It was a good time for young and old as the Fiddlers' Jamboree and square dance were held Saturday at the East Jordan Civic Center. The event had been postponed from its original date because of a snowstorm. The event attracted a crowd of musicians, dancers and watchers estimated at 300-400 people or more.

County jobless rate hits 21% in December

Look at the bright side — you don't live in Mackinac County.

Charlevoix County's unemployment rate jumped to 21.4 percent during December, figures from the Michigan Employment Security Commission show.

The state-wide jobless rate stood at 14.4 percent for December and rose to 16.0 percent in January.

Mackinac County, just over the bridge in the Upper Peninsula, has the highest unemployment rate in the state at 33.2 percent.

The national rate declined to 8.5 percent in January. It had been 8.8 in December.

Charlevoix' rate jumped by nearly 20 percent from its 17.9 percent mark of November. The rate was 17.3 in October.

MESC analysts predict the worst is still to come. Last year unemployment peaked in April, when it hit 17.5 percent.

In December 1980 the county's jobless rate stood at 15.7 percent.

There were 1,875 county residents in the jobless ranks during December. MESC tallies showed 6,900 employed in a labor force of 8,775.

In both October and November, MESC figures showed 1,600 out of work.

Jobless rates in neighboring counties increased in December, too, but not as dramatically as in Charlevoix.

Emmet County's percentage climbed from 16.6 in November to 18.9 in December. Otsego's rate edged up from 12.6 in November to 13.0 percent in December.

While more than one in every five workers in Charlevoix County was off the job in December, nearly one in six state-wide was out of work in January.

(State figures are computed differently than county ones and are released about a month earlier.)

Only in 1958 has the state rate been higher than it is now, according to S. Martin Taylor, director of the MESC. In that year the jobless rate peaked at 16.7 percent.

Taylor said the state's labor force fell by 34,000 workers in January — to 4,227,000 — as poor economic conditions discouraged workers from continuing their job searches.

EJ water problem not on the level

EAST JORDAN - The water level monitor for the city reservoir was registering the opposite of what is considered healthy for the city.

It appeared city superintendent Mike Dionne had to get out through the snowdrifts immediately and find out if the city's water had somehow seeped away.

A snowmobile was hastily commandeered from the fire department.

Upon arrival Dionne found a shorted fuse in the electrical control chamber. A mouse, now electrocuted, was the culprit.

Dionne said the monitor is now mouse-proof.

EJ sets up harbor panel

EAST JORDAN - The city council has established a harbor commission to work toward the realization of the city's 1972 plans for a harbor.

The previous commission was disbanded after the boat launch was finished.

The action came following a request from marina owner Vern Stark.

Stark said he had talked to Keith Wilson, chief of the Waterways Division of the Department of Natural Resources.

He said Wilson had encouraged him to have the city keep trying for grant money to cover the $1.2 million project.

The council ordered by-laws to be written for the commission, after which members will be appointed.

Work completed last summer on stabilizing the shoreline along Memorial Park was the prerequisite for harbor development.

County zoning law discussed

Development of a county zoning ordinance — similar to one defeated by voters in 1973 — is being talked about again.

The subject has come up at least twice in recent weeks — at a meeting of the county chapter of the Michigan Townships Association and at the county planning commission's meeting.

The purpose of a county-wide ordinance, according to county planner Larry Sullivan, would be to allow townships to get out of the zoning business if they wanted to.

All 15 townships have their own ordinances.

Two — Boyne Valley and Melrose — have county planning department personnel enforce the local laws. The others have hired local residents to serve as zoning administrators.

At the townships association meeting, Sullivan spoke with representatives from four townships about alternate ways to enforce their ordinances.

One way mentioned by some township officials was the possible enactment of a county-wide ordinance. Emmet County has a county-wide ordinance and communities can use it or their own.

A local ordinance would take precedence over a county law, Sullivan said.

Alternatives Sullivan suggested were letting the county building department administer zoning ordinances, having two or more townships hire an administrator or having a third party such as the MTA chapter provide an administrator townships could hire.

One problem with local governments having a resident enforce the law was expressed by Junior Hunt, a Boyne Valley trustee and member of the county planning commission during the planners' meeting last week.

