy was passed from my desk to the desk of the editor and then sent to the production room to be typeset. The word "victim" seemed to be a logical way to describe someone with cancer, so it wasn't changed anywhere along the line.

It should have been. After several calls from people with cancer and the Coping With Cancer? group, I realized that by using that word I had done exactly what the support group was trying to un-do. Their objective, I have since learned, is to take the sting out of being "victimized" by cancer.

Fortunately, I later had the opportunity to interview Coping With Cancer? leaders and found that they are some of the most progressive thinkers in the area.

Not only do they share with and listen to the problems of people with the disease but they hope to form a 24-hour care system for the terminally ill. Their program is educational and empathetic.

Cancer is a disease that is associated with fear, pain and dying. However, with a community-based support group as determined and knowledgeable about the disease as is Coping With Cancer? the fear can be quieted.

The holistic health cares and concerns exhibited by Catherine Jessup, Geri Howard and Kathleen Smith, leaders of the Coping group, have helped many to understand that coping with cancer is an aspect of life that is in its own way rewarding and life enriching.

While mending the driveway

When I see a cedar waxwing, as I did today, resting a moment on a high, leafless branch, I'm reminded of a pendant on an expensive earring. There is something so elegant, so upright, so sleek about the bird.

Not so her children—three, charming, fat chicks, perched side by side on a nearby maple branch.

It was the chicks that had attracted my attention. They were chirping with the exact same tone one can hear in the supermarkets when three-year-old children chirp, high-pitched and demanding, "Mommy, buy this!"

I saw the mother cough sharply and suddenly her beak was full of regurgitated food for the infants who aren't able to digest the fresh fibers the parents eat.

She flew over to the chicks and fed them. I could hear them piping, "Me! Me! Me!"

It was delightful but also somewhat miffing to find the waxwing family so nearby. All summer they had been operating through the rich foliage and I had never known it.

Back in February or March there had been a twittering throng of them dining on the small apples still on the tree down by the road. But I thought the birds had all flown north at nesting time.

I have tried to be a naturalist, sitting on a stump at the edge of a woods, watching to learn what goes on, but I always do much better if nature distracts me while I am at work outdoors.

Barbara Cruden

Mending ruts in the drive after our recent torrents of rain was the magic this time.

Other times are house painting or weeding, or even scrubbing clothes outdoors before we had electricity. All things one willingly drops to follow down a bird call or watch a deer.

We should be experts in so many things. I'm ashamed to drive a car, for example, and know nothing about its workings.

But higher on the list than knowledge of motors, or politics, or even economics, I put knowledge of nature.

I guess, partly because so few know much at all about it, and the many who don't are the ones making decisions that affect it, often seriously.

Especially people in cities, people who they say rarely even look at the sky. City people demand reservoirs of water, truckloads of food down thousands of highways.

And they can no more be entertained by a cedar waxwing than a queen by an acorn necklace.

But even we who do go for these so-called simple enjoyments, and are glad to be living in the midst of them—how much do we know? How many living up here can identify 20 trees, 20 birds, or 20 wildflowers?

Identification may not seem useful in order to enjoy the flights of butterflies and the sighing of evergreens. But knowing the names of things, like knowing the names of people at a party, is the beginning of making book on them.

Something begins to happen to us as we begin to inquire into nature. A rich enjoyment—awe—an increased feeling of stewardship.

Well, back to mending the driveway. I wonder what these stones are made of. Gray, green, pink, speckled, striped. And, by the way, I wonder if that could have been a Bohemian waxwing instead of a cedar waxwing.

It had the right address.

EJ park work nearly done

EAST JORDAN - "Just about done," was city councilman Russ Gee's estimate of progress on renovation of the city's Memorial Park on the lakefront downtown, begun this spring.

The park work was 75 percent financed by U.S. Soil Conservation Service, the total costing close to $53,000.

Material specified in the government contract was poured into the lake along the shoreline, but turned out to be too fine to pack down lake silt as intended.

