County doesn't want Big Rock warning system

Commissioners has gone on record as being opposed to the siren warning system being put in around Consumers Power's Big Rock Point nuclear plant.

The commissioners, at their Wednesday, Nov. 25 meeting, approved a resolution stating they oppose the installation of the warning system and do not want to have any part in maintaining or operating the sirens.

The power company has been ordered by the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission to have the warning system in operation by Feb. 1.

Loomis at Big Rock said he doesn't think the resolution "will make any difference. We're under federal regulation to install the public notification system by Feb. 1.

"It's up to the NRC to respond" to the county, Loomis said.

NRC spokeswoman Sue Gagnon in Washington D.C. said the agency would respond in some way when it received the resolution.

Gagnon had no idea what that response might be or who within the agency would make it. The resolution is man of the NRC.

Consumers Power completed a study this year which said the probability of something going wrong at the plant was so small that the system was not needed, Loomis said.

But, he added, the NRC overruled the utility in mandating installation of the system.

Three of the 10 siren locations are on county rights-of-way, Loomis said. County Road Commission Engineer-Director Fred Welch said the utility was granted routine permits to install the Loomis said the only indication Consumers had there might be some opposition to the plan was that County Commissioner John Haggard asked several questions concerning the feasibility of the system during a Nov. 9 meeting between local officials and utility personnel.

The sirens would form a five-mile circle around the plant and be used to sound a warning if anything went wrong

They could also be used to warn of tornadoes or other disasters. Consumers Power and NRC spokesmen

"I live out by Big Rock and I'm not afraid anything will happen," said Haggard in presenting the resolution. 'It's not needed."

The commissioners' opposition was expressed after they were asked by the power company if they would assume a $12,000 annual maintenance cost for the

Loomis said the utility has not formally requested that the county maintain the system, so the board was "jumping the gun" in opposing the

The county has also been asked to allow the system's triggering mechanism to be placed in the sheriff's department, because it is manned 24

Consumers Power and the state will share maintenance costs if the county, or some other agency, will not,

County commissioners said they were afraid assuming the maintenance fees would lead to further, future costs for the county.

"This is just only a start," said Oscar Ward. "It's going to get expensive."

County board is trimmed to 6 members

levoix County Apportionment Commisto cut the county board of commissioners to six members from its present

None of the five members of the board seemed particularly pleased that they had trimmed the board to such a low number-in fact, even after they had the plan for six worked out they attempted for several hours to come up with an alternative.

The panel was seated after final U.S. Census figures for 1980 were issued on Nov. 2. It was the board's job to evenly divide the county's population into from 5 top 15 districts.

Complicating their job, though, was the way the census figures were presented to them. Census Bureau 'enumeration districts' for the county -the areas the bureau itself cut the county into-ranged in population from 81 persons to 1,355. There were 39 enumeration districts.

county Clerk Jane Brannon, Treasurer Anah Potter. Prosecutor Scott Beatty, Democratic Party chairman Fritz Allard and Republican Party chairman Don

They had been under heavy pressure from county commissioners, township hoards and others to carve the county into any number of pieces. The commissioners had passed a resolution stating they wanted 15 districts. Bay Township wanted 5 districts, while Wilson Township and South Arm Township both asked the commission to reduce the board to 7 members.

The apportionment commission, however, was bound by law to carve the county into whatever number of districts most closely approximated the

"Tuesday Night Massacre," the Charcutor Beatty, who chaired the commission, cited state court of appeals sion Tuesday, Nov. 24, arrived at a plan rulings in 1972 involving a number of counties which had to start over again because they did not follow that requirement.

Court rulings that Beatty presented showed that the largest district could have no more than 10 percent more people in it than did the smallest. The plan arrived at by the commission contained a variance of 8.1 percent. No other plan they derived broke the 10 percent barrier, although some came

If the commission did not approve a plan that met the 10 percent requirement and was not the closest to one man, one vote that could be arrived at, "it will not pass muster in the courts and it most certainly will get to the courts," Beatty said.

Anyone wishing to contest the commission's plan has 30 days from the day it was filed with the county clerk's office. Nov. 25, to file a protest.

When Beatty explained the plan to county commissioners the night after it was approved, many of them expressed dissatisfaction with the redistricting, and commissioner Oscar Ward called it the "Tuesday Night Massacre." (See related story.)

The apportionment commission had met twice before the night they approved the plan and members had individually worked for hours attempting to come up with other plans that worked. During their Nov. 24 meeting, they repeatedly spoke of wishing that some other alignment would work. Generally, they were attempting to arrive at a plan for 8-10 commissioners, but had tried all combinations.