"Sometime you're (an administrator) going to have to say 'no' to your next door neighbor. I can show you three or four cases on either end of the county where they should have said 'no' but didn't."

Bill Ohle, a Bay Township trustee, said this was a good time to be looking at county-wide zoning again but said, "I don't think there's any question you have to approach the public first."

A county zoning law enacted in 1972 was thrown out by voters on Aug. 14, 1973. Residents of townships — whether or not they had their own ordinances — were allowed to vote, but not city residents.

The ordinance was opposed in all but four townships. Three of those where the law was supported did not have their own ordinances; six where it was opposed had ordinances.

After the vote, townships that did not have ordinances adopted their own and hired administrators.

Two townships — Melrose and Boyne Valley — asked the county to administer their ordinances. The county still provides services to them — at a cost, Sullivan said, that does not pay for what the county does.

He said Boyne Valley pays $438 and Melrose $750. The county's cost, according to Sullivan, is between $2,000 and $2,500.

A third township, Wilson, recently asked the county if it would administer the township's ordinance, but then hired someone instead.

Planning commissioner Dennis Jason said the question of how ordinances should be administered should be tackled before looking into the possibility of adopting a county ordinance.

North Bay sale decision to wait

The Boyne City school board has decided to wait until August before deciding what to do with the old North Bay School.

The board has been studying the possibility of selling the unused structure.

Bay Township has expressed an interest in taking over the building which it had used as a community meeting place in past years.

In order for Bay to buy the building, though, the purchase would have to be approved in a township-wide vote, township supervisor Carl Skornia said.

The earliest that vote could come, Skornia said, would be at the August primary.

The building has been appraised at $8,500. Repairs are estimated to cost in the thousands of dollars.

The school board has received two other inquiries about the possible purchase.

School board members decided Monday to wait until after Bay residents vote, if they do, before determining whether to sell the building to the township or to someone else.

Board members are in agreement that the building should be sold.

CG antenna plan endorsed

A plan by the U.S. Coast Guard to place a 200-foot communications antenna on Lake Charlevoix has gotten the endorsement of the county planning commission.

The Coast Guard needs to construct a new antenna because its present one is on top of the old Charlevoix city water tower. The tower is slated to be torn down.

The antenna would not have guy wires or be much wider at the bottom than at the top, according to county planner Larry Sullivan. The tower would have a 24-inch diameter base and narrow to six inches at the top, he said.

Above the 176-foot tower would be a 20-foot whip antenna.

The antenna would be at the Coast Guard facility where Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix meet. That site was chosen because there would be no gaps in the area the Coast Guard's signal could reach.

At least three other sites had been mentioned as possible alternatives. WKHQ-WVOY radio had offered space to the Coast Guard, county sheriff and city of Charlevoix on its new transmitter tower on Richardson Hill in Wilson Township.

The Coast Guard said its signal would not reach far enough into Lake Michigan if its antenna were there, and Charlevoix said it would have to buy a repeater system for walkie-talkies because the tower would be too far away.

Mt. McSauba in Charlevoix was rejected because the Coast Guard frequency is too close to that of one of the television stations picked up by the Lake Charlevoix Cable TV tower there.

Arthur Poineau of Real Estate One, Ken MacIoli, Jeff Uloth and Charlotte Mapes of Dawn Realty complete the sale of the old Colwell Realty office building on South Lake. The sale to MacIoli and Uloth means a casual fashion sportswear store will be coming to Boyne City. The new owners also have a store in Gaylord called Solli Place. MacIoli said they are putting their second store in Boyne because "the resources, hills and opportunities are here in Boyne. We wanted to get in on the ground floor of this developing community." The store will feature junior size fashions for women, men's clothing and a shoe department. Anticipated opening is March 1.

Industrial park may be platted

BOYNE CITY - Depending on the decisions in the upcoming city budget, city manager Tim Clifton said, the city could get started on platting its industrial park, adjacent to the city airport.

The new fiscal year, which begins in May, could see action on the airport layout plan just completed by Granger Engineering Inc. in conjunction with the city.

The study was financed by a 50-50 grant with the Michigan Aeronautical Commission for $6,600.

It dealt not only with determining the exact lines between the airport and the new 40-acre industrial park, but also with environmental impact, building heights, and so on.

The long-range plan is for putting in utilities and roads so that industries interested in the community will have a location readily available.