The fine sand was raked in and replaced by plastic sheeting held down by a heavier grade of material, according to City Clerk Fern Morris. The treatment will prevent silting and erosion.

Gee said water will be about three or four feet deep along the park shoreline.

Cost of the plan changes will be shared by the city and the SCS. Figures aren't definite yet. Boat docks will be in working order in a week or so, Gee said.

Back when the grant was being applied for, then-city superintendent Herm Rasch pointed out that money for new docking could not be included in the grant for shoreline preservation.

Anything beyond dock maintenance will depend on future city budgeting.

East Jordan buys land

EAST JORDAN - "About 47 acres," City Clerk Fern Morris said, were purchased by the city for $28,850 for possible future use from owners Howard Darbee and Jim Brannon, both of Boyne City.

The land is adjacent to the present sewage treatment location, along State Highway 32, south of the city. It is also next to the city's airport and will serve partly as a fly-over area, Morris said.

The city has been negotiating for the property on and off for seven or eight years, Morris noted. It would be needed for additional sewage treatment purposes in any future growth of the city.

New friend, chicken casserole and a yummy summer salad

One of the highlights of this summer has been the pleasure of making a new friend.

Lillian Biggs, a friend of my neighbor, Nellie Newton, is spending the month of August with Nellie and the three of us have already had some good times together. It seems as if we have always known each other.

This seems to be one of those times when one meets a person with whom you can have a real rapport. Lillian and Nellie like to invite me over for afternoon tea. And I always accept.

When Lillian, whose home is in Hilton Head, South Carolina, gave me this recipe she said that it was a real southern dish. This casserole is great for a buffet supper and will serve eight. A meal in a dish and a yummy salad, what more could you ask for?

- CHICKEN CASSEROLE
4 or 5 whole chicken breasts
1 box Uncle Ben's long grain and wild rice
1 can water chestnuts, sliced
1 chopped medium onion
1 can sliced mushroom, drained
1 small jar pimento, chopped

- 2 cups real mayonnaise
1 can cream of celery soup
Cook the chicken breasts with some celery tops and a little onion until tender. remove from the liquid and cut into bite size pieces.

Cooking Yesterday & Today with Bea Smith

Lillian says that she usually leaves the skin on since it gives the casserole a little more chicken flavor. However, if you are counting calories it may be a good idea to remove the skin at this point.
Cook the rice according to the directions on the box. Combine the chicken and rice with all the other ingredients and put into a large casserole. Generously sprinkle parmesan cheese and paprika on top.
Bake at 350 for 30 to 40 minutes.

- YUMMY SALAD
1 pkg. black cherry Jello
1 pkg. strawberry Jello
1 can crushed pineapple slightly drained
1 cup pecans
3 cups boiling water
Dissolve the Jellos in the three cups of boiling water and add the other ingredients. let congeal. Use a square pan for this. Mix one 8 ounce package of cream cheese with 1/2 cup powdered sugar and 1/2 cup sour cream with mixer. Spread over top of salad. Cut in squares with a cherry on top.
Both of these dishes can be prepared early in the day so you can relax and enjoy your guests.

I have a request for Hungarian goulash and have found a number of varying recipes. What makes Hungarian goulash Hungarian?
Webster's dictionary says that it is a stew made with veal or beef and vegetables seasoned with paprika. It is nearly always served with noodles. Does anyone have a recipe for an authentic Hungarian goulash?

Non-members invited to enter EJ Garden Club Flower Show

EAST JORDAN - The best and most beautiful will be on display at the East Jordan Garden Club's annual flower show, Monday, Aug. 17.

Open to the public, the show will be held at the Senior Center from 1 to 4 p.m.

According to garden club member Marian Mason, not only is the public invited to view the flower arrangements and specimens, but interested non-members are also invited to submit entries for display and judging.

Program chairwoman Peggy Midener described the six design categories. The first division is Oriental arrangements of fresh or dried flowers. The maximum size of any of these would be 18 by 25 inches and no more than 21 inches tall.