Commissioners dislike districts

Prosecutor faces his toughest jury

BY DON DIBLEY

County Prosecutor Scott Beatty may have faced his toughest jury last Wednesday night.

Beatty appeared before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners to explain why, the night before, county Apportionment Commission had voted to slice the number of commissioners from 15 to six in the November 1982 election.

The commissioners, who had gone on record as favoring retention of the 15-member board, were not happy.

Beatty, who was chairman of the apportionment commission, explained the panel had followed the "one manone vote" concept in coming up with a plan that most equally divided the county's 19,907 people among commission districts.

He pointed out court cases which showed the panel had no choice but to divide the county that way.

The commissioners still were not

Commission Chairman Clyde Cunningham noted the commissioners themselves had come up with a plan for 15 when they reapportioned the county following the 1970 election.

"What bothers me," Cunningham missioners in the 33rd Indicial District (Charlevoix and Emmet County) has been cut, but the area to the south of us increased. I think there's a conspiracy here somewhere.'

After Beatty said he was not part of a conspiracy, Cunningham said he "didn't mean that personally." The Emmet County board has been cut to five members by its apportionment commission. Emmet currently has 11 commissioners.

Commissioner Casimir Toton complained the apportionment commission had acted unilaterally, people did not know when the commission was meeting and he had been "kicked out" of the one meeting he attended.

Beatty denied preventing anyone from attending the meetings and said notice was posted and printed in area newspapers. He pointed out that members of the press attended the Tuesday, Nov. 24 meeting where the plan was voted on, while no county commisiers were present.

When Toton said. "You had it within your power to do it differently," commissioner Lee Moerland defended the apportionment board's action.

"You have to give them this," Moerland said, "they built an apportionment plan that will satisfy the

The U.S. Census Bureau divided the county into 39 districts ranging in population from 81 to 1,355 people. It was from these districts the apportionment board had to carve from 5 to 15 county commission districts of nearly equal population.

"It is regretable those who formulated the law didn't foresee that finan-with moderate budgets will have to go the other way." Moerland said.

Oscar Ward said the reduction in the number of districts will result in an increased budget because six commissioners will have to work fullme Then its work among smaller committees.

Martin Bieganowski asked Beatty if the law allowed the county to set up districts with two commissioners from each area. This, he said, would allow the number of commissioners to remain fairly large while keeping the districts at

Beatty responded that state law forbids having more than one commissioners from each district

"If they had come up with 15 districts, we'd all think it was great, Bieganowski told his fellow commis-

After the meeting, Beatty again explained the panel's actions to a group of commissioners who were not happy.

East Jordan board approves teachers' contract

BY BARR CRIDEN

EAST JORDAN - The Board of Education approved a two-year teacher contract Monday, Nov. 30.

The Northern Michigan Education Association approved the pact about three weeks ago.

The NMEA,—the bargaining agent for the teachers—and the board agreed on a contract covering last year and this. The contract has been under negotiation since Aug. 1980. The agreement gives the teachers the percent increase suggested by the board for last year and also the board's figure of 91/2 percent for 1981-82. No change was made in fringe benefits. The board yielded to the teachers' demand for binding arbitration, "for direct and specific violation of the contract only," said board president Mary Jason.

Another major issue was layoff and recall. Previously when someone had to be laid off, union regulations required the teacher with more seniority be kept on and shifted into the vacancy even though that teacher may not have training in the particular course.

The board's position has been to oppose letting unqualified, albeit certified, teachers have these job as-

Thus the contract calls for having such a teacher take six hours of courses in the new field.

Teachers will no longer have to give reasons for taking a personal day off. Jason said a new restriction is imposed to counterbalance the change: No more than two teachers may be gone from any building on a personal day excuse.

"Both sides went through a terrific amount," said Jason, speaking of the long impasse. "We all learned a lot...I think that the relationships between the two groups are better.

"Both sides have been working quite hard to make things more positive," she said. "Since we're all here working towards the same goal, that's a healthy thing to have.'

Asked about the future of the athletics program, which is now going into its second year of being entirely supported by the Athletic Boosters Club and the community, Jason said, "You can't ask them to do that indefinitely.

She said the board has been discussing solutions, but nothing yet has been resolved.

millage did not include athletics as one of the priorities to receive funding.

Promptly after approval of the request for 3 mills, the programs on the priority list were put into effect. The intention was to preserve as much continuity in the students' education as possible.