Clifton said the city needs appropriate industries "to stabilize and diversify the tax base." Right now, he added, homeowners' taxes must support the city.

Clifton said the cost and commencement of the platting has yet to be figured and waits on budget decisions.

Jottings

Jim takes up writing, asks you to, too

BY JIM SILBAR

Well, it's about time someone stood up and said something. That someone is me, and I expect that this attempt at what will be a "column" will, hopefully, stand up and compare to Marshall Sayles column that runs weekly in this newspaper.

Not that we intend on stopping Marshall from writing; I think if I did that his wife would probably slice my throat. I mean, when he is out for coffee or sitting writing his column, it gives her a chance to have some peace and quiet around the house. Of course, others who probably like to take a slice too. They say he is the only thing they read.

But I thought I would take a number at the writer's column in the sky and make an attempt to show that I can do other things besides talk, sit, eat and sleep.

This will not necessarily be an every week thing like Marshall's, but when I can't find a good enough excuse to keep the thing out of the paper.

Speaking, or writing, of that brings up another thought. We have made quite a few changes in the newspaper, and I hope that we are making them in the right direction. Quite a few people I have talked to in the last few months have told me that they like the new format and, more importantly, like the news that we are putting into the paper.

I like to hear comments like that, and I also like to hear comments that are not. So, send me them, in the form of a letter to the editor, and we'll let everyone see the comment, good or bad.

We have quite a few changes left to go to make this newspaper one of the best in the North, and we'll be making some of them shortly.

Some of the changes will not be noticeable, because we are investing in equipment to make the paper come out faster, more efficiently and ultimately less costly to produce. Other changes will be noticed, like different type styles, different paper stocks on occasion, and others.

We and I hope that you like them, because we believe in the Charlevoix County area. And we are putting our business into it.

Income tax form leaves him smarting

Taxing time: Last year I became upset and vowed that it would be a cold day before I ever paid my property taxes again. I knew what I was talking about. It was below zero when we made out a check for our taxes last week.

And now again: Income tax time is racing down the street, around the corner, up the hill and will soon be knocking on our door. I never thought the day would come when it would take more smarts to make out an income tax form than it did to make the money in the first place.

I went downtown to the store to buy some glue to patch a hole in the garage where mice were coming in to shake off February. The store didn't have the kind of glue I wanted, so I walked around looking at other stuff on the shelves. You know something? Even the things you don't want cost too much.

Mr. J's restaurant has closed up, sold out and made to look as though it isn't there any more. A friend told us that he had had coffee in that building every morning for nearly 30 years. Now when he drives by he has a caffeine fit until he gets to the next restaurant. That's a terrible habit to get into a fellow said as he lit another cigarette.

When I wash my car, it rains. When I wear my raincoat, it doesn't rain. I put on my longer underwear the other day and the weather warmed up. The first time I noticed these things happening to me was when the boss gave me a raise and the price of beer doubled.

Now that I'm getting older, there's occasional talk that perhaps age and my inability to understand the Republicans indicate that I am approaching senility. Not knowing what I was supposed to be approaching, I checked the dictionary to see what that word meant. There it was as plain as that wart on your elbow. Senility means a certain defectiveness in the head. It means you are becoming stupid and approaching an idiot. Well, thank goodness my age had nothing to do with it. Just the other day I saw a stupid fellow approaching an idiot on the street. Both were younger than I. In Boyne City it makes more sense to believe what you see than what you are told.

A man said the price of gas is so high he has to pay right through the hose for it. Things are bad all over, even the jokes people push off on me.

Barbara Cruden

Knowing as much as the experts

The other day, I dug out a book of stories for children my father gave me when I was in second grade, called "The Book of Knight and Barbara."

The "Barbara" in the title is a coincidence and I never took it personally, though I remember noticing throughout the author ranked girls second to boys.

That was long before the present women's liberation movement, and at seven years old, I tended to be resigned to adult misconceptions.

The thing is, as I reread the stories in preparation for reading them to my little friends, I noticed that those I liked best then, I still preferred.

Now this is remarkable, because in the pursuit of teacher certification, I have spent hours in studying about what makes good literature. Was it all in vain?

Or was it in a sense unnecessary? Is a child born with the fine tuning that says "this is good; this is unsatisfactory"?