Another category is "swan arrangements," 12 by 15 inches.

Centerpieces for the dinner table, either formal (26 by 15 inches) or informal (13 by 9 inches) will be judged as two separate categories.

People don't have to have gardens to make arrangements for the show. One category in particular is for people who want to arrange dried or fresh wildflowers and weeds.

The last on the list is miniatures, which children particularly favor, although people may be of any age to enter an arrangement in any of the six categories.

Midener said she entered the show the first time when she was a child. She took the top off a shoebox, she said, and covered the box with colored cellophane after having made a miniature garden of moss and twigs inside. She cut a peephole at the end—and won a prize! "Never forget it," she said.

A highly qualified judge from the National Garden Club will make the awards before the show opens. Participants must have their arrangements in place by 10 a.m. And must take them home right after the show closes at 4 p.m.

In addition to the arrangements, sections will be devoted to horticultural specimens. A single stem of any perennial or annual may be entered for judging, and of course that includes roses.

Also judged will be hanging planters and house plants.

This will be the club's 20th show. Club president Hazel Grace said this year first, second, and honorable mention awards will be made in each category.

Anyone needing information on the show or on the club may call her at 536-7616.

Food glorious food!

Wide variety found in this area

Jacob and Jonas Kraukils, ages 5 and 7 eye the pastry counter at Johan's Pastry Shop in Petoskey.

"Food glorious food" is how the song from the musical Oliver starts. Charlevoix County and nearby Petoskey certainly offer a wide and mouth-watering variety of food to choose from.

This week's Fun and Sun staff started out exploring places where unique food could be bought. To our surprise there were more unique food places in this area than we will mention.

You can find fresh ground coffee, superb whitefish, French pate, imported cheeses, wines, Polish sausages, German sausages, and ethnic breads.

Places like the Village General Store in Walloon Lake and Edward's IGA in Charlevoix will cook meats for you to pick up and take with you.

Even supermarkets like Country Star Market in Boyne City carry a large variety of delicatessen salads if you prefer to buy rather than prepare something.

There is also a wide variety of eating places to choose from. European gourmet food is found at the Rowe Inn between East Jordan and Ellsworth, the Jordan Inn in East Jordan, and the Walloon Lake Inn.

Good family fare at reasonable prices can be found at the Country Star in Boyne City, the Tucker Inn in East Jordan, Betty's in Boyne Falls and JD and Company in Petoskey.

Atmosphere adds a lot to places like the Depot in Boyne City, the Bootlegger in Petoskey and Village Inn Pizza in Charlevoix. The list could go on and on.

Explore! There are a lot of good meals to be found in this area.

Check the dining guide in this issue for places to try.

Baked goodies galore!

If you are looking for a variety of homemade breads, Johan's Pastry Shop in Petoskey is the place to go.

Johan's sells more than 25 varieties of breads. Their specialty breads include sesame and egg bread, dill bread, bacon and cheese bread, strawberry cinnamon bread, just to mention a few.

They sell pumpernickel bread, light rye, Russian rye, and Swedish rye bread.

But even though they have the largest selection of home baked bread in this area, it is not the only thing they sell.

If you have a sweet tooth, Johan's Pastry Shop must be the next best thing to heaven.

You can find cookies, cakes raspberry tarts, torts, Napoleons, and assorted puffed pastries.

They can decorate cakes with only 24 hours notice and they have a wide variety of wedding cake tops.

Jo's buns, one of the shop's special creations are cinnamon rolls with butter and cream centers.

If you like sweet rolls for breakfast, Johan's offers ten different specialty fried cakes (doughnuts), 15 to 20 assorted sweet rolls and 20 to 25 different kinds of Danish.

If you are trying to lose, Johan's is definitely not the stop for you.

But, if you are on a low salt diet Johan's carries low salt breads and treats.

Other treats which you can find at Johan's include homemade bread sticks, hard rolls, pasties, English muffins, cheddar sticks and sour cream and chive sticks.