In a letter to the district. Superintendent Tom Rossler outlined what the 3 mills had accomplished.

At a cost of $144,619, two and one-half teaching positions were returned to elementary school. The library regained its full-time media specialist (head librarian).

Band, high school art and pro-education resumed, and home exnomics went back on a half-time basis, as did the counselor. With the millage producing $181,958, the remaining amount is absorbed by $11,862 in executive cuts from Gov. William Milliken's office, and $25,477 in state aid formula adjustment, which occurs whenever the tax is changed.

This leaves $432 to be covered by the general fund. Rossler's report also looks to improving the junior high program as part of reorganizing the schedules and courses offered for grades seven through 12. This is for the future and will not involve additional expenditures, he said.

Jason said any ideas about curriculum improvement can be taken to Before or 16 any board member. She will be Unlimited Potential Land Control of public Second in this direction.

"It's a terrific challenge to find ways to improve education without spending more money," she said.

Charlevoix County may become a partner in the Emmet County fair.

County commissioners reacted favorably Wednesday, Nov. 15, to a request from the county 4-H council for financial support. The request for $5,000 was sent to the board's agriculture committee for review.

Jim Nelson of the 4-H council told the commissioners that participation by Charlevoix County residents was already high-higher, in fact, in some events than participation by Emmet residents.

He said Emmet County would welcome participation by Charlevoix County in a joint fair venture. The fair is

Most of the fair's money comes from entry fees for such events as the tractor pull, harness racing, rides and concessions and the gate admission fee. The admission fee was raised to $1 this year, after being 50 cents for 22 years.

There has been talk for years about moving the fairgrounds to the Conway area, Sterzik said, but the Emmet board has taken no action and the economic climate would probably prelude any such consideration for awhile.

EAST JORDAN . Keith Dressel property bordering the Jordan River to improve a pike spawning ground and once again attract fowl to the

But his neighbors aren't too happy about the idea.

Two of them have filed protests with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which is coordinating environmental studies into Dressel's proposal

Dressel has applied for permission to dredge the portion of his property closest to the river to form an island and channels for wildlife and to use the dredged material to build up land closer to Echo Street.

The reasons for doing the work, as stated on Dressel's application, are to improve the habitat for wildlife and to develop the site for future development of condominiums.

Dressel says he will be not putting condos on the property, but neighbor Marguerite Stokes is concerned that is what will happen.

Stokes' son Roger has filed one of the two protests: The second was filed by Clare Batterbee, who lives across from the Dressel land.

Both objections raise questions about the feasibility of building the island and channels.

Dressel says he would like to improve the property so wildfowl and fish will return to the area. Before the M-32 highway bridge was built in the late 1950s, he said, the area was a breeding area for ducks and a spawning area for pike.

More than 25,000 yards of sand that was not removed when bridge construction was finished washed into the river. Dressel said, and spoiled the habitat.

At one time the East Jordan Sportsmen's Club, which Dressel was president of, counted 2,000 ducks, 50 Canadian geese and 40 to 50 swans in the area, he said.

Now, he said, there are about 25-30 ducks, three or four swans and no geese. The river, which was full of pike at the time, now has mostly carp in it. he said.

Dressel said the sportsmen's club got the city council to agree to pay about $20,000 of the $130,000 it would have cost to dredge after the sand washed into the river, but public reaction was strong the council withdrew its support.

"Now everything has gone to pot," he said.

While Dressel is working through the Corps of Engineers, he has not approached the city with his proposal, Clerk-Treasurer Fern Morris said.

Jim Demunnik of the Detroit office of the Corps said people who wish to file objections to the plan must do so by Dec. 19.

Any objections that are filed will be forwarded to Dressel, Demunnik said, so he can try to resolve the disputes. If the concerns are not remedied, he said, Dressel must submit written answers to the Corps.

These will be considered along with reports from the state Department of Natural Resources, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Fish and Wildlife Commission in deciding whether to grant him the permit, Demunnik said.

The whole process could take until late January, Demunnik said.

Apportionment panel did right thing

Apportionment. Not the type of thing to inspire Monday morning replays aroud the office coffee machine.

Or to provoke much interest at all. But an action that has a later impact on the way government reacts to its

A five-member board last week decided that Charlevoix County's Board of Commissioners should be reduced reapportioned - from 15 members to six.

It was not an arbitrary — or easily arrived at — decision. And it certainly was not a highly praised one among the members of the board that rules over the affairs of the

At least nine of the present board members will be without jobs when the redistricted board is elected in 1982. And several of them will have to run against each other in the new, larger districts that envelop their present ones.