In the January issue of the "Atlantic" is an article which by impressive coincidence I read the same day. It's called "The Competence of Babies" by Susan Quinn.

Quinn reviewed the succession of attitudes held by so-called experts over the past 100 years. These include the view that a baby is like a blank page to be written on, the baby is a vegetable, the baby doesn't see itself as a separate being, and so on.

I remember becoming a bit cynical about experts when I read they said a newborn baby doesn't see clearly. My own newborn, brought into a room for the first time, promptly became so obviously interested in a large oil painting of a woman on the wall that experts in the room remarked on it.

Experts now admit newborn babies do see.

Experts, it is becoming understood, tend to know things in much the half-baked way the rest of us do.

In order not to be supposed to be an expert, therefore, I will simply bring in a few more examples, and let others decide what they will.

Years ago the good old "Reader's Digest" printed an art test. They paired a series of good paintings with similar not-so-good ones—as, of course, judged by experts, but here let us note the expertise had been accumulating over centuries.

Our four kids each took the test. When we compared the results, the youngest—a pre-schooler—got the highest mark.

The other children's marks were in descending order from the youngest to the eldest who was 11 years old.

Is it possible taste in the visual arts suffers in the effort to assimilate social similarity—in the process of growing up?

In nursery school I see a lot of this. Another example.

In public school, in a city seventh grade, I taught some tough little youngsters once. They hated their "literature" book in spite of the compiler's efforts to pick modern, easy stories.

Then, because I am a stubborn believer in quality, I assigned Washington Irving's tale, "The Headless Horseman."

It is a very slow-paced story, even for adults. And, Irving's vocabulary is beyond today's college students.

And the children loved it. So then I assigned the long-winded poem, "Evangeline" by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. A poem!

They loved it. It was William Wadsworth back in 1845 who said, speaking of babies, they come to us "trailing clouds of glory."

When I was more of an expert, long ago, I used to think that was just what an overblown romantic like Wadsworth would say...

Youth program gets county board support

The county board of commissioners has given its support to continuation of a program that helps keep kids out of trouble.

The commissioners were asked for a show of support because the person running the program, Bill Aten, resigned.

Aten began this week as a math teacher at Boyne Falls Schools.

The Youth Diversionary Program is a county-funded arm of the Department of Social Services, a state agency working within the county.

The program's budget for 1982 is $17,548.

The program's goal is to keep kids who are having their first brush with the law from becoming more involved in crime.

Dick Tellen, director of the Social Services Department, said 218 youths have been referred to the program in its 3-plus years of existence.

Only 25 of those teens later became involved again in the court system, he said. Participants in the voluntary program are referred to it by the probate court, schools, police agencies and parents.

Tellen said Aten's review of the cases he has handled brought about the conclusion that at least 33 of the participants would have gotten into further trouble had it not been for the program.

Tellen said that if just two teens a year were diverted from having to be incarcerated in state homes, the program would pay for itself.

The average bill per youth in a state home is $20,075 a year and the county is billed for half the cost, he said.

The county this year is paying 100% of the cost of the program. In its first two years, the state picked up 95 percent of the cost and last year it was shared 50-50.

"I don't think you can get better value anywhere else with positions to deal with kids," Tellen said.

Tellen said he did not want to hire a replacement for Aten, however, if the board was not committed to continuing funding next year.

He had been told by some commissioners that there was concern whether funding would continue.

The commissioners were unanimous in their support of the program, while reminding Tellen a new board would be seated in January, after the November 1982 election, and they could not say what that board might do.

Letters

Pro-business doesn't mean being anti-labor

Editor, Newspapers across the state recently have been filled with articles, editorials and letters about the sorry state of Michigan's economy, with much of the blame placed on the high cost of our workers' compensation system.

For years, business people have advocated tightening eligibility standards in the work comp system. Now that the Legislature and the Governor are struggling with reform proposals, it is essential that they move beyond partisan politics and deal straight-forward with the issue.

The wrong assumption is often made that if you're pro-business, then you're anti-labor. The truth of the matter is that you don't have to be both at the same time. Michigan job providers exist only if they are profitable and, in many cases, able to compete with firms in other states and nations. To operate profitably and successfully compete is to provide jobs, to be pro-labor.