For pastas they sell homemade noodles.

And for the kids, of course, they sell gingerbread men.

Johan's is located on 131 south of Petoskey.

Charlene Brown of Johan's Pastry in Petoskey sells their many varieties of bread to satisfied customers.

The Grain Train

Soy flakes, carob and tofu

Looking for whole grains, tofu, organically-grown vegetables or carob?

"The Grain Train Co-op in Petoskey is the only storefront food cooperative in the area," Jim Gillespie, one of the four managers, said.

It is a non-profit corporation with the purpose of providing high quality food for people, Gillespie says.

"What I mean by high quality food is food without additives, preservatives or sugar. It is food with low salt content and organically-grown vegetables," he said.

The Grain Train also sponsors community outreach programs once or twice a year. They teach classes in cooking with natural foods and how to set up a natural foods kitchen. They teach people the types of appliances that they will need to use to make natural foods cooking convenient.

The classes specialize in ethnic cooking. Many ethnic dishes are vegetarian, Gillespie said. They teach people how to make Mexican, Chinese and Mid-Eastern dishes.

There is nothing new about cooking with natural foods, says Gillespie. In fact, this is the way people used to cook.

"We've been so conditioned to convenience eating, that people don't know how to cook with the natural grains anymore," he said.

"But we can eat quality foods conveniently. People think that cooking with high quality foods is really time-consuming, but that is really a myth," Gillespie said.

The Grain Train classes teach people how to make easy dishes with their natural foods.

The Grain Train carries a wide variety of herbs and spices sold in bulk. "We have the cheapest herbs and spices in town," Gillespie said.

They also carry beans, pastas, organically-grown vegetables, tofu, herbal teas and black teas.

Tofu, a soy cheese, is called, "the food of the future," Gillespie said.

"They have been eating it for 2000 years in the Orient but it is just now gaining in popularity in the United States," he said.

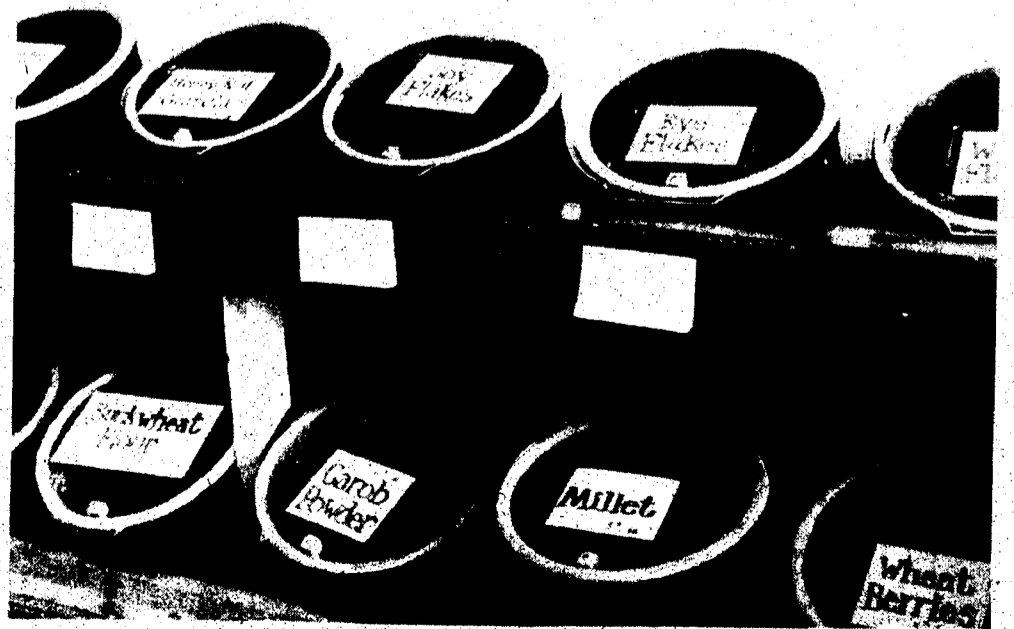

Tofu is high in protein, cheaper to produce than meat, and it has no cholesterol.