The Apportionment Commission consisted of the county clerk, county treasurer, county prosecutor and chairmen of the Republican and Democratic parties.

They considered those things that concerned the county commissioners and other politically oriented people: what effect their decision would have on the amount of representation voters got, whether a lesser number of commissioners would be overworked, whether power

But, in the end, they followed the letter of the law and obeyed a basic tenant of our political system - one man,

The five had been under tremendous pressure from township boards, the county commissioners and other political people to divide the county into various numbers

Of the hundreds of possibilities they attempted in piecing together 39 building blocks ranging in size from 81 to 1,355 persons, only one met their overriding consideration - get as close to one man, one vote as possible.

If there is a problem with the result of their efforts, it is because the U.S. Census Bureau provided them with an unworkable set of "enumeration" districts.

If the county officials don't want another unhappy ending following the 1990 census, they should begin working now - through legislators or the National Association of County Officials - to get state law or census bureau procedures changed.

The Apportionment Commission did what it had to.

State chipping away at core of tourism industry

(Editor's note: The following article was written for the Natural Resources Register by Mike Davis, director of Youth Activities for Charlevoix County and a member of the State Recreation Advisory Committee. Davis is a Boyne

BY MIKE DAVIS

In one of several "last ditch" efforts to save the state's economy from further despair, Michigan is taking a closer look at the tourism industry as its fiscal savior, while at the same time chipping away at its very core-public recrea-

While the governor's tourism package hopes to increase tourism by 20 percent, there are plans to place one of the state's most important recreation agencies, the Department of Natural Resources' Recreation Services Division, on the endangered species list. The action of anticipating tourism increases while eliminating recreation assistance can best be described as fashioning the glass slipper without Cinderella.

The obvious need during these times is not to dismantle but to strengthen. bring together and realign the scattered functions in state government and to unify and bolster a state recreation department capable of addressing Michigan's needs.

Public recreation serves many purposes...it stimulates the mental and physical health and well-being of the individual, ... provides non-vocational education, and adds-substance to-one of the state's major industries by encouraging tourism.

Since its inception, the Recreation Services Division has assisted communities statewide in developing their local resources, thus providing for a better community in which to live and vacation.

Rural communities in northern Michigan have greatly benefited from the services of RSD both in technical assistance and financial assistance provided by the Land and Water Conservation Fund. It is ironic that these same areas also serve as the heart of the tourist industry.

Charlevoix County alone has received over $1 million in outer continental shelf revenues through the Land and Water Conservation Fund, for projects such as community park development and state park acquisition and development.

Overall, Michigan has received in excess of $87 million of this same money to develop its local and state public recreation system. As a result, these expenditures have encouraged local government to cultivate their recreation resources to meet the demands presentplaced on the tourist/leisure in-

But, the Recreation Services Division's responsibility through the Land and Water Conservation Fund is only the "tip of the iceberg" when examining its overall impact on recreation.

The division, created in 1965 by Act between local, government and state. duties as the central planning section enable it to become more responsive to the needs and problems of individual communities.

This agency's interaction with public and private individuals and organizations, cities, villages, townships, and counties has resulted in the initiation and implementation of projects and programs in communities which before had no professionally delivered leisure

Aside from the aforementioned benefits of recreation such as physical fitness and mental stimulation, social services such as delinquency deterrence in juveniles, activities for handicapped individuals, economic gain, and community development in the finest sense.

This is evidenced through the present promotion of Michigan communities, by which the recreational offerings are clearly the drawing card.

Recreation is now a priority item in many counties. Charlevoix County, for example, has created a program to serve as a delinquency deterrent, using recreation as the vehicle.

State and federal involvement in local recreation programs is vital; for economic as well as technical assistance and planning purposes. However, with priorities digressing to their former antiquated state, it appears that recreation shall once again serve as the fiscal fall guy.

Without public recreation, our tourist industry could turn into a pumpkin

Thanks to those involved in drug bust

I would like to take this opportunity to priase and give thanks to the many law enforcement officers of Charlevoix County involved in the apprehension of the subjects involved in the recent drug bust in our county.

Also to the undercover officer who risked his life day after day to try to get drugs off our streets and get our young people back on the right road.

After attending the first day of sentencing of these subjects in Circuit Court I was shocked to see so many leaving the courtroom-smiling-thinking their money is building a new library.

The judge conveniently designated that all fines be paid to the library fund. There was no mention for restitution for court appointed attorneys and no mention for restitution to pay back to our county the funds that were used by the undercover officer to purchase the drugs. Funds that cannot be retrieved without restitution.