When firms lose money and can't compete they move or, worse yet, perish and jobs are lost. Witness the loss of 74,000 manufacturing jobs in Michigan during the last 10 years, according to the Michigan Employment Security Commission. There are more than 520,000 unemployed in our state today. Also, one of nine persons in Michigan is receiving some form of welfare.

It doesn't make sense to be pro-labor and anti-business. Because if you're for jobs, you're for business. Jobs are available only when business is successful, profitable and competitive.

Five-day clinic will teach smokers who how to quit

A five-day stop-smoking clinic will be sponsored by the Adventist Health Education Services beginning at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 15.

Campus Life Youth for Christ will present a sweetheart contest Sunday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m. at Petoskey High. Boyne City's candidate is Sheri Sutliff. Her escort will be Todd Rickard. Campus Life will seek donations this week.

Gary Russell, M.P.H., and John Kempton, D.D.S., experienced leaders of similar clinics, will guide participants through the five-day process of quitting smoking, help them develop their willpower and help them understand the effect smoking has on their bodies.

The sessions will be held from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Feb. 15-19, at the Boyne City Community Services Center, 326 North Park, Boyne City.

Russell is pastor of the Boyne City Seventh-day Adventist Church, has a master's degree in public health and has considerable experience in conducting stop-smoking clinics.

Kempton practices dentistry in East Jordan and also has much experience in helping people kick the tobacco habit. Russell estimated that approximately 90 percent of those who follow closely the program outlined, will be successful in their effort to stop smoking.

Each participant will be given a booklet daily, containing specific suggestions for dealing with the urge to smoke.

The booklet details which foods tend to stimulate a desire for nicotine, what foods help the body rid itself of nicotine and the kinds of activities that can help a person avoid becoming overwhelmed by the urge to light up.

Each evening's session will provide psychological and physiological information helpful to those who wish to quit through the use of films, lectures and group dynamics.

Time will be given for questions and answers, group sharing of problems and successes, tips on how to lessen the urge to smoke, how to strengthen willpower and how to control weight after quitting smoking.

Ramblers back in league race

Boyer City is back in the thick of the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference race.

The Ramblers had an easy time with Rogers City 85-65 as Charlevoix was being clipped by Gaylord 56-52 on Friday.

The win gave Boyer an 8-2 league mark against Charlevoix' 8-1 record going into Tuesday night's action. Boyer took on non-league foe Cadillac while the Rayders hosted cellardweller Rogers City.

Rogers City took an early lead against the Ramblers, holding a 19-16 advantage as the first quarter ended.

Boyer canned 21 points in the second stanza, though, to take a 37-33 lead into the locker room at halftime.

The Ramblers put 48 points on the board in the second half as they coasted to the win.

Boyer led by a 60-47 margin at the end of the third quarter and built the lead to 20 points by the final buzzer.

Brian Vroman led four Ramblers who scored in double figures. Vroman, second in the league in scoring, hit for 20 points.

John Tompkins notched 15, Brad Musser added 14 and Kevin Randall put in 10 points for the victors.

The game's high scorer was Scott Wagner of Rogers City, who dropped in 28 points.

The Rayders started slowly in their game against Gaylord, but rallied to go ahead for the first time, 48-47, with about two minutes left.

After the team's traded baskets to make the score 50-49 in Charlevoix' favor, Gaylord scored six straight points to take a six-point lead into the final 20 seconds.

EJ ski team building for future

BY SUSAN BUICK

East Jordan's ski team is a young team this year. According to Coach Fran Lennert, the team should be a very good one within the next two years.

They are building for the future, she said. The girls' team consists of Laurie Sherman, Patty Nessel, Sylvie Zurstrassen, Sheryl Spence, Korinna Kretschmann and Susan Buick.

"The girls beat Kalkaska in their first scrimmage," said Lennert, "I was quite impressed and am looking forward to a pretty good girls' team with a little more aggressiveness."

There are so many boys this year that two teams have been made. "It's going to be a constant battle during the year to be in the last two positions of six on the first team," said Lennert.

"There are four standouts on the team that will always be on the first team, though."

Even though the boys race six at each scheduled meet (which is standard), the top two on the second team will be able to go to the meets for the experience.