It is cheaper to produce than meat, because it is lower on the food chain. The tofu comes directly from the soybean. It would take more grain to feed a cow for example to get the same amount of protein as an end product.

Food produced lower on the food chain, also contains less toxins, Gillespie said.

The Grain Train is a food cooperative. Members are required to work four hours per month at their convenience. They are then allowed a 20 percent discount on items sold in the store. New members are welcome.

The Grain Train is located on Howard Street in Petoskey.

The Grain Train of Petoskey sells natural foods like millet, carob and soy flakes.

Specialty meats

Walloon Lake Village General Store manager Cliff Bates looks over the meat locker filled with choice meats—beef, lamb and pork. You can leave the cooking to Cliff by calling your special meat orders in. He'll prepare roasts, turkeys, ribs and chicken to your liking. Call 535-2471.

Black Forest

German foods and cheeses

German landjaegers are the Black Forest's best seller. The Black Forest is located between Charlevoix and Petoskey on U.S. 31. It specializes in German foods and other imported foods.

Here you can also find 26 cheeses reasonably priced. Greek feta cheese, French brie, and wheels of fresh parmesan and romano cheeses are the most popular.

You can buy Greek fillo dough, German puddings, and Bravo home-made pastas.

Swedish rye krisp and French wheat crackers as well as other imported crackers are available.

For hors d'oeuvres, how about some spiced octopus or marinated artichokes? Owner and manager Betty Harvey has tried to put a little bit of everything in the way of fine food in the store.

She also carries several different sandwich loaves for the special sandwich.

The Black Forest between Petoskey and Charlevoix sells ethnic cheeses at reasonable prices.

Mercado Cafe

Ethnic vegetarian foods for all

Have you ever eaten vegetarian Mexican food? Or how about a tofu stroganoff or fidelini? Did you ever have a nice ginseng rush to quench your thirst?

If not, you are in for an eating adventure when you try the Mercado Cafe in back of the Grain Train on Howard Street in Petoskey.

Owners Kate Kramer and Suzanne Hoppe took over the cafe in June. Both live currently in Petoskey.

Kate Kramer loves to cook. She dreamed about running a natural foods restaurant and now that dream has come true.

"It's a lot of fun and a lot of hard work," she said. "It is really gratifying to cook for someone and have them tell me, 'That was really good!'"

Suzanne Hoppe used to work in a bakery to learn her cooking skills.

"People think sometimes that natural foods people only eat rice and rabbit food," Kramer said. "I've found there is really a wider variety of things I can do with vegetables than I could with meat."

"It's fun to cook with vegetables, because I can invent things. Once you know how to make a quiche, you can put all kinds of things in it," she said.

At the Mercado you can eat a delicious healthful lunch. You won't find Coke, sugar, meat or any food with additives or preservatives in them.

You will find homemade soups, a salad bar, a Greek salad, omelettes, enchiladas, tostados, burritos, cerviche (Mexican fish salad), and a wide variety of sandwiches.

There are several daily specials like tofu stroganoff, or fidelini (noodles and cheese sauce.)

All the pastas are made of whole grains.

"We believe this is the right way to eat," Kramer said. "It's fun to introduce people to new foods."

One story she tells is of a young boy with his family who said as Kramer came to the table. "An enchilada without meat, yuki!" But, he cleaned his plate, Kramer said and went away a satisfied customer.

And the desserts taste really good. They serve cheese cakes, fruit and homemade yogurt, carob tofu pie, and berry pies. They use no sugar. Honey is the sweetener.

The Mercado is open only on Friday nights for dinner. The dinner menu includes crepes, wok vegetables, Welsh rarebit, and broiled trout.

The Mercado is open from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Monday through Thursday and Saturday. On Friday it is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

If you would like a unique, healthful eating experience, try the Mercado.