I would ask the Charlevoix County taxpayers to contact their court system to find out when the next sentencing dates on these subjects are and to attend and support our law enforcement officers and county prosecutor in upholding our laws.

Mrs. Patricia Lambert Charlevoix

Marshall Sayles

Marshall dances to the old grump and grind

Where a number of silly questions receive highly intelligent answers.

O- With Christmas and zero weather racing down from the North's pole, what is your main pre-holiday grumble?

A- I have two or three huffs. One concerns those who tell their customers to do their Christmas shopping at home while they themselves rush off to the big city to do their personal gift buying.

O- You'll make no friends among the shopkeepers spouting off like that. Now, tell me. You made some remark about rock music a while ago. What did you really mean?

A- What I meant was that whenever I hear rock music being played, I find myself wondering when it will turn into a tune.

Q- Last Saturday the new street lights on Water Street were lit during the daytime. How did that affect your general grumpiness? A- I would be more safe playing with fire than dallying around with a

O- Now that you are old, wrinkled and grouchy, are you willing to explain how you were able to accumulate all the material things you have?

A- No, I don't mind at all. I jumped this way and I jumped that way, made mistakes, did foolish things and kept going when all odds were against me. Common sense never made me a nickel.

Q- Speaking of common sense, there are two "no parking" signs in front of the Boyne Theater and it hasn't been open for months. Why doesn't the city jerk those signs so people can park there?

A- I've noticed that. And I've been expecting someone to write a zinger to the editor about it instead of discussing the situation quietly at a city council meeting.

O- My, are you hot today. Now, I remember when you bottled some beautiful rust-colored elm tree rot and planned to push the powder off on the public as a magical genie dust. I know vou failed at that. What are you doing Williamson

A- I have a new hobby of collecting torn, old $10 bills.

O- Last week you said scientists could produce plenty of cheap gasoline from the millions of milkweeds around the country. What did the oil com panies have to say about that?

A- They all got together and booed at me as though I were a city manager with a fresh idea.

Q- Remember when you said that a man fell into the Boyne River and floated up stream? Weren't you a little mixed up about that?

A- No. I said the man floated up the Jordan River. No man has ever floated up the Boyne River. The people of East Jordan are better at fighting the odds than we are; and that's a shame. We have a number of odd odds to fight. And they can't be worked out merely by floating up the Boyne River.

Q- That does it! How come every answer you have given me seems to have a false ring to it? A- Any fool can tell the truth. It takes a man with some wit to lie like this

Red Devils lost their big guns

EAST JORDAN - The East Jordan Red Devils are coming off a 17-6 season with few of last year's mainstays returning.

Coach Bill Chase lost his guard tandem of Randy Morris and Tom Root to graduation. And his big scoring gun, Bill English, is gone, too. English averaged about 18 points a game last year.

Returning starters are Mike Brennan, a senior forward, and Bill Spence, a senior forward-center who was a sometimes starter last year. Chase also has five other returning lettermen, all seniors.

Chase says he has some kids who might be able to help fill the scoring gap left by English's absence. Todd Chanda, a junior guard-forward, came up from the junior varsity with about .a 15-point average and Bob Finch also scored well as a JV Chase said.

The absence of a big shooter may help the team, Chase noted, because other players won't be sitting back waiting for one man to control the game. "Everyone does his part," the

"Our biggest strength is that the kids like to play together. They are good hustlers and have a good attitude," said Chase, who predicted the Red Devils would finish the season above .500.

Finch, at 6-foot-2, is the tallest member of the team. "Because of our size, we can't try to set everything up and run it through," said Chase, "so we'll have a run and shoot type of-

Despite a 7-14 record last year, the Loggers came on strong near the end and won the district championship. Reinhardt believes the gap between good teams and others that existed last year will be much marrower this year.

"Last year's top teams in the league lost quite a bit of their talent in seniors who have graduated," Reinhardt said. "Teams that finished lower in the standings were more fortunate and have should be a much tighter league this season and prove to be an interesting year.'

The Loggers will be led by returning starters Tim Smith, a junior at 6-4, and 6-1 seniors Norm Mahanke and Bruce Crouterfield.

The small Boyne Falls home court will offense, Reinhardt said. But the Loggers may be at a disadvantage during road games because they won't be used to regulation-sized floors, he said.

'In our league, Jo-burg and Alanson are the bigger schools and will be the teams to beat," said Reinhardt. "They both lost a few key players, but they'll still be tough.'