"The team as a whole is looking good," stated Lennert, "and everyone has improved since the first day of practice."

According to Lennert, it's going to be a tough season because there are a lot of good skiers in northern Michigan.

"I'd go as far as to say that some of the best skiers in the world come from northern Michigan — Cary Adgate for one," Lennert said.

"Bellaire, Grayling, Kalkaska, Petoskey and Boyer City are all fielding good teams."

"We'll do well in the long run," predicted Lennert. "Overall, I'm looking for a good year."

Hot shooters cool off Red Devils

Inland Lakes' one-two punch knocked out East Jordan 60-52 Friday night.

Ernie Hartzell and Bud Hanel totaled 47 points — 24 of them by Hanel — in dominating the Ski Valley Conference game.

The loss put the Red Devils at 1-8 in the league and 2-10 overall. The Devils faced non-league foe Kalkaska Tuesday night.

The Red Devils were hurt at the free throw line, where they hit just four of 11 shots. Inland Lakes scored on 16 of 26 foul shots. EJ held a 24-23 advantage shooting from the floor. East Jordan held a 12-11 lead at the end of the first quarter, but Inland Lakes moved ahead 35-30 at the half.

Each team canned 10 points in the third period, but the Devils were outscored 15-12 in the final eight minutes.

Six players tied for game honors with eight points for the Devils.

East Jordan took the junior varsity game 74-60.

BF turns table on Ellsworth

The third time was the charm for the Loggers as Boyer Falls topped Ellsworth 67-50 last week.

Boyer Falls was paced by center Tim Smith. The junior put in 23 points to lead all scorers.

Ellsworth had beaten its Northern Lakes Conference rival twice already this season, by 55-50 and 67-50 tallies.

The Loggers started slowly but stingy defense kept Ellsworth within range.

Ellsworth jumped to a 20-14 first-quarter lead, but the Loggers trimmed that to 33-30 by the half.

While the Loggers pumped in 20 points in the third period, they held Ellsworth to nine to take a 50-42 advantage.

Boyer Falls added another 17 points in the final stanza while holding Ellsworth to eight.

The Loggers had four players in double figures. Besides Smith were Norm Mahanke with 15 points, Chris Matelski with 12 and Bruce Crouterfield with 11.

Two Ellsworth players, Jim Hersha and Derec Kaley, each had 10.

The Loggers popped in 30 baskets and connected on 17 of 25 free throws. Ellsworth hit 22 two-pointers and six of 12 shots from the foul stripe.

The victory left Boyer Falls at 3-4 in the league and 5-7 overall.

In the junior varsity contest, Ellsworth took a 44-31 victory.

It looks like the hidden ball trick as Todd Rickard of Boyer and the referee try to keep track of an errant ball during the Ramblers' victory over Gaylord. The win, coupled with Charlevoix' loss, puts Boyer right back in the championship race.

Kids learning basketball

A program to teach third through sixth graders the fundamentals of basketball is being held every Saturday at Boyer Falls school.

The program is sponsored by the 4-H Club through the Cooperative Extension Service.

Basic basketball skills and teamwork are stressed in the free program, which is open to boys and girls.

Although the program began in late January, children may still enter it. The sessions are from 9:30 to noon through April 3. An exhibition of what the youngsters have learned will take place that day.

Permission slips and information about the program are available from Pam Parsel or Leah Green at the extension service office, 582-6232.

Recreational boots are usually the first boots novices buy after a period of renting. They also serve intermediates, occasional skiers of all skills, and fast-growing youngsters.

That's quite a performance range, and as a result recreational boot requirements don't break down neatly. For instance a linebacker who is a novice skier needs a stiffer boot than the experienced skier who happens to be a lightweight gymnast, even though their respective skills would suggest just the reverse.

The best approach to recreational boots, once you're assured of comfort, is to solve the safety problem first.

The boot must be stiff enough to pry open the heel-release unit set up for your skill and weight without allowing the ankle to bend beyond the limits of comfort.

Other selection criteria are somewhat more subjective, but they're well established among boot fitters.

Pick among the stiffer models if you're at all ambitious to improve your skiing skill or occasionally, like to tackle steeper slopes.

Subject only to the safety considerations above, choose among the softer boots if you ski only two or three times a year and then mainly on easier trails.