Natural desserts Kate Kramer bakes carob tofu and berry pies using only natural sweeteners.

Hors d'oeuvres Boyne Country Party Store in Boyne City sells specialty hor d'oeuvres like escargot, smoked octopus, water chestnuts, etc. They also carry a wide selection of fine wines.

More than 200 cheeses are sold at Symons

Imported wines and more than 200 different cheeses from 15 countries are what make Symons General Store truly unique.

Six years ago owner Lynne Symon began working in the store with her husband. "There was a lot to learn about all the different specialty foods," she said. Two years ago, she took over the books and became the store's manager.

Besides the wonderful cheese selection and wines from $2.95 a bottle to $400 a bottle (Chateau Mouton 1962 if you are interested) Symons carries many other delicacies.

They import fresh French pates, foie gras, and truffles. They have five kinds of fresh ground coffee.

Seafood such as sardines, snails, mussels, smoked shrimp, smoked clams, smoked eels, oysters, and herring fillets line the shelves.

They carry a wide selection of mustards. The most popular mustards are John Turnbull mustards.

There is also a wide array of herbs and spices including Chinese spices. If you have a sweet tooth, Symons is just the place. They sell Ghirardelli chocolates from San Francisco. They also sell nine kinds of Wilkins and Sons jellies and preserves.

But most people probably stop into Symons for their cheeses. This summer the best sellers are French brie and Danish saga cheese. (Saga is like camembert with Danish bleu cheese in it.)

Lynne Symons of Symons General Store in Petoskey sells some cashews to a happy customer.

Cross Fish Market

Fresh and smoked whitefish

Ask Charlevoixans where to buy good fresh and smoked whitefish, and they'll tell you the John Cross Fish Market. It isn't surprising.

Eighty-five year old John Cross Sr. has been in the fishing business for 76 years. He started out as a kid helping his father on Beaver Island. At 17, he moved to Charlevoix and started fishing on his own.

He has owned his Charlevoix business longer than any other Charlevoix businessman. He has been selling whitefish to restaurants and his market customers for about 68 years. Currently there are three generations of Crosses working in the family fish market. John Cross, Jr. runs the fishing boat with a crew of three other men. Twenty-year old John Cross III goes to college and helps John Cross Sr. run the fish market.

Cross Fish Market is located in Charlevoix on Lake Charlevoix on Belvedere Street.

It supplies nearly all the restaurants in Charlevoix with their whitefish. It also supplies restaurants in Traverse City.

But they used to be into fishing in a bigger way, said John Cross, Sr. At one point he had several fishing boats and was supplying restaurants as far away as Chicago and Detroit with their fish. He learned a lesson.

Lots of administrative hassle for low return on his investment along with changes in the fishing laws, made Cross decide to run his operation as he does now, with one fishing boat supplying restaurants in this area.

On good days now, John Cross, Jr. and his crew can catch up to a ton and a half of fish. On another day they may catch 250 lbs. of fish.

They bring the fish back to the market to be cleaned and smoked. It is there, you can buy it if you are in the mood for fresh fish.

John Cross, III and John Cross, Sr. run Cross Fish Market in Charlevoix while John Cross, Jr. runs the fishing boat. John Cross, Sr. has owned the market for over 60 years.

The Jackie C. is the fishing tug which John Cross, Jr. uses to bring in the tons of whitefish sold by the Cross Fish Market in Charlevoix.

Want to pack a quick picnic lunch? Bring your basket to Edward's IGA in Charlevoix and they can pack it for you.

Their delicatessen carries salads like coleslaw, potato salad, macaroni salad, and Polynesian delight.

They have a wide selection of imported and domestic cheeses.

Hickory sticks, hard salami, turkey breasts and other cold cuts could be made into sandwiches on bakery rolls and hamburger buns.

"We also cook barbecued turkey, bargeque chicken and spare ribs," said Edward's store manager Gary Kanoff. They will do private catering.

Restaurants offer dining variety

Here are some mini-reviews of area restaurants by Fun & Sun dining columnist, Kathy Johnson:

DUFFY'S OF CHARLEVOIX

Duffy's of Charlevoix is a dandy dining delight. Here the food not only tastes good, but the way it comes from the kitchen and the presentation on the plate all add to making this a meal you can really enjoy. The menu carries a wide selection of items with a very nice range of prices. Whitefish, perch, shrimp, lobster tail, crab legs, filets, porterhouse, veal. A most perfect evening.

THE JORDAN INN

Makedonska Brzola, Veal Sobieski and Bouquet de Poisson John O Gross were our assorted entrees the evening we went to the Jordan Inn in East Jordan...purveyor of fine meals and "old fashioned" accommodations. The menu here is redone frequently with this or that going off and something else coming on. Prices were listed only for the entrees and included...great stuff. A lovely evening.

THE GRANARY

Wagon wheel chandeliers, old buzz saw blades, logging equipment, and old cross bows—these along with antique ice tongs and rough wood walls all combine to make an interesting dining decor at the Granary in Boyne City... many nice things on the menu at reasonable prices.

ARGONNE SUPPER CLUB

The specialty at The Argonne Supper Club, located on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road near Charlevoix, is the all-you-can-eat shrimp. The shrimp is served fried or steamed and it is very good. The best thing about the Argonne is their food. It was a very pleasant evening. Nothing spectacular, but nice.

GREY GABLES

Victorian dining at its best. Well, if not at its best, certainly the next best. Established in 1936 by the Don Clothier family...the Grey Gables is Victorian in atmosphere. Menu includes prime rib, seafood, fresh fish, and crab legs. Overall the Grey Gables was a nice evening.

ROWE INN

A superb evening awaits those with a desire to seek the best in fine food, and pay for it, at the Rowe Inn. Full four-course meals are served and the prices are a la carte. In a class of its own, this is one dining experience you shouldn't miss if you are a lover of fine foods and wines.

BOOTLEGGER

For a trip to Petoskey, be sure to leave room for the Bootlegger. Clever decor with a prohibition theme. The menu reads like a "Wanted" poster and along with good steaks, monthly specials, and prime rib you have a chance at one of the best salad bars in the entire area. Prices are reasonable, depending on the item.

COUNTRY STAR

Located in Boyne City the Country Star has to rank at the top of family dining in the area. A nice menu, but the "star" here is the very fine buffet available nightly and at lunch at the Country Star. Prices are reasonable and the food is always good.

THE DEPOT

The rustic old train station not only offers the most unique decor in Boyne City dining, but some of the finest meals. Prices are reasonable for a nice restaurant. On Wednesday and Thursday evenings you'll want your chopsticks to try the excellent Chinese food.

TUCKER INN

Inexpensive. Good service. Great steaks. Here's a place you can take children if they like steak and not come out a financial disaster. A beautiful sirloin for around $8. Nice menu, but small. They also have "basket" items available if you can talk the kids into a cheaper item—and you get the great steak. On the East Jordan-Advance Road.

BAY QUEEN

Not quite a restaurant—more a club on water with food, here is an opportunity to go dining, dancing and star gazing all in the same plan. Aboard ship in Charlevoix the Bay Queen provides a cruise around the lake and a very nice meal. Prices for lunch are just under $10. Dinner is more, but the orchestra makes it worth it.

WALLOON LAKE INN

The newest "fine" dining restaurant in the area. The Inn hopes to compete with the Rowe Inn in Ellsworth and has a gourmet menu and wine list. Prices here are the highest, but the view of Walloon Lake is worth a lot.

Fun and Sun and the Walloon Lake Sun are published weekly by The Charlevoix County Press, 106 Lake St., P.O. Box A, Boyne City, MI 49712. (616) 582-6761.