If your local terrain is bumpy, select a boot fairly stiff in backward flex but soft in forward flex.

Look for a boot with a stiff mid-range if you want to make quick turns.

Bootmakers have become increasingly conscious of the differing boot requirements of men and women. It used to be that boots were designed for men and differed for women only in the way they were sized. Now there are models for each in every skill category.

Ski wear: Investment dressing

Today's skiwear means investment dressing at its best, with the most functional, versatile and fun-to-wear styles to come along yet.

Now that easy care easy wear lightweight puffy parkas have become a symbol of the active Eighties' lifestyle, colors, textures and length are virtually interchangeable as skiwear or sportswear.

Style options run from ultrafeminine embroidered blousons in silky nylons and cotton blends to young folkloric prints, sweater knits, pullovers, reversibles, leather-trimmed Western wear, fast-looking racing gear, rugged mountaineering parkas and a variety of classic shapes in rich solid colors.

Michiganders got break at pump in 1981

Skiers, winter fun enthusiasts and other motorists in Michigan received a break from double-digit gasoline price hikes in 1981 as the average cost of full-serve unleaded along main state roads rose 8 cents per gallon compared with 14.1 cents in 1980 and 36.3 cents in 1979, according to the Automobile Club of Michigan.

"The 1981 price increase was 5.8 percent, the second lowest annual percentage increase since Auto Club began keeping records in 1973," stated James Drury, Auto Club Travel Operations manager. "Nationally, unleaded gasoline prices rose 9.2 percent last year."

Michigan's lowest percentage increase was in 1976 when the cost rose 3 percent. The highest increase was in 1979 when it jumped more than 47 percent.

Auto Club's weekly "fuel gauge" surveys showed that from January through December 1981, the average cost of unleaded full-serve gas rose to $1.452 per gallon along main highways. Detroit-area full-serve unleaded rose 9.7 cents per gallon, or 7 percent, to an average $1.468 per gallon.

The average cost of regular rose 7.2 cents, or 5.4 percent, to $1.396 per gallon along main highways, and 8.5 cents, or 6.4 percent, to an average $1.404 per gallon in the Detroit area.

The average cost of unleaded along main highways rose 13 cents from January through March to a record $1.502 per gallon. From April through December, average costs fell for all grades each month except in November when they either were unchanged or slightly higher.

Drury cited three major reasons for 1981's price trend: the continuing drop in demand for gasoline; abundant gasoline supplies, and stabilized crude oil prices.

Through November, 1981 gasoline consumption in Michigan was down 6 percent compared with the first 11 months of 1980 although miles traveled in the state rose 1 percent. Gasoline use in Michigan has fallen 17 percent in the last two years.

The largest monthly price increases for most gasoline grades ever recorded by Auto Club came in February. The average cost of full-serve regular rose 7.8 cents per gallon on main highways and 8.1 cents per gallon in the Detroit area. Full-serve unleaded rose an average 8 cents per gallon in Detroit.

Children's skis: Use and abuse

The well-publicized skis used by the Olympic champions have had their impact on young skiers, making youngsters more brand-conscious than ever.

But brand name, logo, cosmetics and whether racers use the ski, are not as important as the ski's construction, flexibility and durability.

Junior skis should be specially designed for young skiers. A child's weight, strength, physical coordination and ability should all be considered in selecting a youngster's ski.

A pre-school or tot ski is usually designed for children under 67 pounds, whereas a "junior" ski is designed for young skiers in the 67-112 pound range.

The ideal junior ski is one that will take a child from beginner to advanced level and withstand one or two more seasons of use and abuse—check the manufacturer's warranty and return policies.

Many tot skis now come with a cross-country step base to aid the child in climbing.

This is an important feature and does much to reduce the child's frustration.

Plastic edgeless skis are only for play and not recommended for the ski slopes.

With such a wide range of both price and quality existing in junior skis, your best bet is to seek the advice of a reputable ski shop in outfitting your youngster with a proper pair of skis.

Artificial slope

An artificial turf ski slope is being installed just outside of Boston, at Boston Hills, Mass., a new skiing surface that has found great popularity at 60 locations in Europe.

And just south of Knoxville, Tenn., five acres of skiable astroturf is in place at Ober Gatlinburg Ski Area.