The Bootlegger

Try the 'Scarface Seafood Selection'

With a very nice variety of meals to select from and reasonable prices, The Bootlegger's in Petoskey offered us a very good meal with fair service last weekend.

With a 1920's atmosphere of prohibition and gangsters the menu offers such items as a "Dillinger Double Barrel," a five ounce filet with a choice of shrimp or frog legs for $9.95, or lobster tail or crab legs for $13.95. The "Scarface's Seafood Selection" is $7.95 with the selection changing. The price of broiled lobster is "Highway robbery (ask waitress)." This month the restaurant is offering an August special of steak and

Dining Delights

By Kathy Johnson

crab legs for just $7.95.

These are just a sampling of the menu that also includes prime rib, steak, chicken Kiev, and liver and onions. Prices vary from $5.95 to $13.95.

Coming with each meal is a trip to the salad bar. The trick at The Bootlegger's is not to eat too well at the salad bar so you'll have room for the main item goodies.

At the salad bar you have your choice of the soup of the day, peanuts, eggs, olives, carrots, croutons, and other munchies with which to enhance your salad and get in the mood for the restaurant's quite fine entrees.

We have eaten many times at the Bootlegger's and the food is always excellent. Service is usually good, although ours on the last trip was a little slow—probably because of all those folk who decided to stop in for a meal after the Petoskey sidewalk sales.

The decor here is rather unique with telegraph poles, highway signs to Cicero, flower carts, and old stills (as in liquor making) creating an overall prohibition era look.

The salad bar is a real highlight and coupled with the month's special, or any of several other reasonably-priced items, you should enjoy your evening in the 20's. Price for your meal for two will be somewhere around the $20's.

The Bootlegger's is overall, an interesting place to take friends, a date, or even the children. The price is right and food quite good.

Feodor Protar— a colorful character

BY DAVID GLADISH

It was the kind of fall day where you hold your hat with one hand and the lapels of your jacket with the other. Funnels of swirling leaves dance in-sandily on their tips, then disintegrate, whipped off the scene.

I had to tug to open the school door against a gust, and once on the other side of it I got smashed in the back by the panic bar.

When I turned around to ease the door the rest of the shut I saw through the glass one big leaf, eight inches broad, just floating straight down through the air as if this were the stillest day of the season, instead of the most hectically boisterous one. The one leaf found a hole in the wind.

Many of the people who choose Beaver Island as a place to live or visit have settled down here with tremendous relief. It's casual, quiet and genuine.

A man called Feodor Protar, who lived on Beaver Island from 1893 until his death in 1925, is not only a colorful and well-loved figure in island history, but he also seems the epitome of a turn mind that brings people to the island.

Let me explain. Protar was born (in 1838) with brains, imagination, talent and generations of first-rate scholars behind him. His father and grandfather were both professors at the University of Dorpat, in a Russian-controlled Baltic state of Livonia.

The family was actually from France and Germany, but this birth place made Protar a Russian citizen. Relatives in Europe contacted the Beaver Island Historical Society several years ago, and the more they bring to light about Protar the more interesting he gets.

He was a restless individual, somehow. As a boy he disliked the discipline of school and was a "bad" student at first. Eventually he completed a course of study in civil engineering at a European university, but he turned right around and became an actor instead.

At the age of 31 he married, but four years later he disappeared without a word to anybody and went to America, where he made good with his gifts for theater and journalism. He acted, did readings, wrote for newspapers and finally, in Rock Island, Illinois, he became editor and owner of a German-language newspaper and made it a great success.

But after 11 years of that, the unpredictable Protar quietly sold out and bought a house with acreage on Beaver Island. And at the age of 55 he stopped being restless. He lived out the last 32 years of his 87 looking after his property, growing his own food, improving his mind and helping his neighbors with a practical knowledge of medicine that he had picked up somewhere in his rambling life. The whole story is in the issues of the "Journal of Beaver Island History" and other books.

Protar's homestead, and a shrine the islanders built for him, are still to be seen—like his life and the island itself, kind of a monument to searching and contentment.
